to 1874; since that period it has extended to the Baltic, Mediterranean, China, Mauritius, East India, the Brazils, and the Havana. The imports consist principally of British manufactures; and spirits, sugar, wine, coffee, &c., from our colonies. The principal articles of export are fish, timber, beef, pork, sugar, grainstones, and gypsum. The whole imports for 1848, amounted to £746,748 the exports to £481,546, of which about a half were fish; of the former, the largest proportion came from Great Britain, of the latter, the greater went to the U. States.

The population of Nova Scotia is now chiefly composed of a native race sprung directly or indirectly from the three great families of the United Kingdom—English, Irish, and Scotch. The Irish are found in large numbers only in the capital. The Scotch chiefly in the eastern counties. The western and midland counties are principally occupied by the descendants of the loyalists, whose blood is English. The county of Lunenburg is inhabited by a race sprung from a body of German and Swiss Protestants, who emigrated from Rotterdam in 1768. There are also several settlements of French Acadians. But the descendants of all form but one race, and are known by but one name, the whole living in perfect harmony. The Indians are still a distinct people but there are only a few hundreds of them left in the province. The religious divisions here are those of the United Kingdom, and of N. America generally. The five largest religious bodies are—Episcopalians, Presbyterians, R. Catholics, Methodists, and Baptists. Of these the most numerous are the Presbyterians, next the Episcopalians, then the R. Catholics, and Baptists. Education has been greatly widely and equally diffused over the colony. The public affairs of the colony are administered by a Governor (styled Lieutenant-Governor), Council, and House of Assembly, the last, consisting of 40 members, has entire control over the provincial revenue. The laws are dispensed by a Court of King's Bench and district courts as in Canada. The laws in force are the common and the statute law of England and the statute law of Nova Scotia.

Nova Scotia was first visited by the Cabots in 1497, but was not colonized by Europeans till 1604, when De Monte a Frenchman, and his followers and some Jesuits, attempted for eight years to form settlements in Port Royal St. Croix, &c., but were finally expelled from the country by the English governor and colonists of Virginia, who claimed the country by right of the discovery of Sebastian Cabot. In 1631, Sir William Alexander applied for, and obtained from James I., a grant of the whole country, which he proposed to colonize on an extensive scale, and in 1623 the attempt was made, but the proposed colonists finding the various points where they wished to establish themselves thumped by foreign adventures did not think it prudent to attempt a settlement and therefore returned to England. During the reign of Charles I. the Nova Scotia baronets were created, and their patents ratified in parliament, they were to contribute their aid to the settlement, and to have portions of land allotted to them; their number was not to exceed 150. In 1654, Cromwell sent out an armed force, and took possession of the country, which remained with the English till 1667 when it was ceded to France by the treaty of Breda. But the English from time to time attacked the French colonies at various points, and ravaged their settlements, continuing to harass and annoy them till 1713, when the country was finally ceded to England. Pop. (1848), estimated at 500,000.

NOVA ZEMBLA [Franken, Novena Zembla], two large islands. Arctic Ocean belonging to Russia, and forming a dependency of Gov. Archangel, lat. 71° to 77° N., lon. 58° to 77° E. They are separated from each other by the narrow strait, Matichkin Bay, and from the side of Valdega on the N. by the Strait, and from the mainland on the E. by the Bay of Neva, greatest length, N.E. to S.W. 625 m., breadth, 170 m. The far greater part of the interior is unexplored, and even the N. and E. coasts, where less makes nearest almost impossible, are very imperfectly known. The S.W. and W. coasts which have been examined, are in the former direction generally low and flat and in the latter bordered by steep cliffs, which, though not elevated, are very precipitous. The general slope of both islands appears to be towards Matichkin Strait, on which the mouths of at least 16 small streams have been traced. Lakes also are numerous. The whole territory is wild and desolate in the extreme. The coasts swarm with seals, various kinds of fish, and vast flocks of water-fowl. The interior, which is partly covered with stunted shrubs, short grass, and moss, is frequented by reindeer, white bears, ermine, and Arctic foxes. Nova Zembla has no permanent inhabitants, but is visited by Russian hunters and sailors.

NOVALAISE, a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Turin, W. Chambery; with a very handsome church, a primary school, manufactures of silk stuffs and a trade in corn, wood and cloths. Pop. 1890.

NOVALESA, a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Turin, 3 m. N. Suse, with a church a celebrated monastery, and a trade in wood. Pop. 965.

NOVARA (Latin Novaria) a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Turin, 53 m. N.E. Turin. It is beautifully situated, well built, and, though several of the streets are narrow, they are kept remarkably clean. It has three large squares, a cathedral, an ancient and magnificent structure surrounded by a lofty square tower, which terminates in a cupola, and richly decorated with sculptures and paintings by some of the first artists of Italy, an episcopal palace, and diocesan seminary, with a library of 12,000 volumes, several churches a townhouse, courthouses, and public offices, an old castle in a ruinous condition, a register-office, in a suppressed monastery two colleges, and several other superior schools, the general hospital, most de palat, theatre, barracks and market, the last one of the largest and most costly edifices of the town, commenced in 1817, and not finished till 1842. The manufactures, not of very much importance, consist chiefly of cotton goods, plain and printed; leather, wax, cloth, starch, earthenware, majolica, candles, and a kind of sweet biscuits called biscuotte which have a large sale in many parts of Italy. The staple article of trade is grain and rice, for both of which Novara has the most important markets in Piedmont. Pop. 10,000.—The province is bordered by lofty mountains, and in the N.W. is partly covered by ramble heath of the Lepontine Alps, but consists generally of a large and fertile plain, watered by the Po and its tributaries the Sesia, Terdoppio, Agogna, Olona, and numerous other streams. Lake Maggiore is partly within its territory. The soil is very productive and in the lower ground, where irrigation is available, large quantities of rice are grown. On the hills and slopes the vine is extensively cultivated, and wine forms a considerable article of export. Pop. 186,159.

NOVALE, a vil and com. Italy, Lombardy prov. and 6 m. N.W. Milan with a church, two osterias, and a salt petre-factory. Pop. 1843.

NOVAWETZ, or NAWERDOW, a town, Prussia, gov. Posen, on the Warth, with two churches, manufactures of cotton and needles and spinning-mills. Pop. 1712.

NOVEGRAD, or NOVGRAD, a vil Austria, Dalmatia, circle and 80 m. N.E. Zara, on a large bay with a church, courthouses, and valuable fishery, particularly of oysters, and, on a hill the ruins of an ancient fortress. Pop. 860.

NOVELDA a town Spain, Valencia, prov. and 16 m. W. Alicante; having streets generally well paved, and a quantity of stone. In a square of considerable size are the townhouse and the prison and several other buildings of respectable appearance. Novelda likewise possesses two endowed schools, a hospital, a parish church, with chapels of some brightly decorated, corn and oil mills and some trade in fruits and other produce. P. (agricultural) 8096.

NOVELLARA, a town, Italy, 16 m. N.W. Modena, with six mills and ironworks. Pop. 4070.

NOVELLO a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Cuni, prov. Alba, with two handsome churches of oak carvings, a charitable endowment, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1800.

NOVENTA, three places, Euged of Italy, gov. Venice.—1, a vil and par. prov. Padua, 18 m. S.W. Vicenza, with a church, seven osterias, tile-works, and distilleries.—2, a vil and par. dist. and 4 m. N.W. S. Dora, in the Piave, with a church and a chapel.—3, a vil and par. prov. and 16 m. S.W. Vicenza, in an extensive plain on the Piave; with a church, and several osterias.

NOVES, a town Spain, New Castile, prov. and W. Toledo; houses, generally of earth, small and ill built; with a townhouse, prison, hospital, two endowed schools, and a church; manufactures of baize and serge, and six oil-mills. P. 3994.

NOVES [Latin, Centum de Novis], a tn. France, dep. Doubs-de-Rhone, 12 m. N. E. Arbois; with a municipality of beet-root sugar. Pop. 1037.

NOVGOROD, a gov. Russia, bounded N. by gov. Oboles, N. W. and W. St. Petersburg; S. W. Pskov; S. E. Ples, R. E. Jaroslavl, and E. Volynia. lat. 57° 10' to 61° N.; lon. 36° 30' to 40° E.; greatest length, N. E. to S. W., 390 m.; greatest breadth, 150 m.; area, 41,254 sq. m. It is generally flat, a considerable portion of it, particularly in the W. and N. E. being covered with lakes and marshes. In the S. W., the Valdai hills enter from gov. Pskov and stretch N. E. They are generally composed of limestone of a comparatively recent formation, and though they nowhere attain a height exceeding 1000 ft. have a much greater average elevation from the general surface of the surrounding country. The surface of the government is covered with an immense number of granite boulders, though there is no granite to be seen within the government, and none in those immediately adjoining. The Valdai hills form the principal watershed, separating the basin of the Baltic from that of the Volga. To their basins the whole of the government belongs, with exception of a small portion of the N. E. which is drained by a tributary of the Onega, and belongs, through it, to the basin of the Arctic Ocean. The chief rivers are the Lovat, Volkhov, Msta, Mologa, and Cherekhov, with its tributaries Koly and Boda. The lakes are numerous, and three of them of great extent—Volge, Rado-Ozero, and Ilmen. The climate is cold, and somewhat more severe than that of St. Petersburg. A great part of the surface is covered by forests, chiefly of pine, birch, and larch. Oak is seldom seen. Fruit-trees do not generally thrive but apples and cherries are not uncommon in more favored spots. The soil is generally of very indifferent quality, and not well adapted for wheat. The principal crops are rye, barley and oats. Flax and hemp are raised in sufficient quantities to satisfy the home consumption and have a surplus for export. The lakes and rivers are well supplied with fish, which are taken in great quantities and form a considerable article of export, particularly to St. Petersburg and Moscow. The minerals include a little iron and coal and are tolerably abundant. Limestone, sandstone, and gypsum, to an unlimited extent. Both manufactures and trade are unimportant. Novgorod is divided into 10 districts. Pop. (1859), 236,000.

NOVGOROD, or VELIKI-NOVGOROD [Great Novgorod], a tn. Russia, cap. above gov., on the Volkhov near the point where it issues from Lake Ilmen, 103 m. S. E. of St. Petersburg. It stands in a plain, and is divided by the river into two parts, which communicate by a handsome wooden bridge, supported by pillars of granite. The portion on the r. bank comprises a which in many places are grown over with grass, and almost without exception unweaved. The only buildings here which attract notice are a kind of palace, forming the governor's residence; a millstone and a tall factory. The portion of the town on the l. bank is surrounded by an earthen rampart, and contains in its center the Kremlin or citadel. Within it is the cathedral of St. Sophia, built after the model of St. Sophia at Constantinople, besides which there are other sixty-one churches, and several monasteries, one of which the monastery of the Annunciation, is a remarkably elegant structure. The manufactures are of little importance, and consist of millstone, leather tobacco, candles, and vinegar. The trade in corn, flax, and hemp, carried on chiefly with the capital, is considerable; and there are two large annual fairs. Novgorod was in early times the capital of an independent state, and had a magnitude which justified its surname of Volkh. Its population is said to have once amounted to 400,000 and it carried on an extensive trade. So great was its riches, that in 1480, John III., after he had conquered the republic of Novgorod, despatched from the city to Moscow three hundred chariots laden with articles of silver and gold. Pop. about 18,000.

NOVGOROD-SITVENSKI, a tn. Russia, gov. and 108 m. E. N. P. Chernigov cap. dist. r. bank Dniepr. It is surrounded with a rampart, and was defended by a fortress, still existing, but almost a ruin. It has numerous churches, a convent, and a considerable trade in corn, hemp and flax. P. 8000.

NOVI —1 A tn. duchy and 17 m. N. Modena, pleasantly situated and well built. Pop. 2400. —2 A market to Austria, Croatia, on the sea-coast, 45 m. S. W. Carlsbad with a castle, church, Pauline monastery and a small harbour. Pop. 2000. —3, (or Castellum) A tn. Austria, Dalmatia, 24 m. S. from Cattaro, cap. dist. with a l. Catholic church, a courthouse, manufactory of brassware, a mineral spring, and some trade. 4 (Roman) A tn. European Turkey prov. Bosnia, 150 m. S. E. Bosnia-Berzi with some warm baths, and a small trade. Pop. 8000 to 10,000.

NOVI a tn. Italy Piedmont, div. and 24 m. N. W. Geneva, cap. prov. N. side of the Apennines. It is surrounded by an ancient wall once flanked with towers, and enclosed by a fosse. It has several irregular but tolerably spacious streets, a handsome square, adorned with a beautiful marble fountain, an ordinary court of law, a court of commerce, and several important public offices. There is also one of these a fine ancient structure, with a facade flanked by two towers and two monasteries a gymnasium with a library a handsome new theatre, a founding hospital, manufactory of fusian bombazine, hemp, cotton and mixed goods, earthen ware, and majolica. Numerous silk mills, dye-works, and an important trade in silk, for which Novi is perhaps the largest mart in the kingdom. Pop. 10,378. —The Novigrado, about 88 m. long E. to W., and about 9 m. broad, is hilly throughout and in the S. is covered by lofty summits of the Apennines. The principal rivers are the Savina, Orba, Lemone, Floto, and Bobera. Soil generally thin, and of no great fertility many of the inhabitants emigrate annually to procure the means of subsistence. The most important product is silk, which is here raised in large quantities and of the finest quality, and is much in demand, both for London and Lyons. Pop. 41,847.

NOVIGRAD a market in Austria, Croatia, generalship Warasdin, cap. dist. on the Komarische, about 2 tn. from Koprivnica, with a church and a castle. Pop. 3500.

NOVILLE Les Bains, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 9 m. N. E. Namur; with three bleachfields, an oil and a Bone mill. Pop. (agricultural) 1121.

NOVITA, a tn. New Granada, department, cap. prov. Choco, r. bank Tambo, 175 m. W. by N. Bogota; lat. 8° 42' N.; lon. 76° 19' W. Houses mostly of wood; population chiefly negroes, mulattoes, and cambes, employed in working the gold-mines. Pop. 1000.

NOVGOROD, MONASTERY OF THE ANNUNCIATION.
From London, Voyage Pitagore de Smith.

large extent of surface, indicating it once in former times; some, and presents comparative impalpability. It contains a great number of moss houses or rather huts, and has streets lon. 76° 19' W. Houses mostly of wood; population chiefly negroes, mulattoes, and cambes, employed in working the gold-mines. Pop. 1000.

NOVO, a river, Brazil, which flows in prov. Minas-Geraes, flows E. between the rivers Frio and Barro, and in a course nearly parallel with them and, a little above their junction, joins the r. bank of the latter. The united streams form the Parahyba. The channel of the Novo is so rocky throughout as to be nowhere navigable.

NOVO-AMERLINGS, an isl., N Pacific. See IRUKA.

NOVO-DUBOVIKI, a to. Russia. See DUBOVIKI.

NOVO-ZEMKOVO, a seaport to and fort, S W Africa, belonging to the Portuguese, coast of S. Guinea, lat. 11° 53' S. lon. 13° 42' E. The town occupies the summit of a rock, and is inhabited chiefly by free negroes.

NOYODMITRIEVSKE, a to. Russia, gov. and 103 m. W. S. W. Saratov at the confluence of the Jelan and Berezoza. Pop. 2100.

NOVOGRODEK, a walled to. Russia, gov. and 80 m. E. Grodno, cap. dist., on a height washed by a small affluent of the Niemien. It is tolerably well built, has several churches, a synagogue, and gymnasium. Pop. 1200.

NOVOI CAUCAS, a to. Russia. See CAUCAS.

NOVOI TURESKAI, a to. Russia. See CHERKASSK.

NOVOKHOPESK, a to. Russia, gov. and 108 m. E. S. E. Voronezh, cap. dist., on the Voronezh. It is enclosed by a fosse, and a rampart flanked with four bastions; and has two churches, and an hospital, some trade, and in its docks are built vessels to navigate the Black Sea. Pop. 1800.

NOVOLA, a to. and com. Naples, prov. Otranto, dist. and 7 m. W. N. W. Lecce. Pop. 6487.

NOVOMESTO, or NOVOMEST, a to. Russia, gov. Courland, cap. circle, on the Riga; with several fairs. P. 1050.

NOVOMIRGOHOD, a to. Russia, gov. and 103 m. N. N. W. Kherson, 1 bank Yssa, which, below the town forms a small lake. It is the see of a bishop has three churches, and a considerable trade in fruit. Pop. 8000.

NOVOMOSKOVSKE, a fortified in Russia, gov. and 23 m. N. E. Ekaterinavsk r. bank Samara. Pop. 2300.

NOVOROSISK, a small seaport to Russia, on E. coast Black Sea, at the mouth of the Tmesos, and E. of Abaya. The town is built on a slope rising gradually from the shore, and terminating in lofty heights, and is defended by two forts.

NOVOSIL, a to. Russia, gov. and 84 m. S. Tula, on the Narutcha. Pop. 2000.

NOVOSELLOV, a cape, Japan W. coast, lat. Yesso lat. 43° 14' 30" N. lon. 140° 20' 30" E. It projects about 20 m. into the sea, having Stroganoff Bay N. and Suchitalm Bay S. and is only separated from Volcano Bay on the opposite side of the island by an isthmus of about 20 m.

NOVOSELLO, a vil. Hungary. Highest Danube, co. Bar, 1 bank Danube, 4 m. from Vukovar. It has a church, and a trade in grain, wine, cattle, butter and salt. P. 1079.

NOV-CROW, an isl. China, Gulf of Tonquin, off N. E. part peninsula of Louichot, lat. 20° 58' N. about 6 m. long by 5 m. wide, N. W. coast lined with rocky shoals, stretching in some places, 300 to 400 yards into the sea. The inhabitants live chiefly by fishing and pig-tails, and have a little trade. The harbour though difficult of entrance, is well sheltered, and has long been a noted resort of Ladrones pirates.

NOVAGLER, a to. Hindoostan, prov. Gundwana, at the junction of the Matsao with the Mahanady river, 110 m. N. W. Sumbulpoor lat. 20° 49' N. lon. 83° 43' E.

NOVEMIASTOW See NEMLAT.

NOVOBEL, or NOVOBEL, a to. Russia, gov. and 84 m. S. Tula, cap. circle, on the Zucha, with a church, and some transit trade. Pop. 1300.

NOVTON par Eng. Suffolk 1167 as Pop. 187.

NOVZEK, a vil. Russia, 73 m. S. E. Shikharpoor, lat. 27° 50' N., lon. 69° 42' E.

NOYA, a to. Spain, Galicia, prov. and 48 m. S. W. Co. ruba; lat. 43° 50' N., lon. 8° 50' W. on the sea-coast, at the mouth of the Tambre. It has a townhouse, two schools, three churches, a hermitage, an hospital, and other charitable institutions. Curlew, cardinals, curriers, paper-making, corn-grinding, and shoe-making, are carried on. Pop. 1883.

NOYA (San Bartolomeo de), a to. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 18 m. from Barcelona, with a church, court-house, prison, small hospital, primary school, and manufactures of paper and lampas apone, a distillery, several flour-mills, and a trade in wine and brandy. Pop. 1292.

Vol. II.

NOYEN several small places, France, particularly — 1. near-Verdun, a to., dep. Sarthe, r. bank Sarthe, 10 m. N. La Flèche, with a handsome Gothic church, a Romanesque market-hall, and manufactures of linen. Near it is a shaly brassy spring. P. 1347.

NOYERS a to. and com. France, dep. Yonne on the Saône, 22 m. E. S. E. Auxerre. It is walled, flanked with towers, and has a communal college, an hospital, manufactures of serge, coarse linens cotton stuffs, leather, wax, and common candles, and a trade in corn wine and wool. Pop. 1764.

NOYON (Latin Novodonum Neocadunum), a to. France, dep. Oise on the Voire, 44 m. E. N. E. Beauvais. It is a very ancient, but regularly and well built town, adorned by numerous fountains and has a cathedral, a fine Romanesque edifice, begun in the 12th, and completed on a uniform plan early in the 13th century an ancient Hotel de Ville manufactures of leather, and tissues of hemp and flax, and a trade, chiefly in corn sent to Paris from a small harbor on the Oise, at Pont L'Évêque. Noyon was the birthplace of Jean Calvin. Pop. 5099.

NU GABIEP a river S. Africa. See ORANGE RIVER.

NUBERA, a district Ladak. See NUBIA.

NUBIA a name given to a more or less restricted scene, to the countries on and around the Valley of the Nile, above Egypt, up as far as Abyssinia and the hills districts still occupied by Blacks. This name, as now applied has no place in ancient geography.

The Ethiopia of Greek and Roman writers began immediately above Egypt, and the Arabs or Nobatians of Sinbad and Ptolemy were evidently the natives of Kordofan. The statements which seem to set them back of the Nile admit of an easy explanation and need not be here discussed. The name itself evidently originated in Egypt, where the word nub or nub, signifying gold, lent an appellation, at an early period, to those countries whence the precious metal was derived. It is nowhere a native appellation though Nubah is the general name given to the natives of the gold countries immediately beyond the limits of Nubia.

It was under Diodorus that the Romans found the rocky valley of the Nile, above Egypt, not worth the cost of defending from the restless Blemmyes (Blemmyes, Blemmyes, Blemmyes), gave it up, to a distance of seven days journey to a colony of Nobatians, brought from an oasis in the western desert. In truth the water-carriers of that desert are, to this day, all originally from Kordofan. After some struggles with the Blemmyes, the Nobatians obtained the upper hand on the Nile, in the 6th century and the spread of Christianity among them aided their national progress. In the following century, therefore, the Arab conquerors of Egypt found a nation of Nubah on the Nile immediately above that country. This was the original Nubia a name subsequently extended, with out regard to race or government, to all the Christian states on the river up to the wild country. This wide and indiscriminate application of the name has been revived of late years, and all the countries in the S., subjugated by the Turco Egyptians, are collectively called Nubia which, in this sense therefore, comprehends — 1. Nubia proper, or the Valley of the Nile, actually peopled by Nubah, extending from the limits of Egypt to the bounds of Dongola. 2. The ancient Meroe the modern capital of which is Blendy, and the domain of which may be considered as extending along the Nile from Dongola to the confluence of the Blue and White rivers. 3. Senaar, higher up. To this last comes to be annexed Kordofan on the W. and Takla, E. of the Atbara.

Nubia proper extends through 6° of lat., from Khin (24°), to the S. bank of Dongola (30°) nearly 600 m. perches, along the river. The first portion of it, the Wadi-el-Kandak, reaches up about 70 m. then follows Wadi-Nubah, to the second cataract. The average width of this part of the valley does not exceed 2 1/2 m. It presents to view a glacial, reddish desert, studded with pointed black rocks, and with narrow strips of green and palm trees along the river. Above the second or great cataract of Wadi Halah, which is, in fact, a succession of distinct hills, the Bahr-el-Hajle, or Ghazal (Bahr), reaches up about 50 m. Here there is scarcely a trace of vegetation. To this follows Sukkot, where the valley opens, and repulsive sterility begins to disappear. The date here attains perfection. Mahas succeeds, and then comes the fertile level of Dongola, where the river forms several large islands, that of Argo being 30 m. in length. Remains of ancient edifices occur throughout this whole extent, but chiefly below Dongola. The most remarkable are the temple of Kabaal (formerly Tabaal), the sculptures of which represent the expedition of Sesostris that of Dikka; the excavated temple of Ipanboul a little below Wadi-Halfah; and the temple of Bama, a little above it. In Dongola, some colossal figures of granite lie prostrate in the Nile. The inhabitants throughout speak, in various dialects, a language fundamentally the same, and which radically agrees with that of Koldai in Kordofan. They are a handsome swarthy race of dark brown complexion bold frank, cheerful, and more simple and incorrupt in manners than their neighbours, either up or down the river. In Egypt, where they are called Berber (Barbari) they are preferred as porters and domestic servants. The chief town of Lower Nubia is Durri a large village of 200 huts. The new capital, Dongola or Marsha, contains 5000 or 6000 inhabitants. The whole population of Nubia proper does not probably exceed 150,000 souls. See SENNAAR and SERRAH.

NUBADA.—From Dr. John's Unpublished Paper.

NUBLADA, or ST. BERNARDINO an isl., N Pacific, Revillagigedo group lat. 19° 23' 40" N lon. 110° 44' W. length, N.E. to S.W. 8 m.; breadth, about 3 m. It is rugged and barren.

NUBLE, a river Chile, which rises in the W slope of the Cordillera of the Andes, near lat. 36° N flows W & W, and after a course of about 80 m. unites with the Chillan in forming the Itata.

NUDEA a tn Hindoostan, dist same name, prov Bengal, at the confluence of the Jellinghy and Cossimbhar branches of the Ganges, where their junction forms the Hooghly, about 60 m N Calcutta. It was the capital of a Hindoo principality anterior to the Mahomedan conquest and, in more recent times, has been the seat of Brahminical learning. The territory has immediately N Calcutta area, 2942 sq. m. It is extremely fertile in all the more valuable productions of India, including sugar, tobacco mulberries, fax hemp, &c. Pop. 296,784.

NUDLINGEN a vil Bavaria, Lower Franconia, dist and near Kitzingen: with a church, a chapel, several mills, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1290.

NUEDA-CALANAN, a tn Philippines, esp. prov S Camarines, in B.R. of Isl. Luzon, on the Hago or Santa Cruz, at its mouth in the Bay of San Miguel. It is built with considerable regularity; is the see of a bishop, and has, at Santa Cruz, in its vicinity a fine mansion, where the governor resides. Pop. 12,000.

NUEDA-LAREYA, a vil and com. Spain, Andalusia, prov and about 24 m. from Cordova, with a church, primary school, a four-wheel, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1008.

NUEDA-NUKA, a prov. Philippines, Isl. Luzon, extending along part of the E. coast, and backward nearly to Lala Bay. It is the largest province in the island, having a length N to S, of about 200 m., with a breadth of about 70 m.; but is also the poorest, consisting, for the most part, of a very elevated and rugged surface, partly traversed and partly enclosed by lofty mountains. In forests, many of the foresting excellent natural timber, constitutes its chief wealth. The most important cultivated products are tobacco and indigo. Its minerals include iron and coal, said to be both abundant and of superior quality. Part of the province is still in the possession of independent native tribes. Bengalon is the capital. Pop. 25,808.

NUEDA-PAOVINCIA, a prov. Philippines, Isl. Luzon, bounded, W by the Ilocos, E by Cagayan and Nueva-Viscaya, and extending chiefly of part of the mountain chain which traverses the island centrally N to S. It is about 150 m. in length but is very imperfectly known, the greater part of it being still in the hands of independent and very uncivilized native tribes.

NUEDA-YMACAZA, a prov. Philippines, Isl. Luzon, bounded, N by Cagayan, E and S. Nueva-Espa, and W Nueva-Viscaya and Pangasinan. It was formerly included in prov Cagayan from which it was separated in 1899, and is both limited in extent, of indifferent fertility, and thinly peopled. Its staple product is tobacco, and some gold is gathered from the sands of its torrents. Pop. 22,333.

NUEVITAS-DEL-PAISUCO, a port, N.E. coast, Cuba, lat. 21° 28' N lon. 75° 30' W a large bay, with many shoal places, but capacious enough for any number and class of vessels. It is the port of Santa Maria del Rosario, and has, on that account, a considerable trade.

NUOVO-LACU, a dep. Mexico. See LAOS.

NUFFIELD, par Eng Oxford; 30° 5' N. Pop. 2,311.

NUGGENA, a tn Hindoostan, prov and 68 m. N.E. Delhi. It is a large place, with some native fortifications in its vicinity called Kaloo Khan's Fort. Pop. about 15,000.

NUGGUR—1, a tn. N.W. Hindoostan, prov Ajmeer, 67 m. S. Jeypoor, strongly fortified, and further protected on the W by a lake.—2, a ruined city, Hindoostan, prov Mysore lat. 13° 54' N lon. 75° 5' E, on a wide plain, surrounded by hills. The fort is one of the strongest in the Deccan, and there are various handsome buildings, mosques, and palaces, within and about it. The gardens of Nugur are celebrated throughout the W side of India, for their beauty and produce.

KUGHEDU a vil and com. Isl. Sardinia, div Sassari, prov S of Ozieri with a church, a primary school, and a trade in cattle and dairy produce. Pop. 1736.

NUHAHIVA, an Isl. Marquesas. See NUKA HIVA.

NUITS (Latin, Nivium), a tn. France, dep Cote-d'Or on the Muzelle, 15 m. S.W. Dijon, with manufactures of woollen cloth, leather, and vinegar, and a considerable trade in Burgundy wine, fruit, vegetables, building stone, &c. Pop. 5404.

NUJIBABAD a tn Hindoostan, prov and 65 m. N.E. Delhi, in a low and swampy district. It consists of regular broad streets, enclosed by barriers at intervals and flanking distinct bazars and carries on an extensive traffic, chiefly in wood, bamboo, copper, and tin, brought from the hills. About 1 m. E. is the fort of Fatahgarh.

NUJIFGHUR, a tn. Hindoostan, prov Allahabad, dist and 8 m. E. of Cawnpore, r bank Ganges. It is a busy commercial place, which has recently sprung up in consequence of an extensive indigo-work established in its vicinity.

NUKA HIVA, the principal Isl. of the Marquesas Archipelago, in Pacific Ocean lat. 9° S, lon. 140° W greatest length, E. to W, 17 m.; breadth, 10 m.; circuit, above 60 m. The S. coast consists of lofty rugged, and precipitous rocks, from many of which the water is seen tumbling in beautiful cascades. The interior is very elevated, and, in its loftiest summit, attains the height of 5640 ft. Its N.W. coast is flatter and rises gradually from the shore towards the centre. The principal places of resort, and the best anchorages, are on the E. side, on which there are at least three bays; the most important called Port-Tekihoteogoo, where ships may lie in perfect safety. The inhabitants are notorious for cannibalism, houselessness, and treachery, which all combine to make the population small even though the island is naturally able to maintain the highest estimate makes it 12,000, the lowest and latest, only 5000.

seriously completed in white stone, 64 ft in height; the towerhouse, an Italian building of three stories, with a fine front, and a great hall, the walls of which are decorated with paintings in oil, many of them by Dürer—the Reiche-schloss, or imperial castle, in the N W corner of the town, towering above all its other houses, and containing within its court a remarkable Elm-tree said to have been planted by the hands of Queen Kungunda, and now above 700 years old, the Augustin church [church of St. Giles] a handsome modern Italian building, containing a very ancient chapel, originally founded by the Emperor Conrad III. for some Scotch Benedictine monks, and containing an altar-piece by Vandyck; the parsonage of St. Sebald's, with a beautiful oval window and near it the Gothic chapel of St. Maurice, now converted into a picture-gallery. There are numerous benevolent and educational institutions. Among the former are the general and military hospitals, the orphan and foundling hospital, the deaf and dumb asylum, and asylum for destitute children, among the latter are a gymnasium, school of arts, polytechnical, industrial and many other public and private schools. The manufactures and trade were at one time very extensive, and almost all the streets derived their names from the particular branches of industry carried on in them and many important inventions had their first existence here. Of these inventions may be specified wire-drawing, watches, and firearms. The industry of the town has greatly declined, but it still manufactures and carries on an extensive trade in wire, musical and mathematical instruments, toys, lead pencils, needle glass, etc.

KARMELEITER STRASSE (CAROLINE STREET) AND CHURCH OF ST. LAURENCE—From Albrecht, Nuremberg, in 15th century.

Nuremberg, though an ancient city does not carry its origin so far back as Roman times. It had acquired considerable importance in the 10th or 11th centuries, and has been frequently visited by the emperors of Germany. It was greatly enlarged by Conrad III., and received several embellishments and important privileges from Frederick Barbarossa. In 1319, it was raised to the rank of a free city of the empire. It early took part in the Reformation. Subsequently it suffered during the great European wars, and being repeatedly laid under contribution by both parties, became so exhausted, that the sources of its prosperity were almost dried up, and the population rapidly decreased by extensive emigration. Having heavily incurred a load of debt, which made it an acquisition of little value to any state, it was finally taken possession of in 1806 by Bavaria, which undertook the settlement of its debts, and, by judicious arrangements, has considerably increased its trade. Many distinguished individuals have been born here. Among others may be mentioned the poets Frenking and Hans Sachs, the mathematician Behaim, the painter Albert Dürer, and the sculptors Peter Vischer and Adam Kraft. Pop. 45,861

NUNNEY, three par. Ire.—1, Par. and in Carlow; 2728 ac. Pop. 571.—2, Par. and in Kildare; 3796 ac. Pop. 673.—3, Par. Kildare; 2180 ac. Pop. 669

NURPUR, a tn. in the N E of the Punjab, on the lower slopes of the Himalaya lat. 32° 13' N; lon 76° 40' E. It is defended by a fort built of stone and mud, situated on an eminence 200 ft. high, but commanded on all sides by loftier heights, and has a good and well-stocked bazaar and manufactures of shawls which employ a large number of the inhabitants. Its position makes it a place of considerable importance. Pop. about 8000.

NURRI a vil, isl. Eardie, div Cagliari, prov and 5 m. E. Lill. It has uneven, twisted, and extremely filthy streets, several churches, a Capuchin convent, a primary school, brick and tile works, and a trade in corn, wine, fruit, hides, wool and dairy produce. Pop. 2835.

NURTINGEN, a tn. in Württemberg, circle Schwarzwald, on the Neckar 14 m. S.E.E. Stuttgart, with an old church, castle, hospital, Latin and general school, manufactures of woollens, Turkey dye-works, cottons and other mills. P. 9989

NUS, or Nuz, a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, Aiv and 8 m. N.E. Aosta, 1 bank Dora, with two churches, an old castle, manufactures of ironware, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 2069

NUSCO a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, dist. and 5 m. W S W Angelo de Lombardi. It is the see of a bishop and has a seminary and hospital. Pop. 8560

NUSLAU or NUSLAU a market in Austria, Moravia, circle and 10 m. S.E.E. Brünn, at the foot of a hill near 1 bank Schwarze. It has a church. Pop. 1198

NUSLOCI, a market in Baden, circle Lower Rhine, bail. and 1 m. S. Hildesberg, with three churches. P. 2054

NUSSBACH or ALBU, a vil Austria, Transylvania, dist. and about 24 m. from Crostod, near the Ait, with a trade in corn, cattle, and timber. P. 1097

NUSSDOERF numerous places, Austria, particularly—1, A vil below the Enns; so near Vienna as to be almost one of its suburbs. It produces a famous wine which bears its name, and is much visited by the citizens of the capital on holidays. Pop. 3000.—2 (Oostsch, or Oost), a market in Hungary, co. Presburg with a church and a flour-mill. Pop. 1804.—3, (Uster, or Wüstsch), a market in Hungary, co. Presburg, about 6 m. from Moders with several mills, and a trade in corn, cattle, and timber. P. 1096

NUSSERABAD—1, a tn. N W Hindustan prov and about 12 m. S Ajmer, with extensive encampments for British troops. It is considered healthy but is one of the most expensive places of residence in all India.—2 A small tn. E. Hindustan, prov. Bengal, r. bank Mahanapootra, lat. 24 28' N, lon 89° E

NUTFIELD par Eng. Sarney, 3713 ac. Pop. 893

NUTHALL par Eng. Notts 1644 ac. Pop. 682

NUTHURST par Eng. Sussex; 8260 ac. Pop. 727

NUTLEY par Eng. Hants 1601 ac. Pop. 169

NUTTS ARCHIPELAGO an assemblage of islands, W coast, E. Australia, between lon. 132° 35' and 134° E; the principal ones are St. Francis and St. Peter

NYARAD (also Nari), two nearly contiguous places, Hungary, co. Presburg, in the S. coast, 80 m. from Buda, with a church, and a castle. Pop. 1705

NYASSA, or NYAMAZO, a great lake, in the S. part of Equatorial Africa, the southern end of which appears to be about lat. 12° S, lon 35° E. The direction of the lake is probably S.E. and N.W. Its breadth is, in general, a three days' voyage in a canoe (perhaps 40 m. or 50 m.), the nights being spent on islands, which are numerous. As to its length, we have no direct or conclusive testimony. Old accounts make it 100 leagues, and, indeed, to this extent the lake may be now traced with tolerable certainty. Some native reports give it a length of two months' voyage in a canoe. But the fact is, that its northern end is unknown to the natives on its southern shores, from whom we obtain our information. The people who dwell near it often speak of it as if it were a river. The remarkable elongation of this narrow lake has caused some doubt of its continuity, and it has been suggested that the lake on the W of Monomoni is quite distinct from Nyassa or the lake, the Musamanga country, W of it. But these doubts must yield to the following considerations:—1st, All the reports gathered for three centuries, on the E coast, chiefly at Kifwa, relate to a great lake of the interior, and not to lakes, although a constant communication is maintained between Kifwa and the inland tribes of the Musamanga and the Musamanga of Monomoni, 2d, The shores of Nyassa, as Nyassa is called on its W side, are distinctly traceable on that side, from native reports, as far as the river Lapupa, within the 9th parallel, and therefore to the limits of Monomoni. That the name Nyassa is not applied to it in the last-mentioned country, is obviously owing to the difference between the Musamanga and Musamanga languages.

The nations dwelling on the shores of Nyassa are called generally, in the Swahili or language of the E coast, Wanyassa (See people) This name, however, does not appear to be applied to the tribes of Monomoni, on the E side of the lake, probably because they do not in fact occupy its shores for a distance of three or four days' journey intervening between the populous districts of Monomoni and the lake—the journey being over a waterless country, probably a steep descent. To the Musamanga of Monomoni, situated in the 9th or 10th parallel the Musamanga, of whom the Maduva are a branch. These occupy the S E and S shores of the lake, and are scattered over the country further W. But we believe that the Mangwa on the S W shores of the lake, are, as well as their W neighbours the Morwa, to be considered as Musamanga. Beyond the Mangwa, on the W side, are the Mumbwa, and beyond them the Mumbwa, who extend N to the mouth of the Lapupa, in about lat. 8° 30'. Here terminates our information respecting the shores of the lake. We know, however, that copper and ivory are brought across the lake, a three days' voyage, to Oha in Monomoni (lat. 7° 30'), from Zangwayika, a town on its W shores, and N apparently of the Lapupa.

The tribes at the E end of the lake, and further S (the Musamanga), entitle their chiefs Maravi. Hence the Portuguese called the country N of the Zambeze and towards the lake, the Maravi country, and they named the lake itself Lake Maravi. The Musamanga, on the other hand, entitle an independent king Mumbo, hence their invading hordes have been called the Mumbos. The Portuguese learned, early in the 16th century, that the river Cuan, at Kifwa, was thought to issue from the great inland lake. They supposed that the Zambeze, also descended from the same lake; and that the name of the latter river was originally written (by De Barros and his followers) Zambeze or Zambeze the lake also received, from geographers, the name of Zambeze so that, when the name of the river was corrected, by João das Santos (1609), the S. relations of the lake were soon lost sight of, and Lake Zambeze disappeared, in later times, only in connection with the river of Kifwa.

The first graphic account of the lake was given by the missionary Luitl Mariano (1824) from native information. He says—The river Chirim (he meant, probably, the Mosito, which enters the sea opposite the Quirimba Islands) issues from it, first very quietly, but afterwards, meeting with rocks, it becomes so furious that no boat can descend it. Maravi (the town of a chief) lies between the lake and the Zambeze. Then follow two of the chief kings, namely, Masei, distant 10 days from Maravi, and the other, Rousanga, five days' journey further. As to the further end of the lake, the people of Rousanga knew nothing of it, so distant is it. The lake is 4 or 5 leagues wide; and, in some places, the opposite shore cannot be seen across it. It is all sprinkled over with islands on which those who navigate it can rest. It abounds in fish, has a depth of 8 or 10 fathoms, and is much fished by the winds of Mozambique (S.E.) so that whoever would attempt to explore it, must go there in April or May. The borders of the lake abound in millet, sheep, and frey, which latter may be had cheap. There are many boats on it, called mochi. This account appears to be accurate, so far as it goes. The word mochi (mochi) belongs to the Musamanga language, the Musamanga call a canoe paludo. The ships of the Wanyassa are all black and four-masted. The trade and navigation of Nyassa seem to be active only towards its S. extremity owing probably, to the insupportable character of its E. shore in Monomoni, and to the wildness of the tribes occupying the opposite or W lowlands. At its S end, the lake penetrates into a region of hills, equally populous on both sides. Here recent accounts indicate to us the great market of Moia, on the E. side, and, four days further N, Ngonbo, a still more important place opposite to which, at a distance of three days' voyage, is the town of the ruins of Nyassa (Mangwa), perhaps the Maravi described by Mariano.

NYBORG (New castle), a tn. and seaport, Denmark, lat. 56° 40' N. on a bay of the Great Belt, 17 m. E. S. E. Odense. It is strongly though irregularly fortified and has a harbour admitting vessels drawing 13 ft. good building-docks, and a considerable trade in grain. All vessels which pass the Great Belt, pay their dues here. In 1659, the Danes gained here an important victory over the Swedes, and thereby freed their country from a foreign yoke. Pop. (1851), 3009.

NIHAMM a port E coast, Sweden, Jan Gellafors at the mouth of the Ljusna, in the Gulf of Bothnia. It is capable of holding 40 ships, is sheltered, and is much used for refuge by vessels sailing between Stockholm and Finland.

NYINAH a tn., W Africa, dist. Koroiko, N. E. Sierra Leone, lat. 8° 45' N., lon. 11° 28' W. on the route between Rokelle and Falahe, houses large, and well built.

NYIR, several places, Hungary.—1. Adony, a vil. Thither Thias, co. Szabolcs 9 m. from Hadjass with a church. Pop. 1870.—2. Vier-Tor, A vil., co. Szathmar with a church, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1124.—3. Bathor, A market to co. Szabolcs, 30 m. N. E. Debreczin with two churches, a monastery, and a trade in corn, cattle, and timber. Pop. 3350.—4. Selcké, A vil. on Szabolcs, about 9 m. from Nyir-Falva, with a church, a trade in corn, cattle, and timber, and a steam mill. Pop. 1845.

NYIRAD, a vil. Hungary Thither Danube on Szabolcs, 8 m. from Szeged with a church, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1389.

NYIRLEGYZA, a market in Hungary Thither Thias, co. Szabolcs 29 m. N. Duxrass with a Greek, a R. Catholic and two Protestant churches, soda and salt-petre works, mineral springs and a trade in agricultural produce, and important animal farms. Pop. 15740.

NYKLIK, a tn. Holland. See NYKLIK.

NYKÖBING (Lat. Nycoptila Falcata) a tn. and seaport, Denmark, on the Guldberg and in Falster with a harbour and three quays, at one of which vessels drawing 10 ft. can lie. A great deal of corn is shipped here. P. 1200.

NYKUPING, a seaport in Sweden, cap. laz. of same name, on a bay of the Baltic, 64 m. S. W. Stockholm. It is traversed by the Nyköping, is regularly built, has several courts and public offices, three churches, a new castle an old castle, now in ruins, an hospital; manufactures of linen, cotton, and woollen cloth, hosiery, tobacco, needles, and various articles in steel and brass, machine-works building yards, and a paper and several other mills. P. 6186.

The Lika is bounded on the N by Lake Milar, separating it from Westerdal, 1 pal, and Stockholm, N. E., Stockholm; E. and S. the Baltic and Lundagård and V. Örebro. It is well wooded in the loftier districts, and in the lower so fertile as to have a surplus of corn for export. rears great numbers of excellent cattle, and possesses manufactures of iron, steel, copper, lead, and cobalt. The principal exports, for which the bays on the coast afford great facilities, are corn, cattle, metals, and timber. Pop. 105,072.

NYLBA, a vil. and com. Belgium prov. and 13 m. E. S. E. Antwerp, 5 m. N. E. by R. Lier inhabitants chiefly occupied in weaving. Pop. 1766.

NYMET ROWLAND, par Eng Devon 595 ac. P. 99.

NYMPHENBURG, a tn. Upper Bavaria, 8 m. N. W. Munich with important manufactures of porcelain and painted glass, and a royal palace, the usual summer residence of the court, with fine gardens attached. Pop. 1110.

NYMPHFIELD, par Eng. Gloucestershire; 1473 ac. P. 417.

NYMPTON.—1. (Stoke), A vil. and par England, co. Devon, 3 m. E. S. E. Milton with a handsome parish church, and manufactures of serge. Area of par, 3679 ac. P. 1346.—2. (St. George) par Devon, area, 3240 ac. P. 229.

KYNEHEAD par Eng. Somerset, 1448 on P 567
NYON or Nyon, a tn. Switzerland on Vevay, NW bank lake and 18 m. NNE Geneva. It is an old, irregularly-built place; has several educational establishments, an old Gothic castle, on a height, manufactures of leather an important pottery for porcelain and delftware, and a good trade. Pop. 2464.

BYZIONS [acc. Nemagus], a valley in France, dep. Dordme, once one of the strongest places in Dauphiny, on the Eygane, here crossed by a bridge. It is poorly built, but has a large square, with arched piazzas, forming an agreeable promenade; manufactures of soap, leather, woollen stuffs, and pottery; and a good deal of silk is both raised and spun. The bridge over the Byzone is a remarkable Roman structure, built of brown stone, and consisting of a single arch of about 100 ft. in span, and 85 ft. in height. Fon. 23/59

NYSELOTT, s. in. Roma. See NEUSELOTT.
NYSTAD a tn. and seaport, Ruana, Finland, gov. and 26 m. N W Åbo, on the Gulf of Bothnia, where it has a good harbor. It has manufactures of linen, coarse woollens, and hosiery; and a considerable trade in linen, provisions, and timber. A peace was concluded between Russia and Sweden in this town in 1721, and bears its name. P. (1856). 3781.

NYSTED a seaport in Denmark, Isl. Lolland ball and 13 m. S.E. Maribo, on a small bay. It has a good small capacious haven admitting vessels which draw 10 ft., and protected against sailing by a high breakwater of stone. Pop. 1000.

NYUSTYA, or NUKETA a vil. Hungary, co. and 19 ml. N W 33rd. It has a Protestant church, a trade in corn and cattle, and an iron-mill. In the vicinity are mines from which some gold is obtained. Pop. 1125.

O-BECSE, a market in Hungary. See BACK.

O-BESSENOVA a market in Hungary co. Torontal on the Aranka, about 9 m from Nagy-Szent Miklos. It has a trade in corn, and several animal furs. Pop 7317.

O'BREYNNAN was Ircl Kerry 6547 ag Pop 640

O'BRIEN'S BRIDGE, a vil and par Ireland, co Clara, 7 m. N.E. Limerick, on the Shannon, here spanned by a bridge of 12 arches. It has a church, grain-mill, and school
Area of par 11,369 ac Pop 3121

O'DAGH par Ivel Kilkenny 4542 ac. Pop. 1189

O'DORNEY par Iral Kerry 7227 ac. Pop 2002

O-ZOLYOM or ZVOLEN See ALTBOL.

NADBY, par Eng Leicester 1560 ao Pop. 1196.

ОАН СООАН на нл, S. Pacific. See УТНН С

QAHU one of the Sandwich Isles. See WAOHOO.
QAJACA, or QALACA a dep. Mexican Confederation, comprehending the S. portion of the isthmus of Tehuantepec, and the table-land of Mixtepecan lat. 15° 40' to 18° 20' N lon. 94° 15' to 98° 15' W length 270 m. along the shores of the Pacific breadth, at the widest part, 170 m. area, 31 822 sq. m. bounded W by dep. La Puebla, N Vera Cruz, Tehuacan, Oaxaca, and the Gulf of Mexico, S by the State of Oaxaca, and E by Vera Cruz. It is of various surface, and in many parts mountainous but is one of the most beautiful and best-cultivated districts in Mexico. Its principal rivers are the Atravado, which runs near the centre of the department, and after a winding course terminates in a lake in Vera Cruz, the Rio Grande and Verde, both of which fall into the Pacific, near the W extremity of the department. At the E end are several smaller streams, most of which fall into the Gulf of Tehuantepec. The mines of silver and gold are not important. The climate is agreeable and salubrious, and the soil remarkably fertile. Its productions are sugar, coffee, wheat, sugar cane, tobacco, plantains, and other fruits. The inhabitants are chiefly Indian. Pop. (1850) 525,161.

OAJACA or OAJAKA is in Mexico, esp. above dry near 1 bank Verde, 210 m S S E Mexico, 4800 ft. above the sea. It is well built, of an oblong form about 2 m. in length by 1½ m. in breadth, including the suburbs, which are full of gardens and plantations of cochintil, for which this city is celebrated. It has wide and well paved streets, houses of freestone, some good squares, a number of handsome and richly-decorated churches and monasteries, a town house, and bishops' residences. The inhabitants are industrious, manufacturing silk, cotton, sugar, and chocolate. Pop 17850. 25,000.

04KE par Eng. Rougemet: 846 ss. Ppn 168

OAKFORD, near East Devon. 8464 sq. Feet. £25

OAKHAM or OCCHAM, a market to and par England, emp. co. Rutland pleasantly situated in the vale of Catnes, on the Melton-Mowbray canal, and the Syston and Peterborough railway 85 m. N.W. London. It has a fine old church, with a tower, surmounting in a lofty spire Baptist, Calvinistic, Independent, and Wesleyan chapels; national model schools in a handsome Elizabethan building, a free grammar-school, an old castle, partly fitted up as a county hall, a handsome agricultural hall and news-room, and manufactures of silk and for hats. Geoffrey Hudson the celebrated dwarf was born here. Area of par. $130 sq. Pop. 8891

OAKHAMPTON, a decaying market tn. and par. Eng. Dorset, on a valley 30 m W Exeter near Dartmoor forest with a parish church, about $\frac{1}{2}$ m from the town to a small chapel, place of worship for independent and Wesleyan, a school and market-boose, and three wheels.

Area of Day 9552 sq. Pop. 2105 — (Local Correspondent)

OAKINGTON par Eng. Cambridge; 1757 ac. P 694

OAKLFY eight pers. Eng —1 Bedford 1740 aa. P

457—2 Books 2260 ac P 425—3, Suffolk 1268 ac.

P 886.—4, (Church), Hants, 1605 ac. P 808.—5, (Grave)

Essex: 3049 ac P 1177 -8 (Great) Northampton 2810

no. P 197-7 (Latite) Essex 1119 no P 298.-8, (Latite) Northampton 724 no. P 138.

OAKMAGFF a river U States. Age OUMFLAKK

OAKOVER par Eng Stafford 810 no. Pop. 61

OAKSEY par Eng Wilt 1802 ac. Pop. 487

OAK, two para Eng -1, Kent 686 ac. Pop 185

—3 Somerset; 4000 ac. Pop. 57

wammoth, down and whole skins of various kinds of geese; done chiefly at the great annual fair.

OBÉ, Ouz, or Ouz, a large river Siberia, having its source in the Altai mountains; lat. 50° 32' N. lon. 89° E. From this point it flows N W and S N W to Katsunaka, under the name of the Chochoy, or Tobida, to the first station, and, subsequently, of the Katsunaka. At Katsunaka it is joined by the Bile, and is thenceforth called the Obé. Its course is now very tortuous, but with a general tendency to the N W, till it reaches Samarova, lat. 60° 30' N. lon. 66° E., whence it flows N, in a double channel to the Gulf of Obé. The area of its basin is estimated at 1,837,000 sq. m., and its total course to be 3000 m. Its principal tributaries are the Irtysh, Tobol, Tura, and Tobissim.

OBÉID, El Oued, Lough or Loughy, a r. E. Africa, cap. Kerdah, lat. 15° 16' N. lon. 30° 7' E. It is a straggling collection of mud huts, composing six different villages, each forming a separate quarter, inhabited by a distinct class of men, and standing in a vast plain. The houses are mere huts of straw and mud with exception of a few built of clay, and have to be rebuilt almost annually, after the rainy season. There are five mosques in the town, only one of which is built of brick, three barracks, an hospital and governor's residence, one of the largest buildings in Obéid, and a market-place, which, during the day, presents a scene of great bustle and animation. At noon as night sets in, there is a furious howling of wild beasts, leopards, and hyenas, all round who are kept off by strong abatis of thorns, with which the houses are surrounded, and belied which the dogs yell them defiance. Water sometimes is very scarce, and the wells are nearly 100 ft deep. Pop. exclusive of the military estimated at 12,000.

OBÉID-AMMAN, a vil. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, bail. Andernach with a church, oil press, and other mills. P. 1186.

OBÉID-CHERKEZ, or OBÉID-CHERKEZ, a market in Bohemia, circle Taber on the Igla, 4 m. from Bistula. with a church, a school, an hospital, a saw and other mills. Pop. 1789.

OBÉID-DRAUSCH, a market in Austria Illyria, circle and 40 m. N W Villach 1 bank drive; with a church, and the ruins of the castle of Drausburg. Pop. 3000.

OBÉID-GRELLER, a vil. and par. Switzerland can. Valais, r. bank Rhone, 8 m. from its source, in a glacier 49 m. N E. E. Sun, 4300 ft. above the sea. It has a handsome church, the remains of an old castle, and some transit trade. Pop. 237.

OBÉID-LEQ, a vil. Switzerland, can. and 11 m. N E. Bern, with manufactures of fire-engines, and smitheries. Near it are the mineral springs of Foushied. Pop. 1907.

OBÉID-LENGEN, or OBÉID-LENGEN a vil. Würtemberg, circle Neckar near Maulbronn with a Protestant church. Pop. 1320.

OBÉID-LENGEN a vil. Bavaria, circle Swabia, 87 m. N W Würzburg with two churches, a castle, Latin school hospital, manufactures of linen and articles in wood, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1001.

OBÉID-LENGEN, a vil. Baden, circle Mittelrhein, on the Rhine, 7 m. N E. Offenburg; with a bathing establishment, manufactures of paper, starch, and tiles. P. 2000.

OBÉID-LENGEN (Nro) a market in Austria, Carinthia, circle Lienz, 13 m. S W W. Laybach. It has two churches, manufactures of linen, and some transit trade. Pop. 1346.

OBÉID-MÖRLEN, a vil. Hesse-Darmstadt, Oberrhein, circle and near Friedberg, with a church and a manor-house. Pop. 1773.

OBÉID-NAI, or OBÉID-NAI, a once fortified and poorly built town, France, dep. Bas-Rhin, 14 m. N Schœlten. It has a large town-hall communal college, hospital, and near it the remains of an imperial palace, and a monastery, main factories of calicoes, leather hats, soap, tins, branks tiles, pottery, glass, glue, nails, candles, and brandy. Pop. 4823.

OBÉID-NAI a market in Upper Austria, circle Inn r. bank Inn, 13 m. N W. Boos. It has a market, a church, school, cattle, and manufactures of linen. Pop. 1749.

OBÉID-NAI, a vil. Bavaria, Lower Franconia, on the Main and Minsing, 26 m. N W Würzburg with a church, two chapels, some shipping, and a trade in wood, oil, gypsum, and flour mills. Pop. 1773.

OBÉID-NAI, a vil. Würtemberg circle Schwab, bail. back Neckar, 43 m. S W Stuttgart, with an hospital, manufactures of firearms, leather, woolen, cotton, and linen cloth, a saw and polishing mill. Pop. 1054.

OBÉID-KIRCHEN a vil. Hesse-Cassel, Niederhessen, on the Ass, 28 m. W S W Hanover, with a townhouse, and the seat of a riding society. Pop. 1869.

OBÉID-ZELL, a vil. Bavaria, the Haverhessen.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Tyrol, circle Inns, with a church, sulphur springs and a bathing establishment. P. 1028.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. belonging to the free town of Frankfurt. It lies on the Main, and on the road to Offenbach, and has a church, and a number of handsome villas. Pop. 1878.

OBÉID-PEFFERS several places Switzerland, particularly, a vil. and par. can. and 12 m. S E. St. Gall; with a church, and herd by the remains of the ancient castle of Blatten, and also the ruins of the castle of Widenstein. Pop. 2890.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, or OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Prussia, gov. and 26 m. N W Posen, on the Warta, with two churches, a synagogue, and manufactures of woolen and linen cloth, leather and earthenware. Pop. 1696.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a market in Bavaria circle Swabia, near the sources of the Iller E. S. E. of Lindau, with a castle, and iron and steel works. Pop. 1904.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a market in Germany, duchy Oldenburg, 8 m. E. N. E. Ruckelshof, on the Xahe, with two churches, a castle, and courthouses. Agate, and other valuable stones and pebbles are found near it, and polished. Pop. 2261.

OBÉID-PEFFERS a vil. Würtemberg circle Neckar on the Botten near Marbach with a church, and, on a height in the vicinity the feudal castle of Liechtenberg. P. 1432.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. and par. Switzerland can. and 7 m. N W St. Gall with a church, an orphan hospital and some cotton manufactures, but the inhabitants live chiefly by agriculture and the raising of cattle. Pop. 2175.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, or OBÉID-PEFFERS, several places, Switzerland, particularly a vil. and par. can. and 20 m. S Bern 2710 ft. above the sea, with a finely-ornamented church and school-house. Near it are mineral springs. Pop. 1423.

OBÉID-PEFFERS a vil. Schwarzwald circle Rastatt, bail. and near Rastatt with a church and a chapel. P. 1716.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Rhodish Prussia, 1 bank Rhine; 24 m. S E. Coblenz, with a highly-decorated church, picturesque round tower, and herd by the ruined castle of Behrberg. Pop. 2300.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Saxony circle and 81 m. N E. Zwickau, 2800 ft. above sea-level, with a townhouse, and manufactures of lace fringes, linen, ribbons, and articles in iron steel and wood. Pop. 1897.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 16 m. N E Zurich with a large church. P. 2089.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Nassau, bail. Klingenstein on Mount Taunus with iron, copper, salt, paper, and other mills. P. 1956.

OBÉID-PEFFERS a vil. Saxony circle and 81 m. N E. Zwickau, 2800 ft. above sea-level, with a townhouse, and manufactures of lace fringes, linen, ribbons, and articles in iron steel and wood. Pop. 1897.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 16 m. N E Zurich with a large church. P. 2089.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Nassau, bail. Klingenstein on Mount Taunus with iron, copper, salt, paper, and other mills. P. 1956.

OBÉID-PEFFERS a vil. Saxony circle and 81 m. N E. Zwickau, 2800 ft. above sea-level, with a townhouse, and manufactures of lace fringes, linen, ribbons, and articles in iron steel and wood. Pop. 1897.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 16 m. N E Zurich with a large church. P. 2089.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Nassau, bail. Klingenstein on Mount Taunus with iron, copper, salt, paper, and other mills. P. 1956.

OBÉID-PEFFERS a vil. Saxony circle and 81 m. N E. Zwickau, 2800 ft. above sea-level, with a townhouse, and manufactures of lace fringes, linen, ribbons, and articles in iron steel and wood. Pop. 1897.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 16 m. N E Zurich with a large church. P. 2089.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Nassau, bail. Klingenstein on Mount Taunus with iron, copper, salt, paper, and other mills. P. 1956.

OBÉID-PEFFERS a vil. Saxony circle and 81 m. N E. Zwickau, 2800 ft. above sea-level, with a townhouse, and manufactures of lace fringes, linen, ribbons, and articles in iron steel and wood. Pop. 1897.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 16 m. N E Zurich with a large church. P. 2089.

OBÉID-PEFFERS, a vil. Nassau, bail. Klingenstein on Mount Taunus with iron, copper, salt, paper, and other mills. P. 1956.

OBRESCHIA, or OBESIA, a vil. Hungary on the Tamasar, on the border, 8 m. from Karamschoa. It is the headquarters of a Waischen-Hyllen frontier region. P. 1698.

OBREITZ, or OBESBURG, a vil. Lower Austria, near the Pulkas, about 10 m. from Jelschold with a church, a limestone quarry, and a trade in corn and wine. P. 1699.

OBROVACZ, a vil. Hungary Hither Danube, on. River, 8 m. from Illek, with a church, and a trade in wood, corn and cattle. P. 1699.

OBROWITZ, a vil. Austria, Moravia, so near Brum as to be properly one of its suburbs. It has a church, a castle, and a mill. P. 1700.

OBSCIA, or OBSCIA, a river Russia; rises in gov Smolensk, flows W., enters Vitebsk, and joins the bank Dvina, 20 m. above Vitebsk; total course, 80 m., part of which is navigable.

OBSEVATZIL, a cape, E. Asia, Gulf of Anadir, lat. 64° 47' 58" N. lon. 177° 59' 55" E.

OBVA, a river, Russia, rises on the frontiers of gov. Viatka and Perm, flows N.E. through Perm, and joins the bank Kama 26 m. above the town of Perm. total course, 100 m.

OBV—1 (or OBV) a small lake, Gulf of Bann 18 m. S. of the point of Canby, lat. 2° 25' N. lon. 104° 54' E. It is formed of different hills, the highest of which is in the centre, and may be seen from a distance of 45 m., to 50 m. A few families, banished from the continent, subsist here on vegetables and maize, which they cultivate.—2 A small Gulf of Bann, called False Obv 48 m. N. the former. lat. 8° 58' N. lon. 104° 58' E. (a), about 18 m. from the mainland. In the dry season, junks are employed in carrying water thence to the adjoining continent where it is at times extremely scarce.—3, Two lake. Piti's Passage, Indian Archipelago called respectively Great and Little Obv. Great Obv is about 50 m. long W by N to E. by E. breadth, 10 m. to 20 m. It is lofty, very mountainous, thickly wooded and yields spices and sugar, coasts mostly high and safe to approach. Little Obv is situated off the W end of Great Obv. lat. 1° 26' S. lon. 137° 17' E.

OCANA two places, Spain.—1, A to New Castle, prov. Toledo, 35 m. S. Madrid. It has numerous squares, a spacious prison several schools, an hospital, nine convents, and two churches. maun schools of hard soap of excellent quality, earthenware, bricks and tiles, cloth, worsted stockings, and oil. In the plain between Ocana and Los Barrios, the Spaniards, 65,000 strong, and commanded by Arzaga, were signally defeated by 35,000 French, under Soult. Ocana was miserably sacked by the French who also destroyed its precious archives. Pop. 3127.—2, A vil. Andalusia, prov. and 81 m. S. Almeria, poorly built, with a church, an oil and a flour mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. P. 4900.

OCANA a town New Granada, dep. Magdalena, in a part of the chain of the Andes, to which it gives its name, and on the Oro, a small affluent of the Leticia or Casanare, by means of which it is enabled to carry on some trade. There are mines of copper in its vicinity. Pop. about 5000.

OCATAHUALA, a lake, U. States, Louisiana, 40 m. W. Natchez, formed by the expansion of a river of same name. Greatest length, N. E. to S. W., 24 m. breadth, 6 m.

OCCHIOBELLO a vil. and par. kind of Italy gov. Venice, l. bank Po, 15 m. S. W. Mogio with a court of justice, and several public offices, a parish church and an academy. Pop. 1568.

OCCHIAIKO a town Italy Piedmont, dis. and W. N. W. Alessandria, l. bank Grano with a court of justice, a parish and three other churches, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 2620.

OCOLD par. Eng. Suffolk, 1479 m. Pop. 680.

OCEAN, several islands, Pacific.—1, (or Cure) lat. 28° 77' N. lon. 178° 35' 30" E., small, low, and very dangerous, with a reef which, commencing about 4 m. from its W. point, extends N. for 8 m.—2 A group of three islets, sometimes called the Kivaden or Catherine Islands, lat. 9° 14' N. lon. 162° 2' E.—3, (or Freemore) a small islet, lat. 10° 54' S. lon. 168° 24' 35" W. 10 to 15 m. in circuit, of a round shape, high in the centre, and with deep water all round, though without any harbours or anchorage. It is well covered with coconut nut trees, and of great fertility. Pop. 450.

OCEANIA a name which has been given to a fifth division of the world and includes all the islands of the Pacific, between Asia on the N. W., the Indian Ocean on the W., the Antarctic Ocean on the S., and America on the E. and W., a subdivision of Oceania adopted by some geographers to take W. Oceania or Malasia, corresponding with what is better known by the name of the Indian or Eastern Archipelago, Micronesia or N. Oceania, Polynesia or E. Oceania, and Melanesia or S. Oceania.

OCHA, or OKHA, a river, Siberia; issues from Lake Tunda, gov. Tobolsk, flows E. N. E., then N. W. W., and joins the bank Irkut about 20 m. below Tara, total course, 140 m.

OCHAGAVIA, a town Spain, prov. Navarra, 32 m. E. N. E. Pamplona, with a church, hermitage, townhouse, school, old palace, manufactures of woollen cloth and shoes, a flour-mill, and a trade in wool, cheese, and skins. P. 1643.

OCHARDIANO, a town Spain, gov. Biscay, 5 m. E. Bilbao, with a church, a handsome townhouse, churches, and hospital; iron-works, and manufactures of ironware. P. 1164.

OCHEROU HETOU, HARRA, See Bow Island.

OCHEIL HILLS a mountain range, Scotland, near Stirling co. Perth extending from N. E. about 34 m. into Fife-shire, average breadth, about 12 m.; highest summit, Ben clench, in the S. W. about 2500 ft. above sea-level. The Ochils are of basalt and gneiss, and contain copper and brass ore.

OCHELTREE a vil. and par. Scotland, co. Arr. 8 m. W. W. OM Camnock with a parish church near the centre of the village, a school and manufactures of acyrls and embroidery of swanin. Area of par., 6 m. by 5 m. Pop. 1787.

OCHEIDA a town and lake European Turkey Albania. The town is situated on the declivity of a hill at the N. extremity of the lake, 40 m. E. by N. El Basen, inhabitants employed chiefly in the neighbouring sulphur and silver mines. P. 2500.—The lake, 18 m. long by 8 m. to 10 m. broad is surrounded by lofty mountains, and gives rise to the Black Drin.

OCHEENDORF or BORTA a vil. Austria, Trarvon, on the frontiers of Wallachia with a Greek church and a trade in timber and fat cattle. Pop. 1555.

OCHESENFURT a town Bavaria, Lower Franconia, l. bank Main here crossed by a bridge, 10 m. S. E. Würzburg, with two churches an hospital, infirmary, school of design, and an old (specimen) monastery, manufactures of woollen cloth, silks, some sherry, and a trade in wine, silk, iron, and cattle. Pop. 2250.

OCHESENHAUSEN, a vil. Württemberg, circle Danneburg, and 8 m. E. E. E. Biberach, with a church, a mineral spring and manufactures of linen. Pop. 1556.

OCHESENWARDER a free in. territory and S. E. Hamburg on a marshy island of the Elbe with a church. P. 2000.

OCHEIA, or OKHEIA, a town Russia, gov. and 1 m. E. St. Petersburg, of which it may be considered a suburb, at the confluence of the Ocheia with the Neva. It has two churches, a large powder-mill a mill for boring cannon, and a salt-petre refinery. Most of the inhabitants are carpenters, employed on the docks at St. Petersburg. Pop. about 8000.

OCKBROCK, a vil. and par. England, co. and 5 m. S. by E. Derby, on the Midland railway and the Derby canal, with a Norman parish church, a Wesleyan and Anglican chapel, several schools, manufactures of bobbin and lace thread and extensive cotton-mills. Adjoining the village is a Moravian settlement. Area of par. 1720 m. Pop. 1768.

OCKENBOND two par. England, Essex.—1, (or Ufford), 1696 m. Pop. 833.—2, (or Ufford), 2007 m. Pop. 1021.

OCKER, or OKER, a river Germany, which rises in the Harz mountains in the N. of princip. Grubenhagen, Hanover, flows N. N. W. past Brunswick and joins the bank Aller, 26 m. above Celle, total course, 75 m.

OCKHAM par. Eng. Surrey; 2240 m. Pop. 449.

OCKLEY par. Eng. Surrey, 6286 m. Pop. 641.

OCKLEER a town Hindostan, prov. Gujarat, 5 m. S. Baruch l. bank Baruch, near its mouth; lat. 21° 41' N., lon. 72° 13' E. Pop. about 8000.

OCKLE-FRIGATE, par. Eng. Norfolk, 1607 m. P. 221.

OCMLUGEE, or GAKKUGEE, a river U. States, rises in the N. of Georgia, about lat. 34° N., flows first S. E. E. past Macon, Hartford, and Jacksonville, then E. N. E., and joins the Oconee in forming the Altamaha; total course, 300 m., navigable for steam-boats to Macon.

OOONEE, a river, U. States, Georgia, rises in the N. of the state, a little S. W. Athens, whence it flows S. E. E., past ing Millageville, and unites with the Ocmulgee in forming the Altamaha length about 180 m.

ODAHRE, or ODAKA, a tn. kingdom of Oda, 80 m. N. Lacknow. Pop. 5000.

ODA WANA, or WODAWANA, a bay, Japan Isl. Niphon, forming the entrance by which the town of Yedo is reached. It is formed by two promontories, and has in lat. 35° 16' N. and lon. 139° 45' E.

ODCOMBE per Eng. Somerset 1776 ad. Pop. 711.
ODDINGHAM, per Eng. Worcester 869 ad. P. 185.

ODDINGTON two parts Eng. — 1, Gloucester, 1660 ad. Pop. 545; — 2, Oxford; 1410 ad. Pop. 126.

ODELL per Eng. Bedford, 1890 ad. Pop. 538.

ODEMIRA a tn. Portugal, prov. Algarve, com. and 16 m. W S W Ovaria, 1 bank Mira, which here becomes navigable. It has a considerable trade in grain. Pop. 2370.

ODENBACH, a vill. Bavaria, Palatinat, circle Lauterbach, with a church, and near it coal mines. P. p. 1113.

ODENHEIM a vil. Baden circle Middle Rhine 21 m. N E Carlsruhe with a church and the ruins of an old castle. Pop. 1924.

ODENKIRCHEN a tn. in Prussia gov. and 16 m. W S W Dinseldorf 1 bank Niers, with a church many features of cotton, linen, and silk goods, a Turkey red dye-works, and a tannery. Pop. 1384.

ODEN, Nels. Danish, Oden-Gy. Oden Island Latin Odenia, a tn. and seaport Denmark cap. of Funen on the N bank of the Oden-Åne near the ford of same name. It is one of the most important provincial towns in the kingdom, the see of a bishop, and the residence of the authorities on the island. It is well built, has a small royal palace a large Gothic cathedral, one of the finest in Denmark founded in 1086 completed in 1301 and the burial place of several of the Danish kings, two other churches a fine old council house or state-hall a large and richly-endowed hospital, an arsenal, and barracks, important manufactures of cloth an extensive iron-foundry and a considerable trade much facilitated by water communication, and several harbours, one near the town, for vessels drawing only 8 to 15 ft. Oden is said to have been founded by Odin a. c. 70. It early received the Reformation and in the 17th century was three ravaged by the plague. Pop. (1841) 11 123. — The ODEN-FJORD F. coast, Isl. Funen has a length of about 9 m., with a breadth varying from 1½ to nearly 5 m. Its entrance is about 1000 yds wide, and 18 ft deep. Within its navigation is much cramped by a projecting point of land and several small islands. The small canal of Oden connects the town with the fjord, but only admits vessels drawing 8 ft.

ODENSHULM, an Isl. Renssela, off the coast of gov. Eschonia, about 45 m. W Renssela. A lighthouse has been erected on its N extremity.

ODENWALD, a range of mountains or rather hills in W Germany forming the N continuation of the Schwarzwald, and extending in a N direction from Heidelberg to Darmstadt. The Konigsstuhl (2540 ft.) is sometimes considered the culminating point of the range, but improper as its position is to the S. E. of Heidelberg, and N. of the Neckar, as well as its geological structure point it out as belonging to the Schwarzwald. The true culminating point is the Katzenbuckel (2090 ft.), N E of Eberbach. The Odenwald is characterized by gentle slopes and rounded forms the tops covered with wood, and the bases well cultivated. The W slopes of the Odenwald are composed of granite and gneiss, the E. slopes are covered with sandstone. The S slope sends its waters to the Neckar the E and N E to the Main, and the W directly to the Rhine.

ODER — 1. A river Germany, which rises in the N of Moravia, F. of Olmitz, flows southerly N W to the confines of Prussian Silesia, past Oderberg, then generally N W through with numerous windings past Ratibor Oppeln, Breslau, Glogau, Frankfurt, and Kattin, to Stettin. At some distance above Stettin it throws off several branches which unite and fall into the Stettiner-Haff at Damms. The main branch is carried N, and extends into the Groesse-Haff, which communicates with the Baltic by three different branches. The whole course of the Oder is about 550 m. of which nearly three-fourths, commencing at Breslau are navigable. Its principal affluents are, on the r, the Mala pisa, Bertholz, and Warta, augmented by the Netze and Vol. 11 on the l, the Oppan, Silesian Netze Weistritz, Katschob, Bober, and Bohemian Netze. A canal between the Netze and the Hraa, at Bromberg connects the basins of the Oder and Vistula. — 2. A river Germany, which rises in the Harz mountains W of the Brocken gov. Hildesheim, flows first S and W, passing Leutenberg and Harsteln, and falls into the Rhume 3 m. W N Linteln; total course, 36 m.

ODESSAU a walled in Austrian Silesia, circs. and 30 m. S Troppau, 1 bank Oder with a church, and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth. Pop. 3860.

ODERBERG a tn. Prussia, gov. and 55 m. Potsdam, on the old Oder with two churches, and some trade in cattle. Pop. 2459.

ODERFLEH, or REEFLEX I DVANIKY (Latin, Arceps) a market in Austria Transylvania, 64 m. N N E Harmanstadt, on the Great Kikol, with three churches a townhouse, college gymnasium seminary and orphan hospital and a trade in tobacco, wax and honey. 1 pop 1999.

ODERFLEH See GAT-ODERFLEH.

ODER/O (anc. Opterygium) a tn. Mexico of Italy gov. and 25 m. N by E Venice, on the Mericanio. It has several district courts and offices a parish church, and numerous oratories a courthous and elementary school. Pop. 5000.

ODESSA a tn. and seaport, Russia, gov. and 90 m. W S W Kherson, 380 m. N Constantinople, on the N shore of the Black Sea, lat. 46° 28' 54" N. lon. 34° 44' 50" E. (a islands on an activity and is well fortified houses generally of two stories well built of soft calcareous stone streets laid-out with great regularity. There are several public squares which are large and well planned, but many of them improved, and consequently after heavy rains dirty, and in dry weather exec. sively dusty. Good water is scarce. Artisan horse have been made to the depth of 600 ft. without success the whole district being, with the exception of a verdant strip along the shore a dreary arid steppe, where springs are almost as rare as in the desert. The principal place of public resort is the Boulevard in the line of which the more important edifices and monuments are placed. Among the last, the first place is due to a bronze statue of the Duke of Richelieu, a French emperor nobly whose merit ultimately made him governor of the town and whose judicious administration is universally acknowledged to have laid the foundation of its commercial prosperity. Near this stands the residence of the governor a large mansion, containing, in addition to public offices, a small but select library, and a museum particularly rich in the antiquities dug up from the site of the numerous colonies which the ancient Greeks planted in this part of the country. The only other buildings

OKANDA, a. in Japan, N.E. coast, Isl Nippon, 50 m. E.N.E. Yeddo.

OKE-LOCK-ORRE, or OKLOCKNEY a river, U States, which rises in the S. of Georgia, flows S.W. into Florida, and after a course of about 180 m. falls into a creek of its own name, forming a branch of Apalachicola Bay.

OKFORD FERRASS, par Eng Durset 2533 sq fop. 642.

OKHAMPTON Eng Devon. See OKHAMPTON.

OKER, a river Germany. See OKER.

OKHAMADEL, or OKHAMSHINE, a dist. India, form ing the S.W. extremity of the peninsula of Gujarat, Guiswar's dominion, lat. 22° to 22° 30' N., lon 69° 10' to 69° 30' E. It is a poor sandy or jungle tract, about 80 m. in length, by 15 m. in breadth bounded, N by the Gulf of Cutch W by the Indian Ocean, and E. by a small river or moosa, and thus nearly insulated. It contains the towns Dwarka, and Bet or Dasa, with about 50 villages. its inhabitants are chiefly Hindoos. A few inferior kinds of grain are raised and some salt is manufactured these articles, with ghee and conch shells, a great many of which are sent into Bengal, constitute the principal exports. Most of the land belongs to the Guiswar to whom the district was transferred in 1816 and by whom it is mainly prized on account of the sanctity of its temples. See DWARAKA. Punt Jagrahi or Okhamadel forms its W termination. Pop. 11 620—(London Geogical Journal, vi. 5).

OKHOLM a vil Denmark, duchy Schleswig Hall and 7 m. N.W. Brudestedt protected by strong embankments from the sea. It has a church and good landing place, though somewhat deficient in shelter outside of the dikes. Pop. 500.

OKHOTSK, a gov E. Siberia, forming a comparatively narrow tract about 1000 m long with a breadth, varying from 80 m. to about 200 m. stretching along the Sea of Okhotsk, which washes it to the E. and partly separates it from the peninsula of Kamtschatka, and bounded on the N and N.E. by the country of the Tchukotka, and on the N.W. and S.W. by gov Yakutsk. Its coast line is indented by several large bays, among which are those of Penzinsk, Gysnak and Tanush and its interior is traversed centrally and nearly throughout its whole length, by the chain of the Stanen mountains, which here form the water-shed between the Pacific and the Arctic Oceans, sending to the former numerous comparatively short and rapid streams, which fall into the Sea of Okhotsk and giving rise to several large rivers—the Onoul, Kolma and Indigirka which flow N into the latter. Notwithstanding the rigour of the climate, there are considerable tracts of healthy pasture and scattered clumps, chiefly of alder and birch frequented by numerous animals valuable for their furs. The coasts are well supplied with fish and are often visited by large shoals of the whale tribe. The only domestic animals are reindeer and dogs. Amber is occasionally found along the shores of the Gulf of Penzinsk. The government is chiefly used as a penal settle ment for the most hardened offenders and the inhabitants consist, for the most part, either of them or of their descendants. Pop. about 700.

OKHOTSK a tn E. Siberia, cap. above gov, on a narrow tongue of land projecting into the Sea of Okhotsk at the mouth of the Okhotsa and Kuchuk. It consists of several irregularly-placed clusters of indifferent log-houses, including a large magazine belonging to the Russo-American Trading Company, a church, several government offices a school of navigation, and an infirmary. The building-yards annually turn out or repair a considerable number of small vessels and the harbour though so shallow as not to admit large vessels, being the best in the Sea of Okhotsk, has a considerable trade. Pop. about 800.

OKHOTSK, or MOSE-OKHOTSKOZ, a sea in the E. of Siberia forming a branch of the North Pacific Ocean, and extending from the Kurile Islands N.W. to the coast of Si beria, about 1000 m., with a breadth between the N.E. coast of Chum and the peninsula of Kamtschatka, of about 550 m. It contains several islands, the largest of which, Sagalie is situated near its S.W. shore, forms a number of large gulfs, chiefly on the N., among others, those of Tanish, Gylginsk, and Penzinsk, and receives numerous rivers, of which, how ever only one, the Anzoi or Sagalie, is of great magnitude. The shores are covered with ice from November to April, but the main expanse continues open throughout the year, and being generally deep, without shoal or sandbank, affords a safe navigation, notwithstanding the fogs and storms with which it is often visited.

OKHOTKA, a river Siberia, which rises in the S.E. slope of the Stanen mountains, flows S.E. and falls into the sea at the town of Okhotsk, total course, 280 m. It is navigable only by small barges, and even by them merely within the influence of the tide, which gives an additional depth of from 6 ft. to 8 ft.

OKHRIDA, a tn Albania. See OKHRIDA.

OKI, an Isl group, N Pacific, belonging to Japan, about 50 m. N Cape Isumino, W coast Nippon. It is composed of four large and several smaller islands, extending about 45 m S.S.W. to N.E. The largest island is penetrated in the S. by a large bay on which is its chief town, called Tomaso.

OKLADNIKOV a lake Russia, gov Archangel, 40 m. E. Mosen, length, E.N.E. to W.N.W. about 80 m. breadth nearly 9 m. It receives several small streams, and discharges itself by the Lokira into the Pech, an affluent of the Mezen.

OKNA a small tn. European Turkey, Moldavia, 1 bank Tatrov on the borders of Trauylvania, 99 m. N.W. Galatz It is well built, and has an extensive salt-mins.

OKNA MARE, a tn Turkey in Europe Walsheia, 9 m S.W. Hainak with five churches, three chapels, and very valuable salt-mines, which are extensive. Pop. 2500.

OKÖRMELZ (Walschtein, Felsen) a vil Hungary, co Marmaros, about 50 m from Balgath with a Greek church, and a saw-mill. l. op 1655.

OKOSIV, a small uninhabited Isl, Japan Sea off the S.W. coast of Yesso lat 42° 4' N lon 139° 24' E (n.)

OKSU a tn Little Bokhara. See AKSU.

OKUKHANE, a vil. Austria, Polovina, on the Helobostina, 1 m. from Podagry. It is the headquarters of a frontier regiment, and has a church, and two mills.

OLAH Bussy trüner, a vil Austria, Trauylvania military dist. Bistrice, about 16 m from Borgo-Frunk. It is the headquarters of a frontier regiment, in which the greater part of the inhabitants are soldiers, and has a handsome church. l. op 1910.

OLAND or OLAND an Isl Sweden, Rts Kalmar, in the Baltic, and separated from the mainland by the Kalmar Sound which, opposite to the town of Kalmar where it is narrowest, does not exceed 3 m broad, but at the N. extremity of the island is 10 m. and at the S. extremity not less than 15 m. broad. The island is long and narrow stretching N. to S. 85 m., with an average breadth of not more than 5 m. and consists throughout of limestone rocks, which, at several spots on a line parallel with the W shore form a range of steep, chalky cliffs, but the island is generally low and between the cliffs and the beach there is a stretch of flat and fertile land though in other parts marsh and mud prevail. There are a few small lakes in the N, but neither there nor elsewhere are there any streams of the least importance. Wood is scarce. The pastures are extensive, and a good many cattle and sheep are reared. The wool of the latter is retained and woven into cloth which forms a considerable article of export. The island contains numerous villages, but scarcely anything which can be called a town. Borgholm which may be regarded as its capital has only a pop. of 481.

OLAND ISLANDS, Baltic Sea. See ÅLAND.

OLASZY, OLASZKUN or WOLASZKUN a market tn. Hungary, Tnthar Thaus, co. Zips with two Protestant churches. Pop. 3400.

OLAU OLAU, or OLAWA a tn. Prussia prov Silesie, gov and 18 m. S.E. Breslau, on the Olse, and on the railway to Gnesau. It is defended by a castle, has two churches, an hospital provincial courts and offices, and manufactures of cloth, tobacco, and paper, tile-works, breweries, and distilleries. Pop. 5999. The river runs in a mountainous district, in the S. of Silesie, near Bernsdorf, flows first N.N.E., past Strichen to Olau, then turns suddenly N.W. and, after a course of nearly 60 m., joins L. bank Oder at Breslau.

OLAVE-ST MARK-GATA, par Eng York (N. Riding); 2120 m. Pop 2970.

OLBA, a tn. Epon, Arago, prov and about 50 m. from Turvet. l. bank Myraia with a church, a primary school, manufactures of linen, paper and a flour mill, and trade in corn, indifferent wine and a little silk. Pop. 1445.

OLBEGA, a vil and som Bpeln, Old Castle, prov and 24 m N. Bera, with a church, courthouse, prison, primary school, manufacture of woollen and linen cloth, several flour-mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1365.

OLBERNHAN a vil Saxony circle Zwitzkau, on the Ploche, 23 m. S.E. Chemnitz, with manufactures of firearms, lace, and cabinet-work. Pop. 2503.

OLCENGO a vil and com Italy Piedmont div Novara, 2 m from San Germano; with an old church, the remains of an ancient castle, and a trade in corn and wine. 11020.

OLCESE (San) a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div Genova near Belpato, on a slope of the Apennines. It is completely obliquo by position, and has a parish church. P. 2329.

OLD or Wold par Eng Northampton, 1650 ac. P. 449.

OLD CALABAR, a river Africa. See CALABAR.

OLD PROVIDENCE, an isl Caribbean Sea, belonging to New Grenada, E. coast, Central America, about 12 m from the nearest part of the Mosquito coast, visible from a distance of 33 m to 36 m. Highest peak 1190 ft. near the centre, lat. 15° 21' N, lon. 81° 31' 30" W. It is nearly 4½ m. long and ½ m. greatest breadth of an irregular oval shape, but both ends and the middle separated by a narrow channel from the small isl of San Catalina. The soil is exceedingly fertile, yielding plentifully all kinds of tropical products, but cotton is the staple, forming the great object of export along with hides and tortoise-shell in exchange for calicoes, cloth, &c., brought from Jamaica. The chief anchorage is on the N. side, at the village of Isabel. Old Providence was long celebrated as a favourite resort of the buccanniers.

OLD BROW, par Eng Worcester, 1180 ac. P. 36.

OLDBURY a town and township England co. Hants. In the heart of an important mining district on the Boreham road 5 m N. W. Hingham. It is irregularly built but has several spacious modern streets, lined with good houses and shops and lighted with gas. A district church in the later English style with a tower. Independent, Baptist, and Wesleyan chapels, an endowed school, a prison, manufactures of chemical products from iron and steel works, and extensive iron and coal mines. Pop. 5114.

OLDBURY two parts Eng. — 1. Salop 806 ac. Pop. 131.

OLDBURY a market town and par Ireland co. Meath. The town, 20½ m N. W. Trim, has a church and a Catholic chapel and school. P. 1508. Area of par, 7903 ac. 1. 4506.

OLDCASTLE par Eng Monmouth 992 ac. Pop. 47.

OLDCONNAUGHT, par Ireld Dublin 19° 8 ac. Pop. 3047.

OLDCONNELL, par Ireld Kildare, 3087 ac. P. 723.

OLDEBOORN, a vil Holland prov Friesland, 12 m S.E.E. Leeuwarden. It is a scattered place, with three churches, a school, some trade in butter, cheese, and cattle, a copper work, iron-work, three building-yards, and several mills. Pop. 1435.

OLDEMARKT, a vil Holland prov Overijssel, 17 m N. W. Hazeend, with two churches and a considerable butter market. Pop. 823.

OLDENBURG, a grand duchy in the N. of Germany, forming the 30th State of the German Confederation bounded N. by the N. Sea or German Ocean, E. Hanover and Bremen, S. and W. Hanover, greatest length N. to S. 61 m. greatest breadth, 44 m. area, 1567 geo. sq. m. This former Oldenburg proper, but, in addition to it, the duchy possesses three separate patches of territory, distinct both from it and from each other, namely two in Holstein forming the principality of Lübeck, with an area of 128 geo. sq. m. and Birkenfeld, in the E. of Rhensia Prussia, with an area of 108 geo. sq. m. thus making the whole area 1823 geo. sq. m. Oldenburg proper is flat throughout, excepting in the S. extremity, where some low hills appear. The principal rivers are the Weser, the Hunte, the Ems, the Juhle, Hase, Emsa, Vahne, and Leda. There are no lakes of great extent. Storms often blow from the sea, and frequent fogs produce a cold, damp air, which occasionally rises even summer of the proper warmth. The surface, in respect to soil, is divided into marshy and sandy land. The former has, in many instances, been removed from the sea, and still is only protected from it by means of dikes similar to those erected in Holland and Holstein. It consists generally of a heavy alluvial soil, capable, when properly laid dry, of yielding heavy crops of wheat, beans, and hay. The sandy land is very light, and of little fertility and not unfrequently is left in a state of nature, forming extensive tracts of barren heath. A considerable part of the sandy districts were once covered with wood. Much of it has disappeared, but there are still several extensive forests. Agriculture employed in raising not only corn but rape, hemp, and flax and including the rearing of horses and cattle is the principal source of subsistence. Manufactures and trade have made comparatively little progress. Oldenburg is governed by a grand duke, whose power theoretically is almost absolute. The inhabitants are generally a patient and industrious race, but habits of intemperance are very prevalent. For administrative purposes, the duchy proper is divided into seven circles. — Oldenburg, the capital; Husenburg, Ostholstein, Helmsdorf, Fochte, Kappenberg, and Lauen. Pop. (1867) 237,690. Pop. Lübeck 1850 32,146. Pop. Birkenfeld (1847) 30,404. OLDENBURG, a town Germany cap. above grand duchy, 24 m W. N. W. Bremen, on the Elbe which here receiving the Havel, forms a harbour. It has a castle, with palace, several churches, college, library of 15,000 volumes, picture-gallery, gymnasium, barracks, normal and military schools, several hospitals, manufacture of refined sugar, and musical instruments, numerous breweries and distilleries, and a trade in wood wool and cattle. Pop. 7329.

OLDENBURG, a town Denmark duchy Holsten, on the Little Belts, 30 m N. E. J. It is a trade once considerable, has greatly fallen off and the inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Pop. 2400.

OLDENBURG, a town (Jesse-Casse) a bank W. near 28 m. R. W. Hanover with manufactures of linen and woollen cloth, sugar, tobacco, and leather, and a trade in linen and cattle. Coal is worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1853.

OLDENBURG, a town Holland prov Overijssel, 33 m N. E. E. Deventer. It has a townhouse two churches, a synagogue, and several schools, wool-combing spinning, and weaving, and manufactures of calicoes, mering, and dyeworks. Pop. 2352.

OLDENBURG, or Omsk, a town Denmark duchy H. J. stein at the confluence of the Elbe with the Trave, 16 m W. N. W. Lübeck with important manufactures of salt, it is situated from Berlin 110 m. a paper mill, and a considerable transit trade with Lübeck and Hamburg. Pop. 4000.

OLDHAM a parl and mun. bor. and market in Eng. land Lancashire on a height near the source of the Irk a little above its junction with the Mersey and on a branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway 6 m N. E. Manchester.

It is of comparatively recent origin and has risen up with wonderful rapidity chiefly in consequence of the valuable coal-mines in its vicinity and the facilities thereby afforded for the export of coal to the north and west of England.

In 1760, it contained only 60 dwellings, almost all merely straw thatched huts, and has since increased so as to become a large and thriving manufacturing town, irregular in its construction but containing many well built and several handsome streets. It contains, however, to be rather poor in public buildings. The more important are the churches of St. Mary a handsome modern structure, in the early English style, with a square tower containing 12 fine-toned bells, and a window of richly stained glass. St. James, a neat edifice, with a tower and compass turret, and St. Peter, not particularly deserving of notice, various chapels belonging to the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist Independents, Moravians, Baptists, Friends, Kilhamites R. Catholics, and Unitarians and the Townhall which is at once handsome and commodious. The chief educational and literary establishments are the Blue-Coat school, occupying an elegant building in the early English style erected by subscription, and liberally endowed by bequests of Thomas Hemmaby, the free grammar-school, the national and infant schools for which commodious buildings have recently been erected, the Lyceum mechanics institute, hall of science, and subscription-library.

The cotton is by far the most important manufacture of the town and employs the greater part of the mills, which, including those of the vicinity amount to about 160, and are all moved by steam. They are, for the most part, only spinning-mills but there are also numerous weaving-factories, producing various velveteens, calicoes, twills, and corduroys.

Hats, which once formed an important staple, are still made to a considerable extent, and there are several large machine shops iron and brass foundries, tanneries, ropewalks, blacksmiths, gunsmiths, &c. Oldham first erected into a borough by the Reform Act, sends two members to Parliament and is governed by a mayor, eight aldermen, and twenty-four councillors. Pop. of town bor 53,880 of parlor, including townships of Chadderton and Oremington and chapelry of Royton 72,837.

OLDHAMSTOCKS, par Scot. Hadding 6 by 3 m P 693
OLDHAMSTOCKS, a vil. Base-Waters curle and N N W. Wimer on the Unstrut with an old monastery manufactory of best root sugar salt-petre-works, tile works, and iron-kilns an oil and flour mills and a trade in cattle. P 1390
OLDHAMSTOCKS, par Iral. Carlow 9920 ac P 2511
OLDNEY an isl about 1 m long W coast Scotland on Sutherland at the S side of Loch Ayr 2 1/2 m from the mainland.

OLDBOES par Iral. Wexford 10,553 ac P 2138.
OLEGGIO a tn, div and 10 m. N Novara, with a court of justice, and several public offices two parish churches, a college, a seminary, several public schools, an hospital, and ancient half-tower manufactures of cotton and flannel goods, several cotton and silk mills, and a trade in corn, wine, and timber Pop. 420.

OLEIRO a tn and seaport, Spain. See CUBITRAC
OLEIRO, a tn and par Portugal prov Beira-Alta, near Castelo Branco. Pop. 1060

OLEMA a river Asia which rises near the N W extremity of the Jaloon Mountains on the frontiers of China, flows N into Kienan, goes N 300 yds. to the N and runs 400 m. above a bank Lena, a little below the town of Olenokan chief affluents, the Tungurka, Ikimda, and Ussun the Tugur Nizhni and Tschura

OLENKA, a tn Siberia, gov and 30 m W S W Yakutsk 1 bank Lena, founded in 1783. Pop. 1059

OLENEK a river Siberia, gov Yakutsk. It rises near lat 64 N and lon 117 E. flows circumstantially N and after a course of about 800 m. falls into the Arctic Ocean to the W of the mouth of the Lena OLERON (Garonne) river France formed by the junction of the Garonne of Ouzon Arge which descending from the N slope of the Pyrenees desc. Isasse-Pyrenees meet at the town of Oléron The united stream, flowing N W, joins 1 bank Pau on the frontiers of dep. Landes total course 45 m.

OLFRON [Latin Oleron] an island, dep. Cherbourg Inferieur, 1 m from the mainland, and separated by the Pertuis d'Antioche, from lat 46 on the N, greatest length N W to S E, 18 m greatest breadth, 7 m The W side is very much exposed, and has a wild and somewhat flow into appearance. But with this exception, the greater part of the surface is fertile and yields oats, rye, barley, beans, maize, red and white wine, and excellent vegetables There are also some extensive marshes, from which a good deal of salt is made. The island is divided into two cantons and contains the two towns of Chateau and St. Pierre d'Oleron The former risks as a fortress of the third class being defended by a strong castle, and otherwise fortified A good number of vessels are built here distilleries also, are numerous and there is a considerable trade in corn, salt, wine, and brandy The laws of Oléron, forming a kind of maritime code, which is said to have been drawn up in the 13th century long enjoyed great authority, and were used in guiding the decisions of other countries as well as France. 1 cop. 16,060.

OLESA DE MONTENAR a tn Spain Catalonia, prov and 22 m N W Barcelona, with two squares a church a primary school and an hospital manufactures of haxe, blankets, &c. a flour and 11 oil mills. Pop 2766

OLIGKO a tn Austria, Galicia, circle and 11 m N Zloczow on an arm of the Rys It has two churches, and a castle, and is the birth-place of King John Sobieski. P 1250

OLITTE, a tn and com. France, dep. Pyrénées-Orientales, in a gorge 1 bank Tet, with thermal springs, temperature 120° F., the high occasionally much lower, often come in paralysis, rheumatism, &c. Pop. 1209

OLITZKO or MANDENKOWA, a tn Prussia, prov E Prussia, gov and 40 m S.E.E. Gumbinnen with a castle, church, toll-house, infirmary, educational establishment, and an extensive market-place. Pop 7922.

OF EVANO, three places, Italy:—1 A tn. Papal States, 28 m E. Benevent. It is situated a town of the Middle Ages and contains an old baronial castle, built by the Colonna, on a massive rock of limestone, and among other churches, a very handsome one dedicated to St. Margaret. Pop. 3000
—2 A tn Naples, prov Principato Citra, dist and E. Salerno. Pop 3100—3 A vil and com. Piedmont, dist Novara prov Lomellina, 1 bank Agogna, about 8 m N. Mariara, with a church a modern castle, and a trade in silk, rye, and rice Pop. 1160

OLFEN a tn Rhensish Prussia, gov and 20 m S.W. Münster with a church, manufactures of linen, and wooden clogs, a gristmill, and dye-works Pop. 1800

OLGIATE, several places, Italy Lombardy:—1 A vil and com. prov and 6 m W.S.W. Como with a church Pop. 1871—2 (Olgiate) A vil and com. prov and 18 m N.W. Milan with a church, a magnificent manseum erected to Count Groppe and two cotton mills. Pop. 1423

OLGINATI a tn and com Italy Lombardy prov and 16 m E Como near r. bank Adia, where the channel expands into a lake, which takes the name of Olgiate. It has two churches Pop. 1430

OLHEO a tn and par Portugal on the sea-coast, 4 m E. Faro with an annual fair of three days. P 5900

OLIHARIS, an ul. Greece, Archipelago. See ASTIFANOS
OLIEVA a vil Isl. Sardinia, div Cagliari prov and 4 m. S.E. Nuoro with a church and school manufactures of woollen and linen cloth linoleum, brick and tile works, and a trade in corn, cattle and wine. Pop. 8075.

OLIFIL, a tn. Spain, Aragón, prov Teruel 55 m S Saragossa, well built, with three squares, regular, spacious, paved, and clean streets, a church, townhouse, prison two schools and a trade in corn, wine and silk. Pop. 1732

OLIFANTIA, or ELEPHANT'S RIVER, Cape Colony S Africa. —1 Dist George, formed by the junction of several head streams, which unite at lat 33 S. S. lon 28 28' E whence the river flows W by S to lon 31 43 E, where it suddenly proceeds due S, and falls into the Indian Ocean under the name of the Gaurits, about 20 m S.W. from Mossel Bay For a considerable part of its course, it forms the boundary line between the district of George and Beaufort West, its whole length is probably about 141 m.—2 Dist Clan William has its source in a mountainous region in the district of Worcester about lat 32 50 S; lon 19° E. from which it flows N by W to about lat 31 29' N, where, after various windings which include some directly opposite courses it proceeds due S. to lat 31 41 E. where it falls into the Atlantic. It is joined in its progress, by two large affluents, called, respectively the Great Doorn, and Karre Doorn, length, about 176 m OLINDA, a city, Brazil prov Pernambuco, 3 m N Recife, formerly with that city what is generally called Pernambuco, on the Atlantic lat 8 S lon 34 50 W on mats generally of good houses, having paved, though not very regular streets but has not a thriving appearance. Many of the fine houses are untenanted and falling to decay and several of the streets are grown over with weeds and grass. It has a cathedral, the church of São Salvador, episcopal palace, a townhouse, ecclesiastical secondary, school of law, several superior and many primary schools, an hospital of mercy a convent and four monasteries; a public library and a botanical garden. The trade is chiefly in cotton, sugar and rice A lake, close to the town, abounds with alligators. P 8000.

OLITE [anc. Olipont], a tn Spain, prov Navarra, 27 m S. Pamplona, 7 bank Eildaco, with two squares, a courthouse, school, two churches, the one remarkable for a very high Gothic tower, two convents, a flour-mill, and five oil-presses. Pop. 1993

OLIVA, two places, Spain:—1 A tn Valencia, prov and 47 m N.E. Alicante. It contains a palace of the Duke of Gandia, an hospital, two schools, two parish churches, a monastery of Franciscan nuns, a lavatory, two hermitages, and a conventory Agriculture employs many of the inhabitants, and a yearly fair is held Pop. 6615.—2, (de Juvet) A tn Melitana, prov and 27 m S. Badajoz. The houses are wretchedly built, but it has extensive and regular squares, though badly paved, a courthouse, prison, four schools, a church, and considerable manufactures of linen and woollen cloths, and 20 flour-mills. Pop. 8410.

OLIVA.—1. A tr. in the N of Isl Fonteventura, one of the Canaries, at the foot of a mountain of same name. It has a church with a tower, two schools, manufactures of ordinary woollen and linen cloth, and a trade in corn, fruit, and some cochineal. Pop. 3132.—2. A tr. in France, gov. and 6 m N W Darnay, 7 m. from the Baltic, with a palace, and an old Outersburg abbey with a handsome church. Near it are a paper-mill and steel, iron, and copper works. Pop. 1500.

OLIVARES, a vil. Spain. Andalusia, prov. and 8 m. E Seville. It has well-paved and clean streets, a courthouse, two churches, four schools, and several oil mills and rope-works. Pop. 2066.

OLIVARES, a tr. Spain, New Castle, prov. and 20 m. S. S. W. Caceres. It has a church and a school four-mills, and a trade in corn, fruit, wine, and saffron. Pop. 1192.

OLIVEIRA, several places, Portugal particularly.—1. (d'Almeida), A tr. and par, prov. Douro, l. bank Antm, 24 m. S. Oporto. Pop. 2000.—2. (do Barro) A tr. and par, prov. Douro, 12 m. S. E. Avaro. Pop. 1602.—3. (de Cande) A tr. and par, prov. Beira-Alta, 19 m. S. S. W. Viana. Pop. 2000.—4. (de Hospites) A tr. and par, prov. Beira-Alta, about 90 m. from Coimbra. Pop. 1200.

OLIVEIRA, a tr. Brazil, prov. Minas Geraes, traversed by a stream of same name from the sands of which gold is washed, 40 m. S. Tamaoinda, with a church built of marble obtained in the district; inhabitants employed in cultivation rearing cattle, and mining. Pop. in 1600 dist., 4000.

OLIVH(A), a tr. Brazil prov. Bahia, near the sea, 12 m. S. São Jorge, with a handsome stone church and a primary school; inhabitants, Indians engaged in making articles of ivory. Pop. dist. 1600.

OLIVENZA, a tr. Spain Extremadura, prov. and 15 m. S. Badajoz, l. bank Guadiana. It is protected by a strong wall, in the form of a polygon with nine sides, and is entered by three gates. The town is laid-out into squares and streets of moderate breadth, and has a townhouse, prison, two barracks for infantry, one for cavalry and another for artillery, a military hospital, hospital for indigent persons and foundlings, two schools, an ex-convent, two hermitages and two parish churches—that of St. Mary Magdalene is a sumptuous temple, with a magnificent portico of white marble. Ex. pressing oil, grinding, weaving and making earthenware are carried on. Pop. 3291.

OLIVET, a vil. France, dep. Loiret, 3 m. S. Orleans near the source of the Loiret, with manufactures of cotton fabrics and woollery and an active trade in wine. Pop. 1178.

OLIVETO, two trs. Naples.—1. A tr. prov. Basilicata dist. and 35 m. W. S. W. Matera. Pop. 1111.—2. A tr. Principato-Cerra, dist. and 6 m. E. E. Campagna, with an annual fair of five days. Pop. 4870.

OLIVHANT, a vil. Shilly prov. and 27 m. W. S. W. Measna, N. coast, r. bank Elbowna, with a castle, and a tannery fishery. A little N. W. are the ruins of ancient Tyndaria.

OLIVOPOL, a tr. Russia, gov. and 133 m. N. W. Kherason, on a hill near the confluence of the Smukla and Bug. It is defended by a fortress. Pop. (1842) 8300.

OLKANSKAIA, a fort, Russia, gov. Orenburg circle and 9 m. W. Buzuluk, on the Olkanak. It forms part of the military line of Samara, and consists of several well formed and regularly-built bastions, and is garrisoned partly by regular troops, and partly by Cossacks.

OLKANZ, a tr. Austria, Poland, 23 m. N. W. W. Crows, formerly a large and wealthy place, which furnished a considerable revenue to the kings of Poland, from its lead and silver mines. Pop. 1200.

OLKHON, an Isl. Siberia, gov. Irkutsk, W. shore, Lake Baikal, the largest in the lake, length, 50 m. breadth, nearly 13 m. and not 1 m. from the coast. The shores are generally steep, and the interior consists chiefly of an elevated plateau. The soil is, for the most part, stony or sandy, but considerable portions are covered by forests of pine and birch; and others have good pastures, on which the inhabitants, Bouriats, feed numbers of cattle. Game is abundant, and the fisheries in the lake very productive.

OLLALLA (Barra) two places, Spain.—1. A tr. Andalusia, prov. Huelva, 36 m. S. Seville with a church a prison, and an hospital several four-mills, and a trade in corn and wheat. Pop. 1081.—2. A tr. New Castle, prov. and W. N. W. Toledo, poorly built, with a church prison hospital primary school, manufactures of sorbs and several oil and flour mills. Pop. 1039.

OLLERIA, a tr., prov. and 88 m. S. Valencia, with a townhouse, prison, two endowed schools, a church, and some trade in horses and oxen bought in Catalonia, Gallie, and Andalusia. Pop. 3584.

OLLERTON, a market tr. and chapelry England, on and 18 m. N. E. Nottingham, in the forest of Sherwood. It has a modern chapel-of ease, and a Wesleyan chapel, a weekly market and an annual cattle fair. Pop. 777.

OLLIGNIES a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainant, on the Dender 17 m. N. W. Mons with manufactures of linen a brewery a distillery two four-mills, and a trade in corn and wool. Pop. 1491.

OLLOULES (area. Olole) a tr. France, dep. Var, 4 m. N. W. Toulon at the mouth of a wild and barren gorge called the Pass of Olloules well built, with a manufactory of glass, and an active trade in franks and olive-oil. P. 1930.

OLLON a vil. and par. Switzerland can. Valais, cap. circle, 2 m. S. E. Aigle, on a height overlooking a large and fruitful plain which slopes to the Rhone. It has a church chief employment, rearing of cattle. Pop. 2692.

OLMILLO a tr. Spain, Leon, prov. and 25 m. S. Val Isoldo, once surrounded with strong walls of which there are some remains. It has a townhouse, a prison, two hospitals a theatre, and six churches, several of which are fine old edifices manufactures of earthenware, wax candles, and brandy Pop. (agricultural) 2024.

(MEM), a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 83 m. E. by 5 Antwerp on the Great Yssel. It has manufactures of common woollens a dye-works a brewery a distillery, two four-mills and a trade in butter. Pop. 1858.

OLMPTO a tr. France, al. Comore 12 m. N. W. Sartene well built, clean, thriving. It has a neat church, and a chapel. Near it are the ferocious thermal baths of Lormet, temperature, 86° Fahr. 1 ep 2010.

OLMUTZ, or Olm. see ALMUTZ.

OLMUTZ (Moravian Helms) Latin Olmucensis or Abuswe) a city Austria, formerly cap. of Moravia, 103 m. N. N. E. Vienna with which it is connected by railway on the March which forms almost a complete circle round it. It is extensively and strongly fortified and rises gradually on all sides towards its centre. It was built, has a cathedral a fine Gothic building erected by King Wenzel III., who was murdered here in 1406, and is buried within the church the old arch of St. Maurice with the largest organ in Moravia, the church of St. Michael, surrounded by a handsome copula a townhouse with a lofty tower a university possessing a fine library of 50,000 vols. bishop's palace, arsenal barracks manufactures chiefly of linen and woollen cloth, ironmongery and articles in iron wire and a very important trade. Olmütz is the see of an archbishop, and the seat of several courts of law and public offices and possesses in addition to the university already mentioned, a diocesan seminary gymnasium academy high school Capuchin and Ursuline monasteries, an hospital and poorhouse. It is one of the strongest fortresses in the Austrian dominions, but was taken by the Swedes in the Thirty Years war. Frederick the Great besieged it for seven weeks with success. Lefort's was conducted here in 1794. Pop. 25,512.—The climate is watered by the March, Javara, Betschowa, Hanna Oslewa, and Fitrits. Towards the N. and W. it is traversed by hills of considerable elevation, particularly by the Beskides and Schneeburg, but in other directions is level, and fertile in grain, hemp, and flax. The mountainous districts are rich in iron which is extensively worked. Area, 152 sq. m. Pop. 366,000.

OLNE, a tr. and com. Belgium prov. and 8 m. S. E. S. E. Lige, on the Vesdre. It has a church a chapel, primary school and workshops for furnishing firearms. A good many of the inhabitants are millers. Pop. 8164.

OLNEY or OLNHY a market tr. and par. England, co. and 19 m. N. E. Buckingham l. bank Ouse, here crossed by a handsome stone bridge. It is generally built of stone; and has a large, ancient church in the English style, with a handsome tower and spire, places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and the Society of Friends, national and Lancasterian schools, and a set of almshouses. The making of bone-ivory forms the principal business of the town. Area of par., 3140 ac. Pop. 1859.

OLONA a river Italy Lombardy rises N of Varese, prov Como, flows S.E., passing Varese and Milan at the latter divides into two branches, the one of which joins L. Inno Lambro, at St. Angelo, while the other joins L. Inno Po, at St. Zenone, about 12 m. S.E. Pavia total course, about 60 m.

OLONTZ, a gov Russia lat. 50° to 54° 30' N., lon. 30° to 43° 30' E., bounded N and E by Archangel, S.E., Volenga, S., Novgorod, S.W., St. Petersburg and Lado and W. Finland greatest length, N.W. to S.E. 370 m., breadth, 250 m., area, 60,594 sq. m. The surface of this government is generally flat; but in the N.W. some hills of moderate elevation occur and take the name of the mountains of Olontz, while part of the N. is traversed by the dorsal ridge which forms the water-shed between the basins of the Baltic and the Volga. The nucleus of these hills is granite, overlain by conglomerate and clay-slate.

The drainage of the government is shared, in unequal proportions, between the Baltic, White Sea, and Volga; the first, through the medium of Lake Onega, receives the largest share, and the second, chiefly by the Onega, receives the next largest, the share received by the Volga is confined to a small portion of the S. The most marked natural feature of the government is the immense number of its lakes, streams, and morasses. The number of lakes—one of them Onega, of the first magnitude—has been calculated to amount to 7500 and that of the rivers, great and small, to 800. The climate is rigorous in the extreme. The winter is long and so severe, that gelidities occasionally freeze, and the summer heat, though of short duration, is very great. Timber constitutes almost the whole wealth of the government, the lakes and rivers are in general well supplied with fish porphyry and marble are extensively quarried between Lakes Ladoga and Onega iron-ores are worked to such an extent as to supply ten blast-furnaces; copper is also partially worked, and hemp and flax thrive in many of the swampy districts where corn would fail, and may be regarded as, after timber the most valuable vegetable products of the government. Trade and manufactures have made little progress, and the want of home employment is so generally felt, that great numbers of the inhabitants, amounting in some numbers to nearly a third of the whole, emigrate temporarily into the adjoining governments. Education is under the superintendence of the university of St. Petersburg but the very little progress which it has made may be estimated from the fact, that the government possesses only one printing-press, which is in the hands of the state, and nothing that deserves the name of a bookseller's shop. Olontz is divided into seven districts. One military governor presides over both Olontz and Archangel. The capital of the government is Petrosavodsk. Pop. (1850), 165,000.

OLONTZ, a tn Russia, above gov E. shore, Lake Ladoga, where it receives the Olontz 125 m N.E. St. Petersburg. It has eight churches four chapels, and a prison, a great number of saw-mills on the Olontz, and a considerable trade in furskins. The first building-dock in the Russian empire was established here by Peter the Great, and some vessels are still built at it. Pop. (1849) 1061.

OLUPE (Lad. Ljov) a tn France, dep. Basses-Pyrenees, on the mid. and summit of a hill near the Garonne, here crossed by a lofty stone bridge, communicating with the large suburb or separate town of St. Marie. It has a church, a seminary; manufactures of checked handkerchiefs, much worn as a head-dress by the peasantry of Aragon and Gascony; woollen bonnets, and a trade chiefly in Spanish wool, Bayonne lams, and other salt provisions, cattle and harness. Olontz is also a general depot for the metals and other marine timber out on the Pyrenees. P. 5460.

OLUT, a tn Spain, Catalonia, prov Gerona 85 m. N. Barcelona, 1 hour. P. 1716, at the foot of the volcanic hill Montsepe, which, with six others, likewise volcanic, form nearly a small circle, in the S. part of which the town is built. It has regular, but narrow and ill-paved streets, lined with ill built houses; two large squares, schools for primary education, Latin, drawing, &c. two dilapidated prisons, an hospital for indigent paupers, public baths, barracks, a large handsome parish church, with several other churches and chapels, a cabinet of natural history, a pretty theatre, and a small school for deaf-mutes. Besides the natural volcanoes, Olut presents a very singular phenomenon in its landscape, a name given to certain apertures beneath the houses, situated at the base of Mount Mont, from which issue subterranean gusts of wind. They blow with greatest violence in hot weather and are then so cold, that they make the thermometer fall from 89° or 94° (the maximum summer heat at Olut) down to 53° Fahr. In winter the reverse is the case for during the hottest frosts, the thermometer rises to 55° when placed in these subterranean funnels. They are termed to account, in summer for preserving meats and for cooling drinks. Coarse woollens and cottons, linen, paper, leather, ribbons, and dyes, are made. Olut was destroyed in 1427 by an earthquake, but was soon rebuilt. Pop. 2199.

OL Pto., a tn Rhensia Prussia, gov and 30 m. S.S.W. Arnberg on the Elbe, emp. circle with three S. Catholic churches, a townhouse, copper and iron smelting-furnaces, and a trade in ironware. Pop. 1936.

OLRICK, par Seat. Catholism; 4 m. by 3 m. P. 1972. OLSA a river Austria, which rises in the Juhkiska mountains, on the N.E. extremity of Moravia, flows N.W. through Austrian Silesia, passing the towns of Teschen and Freystadt, and joins r. bank Oder after a course of about 60 m.

OLSTENE, a vil and com. Belgium prov E. Flanders, 18 m. S. Ghent, r. bank Lys, near the railway and canal from Ghent to Courtray. It has three distilleries, two breweries, several corn and oil mills, and a tobacco-factory; but weaving and husbandry are the chief employments. Pop. 2189.

OLSHANA, or OLSHANA, a market tn. Russia, gov and 15 m. W. Kharkov with well-frequented fairs. P. 2000. OLSHANSK, a vil Silesia, gov and about 90 m. N.N.E. Krakow, on the road to Yarkutsk and on an elevated and humid tract, forming part of the water-shed between the Angara and the Lena, to both of which it sends its waters.

OLST a vil Holland, prov Overbeel 6 m. N. Deventer with two churches, and a school, and some trade in bacon. Pop. 821.

OLSTYNEK a tn Prussia. See HONNENSTEIN.

OLTEN (Latin, Oltena), a tn Switzerland can and 30 m. E.N.E. Solera, emp. dist. at the confluence of the Duner with the Aar, which is here crossed by a bridge. It is well built; has a handsome church, a Capuchin convent, and two educational establishments; manufactures of worsted and cotton hosiery and leather and a trade in wine, paper groceries, and cloth. Pop. 1600.

OLT1 a tn Asiatic Turkey emp of the Deuk country pass, and 70 m. N.E. Erzerum, beautifully situated among gardens, on the banks of the Olt, here crossed by a stone bridge. It is a very ancient, but decayed place, defended by a citadel partly surrounded by a dilapidated wall, and once the residence of the sultans who ruled the country. Numerous ruins attest its former magnificence. 1 op. about 1500.

OLUTORKOI or OLUTORKA, a cape and gulf, Behring Sea, E. coast Kamtschatka. The cape, lat. 59° 56' N., lon. 170° 28' E., rises with a steep ascent, and is rendered conspicuous by a mountain with three summits, the loftest 2537 ft. high. The gulf, W.N.W. of the cape, has lefty shores, lined with precipitous cliffs.

OLVERA (see Hippa) a tn Spain, Andalucia, prov and 53 m. N.E. Lada, on a lofty hill, enclosed by a wall, one of which is crowned by an old castle. It is indifferently built, consisting of houses of poor appearance, arranged in steep but spacious and well paved streets; and has a handsome parish church, adorned with marble sculptures; two primary schools, a large conchoidal and prison, manufactures of earthenware, several fairs and oil mills, and a trade in agricultural produce and cattle. Pop. 8000.

OLYKA a tn Russia, gov Volhynia, about 100 m. N.W. Jitomir with a collegiate church, and a seminary. It was almost destroyed by fire in 1702. Pop. 5600. OLYMPUS (Myros) a celebrated mountain, European Turkey, prov Thakia, about 10 m. from W. shore Gulf of Saloniki and 35 m. N. Larina. It rises with two peaks called St. Stephen and St. Elias, to the height of 9754 ft. above sea-level, lat. 40° 5' N., lon. 23° 21' E. The ridges forming its S. base are separated from Mount Ossa by the famous Vale of Tempe, a deep gorge through which the R. Heberia has forced its way to the sea.

OLZAI, a vil, lat. 50° 22' N., lon. 22° 55' E. with a church, school, manufactures of woolen cloth, and a trade in corn, flour, and dairy produce. Pop. 1960.

OM, a river, Rihbati, which rises in the N of gov Tomak, traverses the steppe of Barba, passes the town of Kamak, and at Ogak joins R bank Irda, after a W S W course of about 380 m. Its principal affluents, which it receives on the right, are the Ugakia, Isha, Kama, and Tartas.

OMAGH, a market in Ireland, co. Lyrone 37 m. E Londonderry on a steep acclivity, has tolerably well kept streets, lighted with gas, houses generally of stone, and much improved in late years; a handsome county courthouse, county jail, barracks, and poorhouse; a church, a Methodist and two Presbyterian meeting-houses, and R. Catholic chapel and numerous schools. About a mile from the town there is a large lunatic asylum of recent erection, intended for the incurable lunatics of the N counties. Pop 3018.

OMAN, a principality, Arabia, between the most E. angle of the peninsula and the entrance of the Persian Gulf and bounded on three sides by the sea. Ras-el-Had, the most E. point on the coast of Arabia lat 23° 23' N. lon 63° E. is generally regarded as the S. commencement of Oman, but in the interior at least, the limits of the country go as far S. as lat. 24° N. From Ras-el Had the coast runs, with an inclination W, in a general direction N W. for about 100 geo. m. to Muscat thence it sweeps again in a similar curve, for about 350 m. to Ras Musandam lat 26° 27' N., at the mouth of the Persian Gulf. From this point, the Frate-coast as it is named on the maps, runs S. for 150 m. but it is not properly included in Oman, the sea-coast of which, 550 m. in extent lies wholly on the Indian Ocean. About half way between Ras-el Had and Muscat, a chain of mountains runs for nearly 100 m. E. to W, then winds N W and N following the curve of the coast, from which it is generally 25 m. to 40 m. distant. The most S. and elevated portion of this chain bears the name of Jebel Akhdar or the Green Mountains.

The principality of Oman comprises the provinces of Dhorrak, Oman, Jafan and Bata, or Bata. S. of Muscat the hills appear on the shore, which they border with hospitable cliffs of bare rock, but at some distance in the interior, S. W. of Ras-el-Had, and behind the hills, lies a fertile tract, which forms the province of Jafan. N W of this, round the Jebel Akhdar, and embracing Muscat on the sea-coast, is Oman, properly so called. A few miles N of Muscat, the barren hills recede from the coast, and leave a narrow low tract, watered by periodical torrents, which convert it into a garden and date-grave. This is the province of Bata [narrow valley]. On the opposite or E. W. side of the mountains a similar chain of peaks in the hollows which receive the torrents, forms the province of Dhorrak. The provinces of Dhorrak, Oman, and Jafan, are bounded towards the interior by sandy deserts, wandered over by tribes of Bedouins, who keep the adjacent cultivated districts in perpetual alarm.

Limestone appears to be the prevailing rock in the Jebel Akhdar and S. hills of Oman. Near Muscat, the cliffs are formed of serpentine or of clay-slate. At the N. extremity of the peninsula, round Ras Musandam, the rocks are all of volcanic origin, steep walls of basalt or trachyte enclosing the numerous deep lakes. The hills on mountains near the coast, sometimes attaining a height of 9000 ft. are uniformly barren and sterile, and it is only round the Jebel Akhdar which is supposed to have an elevation of 6000 ft. that soil has been collected, and cultivation spreads over a considerable expanse. At Kothra, on the S. side of this mountain, are copper-mines, of little value in their present state.

It is said that the Jebel Akhdar is covered with snow in winter, it is more certain, however, that while in the low tracts of Oman men fill only four or five times in a month, from October till March it is abundant on the elevated ridges, whence torrents descend to the plains below, and give to all the slopes the verdure from which the mountains take their name. The climate of the plains is intensely hot; and the cultivated fruits—the banana, mango, sugar cane, &c. are those of India. But in the higher valleys of these mountains grow the apricot fig and grapes. A great quantity of wine, resembling that of Rhodus, is made in this district.

The maritime provinces of Bata are crossed by numerous periodical streams, and two said to be constant, which spread out in irrigation, have rendered that tract a cultivated garden. In the interior, the rivers sink in the thirsty earth, and disappear, but they are not thereby wholly lost. Provision for irrigation in the interior of Oman is made, on a system characteristic of this part of Arabia, and introduced probably from Persia. The water is collected, and led through the cultivated tracts in tunnels or subterranean canals, called fahs. These canals extend often for miles and countering the general low state of industry in the country wherein they are found, they must be regarded as very remarkable works. Abundantly watered by means of these canals, the fields and plantations exhibit a rare luxuriance, and all the fruits and grains of Persia and India, as well as of Arabia, are found in perfection. The inhabitants, in order that they may enjoy the light and air above the dense foliage of the tall trees, build their houses very high, and their watch towers also, well built of stone, often rise to a height of 150 ft. In Muscat are two towers 170 ft. high.

Besides Muscat, the capital of the country and Suhr (which are) there are no towns in Oman, respecting which we are enabled to offer any estimate of population. Rustak, on the N. slope of the Jebel Akhdar, and formerly the Sultan's residence, is said to be a large and well built town. Nizawah on the S. side of the same mountain, stands in the midst of the most populous and most productive country. Muscat a little way to the S, is nearly as large as Nizawah, Sdr on the sea coast (lat. 22° 37'), is but a collection of huts, made with the leaves of the date-palm but its inland tents, nevertheless, own about 200 barges or coasting vessels, and carry on a brisk trade. Further N, on the coast, are many smaller villages, apparently very poor, yet possessing in trade and industry abundant resources. It is so plentiful as to be used for manure, the cattle are fed on it in the dried state. Dates and other fruits, are exported to India, where the reputation of the fruits of Oman hasures them a good price, and cheaper kinds are imported in return. Cotton is cultivated and manufactured for home use, the sugar-cane is cultivated to some extent, and attempts have been made to instruct the people in the art of manufacturing sugar.

The inhabitants of Oman may be distinguished into three classes—Bedouins, Caballe or clans, cultivating the soil and merchants on the coast. The latter class includes many strangers, particularly Jews and Banians, and indeed the antiquity of the intercourse between this country and India, might be inferred from the circumstance that Hindustani is commonly understood by the inhabitants of the coast. The several tribes are ruled by their own chieftains, who do not acknowledge the paramount rights, however they may respect the power of the Sultan of Muscat. (Mubahr, Wells and Travels, Another Eloy Voyages dans l'Orient.)

OMANDAL, one of the Navigators' Isles. See JARNA OMBAY an ill. Indian Archipelago, Flores Sea, N W lat 10° Timor from which it is separated by Ombay Passag about 18 m wide one of the best routes from Papeete to China, lat. (N W and) 8° 5' S lon 124° 27' E. It is about 50 m. in length, E. by N., and W. by E., consists of high land, particularly at the E. part; its coasts all around appear bold and safe to approach. It is populous; but the race by which it is inhabited are said to be fierce and treacherous. They are reported to be cannibals, and when on predatory expeditions attire themselves in pieces of buffalo hide, and adorn themselves with pig teeth shells, and goats tails. Their arms are bows and arrows, and they carry their food in bags formed of leaves. Fish, coconuts, rice, honey, and fruits, constitute their chief food. The island produces much sugar. Some traffic is carried on with Timor exchanging birds nests and provisions, for iron-work Chinese wares, and linens.

WARRIORS OF OMBAY — From Freytag, Voyage aux Indes.

OMBERGSHEDEN a vil Sweden, Uta. Carlsbad, in the Fyrisdal, on the W side of a lake only deserving of notice on account of the fair annually held at it for eight days, which is one of the largest in Sweden, and attracts from 15,000 to 18,000 persons.

OMBERLEY a vil, and par co. and 6 m N Worcester on the Severn here crossed by a bridge, consisting of a granite span arch, with stone piers. It has a modern and very elegant parish church, an Independent chapel, and an endowed school. Area of par 594^{sq} ac Pop. 2364.

OMBGA a tu in kind of India Piedmont, N N W Nevada, on Lake Oria, with an ancient church an hospital and a trade in wood and charcoal Pop. 1460

OMEKON a river, Siberia, which rises in gov Yakutsk in the W slope of the Stananov mountains, flows N W, and joins r bank Indigirka, after a course of nearly 100 m

OMER (Br) [Latin Aedemorphos], a tu, France dep Pas de Calais, in a marshy tract, on the S.E. which is not navigable, and at the mouth of the canal of Boulogne, 37 m S.E. Calais. It ranks as a fortress, being surrounded by ramparts, and defended by several out-works but its most important defenses are its marshes and the extent to which they can be laid under water. It is a dull place, though its streets are spacious. It contains a great number of well built houses and has a spacious market-place or Place d'Armes a fine cathedral showing the transition from the round to the pointed style, the ancient church of the Jesuits, whose convent is now occupied by the college, the abbey church of St. Bertin, at one time the noblest Gothic monument of French Flanders, and, though greatly dilapidated in 1794, only made the miserable ruin it now is by the barbarism of the town magistrates in 1831 public library barracks, and several well-endowed hospitals a court of first resort and commerce, a consulting chamber of manufactures, a communal college, a secondary ecclesiastical school, and an agricultural society manufactures of woollen cloth woollen covers thread, starch oil glass earthen pipes, fishing-nets, salt, leather, paper beer and brandy and an important trade in wool, corn, wine, oil flax, coal, &c. A summary bureau for the education of English and Irish L. Carbone, had at one time secured considerable celebrity several of the conspirators in the Gunpowder Plot having been pupils in it Daniel O'Connell also attended it, when being educated for a priest. P 18,424

OMERKUTE, a tu and fort, beside See AMERKOTE.

OMERKUTL of AMARA CATACTA a celebrated place of pilgrimage, Hindostan, prov Gundwana, 28 m N W Mutapur in a wild, thinly inhabited country rarely visited except by Hindoo pilgrims to whom its site, at the source of the Bona and the Verdunda, is the chief attraction.

OMETPEE Ometere or Ometere, an isl Central America, W side Lake Nicaragua, about 3 m long N W to S.E. with a maximum breadth of nearly 3 m, connected to the S.E. with the island of Madara, by a narrow neck of land which, in a strong breeze from the N.E., is frequently overflowed. Its most characteristic feature is a lofty mountain 5100 ft. high, and discharging at a great distance by muzzles on the Pacific. It presents the form of an almost perfect cone, and is said to have a deep crater on its summit. It is inhabited by an indigenous race of Indians, who raise maize, and possess some cattle, and has a small town called Moyagala, with a church and miller's press, who manage the whole community by the aid of an Indian council.

OMET, an isl Ireland, co. Galway, in the Atlantic, 6 m N W Clifden; 13 m in length, by 1 m in breadth. The female portion of the inhabitants are generally engaged in spinning wool and knitting stockings.

OMET par Isl. Galway, 20,896 ac. P 6548.

OMMEN, a m. Holland, prov Overijssel, 22 m S E Drenthe r bank Vecht with a church, a school, some bread-baking, and saw-mill, and some mills Pop. 1046.

OMCIA, a small seaport to and fort, Central America, state Honduras, lat. 15° 47' N, lon. 88° 3' W (2); on a small bay, forming a good harbor, by which most of the European goods destined for Guatemala and San Salvador are imported on a unhealthy place, chiefly inhabited by a few Indians.

OMCE, an isl Denmark, about 5 m long by 1 m broad, on the coast of Seeland, separated from Aggersø by a narrow but deep channel, 65 m S.W. Copenhagen. Pop. 200

OMOLOLO a river, Siberia, which rises in the N slope of the Stananov mountains, about lat. 62° N; flows first N N W then W, then N W past Kolmak, and, after a course of about 500 m, unites by several mouths, with the Kolma, about 90 m above its mouth in the Arctic Ocean. Its chief affluents are the Tobekukhkanika, on the L; and the Usunda, Shabotkova, Travlanka, and Kaldania, on the R.

OMOROVICZA, a vil Hungary, Hilber Tembe, co. Bacs, 4 m from Hajluk, with a Protestant church, and a trade in corn and fine cattle. Pop. 8631.

OMOULEY, or OMULLEY, a river, E Prussia, gov Konigsberg; rises 18 m N N E. Haldenburg, flows S E expanding into several lakes enters Poland, and joins r bank Narev, total course, about 70 m.

OMRAUTTE a m. India. See AMRAWUTTY

OMSK a prov or gov W Siberia lat. 44° 50' to 55° N, lon. 61° to 82° E bounded N by gov Tobolsk, N.E. gov Tomsk, E and S.E. the Chinese Empire, S the Chinese Empire and Independent Tartary, and W gov Orenburg greatest length, N to S.E., about 1100 m, mean breadth about 300 m. It is traversed in different directions by mountain chains, the loftiest of which are in the centre, and on the S and W frontiers, but its general character is that of a steppe which, though interrupted by these chains, occupies a very large proportion of the whole and is, with few exceptions, so very fertile, particularly in the S., as to convert a considerable part of the province into a meadow-land. The principal river is the Irtysh, which flows across the N.E. part of the province, and drains the whole of it, either directly or by its affluents, of which the Irtys is the principal. The lakes are both numerous and of great extent. The largest is the Tongus, in the S., and only partly in Omsk. The most fertile tract is along the L. bank of the Irtysh, and near the town of Omsk. There corn, hemp, and flax are raised, but the rest of the province is poorly wooded, and yields only a scanty herbage. Various valuable minerals are found, especially in the central mountains. The inhabitants are composed of Russians, Cossacks and Kirghises. Omsk is divided into four circles—Omsk, the capital Ust-Kamenogorsk, Petropavlovsk and Semipalatinsk.

OMSK a tu. W Siberia, esp. above prov r bank Irtysh, at the confluence of the Om, 260 m S.E. Tobolsk. It has modern fortifications in the form of a regular polygon, flanked with five bastions, and is the most important military station on the line of the Irtysh. It is, on the whole, well built, and has three churches, governor's house, barracks, and military school. The trade, carried on chiefly with the Kirghises, is of considerable extent, and consists chiefly in branny, tobacco, &c. In which cattle are given in exchange. P 11,428

OMUN a tu. W Africa, on isl. of m. name, Old Calabar river, about lat. 6° 11' N lon. 8° 15' E. It contains about 5000 inhabitants, who are represented as a happy simple, and hospitable people. There is also a territory called Omun, extending along the L. bank of the stream.

ONA, a R.W. Siberia, which rises in a mountainous district on the S.W. frontiers of gov Irkutsk, enters gov Yenisei, flows easterly N N W., and, after a course of about 280 m, unites with the Tubaia in forming the Tanais.

ONASEL, an isl Fagoo group. See Fagoo Islands.

ONATE, a tu. Spain, Biscay, prov Guipuzcoa, 19 m S.W. Tolosa. It has a townhouse, two primary schools, a station, an hospital, several churches and convents, and manufactures of leather, sails, awls, agricultural and other implements, which are exported woollen cloth, and plain linens. The court of Don Carlos was long stationed here. Pop. 4905.

ONGHAN or OCHUKAN par Isle of Man. Pop. 15,021

ONDA a tu. Spain, Valencia, prov Castellon de la Plana, and 37 m N Valencia. In a hilly locality. It has bread and mostly paved streets, and a considerable number of squares, in one of which stands the townhouse, with strong prison attached. It also has an hospital for the indigent, two an detached schools, four parish churches, several chapels, and an extra-mural cemetery, manufactures of fine and common earthenware, tiles, paper, a falling-mill, 18 flour and 23 oil mills. On the summit of a hill, to the E, the town is defended by a large and very ancient fortress, formerly habited according to historians, five encircling walls and 800 towers. Pop. 4517

ONDAREÁ, a town, Spain, Valencia, prov. and about 60 m. from Alicante, with a church, a suppressed convent, a townhouse, prison, and primary school several oil and flour mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1280

ONDAREK, a small ill. Hindostan, outside the harbour of Bombay about 1 m. from the mainland, and opposite to the village of Thall.

ONDARROA, a seaport, Spain, prov. Biscaya, and 20 m. N.E. Bilbao, accessible only to fishing smacks. It has a townhouse, prison, small hospital, an endowed school for boys, a church, and seven hermitages. Shooting hares, partridges, and sea fowl, in winter, and fishing are the sole occupation of the inhabitants. Pop. 1178

ONDOD, a town, Hungary, Thier Danab, co. and about 9 m. from Buda-Pest, with two churches. The district is generally sandy and unfruitful. Pop. 3084

ONE AND A HALF DEGREE CHANNEL, a passage through the Maldives Islands, in the Indian Ocean. It is formed between Adoniatte-Atoll, on the N, and Nadivra Atoll, on the S, has a width of about 50 m., and, being the narrowest channel of the Maldives, is frequently used by vessels proceeding to Ceylon, in the W monsoon.

ONEA HALLA, or HRYA, an ill. S. Pacific, forming the most N. of the large islands of Loyalty group, lat. 10° 38' 33" S., lon. 160° 30' 14" E. It occupies about the third part of a basin 16 m. in diameter. It is an upheaved coral island, and presents several tracts of coconuts and yam trees. On the N. side is a large bay open to the E.

ONEATA, one of the smaller Looeys islands, lat. 18° 24' E., lon. 178° 21' W.

ONGA, several places, Russia.—1. A town, gov. and 90 m. S.W. Archangel, cap. dist. It bank Onaga at its mouth in the Bay or Gulf of Onega. It has a small harbour from which a little corn, and considerable quantities of wood and fish, particularly herring, are exported. Pop. 1800.—2. A river issues from N.E. extremity of Lake Ladoga, gov. Olonets, flows N.E., and on reaching the frontier of gov. Archangel, turns to N.W., and ultimately falls nearly into the centre of the Bay of Onega, in the White Sea. Total course about 270 m., but so broken by falls and rapids that it cannot be considered as navigable. It is much used, however for floating timber, and in spring the descent is sometimes hindered by boats. Its principal affluents are the Volochka and Medva on the E., and the Kama on the S. bank.—3. A gulf, forming the S.W. branch of the White Sea, length about 75 m., width at entrance, about 50 m., it contains a great number of islands, of which Holyer is the largest. At its S.E. extremity it receives the river Onaga.—4. A lake, near the centre of gov. Olonets, and E.N.E. Lake Ladoga, after which it is the largest lake in Europe. greatest length N.W. to S.E., 180 m.; greatest breadth, 60 m. area, about 4000 sq. m. It is of a very irregular shape, particularly towards the N., where it is much indented, and forms numerous gulches, bays, and islands. Its shores are generally rocky, and its waters beautifully clear, well supplied with fish, navigation much impeded by shoals and sandbanks. The principal streams which it receives are the Migma, the Shelo, the Vpila, and the Vytiga. Its only outlet is the Svir, by which it discharges itself into Lake Ladoga; but the Muzin skoi Canal, by connecting its affluent the Vytiga with the Kayla, an affluent of Lake Shelo, has brought it into communication with the basin of the Volga.

ONGELLA, a seaport in Italy, Piedmont cap. prov. of same name, on the Gulf of Genoa, and 66 m. from Genoa near the mouth of the Impero, here crossed by a magnificent bridge. It is partly surrounded by walls, and otherwise defended, has a court of justice and several public offices, several squares lined by handsome palaces or mansions, a magnificent church, four convents, a college or gymnasium, a penitentiary, a large general hospital, and manufactures of soap, playing-cards, and leather. It is well situated for trade, but the harbour is very indifferent. The only export of any importance is oil. Pop. 5500.—The rovino, in the N., is covered by the chain of the Apennines, from which it slopes down to the Gulf of Genoa. The staple product is the olive, the culture of which occupies nearly three-fourths of the available land. Pop. 57,475

ONEHOUSE, par. Eng. Suffolk, 608 ac. Pop. 437

ONEIDA (LAKE), U. States, New York, about 80 to E. Lake Ontario. It lies nearly E. and W., is 30 m. long, and 4 m. broad. Its waters find a vent by Oneida river into Lake Ontario at its S.E. corner after they have united with the Seneca, and formed the Oswego river. It is a very beautiful sheet of water, and abounds in fish.

ONEKOTAN, or ANAKUTAN, one of the Kurile Islands, N. Pacific off S.W. extremity of Kamchatka lat. 49° 34' N.; lon. 154° 58' E. Length, 30 m., breadth 15 m. It contains one active volcano, Amida-mary, and two of doubtful activity. ONEKUN, a river, Siberia, in the country of the Chukchis in the N.E. extremity of Asia, which flows N.E. and after a course of about 90 m. falls into the Gulf of same name forming the estuary of the Anadir, in Deloré's Sea.

ONGAR (LAVINIO), a market town, and par. England, co. Lancs. The town is 10 m. S.W. Chiswick pleasantly situated 1. bank Mod. ag. here, succeeded by a bridge, has a church, a Dissenting chapel, a school, and a tannery, but no manufactures of any kind, the inhabitants being chiefly employed in agriculture. Area of par. 508 ac. Pop. 645

ONGAR (HIAN) par. Eng. Devon, 4510 ac. Pop. 1147

ONGHIN, a river, Mongolia, rises about lat. 40° N., lon. 104° E., flows S.E. and discharges itself into Lake Kargan-Ulan Nor on the N. of the desert of Gobi, total course, 700 m.

ONGILALI, a river, Madagascar, the Diamatocra.

ONGILO, or ANOOLA, a town, Hindostan, 173 m. N. Madras. It is a small, irregular place, composed of mud huts, but has a detached fort faced with stone, and flanked by round bastions. The district is not very fertile, but remarkably rich in copper ore.

ONGOLOGLER, a town, Hindostan, prov. Oude, 59 m. W. Cuttack, lat. 20° 34' N. lon. 85° 11' E. cap. of an extensive secondary fertile in rice, and most of the Indian grains also, cotton, wax, honey, iron, and timber, but much of it is still on and with jungle.

ONIBURY, par. Eng. Hants, 1099 ac. Pop. 567

ONIL, a town, Spain, prov. and 40 m. N. Alicante. It has three squares, a townhouse, an hospital, the ancient palace of the Marquis of Des-Aguas, two churches, and two schools. The inhabitants are scattered over the whole peninsula, as dealers in fruits, both indigenous and colonial and particularly drugs, in knowledge of which they excel. Pop. 2080

ONION, a river, U. States, formed by several small streams in the N. of Vermont, flows S.W. 5 S.W. to Montpelier, where it is augmented by a large affluent, called N.W., and ultimately falls into Lake Champlain 5 m. N. Burlington. Part of its course is through the Green Mountain range. Total course, about 70 m.

ONIL, or ONIA, an ill. Spain off the coast of Lallio, at the N.W. extremity of the Ibo de Pontevadera, about 3 m. long, and nearly 2 m. broad. It has precipitous shores, and a small harbour defended by a battery.

ONKELZELLE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flandre, par. bank Douber, 27 m. S.E. Ghent, with a flour mill, inhabitants employed chiefly in weaving linen. Pop. 1157

ONVAINO, a vil. E. Russia, dep. Nord, 4 m. N.E. Valenchiem, on the Volga, with native manufactures of flax, sugar, clay pipes, hickies, nails, beer, and cheese. P. 8400

ONO, one of the smaller Fijee isls., a considerable distance S. from the main group, lat. 40° 46' S., lon. 178° W.

ONOD, a market in Hungary, Thier Thale, on Beer and R. bank Danube, 48 m. N.W. Debrecen with two churches, a synagogue, and the ruins of an old castle. The Turks were defeated here in 1683. Pop. 2840

ONON, a river, Mongolia, rises in mountains which mark the N. boundary of Mongolia lat. 49° 40' N., lon. 110° E., whence it flows N.E. enters Russia, gov. Irkutsk, and joins the Ingoda 80 m. S.W. Nerchinsk, forming, with the river just named, the Shilka, total course, about 370 m.

ONORDAGA, a lake U. States, New York, E. of Andrus, 8 m. long, N.E. to S.S.W., and from 3 m. to 4 m. breast. Its water is fresh, but it is famous for the salt springs found along its shores. In 1832, the quantity of salt obtained from these springs was 4,725,533 bushels, being an increase, over 1831, of 808,418 bushels.

ONORE, a seaport in Honduras, prov. Coma, lat. 14° 16' N; lon. 72° 32' E.; near the entrance of a salt-water river. It was formerly a place of great commerce, and has still a considerable trade in pepper, rice, &c.

ONRUST a small Isl. Indian Archipelago, N coast Java, 9 m. N N W Batavia. It is nearly circular about 4800 ft. in circumference, and about 8 ft. above sea-level. The Dutch had formerly fortifications here, and also extensive works for the repairing and building of ships.

ONSLAW BAY, U States, N Carolina, between Cape Lookout, lat. 53° 27' N, lon. 85° 20' W (n.) and Cape Fear, lat. 53° 48' N lon. 77° 57' W (n.); distance between the two points, upwards of 50 m. The indentation forming the bay is very slight. A chain of narrow long, and low islands, with shallow inlets intervening, stretch along its front.

ONSTWEDDE, a picturesque vil. Holland, prov. and 25 m. S.E. Groningen, with a church and school. P. 893.

ONTARIO (LAKES) one of the great lakes of N America, lying along the N.E. side of the state of New York, and forming part of the boundary between the U States and Canada, length its greatest breadth, 50 m. circumference, about 480 m. It receives the waters of Lake Erie, by the Niagara, and discharges its waters by the St. Lawrence into the Atlantic, 1000 m. distant. Its surface is 334 ft. below that of Lake Erie, with which it is connected also by the Welland canal. It is navigable throughout its whole extent, and at all seasons as an account of its depth—in some places more than 600 ft.—it rarely freezes. Many ships and steamers are employed upon it. The most important places on its shores are Oswego and Rochester Harbour in the U States and Kingston, Toronto, Hamilton, and Coburn, in Canada. The Hudson and the Oswego and Erie united, form a connection, through the U States, between it and the Atlantic.

ONTENIENTE [anc. Fontenelle] a m. Spain, prov. and 46 m. S. Valencia, r bank Lirano. It has a good town-house and prison, a palace of the duke of Almodovar, several endowed and various other schools an hospital for the poor, and several other charitable institutions three parish churches, one of which, St. Mary's, has a beautiful square tower of great elevation. Don H. Lopez, granite, and marble are found. Machines for carding and spinning wool are made, and there are 5 fulling, 5 paper 19 corn and 83 oil mills, one admirable manufacture of cloth and linen, brandy, and delaware, but all in a declining state. Pop. 9523.

ONTONAGON, a river U States, which issues from a lake in the N of the Wisconsin territory, flows N N W and, after a course of about 100 m. partly navigable, falls into the E.W. shore of Lake Superior.

OUANEL, a small vil. W Hindostan prov. Gujarat, 50 m. E.E. Baruch. Near it is a hot spring held sacred and resorted to by Hindu pilgrims.

OUAGA, a m. N W Hindostan, principality and 40 m. W & W Beharunpore lat. 23° 11' E lon. 70° 50' E. near the junction of the Ghagh and Sutlej. It is formed of three distinct towns, a few hundred yards apart from each other and each encompassed by a wall of brick now in ruins. The country around is richly cultivated the tobacco plant, in particular grows most luxuriantly, and, at the season of harvest, the tract is one sheet of green fields and verdure. The fig, vine, apple, and melberry are raised, and indigo is successfully grown. Pop. 10,000.

OUJANA, a large vil. Belocostan, prov. Cutch Guj. lat. 23° 40' N lon. 67° 49' E, surrounded by a mud wall. There is some cultivation near it. Forage is abundant, but other supplies are scarce.

OUDEPOORT, a m. W Hindostan prov. Gujarat, 20 m. E. by S. Baroda, lat. 23° 12' N, lon. 74° 7' E., on the road from Malwah to Baruch, on the Gulf of Cambay.

OUDEPOORT, a m. W Hindostan, prov. Malwah; lat. 23° 55' N, lon. 75° 5' E., formerly a place of considerable importance, as it is indicated by its extensive ruins.

OUJOU-Da Kora, a vil. Foulah, lat. 20° 20' N; lon. 71° 14' E., on the river from Monim to Loua, inhabitants possessible, industrious, and skilful agriculturists.

OODUNTOOR, a m. Hindostan, prov. Delhi, 30 m. N E Furruckabad.

OUEJIN, a m. W Hindostan, prov. Malwah, 550 m. N N E Bombay, lat. 20° 11' N lon. 70° 35' E. It is of an oblong form, 5 m. in circumference, and surrounded by a stone wall, with round towers, houses of brick, and roofed with tiles sloped after the European manner. The bazaar or principal street is spacious, and paved with granite. The principal buildings are the mosque, temple, and Shidia's palace—the latter a poor edifice, and so surrounded with houses as to be little observed. The wooden fronts of many of the chief buildings are elaborately carved. About 1 m. N from the present town, stood the ancient city of Ouejin or Ouejan, which, together with 50 other large towns in the provinces of Malwah and Bagar, were, according to tradition, hurried by a shower of earth, about half a century before the Christian era—Ouejin being, at that time, the seat of empire, of art, and of learning. On digging on the spot where the latter is supposed to have stood, to the depth of 15 or 18 ft. there are frequently discovered entire brick walls pillars of stone, and pieces of wood of an extraordinary hardness, besides utensils of various kinds and ancient coins.

OULA a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 21 m. S.E. Antwerp on the Little Rhine. It has a distillery, rope-works, and a flour-mill. Pop. 1675.

OULTGENSLAAT, a vil. Holland prov. S. Holland lat. 51° 40' N lon. 4° 10' E. Rotterdam near the junction of Hollands-Diep, the Harung-Vliet, and the Volkerak, with a townhouse, civil school, and a harbour. Inhabitants much engaged in madder-growing. Pop. 1589.

OUMNAK, or OUNAK, one of the Aleutian isls., N Pacific, and next to Omakshika, the largest of the group lat. (S.W. extremity) 51° 50' N, lon. 168° 42' W, about 60 m. long S.E. W. to N.E. E., and its height varies in the same direction till towards the N it becomes covered with very high mountains, among which is an extinct volcano, covered with perpetual snow. Two active volcanoes are also seen the one near the centre of the island Yovvovskoi, and the other about 10 m. from the N.E. shore, called Tanleik. Hot springs, resembling the Geysers of Iceland, occur in different quarters. Its inhabitants, who occupy several villages—of which that of Ketchikoon about 8 m. from its S.W. extremity is the largest—cultivate potatoes and turnips, and fish are very abundant.

OUN, a m. W Hindostan, prov. Gujarat lat. 24° 15' N, lon. 71° 45' E. It has one long bazaar street, and was once noted for the thievish disposition of its inhabitants.

OONALASHKA OONALASKA or UNATASHKA, the largest of the Aleutian isls., N Pacific, lat. 53° 57' N, lon. 158° 45' W, about 75 m. in length and averaging 20 m. in breadth. It is mountainous, and in the centre rises the volcano Makhoulinsk, about 5491 ft. above sea-level. It contains a depot of the Russian fur company. See ALUTIAN ISLANDS.

OONERPOOR, a large vil. Hindostan, 30 m. N Hyderabad, r bank India, considerably elevated above the water.

OONGA, or OONGA, one of the Aleutian isls., N Pacific Ocean, off the peninsula of Alaska, lat. (N point) 55° 42' N lon. 160° 50' W. It is the largest and most W of the Shumagin group, and extends N to S, about 26 m., with an average breadth of 1½ m. Its N.W. side is level, and terminates in a low cape, called Tonkol. Its S. coast is lofty, and presents some very bold cliffs. There are three bays where anchorage may be had—the largest on the N.E. side, with sufficient depth of water, but deficient shelter; another on the E. side, which penetrates far inland, but is shallow, and a third on the S. coast. The inhabitants grow turnips and potatoes, and rear pigs and poultry. Vases of workable sand are said to have been discovered.

OONIMAK, or OONIMAK, one of the Aleutian isls., N Pacific, the most E of the Fox Island group about lat. 54° 40' N, and lon. 164° W. It is separated by the Strait of Isanokot from the peninsula of Alaska, and is about 56 m. long, by 25 m. broad. It is traversed by a lofty mountain chain, containing a number of active volcanoes; the loftiest of which, called Chikadidid, is a regular cone, and has a height of 8935 ft. The whole island, indeed, appears to be one vast volcano, and, notwithstanding the numerous vents by which the volcanic products are continually discharging themselves, earthquakes are of frequent occurrence. The only part which is low and level, and apparently not volcanic, is the M.E., where a broad bed of gravel extends along the shore, and a village has been built along the banks of the stream abounding with fish.

COHJARA, a large tn. N W Hindostan prov Aymer, 8 m S.W. Rangoon, lat. 25° 51' N lon. 75° 52' E. surrounded by a wall, partly of mud and partly of stone, with round towers. The houses are mostly built of stone, and the palace is neatly constructed, and well fortified.

COECHA, an ancient tn Hindostan, prov Allahabad, 1. bank Betwa, about 8 m S. Jhansi lat. 25° 35' N lon. 78° 38' E. In remote times, this was a city of great note.

COEDEGEM, a vil. and com. Belgium prov E. Flanders, 10 m. S.E. by K. Ghent; inhabitants chiefly engaged in weaving. Pop. 2183.

COEMIA, a tn and lake, Persia. See LICHMATH.

COEAKI, a tn Japan, ad Nippon, S.E. extremity, near the Kiso Channel 280 m. S.W. Yedo.

COEIMIA—1, A tn Japan, ad Nippon, E coast, at its S. extremity near the entrance to Kiso Channel—2, A small but populous island, Japan, off the S.E. coast of Nippon.

COET EXCLOU, a vil. and com. Belgium prov E. Flanders, 31 m. N. Ghent. It has manufactures of linen; and a trade in corn, wood, and cattle. Pop. 1364.

COETAKLE, a vil. and com. Belgium prov E. Flanders, 3 m. N. by E. Ghent, with manufactures of starch, chocolate, tobacco, mustard, charcoal, and oil. Pop. 5260.

COETBURG, a tn Holland, prov Zealand 13 m. S.W. Middelburg with two churches, several schools, a townhouse, and a small market-place, where the four principal streets terminate. It has manufactures of starch and malt, and a trade in grain. In former times it lay on a sea-arm now silted up and drained and had a harbour and a considerable trade. Pop. 1620.

COETLAMP, a vil. and com. Belgium prov W. Flanders, 8 m. S. Bruges, near the railway and canal to Ghent with six flour-mills, and a salt-works, but weaving and husbandry occupy the bulk of the inhabitants. Pop. 4023.

COETDUY KEEKK, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov W. Flanders, on the canal from Furnes to Newport 24 m. S.W. Bruges. It has a flour-mill, F. (agricultural), 1067.

COETNALA, or COETNALA, a river U. States, rises in Tennessee, on the N.W. frontier of Georgia, flows N.W. into Alabama, and, after a course of about 100 m. unites with the Etowah in forming the Coosa.

COETLIEBEEK, a vil. Holland prov Gelderland, 3 m. W. Arnhem with a church, and four schools a saw and two corn mills. Pop. (agricultural) 1624.

COETTERHOUT, a tn. Holland prov N. Brabant, 5 m. N.E. Brda. It has a townhouse, two churches, Latin French, and other schools, potteries, breweries, tanneries, corn-mills, a building-yard, and a salt-factory; and some trade in grain, cloth, and timber. Pop. 4366.

COETTERLAND, a vil. Holland, prov Zealand, lat. Duiveland 6 m. S.E. E. Zierikzee, a cloudy-built good-looking place, with a church, and a neat townhouse in the market-place. Pop. (agricultural) 917.

COETLERKELE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov E. Flanders, 9 m. S.E. Ghent with two breweries two candle-factories two flour-mills, an oil mill, and distillery junc weaving, and village. Pop. 3211.

COETLERKE, a vil. Holland prov Zealand lat. N. Zealand, 9 m. S.E. E. Middelburg; with two churches and a school. Pop. 395.

COETMALLI, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov and 15 m. E. E. Antwerp; with manufactures of woollens, coriars, and earthenware, brick and tile-works a brewery, dye-works, and a trade in corn, wool, and wood for fuel. Pop. 1115.

COETNEUWERKE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov W. Flanders, 30 m. S. by E. Bruges. Brawling and the manufacture of tobacco are carried on. Pop. 2347.

COETVAETTEREN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov W. Flanders, on the Yser, 26 m. S.W. Bruges, with three breweries and two flour-mills. Many of the inhabitants are fishermen and sailors. Pop. 1688.

COETWINKEL, or COETWINKEL, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov E. Flanders, on the Levee. It has manufactures of linen, a trade in yarn, and a flour-mill. Pop. 1066.

OOTACAMUND, a sanitary station, S. Hindostan, prov Malabar in the Nellore hills, 70 m. S. Mysore; lat. 11° 20' N lon. 78° 30' E; 7400 ft. above sea level. Climate temperate and healthful.

OUTGHEM, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov W. Flanders, 21 m. S. by E. Bruges. Weaving, grinding, soap, expressing oil, and husbandry are carried on. Pop. 2337.

OUTMARSSUM, a tn Holland, prov Overijssel, 18 m. S.E.E. Zwolle. It has a small but suitable townhouse, two churches, a synagogue, several schools, manufactures of calicoes, bombazines, and chlorey a bleachery and two corn mills. Pop. 1474.

OUTRADROOG, a tn and fort S. Hindostan prov Mysore, 48 m. N.E. Seringapatam lat. 13° 57' N lon. 77° 12' E. The rock of Outdradrog forms the northern termination of a chain of hills that intersects the table-land of Mysore.

OUTUL, a small tn Beloochistan prov Lus lat. 25° 44' N lon. 68° 35' E. 25 m. N. Gompaana. It is clean and well built, and occupies a pleasant situation amidst groves and fields of grain and cotton which is remarkably abundant and excellent. The inhabitants have large flocks of sheep and goats, besides herds of black cattle and camels. Pop. 2000.

OPAKO, or OPAKO, a tn S. Pacific lat. 37° 37' 40" S lon. 144° 15' W about 54 m. long, and 18 m. in circuit. It presents a cluster of high, craggy mountains, some of them terminating in remarkable peaks and descending, almost perpendicularly to the water's edge, with ravines between them clothed with shrubs and dwarf trees. Pop. about 1600.

OPATAU, or OPATAU, a market in Austria Moravia, near and 11 m. S.E. Igau, 1. bank Hynuska with a parish church and two flour-mills. Pop. 1301.

OPAFOW, a tn. Russian Poland, 140 m. S. Warsaw in a pleasant and fertile district in the Opawskie, with four churches, a synagogue and an important fair 1 (1841) 3416.

OPHAKELI, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov E. Flanders, 16 m. S. Ghent. Inhabitants chiefly employed in linen weaving, agriculture, and cattle-rearing. Pop. 3120.

OLLOUSAR, a tn. U. States, Louisiana, near the head of the Vermilion about 210 m. W. N.W. New Orleans, with two churches, a college and a considerable trade. Pop. 1000.

OPHENSLAW, a vil. and township England on Lancaster on the Stockport canal and the Hindfield and Manchester railway 3 m. E. S.E. Manchester. It has a church in the early English style Wesleyan and New Connection Methodist chapels, several endowed schools, extensive dye-works, brick works, and a cotton-mill. Pop. 8159.

OPHSELT, a vil. and com. Belgium prov E. Flanders, 21 m. S.E.E. Ghent. It has manufactures of linen, a brewery and two flour-mills. Pop. 1296.

OHIB—1. An isolated mountain, peninsulas and about 45 m. S.E. the town of Malacca, about 5700 ft. in height with a nucleus of granite, traversed by quartz veins, from which much of the gold found in that part of the peninsula appears to have been washed—2. A gold district, New S. Wales, Bathurst co., between the rivers Macquarie and Lewis, 118 m. W. N. Sydney.

OPHULEN, a vil. and com. Belgium prov Louvain 1. bank Meuse 54 m. N.E. Hasselt. It has three breweries, a distillery, a brick work, a saw and two flour mills. Pop. 1135.

OPUCZKO, or OPUCZKO, a tn. Russian Poland, 63 m. S.W. Warsaw, 1. bank Drewca, with four churches, and several well-frequented fairs. A battle was fought here in 1655 between the Poles and Swedes. Pop. 1475.

OPORIO (Portuguese, O Porto, The Port), a large city and seaport Portugal, prov Douro, on a steep declivity E. bank, and about 2 m. from the mouth of the Douro, lat. 41° 11' N, lon. 8° 37' W; 180 m. N. Lisbon. The appearance of the city on a first approach, is very prepossessing; the houses rise one above another in terraces, and being all white-washed give it an air of great cleanliness; but in reality most of the streets are narrow, crooked, and dirty and the houses irregularly constructed. Still there are quarters of the town where the houses are well built, light, neat, and regular, and the streets broad and straight, and shady diversified with gardens full of vines and orange-trees. In one of the principal streets is situated the British Factory-house, a baroque building of white granite, with a beautiful facade the theatre, also, is a very tasteful structure. There are 11 public squares, called congoas; 15 convents; 10 hospitals and 90 churches and chapels, including a spacious cathedral.

- | | | |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------------|---------------|
| 1 Cathedral | 4 Church of the Carmelites | 7 Santa Clara |
| 2 Church of the Franciscans | 5 Church of the Holy Spirit | 8 Santa Clara |
| 3 Church of the Holy Spirit | 6 Church of the Holy Spirit | 9 Santa Clara |

The churches are said to be in a very filthy state, and from the custom of burying the dead within their walls they are most unwholesome. One of the most striking architectural objects in Oporto is the Torre dos Clerigos (Tower of the Clergy) attached to the church of same name. Near it is the market called Cardameira which is well supplied with fish, fruit, and vegetables—the vendors all women.

Oporto has a good harbor when once gained, but a shifting bar across its entrance renders it difficult of access. There is a quay extending the whole length of the town, on some manufactories of hats, silks, linen stuffs, and pottery, besides rope-walks and dock yards; but none are thriving. The climate is damp and foggy in winter. The unhealthy season is from the beginning of July to the end of August.

The heat during the day is quite oppressive, although a cold wind prevails on the river and a chilling sea-fog comes up the Douro every evening at the turn of the tide. Oporto was capital of Portugal till 1174, when the seat of government was transferred to Lisbon. It was taken and sacked by the French in 1805 who retained possession of it till 1809, when the British crossed the Douro, and compelled them to retire. Having sided with Don Miguel it was besieged in 1831-2 above a year by the troops of Don Pedro, when much of it was destroyed and its trade was for the time annihilated. In 1847 it declared in favour of the Insurrection against the government of Donna Maria.

Pop. including suburbs, 60,000.

OPOTSCHKA is in Russia gov and 78 m. S. Iskov with a wooden church, and a considerable trade in flax. Pop. (1849) 3,068.

OPOTSCHKA, or OPOTSCHKA, a m. Bohemia, circle Königgrätz, r bank Goldbach, with two churches, a school house, Capuchin monastery, and a fine old castle, with a chapel and theatre. Pop. 1,486.

OPPA a river, Germany, which rises in the Sudeten on the N. frontier of Moravia. It flows directly to the S. E. past the towns of Jagendorf and Troppan, and forming part of the boundary between Moravia and Prussian Silesia, and joins the Oder about 10 m. S. of Oppa, total course, nearly 60 m.

OPPEL, a gov Prussia, forming nearly the whole of Upper Silesia and bounded, N by gov Posen, N E. and E. Poland, S E. Galicia & S. W. Moravia, and W and N W by gov Breslau area,

576 sq. m. The surface is generally hilly, particularly in the N and E, and is extensively covered with forests. It belongs chiefly to the basin of the Oder which traverses it from S. to N. but partly also to the Vistula, which forms its boundary on the S. E. The lakes are both large and numerous. The climate is generally cold and moist, and the soil is by no means fertile, though particular districts produce corn beyond their own immediate wants also flax, hops, and fruit. The minerals are numerous, and include argentiferous lead, iron tin, alum, copperas, and coal. Manufactures, with the exception of iron, have not made much progress. The principal one side of which is a street, and on the other a wall, raised for the purpose of fastening ships moored. The river Douro is subject to extraordinary and dangerous freshes by the rains or melting of the mountain snows. On these occasions boats are placed on the quay to secure the safety of vessels, as no civies will then hold them. During the summer months, the best anchorage is off the city. The principal trade of Oporto is in wine, white and red, but chiefly the latter. The lower articles of export are oil, annatto, honey, oranges, wool, refined sugar cream of tartar, salt, leather, cork, and linen. The chief imports are corn, beef, sugar, coffee, dials, woolen, cotton, and hardware from England, silk, both from England and Newfoundland, hemp and flax from the Baltic, and rice from N. America. The shipments of red port wine, in 1848, amounted to 20,624 pipes, of which 22,854 were for Great Britain. In 1858 the shipments amounted to 24,908 pipes, of which 20,444 were for Great Britain. There are trade in wood. The government is divided into 16 cercles. Pop. (1849) 250,912.

OPOTSCHKA.—View from the balcony of the Palace and the city.

OPPEL, a m. Prussia, prov Silesia, esp. above gov, 1 bank Oder, here crossed by two bridges, 58 m. S. E. Breslau, on the railway thence to Gnesen. It is walled, and has four churches, a synagogue, gymnasia, and several other schools, a deaf and dumb asylum, two hospitals, an infirmary, and several manufactures of linen, and famous glass-making, a tobacco-factory, and some shipping-trade. P. 7756.

OPPENAU, a m. Baden, circle Mittelhau, 10 m. E. Oppenau. It is walled, has a parish church, and hospital; manufactures of soap, a brewery, distillery, three dye-works, and a bathing establishment. Pop. 2,100.

OPPENHEIM, a walled m. Hesse-Darmstadt, 15 m. S. W. Darmstadt, 1 bank Rhine. It has three churches, one of them a beautiful Gothic structure, in a dilapidated state; a synagogue, hospital, ruined castle, and a trade in wine. P. 2,448.

OPPIDO a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ulbra I. dist. and 4 m. E.S.E. Palmi, the son of a bishop and near the site of a former town, which was almost entirely destroyed by the great earthquake of 1783. Pop. 8000.

OPPOVA a vii Hungary, Barant of Temesvar, on the Temes, 16 m. N. Belgrade, with three churches, and seven mills. Pop. 3180.

OPPEBBAIS, a vii and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant on the Great Geste, 25 m. S.E. Brussels with a brewery a flour-mill and a trade in corn, cattle, and wood. P. 1618.

OPWYCK a vii and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on the borders of E. Flanders, 10 m. N.W. Brussels with several breweries, a distillery flour-mills and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 3586.

OR, a river Asia, rises in Independent Tertiary in the Kirghiz steppes, near lat. 48° 30' N. lon 69° E. flows N. and, after a course of about 190 m. joins I. Ienik Ural near Orsk.

ORAGAWA a tn. Japan, on a bay S.E. side of Niphon, about 25 m. S.E. Yokohama. It is a place of considerable importance, and has a custom house, at which all the junkers proceeding to the capital must pass. Its harbour could contain 1200 junks, and from the complete command which it has over the trade of the capital, may almost be considered as the key of the empire. Pop. about 20,000.

ORAINSON, or ANTHOXY KALAN an isl. S. Pacific, off E. coast New Ireland about 15 m. in circuit, lofty well wooded, particularly with cocoa-trees and well cultivated.

ORAN, a tn. Algeria cap. prov. and on a bay of same name, 302 m. W. S. W. Algiers lat. (light) 35° 44' 18" N. lon 0° 41' W. It stands on both sides of the Oued-el-Bahli and at the foot of the peak of St. Croix or Marguile, one side of which rises in the form of an amphitheatre is surrounded with fortifications of considerable strength. It tolerably well built consisting of two principal divisions, separated by a well formed street lined with poplars and has a handsome parish church, formerly a Mahometan mosque another ancient one completely supplied, still by no means devoid. Rome magnificent Roman remains still exist, and attest the importance of the ancient Arande. The principal are the theatre, of which the colossal wall that formed the scene, and the shore of the semicircle is still conspicuous for miles around, overtopping all the modern buildings in its neighborhood adjoining the theatre are some remains of the circus or hippodrome and near it is a triumphal arch. The manufactures consist of linen prints, napkins, and serge, and there are also silk and madder mills. The trade is in corn, wine, brandy, oil, bristles, saffron, honey, wax, madder &c. The title of Princess of Orange, borne by the house of Nassau, is derived from this town. Pop. 5780.

ORANGE, a dist. in the S.E. of France which originally formed part of Gallia Narbonensis, and at the end of the 7th century became an independent county. The last count bequeathed it as an inheritance to the founder of the United Provinces, William III. of England on whose death Frederick of Prussia obtained the succession, in right of his mother, which of Prussia's eldest sister and ceded it to Louis XIV. by the peace of Utrecht, in 1713. It has since remained with France, and forms part of dep. Vaucluse. Its capital was the above town, Orange.

ORANGE, a bay Terra del Fuego E. side, Hardy Peninsula, lat. 56° 31' S. lon 68° 30' W. It is one of the few excellent harbours on this coast and while large enough to contain a squadron of line-of-battle ships, is not more commodious than safe. The depth close to the shore, is 8 fathoms and nowhere exceeds 20 fathoms, with a fine sandy bottom. Both wood and water are abundant.

ORANGI RIVER, GAHAR or GAHAR a river S. Africa, forming the N. boundary of Cape Colony and falling into the Atlantic in lat. 28° 8' S. lon 16° 18' E. It is formed in lat. 29° 8' S. lon 27° 20' E. by the junction of the Ky Gariep or Vaal Yellow River with the Nu Gariep, or Black or Crocodile River and flows in long sweeps N. W. N. W. and S. W. to its mouth in the Atlantic, where it is about 400 yds across total course, about 350 m. The Ky Gariep, or Vaal or Yellow River rises in the Drakensberg or Quathlanja mountains, W. of Port Natal flows with a great sweep, E. to W. to the junction with the Nu Gariep, receiving numerous affluents in its course of about 400 m. The Nu Gariep, or Black or Crocodile River rises in the same range of mountains, and near the same locality, as the above river and flows, with a long sweep E. to W. to the junction with the Ky Gariep total course, also about 400 m.

ORANGI RIVER STATE, a recently settled portion of S. Africa, beyond the N. frontier of Cape Colony. It is comprised between the Nu Gariep on the S. and the Ky Gariep or Vaal on the N. W. and N. borders on Natal on the E. length, 375 m., greatest breadth 250 m. lat. 27° 20' S. lon 24° 15' E. to 28° 45' E., area, about 70,000 sq. m. It forms a high table-land having a mean elevation of probably 6000 ft. The W. and N. part stretches out into immense flats, which rise gradually S. to the Wit Mountains, and E. to the Rieps Mountains. It enjoys a temperate climate is intersected by numerous streams, and is admirably adapted for the rearing of cattle and coolled sheep. In 1848 it was declared British territory but was subsequently given up, and now forms a republic. P. (of European origin) about 15,000 (total), about 7000.

ORANGI ISLAND one of the Bonaeris, W. coast Africa lat. (W. end) 11° 10' N. lon 18° 20' W. It is of volcanic origin, and very barren, with a sandy soil.

ORANI, a vii Isl. Sardinia, 31v and 40 m. N. Cagliari with a church, convent and primary school; limekilns, and a trade in corn, wool, skins and cheese. Pop. 1840.

ORANIDO, a valley in N. of Montenegro, near the town there of Hercegovina. It is about 2 m. long, by 1000 ft. broad and it has been the scene of many desperate combats between the Montenegrins and Turks.

ORANIENBAUM, a tn. Anhalt-Dessau, 9 m. E.S.E. Dessau, with two churches, a castle, and three mills. P. 2010.

THE BAY OF ORAN.—From Rotterdam's Argus.

church, built by the Spaniards in the time of Charles V., and now attached to a large modern hospital, an old castle arsenal, &c., and several fine gardens. The water near the town is shallow, and the anchorage very limited but about 8 m. to the N. of Oran, Mers-el-Kebir has a large and commodious harbour, on which great improvements have recently been made, and at which a considerable trade is carried on. The aggregate value of the imports and exports amounting to about 2700,000. Pop. (1849), 54,845, of whom 17,261 were Europeans.—The WIT RIVER forms a long belt of land stretching along the Mediterranean, bounded, E. by prov. Algiers, S. the Sahara desert, and W. Morocco. It is divided into the four departments of Oran, Arzew Mostaganem, and Mascara, area, 85,899 sq. m. Pop. 600,000.

ORAN, prov. Irel. Roscommon; 5181 ac. Pop. 339.

ORANGE (Latin, Arenaria), a tn. France, dep. Vaucluse, 16 m. N. Avignon. It has tolerably well-built houses, narrow and irregular streets, adorned with several fine fountains.

ORANIENBAUM, a tu, Russia, gov and 18 m. W St. Petersburg 3/4 shore, Gulf of Finland. It has a handsome imperial palace, built by Menshikov, long the favorite of Peter the Great; a Greek church, a Lutheran chapel, marine hospital, and a fort in a ruinous condition. P. (1846), 1014.
ORANIENBURG, a tu, Prussia, gov. Potsdam, 1/2 hour. Havel 19 m. N N W Berlin; with two churches, an orphan hospital, and manufacture of calico and shawls, earthenware, and chemical products. Pop. 3363.

ORANIENBURG, or MAXIMOW, a tu, Russia, gov and 90 m. S E E. Krasna, at the confluence of the Yagorata and Rima; with a considerable trade in corn. Pop. 2500.
ORANMOE, a tu and par. Ireland, co. Galway.—The town 5 m. E. Galway on an inlet of the sea, has a parish church, a R. Catholic chapel, and two schools and was at one time celebrated for its woollen manufactures, by hand-spinning and weaving. Area of par. 17 700 ac. Pop. 5033.

ORAVICKA, two places, Hungary nearly adjacent to each other, co. Krasova, 58 m. S E E. Temesvar. The less has pop. 1901. The larger called also Nemet-Oravica, is a mining town; contains two churches, and has in its neighborhood silver, iron, and copper works. Pop. 5753.

ORB, a tu, Bavaria, circle Lower Franconia, 41 m. N N W Würzburg the seat of a mining directory and several other public offices. It has a church salt-works, producing annually about 1500 tons of salt; paper, oil, bark, and other mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 4469.

ORB (Latin Orbia), a river France, which rises in the Cevennes, dep. Aveyron, flows S W, then S E E. passes Bevers, and falls into the Gulf of Lion, total course, 60 m.
ORBANSAY an inlet, Scotland Hebrides between Barra and South Uist. Length, 2 m.

ORBASSANO, a tu, Italy Piedmont, div and 9 m. S W Turin, r. bank Sangone, with two handsome churches, a monastery an old castle, and silk mills. P. 9000.

ORBE, a tu, and par. Switzerland, can Vaud, r. bank Orbe, here crossed by a handsome stone bridge, 15 m. N W Lausanne. It is well built, has a church supposed to date from the 6th century, and two towers of an old castle. Cardinal Perron and the reformer Viret were born here. Pop. 1873.—The river rises in Lake Rouvres, France, dep. Jura, enters can Vaud traverses the valley of Joux, forming the lake of that name, and the Lake of Yveret flows E. to Orbe, then turns N E, and falls in to the lake of Neuchâtel at Yverdon total course, about 35 m.

ORBEG (anc. Orbecus) a tu, France, dep. Calvados, 13 m. S E. Lisieux. It has Lincolnhole, tanneries, and manu. factories of hosiery, cloths, light woollen stuffs, thread, ribbons, and woollen yarn, and some trade in wool, in woollen fabrics, and in linen thread. Pop. 3910.

OREFTELLO, or OREZZELLA, a walled tu, Tuscany, prov and 24 m. S by E Grosseto, on a tongue of land projecting into the lake of same name. It has a small harbor, defended by several batteries, and is supposed to be identical with the Roman Orbetum. Pop. 3502.—The lake about 5 m. long, by 3 m. broad, communicates with the Tyrrhenian Sea, by a narrow artificial opening.

OREPEY, a tu, France, dep. Haut-Rhin, 14 m. N N W Colmar, at the foot of a granite mountain, on which are situated two lakes, Blanc and Noir; the former 3425 ft., the latter 3090 ft. above sea-level. Printed calicoes, and other cotton fabrics, are manufactured. Pop. 1705.

OREY, par. Eng. Lincoln; 2088 ac. Pop. 403.

ORICA, a river kingd. Italy Piedmont, which flows S E E. from the Alps to the Po, which it joins, 13 m. N E. Turin total course, 50 m.

ORCADES, isls, Scotland. See ORCKNEY ISLANDS.

ORILE, a tu, Spain, Andalucia prov and N E Granada with a terrace, a castle, two schools, a church, and six hermitages. Pop. (chiefly agriculturists), 3368.

ORILEA, or OROMA, a tu, Rhodes, gov and 47 m. S N. M. hater r. bank Drosos, at the confluence of the Orhitis. It is one of the oldest Roman towns, and contains four Greek churches a synagogue, a college, four monasteries, a nursery, founded by the Princess Sophia, sister of Peter the Great, and a considerable general trade. Pop. about 3000.

ORCHARIA, a bay N Pacific Ocean, Oregon Territory; lat. 47 35' N. lon. 127° 54' W. It is one of the series of straits, which, penetrating deeply into the mainland, from the

S. W. of Vancouver Island, and terminating at Puget Sound, forms a large and beautiful well-wooded harbour, with good anchorage for the largest vessels, and completely protected from the winds. The only danger is a reef near the middle of the entrance from Admiralty Island.

ORCHARD, three pars. Essex and—1, (Essex), Dorset 850 ac. P. 219.—2, (Devon) Somerset 835 ac. P. 49.—3, (Wales) Dorset, 517 ac. P. 121.

ORCHARDLEIGH, par. Eng. Somerset, 715 ac. P. 82.
ORCHESTON, two pars. Eng. Wiltshire—1, (St. George) 3365 ac. Pop. 728.—2, (St. Mary), 1781 ac. Pop. 175.
ORCHIES, a walled tu, France, dep. Nord, 14 m. S E E Lille. It has several tanneries, breweries, distilleries, manufactures of lace, soap, oil, and potteryware; and an active trade in cattle and grain. Pop. 6785.

ORCHILLA, a group of uninhabited islets, Caribbean Sea lat. (W point) 11° 50' 19" N. lon. 66° 14' W (n.); about 90 m. off the coast of Venezuela, by whom and by Holland they are claimed. They yield grass, some wood, and innumerable eggs of sea-fowl.

ORCOOP par. Eng. Hereford, 3403 ac. Pop. 631.

ORCZYDORF, ORCHAFATA, or KURATA a vil. Hungary, Thither Thelma, co and 13 m. N Temesvar, with two churches. Pop. 1603.

ORDIQUHILL, par. Scot. Banff, 4 m. by 2 m. P. 644.

ORDSALL, a vil and par. England, co. Nottingham, on the lide, near East Briden. It is old, and irregularly built; and has a parish church, with a lofty tower and a paper-mill. Area of par. 1969 ac. Pop. 1342.

ORDUNA, an anc. tu, Spain, prov. Biscay and 30 m. S. Bilbao, with a good substantial custom-house, occupying one of the sides of the principal square, two churches, and several convents and hermitages, four linen and glass earthen ware factories, and a tile-work. Pop. 3240.

ORE par. Eng. Sussex 2149 ac. Pop. 1745.

ORREBO, a tu, in Sweden, cap. lla of same name, on the small river Svart lilla, at the head and W extremity of the Rihmar lake, 101 m. W Stockholm. It contains a handsome church, with interesting monuments, an ancient but noble castle, a townhouse, assembly-house, with a reading-club an hospital and an old house, of some historical interest as the residence of Gustavus Vasa and of Charles IX. the place where an assembly of the States was held in 1540, and Bernadotte was elected crown-prince in 1810. The manufactory consists of iron cloth wax cloth, hosiery paper and tobacco and there is a considerable printing establishment, from which some of the best Swedish works are issued, and in connection with it, a type-foundry. There is a small haven in the lake. Orrebo was the first Swedish town in which the Reformation was formally established (1529). The mineral springs of Adolfsberg are in the vicinity. Pop. 4237.

—The lake greatest length, N to S 98 m., greatest breadth, 57 m., consists generally of undulating plains, watered by numerous streams, and containing many lakes. The only hills distinct in the N. where there are several forests, and valuable iron and other mines. The pasture near fine cattle. The only exports of any consequence are iron and timber transported either to Stockholm or Gothenburg. Pop. 118,842.

OREGON, a territory of the U. States, W coast, America lat. 42° to 49° N.; lon. 109° to 124° W., bounded, N. by British America, E. the Rocky Mountains, separating it from the Indian possessions; S. Utah and California, and W. the N. Pacific Ocean, length, E. to W., 600 m.; breadth, 480 m., area, 241 480 sq. m. The coast-line, which has an extent of 650 m., is generally rugged and precipitous but so little indented as not to contain above three or four harbours. The interior consists of wide and elevated plateaus, which, in the E., abut on the Rocky Mountains, and are intersected by other two great ranges, dividing the whole territory into three distinct portions. The first of these portions stretches N. to S. along the Pacific, and E. from it for a width of 100 m. to 150 m.; and is thus bounded in by a lofty mountain-chain, which is called the Cascade Range, and occupies the whole breadth of the territory from S. W. to N. E. The other two portions, much more irregular in shape, are formed by a range which, breaking off from the Rocky Mountains, nearly at right angles, stretches W., under the successive names of the Salmon River Mountains, the Elmo Mountains, and the Klamath, or Klamath, and, finally bending round to the S. W., becomes linked to the Cascade Range. The loftiest summits occur in the Henry Mountains, where heights of 6000 ft are not uncommon. The highest elevation of the Cascade Range does not exceed 4000 ft. The territory has been too imperfectly explored to furnish a correct idea of its capabilities, but there seems every reason to believe that, though the quantity of arable land is comparatively small, the pastures are large enough, and rich enough, to support immense herds of cattle that the forests abound with pines of almost unrivaled magnificence, many individual trees having a girth of 45 ft., and a height of 300 ft., and that the metalliferous fields which have made California so famous, will yet be traced into Oregon. The largest river is the Columbia (which see) which enters Oregon near the centre of the N. frontier, winds through it first very easterly S. E. W., and then more directly W., to its mouth in the Pacific, receiving in its course the drainage of the greater part of the territory. The settlements yet made have been chiefly along the banks of this river and in the N. W., along a remarkable chain of creeks, called Paget Sound, and the heavy crops of grain which have been raised have found a ready market, in consequence of the extraordinary demand created by the gold-diggers of California. The far larger part of the interior is still in the hands of the trapper and hunter, to whom the immense quantities of wild animals have furnished profitable occupation. In 1850 the whole population was not estimated at more than 18,393, but many villages and settlements of considerable proportions have already sprung up. One of them, regarded as the capital, and named Oregon City, is situated on the Willamette, about 30 m. above its junction with the Columbia, in the W. portion of the territory between the Pacific and the Cascade Range, but being 2 m. above the Clackamas Rapids, has no direct communication with the ocean, so that another village, 12 m. below the falls, is regarded as its port. Oregon, taken in its fullest extent, reaches to the parallel of 54° 40' N., but by the treaty of partition, in 1848, all to the N. of 49° was declared to belong to Great Britain.

OREGON RIVER, a river, N. America. See COLUMBIA.

OREGRUND a seaport in Sweden, lin and 71 m. N. Stockholm, on the strait which separates Grassö from the mainland. It is defended by some outworks, has a small harbour with good depth of water but little trade. Pop. 600.

OREL, or Orlov, a gov. Russia, bounded N. by Tula and Kaluga, N. W. Smolensk, W. and S. W. Gennigol, S. Kozlov, S. E. and E. Voronezh, and N. E. Tambov lat 51° 50' to 54° N. lon. 33° 40' to 38° 50' E. greatest length, N. N. W. to S. S. E., 263 m. greatest breadth, 112 m. least breadth, 28 m. area, 12,740 geo. sq. m., cap. Orel. Though generally flat, it has high and is intersected by several ridges of limestone, between which deep romantic valleys occasionally occur. The river banks, also, are usually high, though sparingly wooded. The W. and larger portion of the government, is watered by the Desna, and several tributaries, and belongs to the basin of the Dnieper; the central and N. portion, watered by the Oka, which here has its source, belongs to the basin of the Volga, the whole of the E. portion is drained by the Sema and its tributaries, and belongs to the basin of the Don. The soil, though somewhat light, yields all kind of corn, far beyond what is required for home consumption. Large quantities of excellent hemp, a little flax, and some good hops and tobacco. Cattle are numerous and considerable attention is paid to the rearing of stock, and improving the breed, particularly of horses. Manufactures have made very little progress, and are almost entirely confined to articles of primary necessity, but the trade is considerable, and includes large exports of corn, flour, flax, hemp, honey, iron, steel, and ironware. Education, nominally under the superintendence of the university of Moscow is in a very neglected state. There is only one printing-press within the government, and it belongs to the crown. The inhabitants are very industrious, and generally in good circumstances; but they have little enterprise. Pop. (1850) 1,588,000.

ORELLA, a town in Russia, cap. above gov. on the Oka, 901 m. S. E. W. Moscow. It is defended by an old fortress and is divided into three quarters, has narrow streets, either not paved at all, or paved badly, and houses generally of wood. It was almost entirely destroyed by fire in 1848, when 1337 houses, 50 of them of stone, four bridges, and immense quantities of grain, and other merchandise, were destroyed. Previous to the fire, there were 20 churches, 18 of them of stone, but several even of them suffered greatly. It has manufactures of linen, tanneries, ropewalks, worsted-mills, &c., but depends chiefly on trade, for which it possesses admirable facilities, standing on a navigable river, in the centre of a fertile country, and possessing direct communication, by water, with the Baltic Black Sea, and Caspian. It hence forms a great central entrepot for the trade which is carried on with all these quarters, and, in particular, is a principal purveyor of corn, cattle, and other provisions, both for St. Petersburg and Moscow. Orel is the see of a bishop; possesses an ecclesiastical seminary and a gymnasium; and has several important fairs. P. (1840) 32,600; (1851) 25,580.

ORELL, or Orlov, a sluggish, muddy river, Russia, which rises near the S. frontier of gov. Kharkov, flows S. W. across gov. Poltava, and joins a bank Dnieper, 35 m. W. N. W. Ekaterinodar total course, 180 m.

ORELLANA, a name given to the Amazon (which see).

ORELLANA (La Viza), a tn. Spain, Extremadura, prov. and 60 m. E. Badajoz, on a slope near the Guadiana, with an ancient church, a palace erected in the 14th century a Dominican monastery in ruins, a townhouse, prison, primary school, and manufactures of woollen work. Pop. 1765.

ORELLA, a rd. and soon France, dep. Savoie, prov. Maurienne, on the Arve 10 m. E. F. Marilieu with a church, iron mines, and a trade in dairy produce. Pop. 1120.

ORENBURG a gov. Russia partly in Europe and partly in Asia, bounded N. by gov. Perm, N. W. Viatka, W. Kasan, Simbirsk and Saratov, S. W. Astrakhan, S. the Caspian Sea, S. E. and E. the steppes of the Kurgis, and N. E. Tobolsk, greatest length N. W. to S. E., 800 m. breadth about 450 m., area, 89,600 geo. sq. m. cap. I. The surface is greatly diversified consisting partly of lofty mountain ranges, partly of elevated plateaus, and partly of low and marshy plains. The principal mountain chain is that of the Ural, which, entering the government in the N. traverses it in a S. but somewhat circuitous direction, and divides it into two unequal portions. The E. portion by far the smaller of the two, belongs wholly to the basin of the Arctic Ocean. Its principal rivers are the Tobol, Aluga, Or and Mysa. It contains numerous lakes, all, however of small dimensions and is extensively occupied by swamps and morasses. The W. portion belongs to the basin of the Caspian which receives its waters partly through the Baikal, Savara and other tributaries of the Volga, but to a much larger extent directly by the Ural, and its tributaries Or, Balkara, Ilek, &c. A considerable part of the government is densely wooded, but a larger part is occupied by immense steppes, on which trees are rare and natural pastures are roamed over by vast herds of cattle and sheep. The best agricultural districts are on the N. W. where the surface is composed of hill and valley and the soil consists generally of a black fertile loam, capable of raising all kinds of grain, and actually raising it in such abundance notwithstanding the very imperfect culture it receives, that a considerable export into the neighbouring governments takes place. The minerals are extremely valuable, and furnish a large source of revenue to the State. They include the precious metals, particularly gold which abounds along the whole chain of the Urals and in the plains on either side of it, but especially on the E., copper, iron, and salt. The working of these and the different operations connected with them, employ a great number of hands, but manufactures properly so called, have made little progress, though many home made articles are very beautiful, especially light worsted shawls and other fabrics made by the females, similar to those wrought in the Ordnay and Shetland islands of Scotland. The trade, however particularly with the nomadic and other tribes, is very extensive. The principal articles are corn, horses, cattle, sheep, hides, furs, wax, metals, salt, tallow, and fish. Pop. (1850) 1,967,000.

ORENBURG, a fortified town, Russia, gov. Orenburg, on a slope above a bank Ural. It has miserably-garred, but spacious and regular streets, houses, though only a few are of stone, and the far greater numbers are wood, of a lively, pleasing appearance, a Protestant, a R. Catholic and eight Greek churches all built of stone, two mosques, governor's house, and public offices, exchange, merchant-house, custom-house, Bashkir caravansary, a handsome building, with two towers, where the business connected with the Bushkire is managed, but no trade is carried on, the agricultural school, and the district and military schools. The manufactures consist chiefly of woven cloth, part of it army clothing, leather, and soap, and there are very extensive establishments for smelting tin. The trade with the Khurges, and other inhabitants of the interior is very extensive. It is not, however, carried on within the town, but about 2 m. from it, to the N. of the bank of the Ural, where the caravans from Bokhara and Khiva stop and a caravanserai usually called the Tamschhof (Exchange court) or Menavard-rov, has been erected. In the vicinity of the Tamschhof are immense smelting-houses, in which, in the course of a summer, the tallow of more than 50,000 sheep is melted down. Pop. (1848), 7402.

ORENO a vil and com. Italy, Lombardy prov. Milan dist. and 1 m. W. by N. Vismara, with two churches, and a magnificent palace. Pop. 1427.

ORENSE, a prov. Spain, Galicia, bounded N. by prov. Lugo, S. Leon and Orense, E. Portugal, and W. Portugal and prov. Pontevedra, area, 4508 sq. m., cap. Orense. It is the smallest and poorest province in Galicia as watered by the Minho, Sil, Agra, and Arnoya, and agriculture, being in a comparatively advanced state, produces rye, maize in abundance, wheat, some oil wine, flax, chestnuts, potatoes, and all sorts of vegetables, besides cereals and building timber. The iron and copper are found and there are numerous fountains of medicinal waters the best and most frequented being those of Orreaga and Carbellido. The inhabitants are generally engaged in linen manufactures, in agriculture, and in rearing horned cattle and swine. Pop. about 380,000.

ORENSE, a city Spain cap. above prov., 73 m. S.E. Coruña, 1 hank Minho, here crossed by a bridge 135 ft. high, built in 1230, by Bishop Lorenzo. It has generally narrow and short, but well-closed streets, primary and advanced schools, a pretty theatre, a town-house in the principal square, which is surrounded by well-paved colonnades, a prison, an abattoir, and medicinal springs. A cathedral dedicated to St. Martin was built so early as 500 but the tower in 716 levelled Orense to the ground, and it remained a heap of ruins till 832 when it was rebuilt by Alonso el Casto. The present Gothic cathedral was erected by Bishop Alvaro, in 1240. There are several other churches as well as convents. Linen fabrics, leather shoemaking, &c. are made. From Orense, boats are valued Portugal with 28,000 men, and 78 cannon and fifteen he returned two or three months after being pursued by the Duke of Wellington. His army reduced to 19,500 stragglers, starved and almost naked. Pop. 4840.

ORENO, a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Genoa prov. and 8 m. from Chivasso with two churches, and a trade in milk, cattle, and wool. Pop. 1900.

ORESTE, a Papal States 24 m. N. Rome, on a mountain of the same name, the ancient Formosa, and about 2000 ft. above the level of the sea. Pop. 1460.

ORFAL, or ROMA [anc. Edessa and Jarmopolis] a town, Asia Turkey, prov. and 90 m. S.W. Diarbekir, lat. 37° 8' N. long. 38° 52' E. It is built on parts of two hills and in the valley between them, and is surrounded by a wall 3 m. or 4 m. in circuit. The streets are narrow, but paved, and comparatively clean, the houses and khans numerous, and there are a few excellent caravanserais. It has fifteen mosques and minarets, and manufactures of coarse wools and cotton cloths. Pop. estimated at 50,000, of which about 2000 are Christians, and 500 Jews.

ORFORD, a decayed bor. market tn. and par. England, on Suffolk 20 m. E. by N. Ipswich, on the Ore, near the N. Sea. It is much scattered and insignificant built but its church is a fine old structure, with a square embattled tower. At the W. end of the town are the remains of a Norman castle, supposed to have been built soon after the Conquest. Area of par. 4000 ac. including Havergate Island and God's grave. Pop. 1106. Near it are the two Orford Ness lights, 63 ft. above the sea; lat. 52° 4' 8" N. lon. 1° 24' 2" E.

ORGAOS, or ORGAO MOUNTAINS, a richly-wooded cordillera, Brazil, stretching in the direction of the sea-coast, E. to S.E. in prov. Rio-de-Janeiro, São Paulo, and Santa Catharina. The Parnahiba in São Paulo, and the Parnahiba in Rio-de-Janeiro, separate it from the Serra da Mantiqueira. It derives its name from a series of peaks to the N. of the town of Rio-de-Janeiro, which at a distance bear a considerable resemblance to the barrels of an organ.

ORGASWICK, par. Eng. Kent; 992 ac. Pop. 6. ORGAZ, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 16 m. S. Toledo with a courthouse, a well-fortified and picturesque castle, two schools, a parish church, two hermitages, and two cemeteries. Most of the springs are brackish. In the neighbourhood are numerous quarries of blue and white granite. Manufactures of coarse cloth and saltpetre, brandy, leather oil, and flour are carried on. Doña Ximena, the Gil's wife, was a native of this town. Pop. 7261.

ORGELET [anc. Orgeletum], a tn. France, dep. Jura, 11 m. S.E. Lons-le-Saulnier, partly surrounded by ancient walls. It has manufactures of leather and shawls. P. 1856.

ORGHEID-AB, or URGHEID, a river Afghanistan, rises in the mountains of Hamrah, 60 m. W. Ghuznee, passes S.E.W. not far from Candahar and about 50 m. below joins, or is joined by the Tarnak. The united stream, flowing W., joins the bank Helmand, after a total course of 160 m.

ORGHEBAN, or URGHEBAN, a river, Afghanistan, which rises in the mountains of Ghuznee, flows W. through a large district of the same name and, after a course of above 100 m., joins the bank Tarnak.

ORGIVA, or ORIVA, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 23 m. S.E. Granada with ruins several good fountains, two schools a court-yard, a prison, a parish church, formerly a mosque, with a fine portico and two very lofty towers, works for smelting antimony distilling brandy and making earthenware, five corn and six oil mills. Pop. 8397.

ORGON, a tn. France, dep. Dordogne-du-Rhône, 15 m. S.E. Avignon. Inhabitants mostly engaged in weaving. Pop. 1907.

ORGOSOLO a vil. Sardinia, div. Cagliari prov. and 8 m. S.E. Nuoro, with a church, a primary school and a house in corn, cattle, cheese, hides, and wool. Pop. 2150.

ORIO, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 82 m. N. Almería with irregular streets, badly-built houses a church several hermitages, and a school. Inhabitants engaged in agriculture and the manufactures of linen. Pop. 5600.

ORIA, or URTIANA, a tn. Naples, prov. Otranto 22 m. W. S.W. Brindisi, on three hills between two lakes. It has a castle and cathedral, both on commanding positions, and is the seat of a bishop. Pop. 4800.

ORIENT (L) a tn. France, SE. Lozère.

ORIENT-AN-TREKMAN, a vil. France, dep. Aisne 6 m. N. Verrerie, a bank Thom; well built, and the centre of a very extensive manufacture of weaker work of every description, much of which is exported. Pop. 1457.

ORIGNY (Sts-REMY) a vil. France, dep. Aisne, 10 m. E. St. Quentin, on the Oise. It has manufactures of lace, gauze, cashmere, and cotton stuffs. Pop. 2192.

ORIHUELA, a city Spain, prov. Valencia, 30 m. S.W. Alicante in a pleasant and fertile plain, on the Segura, 300 ft. above the sea. It is a long straggling place, with houses commonly three, some of them four stories. The front of the entrance to the city is that of the college gates, which opens towards Valencia, with its magnificent and lofty arch, on which is sculptured a pygmalion statue representing the tutelary genius of the city. Among the public buildings, the episcopal palace deserves especial notice, an edifice of modern architecture, whose front extends 300 paces. There are also various other buildings occupied by men of rank and wealth, which, from their size and architecture may be called palaces. In the archives of the court-house are valuable records, going back, with some interruptions, to A.D. 1509.

forming more than 1000 volumes; the prison, beside one of the heracles, is large and secure, but rather unhealthy; the cathedral is a small and overcharged Gothic edifice, the principal chapel is one of the three parish churches, that of Santiago, is a miracle of art. The Colegio de Predicadores is a fine building of great extent, with spacious cloisters, and a beautiful chapel. The city abounds with monasteries, nunneries and hermitages; and has a theatre, a university, a normal and other schools, a founding hospital, and various other charitable institutions, and several promenades and fountains. The country around is renowned for fertility. Agriculture is therefore the chief occupation of the inhabitants, but the arts and mechanical trades which pertain to a large and important town, also flourish. It has manufactures of lake, scum, leather, salt-petre, silk for velvets, plush and hemp, with a silk dye-works, and three for cotton, linen and hemp; eight water-mills for corn, 13 wind-mills, and 46 oil-mills. Orinuela was the Gothic Orredia, and was well defended after the battle of the Gaudale. Theodora here made a stand, and by dressing up the women as soldiers on the ramparts, obtained excellent terms from Abulcazar, and retained his sovereignty for life. Pop. 17,452.

ORIKHOVA, a N. European Turkey, Roumelia, r. bank Mariza, 35 m. from its mouth in the Grecian Archipelago N W from the Gulf of Enez; the son of a Greek archbishop.

ORINOCO (French Orénoque) a large river of S. America, Venezuela. It rises in the Sierra del Parima, near lat. 8° 40' N, lon 64° W. Flows W by S. to lat. 8° 10' N, lon. 66° 20' W, about 30 m. The village of Esmeralda, where it bifurcates part of its waters under the name of the Casiquari (which see), taking a S E W course, and falling into the Rio Negro, and part, retaining the name Orinoco taking a W N W course to San Fernando, about lat. 4° N, lon. 68° 10' W. thence it flows first S. N. then turns with a long sweep N. E. afterwards E. N. E. passing the town of Angostura and falls into the Atlantic by numerous different mouths, between lat. 8° 40' and 10° N. Its whole length being about 1556 geo. m. and the area of its basin 255,000 sq. m. The principal affluents of this great stream descending from its sources are, from the left, the united stream of the Atabapo and Guaviare, which joins about lat. 4° N, lon 68° 10' W. the Meta at lat. 8° 20' N, the Aracata at lat. 7° 40' N and the Apure at lat. 7° 35' N. Flow of these tributaries are larger than the Delta. Those from the right are the Ventuari, which joins the Orinoco about 40 m. E. of the junction of the Atabapo, the Cauca, and the Caron, which unite with it at lat. 7° 45' and 8° N respectively.

Two remarkable rapids occur in the upper parts of the Orinoco called the Atures and Maypures, or Apuras, the one in lat. 5° 8' N. or about 80 m. below the junction of the Atabapo and Guaviare with the Orinoco the other about 35 m. lower down. These rapids consist of a countless number of high cascades descending each other like steps, and where numerous islands and rocks so retard the bed of the river, that out of a breadth of 8000 ft. there often only remains an open channel of 20 ft. in width. Often, in attempting to pass these rapids, the canoes of the natives are dashed in pieces against the rocks, the men having then to disengage themselves by bleeding bodies from the wreck and from the whirling force of the torrent, and to gain the shore by swimming. From these rapids the river is navigable to its mouth. At a distance of 560 m. from its mouth, this majestic river has still a breadth of 6765 yards, or above 8 m. Its waters rise from April to October attaining their greatest height in July and August, which in the Upper Orinoco is 80 ft. to 86 ft. and at Angostura 34 ft. to 25 ft., but in one confined place they are said to rise 120 ft. above the usual level. The vast plains through which the river flows, comprising an area of 160,000 sq. m. are at this season to a great extent overflowed. Both banks of the stream are densely wooded and like the river itself full of animal life. The numerous channels by which the Orinoco lately finds its way to the sea begin to branch off from the main stream upwards of 100 m. from the coast. The most E. and widest of these branches runs directly E., and reaches the ocean by the mouth called Boca de Navio, or Cano Navio, between Point Barma on the S. and the islands of Cangrejos on the N., which are more than 20 m. apart. In front of this mouth is a bar, on which is 17 ft. water, and which is supposed to be nearly 3000 fathoms across. In the month of April, when the water is lowest, the tides are perceptible in the river as far up as Angostura, a distance of more than 240 m. from the sea. The other branches which run E. and divide the delta of the Orinoco into numerous low islands, are imperfectly known.

ORIG. a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. Lodi, dist. and 4 m. W Casal Pusterlo near r. bank Lambro, with a church, and a considerable trade in Lodi cheese. P. 1066.

ORTOLO (anc. Portus Ursidii) a vil. Italy, Naples, prov. Calabria-Citra, dist. and 35 m. N E. Castrovinci, with a fine villa of the Altieri family.

ORISSA, a maritime prov. Hindoostan, belonging originally to the Deccan, and now included in the presidency of Bengal and Madras, lat. 18 to 22° N. length, roughly estimated at 400 m., breadth, about 70 m. It includes Orissa proper, now wholly comprehended in Orissade, and several other petty states and is bounded N. by prov. Bengal, E. the Bay of Bengal, S. the Godavery, and W. prov. Guiderman. The surface along the shore is in general low and sandy, and is throughout wild rugged and uncultivated, consisting of steep precipitous, dense forests, pathless deserts, and swampy, pestilential valleys. The inhabitants are composed chiefly of Orissas the conquerors of the country who speak a tolerably pure dialect of Sanskrit, and of wild hill tribes called Ooles, Khonds, and Sours. The largest rivers are the Godavery, Mahanuddy, and Subarnucka, which are well stocked with fish, and swarm with alligators the chief towns are Cuttack, Jaggannath and Balasore.

ORISTANO, a tn. in Sardina, div. and 30 m. N N W Cagliari about 1 m. from l. bank Tiri and about 2 m. from the large gulf of its name. It consists of the town proper inclosed by ancient walls, flanked with towers and of several suburbs in the face of a bushop, has a court of law and several public offices, a cathedral, a plain market square, several other churches, a gymnasium a normal school a diocesan seminary Franciscan monastery, a school, hospital, and minor features of iron ware pottery arms, waggons and agricultural implements, an active fishery several distilleries and a trade in corn, wine oil cheese, and cattle. Pop. 6041.

The sul is 10 m. in length from Cape San Marco to Cape Trasca, and 5 m. in breadth, and receives the river Uratano, or Tiri.

ORIVAI, a vil. and com. France, dep. Seine-Inférieure, 12 m. S. E. Rouen, l. bank Seine, with manufactures of woollen cloth, dye-works, and a considerable trade in walnuts, for which the district is famous. Pop. 1614.

ORLYEBI, a lake, Russia, Finland, about Kuopio, forming one of the remarkable chain of lakes in the S. E. of the principality. It is of very irregular shape, about 25 m. long communicates with the Purvener and contains several large, and a great number of small islands.

ORIXA, an Isl. Seychelles Archipelago, see Duxia.

ORIXIMBA, a river Brazil. see Trombetas.

ORIZABA, a tn. Mexico, dep. and 65 m. S W Vera Cruz with wide street, and well-paved streets, manufactures of coarse cloth and several tanneries. The valley in which the town is situated is overhounded by verdant forests and 5 m. or 6 m. N from the town rises the lofty summit of the mountain Orizaba, 17,878 ft. above the sea.

ORKHUN, a river Mongolia, rises in the Khangai mountains about lat. 47° 10' N, lon. 101° 30' E. whence it flows N. E. and joins the Selenge, at lat. 50° N lon. 103° 30' E. entire course, about 500 m.

ORKAFY, and SHELVAN, the most N. co. Scotland, comprising two groups of islands called respectively the Orkney Islands and Shetland Islands (which see). Pop. 1851) 62,538.

ORKNEY ISLANDS (French and Latin, Oronides, Italian, Oronidi) a group, lying off the N. coast of Scotland, and separated from it by a channel called the Pentlands Firth, about 6 m. to 8 m. broad. They extend from lat. 56° 47' to 59° 20' N, lon 2° 44' and 8° 23' W, aggregate area, 600 sq. m. or 284,000 ac. of which about 34,000 are under culture. There are in all about thirteen islands of considerable size, with a number of smaller dispersed over the archipelago. Among the larger, the principal are Pomona or Mainland, the largest of the group Hoy, R. and N. Ronaldshay, Westray, Sanday, Eday, Burray, Nessay, and Shapness. Of the whole, about twenty-seven are usually inhabited, although the number varies frequently, in consequence of single families taking up their abodes in them for seasons or two and then deserting them. Hoy is the only island of the group that can be called mountainous, and has the highest elevation is but 1600 ft. None of the rest have hills of any considerable height. Nearly all the larger islands are of exceedingly irregular form; being, in many instances, so worn and pumated by the sea, as to present rather a series of crooked and shapeless peninsulas, projecting in all directions, than a group of compact insular bodies. In some cases, the coast of these islands are flat and sandy; in others, bold and rocky. These precipices are highest on the W. side reaching, in the island of Hoy, the height of 7000 ft. perpen-humid. With exception of a small granitic district, near Strommen, the rocks belong to the old red sandstone formation. The alluvial deposits are neither extensive nor interesting. There is abundance of clay, and, in most portions, of peat-moss in many places near, and in some bog-iron-ore. In the peat-mosses, roots of large trees, head-stems of oaks, &c., are frequently found showing that forests formerly existed there, although at present the climate is entirely unfavourable to the growth of trees. There are no streams bearing the name of rivers in any of the islands, but springs of good water are abundant; and there are many lakes, the largest of which, Strommen or Stromsøen, in the island of Porsuun, is 14 m. in circumference. Chalybeate springs are not uncommon. The climate is moist, but not cold. In winter storms of sleet and rain are frequent, but in summer the weather is generally fine and steady. Agriculture, though it has made considerable progress of late is still in a backward state. The common breeds of sheep and cattle are very small, but some earnest endeavours are now being made to improve them. Rabbits and poultry are numerous. The hunting and other pleasures of the country, in some part, the absence or defective development of other resources, and large numbers of labourers are annually sent to London. The principal manufactures carried on in these islands is that of straw-plait for ladies' bonnets in which a few years since, about 2000 girls were constantly employed although, thirty years previously upwards of three times that number were so employed, a good deal of wire-wrought hosiery is also made by females. The building of boats, and making of mills, wigs, and cordage, may also be named amongst the manufactures of Orkney.

ORLÉANS, a town, Germany, Sax-Altenburg on the Saale here crossed by a bridge, 15 m. S. E. Weimar, with two churches, the remains of an old castle, and tile-works. Pop. 1154.

ORLÉANS (Latin, Augusta Treverorum) a former prov. France, which, after forming part of Gallia Lugdunensis, under the Romans, was first incorporated into the kingdom of Neustria, and then annexed to the crown of France, in 987 by Hugh Capet. Philip of Valois erected it into a duchy and gave it to Philip, his son. On the death of this prince without children, Charles VI. gave it to his brother Louis, whose successors enjoyed it till the death of Charles VIII., when it again became united to the crown, in the person of Louis XII. in 1498. Louis XIII. gave it to his brother Gaston with whose successors it remained till the revolution of 1794. It now forms dep. Loir-et-Cher and Loiret, and parts of dep. Eure-et-Loir and Nievre.

ORLÉANS (Latin, Genabum or Aurelia), a town, France, cap. dep. Loiret, 88 m. S. S. W. Paris, with which it is connected by railway, a bank Loire, here crossed by a magnificent bridge of nine arches. From this bridge a splendid street, called Rue Royale, leads into the very centre of the town, and terminates in its finest square, the Place du Martroi, one corner of which is adorned with a very indifferent bronze statue of the Maid of Orléans, in the guise of an Amazon. Several other war streets and squares have been formed of late years, but the greater part of the old town is very indifferently built of wood, and has narrow ill-paved, and dirty streets. There are several fine promenades, chiefly in the line of the old ramparts, which have been levelled down, and are well planted. Both sides of the river are lined with handsome quays; and from the extremity of the bridge, on the l. bank, a splendid avenue leads to the pretty suburb of Olivet, which is occupied by handsome villas and nursery grounds. The principal edifice is the cathedral, a Gothic structure, rebuilt in its present form in the 16th century and remarkable for the purity and chasteness of its architecture. Its W. front consists of three rather plain pointed portals, surmounted by three rose-windows, and flanked by two elegant towers, each 180 ft. The nave is flanked by double aisles. The only other buildings deserving of notice are the church of St. Jean, with a portal and nave in the 14th style, and under it a Renaissance crypt; the Palais de Justice with a facade adorned with four Doric columns, the Musée, containing a curious collection of local antiquities, the theatre house of Agnes Sorel and Francis I., both richly decorated the prison, barracks, and general hospital. Orleans is the see of a bishop, and seat of an appeal court for depts. Loir-et-Cher, Loiret, and Loire-et-Louire; and possesses a court of first resort and commerce, a chamber of commerce, and exchange, a conseil de prud'hommes, a university academy, college, gratuitous school of design and architecture, diocesan seminary, secondary ecclesiastical school, public library, botanical garden, and society of sciences, belles-lettres, and art. It has manufactures, not important, of hosiery, hats, woollen covers, small shot, bronzemongery, pottery, pewter vessels, chemical products, glass, &c., and several cordage and cotton mills, numerous sugar-refineries, vinegar-works, breweries, and distilleries, and a trade, not on the increase, in wine, brandy, corn, flour, fruit-cakes, straw-work, timber, iron, salt, and colonial produce. Orleans was the capital of the Goths, under the name of Genabum, when it was taken and burnt by Caesar. Under the Romans it rose to great importance, and changed its name to Aurelia, probably from the Emperor Aurelian. In 451 it was besieged by Attila, king of the Huns, at the head of nearly half-a-million of men, but the Roman general, Aetius, obliged him to raise the siege, and defeated him in a great battle, in which about 160,000 Huns are said to have been slain. On the decline of the Roman empire, it was seized by Clovis. During the 9th and 10th centuries, it was repeatedly taken and pillaged by the Normans, but the most memorable event in its history took place in 1428, when the English besieged it, and found all their efforts baffled by the heroic achievements of the Maid of Orléans. Pop. (1859), 42,519.

ORLÉANS (ISLAND OR), an Isl. Lower Canada, in the St. Lawrence, below Quebec, 25 m. long, and 5 m. broad. It is well wooded, and extremely fertile in almost every part and forms an agreeable place of residence or resort. It is, in consequence, frequented by numerous visitors.

ORLESTONE, par. Eng. Kent 1835 ac. Pop. 824

ORLETON par. Eng. Hereford 2803 ac. P. 618

ORLINGBURY, par. Eng. Northampton, 1900 ac. P. 230

ORLOV, two ts. Russia:—1, Gov. and 80 m. N. E. Voronezh; 2, Gov. and 80 m. W. S. W. Viatka; 3, bank

Viatska. Pop. (1859), 9502

ORLOVATZ a vil. Hungary Banat, so. and 50 m. S. S. W. Temeswar, with a church and three mills. P. 1876.

ORMEA, a town, Madras State, div. Coim. prov. and 16 m. S. Mondovi; bank Tanjore, about 2000 ft. above the sea. It is surrounded by ancient walls, in a very dilapidated state, has a large handsome parish, and several other churches; an old castle, public school, and hospital, manufactures of candles, and coarse woollens, an iron and two saw mills, marble quarries, and a trade in corn, wine, chestnuts, salt, timber, cattle and dairy produce. Pop. 5100

ORMESBY, a vil. and par. England co. York (N. Riding), 7 m. E. S. E. Hookham. It contains several well built houses, and has an ancient Norman church. At Port Cleveland, at the mouth of the Tees, about 2 m. from the village, an extensive trade in grain, coal, &c., used to be carried on. Area of par. 7500 ac. Pop. 851

ORMISTON, a vil. and par. Scotland, co. Haddington. The village, 6 m. S. W. Haddington, a bank Tyne, consists of one well kept street, in the centre of which is an ancient cross, is well built, has an Established and a Free church, and three schools. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Pop. 861. Area of par. 8245 ac. Pop. 811

ORMSBY, four par. England:—1, (St. Margaret and St. Michael, including Southey), Norfolk; 2761 ac. P. 1178. —2, (North or New), Lincoln; 2761 ac. P. 181. —3, (South), Lincoln; 2777 ac. Pop. 261

ORMSID, par. Eng. Westmorland, 2480 so. P. 196

ORMSKIRK, a market town and par. England, co. Lancaster. The town, 12 m. N. by S. Liverpool, on the E. Lancashire railway, is clean and well built, has a large church, with a tower and steeple detached, and contains the burying-place of the Earls of Derby, places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, Unitarians, and M. Catholics, a free grammar school, and several other edifices. It has long been famous for its glass-making, but the chief occupations are silk-weaving by hand-loom, rope-making, and brewing. Pop. (1851) 5548. Area of par. 80,832 ac. Pop. 16,490.

ORMUZ, or HORMAZ, an isl. Persian Gulf, N. side, near its entrance; lat. 27° 5' N., lon. 56° 25' E., about 15 m. in circumference. It has a rugged appearance, is entirely destute of vegetation has several of the high peaks white from an incrustation of salt and abounds in iron, copper-ore, and red-lead. Ormaiz was once the emporium of all the riches of India, the receptacle for the goods of Sumatra and Bok harr, and for the manufactures of Europe and Asia. During its prosperity the Portuguese had possession of it and ships from all parts of the world frequented it, but it has long since been quite neglected. The town of Ormaiz stood on a plain on the N side of the island, though now only a few scattered ruins, it once contained 4000 houses.

ORNAIN, a river, France, rises in N E of dep Haute-Marne, flows generally N W across dep. Meuse, past Bar le-Duc, and in dep. Marne joins r bank Marne, 3 m N N W Vary total course, 90 m, not navigable.

ORNANS [anc. Orancus], a tn. France, dep Doubs, 11 m S.E. Besancon, on both sides the Loue, here crossed by two stone bridges. It has regular streets, a large and handsome church, of the 15th century; an elegant townhall, prison commodious and extensive hospital, ecclesiastical treasury, library, and, on an eminence N W of the town the ruins of a vast and magnificent castle of the Counts of Burgundy, dismantled in 1678. Tanning and the manufacture of stained chaises, are carried on to a considerable extent. Pop. 3069.

ORVE (Latin, Ordava), a river, France, which rises in dep Orne, about 15 m N.E. Alencon; flows circuitously W N W, enters dep. Calvados, turns gradually to the N E, passes Caen, where it becomes navigable; and, about 12 m below falls into the English Channel total course, 90 m.

ORNE, a dep. N W France, bounded N by dep. Calvados, N E. Eure, E. Eure-et-Loire, S. Sarthe and Mayenne, and W. Manche, greatest length E W 74 m. average breadth about 40 m. area, 2329 sq m. It is traversed, E to W, by a chain of hills, not exceeding 2000 ft. high and much broken throughout by minor ramifications, which enclose between their ridges a great number of verdant and well-watered valleys. The principal streams are, in the N., the Tongues, Dive, and Orne which proceed directly to the English Channel and, in the S., the Ille, Sarthe, Varenne, and Mayenne, belonging to the basin of the Loire. None of these streams is navigable. Lakes are numerous, but they are all of comparatively small dimensions. More than one-half of the whole surface is arable, one-fifth meadow, and nearly one-eighth under wood, including orchards and gardens only one thirty-fourth is waste. The arable land appears to be only of indifferent fertility, for, notwithstanding its great extent, the grain raised does not furnish more than two-thirds of the home consumption. The principal crops are oats, buckwheat, and rye. The pastures, particularly in the lower valleys, are excellent; and not only graze the young stock raised within the department, but also feed great numbers of cattle which are imported from less favoured districts. Apples grow well, and large quantities of excellent cider are made. Considerable attention is paid to the dairy, and in no department is the breed of horses, for which Normandy has long been famous, to be found in greater purity. The pen of animal is iron, which is wrought extensively in several cantons; and besides supplying a considerable number of blast-furnaces, supplies the raw material for the most important branches of industry within the department. Among these may be mentioned the manufacture of steel, needles and pins. Excellent porcelain clay also, is found in many quarters, and has led to the establishment of numerous potteries. A kind of smoky quartz, obtained in the hills of the S. furnishes the precious stones well known under the name of Alencon diamonds. The principal textile fabrics are linen and hempen cloth. Orne is divided into four arrondissements—Alencon, the capital, Argentan, Domois, and Mortagne subdivided into 38 cantons, and 811 communes. Pop. (1823) 459,884.

ORNOVAZZO, a tn. Italy Piedmont, div and 87 m. N Novara, prov. Pallanza, 1 bank Poce with a handsome church, built entirely of white marble, of which there are large quarries in the vicinity. Pop. 1880.

ORONATY, an Isl. Honduras. See COLOMBIA.

ORONTES, a river, Syria. See ASANY.

OROPESA, a vil. Spain, New Castle, 68 m. W Toledo, with a townhouse, a prison, a palace, and castle, an hospital, a Latin choir, two schools, a fine chapel, two universities, a parish church, and a hermitage. Pop. 1708.

OROPERA, a city Bolivia. See COCHABAMBA.

OROSBI, a vil. Isl. Sardinia, div Cagliari, prov. and 11 m. N E Nuoro, r bank Cedrina. It has a principal, and several minor churches, a primary school, and hospital; manufactures of confectonary, and a considerable trade in corn, wine, wool, and cheese. Pop. 1905.

OROBENGA, or OROBENGA, one of the Friendly Is., S. Pacific, belonging to Navigator's Group lat. 14 14 S., lon. 169° 54' W., about 8 m long of coral formation.

OROBHAZA, a tn. Hungary, co. Buda, 40 m. N E Szegedin in a fertile district. It contains a Protestant and a R Catholic church, and has some trade in cattle. P. 9681.

OROSZI (Hagy), a market tn. Hungary, co. Nagred, 84 m. N Pesth. It has a market, once important, though now much decayed and a banking establishment. P. 1998.

OROSZLANKO a market in Hungary. See FENCSKA.

OROSZLANY KEÓ a vil. Hungary Hilder Domb, co. Komara, on the Pense with a Protestant church, an oil and two other mills, linseed, and a potash-factory P. 1578.

OROSZLANYOS, or OROSLANOS (O and U), a vil. Hungary, Thither Theiss, co. Torontal 7 m. from Szegedin, in a fertile district. It contains a Greek church. Pop. 3208.

OROSZYAI, or KALASZNE a market tn. Hungary Thither Domb, co. Walsburg, 60 m. S.W. Presburg with a church, and a fine chateau. Pop. 3094.

OROTAVA a tn. Canary Is. in N.W. of Isl. Tenerife formerly the capital and court of the principal kingdoms of the Guanches. It is regularly built, and the streets are arranged in the form of an amphitheatre. It has an hospital, two primary schools, two parish churches, one of them a beautiful edifice with three naves containing a magnificent marble tabernacle brought from Greece, numerous hermitages, and in a delicious valley E of the town a botanic garden, established for acclimatizing the plants of America, and those transplanting them to Spain. Orotava is the native place of the poet Iriarte. Pop. 8315.

OROTELLA or ORTELLA a vil. Isl. Sardinia, prov. Nuoro, 1 bank Tisno; with an ancient church, a primary school and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth 1186.

ORP' LE-GRAND, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on the Little Gette, 23 m. E.E. Brussels. It has many factories of cotton twist, two breweries, and two flour-mills. Pop. 1478.

ORPHANO a small maritime tn. European Turkey Macedonia, N.E. shore, Gulf of Comotene, lat. 40° 48' N, lon. 23° 56' E. near the site of the ancient Amphipolis. It has manufactures of cordage, and is guarded by a fortress.

ORPHANO (GOLP) European Turkey. See COMOTENE.

ORPHIR, par. Scot. Orkney, 13,000 ac. P. 1167.

ORPINGTON par. Eng. Kent, 8477 ac. P. 1508.

ORRILL a filthy vil. Isl. Sardinia, div. and N.E. Cagliari with several minor churches and a little trade in agriculture and dairy produce. Pop. 1704.

ORRA, a vil. and par. Sweden, lat. and 52 m. N Falun on Lake Orsa, which communicates with the Elva. A quarry in the vicinity furnishes the best grinding-stones in Sweden.

ORSARA a vil. and com. Naples, prov. Capriana, dist. and 6 m. N W Bovino. Pop. 4200.

ORSCHEL (Nimetz), a vil. Prussia prov. Saxony gov. Erfurt, circle Weimar on the Linke, with a church, a saw and a flour mill. Pop. 1502.

ORSETT par. Eng. Essex 4134 ac. P. 1592.

ORSHIA, a tn. Russia, gov. and 47 m. N Moulva at the confluence of the Orshia with the Dnieper. It has three Greek churches a monastery, founded by the Princess Sophia sister of Peter the Great three R. Catholic monasteries, a synagoga, and an active trade. Pop. (1851) 8198.

ORSH, a fort, Russia, gov. and S.E.E. Orenburg on a hill of juniper, near 1 bank Ural, a 114 ft above the confluence of the Or. It is a place of considerable strength, and has a handsome church and near it is an observatory, where Euler made observations on the passage of Venus. The inhabitants consist chiefly of 1200 Cosacks and 500 Tartars. The caravans from Asia to Orenburg have a station here.

ORSOVA (C) or ALU-ORSOVA, a market in Hungary, on the Walachian-Ruthenian military frontier, on the Danube, at the confluence of the Leerna, 30 m. S.E. Temeswar, and not far from the Turkish fortress of New Orsova. It is fortified; and has manufactures of Corbous leather. Pop. 990.

ORSOVA, ARDUBIA, or NEW ORSOVA, a tn. European Turkey, Servia, 80 m. E. Smederica, on an island of the Danube W. of Old Orsova. Both it and the island on which it stands are strongly fortified. Pop. 3800.

ORSOVY, a walled tn. Prussia, gov. and 11 m. N N W Düsseldorf, on the Rhine. It has two churches, manufactures of woollen stuffs, cashmere, and hats; tanneries dye-works, and vogue-works some shipping, and a trade in wool. Pop. 1468.

ORSHVIN par Eng Notts 1940 ac. P. 461

ORT, several places, Austria, particularly a market tn. 17 m. E. Vienna, on the Fadenbach, an arm of the Danube with a church, an old castle, and a considerable trade in corn, cattle, eggs, and butter with Vienna. Pop. 1095

ORTA a tn. Italy Piedmont, div. and 25 m. N N W Nivara and on a mountain slope above the W. shore, Lake Orta. It is old, but well built, has three churches, and an hospital an elementary a ragged and an infant school manufactures of wax and tallow candles, and a trade in excellent wine. Pop. 1137

ORTA (Lake, Cherusa) a lake, kingdom of Italy, Piedmont, W. of Lake Maggiore, greatest length, N. to S. about 7 m., breadth, about $\frac{1}{2}$ m. By the Sirona it sends its waters N. to the Toce.

ORTE (anc. Theracum) a tn. Papal States, deleg. and 10 m. E. N. E. Viterbo, r. bank Tiber on the site of one of the military colonies of Augustus. It is the see of a bishop and has the ruins of a fine bridge which bears the name of Augustus. It is some extensive remains of bath and m.

ORTFASHIRE a tn. Prussia, gov. and 80 m. S. S. E. Königsberg, E. shore of a small lake with a castle, Protestant church, house of correction, manufactures of linen, and a trade in wool and cattle. Pop. 1981

ORTENBERG a tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, Oberhessen on the Nadder 25 m. N. E. Frankfurt with a castle, a church, and two mills. Pop. 1097

ORTENBURG a walled market in Lower Bavaria 10 m. W. Passau. It has a castle, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1501

ORTHILL, a tn. France, dep. Basses-Pyrénées, 24 m. N. W. Pau, on a hill above the Gave de Pau, here crossed by an old Gothic bridge which resisted the attempt of the French to blow it up as they were retreating before Wellington. The town has received numerous improvements within recent years, and is now well built, has a court of first resort, a communal college an ancient parish church, a handsome townhouse and a few remains of the old castle of Mirande, in which the princes of Béarn used to reside manufactures of woollen stuffs, copperware, and linseed-oil extensive tanneries, dye-works, slate quarries, flax and saw mills and a considerable trade in leather Bayona hams, feathers, wool flax, timber, horses, cattle, marble, &c. The French, under Soult, were here defeated by the British, under Wellington after a very severe contest. Pop. 5073

ORTLER-STRASSE, or ORTLER, a mountain, Tyrol, belonging to the North Alps, and forming the loftiest summit in the Austrian empire, having a height of about 14,500 ft. Its top was reached for the first time in 1804

ORTLERI a vil. Sardinia, div. Cagliari E. N. E. Oristano with a handsome church, a primary school, and a little trade in wine and mullat. Pop. 1692

ORTON, anc. pons Eng. -1, Cumberland 4277 ac. P. 519 -2 (Cherry or Orton Waterside) Hunts, 1850 ac. Pop. 805 -3, (on the Hill) Leicestershire 2290 ac. Pop. 880 -4 (Long or Orton Langdale), Hunts 2400 ac. P. 324

ORTON, or ORTON a market tn. and par. England, co. Westmoreland, 84 m. S. S. W. Appleby on a gentle acclivity, with a fine old parish church, a Methodist chapel, a grammar school, and girls school and near it is a copper-mine Area of par. 24,430 ac. Pop. 1458

ORTONA, a tn. and market, Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra, on the Amato, 11 m. E. Chieti. It has a cathedral, and several other churches and convents. Its port, at one time extensive, has ceased to exist, and vessels are obliged to anchor above a mile from the shore, in roads with ample depth of water and a good bottom, but badly sheltered. A great deal of wine is made in the neighbourhood. P. 8700.

ORTONOVY a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Quana, prov. and about 14 m. from Lavagna with two parish churches, a Latin and two elementary schools, and a trade in corn, wine, and oil. Pop. 2150

ORTEAND, a tn. Prussian Saxony gov. and 74 m. E. Merseburg, with two churches, an hospital, and manufactures of linen leather and glass. Pop. 1269

ORUBA, or ARUBA, an isl. W. India, belonging to Holland, off N. coast, Venezuela, 50 m. W. by N. Curaçao; lat. (N. point) 12° 28' N. lon. 70° 8' W. (N. point) It is about 20 m. long N. W. to S. E., by 8 m. broad, surrounded by rocks difficult of approach, generally story on the surface, though in some parts flat and sandy, yet has some good meadow lands, notwithstanding the want of water under which the island suffers. It yields water-melons pumpkins some maize, and feeds cattle and asses brought from Venezuela, and exported to the W. India Islands. Some good iron-ore and a little gold are found. Pop. mostly poor (1854) 8022

ORUAE a vil. Isl. Sardinia, prov. and N. E. Nuoro, with several churches, a primary school manufactures of woollen cloth, and a trade in it and in cattle, cheese, hides, and wool. Pop. 1808

ORURO a dep. Bolivia, divided into three provinces—Poopo, Oruro, and Chacabuco—all situated at the foot of the elevated table land bounded N. by dep. La Paz W. Peru E. dep. Potosí, and S. Potosí and Cochabamba. The Lake of Poopo 70 m. long and 12 m. to 15 m. wide, which receives, through the navigable stream of the Desaguadero, the waters of Lake Titicaca, lies wholly in this department. Lake Poopo has itself no outlet, and its waters are salt, but its banks are well peopled, and indeed the great number and careful construction of the ancient towns still remaining in this elevated district, clearly indicate that it was the most populous portion of the empire of the Incas. Pop. (1854) though much reduced, 118,000 of which two-thirds at least were Aztecans.

ORURO a tn. Bolivia, cap. above dep. on a bleak hill, in a metalliferous district, at an absolute height of 15,000 ft. lat. 18° S. lon. 67° 30' W. It is now surrounded by ruins, owing to the decline of the population, which is reduced to 5000 or less than a fifth of its former amount.

ORUSI, an isl. Sweden in the Ringer Mack, close to the coast of Göteborg, length, E. to W. 16 m., breadth, 10 m. It is generally low, and partly covered with bog, but the larger portion is covered by a strong but rich alluvium often several yards in depth productive both of heavy crops of corn and rich feeding pastures. The fisheries on the coast are valuable.

ORVETO (anc. Herbanum or Urbis Vetus) a tn. Papal States, cap. deleg. of same name, near the junction of the Paglia and Clitana, 60 m. N. N. W. Rome. It stands on a steep hill is walled, clean and well built and contains several fine palaces. The principal building is the cathedral one of the most interesting specimens of Italian Gothic, built of black and white marble, adorned without with fine mosaics, and within with a large collection of sculptures, and several fine paintings. After the cathedral the object of greatest attraction near Orvieto is St. Patrick's Wall, near the fortress, and about 1 m. from the town. The palace most deserving of notice are the Palazzo Qualtieri with a rich collection of cartoons by Domenico Antonio Annibaldi Caracci and other eminent masters and the Palazzo Petruccioli, with a fine collection of paintings. The episcopal palace and Jeani college are also more worthy. The trade is in cattle, tannin, and silk Orveto, from its strong position, has often proved an asylum to popes in troubled times, and no less than 22 are mentioned as having occasionally resided in it. Pop. 8310.

ORVIGO or ORVIGO a river, Spain, which rises in the N. of Leon flows S., passing a little to the W. of Benavente, and joins r. bank Esla, total course, 80 m.

ORWELL, par. Eng. Cambridge 1850 ac. P. 653

ORWELL, a par. Scot. Kilmor, 18,500 ac. P. 2569

ORWELL, a river England, which rises near the centre of co. Suffolk, a little N. E. of Stow Market, flows S. E. to Ipswich above which it is generally known by the name of Gipping, and enters the river of the Stour in forming the harbour of Harwich. Vessels of any size ascend within 3 m. of the town of Ipswich, and 500 tons to the town itself, and by means of improvements the navigation has been made practicable as far as Stow Upland bridge, near Stow Market.

ORZI VEACHI, a vil. and com. Italy, Lombardy, prov. Brescia, about 3 m. N. E. Orzi Novi with a church, manse, treasury, and rectory, and the remains of an old fortress. P. 1322.

ORZINOVI, or ORZINOVI, a vil Italy Lombardy prov and 18 m. S.W. Brescia, near the Olmo. It was once fortified, has a court of justice, and several public offices, two churches, a school, directory, and numerous mills. Pop. 4490

ORZINOVI, or ORZINOVI, a large city, Japan, 1st Nippon on the Yodo Gawa; lat. 34° 40' N; lon. 135° 35' E. It is one of the five cities held under the immediate government of the Shogun or military emperor, is fortified protected by a castle, and is said to contain about a hundred bridges over the Yodo Gawa and its various branching canals; its site was chosen of being able to levy from their own population alone, an army of 80 000 men. It has a race-course and a theatre, the latter very large and handsomely decorated. It is the point to which the few foreign goods brought into the country by the Dutch and Chinese are sent, and its own manufactures are considerable, and spoken of with praise. The Dutch traders, in their periodical visits to Yodo, receive here the goods they previously bespeak for their journey

ORZINOVI, a river, U. States, N. America, rises in the Indian territory, about lat. 38° 30' N lon. 98° E flows E. enters state Missouri, about lon. 94° 40' W proceeds still E. but later turns N. E., and falls into the Missouri, a little E. Jefferson; total course, about 280 m. It is 397 yards wide at its mouth, and navigable for steam-boats 300 m.

ORZINOVI a vil and com. Kingdom of Italy Piedmont, prov and 3 m. S. Pinerolo; bank Chisone with a handsome church, an ancient, strong castle, a school, an extensive silk-mill and a trade in silk, corn, and hemp. Pop. 1000

OSARIO a vil and com. Surinam States, div and S. Turin with a handsome church, and a trade in corn, hemp, and wool. Pop. 1400

OSBALDWINCK, par Eng York (N Riding) 1740 as Pop. 373

OSBOURNBY par Eng Lincoln 1760 as. P. 654

OSCACABALE, a vil and com. Austrian Italy, prov and 12 m. N.W. Cremona with a church. Pop. 1160

OSCHATZ, a walled town Saxony, 31 m. E. Leipzig. It has a law court, several provincial offices, two churches an hospital and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, tile-works, dye-works, and several woaded and other mills. The peace which put an end to the Seven Years War, was concluded here in 1763. Pop. 5774.

OSCHERSLEBEN, a Prussian Saxony gov and 21 m. S.W. Magdeburg, 1 bank Elbe, and on the branch railway to Halberstadt. It is walled has three gates, several provincial courts and offices a Protestant church a synagogue, tile-works, and several mills. Pop. 8775.

OSCHIRI, or OSCHIRI, a vil tel. Sardina prov and 10 m. N. Oseri, with a handsome church a primary school manufactures of bed covers, and a trade in corn, butter, and cheese. Pop. 3108

OSGATHORPE, par Eng. Leicester 1220 as. P. 248

OSGYA, or OSGYA, a vil Hungary Hither Danubia, co. Honch, 7 m. from Rima-Sombath, with two churches, a Protestant gymnasium, and manufactures of earthenware, in which the trade is considerable. Pop. 1163

OSHAWA, a vil Upper Canada, 80 m. E. N. E. Toronto and 3 m. N. Lake Ontario, in a well-cultivated district with three churches, and a considerable trade, for which an outlet is furnished by a harbour of the same name, on the lake. Pop. 1353, 1145

OSHELIA, a vil and com. Italy, Piedmont, div Geneva, prov and about 24 m. from Geneva, with a church, the remains of an old castle and manufactures of iron. P. 1400

OSILO a tn. tel. Sardina, div and 3 m. E. Sassari. It has several churches, two convents and a primary school manufactures of woollen and a trade in corn. Pop. 5068

OSIMA, a bay Japan. See OSAWARA

OSIMO (ans. Assumero) a tn. Mord. of Italy doing and 8 m. S.W. Ancona, strongly and advantageously situated on a height, overlooking a fertile and beautiful country. It is well built, has a cathedral several other churches; a town house, with a museum of antiquities collected in the vicinity, and an episcopal palace. Pop. about 7000

OSIO-DE BORZA and OSIO-DE BORZA two adjacent vils. Italy Lombardy, prov and 7 m. S.W. Bergamo; with a church, and the remains of an ancient castle. The vicinity has long been famous both for the quality and the quantity of its silk. Limited pop. 2360

Vol. II.

OSKOL, two towns Russia — 1 (Osos), Gov and 69 m. S.E. Kourak, 1 bank Oskol; with three wooden churches two distilleries, and a little trade. Pop. 5000. — The river rises a little S.E. of Tam, in gov Kourak; flows generally S. past Staro-Oskol and Novol-Oskol, and in gov Charikov joins 1 bank Donets, about 15 m. below Idmit total course, partly navigable, 210 m. — 2 (Osos), Gov and 70 m. S.E. Kourak, at the junction of the Oskola with the Oskol. It stands on an eminence has eight churches, a convent, and a considerable traffic by land. Near it was a great number of tile-works and orchards, the latter famous for their fruit. Pop. 8000

OSLAUAN, or OSLAUARY, a market in Austria, Moravia, circle and 12 m. W. S.W. Hyllan, 1 bank Oslawa with a church a castle, and a mill. Coal is worked in the vicinity. Pop. 1162

OSMA (ans. Osma) a river, Turkey in Europe, rises in the N. slope of the Balkan mountain, on the S. frontiers of Bulgaria; flows circuitously N. past the town of Lofchica, and a little above Nikopol, joins 1 bank Danube total course, about 110 m.

OSMAN a small tn. 1 unah between the Indus and Jallum lat. 35° 53' N. lon. 72° 59' E., on a plain at the base of a low range of hills.

OSMANDLIK a tn. Asiatic Turkey, 100 m. and 140 m. N.W. Sivas, on the Kizil Irnak. It is pleasantly situated among garden orchards, and vineyards, and is supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Tmolos. Pop. about 3000

OSMASTON two par Eng Derby — 1 1254 as. P. 125 — 2 1254 as. Pop. 836

OSMINGTON, par Eng Dorset, 2307 as. P. 485

OSMOTHELEY par Eng York (N Riding) 1720 as Pop. 1954

OSNABRUCK, an extensive district or landwehr, Hanover bounded N. by landwehrs Aurich, and duchy of Oldenburg E. and S. by Rhine Prussia and W. by Holland area, 1760 geo. sq. m. With the exception of a portion of the S.W. which sends its waters by the Venho to the Zuider Zee, it belongs wholly to the baile of the Enne, which drains a considerable portion of it, directly traversing it from S. to N. and the far greater part of the remainder by its affluent the Hase. The surface is generally flat and level and presents extensive tracts of almost barren heath, broken occasionally by low sand hills. All the ordinary cereals find it a very ungenial soil, and yield a very scanty produce. The minerals, though of little importance include coal which however does not seem capable of being extensively worked to profit as turf continues to be the principal fuel. The manufactures consist chiefly of coarse linens, and the principal trade is in hams, for which the district has long been famous. The landwehr nearly corresponds to the baile of Osnabruck and includes the principality of Osnabruck, the Lower county of Langen, the duchy of Arnhem-Meynen and the county of Bielefeld. It is subdivided into a number of minor jurisdictions, partly urban and partly rural. Pop. 269,747

OSNABRUCK, or OSNABRUCK, a tn. Hanover, cap. above landwehr and principality on the Hase and Milsin 7 m. W. Hanover. It is walled and entered by five gates houses generally low and of mean construction, but the salacious piazzas, and are covered with a number of fine villas. The buildings most deserving of notice are the Protestant churches of St. Catherine and St. Mary the E. Catholic cathedral and church of St. John, the Protestant and E. Catholic gymnasiums, the old and new townhouses, the theatre, castle, normal school barracks, infirmary and several hospitals. It is the see of a bishop, the seat of several courts and public offices and has manufactures of coarse linens, to which the town gives its name and there are several paper-mills, bleachfields, and tile-works, and a considerable trade in linen, hams, and cattle. Osnabruck was created into a see by Charlemagne in 838, and in 1082 it was surrounded by walls. It afterwards entered the Hanseatic League, but never rose to be a free imperial city. The negotiations for the peace of Westphalia, which ended the Thirty Years War were carried on here. The bishopric was secularized in 1803, and incorporated with Hanover. Pop. 11,731

OSNABURG — 1, A tn. Hanover. See OSNABRUCK — 2 two islands, E. Pacific Ocean — 1 Arrial Low Archipelago; lat. 51° 50' S. lon. 188° 44' W. It possesses com-

49

considerable interest, from the light which it throws on the progress of a coral formation. When discovered by Captain Carteret, in 1787 it was small flat, and so nearly covered by the waves, as scarcely to deserve the name of an island. In 1792, when the Motelle whaler, was wrecked upon it, it was described as merely a coral reef. In 1830, when visited by Captain Beatty it was 14 m. in length, and had one of its sides almost completely covered by high trees. It enclosed a lagoon, which has an opening on the E. side, and affords an excellent harbour. It is not inhabited.—2. An isl. Society group, and rising to the height of 1507 ft. (called also Menton (which see).

OSHAJO a vil. and comm. Italy, Lombardy prov and 16 m. S. E. Como; with a church. Pop. 1362.

OSOFFO a tn. Italy Lombardy prov. Friuli, 16 m. N. N. W. Udine, near the Tagliamento with a small fortress, situated on a lofty precipice, and a church. Pop. 1250.

OSORN a ruined tn., river and lake, Chill, near its S. extremity, Azamania. The town is at the N. W. extremity of the lake, 55 m. S. E. E. Valdivia.—The river issues from the same end, close by the town, and pursuing a N. W. direction, falls into the sea about lat. 40° 10' S. after a course of 48 m.—The lake is somewhat in the form of a hook, the leg of which is about 30 m. in length, and the foot 10 m., with an average breadth throughout of 8 m.

OSORNO [OSORNO] Patagonia, W. coast, opposite Island Chiloe, 36 m. N. E. the head of Balcomeri Sound; lat. 41° 0' S. lon. 70° 40' W. It is quite conical from the base to the summit frequently emits smoke and when seen from the sea at a distance of 90 or 100 m. the whole cone, about 6000 ft. high, and covered with snow stands out in the boldest relief from among ranges of inferior mountains.

OSI EDALETTI several places Italy Lombardy — 1. Ospedaleto, or Ospitaleto a vil and com. prov and 6 m. W. Brescia with three churches, and numerous silk mills. Pop. 1845.—2. A vil and com. prov and 9 m. S. E. Lodi near the Lambro with a church and two chapels, and some trade in cheese. Pop. 1573.

OSPREY [OSPREY] prov Eng Kent 2738 ac. Pop. 1111.

OSSE, or Os (formerly Osek), a market tn. Holland, prov N. Brabant, 13 m. N. E. Hertogenbosch. It is a large, regular built, and beautiful town, was once fortified, and has a spacious market-place in which is the town-hall a large square building a church, a synagogue, and six schools. Pop. (agricultural) 1113.

OSMA, a tn. Russia, gov and 45 m. S. W. Perm, on the Oumka, near its confluence with the Kama. It contains two churches, and an hospital. The district is rich in iron and copper. Pop. (1851) 2183.

OSMALLIKOWO a market to Russia gov and S. E. Vladimir with two stone churches, a castle, and various manufactures. Pop. 2360.

OSMAGO, a vil and com. Italy Lombardy, prov and 4 m. S. Lodi with three churches. Pop. 1398.

OSMAU (GAVE DU), a river, France, which rises on the S. side of the Pyrenees, dep. Pyrénées Inférieures, flows N. W., and, after a course of about 45 m. unites with the Aaga, at Cleron in forming the Gave of that name.

OSSEU, or Osmu a vil Bohemia, circle and 22 m. N. W. Leitmeritz with a magnificent abbey, which has a library of 40,000 vols, and a beautiful church, in the Italian style.

OSSEJOU or Osmu an isl. Adriatic Sea, off the coast of Dalmatia, S. W. Croatia, from which it is only separated by a very narrow channel, over which a bridge has been constructed. It forms a narrow and irregular belt, 3 m. N. N. W. to 4 m. E. breadth under 1 m. It produces much corn, wine, and fruit. The tunny and sardine fisheries are also valuable. The pop. resident chiefly in the towns of Great and Little Lomani and the vil. Chisnaki about 3000.

OSSETT a vil. and chapelry England, so York, on the Manchester and Leeds railway. It is a large and populous place, with a district church, a chapel of ease, Independent and Wesleyan chapels, a free school, manufacturers of woollen cloth, blankets, and worsteds; and mineral springs, for which baths have been erected. Pop. 3266.

OSSEI a vil. st. Sardinia, div. and S. E. E. Sassari, with a church, two chapels, a primary school, and a considerable trade in corn and wine. Pop. 2108.

OSINGEN a vil and par Switzerland, com and 19 m. N. E. Zurich. Some land-tortoises are found, and a good deal of bad wine is made in the district. Pop. 1177.

OSINGTON, par Eng. North, 2165 ac.

OSONA a vil and par Italy Lombardy prov Pavia, dioc. and 8 m. N. Abbiate-Cassio, with a church, and a trade in wine and silk. Pop. 1469.

OSOREY, formerly a Protestant and R. Catholic diocese of Ireland, com. Kilkenny, and King's and Queen's co., the seat of which has been transferred since 1834, to Kilkenny.

OSUN, a tn. France, dep. Haute-Pyrénées, 8 m. S. S. W. Tarbes, inhabitants engaged in the preparation and export of hams and bacon. Pop. 3004.

OSTASHKOV a tn. Russia, gov and 110 m. W. Tver on a small knoll of land projecting into Lake Seliger. It has courts of justice, four churches, a monastery a gymnasium three hospitals and a large bazaar where all the shopkeepers of the town have their shops, all of brick, the houses generally being of wood. There are numerous malt-kilns, tanneries, and tallow melting establishments and a great many barges are built for the navigation of the Volga. The trade is considerable in corn, wood, salt beef, salt fish, leather tallow wax, and honey. Pop. (1846) 8354.

OSTER, a river Hanover which runs in the W. of principal Lüneburg flows directly into N. W. past Bremerwerde, and falls into the estuary of the Elbe, 4 m. N. E. Osterdorf; total course, 80 m.

OSTEND [French, Ostende] a seaport to Belgium, prov W. Flanders, on the N. Sea, 67 m. N. W. Brussels, lat. 51° 14' N. lon. 2° 55' 50" E. (n.) It is strongly and regularly fortified, being one of the lines of fortresses intended to defend the Belgian frontier on the side of France. Its situation, on a low sandy coast, where no trees will grow, is by no means agreeable though it is said to have a pure, healthy air, and is much resorted to for sea-bathing. It is entered by four gates, and is, on the whole, well built. The public buildings, some of which deserve particular notice, are the Hotel de Ville, three churches (one Protestant) a prison, a hotel and a military hospital barracks, and an arsenal. There are several promenades, but the most agreeable, from lying open to the breeze, is the Digue a sea-wall, about ½ m. long, and paved with bricks. The harbour is not easy of access, but the basin within is extensive, and forms the termination of a magnificent line of canals, striking like network into the interior and furnishing admirable facilities for commerce. The sluices of Slykens, opening from the canal into the harbour are particularly admirable; and the canal itself, as far as Ghent, has a depth sufficient to float vessels of 500 tons. The manufactures of Ostend are unimportant but include linen goods and mill-cloth, lace, oil, soap, hats, tobacco, &c. There are also building-docks, and several other industrial establishments. God and herring fishing are carried on to a considerable extent, and an important branch of trade is by no means neglected. The English coast, fringed here by large salt reservoirs, and transported as far as Paris, under the name of Acidres d'Ostend. Ostend possesses a school of navigation, an academy of design and architecture, several primary schools, a theatre, a public garden beyond the walls, a mont-de-piété, and several other benevolent institutions. It was founded in the 9th century, walled in 1445, and regularly fortified in 1555 by the Princes of Orange. In the great struggle in which the States-General threw off the yoke of Spain, it sustained a memorable siege from 1601 to 1604, during which the besieged lost about 50,000, and the Spanish besiegers more than 90,000 men. Ultimately, when reduced to a mere heap of ruins, it obtained an honourable capitulation. In 1696, great part of the town was destroyed by the explosion of a powder-magazine. By railway Ostend is connected with all parts of Belgium, with France, and Flanders and steamers ply regularly between it and London and Dover; and it is connected with England by sub-marine electric telegraph. Pop. 12,508.

OSTENFELD a vil and par Denmark, duchy and 16 m. W. S. W. Schleswig with a Protestant church. The inhabitants are Frislanders.

OSTER, a tn. Russia, gov and 40 m. S. W. Coeskov, 1 bank Duna, at the junction of the Oster with four churches, the remains of several convents, a considerable trade in timber and an active fishery. Pop. (1843), 2058.

OSTER, or Oster, a river, Russia, which rises in the E. of gov. Chernigov, flows W. and joins r. bank Dnepr at the town of Oster; total course, 100 m.

OSTER-BROOK, a seaport in Norway prov Christian sand, on a tongue of land which projects into the Kattegat, 100 m. S.W. Christiania, with a good harbor important iron-works, and a trade in iron and wool. P. (1850), 2218.

OSTERBORG, a town in Prussia, gov. and 47 m. N. Magdeburg, r. bank Elbe, with a Protestant church, chapel, and hospital; a brewery distillery, and a trade in cattle. P. 2285.

OSTERBY, a vil. Sweden, lin. and 26 m. N.E. Upsala, near the mines of Dannemora, on the lake of that name, well built, and, being intersected by planted alleys, has a cheerful and handsome appearance. The forges, at which the ore from Dannemora is smelted by charcoal, and prepared for exportation are on a large, and even magnificent scale. The manor-house has two wings, one of which is a church. There is also a good collection of paintings, with several originals by Flemish and Italian masters.

OSTERBOND—1 A. in Hanover, landroast and 83 m. S.E.E. Middelheim, on the Soes, at the foot of the Harz mountains. It is walled has three churches, a gymnasium, infirmary, and extensive iron manufactory manufactures of woollen and linen goods, calicoes, drills, white-lead, shot, soap, needles, and articles in wood, tobacco-factories, tanneries, machine-works, oil, walk, gymnasium, and other mills. P. 2197.—2, A. walled in Prussia, gov. and 74 m. S.W. Königsberg, on the Preussa. It is the seat of provincial and town courts. It has a castle, erected by the Teutonic knights in 1270, a Protestant church and chapel, manufactory of woollen cloth and later a brewery, and distillery and a trade in wool and cattle. P. 2391.

OSTERREICH See AUSTRIA

OSTERBUND, a town in Sweden, cap. lin. of same name, beautifully situated on the E. shore of Lake Stör 228 m. N.W. Stockholm. It is regularly built has a court, and several public offices. On an island in the lake, connected with it by a bridge, the suburb Fjölde with a church, and a handsome town-house. Pop. exclusive of Fjölde, 418.—The lake more frequently called Jamtland, is bounded N. by Umeå, E. Hammarö and Gefleborg, S. Falun, and W. Norway. It is flat towards the E. but becomes mountainous as it approaches the frontiers of Norway. It is watered by the Indal, the Ljungman, and the Ljumsa, and their affluents, and possesses many lakes of which Störjön is the largest. It does not produce corn sufficient for its own supply, but it raises many cattle. Timber iron, and copper are the chief riches of the lake, supplying numerous saw mills and foundries. Area, 14,400 sq. m. P. 49,077.

OSTERWIEK, a town in Prussian Saxony, gov. and 47 m. W.S.W. Magdeburg on the Elbe. It is walled has two churches, manufactures of woollen and linen goods, distilleries, oil, walk, and other mills and a trade in wool and cattle. P. 3041.

OSTFY Amskov—a vil. Hungary Thither Danube so. Eisenburg, on the Raab, 16 m. from Fapa with a church, and a trade in corn, cattle, and wool. P. 1820.

OSTHÄMMEL, an important seaport in Sweden, lin. and 63 m. N. Stockholm, on a creek in the Gulf of Bothnia. P. 500.

OSTHEIM, two places, Bavaria, Lower Franconia.—1 (Gross), A. market town, 7 m. N.W. N. Obernburg, on the Radhelms, with a church, two chapels, three mills and a trade in cattle. P. 2570.—2, (Klein), dist. Aschaffenburg, r. bank Main. Inhabitants chiefly employed in raising vegetables, cutting turf and rearing bees. P. 1104.

OSTHEIM von dem Rind, a walled town, Saxony-Waltmark, dist. and S.S.W. Ebersbach. It is well built, has a church the ruins of an old castle, and an hospital, manufactures of linen, dyewerks, and numerous mills. P. 2450.

OSTIA, a town and seaport Papal States, 14 m. S.W. Rome, near l. bank, S. branch Tiber, founded in 830 by Pope Gregory IV. It contains a castle, picturesque situated, a cathedral, and an episcopal palace, which has been converted into a museum of antiquities. The situation is rendered so pestiferous by malaria, that, though numerous handsome houses remain, the population has dwindled down to less than 100. Ancient Ostia stood about 14 m. from the modern town. It once contained 80,000 inhabitants; but was completely ruined by an invasion of the Saracens in the 8th century.

OSTIANO or Istiano a town and com. land, of Italy prov and 27 m. W.N.W. Mantua, near l. bank Olbia. It has an old castle, a church, four chapels and an hospital, manufactures of woollens, hats, and earthenware, and several mills. P. 2585.

OSTIGLIA, a town, land, of Italy prov and 19 m. E.S.E. Mantua, l. bank Po. It is an ancient well-built place, has a court of justice, and several public offices, several churches, fair suppressed convent, an hospital, a theatre, manufactures of various articles in silver, gold, and leather-work, a large mill-mill, and a considerable trade in corn, wine, oil provisions wood, and silk. Ostiglia is said to have given birth to Cornelius Nepos, and numbered among its magistrates Bernardo Tasso, who was himself a poet, and the father of the more celebrated poet, Torquato. P. 5514.

OSTIHAL, two places, Austria, Moravia.—1 A town circle and 5 m. S.E. Hradisch on the March with a castle, on an island formed by the river and a church. P. 1500.—2 A town, circle Przemysl 48 m. E.N.E. Olmitz, on the Olchavitsa with a church, and some woollen manufactures. P. 1732.

OSTRAWITZ, a vil. Moravia, circle Przemysl, on the Ostrawitsa, 30 m. from Fraburg; with a church. P. 1817.

OSTRITZ, a town, Saxony, circle and 30 m. S.E. Bautzen l. bank Neisse with manufactures of linen and tobacco, and tile-works. P. 1464.

OSTROG a town Russia gov. Volhynia at the junction of the Valtia with the Gorin, 104 m. W. Jitomir. It is defended by an old castle, and has several Greek and E. Catholic churches, a convent, seminary, riding-school, and a considerable trade. It is the seat of an archbishop, and the place where the Bible was first printed in Slavonic. P. (1850) 2538.

OSTROGOJSK, a town Russia, gov. and 64 m. S. Voronezh, l. bank Sooma, where it is joined by the Ostrogjaka. It has ten churches, and a considerable trade in cattle, horses, and tallow. A German colony holding the t. of session of Ansbach, has existed here since 1768. P. (1851), 5822.

OSTROK, a vil. European Turkey, Monastir 28 m. N.E. Castaria. It contains almost entirely of two convents and the buildings attached to them. One of these convents occupying a cavern in the side of a perpendicular limestone mountain, is the great stronghold of Montenegro. The other occupies an advantageous position on the slope of the mountain below. The former convent is so inaccessible, and so completely protected from hostile missiles that in 1788 it stood a siege of several months by 20,000 Turks who were ultimately obliged to retire with immense loss.

OSTROLEŃKA a town Russian Poland, l. bank Narva have crossed by a wooden bridge, 80 m. W.W. Lomax. It contains a castle, and a numerous monetary inhabitants live by general trading and fishing. In 1831 an obstinate battle was fought here between the Russians and the Poles. P. 1277.

OSTROV a town Russia, gov. and 30 m. S. Ivgor partly r. bank Vchukas, and partly on an island formed by the channel. It is poorly built: but has a cathedral, said to have been in existence for five centuries and two churches. The trade is in wood, corn, and fine flax. P. (1849), 1851.

OSTROVO a small town, European Turkey, Macedonia on the shore of a lake of same name, 31 m. E. by S. Monastir. It is picturesque situated, but a miserable place.

OSTROW, a town Russian Poland, 19 m. S.S.E. Radzyń, on the Tyssamand. P. 1500.

OSTROWIEK a town Poland, 24 m. N.W. Sandomierz. P. about 3000.

OSTROWNO a town Russia gov. and 99 m. N.W. Mohilev on a lake near l. bank S. Dvina. It has extensive manufactures of hardware and some general trade. Some severe fighting took place here between the French and Russians in 1812.

OSTROWO, a town Prussia, gov. and 67 m. S.E. Posen on the Olabok with a church, and a synagog and many factories of woollen cloth. P. 8793.

OSTUNI, a town Naples, prov Otranto 21 m. W. Brindisi, on a lofty eminence, the seat of a bishop, with a great number of churches and convents. P. 5000.

OSUNA (see Gades Germanorum), a town Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 41 m. E. Sevilla with straight, broad, and well-paved streets. It has 18 fontaines, all supplied by a subterranean aqueduct of about a mile in length, several hospitals, a considerable number of primary schools, and a college. The last occupies a building, which belonged to another institution now suppressed, a grandiose edifice, with an oratory or chapel, and a spacious court, with double gallery supported by 24 columns. It has also a parish church, with three apseless naves, a magnificent transept, and 11 chapels, with arcades and pillars in the Greco-Roman style. It was converted into a citadel and magazine by Marshal Soult, and the French carried off more than 5 cwt. of ancient church-plate. There are eight hermitages in and around it, and two fine promenades. Most of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and a considerable quantity of wheat, barley and beans is exported to Seville and Malaga. There are also manufactures of iron, brass, earthenware, soap, hats, bricks, numerous mills and wine presses. Most of the manufactures of exports used in Andalusia and Estramadura are carried on by the poorer class. Pop. 15,508.

OSWALD (Str) two parts Eng J.—1 Chester 8794 sq. P. 8759.—2, Durham 11 419 sq. P. 10,868.

OSWALDKIRK and ANKERSTRA, par Eng, York (N Riding), 8578 sq. Pop. 882.
OSWALD TOWN, a village and township, England, co. Lancaster about 4 m. E.N.E. Blackburn, with a district church, some dissenting chapels, several schools extensive manufactures of cotton goods, and print works. William Sadler the servant, was killed by falling from his balloon near this place. Pop. 7854.

OSWEGATCHIE, a river U States, rises in the N of New York near lat. 44° N flows first N W then turns suddenly N N E, and returns that direction till its mouth in the St. Lawrence at Ogdensburg total course, about 180 m.

OSWEGOW, a tn, and port U States New York, on both sides of the Oswego (a stream 24 m. long which here falls into the S.E. shore of Lake Ontario, and is crossed by a bridge "60 ft. long") on a branch of the Erie canal, and on the railway from Syracuse, forming a continuation of the great line from New York and Albany 150 m. W by N Albany. It rises finely from both banks of the river, and is regularly and handsomely built, consisting of a number of public squares and streets, 100 ft. wide, intersecting each other at right angles. Among the public buildings are five churches, of which the First Presbyterian and the Episcopal deserve special notice both for the beauty of their sites and the elegance of their structure. A earthenware cotton house near the academy and flourishing female seminary. The manufacturing establishments include several tanneries, and numerous saw and saw-mills for which ample water-power is supplied by the Oswego and its trade, chiefly transit both on the lake and in the interior by canal and railway, is of vast extent, its harbour which next to Rochester's Harbour is the best on the S. side of the lake, has a depth of 10 to 12 ft., making it the natural emporium for the traffic to New York from Canada and the W. On the E. side of the river, near the lake is Fort Oswego, which furnishes a strong defence to the harbour. Pop. 12,205.

OSWESTRY a municipal bor market tn and par England, co. Salop. The town, 702 m. N W Shrewsbury is kept tolerably clean and has some very old houses, but the generally are modern and well built, evidence of brick 11 centuries the parish church is a building of great antiquity and another church, erected in 1357, are interesting examples of a guildhall, and two handsome and commodious market-houses, one for corn, cheese, &c., and the other for butter, butcher's meat, &c. three public schools—one of which, the national school, occupies a very fine building. Oswestry is a place of great antiquity, and is celebrated in early English. It derives its name from that of Oswald, king of Northumbria and gives the title of baron to the Duke of Norfolk. Pop. 4517. Area of par 15,078 sq. Pop. 8766.

OSWIECIM, a tn, Austria, Galicia, on a height, above a bank built, by success with the Vistula, 82 m. W of racow. It is a very ancient place and has a church, a synagogue, and the ruins of an old castle. Pop. 2872.

OSYK, Ozyr, or Ozyr, a vil. Bohemia, circle Chrudin, in the Dnieu about 7 m. from Lelivitchal. It is a long straggling place; and has a school tile-works, a saw and other mills. Pop. 1050.

OSYF PIL (Str) a vil and par England, co. Essex, 11 m N.E. Colchester near the Colne. It has a large irregular parish church but chiefly deserves notice for its ancient monastery of which the quadrangle is still entire, and a few gateway and several towers still remain. Area of par, 8420 sq. Pop. 1877.

OSZLAN, a market tn, Hungary, co. Bars, in a fertile district not far from the Neutra, 29 m. W by S. Koszold; with some trade in corn. Pop. 1600.

OSZLOP or OSZLUX, a vil Hungary Thibter Danube, co. and about 8 m from Oedenburg with a church, a mill, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1003.

OSZTERN, or Kiv Komlax, a vil Hungary Thibter Theuer, co. Torontal, about 4 m. from Komlax with a church and a trade in corn and maize which are largely grown in the district. Pop. 1640.

OSZTURNYA (Osturnya, or Osturnia), a vil Hungary, Thibter Thibter co. Zips, on a slope of the Carpathians, near Leutschan with a church. Pop. 1809.

OTAGO or OTAKO, a settlement, N.E. coast, New Munster, or the Middle Island of New Zealand lat. 43° 58 S. lon. 170° 50' E. It consists of a district of 450,000 sq. or 630 sq. m. stretching along the S Pacific with a navigable inlet, called Otago harbour forming a good harbour runner about 14 m. inland near the N end of the colony. The soil is a black vegetable mould resting on a fertile clay containing a mixture of sand. The Otago block or settlement consists of a chain of rich, perfectly level plains, stretching N to S, namely, the Taieri, the Waihola, the Tokumairiro, and the Clutha, each with a river crossing it, and surrounded with a hilly country, affording excellent pasture, wool and agricultural produce of every kind are the products of the soil, timber is plentiful the New Zealand flax (Phormium tenax) grows wild and in limestone abound and the sea teems with fish. The main part of the population is located on the shores of the inlet referred to, and chiefly in and around the town of Dunedin, near the head of it. A Free church with manse and school house, has been built at Dunedin and several schools have been commenced in various parts of the colony. On Otago harbour, further down than Dunedin, lies Port Chalmers, finely situated, but still in its infancy Pop. 18601 1740.

OTAKA, a tn and S. Pacific. See TAMEI.

OTAVALE or OTABALO, a tn Ecuador esp. dist. on a slope of the Andes, 85 m. N N.E. Quito. It has two churches a Franciscan convent and manufactures of cotton goods, in which as well as in agricultural produce a considerable trade is carried on. Pop. about 15,000.

OTCHAKOV, (anc. Anzoz) a tn Russia, gov. Kherson r. bank Dnieper at its mouth into the Black Sea. 40 m. E.N. S. Odessa, once a place of great importance, the possession of which was strongly contested by the Turks and Russians. It was besieged and taken by the Russians from the Turks in 1757 and again in 1788. The town has since gone into complete decay. Only a few mud houses, whitewashed are occupied. There is also a Greek church formerly a mosque, and the fort, which commanded the entrance to the harbour, is still kept in good repair. Pop. 1000.

OTEA or GREAT BARRER ISLAND, S. Pacific Ocean off N.E. coast New Zealand, forming the E entrance of Hauraki Gulf, or the Firth of Thames about 30 m. long, N to S, by 8 m. broad. It has very irregular and deeply indented coasts, and a mountainous interior. The hills are generally covered with forests of kauri pine and brushwood, but there is much open ground on the W. coast, where are also several excellent harbours. A copper-mine has been discovered on the island.

OTFORD par Eng Kent 2652 sq. P. 837.

OTHAM, par Eng Kent, 947 sq. P. 857.

OTHERY, par Eng Somerset 1820 sq. P. 681.

OTIVAR a vil and com. Spain, Andalucia, prov. and about 30 m from Granada with a church, town-house, prison, primary school manufactures of articles in wax, oil, and iron, and a trade in oil, wine, and figs. Pop. 1815.

OTILAKA, a vil Hungary Thibter Thibter, co. Fud 37 m. N by W Arad; with a Greek church and some trade in cattle. Pop. 2820.

OTLEY, a market tn, England, co. and 25 m. York (N Riding), r. bank Wharfe, over which there is a neat bridge of seven arches. It is small but well built, and is partially lighted with gas; has a spacious, irregular, parish church, of great antiquity but much altered; places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists, Method-late of the New Convention, and the Society of Friends; and a free grammar school. The principal trade of Otley is in corn which is sent to the manufacturing districts, and in cattle and sheep, for which a large market is held every alternate Friday. Pop. 4623.

OTLEY par Eng. Suffolk, 2187 ac. P 616.

OTQUE, a small inlet, New Granada, bay and 30 m S.W. Panama, lat. 8° 50' N; lon 80° 20' W.

OTRANTO (TARENTO), a prov. Naples, forming the heel of the boot which Italy so remarkably resembles and, excepting a part of the N and N.W. where it is bounded respectively by the Adriatic and the Ionian, is entirely surrounded by the sea—the Adriatic on the N.E., the Ionian on the S.E. and the Gulf of Taranto on the S. greatest length, N.W. to S.E., 106 m., average breadth, about 30 m.; area 3888 sq. m. cap. Lecce. Its extensive coast furnishes a number of large bays and good harbours, and teems with fish. Its interior is traversed throughout its whole length by a branch of the S. Apennines, which forms the water-shed between the Adriatic and the Gulf of Taranto furnishes excellent pasturage, on which numbers of fine horses are reared. It has no considerable streams. Water is generally scarce, and the run is carefully collected in cisterns, but heavy dew favours vegetation. The olive grows in whole forests without culture and wheat, barley, oats, vegetables, vines, different fruits cotton, and tobacco, are grown. The chief manufacture is the weaving of cotton. The trade confined almost entirely to the products of the soil is considerable. Pop. (1850) 409,000.

OTRANTO (anc. Hydruntum) a tn and seaport, Naples prov. Terra di Otranto, 42 m. S.E. Brindisi on the strait of its name, across which is the shortest distance from Italy to Greece. It is tolerably well fortified, but is poorly built and is in a very dilapidated state. It contains a castle, whose name has been made familiar by Walpole's romance of the Castle of Otranto a very old cathedral an archbishop's palace, and some Roman antiquities. Its harbour is large and commodious, and enables the inhabitants to carry on an active trade with the Levant, particularly in corn fruit, oil and horses. Pop. 4000.

OTRAR, a tn Independent Turkish kharat Kocan, bank Sic or Siam, 270 m N.W. Kocan lat. 44° N lon 87° E. It was formerly a place of considerable extent and importance, and made considerable figure in the history of Asia, but little is known of its present condition.

OTRIOLI a petty vil. Italy Umbria, 20 m S.W. Spoleto near L. bank Tiber with the remains of a theatre and other splendid edifices. Near it in 1789, 10,000 French defeated about ten times the number of Neapolitans. P 800.

OTSEGO a lake, U. States, New York, 9 m long and from 1 m to 3 m broad. Its outlet is the source of the Susquehanna.

OTSD, a vil. Hungary Thierse co. Beloe, on the K55 73 m. S.W. Pesth, with two churches. P 4511.

OTTAJANO a tn Naples, prov. and 12 m E Naples at the N.E. foot of Mount Vesuvius. It has a castle, situated on an adjacent height; and three churches. Inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture. Pop. 6000.

OTTAKRING, OTTOKRING, or ABERKING, a vil. Lower Austria, near Vienna with several splendid mansions. It is a great holiday resort from the capital. Inhabitants chiefly employed in sending milk and fruit to Vienna. Pop. 3690.

OTTAWA a river British N. America forming the boundary line between Upper and Lower, or Eastern and Western Canada. It rises in the high land which separates the basin of Hudson's Bay from that of the St. Lawrence, about lat. 48° N. whence it flows S.E. and falls into the St. Lawrence, about 20 m. above Montreal. In the upper parts of its course, it passes through Lake Temiscamingue. About 90 m. above its junction with the St. Lawrence, occur the falls of Chaudiere, the principal of which is about 60 ft. high. The whole course of the stream is about 460 m. In its course through the table-land the banks are generally high, but below the Chaudiere they are much less elevated, and often unattended. It is now navigable from its junction with the St. Lawrence to the falls above named. Much of the scenery on the Ottawa is magnificent, but the land on its banks is generally of poor quality. It is of much importance, however, from the immense quantity of fine timber cut on its banks, and on those of its tributaries.

OTTEAU a vil. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, built Germanish, with a church, and three mills. Pop. 1181.

OTTENBACH, a vil. and par. Switzerland, cant. and 9 m. S.W. Zurich, bank Rhine. It was almost entirely burnt down by three successive fires, in 1758 1759, 1790, and has since been rebuilt. It has several cotton-fabrics, but the chief employment is agriculture. Pop. 1959.

OTTENSEN a well built vil. Denmark, duchy Holstein, W. of Altona and properly only one of its suburbs. Together with Neumühlen, another village properly a suburb of Altona its pop. is 2800.

OTTENSHILM, a tn Upper Austria circle Mühl, on an acclivity above L. bank Donau 5 m. W. by N. Linz. It is well built has a fine old church built in 1465 and an old castle manufactures of leather and wooden articles and a trade in linen yarn, wool and fruit. Pop. 1130.

OTTENSHILM.—1 A market to Brunswick, near the Weser N. Holzminden with a church, brewer's, and a trade in salt. Pop. 1004.—2 A tn Rheuss Prussia, gov. and 81 m. N.W. Münster with three R. Catholic churches, manufactures of linen bleaching, a trade in cattle. P 917.

OTTEN, a river U. States rises in Mount Treadwell, the S. of Vermont flows N.W. past Rutland, Middlebury, and Vergennes and 6 m. below the last falls into the S.E. shore of Lake Champlain total course 70 m. It is navigable by the largest lake vessels to Vergennes, and by boats to Middlebury. There are several fine falls upon it.

OTTENBACH (Ottu and Nixu) two adjacent vils. Bavaria, Palatinat, cant. Beyerhausen, 12 m. S.W. Landau with a church, and a mill. P (Ottu) 1706 (Nixu) 421.

OTTENBERG, a tn Bavaria Palatinat, 33 m. N.W. Speyer with three churches, a monastery and the ruins of an old castle manufactures of woollen a tannery, and several mills. Pop. 3580.

OTTERBOURNE, par. Eng. Herts 1605 ac. P 596.

OTTERBURN W. and a vil. and township, England, co. Northumberland, on the Otter 11 m. N.N.E. Bellingham. It is a neat, well-built place, in a romantic district with a Presbyterian chapel and is famous for the battle between the Scots and English in 1588 on which the popular ballad of Chevy Chase is founded. The strong tower of Otterburn has been supplanted by a modern castle though some traces of it still remain.

There are several tumuli and remains of encampments on the battle-field and a cross, called by a misnomer Perry's Cross has been erected on the spot where Douglas is supposed to have fallen. Pop. 415.

OTTENBERG, par. Eng. Kent 1434 ac. 1 1 1.

OTTENBERG, par. Eng. Somerset, 2987 ac. P 451.

OTTENHAM par. Eng. Cornwall 3464 ac. P 193.

OTTENHAMPTON par. Eng. Somerset 1117 ac. P 210.

OTTENHURSTON two par. Eng. York (N. Riding) —

1 (North) 8625 ac. P 667.—2 (South) 1414 ac. P 412.

OTTENDORF a tn Hanover, dut. and 30 m. N.W. Stade, on the Möden where there is a small harbour. It contains a castle and a Latin school and has tile-works and lunekilns. Pop. 1864.

OTTERSBERG, a vil. Hanover gov. and 37 m. S.W. Stade, on the Wümme. It was once fortified and has manufactures of linen a fishery and a distillery. P 1055.

OTTERSLEBEN (Gossw and Klenz) two places Prussia gov. and about 3 m. S.W. Magdeburg each containing a church. Pop. (Gossw) 1834, (Klenz) 633.

OTTERTON, par. Eng. Devon 3479 ac. Pop. 1281.

OTTERTY, (St. Mary) a market tn. and par. England co. Devon. The town 12 m. N.E. Exeter 1 bank Otter has a large parish church, two Dissenting chapels an endowed grammar school, a national British and Foreign school and several others; manufactures of silk ribbons, handkerchiefs, and silks for dresses, carried on to a very considerable extent, there being upwards of 500 persons thus employed. Devonshire lace is also made in large quantities, and there is besides very extensive corn mill. Pop. 2384. Area of par. 9942 ac. P 4421.

OTTIGLIO a tn Italy Piedmont, civ. and N.W. Alessandria, on the torrent Rotaldo, driven by a bridge. It has two churches, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1900.

OTTIGNILLA a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, in a valley watered by the Dyle 19 m. S.E. Brussels; with a flour-mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1075.

OTTMACHAU, a walled in Prussia, prov. Silisia, gov. and 41 m. W.S.W. Oppeln, 1 bank Neise. It has a fort, castle, church, chapel, and hospital; a tobacco-factory and the works. Pop. 8083.

OTTOBREUNEN, or OTTENBREUNEN a tn. Bavaria, Swabia, 41 m. S.W. Augsburg with a castle, two churches, chapel, parsonage, an old Benedictine abbey and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1480

OTTOBIANO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont div. Novara, prov. Lomellina, about 6 m. S. Mortara, with an ancient church, convent, school, and a trade in corn and rice. Pop. 2150.

OTTOCHACZ, a market in Austria, Croatia, general ship, and 45 m. S.S.W. Carlsbad, cap. regimental dist. of same name, on the Glitska. It has a church, two castles, a superior and a girls school. P. 600.—The district, area, 810 sq. m. is well wooded and fertile, produces much corn and wine, and rears great numbers of cattle, sheep, and goats. Pop. 78,460.

OTTOMAN EMPIRE. See Turkey.
OTTONE, a tn. Italy, Piedmont div. and 25 m. N.E. Genoa, in a mountainous district near the Trehim with two churches, the remains of two old castles; and a trade in wine and in necklaces, and other ornaments formed out of a kind of fibrous quartz, or rock-crystal. Pop. 4290

OTTOSCHWANDEN a vil. Baden upper Urtia Rhine, hill and name meanings, with a church, and numerous mills. Pop. 1190

OTTREINGHAM, par. Eng. York. (E. Riding) 4320 ac Pop. 63

OTTWEILER, a tn. Rhinisch Prussia, gov. and 36 m. S.E. Treves, on the Bille with local courts, an old castle, two R. Catholic churches a synagogue and manufacturers of woollens, cottons, and earthenware. Pop. 2964.

OTUMBA, a tn. Mexico, in a fertile district, N.E. from Lake Texcoco. It is now in ruins, containing only a few inhabitants, chiefly Indians, but is said to have at one time had a pop. of 50,000, and to have been a place of great importance. Its chief interest is now derived from its antiquities.

OTURA, a tn. Spain, Andaluzia, prov. and S. Granada with a church, townhouse, prison, and primary school, manufactures of linen several flour mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1790

OTWAY a cape, Australia S.W. side, Port Phillip, lat. 38° 51' S. lon. 142° 45' E.

OTWAY (PORT) W coast, Patagonia, W side, Holloway Sound, about 15 m. N.E. Cape Horn Mennas, lat. 48° 49' 30' S., lon. 75° 18' 15" W. (s) described by Captain Stokes as an admirable port, promising to shipping a rich growth of stout and shapely timber with which its shores, even down to the margin of the sea, are closely furnished, and from which ships of the largest size might obtain spars. On each side of the harbour are some finely-sheltered coves containing inexhaustible supplies of water and fuel OU KIANG a large river China, prov. Kweichow, formed by numerous head streams, having their sources in a mountainous district in the S.W. part of the province; flows N., and falls into the Yang-tse-Kiang at Pek, near lat. 30° N., total course, about 250 m.

OUAD or OUED (EL), a vil. Algerian Sahara, dist. Bouf. 119 m. S. by E. Biskra. It is miserably built, on a dry and sandy soil planted, however, with numerous date-trees. It is surrounded by gardens, in which cucumbers, melons, onions, and tobacco, are cultivated. Pop. about 2000

OUAD-EL-HABO, a river Morocco, which descends from the greater Atlas, flows N.W., and after a course of about 100 m., joins 1 bank Morcas.

OUAD-NASSA, a tn. Egypt. See WAD-MEDINA.
OUALAN HALLAN, or OUALAN HALLAN, N. Pacific Ocean, lat. 5° 21' 30" N., lon. 163° 1' E. It is the most E. of the Caroline group, 24 m. in extent, and of volcanic formation; divided into two unequal parts by a mountain range, which stretches across it W. to E. Mount Bantua on the N., and Mount Crater on the S. portion, have the respective heights of 2180 and 2150 ft. Many other peaked summits are seen rising up from the midst of an impenetrable forest, with which almost the whole island appears to be covered. It has some good harbours, and is abundantly supplied with water. The port where the inhabitants chiefly reside, called Lake, is on the E. side. Another port on the W. side, called Coguille, has excellent anchorage, and tranquil water. Pop. 710.

OUARGLA, a tn. Algerian Sahara, coasts of same name, 92 m. E. by N. Gardais lat. 31° 22' N. lon. 4° 8' E., on a marshy soil, in the midst of gardens, and surrounded by a ditch and battlemented wall, crowned by 40 two-storied towers, and entered by six gates. It contains a chateau, about 500 or 600 houses, and is divided into three quarters, each of which has its mosque, and its schools. Ouarigla is the centre of a considerable trade. The people are extremely dissolute in their morals.—(Dunham, Sahara Algeria.)

OUBA, a river, Siberia, which rises on the W. slope of Mount Ubanak, in the S. of gov. Tomsk, flows W.S.W. into gov. Omsk and after a course of above 100 m., joins r. bank Irtysh 60 m. W. Ust-Kamenogorsk.

OUSSA Nona, a tribe, Chinese empire, Kalkas territory; lat. 50° N.; lon. 91° 50' E. about 80 m. long and 30 m. broad Kamsoung streams from the Tagara mountain range into it on the N. Large stupas are taken on this lake.

OUCHÉ (Latin, Ouse) a river France, rises in the mountains of Oise-et-Or, flows in a southerly course of about 60 m. N.E., and then S.W. past Dijon, and joins r. bank Saône, about 1 m. above St. Jean de Lône.

OUCHÉ, an ancient dist. of Upper Normandy France, now included in depts. Eure and Orne.

OUCHES (Lsm) a vil. and com. France dep. Haute Savoie, prov. Paysanay about 8 m. from Chamouni 1 bank Arve, about 800 ft. above the sea, with a church, and some trade in cattle and honey. Pop. 1713

OUCHI, Ucar, or YOUSSE-NONE a tn. Chinese Tartaristan, 220 m. N.E. Casaghar with a lofty mountain backing it to the S. and a large river in front facing the N. It is the central locality of an important district, possesses a mint, and carries on an extensive trade.

OUCHITZA, a tn. Russia, gov. Podolia on the Dniester 24 m. E.S.E. Kamenka with two churches, manufactures of cloth, and a trade. Pop. 1000

OUCHOGANAT, or MOUNT ST. ANTHONY an isl. N. Pacific Ocean, off Russian America lat. 59° 23' N. lon. 158° W. It is about 27 m. in extent, and rising from a low shore, forms a lofty and nearly perfect cone, covered with snow and ice, and without any appearance of tree or shrub. It is separated from the mainland by a channel about 6 m. wide, and is so lined by numerous, large detached rocks, as to make landing difficult.

OUCHI a vil. Switzerland cat. Vaud, on the Lake of Geneva, about 3 m. from Lausanne, of which it has been considered as the port. It contains the remains of an old castle, and a little inn in which Byron, while detained by bad weather for two days, wrote the Prisoner of Chillon.

OUCKENE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, 17 m. S. Brugua with a brewery. P. 2185

UD or UNA, a river Siberia, rises in the S.E. slope of the Stanovoi mountains flows E.N.E., and falls into a large bay of the Sea of Okhotsk, opposite island Follivier total course, 200 m. Its chief affluent is the Gallia, which it receives considerably above the town of Uda.

UIDAI or UNAI, a river, Russia, rises in S.W. of gov. Chuguey flows easterly about 8 m., and at last joins r. bank Soula, total course, 180 m.

UIDANULLA, a small tn. Hindoostan, prov. Bengal, Hooghly, dist. r. bank Ganges, 62 m. N.W. by N. Moorshedabad lat. 24° 46' N., lon. 87° 52' E.

UIDAY a kingdom Africa. See WADAY

UIDH (native, Apodhya) a kingdom, Hindostan under British protection, lat. 25° 20' to 30° N. lon. 79° 40' to 82° 30' E.; bounded N. by Nepal, and elsewhere surrounded by the N.W. provinces of the presidency of Bengal, length, N. to S., about 280 m.; greatest breadth, 180 m.; area 23,728 sq. m. The surface is mostly level, and highly fertile. It is watered by the Goggra, Goggra, Syle, and other tributaries of the Ganges, all of which have a general S.E. course. The Ganges itself flows nearly all its E. boundary. Wheat, barley, rice, sugar, indigo, and others of the richest products of India, are raised in large quantities; and in some districts, a vast amount of nitre and other salts effloresce on the soil. The country was, however, long greatly neglected, and, although some improvement has been taken place within the last twenty years, Ouda still presents an unfavorable

310 ft. high three dissenting chapels, three public schools, and a set of almshouses. About 2 m. N from the town is the site of Fotheringhay Castle, in which Mary Queen of Scots was beheaded. One large stone alone remains of the building. Pop. 2689.—(Local Correspondent.)

OUILA, a vil Russia, Finland, on the road between Præstviik and N.-Karleby. It is prettily situated near the Rönnskälet here crossed by a handsome bridge, and, though a small, is a thriving well-built place; with a church, an unusually handsome post-office, very extensive saw-mills, and a considerable export of deals.

OUONDA, or WONDA, a river, N Africa, which rises in a mountainous district in the S.E. of Senegambia, flows N.W., and joins the Koloro, after a course of about 130 m. Its chief affluent is the Camouling, which joins it on the left.

OURAL, Russia. See URAL MOUNTAINS

OURATEPEH, a tn. Bokhara. See UNATUPPA

OURCE, a river France, rises in the Monte Fanolles, in S.W. of Dep. Haute-Marne flows N.W. across part of Deps. Côte-d'Or and Aube, and joins r. bank Seine near Bar-le-Duc. Total course, 65 m.

OUROU, a river France, rises in N.E. frontier of dep. Aisne flows westerly S.W. and joins r. bank Marne, 8 m. N.E. Meaux. Total course, 50 m.

OUREME a tn. and par Portugal prov. Beira-Nova, on a lofty height 65 m. N.W. Lisbon. It is walled, and defended by a castle built by Alphonso I. Pop. 3840

OURGA, or OURGA a city Mongolia, r. bank Tula, 720 m. N.W. Peking, lat. 49° 2. lon. 107° 30' E. with streets so narrow that two persons on horseback can scarcely pass each other. There are numerous temples belonging to the lamas, and a college of Mongolia priests.

OURIQUE a tn. and par Portugal prov. Algarve, on a height, overlooking the extensive plain of Ourique, 42 m. S.W. Beja. Here, in 1130 a comparatively small body of Portuguese, headed by Don Alphonso Henriques, defeated a vast body of Moors, commanded by five kings. Henriques was in consequence saluted king, and laid the foundation of the Portuguese monarchy. Pop. 2650.

OURIOL, a tn. Russia, on the Ouriouinka, gov. and 97 m. S. Yalta, with manufactures of soap and a trade in corn and fur. Pop. 1190

OURMA, or OURMA a river Siberia, rises from a lake on the N.W. of gov. Tobolsk flows E., and falls into the W. shore of the Gulf of Ob. Total course, 90 m.

OURO-PRATO or OURA RICA a tn. Brazil cap. prov. Minas-Geraes, and of the mine, situated on a series of heights at the base of the Serra of its name 190 m. N.W. Rio-tilo.

OURO-PRATO.—From Rio-tilo, looking up the Ouriouinka river to Beja.

Jameira Surrounded by lofty, barren mountains, encircled by ravines and mingling excursions, placed under a sky which is almost always cloudy composed of narrow, crooked, irregular, and ill-kept streets, lined by houses built without symmetry, on broken, uneven ground, this town presents an appearance the very opposite of picturesque. The principal buildings are the Governor's residence, a large square structure, about 2800 ft. above the sea, more resembling a fortress than a palace, and partly occupied by the offices of the civil and military authorities of the province, five churches, two of them richly decorated; the townhouse, the treasury barracks, and theatre. It also possesses a public library a botanical garden with a normal school of agriculture attached, two primary schools and a college, with chairs of Latin and Portuguese, pharmacy and anatomy. An active trade is carried on with Rio-de-Janeiro, and with the towns in the N. and E. of the province. Some gold is found in the streams in the neighbourhood, but the quantity is so small that those who search for it and have no other occupation, are generally in miserable circumstances. Pop. 13 000

OURØE, an isl. Denmark, in the W. arm of the Isefjord, in the N. of isl. Seeland. It is about 4 m. long, by 3 m. broad OURDIMADOU, a vil W. Africa, Senegambia, r. bank Faldou, about lat. 14° 30' N. lon. 13° 10' W. It is agreeably situated, and occupied by Tordou, one of the Foulah tribes.

OURTHE, or Omura, a river Belgium, formed by two small streams, the one flowing W.S.W., the other N.N.E. which unite in the N. part of prov. Luxembourg the stream flows thence first N.W., then N.E. in a very winding course of 90 m. and joins the Meuse near Liège, having previously received the Amblève and the Vesdre, both on the right. It is navigable for 60 m.

OURBY par Eng. Cumberland, 4000 ac. P. 295

OURDEN, par Eng. Suffolk 1300 ac. P. 384

OURSE, several rivers, England.—1. Co. York, formed by the junction of the Swale and Yore, near Boroughbridge flows S.E. and 8 m. E. Goolk, unites with the Trust to form the estuary of the Humber total course about 60 m. for the last 45 m. of which or to York, it is navigable for large vessels, and for barges as far as Lincoln. Principal affluent Wharfe, Aire, and Don from the W. and Derwent from the N.—2 (Great) rises near Brackley, co. Northampton, flows in a general N.E. direction traverses the co. Northampton Bedford Huntingdon, Cambridge, and Norfolk, and falls into the Wash at King's Lynn, after a course of about 160 m., for the latter two-thirds of which it is navigable. Chief affluents, Ivel, Cam, Lark Little Ouse, Stook, and Nar.—3, (Little Ouse) rises in Suffolk flows N.W. and falls into the Great Ouse, on the borders of Cambridge and Oxford.—4. A small river co. Sussex, enters the English Channel near Bedford OURF a river Canada West, rises in the high lands, between Lakes Huron and Ontario, about lat. 44° N. flows S.E. and falls into the N.E. end of Lake Erie at Sandusky. There is a bar at its mouth with 8 ft. water on it; total course, 150 m. of which 25 m. are navigable.

OURBURN two pars. Eng. W. York.—1 (Great) 840 ac. P. 829.—2 (Little), 4066 ac. P. 566.

OURBURI a river Asia, rises in the S.E. of Manchooria, near the coast of the Sea of Japan flows almost due N., receiving numerous tributaries both on the right and left, and after a course of about 340 m., dividing into two branches, joins r. bank Amoor

OURT a river France, rises in dep. Côte-d'Or, flows S.E. and joins r. bank Yonne, a little above Rodez total course, 60 m. about 25 m. navigable

OURTON par Eng. Leicestershire, 2460 ac. P. 178.

OUTERAGH two pars. Irel.—1 Tipperary 1548 ac. P. 408.—2 Leitrim, 21 630 ac. P. 7028

OUTRATH par Irel. Kilkenny, 3050 ac. P. 441

OUTREAU, a tn. France, dep. Pas-de-Calais, 3 m. S.E. Boulogne, inhabitants mostly occupied in weaving, ship and boat building, fishing, and charcoal-making. Pop. 3568

OUTREPUENAS a vil. France, dep. Loire, 4 m. E. St. Etienne, of which it is a suburb. It has manufactures of ribbons, fireworks, cutlery, and trinkets. Pop. 1889

OUTWELL par Eng. Cambridge and Norfolk, 2618 ac. P. 1446.

OUTWOOD a hamlet, England, co. Lancashire, on the Irwell and the Manchester and Bolton canal 7 m. N.W. Manchester, with several collieries, cotton-mills, and print-works. Pop. 2560.

OUTA, or OWAN, a river, French Guiana, which descends from a mountain chain in the interior, flows N N E., and separating the island of Cayenne from the mainland, falls into the Atlantic, after a course of about 70 m.

OUZBIN, a vil Afghanistan, 85 m. E. Cabool, in a small elevated valley of the same name.

OVADA, a tn. Italy Piedmont, div Alessandria prov and 9 m. S. V. Aquila on the Orba. It is generally well built, and outside is a fine public walk. It has a beautiful parish and several other churches. Three convents, several schools, a hospital, and theatre, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, vernicol, iron and brass ware, several silk-mills, and a trade in wine and silk. Pop. 7000.

OVAE, a tn. and par Portugal, prov Douro, near the Atlantic, on the N shore of the Bay of Aveiro, 32 m. S. Oporto. It is well built, but is completely surrounded with sands, planted with sea-pines to prevent their encroachment. Inhabitants occupied in fishing and trade. Pop. 10 000.

OVAE, or SEDAU, a vil Hungary co. Eisenburg 9 m. from Fürstfeld, in Styria. It has a R. Catholic church and a trade in timber. Pop. 1113.

OVARI or OWAK, called also INNO DUC, a large bay, Japan, S. coast lat. Nippon, 50 m. E. Misaki. It divides into two branches by a promontory, which extends about 24 m. N to E., and terminates in the latter direction, in a point called Moro Bald.

OVERLONNE, a market to Oldenburg 1 bank Weser, 18 m. E. Oldenburg, with church, a provincial court, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 978.

OVENS, a river Australia, Victoria, co. Anglesey having its sources in a hilly district, about lat. 37° E. lon. 147° E. It flows N W. and falls into the Murray, lat. 35° 50' S., lon. 146° 10' E. Rush gold deposits have been found upon it.

OVER, several parts England.—1 A market tn. and par. co. and 14 m. E. Chester, on the Weaver, here crossed by a bridge, near the station of the Liverpool and Birmingham railway. It is an ancient place, has an old church, in the later English style, an independent chapel, a free grammar-school, and extensive salt-works, supplied from brine-pits within the parish. Area of par. 7469 ac. P. 2998.—2

Cambridge 3700 ac. P. 1256.—3 (derry) A vil and par. co. Wexford, about 5 m. N. E. Towmshury. It has an ancient parish church, with some Norman arches and a fine tower an independent chapel, a national school and quarries of building-stone. Area of par. 8820 ac. P. 958.—4, (church),

Cheshire, 829 ac. P. 237.—5 (compton) Dorset 788 ac. P. 188.—6, (stone) Northampton; 1940 ac. P. 236.—7, (stone), Somerset 2697 ac. P. 951.—8, (stone) Norfolk 598 ac. P. 260.—9 (ton) A vil and par. co. Hants near the source of the Test, 5 m. E. N. E. Whitechurch with a parish church, an independent chapel, and a workhouse. Area of par. 6573 ac. P. 1550.—10 (don) Two parts—1

Wilt 8020 ac. P. 1035.—2 York (N Riding) 5188 ac. P. 689.—11, (stone), Hants 4681 ac. P. 555.—12 (salt are), Warwick 1576 ac. P. 816.—13 (scorton) Oxford, 628 ac. P. 65.

OVER-DARWAY, a tn. England See DARWAY

OVERBLAERE, a vil and com. Belgium prov E. Flanders, on the Deinder 15 m. S. E. Antwerpen with an oil and four flour mills. Pop. 1687.

OVERFLAKKE, a tn. and par. Holland prov S. Holland, formed at the mouth of the Maas and Waal; bounded N by the Haringvliet, E. and S. by the Veltkreek and W. by the N. See. Including the former island of Goodereede to the W., which was added in 18 last century by damming out the intervening water, it measures 25 m. N W. to S. E., with a width of 3 to 7 m. It is very fertile, and yields wheat, barley, colts-wheat, and potatoes. Pop. about 17 000.

OVERHOLLEN, a prov Holland, bounded N by provs. Friesland and Drenthe, E. Prussia, S. prov Gelderland and W. Gelderland and the Zuider Zee, about 80 m. N W. to S. E., by 27 m. broad area, 984 sq. m. It is watered by the IJssel, which separates it from Gelderland, and by the Yoele and its affluents. Except a strip of aridaceous soil along the IJssel, presenting good stable and meadow land, the province mostly consists of sand and turf, and the chief products are horses, cattle that yield excellent butter, and sheep; though a little corn, wheat, barley, buckwheat, and rye is grown in sandy localities. Ruminating by steam-machinery, bleaching, dyling, and the manufacture of saloons, linen, and damask; boat-building, &c., are carried on. In 1851 it contained 328 schools, attended by 45,000 pupils. Chief towns—Ewold, Deventer and Kampen. Pop. (1851), 317 536.

OVERMEIRE, a vil and com. Belgium, prov E. Flanders, 10 m. E. Ghent with five breweries and several corn and oil mills. Pop. 2133.

OVERPELT, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov Limburg on the Demers, 19 m. N. Hasselt, with a brewery a distillery an oil and three flour mills. Pop. 1400.

OVERESCHIE a vil Holland, prov S. Holland, 3 m. N. W. Rotterdam on both ends the Sohle, here crossed by a bridge, with two churches, an orphan hospital and a school, and a trade in grain. Pop. (agricultural), 2187.

OVERTON a pari bor and par. N. Wales, co. and 21 m. S. E. Flint, 1 bank Dea, here crossed by a handsome stone bridge. It has a fine old church, but neither trade nor manufactures. Area of par. 4998 ac. P. (agricultural) 1478.

OVERTON (MAXTER), par Eng. Bedford, 2640 ac. P. 498.

OVEREYSCHE-WORRE-DARWAY a vil. and com. Belgium, prov Brabant on the Yoele, about 9 m. S. E. Brussels, inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture and hewing timber. It has also flour and oil mills, a brewery and distillery. Pop. 4667.

OVEREYSEL par Holland. See OVEREYSEL.

OVIDIOPOL a tn. Russia, gov. Kherson, on the Dniester about 15 m. above its mouth, 20 m. S. E. W. Odessa. It is poorly built and has some trade in salt brought from Abur man on the opposite coast, and sent into Podolsk. P. 8689.

OVEDO a prov Spain, Asturias, bounded N by the Bay of Biscay E. prov Santander, S. Leon and W. Lago. It is very mountainous and abounds in good pastures on which are raised a great number of cattle, goats, and swine, and is watered by the Valon, Eo, Bella, Nalón, Piloña and Narea. The agricultural productions consist chiefly of maize, wheat, kidney beans, potatoes, peas, rye, and hay, and filberts, oranges, lemons, and other fruits are grown. Linens, woollens, leather, cotton-ware, mills, mechanical tools, agricultural implements copper, glass, paper, arms, &c., are manufactured and considerable quantities of coal, raised in the province, are exported. The coast is wild and stormy, and there are few places accessible to vessels from the number of rocks and reefs by which it is lined. Area 6887 sq. ac. P. 501 000.

OVIDO, a city Spain, Asturias, esp. above prov 230 m. N. W. Madrid, 20 m. E. the Bay of Biscay. Like most old towns, Ovedo was constructed without any plan, and at different times its streets therefore, are very irregular, especially those within the walls. It has one large and nine small squares, and 60 streets, all kept very clean an imposing looking courthouse, a substantial prison, district prison for women numerous educational establishments, including a Universidad Literaria (a handsome square Doric building, in which are taught theology law philosophy, mathematics, music, and medicine, and which contains a library of 12 000 volumes, and a museum), various charitable foundations, of which the most conspicuous is the Hospicio Provincial, a magnificent edifice of Doric architecture, and one of the best of its class in the kingdom, afforded an asylum to foundlings, orphans, the deserted and leprosy of both sexes. The cathedral, although not large, is very elegant and beautiful. Ovedo contains some of the earliest Christian churches in the peninsula. These primitive churches are simple and solid, and usually provided with a projecting shed or roof at the entrance as a protection against the rainy climate. It contains also a number of monasteries, some of them now diverted to secular purposes. A small theatre, a great number of fountains and several fine promenades, of which that called San Francisco is the most beautiful, and has manufactures of hats, leather arms, surgery &c. Key took possession of the town in 1809 and gave it up to pillage for three days. It subsequently fell again and again into the hands of the enemy. Pop. 3364.

OVIOLIO a tn. Italy Piedmont, div and W. S. W. Alessandria with two churches, one of them an ancient Gothic structure, a courthouse, mont-de-piété, and castle; a court of justice, and a trade in wine and cattle. Pop. 2600.

OVIING, two parts, Eng.—1, Bucks, 871 ac. P. 442.—2 Sussex, 1946 ac. P. 576.

OVIINGDEAN, par Eng. Sussex; 1615 ac. P. 149.

OVINGHAM, a vil and par England, co. Northampton, 11 m. N. Eversham; with an elegant and commodious church; Frankynton, Walsayn, and independent chapel; a brewery, dye-works, blacksmith, and coal-mines. Barwick, the celebrated wood engraver, was born here. Area of par 15,740 ac. Pop. 8923.

OVINGTON, three pars. Eng. — 1, Essex, 705 ac. P 152. — 2, Hants; 1370 ac. P 163. — 3, Norfolk, 1497 ac. P 314.

OVOGA, a valley Ireland. See Avoca.
OVOLA one of the Fœces Ials, B. Pacific lat. 17° 41' N. lon. 178° 32' W (N.) about 8 m. long, and 7 m. broad, of volcanic formation. It is high and rugged, one of its peaks attaining an elevation of 2070 ft. The valleys extend only a short distance into the interior and leave but little level ground; they are, however, exceedingly fertile, and well cultivated. Its harbours are all formed by reefs, the best is Levuka, on the E. side of the island.

OVOG (Ilaka-nou), an Isl. Brazil N. prov. Maranhão, at the entrance of the Bay of Cumã lat. 2° 4' S. It is very flat; is separated from the land by a narrow strait, and inhabited by Indians.

OWASOU, a lake, U. States, New York, S.E. Auburn, about 17 m. long, by 1 m. wide. It is well supplied with fish, and has very picturesque scenery.

OWEN a in Württemberg, above Danube 19 m. S.E. Stuttgart, r. bank Leiniz with a church and a mineral bath. Pop. 1798.

OWEN (St.) two pars. Eng. — 1 Hereford 250 ac. P 1742. — 2, Gloucester P 948.

OWENDUFF par Irel Wexford 7980 ac. P 2146

OWERMOIGNE par Eng Dorset 371 ac. P 400

OWERSBY (R. & S.) par Eng. Lincoln 1028 ac. P 448

OWHYEE, one of the Sandwich Ials. See HAWAI

OWLA a decayed in Hindoostan, prov. Delhi 18 m. N.W. Bareilly. Near it are the ruins of palaces, mosques, and gardens.

OWIPEN, par Eng. Gloucester 790 ac. P 82

OWIMBY par Eng. Lincoln 1650 ac. P 249

OWNING par Irel. Kilkenny 4081 ac. P 1161

OWRA a in Hindoostan prov. Malwa, r. bank Chumool; lat. 24° 12' N., lon. 75° 26' E.

OWRAM (Kourat) a vil and township, England on York, immediately N.E. Halifax of which it may be considered a suburb. The village, finely situated on a height and romantic scenery commands chiefly of detached houses, occupied by persons employed in the worsted-mills and worsted manufactory. The church of the township is a handsome modern structure with an embattled and pinnacled tower. There are also some Dissenting chapels, and a free school. Pop. 15,285.

OWSLEBURY, par Eng. Hants, 5831 ac. Pop. 961

OWSTON two pars. Eng. — 1, Lincoln, 5350 ac. Pop. 3018. — 2, York (W. Riding); 2926 ac. Pop. 417

OWSTON a vil. England, on Lincoln, on the Trent, 8 m. S.E. Epsworth. It has no parish church, a handsome chapel, and manufactory of sucking, and other coarse hampers goods. Pop. 1692

OWTHORNE, par Eng. York (E. Rid. Ing.) 4430 ac. Pop. 462.

OWTHORPE, par Eng. Notts; 1700 ac. Pop. 137

OXBOROUGH, par Eng. Norfolk 2518 ac. Pop. 298.

OXCOMBE, par Eng. Lincoln, 1021 ac. Pop. 84.

OXEYDON (Kilrat) par Eng. Northampton 1630 ac. Pop. 222

OXENHALL, par Eng. Gloucester, 1887 ac. Pop. 398.

OXENHOPE, a hamlet and dist. England, on York 8 m. N.W. Bradford with a church a Baptist and two Methodist chapels, a national school, and manufactory of worsted goods. Pop. 2397

OXENTON, par Eng. on Gloucester 1060 ac. 1 op. 139.

OXFORD, or OXFORDSHIRE, an inland co. England, bounded N. by co. Northampton and Warwick, W. Gloucester, S. Berks, E. Buckingham area 480,000 ac. of which above 400,000 are said to be arable, meadow, and pasture. The E. part of the county presents elevations of hill and dale, the former, particularly the Chiltern Hills, being beautifully varied, with the woods, tracts of arable land, and open sheep downs. The central parts are more level, but here also the scene is adorned by numerous woods. In the N and W the country presents a level plain. The chalk-marl, green-sand, gault, iron-sand, oolite, Kimmeridge clay, and lias, appear at the surface in various parts of the county. Throughout a large portion of the county and N.W. from Oxford, the staple or surface soil is very thin and light, rapid in its yield, and well calculated for the growth of green crops and barley. Towards Gloucester the land slopes gently E. and W. Here grass lands divide the soil with tillage, and hedges and hedgerow timber cover the face of the country as with a network. The corn crops commonly cultivated are wheat barley of which vast quantities of malt are made, and oats and the common turnip and Swedish turnip are both extensively grown. The grass lands in the county being rich and extensive, particularly on the borders of the rivers, dairy husbandry is largely practised, and great quantities of butter made. Manufactures of little importance—the principal are the Wincey blankets Woodstock gloves and a coarse kind of velvet, called shag, made at Banbury. Principal rivers—Thames or Isis, Thame, Evenlode, Cherwell, Windrush, &c. Oxfordshire returns nine members to Parliament, namely, three for the county two for the city and two for the university of Oxford, and one each for the boroughs of Banbury and Woodstock. Principal city Oxford Pop. (1851), 170,489

OXFORD a city, England, esp. above on, and seat of one of the most celebrated universities in the world 55 m. W. & W. London on a gentle acclivity, between the Cherwell and the Isis, which here unite, and are crossed by several bridges, the principal of which are Folly Bridge, over the Isis, and Magdalen Bridge, over the Cherwell. In early times it was surrounded by walls, considerable portions of which still exist, and defended by a castle, of which the keep built in the time of Rufus, remains entire and is included in the precincts of the county jail. It is of a very irregular form, and contains only a few great thoroughfares, with a considerable number of narrow and crooked streets and lanes, especially on the W. side occupied by the lower classes of the population though considerable improvements have recently taken place. The principal street, called High Street, has a total length of about 1000 yards, and a width not uniform, but where greatest, about 55 ft. is traversed by several of the noblest structures of the city, and in other parts lined by quaint old houses and elegant modern shops, and is justly regarded as in many respects one of the finest streets in England. The streets in general are well paved, cleaned, and lighted; and water of excellent quality is abundantly provided.

UNIVERSITY AND ALL BOULEVARD COLLIERIES AND CHURCHES OF ST. MARY ALL SAINTS AND CATHEDRAL, HIGH STREET OXFORD.

Oxford being the see of a bishop, of course possesses a cathedral. It contains also thirteen parochial and three district churches; and has places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Independents, Baptists, and E. Catholics. The cathedral, which originally belonged to the priory of St. Frideswide, and is also the chapel of Christ Church College is a spacious gothic structure, inferior to most English cathedrals, and unfortunately situated in the exterior being in a great measure concealed by the college buildings which partly surround it, but forming on the whole a very fine building chiefly in the late Norman style. St. Mary's called also the University Church, finely situated on the N. side, and nearly in the centre of the High Street, and rendered conspicuous by its richly-decorated tower, terminating in a beautiful spire, 180 ft. high still ranks, notwithstanding the incongruous addition of a porch with twisted pillars given to it by Archbishop Laud as one of the finest Gothic structures of Oxford. St. Martin's Church is a modern structure with an unusual tower, well situated at the crossing of the four great thoroughfares—High Street, Queen Street, St. Aldate's, and Corn Market, and takes its name of Carfax from the French, 'Quatre voies' (four ways), since corrupted into Carfax, but possesses little architectural merit. St. Mary Magdalene presents several beautiful features, and has lately acquired additional interest from the Martyrs' Aisle, which has been added as a fit accompaniment of the Martyrs' Memorial, a splendid monument pile which stands close to it, near the spot where Ridley Latimer, and Crammer suffered martyrdom. St. Aldate's is chiefly remarkable for its antiquity, and its tower, surmounted by an octagonal spire. St. Giles is chiefly in the early English style, with lancet-shaped windows, and a square embattled tower. The chapel of Marton College consists of a choir and transept, the latter of which is also the parish church of St. John while the choir is the chapel of the college. This portion, though much disfigured by recent painting is one of the most beautiful buildings in Oxford, presenting an exquisite example of the geometrical decorated of the time of Edward I. It was built in 1277. The E. window is particularly fine, with a large circle, usually called a Catherine wheel, in the head the piers of the tower are of the same date, but the tower itself and the transept are of 15th century work, but very good. St. Peter-in-the-East, the most ancient church of Oxford, and originally Norman, though subsequently much altered by additions in the early English and subsequent styles is surmounted by a square tower the chancel is Norman, with good detail and underneath is a Grecian structure by Aldrich, with a tower terminating in a spire, which rises from within a circle of Corinthian pillars. Some of the other churches, both district and parochial, are handsome, and might well deserve notice in any other locality where they were not eclipsed by nobler structures. There are likewise three small cemetery chapels lately erected. The Eminent chapels are neat and commodious buildings, but with exception of that of the Wesleyans in New Inn Hall Lane, and that of the Independents in George Lane, which is a large and handsome Gothic edifice, possess little architectural merit.

The great boast of Oxford is its University, which, though not unrivalled as to the celebrity of its professors, and the completeness of its educational system, stands pre-eminently distinguished by the magnificence of its buildings and the richness of its endowments. The date of its original foundation is unknown, and it had long existed as an establishment of European celebrity, when it was incorporated by charter of Ed Henry III. A.D. 1144, under the title of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxford. But though thus named as a single body, it does not form one great establishment, contained, as in the case of the Scotch universities, within one enclosure, but consists of a number of separate establishments called colleges and halls, placed under independent management, and occupying not only distinct, but, in some instances, widely distant localities. The colleges are nineteen, and the halls five in number, but they scarcely differ from each other except in some peculiarities of management, the mode of education being in all essentially the same. They are named as follows:—

Colleges.	Titles of Heads of Houses.	Colleges.	Titles of Heads of Houses.
All Souls.	Warden.	Queens.	President.
Balliol.	Master.	St. John's.	President.
Brasen-Nose.	Principal.	Trinity.	President.
Christ Church.	Dean.	University.	Warden.
Corpus Christi.	Provost.	Wadham.	Warden.
Exeter.	Rector.	Worcester.	Provost.
Jesus.	Principal.
Lincoln.	Master.
Magdalene.	President.
Merton.	Warden.
New.	Warden.
Oriel.	Provost.
Pembroke.	Master.

In St. Aldate's is Christ Church College, the largest and grandest of the whole occupying an extensive range of buildings, in the form of three quadrangles, and communicating on the S. and E. with various roads, and a wide walk, called the Broad Walk, overshadowed with lofty trees, planted in the time of Charles II., which is used both by college and citizens as their favourite promenade. The front along the street has a length of 400 ft. and has, in its centre, a magnificent gateway, begun by Cardinal Welsey and completed after the design of Sir Christopher Wren, it is in the form of a circular tower, crowned with a dome, and contains the famous bell known by the name of the Great Tom of Oxford, measuring 7 ft. 1 in. in width, 5 ft. 9 in. in depth, and weighing nearly 8 tons. Directly opposite to Pembroke College, with a small elegant Ionic chapel adorned with a beautiful altar-piece. Immediately E. of Christ Church are the colleges of Oriel and Corpus Christi the former possessing in its library a building of the Ionic order, which, though unfortunately situated is regarded as one of the most perfect pieces of architecture in Oxford, and the latter entered under a square tower with rich carved niches, and containing over the altar of its chapel a fine painting of the Adoration of the Magi by Rubens. Balliol College is near Christ Church and All Souls Hall, the former consisting of two quadrangles entered under an ancient embattled tower, and chiefly remarkable for its chapel which has already been referred to as the parish church of St. John University College, said to have been originally founded by Alfred the Great, occupies an extensive range of buildings, with a front of 300 ft. along the S. side of High Street, the present buildings are of late date. On the same side of High Street, but at some distance W. is St. Mary Hall, consisting partly of antiquated, and partly of new buildings. On the N. side of High Street, and nearly opposite to University, is Queens's College, so called after Philippe, queen of Edward III., consisting of two spacious quadrangles, with one front to the street, containing a central gateway, crowned with an open canopy, surmounting a statue of Queen Caroline wife of George II. On the same side, and near its centre, close to St. Mary's Church, is All Souls College consisting of an old and a new quadrangle, the latter partly occupied by a magnificent library. The chapel of this college is much admired for the beautiful simplicity of its decoration and the imposing effect produced by its general appearance. Near to Queens's, but a little N., is New College, founded and built by William of Wykeham, in the time of Edward III. It is a good specimen of the perpendicular consisting of a large pile of buildings; among which special notice is due to the chapel, which though stripped of much of the gorgeous decoration, still holds a first place among the sacred edifices of the university. The tower and cloisters are also very fine. The garden of this college, beautifully laid-out, and interspersed with myrtle trees, furnishes a most delightful retirement. N. of High Street is a cluster of four nearly-contiguous colleges—Brasen-Nose, Lincoln, Exeter, and Jesus. Brasen-Nose has a good 12th century gateway tower, but the rest of the buildings are of a very late and mixed style, Exeter and Lincoln have been, in great part rebuilt. Further N. is Balliol College, so called after its founder John Balliol, father of the Balliol who figures in Scottish history, and remarkable chiefly for its fine Gothic gate. To the N. of Balliol is Trinity College, entered under an elegant modern square tower, embellished with statues, and surrounded on the top with a handsome balustrade.

The buildings are arranged in two courts, and are mostly modern, but little of the original structures remain, the garden front is a picturesque mixture of the Renaissance and Gothic. Still further N. is St. John's College, much admired both for the elegance of its buildings, partly constructed from a design of Inigo Jones, at the expense of Archbishop Land, and for the beauty of its gardens. The colleges already mentioned though covering a large area, are more or less contiguous, and arranged in clusters, the others are more isolated. They are Wadham College, on the N. side, Worcester College, near one extremity, in the N.W.; and Magdalen College, at the nearly opposite extremity, in the S.E. Wadham presents in its buildings, arranged in an extensive quadrangle, a very pleasing example of the later perpendicular style, consisting partly of a lofty hall, lighted by painted glass, and a spacious and well proportioned chapel, with a beautiful E. window by Bernard Van Limburg. Worcester is remarkable chiefly for its pleasant and retired situation, and beautiful gardens, while Magdalen, placed so as to form a conspicuous object in entering the city by the London road is distinguished alike by the fine cluster of its great quadrangle, the classic and elegant decorations of its chapel and the extent and beauty of its meadows, gardens, and walks, but chiefly by the tower, an exquisite specimen of rather late perpendicular and one of the most gracefully proportioned buildings in the kingdom.

Besides the buildings of each individual college and hall are others of an equally, and even more magnificent description, belonging to all in common or to the university property as called. Of these the most important are the Theatre, built by Sir Christopher Wren and used by the university on great public occasions, and, though only 80 ft. long by 70 ft. broad, so arranged as to accommodate nearly 4000 persons the Schools, used for the examination of candidates for degrees, and similar purposes, and consisting of a handsome quadrangle, of late or detached Gothic, the buildings of which partly form a picture-gallery and partly accommodate the rich treasures of the Bodleian Library which occupies one side of the quadrangle, the Ashmolean Museum, which, though neither in extent nor value to what might be expected in such a locality is remarkable as being the earliest public museum established in this kingdom and as containing the collections of the Trustees of Elias Ashmole &c. the Radcliffe Library a splendid structure owned by a donor, which and Radcliffe Institution, a magnificent range of buildings by Cookwell, recently completed, partly for the custody and exhibition of works of art, and partly as a foundation for the teaching of modern languages. In connection with the University may be mentioned the Botanic Garden, probably the oldest, but by no means one of the best, in the kingdom; but lately much improved, and enriched with the extensive Fielding Herbarium, in addition to the valuable collections before possessed.

The buildings and establishments in Oxford, not connected with the university nor yet referred to, but deserving of notice, are the townhall, a spacious stone building with a basement of rustic-work, used for municipal purposes; numerous parochial, national, and other schools the Radcliffe Infirmary; the lunatic asylum founded by Dr. Radcliffe, stands on Housington Hill, more than a mile out of the town. town and county jails, the house of industry &c. Oxford depends almost entirely on the University, and has no manufactures worthy of mention. In corn, sent into it from the surrounding districts, a considerable trade is carried on and, for the general purposes of transport, great facilities are afforded by the river and the Oxford canal; and by the Great Western, a branch of the London and North Western, and the Oxford, Worcester and Wolverhampton railways.

Oxford is supposed to be an abbreviation of Ozenford, a name said to have been originally given to the town in consequence of the existence of a ford for cattle over the lake, in its immediate vicinity. The date of its origin cannot be determined. A nursery appears to have been founded in it early in the 8th century and in 892 an act of confirmation by Pope Martin II. describes it as an ancient seat of learning. It suffered much from the ravages of the Danes but recovered under the fostering care of King Alfred who often made it his residence, collected money in it, and aided liberally to its privileges and endowments. Parliament repeatedly met in it during the reign of Canute, and his son and successor Harold Godwinson, was crowned and died at it. At the Norman conquest, on its refusal to submit, William took it by storm, and gave it to Robert de Oilly or d'Oilly, who, to insure its submission both built a strong castle on its W. side, and enclosed it by earthen ramparts; the keep of which, as mentioned before, still remains. In 1142 the Empress Matilda, having taken refuge in it, was so severely handled by the Parliamentarians and the Commendators, that it scarcely remained to lift its head till the Restoration. Oxford claims to be a borough by prescription, and is governed by a mayor, nine aldermen, and thirty councillors; but the members of the university are exempted from their jurisdiction. Both the borough and the university send each two members to Parliament. Pop. (1851), 27,973.

OXHILL, par. Eng. Warwick, 1600 ac. S. 81° 10' E. 4 m. long, and 1½ m. broad. OXIRA, a river, New Granada. See GARACOL. OXNA, one of the Shetland Islands, Scotland, 4 m. S.W. Sulloway. Pop. 21.

THE RADCLIFFE LIBRARY AND ALL SOUL AND MANSER-ROSE COLLEGES, OXFORD.

forms a conspicuous feature in every view of Oxford, and contrasts somewhat strangely though not unharmoniously with the Gothic edifices around it, the Radcliffe Observatory, consisting of wings and a light and elegant centre, surmounted by a tower in imitation of the Temple of the Winds at Athens; the Clarendon, originally built as a printing-office for Lord Clarendon's works, but now used as a geological museum, lecture-rooms, and public offices. University Printing Office, a very extensive building by Elgar; and the Taylor university are exempted from their jurisdiction. Both the borough and the university send each two members to Parliament. Pop. (1851), 27,973.

OXHILL, par. Eng. Warwick, 1600 ac. S. 81° 10' E. 4 m. long, and 1½ m. broad.

OXIRA, a river, New Granada. See GARACOL.

OXNA, one of the Shetland Islands, Scotland, 4 m. S.W. Sulloway. Pop. 21.

OXNAM, par Scot Roxburgh; 21,120 sq. P 668
 OXNEAD, par Eng Norfolk, 844 sq. P 57
 OXNEY, par Eng Kent; 816 sq. P 26
 OXOMERIA, a small co., N.W. coast lat. Tim. Gracula Archipelago. Pop. 8000.

OXTED, par Eng Surrey 3637 sq. P 1084.
 OXTON, a vil. and par England, co. Nottingham, 6 m.
 S.W. Southwell with a parish church, a Wesleyan chapel a free school, and manufacturers of stockings and lace. Area, 3550 sq. Pop. 850

OXTON, a co. England, co. Chester on a hill, 3 m.
 S.W. Hirkenneth with many handsome residences, and a church. The principal portion of the inhabitants are Liverpool merchants. Pop. about 2007

OXUS, AMOO, AMOO DABIA, or JIRHOON, a large river
 Independent Tertiary lacine from the small mountain lake Sur-Kol, within the district of Pamir; lat. 37° 27' N.
 lon. 78° 40' E., at an elevation of 15,800 ft. above sea-level flows S.W. to about lat. 37° N., lon. 68° E. when it somewhat abruptly turns to the N.W. which course it continues to hold without any very wide deviations, till it falls into the Sea of Aral, by several mouths, having traversed the territories of Bukhara, Bokhara and part of Kluva, and drained a basin, with an area of 221,256 sq. m. Its entire length from source to mouth is 1314 m. At its termination it forms an extensive, marshy delta. It has numerous and considerable tributaries but little or nothing is known about them. The regions it traverses are for the most part sandy, barren, and wholly uninteresting.

OXWICH, par Wales, Glamorgan 1602 sq. P 359

OXWICK, par Eng Norfolk 719 sq. P 70

OYAPOK, a river, S. America, forming the boundary on the E., between French Guiana and the Brazilian territory
 It is formed by two head-streams which originate in a mountainous region about lat. 2° N., whence it flows nearly due N and falls into the Atlantic Ocean, a little W. of Cape Orange
 lat. 4° N. lon. 51° 30' W. forming a kind of bay 12 m wide, entire course, about 185 m. At its mouth is the small town of Orapo, or St. Louis.

OYCKE, a vil and com Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 14 m
 S.E.W. Ghent, with an oil and two flour mills. Pop. 1931

OYGHLEM, a vil and com Belgium prov. W. Flanders, 1 bank Lys 10 m S. Bruges with a flour-mill, inhabitants chiefly employed in weaving linen. Pop. 1221

OYNE, par Scot Aberdeen, 11,000 sq. P 819

OYONAK, a co. France, dep. Ain, 8 m N Nantua
 Tur, small-house wooden utensils, last, tool for artists, &c. are manufactured, and considerable trade is carried on in timber. Pop. 2968

OYSTER, -1, A harbour W. Australia co. Plantagenet, off King George Sound; lat. 35° N lon 117° 52' E. Its entrance is narrow, and has not more than 14 or 15 ft. at high water abundance of wood and fresh water are to be had here.—2, A bay, W. side Maria Island, E. coast Van Diemen's Land; lat. 42° 40' S lon 148° 5' E.—3 An Isl. Bay of Bengal, off the Aracan coast lat. 50° 12' N lon 92° 53' E. (a).— 4 An Isl. China Sea, Quemooy Bay a little N E of Quemooy, about lat. 24° 38' N lon. 118° 39' E

OYSTERMOUTH, a vil. and par Wales, co. Glamorgan, E. side bay and 5 m. S.W. Swansea. It has a parish church, Independent, Calvinistic, and Wesleyan Methodist chapel; a national school, quarries of limestone, some of which polish like marble, and valuable oyster-fabrics. The village is much resorted to for summer-quarters. Area, 5194 sq. Pop. 1938.

OZAMA, a river, Hayti, rises in the central range of the island, flows first S.E. then S.W. and falls into the sea at St. Domingo, after a course of above 50 m; chief affluents are the Isabella and the Gaveana

OZARA, or OZONA, a market to. Hungary co. Feina, on the Sta. 73 m. S.E. Pesth. It belongs to Prince Esterhazy, and contains a fine palace. Pop. 8408.

OZEONA, a vil and com Italy Piedmont div Turin prov and about 10 m from Ivrea r bank Malonea or Mal ona, here crossed by a bridge. It has a handsome church a communal school an old castle, a large milk-gill and a trade in agricultural produce and fuel-timber

OZERNATA, two forts Russia, gov Orenburg on the Ural The one about 75 m. E.E.P. Orenburg consists of about 200 houses, and is regularly fortified and surrounded by a fosse the other distinguished by the name of Nijer-Orenskaya, is about 60 m. S.W. Orenburg, and though also fortified, is comparatively insignificant.

OZIERI, or OZIERI, a to Isl. Sardinia, div. and 15 m.
 E.S.E. Sassari, esp. prov. of same name, unapparently situated in a deep basin open to the N. and surrounded on other sides by lofty heights, of which the most conspicuous is that of Monserrato, on the W. It consists in general of substantially built houses, distributed in narrow, uneven, and winding streets, in the sea of a bulwark, the seat of a superior law court, and has a cathedral several other churches, a diocesan seminary two convents superior, elementary, and infant schools, a comfortable town-house casino, and prison manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and a trade in these and in wool skins, horses, cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 8488

—The PROVINCE greatest length, 38 m; breadth 18 m area, about 500 sq. m., is generally mountainous, watered by numerous small streams and possesses extensive pastures, on which great numbers of free horses and cattle are reared

OZLEWORTH, par Eng Gloucester 1114 sq. P 83

OZUREOV, a co. Poland, prov. and 75 m. W. B. V.
 Warsaw, r. bank Bzura. Pop. 6060.

P

PA or BAHAM, a co. Tibet, 1 bank Kucha Kiang
 lat. 29° 5' N, lon. 98° 50' E.

PA CHOO, a co. China, prov. Petcheloo, 55 m S. Pekung
 PA CHUEN-SAN, SE MADAGASCAR ISLANDS.

PAAL, a vil Austria, Styria, circle Judenburg, 44 m from Unkenmarkt with steel-works, producing steel unapproved for certain purposes. Pop. 460

PAANORA, or OCEAN ISLAND, S. Pacific Ocean lat.
 6° 50' N; lon. 167° 45' E. (a), of a circular form, high in the centre, about 15 m in circumference. Cocoa-nuts and ferns may be obtained here. Island thickly inhabited

PAAR, a river, Bavaria, which rises near Friedberg, E. of Augsburg, flows N.N.E. past Altheim, and joins r. bank Danube, 5 m. below Ingolstadt, total course, 70 m.

PAARDORF, or PAPOOF, a vil. Lower Austria, 84 m
 N.W.E. Vienna, with a church and a castle. Pop. 1091

PABHAT, three mts., Himalia, Scotland—1, Bound of Harle, 44 m. N. Berara, nearly circular; 2 1/2 m. long with a peak 2960 ft. high. Pop. 25—2 Co. Tyrone, 6 1/2 m

S. Barra, in Palmy Sound 1 1/2 m by 1 m Pop. 10.—3
 Co. Inverness, at the entrance of Broadford Bay, Isle of Skye. Pop. 14.

PABILLONIS, or PAVILLONIS, a vil, Isl. Sardinia, div Cagliari, about 8 m. from San Gavino l. bank Suro with two churches, an elementary school, means of bricks, tiles, and earthenware, and a trade in wine, fruit, cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 1809

PABLO peace MOVING, a vil and com. Spain, New Castile, prov. and about 28 m from Toledo with a church, courthouse, prison and school numerous flour-mills, and a trade in charcoal. Pop. 1512

PACAJA or PACAYA, a river Brazil, prov. Para, falling into the estuary of the Para, opposite Breves, and W. Ocaia, after a N. course of about 180 m

PACARAIMA (SIERRA), a mountain range, S. America, forming part of the boundary between Brazil and Venezuela, stretching E. and W. for about 200 m., near lat. 4° N., and between lon. 59° and 68° W. Its height does not exceed, in the E. part, 1500 ft. It is of granitic formation, and for the most part bare of wood.

PACERO, or PACEROO, a n. Stilly, prov and 4 ym. S. E. Trapani with a trade in wine, corn, oil, barrels, and salt. Pop. 3000.

PACENTRO a n. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Molise II 4 m. E. Sulmona, with four churches and a convent. Pop. 3660.

PACHIA or PACHA, a river Russia, rises in the N. of gov. Novgorod, flows W. to Hericks, then N. to Ingov. Petersburg, and joins L. bank Svir. total course, 180 m.

PACHACAMAC—1. A group of small islands close upon the coast of Peru, 8 ym. by E. Lima; lat. 15°18' S. lon. 76°56' W. (a).—2. The ruins of a n. temple on the mainland of Peru, directly opposite above islands. The temple stands on the summit of a hill with three terraces, 250 ft. high, the height of the main wall being 80 ft., the form is rectangular, the base being 500 ft. by 400 ft. The remains of the town, which has been built of sun-dried bricks, occupy some surrounding ground, of low elevation $\frac{1}{2}$ m. to the N., also forming a rectangle, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. by $\frac{1}{2}$ m. in extent.

PACHINO, a n. Stilly, prov and 22 m. S. E. W. Syracuse, with a small harbour and an active tunny fishery. Pop. 1200.

PACHITLA a river Peru, rises in the E. slope of the Andes about lat. 11 S.; flows easterly N. into the Pampas del Barramendi, receiving numerous tributaries, and joins L. bank Ucayali, after a course of about 200 m.

PACHUCA, a n. Mexican Confederation, dep. and 50 m. N. N. E. Mexico, 5112 ft. above sea-level, next to Taseo, has the oldest mining-works in Mexico. Pop. including suburbs Pachuquilla, 5000.

PACHUCACA, or PAMAGACA, a river, Peru issues from a lake on S. E. slope Cordillera de Huambo, flows first N. N. W. past the town of Chalbuzan, then nearly due N. and joins L. bank Apurimac total course, 120 m.

PACIFIC OCEAN (French, Océan Austral, Mer du Sud, or Grand Océan Pacifique, German, Stilles Ozean, or Stiller Meer) the far largest of the great divisions of water on the surface of the globe, extends from the arctic to the antarctic circles, over 133 degrees of latitude, and from the W. coast of the continent of America to Austral, Papua, Florin, Sumatra, Java, Sumatra, and the E. coast of Asia, over nearly 160 degrees of longitude, area, estimated at 50,000,000 sq. m. exceeding all the dry land on the globe. It is usually divided by geographers into the N. and the S. Pacific, separated from each other by the equator, but another division, which has the advantage of being more distinctly marked by great physical features, is into three regions—a Boreal or N. extending from Behring's Strait to the arctic circle to the tropic of Cancer, an equatorial, including the whole expanse between the tropics and an Austral or S., extending from the tropic of Capricorn to the antarctic circle. The most distinguishing features of the Pacific are the countless number of comparatively small islands spread over the surface, more especially of its equatorial region, and the numerous chain of volcanoes which stretch almost continuously along its shores, and form one vast volcanic circle. In the S. it is separated from the Antarctic Ocean only by an arbitrary line, but in other directions, both its boundaries and its communications with other oceans are well defined. On the E. the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, after meeting at Cape Horn, and communicating at the Strait of Magellan, become separated by the whole width of the American continent, though, near the centre, where the Isthmus of Panama forms the connecting link between the N. and S. divisions, the distance between the seas becomes less than 50 m. Along the whole of the American coast, the indentations formed by the Pacific are more remarkable for number than magnitude. Not one of these is large enough to form an inland sea, and, even among islands, not one is due to the E. of Panama, the Gulf of California, and the remarkable chain of coasts, commencing in Puget Sound, and stretching N. between the mainland and Vancouver's and Queen Charlotte's Islands. In the N., the Pacific gradually contracts in width, the continents of America and Asia stretching out and approximating so as to leave the comparatively narrow channel of Behring's Strait as the only communication between the Pacific and the Arctic Ocean. Between the Strait on the N., the Aleutian Islands on the S., and the remarkable peninsulas of Alaska on the E., and Kamtschatka on the W., one of the largest and best-defined branches of the Pacific is the Sea of Okhotsk. Still farther W., on the opposite side of the peninsula of Kamtschatka, is the Sea of Okhotsk, partaking still more distinctly of the character of an inland sea; as it has no communication except with the Pacific, through a series of passages, of more or less width, between the islands of the Kurile chain, and one passage leading between the Island of Saghalien, and the fore of Japan. This sea, formed between the continent of Asia and the Japanese islands, communicates by the Straits of Corea with the Whangpoo or Yellow Sea, which itself opens directly into the Pacific. Still farther S., between the Philippine Islands and the coast of Asia, lies the China Sea, with the gulfs of Tonquin and Siam; and among the islands of the Indian Archipelago are numerous enclosed seas, as the Mindoro Sea, Java Sea, &c. (See INDIAN ARCHIPELAGO.) With the Indian Ocean the Pacific communicates by the Straits of Malacca, Anjer, Lombok, Alor, Torres, Bass, &c.

The islands of the Pacific are so numerous, that it is difficult to give an enumeration of them, even in groups. Commencing on the American coast, at the Strait of Magellan, and proceeding N., an uninterrupted chain lines the shores of Patagonia, and terminates in the large island of Chile, off the S. coast of Chili. We have afterwards a long stretch of coast along which many islands occur, but we reach the equator before meeting with any group deserving of notice. That group is the Galapagos, directly under the equator, and about 500 m. W. from the mainland. Another very long stretch N., during which the Revillagigedo, Ajloja, Guadalupe, and several other small groups, are met with, brings us to a chain of large islands lining the coasts of British and Russian America, and containing among others, those of Vancouver and Queen Charlotte. Turning W. we have the Kodiak Archipelago, at some distance off the E. coast of the peninsula of Alaska, and the still larger chain of the Aleutian Islands, curving W. S. W. from the extremity of that peninsula, and terminating the groups of the Pacific, so far as belonging to the American continent. On the opposite continent of Asia, the islands commence with the Kurile chain, stretching S. S. W. from the extremity of the peninsula of Kamtschatka, and afterwards continued in the same direction by the far more important islands of Japan, the Philippines, and other large islands of the Indian Archipelago. In the S. region of the Pacific, beyond the tropic of Capricorn the islands are few in number, but include the important group of New Zealand. Between the tropics, the principal groups are, N. of the equator the Sandwich, Ladrones or Markama, and Caroline; and S. of the equator, the Marquesas, Low Archipelago, Society, Friendly, Feejee, New Caledonia, New Hebrides, and Solomon.

The mean level of the Pacific, as ascertained by measurements taken in the Bay of Panama and the Gulf of Mexico, is supposed to be $\frac{1}{2}$ ft. above that of the Atlantic. Its depth has not been ascertained, though there seems no reason to doubt it descends much further below than the loftiest mountain heights ascend above its surface. Owing to the vast extent of the Pacific, the operations of nature on its bosom are carried on in the most extensive scale and the general laws by which tides, winds, and currents are regulated, suffer fewer modifications than in narrower seas. The tides wave commencing at the equator, diverge from it towards the poles, and, proceeding with vast velocity, and without obstruction is scarcely perceptible among the central islands of the Pacific. Hence, in the Low Archipelago, at How Island and Tahiti, the rise is only 1 ft., and at the Sandwich Islands 2 ft. It is only when, by the proximity of a mainland diminishing the depth of the water, or by any similar cause the natural scope of the wave is changed, or obstacles to its progress are interposed, that an accumulation takes place, and high tides are formed. In the Pacific, however, there never exist the enormous heights for which some parts of the Atlantic and Indian Oceans are celebrated. In the solitary instance of Fort Kinkaid, in Cook's Inlet, the rise is as high as 23 ft.; but on all the W. coast of America it is usually below 10 ft., and only in the Bay of Panama varies from 12 ft. to 15 ft. The prevailing winds of the Pacific, like those of other great seas, are divided into regular trade-winds and variables, the former blowing from the S. E. on the S., and from the N. E. on the N. side of the equator, gun-sally within the tropics, though sometimes as far as 80° on either side of it, and the latter, consisting partly of a belt of variable and light winds, interposed between the trades, and partly of other irregular winds which blow generally from N.W. and S.W., from 30° of lat. to the poles. In the W. and N.W. parts of the Pacific, the influence of the monsoons of the Indian Ocean is strongly felt, and violent typhoons, for which the China Sea is noted, are not infrequent. In the E. along the whole of the W. coast of Annesley, the winds differ so much in direction and character, that it has been thought necessary to divide them into four distinct zones. In the first zone, extending from Behring's Sea to lat. 30° N., the winds blow, in all seasons, in every direction, and no kind of regularity can be traced. In the second zone, from lat. 30° to 5° N. the prevailing winds so strongly resemble, that they may be classed as monsoons, blowing generally from November to April, from the N.W. and N.E. and from May to October, from S. or S.W. and S.E. The regions within the sphere of these winds are subject to violent storms and tempests, occasionally to, about 70 or 100 leagues from land, between lat. 15° 15' and 15° N., they are visited in February and March with remarkable calms. In the third zone, from lat. 5° N. to 30° S. the prevailing winds have the character of trade-winds but, instead of having the same direction throughout, appear to be regulated by that of the coast blowing permanently from the S. along the coasts of Chili and Peru, though sometimes sinking into calms immediately under the equator. In the fourth zone, lat. 30° S. to Cape Horn, the N. and S. monsoons recommence often blowing with such violence, particularly from the S., that vessels are driven from their anchors in the road of Valparaiso still further S., as the Cape is approached, the prevailing winds become S.W. and W., and convert the whole tract within their sphere into a region of storms and tempests.

The currents of the Pacific are not generally so strongly marked as those of the Atlantic, but the larger scale on which they are exhibited, free them from much of the complexity attaching to those of the latter and makes it easy to present them under a very simple form. First, the antitropical drift current, flowing apparently from the icy barriers of an antarctic continent, enters the Pacific, and, after proceeding N. to New Zealand, trends E., and retains that direction till it impinges on the W. coast of Patagonia. The obstacle thus encountered divides it into two branches; the smaller of which takes a S. direction, and enters the Atlantic by doubling Cape Horn. The larger branch, to which the name of the Furuvien or Humboldt's current has been given, proceeds N. along the coast of S. America, till it meets a new obstacle in the Isthmus of Panama, and turns W. Here the whole width of the Pacific has open before it, and it proceeds, under the name of the S. equatorial current, without meeting with any obstacle, till it reaches its W. boundaries, when one part, striking the coast of America, turns E., and forms the American current, another part, forcing its way between the different islands, enters and is lost in the Indian Archipelago, and a third part, reflected by the coast of China, turns N., and, on reaching the Isles of Japan, contributes to form what is called the Japanese current. The configuration of the islands and the E. coast of Siberia, as well as a strong current which sets in from the N. through Behring's Strait, come in giving it an E. direction, which again carries it across the Pacific to the N. American coast, to be there again deflected, first S. along the shores of the Atlantic, and then E., when it finally becomes merged in what is called the N. equatorial current. Between the N. and S. equatorial currents, occupying a narrow zone between them, has been traced, and, from pursuing an opposite direction, has received the name of the equatorial counter current. The influence of these currents, particularly that of the Furuvien or Humboldt's current, in lowering the temperature of the warmer regions into which it is carried, is very marked. While the temperature without the current ranges from 73° S. to 85° S. Fahr. it ranges within it from 69° S. to 65° S. Fahr., and while the mean temperature of 13° S. is in air 79° 84° and in ocean 79° 70° Fahr., that of Callao, under the same lat., was, during its warmest months, found to have a mean of only 68° 25° in air, and 68° 55° Fahr. in ocean. The difference, accordingly, respectively in 10° 40° and 12° 4° Fahr., can only be accounted for by the modifying influence of the current.

The importance of the Pacific consists primarily in the means of communication which it opens up in the most opposite quarters of the globe, but is not confined to these. The numberless islands spread over its surface, are equally remarkable for their beauty and for the value and variety of their products and its fisheries still continuously to reward the courage and toils of those who engage in them. In addition to the endless varieties of fish adapted for human subsistence, the mightiest dominions of the deep which their fecundity hatches within its bosom; and the whaling grounds though rendered far less productive than they might have been in consequence of the indiscriminate havoc which has prevailed have not ceased to afford remunerative employment to those bands of hardy seamen. The Pacific was seen for the first time by Europeans in 1513. Vasco Nunez de Balboa, the Spanish governor of Darien, proceeding on native information, set out on an exploring expedition across the isthmus, and, having ascended a hill, saw the boundless ocean spread out before him. As his view extended chiefly to the S. he gave it the name of the Mar del Sur or South Sea. About eight years after the celebrated navigator Fernando de Magalhães, delighted apparently with the calms of its tropical regions, though he had previously encountered stormy weather, and called, as he expressed it, con gran tormenta, called it the Pacific. The name is not appropriate but the other names suggested have not found favour, and that of Pacific, having now acquired a kind of prescriptive right, promises to maintain its ground.

PACKANGA a str. Malay Peninsula, on a river of same name lat. 3° 30' N. It was formerly a place of importance, with a considerable export of gold-dust, tin, and rattans, but is now greatly decayed.

PACKEINGTON three pars Eng. —1, Leicester and Derby 2860 as. Pop. 1294.—2 (Great) Warwick, 2451 as. Pop. 801.—3 (Little) Warwick, 1110 as. Pop. 143.

PAC KWODD, par Eng. Warwick, 1655 as. Pop. 95. PACCO a large and handsome vil. Philippines, at Losow, in the environs of Manila, celebrated for its church, which contains an image of our Saviour, the object of numerous pilgrimages. Many of the inhabitants are artists, house-painters, and builders. Pop. 6500.

PACHAHILIA a vil. and par Brazil, prov. Rio de Janeiro, 12 m. W.S.W. Magé with a church, several brick and tile works, and a considerable trade in fruit. Pop. 2000.

PACOHIA, a river, New Granada, isthmus of Panama. It unites with the Indio, and forms a broad, rapid, and winding stream, which enters the Pacific, 18 m. E. Panama, and is navigable at high water for large vessels to Samboya.

PACTOLUS, or BAGOLLY, a small stream, Asiatic Turkey, Anatolia, sandjak Aidin. It issues from the Delat-dagh, flows first W. and then N.W. past Sardis, and, after a course of about 18 m., joins L. bank Sarabat. It was celebrated by the ancients for its golden sands, which were fabled to have been caused by the bathing of Midas.

PACUHI two small rivers, Brazil prov. Minas-Geraes. The one flows W. about 80 m., and joins a bank Rio-Fran cisco, a little above the confluence of the Paraetati the other flows W. N.W. forming part of the boundary between prov. Minas-Geraes and Bahia, and joins a bank Verde, a tributary of the São Francisco.

PADANG a str. and Dutch prov. W. coast, Isl. Sumatra. The town, near the mouth of the Padang river in the Indian Ocean, lies in lat. 0° 57' S. lon. 95° 2' E. It used to be the most miserable and irregular place in the East inhabited by Europeans, but since 1838, when it became the residence of the provincial governor, and the seat of the courts of justice, and the commencement of education, it has greatly improved, and is now a pleasant place, with many well-built houses, among which are a Calvinistic and a R. Catholic church (the latter the only one in the island), and a good school. Some of the inhabitants are excellent goldsmiths. Pop. (1845), 10,000.

—The province is of limited extent. Gambier, coffee, and pepper are cultivated, and a trade in saffron, gold, benzoin, camphor, tortoise-shell, trepan, black pepper, wax, and oil, is carried on with Penang, Singapore and Holland.

PADANG-ARAB is in lat. 0° 56' S. lon. 100° 30' E. PADANG-MAW, a str. in Borneo, a bank Branyall, 10 m. S.W. Prome.

PADBURY, par Eng. Bucks, 1900 as. Pop. 660.

PADDINGTON, a par. England, co. Middlesex, forming the N.W. suburb of London. It contains numerous fine streets, terraces, squares, and detached houses; three parish churches, a school of arts, and chapels for Baptists, Wesleyans, and other Dissenters. The Great Western Railway crosses in this parish, where it has a large and commodious station and the Paddington canal, communicating with the principal canals of the kingdom, and with the Thames at Lambeth, by means of the Regent's canal, has here its chief basins, and extensive wharfs and warehouses. Area, 1877 ac. Pop. 46,850.

PADDLESWORTH two par. Eng. Kent.—1 849 ac. Pop. 50—3 See SHORNALAN.

PADDOCK—Wm. MANN, a harrist, England, co. York par and so near Huddersfield, that it is connected with it by a continuous range of houses. It has a neat parish church with a square embattled tower a Friends meeting-house, and manufactures of woollen goods, which employ the greater part of the inhabitants. Pop. 5536.

PADDE, a vil. Hungary Thither Thoma, co. Toronto, on the Thames, 29 m. E. Baginod with a Greek church, and a considerable trade in cattle, sheep, and swine. P. 1857

PADEVOLLE, a vil. and com. Austrian Italy prov. Brescia, 5 m. from Lonato, W. side Lake Garda. It has a church, and some trade in wine and olive-oil. Pop. 1485.

PADERBORN, a tn. Prussia, prov. Westphalia, prov. and 50 m. S. by W. Minden at the source of the Pader. It is an old and gloomy town, surrounded by a wall, and entered by five gates. It is the see of a R. Catholic bishop, and has a cathedral, a large edifice of the 11th century four other churches, a townhouse of picturesque appearance a R. Catholic seminary and gymnasium, a Jewish school, nursery two monasteries, an infirmary and orphan asylum, several law courts and public offices, a historical and antiquarian society manufactures of starch and tobacco, and breweries and distilleries, and a considerable foreign trade. It was at one time a member of the Hanseatic League. The ground on which it stands seems with springs, some of them warm and the Pader rises immediately below the cathedral, so a stream so copious as to turn a mill at the distance of a few yards. Pop. 9112.

PADERNO, several places, Austrian Italy particularity—1 A vil. and com., prov. Milan, dist. and 6 m. E. Milan.
1 bank Servino with a church.
Pop. 1473—2 A vil. and com., prov. Cremona, and 10 m. E. Pavesione once defended by a strong castle, of which only a few vestiges now remain. Pop. 1987.

PADHAM a small tn. England, co. Lancaster, 4 m. W. Burnley, a bank Collier. It built and generally of a very mean appearance, but considerable cotton manufactures are carried on, employing the greater part of the population. P. 4509.

PADILLA a tn. Mexican Confederation, dep. Tamaulipas, 20 m. N.W. New Santander and chiefly deserving of notice as the place where Harbide was shot in 1834.

PADRE (San) a tn. Naples, prov. Terra di Lavoro, 9 m. S. Sorra, r. bank Melfi. It has three churches, and an hospital. Pop. 2317.

PADRIA, a vil. Sardinia, dep. Sassari, prov. and S. E. Alghero; with several churches, an elementary school, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and a trade in corn, wine, brandy, skins, and wool. Pop. 1922.

PADEBORN, a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Algarve, 19 m. E. by S. Ovaria, 1 bank Ovaria. Pop. 1870.

PADRON (San, Eze, Fleuve) a vil. Spain, Galicia, prov. and 50 m. S. of Lugo, 1 bank Lugo. It is divided into five districts, comprising 95 hamlets; and has a seminary, a good prison, schools for both sexes, well frequented, especially in winter; and a parish church, which ranks as a cathedral. Agriculture, manufactures of wool and linen, navigation and commerce, employ the inhabitants. Padua was known to the Romans, flourished during the Hesperian-Gothic monarchy and was at a very early period erected into an independent city. Pop. 6108.

PADHAPPOOR, a vil. Hindostan, prov. and 87 m. R. W. Belapur, on the Hurroony. It is built of stone, and defended by a fort, situated on a height near its centre.

PADSTOW, a small seaport tn. and par. England, co. Cornwall, S.W. side estuary of the Camel 36 m. N. by E. Falmouth, lat. 50° 23' 30" N. lon. 4° 58' W. (n.) It has a very ancient Gothic church, lately restored and beautified, a Methodist and Bible Christian chapels, a national school, a literary institution, and a neat custom-house. Ship-building and repairing are carried on, and there is a considerable trade in importing hemp, tallow, tar, timber, gunpowder, &c., and in exporting corn, slate, minerals, &c. Area of par. 3984 ac. Pop. 2224.

PADUA [Italian Padova Latin Paduensis] a tn. Italy gov. and 24 m. W. Venice, with which it is connected by railway lat. 45° 23' 41" N. lon. 11° 53' 48" E. (n.) prov. Padua. It is a low flat between the Brenta and the Zaccagnone, the latter of which, dividing into two branches, traverses the town circuitously, and by one of these forms on its N. side the canal of Flanengo. 1 side is of a triangular shape, and is surrounded by a lofty wall, flanked with bastions, and by a wide, though shallow ditch, which is kept dry but can be filled with water. It is entered by seven gates of which those of San Giovanni, S. Marco, and S. Albano, are the most magnificent. The loftiness of the houses, combined with the narrowness of the streets, give it a dark and disagreeable appearance, and it has the additional disadvantages of uncleanliness, and bad pavement. The squares, though, like the streets, usually lined with arcades, are irregular in form, and of limited dimensions, with exception of that called the Prato della Valle which is at once the largest and the finest, well planted with trees, surrounded by a running stream, and decorated with 74 statues of distinguished townsmen, and other Italians. The buildings most deserving of notice are the townhouse or Palazzo della Ragione, an immense pile, extending along the market-place erected between 1171 and 1219 standing upon open arches, with a lofty roof said to be the largest in the world unsupported by pillars and containing a hall about 260 ft. long, 86 ft. broad and 75 ft. high, and adorned with the mural paintings, about 400 in number, the Duomo or cathedral, which claims Michael Angelo for its architect, but exhibits none of the great characteristics of his genius, being equally deficient in beauty and majesty; decorated, however, with fine paintings and other works of art, and possessed of a fine library which is rich in rare books and manuscripts, and of which Patrick, who was tutor of the cathedral, is reckoned one of the founders; the University of the cathedral, a fine Lombard building of the 12th century whose walls and apse are entirely covered with stupendous; the church of St. Anthony, a huge structure, bearing a considerable resemblance to a Moslem mosque, the church of

MARKAS—PADUA, PADUA.—From the landscape A. Smith, 1828.

Monte Cimiza, supposed to have been erected on the site of a Temple of Concord; the Bishop's Palace and the Palazzo del Capitano, occupying one entire side of the Piazza de Signori, with a lofty balustraded tower in the centre, in which is a remarkable clock, which, besides telling the hours, indicates the aspects and phases of the moon, and, after the lapse of five centuries, continues to go as accurately as the day it was made. The most famous establishment in Padua is the university, one of the most ancient in Europe, and long renowned as the chief seat both of law and medicine; several of the most distinguished ornaments in both professions having occupied its chairs. In connection with the university is a botanical garden, the oldest in Europe, containing some of the earliest specimens of trees and plants now rare, but now generally diffused. The manufactures of Padua consist chiefly of ribbons and broad-clothes—the latter to a considerable extent, and the trade includes Ilkovic silk, leather, wine, oil, and cattle, and there is an important annual fair, which lasts from fifteen to twenty days. Padua is the see of a bishop, and the seat of several superior courts and public offices. It claims to have been founded shortly after the destruction of Troy, by the Trojan Antenor. Under the Romans it became a flourishing municipal town, but on the decline of the empire was sacked, first by Alaric and then by Attila. Its great modern restorer was Charles V. under whose auspices it successfully asserted its independence. In 1815 it fell under the domination of the German family, and in 1806 under that of Venice, whose fortunes it has since followed. Pop. about 50,000.—THE PROVINCE OF PADUA, now, in its general face and very fertile, but becomes some what rugged and elevated in the E., where it is traversed by the Euganean hills. It is watered by the Branta, Bacchiglione, Frassinio and Adige, the last forming its boundary on the S., is traversed by several canals, and yields wheat, maize, hay, garden vegetables, oil, hemp, fax, vases, and some silk. Its numerous cattle are reared on the prairies, and the sheep yield an excellent wool, to which Padua is somewhat indebted for the celebrity of its woollen manufactures. The minerals include copper and good building-stone. The province is divided into 13 districts. Area, 612 geo. sq. m. Pop. 812,786.

PADUCAN, a vil., U States, Kentucky, 1 bank Ohio, 230 m. S.W. Frankfort; with a courthouse. Pop. 1000.

PADUL, a ta. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 12 m. S. Granada; with a courthouse, several fortresses, a parish church, two endowed schools, manufacture of ordinary linen, an oil and several flour mills. Pop. 2843.

PADULA, a ta. Naples, prov. Principato-Citra, 6 m. S.E. La Sala; with six churches, and an hospital. P. 6000.

PADULLI, a ta. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, 11 m. W. Arzano with a church, college, and hospital. Pop. 2624.

PADWORTH, par. Eng. Berks, 1175 m. Pop. 284.

PAEJAENE, or PAEJAENKIVI, a lake, Russia, Finland, circle Helmsing, greatest length, N to S about 50 m.; breadth, about 20 m. It contains a great number of islands, of which several are inhabited; receives numerous streams, and discharges itself by the Kymmenedjoki, into the Gulf of Finland. It abounds with fish, but is subject to dangerous inundations.

PAEL, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Limburg, 11 m. N.W. Hasselt, with two flour-mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 2093.

PAEBANA, a riv. Italy, Piedmont div. Com. prov. and 11 m. W.W. Saluzzo, near the Po, here crossed by a wooden bridge. It has two parish churches, a palace, and an old Ospedale convent, partly converted into barracks, marble quarries, and a trade in corn, cattle, and chestruts. P. 6120.

PAETIE, or PATIA, a vil. Philippines, Isl. Luzon, prov. Laguna, W. shore of Lake Bay; inhabitants remarkable for the skill they display in making chairs, beds, and other articles of cabinet furniture, with very imperfect implements. Pop. 5206.

PAGAHM, an ancient ruined city, Persia, 1 bank Iravand, 190 m. S.W. Ahwaz, prov. Ist. 21 N. 100. 54° 42' E., seven hrs. ride from a long diversity of hills, and still famous for its numerous temples, and other remains.

PAGANICO, two vils. Naples—I. Prov. Avellino, 5 m. S. Andria, in a plain. Pop. 1850.—2. Avellino, 10 m. S. Andria, in a plain. Pop. 1850.—3. Avellino, 10 m. S. Andria, in a plain. Pop. 1850.

Pop. 21.

PAGHAM, par. Eng. Sussex; 4376 m. Pop. 1093.

PAGLEHAM, par. Eng. Essex; 1333 m. Pop. 429.

PAGLIETTA, a ta. and com. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra, dist. and 11 m. N.W. 11 Vasto. It is agreeably situated on a hill, and contains four churches. Pop. 2459.

PAGLION, a riv. France, dep. Alpes Maritimes, which flows S.E.W. traverses the city of Nice, and a little to the W., falls into the Mediterranean.

PAGNANO, a vil. and par. Italy, Lombardy, prov. Como, dist. and about 8 m. from Como. It is a struggling place, with some manufactures of woollen cloth. Pop. 1803.

PAGO, an Isl. Dalmatia, Gulf of Quarnero, circle and N.N.W. Zara area, about 80 geo. sq. m. It has a much indented coast, and a good deal of fertile soil, on which much wine is grown, inhabitants chiefly employed in fishing and in making salt. Pop. 5000. The principal town is Pago, on the Lake of Zaccato, in the S.E. part of the island. It has a parish church. Pop. 1500.

PAGANJAN, a ta. Philippines, Isl. Luzon, cap. prov. Laguna, on the Pacific, above Manila. It is built with great regularity, partly of stone with tile roofs, but more frequently of a frame-work of wood filled up with clay, and has a pleasing and substantial appearance, a church, and a convent, a governor's house, a chalybeate, and a thermal spring; and a considerable trade. Pop. 4665.

PAGUENIMA, a group of five small low coral islands, Pacific Ocean, extending about 5 m. by 3 m.; Tapaki, the largest, in lat. 7° 40' N. lon. 167° 56' 30" E. It is surrounded by a coral reef, forming a lagoon inside, into which there is no passage, produces abundance of coconuts and bread-fruit, and the lagoon abounds with fish.

PAHANG, a territory in S.E. of peninsula, Malacca; lat. 2° 10' to 4° 10' N. bounded, N. by Lingayat; S. by Selangor, from which it is separated by the central range traversing the peninsula. S. Johore, and E. the China Sea. Its interior is very imperfectly known. Its chief town, which has been carefully explored, consists of a long street, not much indented, and presenting alternately bold rocky precipices and low shores apparently swampy for a considerable distance inland. A great number of islands depending on Pahang extend along the coast, throughout its whole length. Like the mainland, the rocks composing them consist, sometimes, of granite, trap, and porphyry, but more frequently of metamorphic schists. Few rivers of any magnitude occur in Pahang, most of the drainage in the S. being sent to the Johore by a number of short and rapid mountain torrents. The rajah of Pahang, though nominally the Ruler or treasurer of the rajah or sultan of Johore, is in reality independent. Pop. estimated by Newbold at 50,000, but supposed not to exceed 16,000.

PAHARPOOR, a considerable town in Afghanistan near bank Attock, 180 m. S.E. Ghaznee.

PAIMBOEUF, a ta. and port France, dep. Loire-Inférieure, 22 m. W. by N. Nantes, 1 bank Loire, beneath 5 m. broad. It has a custom house, agricultural society, school of navigation, and capacious docks for the construction and refitting of large vessels, masted, &c. a commodious harbour with a mole 214 ft. long, manufactures of sail ropes, marine stores, bricks, and tiles, fishing, and a considerable trade in grain, wine, timber, and other articles. Most of the large ships bound for Nantes discharge their cargoes here, into lighters. Pop. 8473.

PAIMOGÓ, a vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov. Huelva, 78 m. N.W. by rail; with a primary school, a castle, a custom house, and a church. Pop. 1630.

PAIMPOL, a ta. and seaport, France, dep. Côtes-du-Nord, 23 m. N.W. W. St. Brieg, with spacious and handsome squares, a tastefully-decorated church, a dock and ship for building and repairing vessels, schools of navigation and mathematics, marine storerooms, a custom-house, a safe but small harbor, manufactures of cotton fabrics, ropes, marine stores, leather, refined salt, and oil and a trade in grain, hemp, fax, linseed, wax, honey, salt-fish, butter, and sea-birds. Mackerel-fishing is carried on. Pop. 1784.

PAINTON, a small ta. and par. England, co. Devon, at the head of Torbay, 5 m. N.E. Dartmouth; streets irregular narrow, dirty, and ill-kept; houses generally of a wren appearance. It has a large church, and independent chapel, a chapel free for all Christians, several schools, and a small feeding-room. Large quantities of cider are manufactured here for exportation to London, Liverpool, and other markets. Vegetables are raised in great abundance in the vicinity the cabbage of Painslow is particularly famous. Area of par. 3702 ac. Pop. 3746.

71

PAINSTOWN, two parts. Part I., Cuckoo and Kilders; 2144 ac. P. 167. Part II., 2144 ac. P. 900.

PAINSVILLE, a vil., U. States, Ohio, 178 sq. m. N. E. Columbus with three churches, a courthouse, and a jail. Pop. 2580.

PAINSWICK, a market to and par. England, co. and 64 m. S. S. E. Gloucester; with a handsome church, several Dissenting chapels, and a large national school; manufacturers of cloth and freestone quarries. Area of par. 5815 ac. P. 2464.

PAISLEY, a port, and wonderful fair market and important manufacturing in Scotland, co. Renfrew, 7 m. W. S. W. Glasgow on the White Cart, about 8 m. above the confluence of the railed White and Black Cart with the Clyde, and on the railway from Glasgow to Greenock and Ayr. Paisley consists of an old and a new town, the former on the W. or 1, and the latter on the E. or 2 bank of the river, and communities by three bridges, one of them an ancient structure. The old town, composed anciently of two long streets, the one stretching E. to W. in the line of the high road from Glasgow to Ruth, and the other from N. to S., in the line of the road from Innesmill to Neilston, is both irregular in its form and indifferent in its appearance, mean houses, often of a single story, and covered with thatch standing intermingled with others of a more substantial description. This description, however though true in the main, does not apply to all the streets without exception. In different quarters great improvements have been made, and both George Street and Forbes Street deserve mention, the former for the regularity and the latter for the elegance of its buildings. The streets of the new town, though not remarkable either for spaciousness or elegance, are decidedly well built. All the streets are well lighted with gas, and tolerably well paved. Police and sanitary regulations continued long to be very imperfectly observed, but improvement has commenced and is expected to make rapid progress since one of the alleged causes of neglect, a deficiency of water has been entirely removed by the introduction of an abundant supply from the hills of Glasgow.

Among the public edifices, the first place is due to the Abbey, the original magnificence of which, if not adequately represented, is at least strongly indicated by the still existing Abbey church. It was founded in 1163, by Walter, son of Alan, the first of the house of the Stewarts, for a prior and 12 Cistercian monks, for whom a very liberal endowment was provided, and at the Reformation it was, with exception of Kelso, the most opulent monastery in the S. of Scotland. At this time the buildings formed a magnificent pile, with an enclosure of above 1 m. in circuit, laid-out partly in orchards and gardens, and partly as a deer park, and the church, built in the form of a Latin cross, was surmounted by a very lofty steeple. After the whole was surrendered, the temporal lordship formed out of it was gradually subdivided and broken up, and the Abbey itself, which, subsequent to the expulsion of the monks, had been converted into an almost princely residence, ultimately fell into such disrepair as only to afford a few indifferent tradesmen's tenements. The church, too, has shared in the dilapidation. The steeple, as well as the choir, has disappeared, and the transept is only an interesting ruin. The main body, however, consisting of a nave and two aisles, separated from it by ten massive clustered columns, still remains, and forms a truly splendid parish church. Adjoining the S. side of the nave is a quadrangle, of about 60 ft., called the cloister court, from which is an entrance to St. Mirin's, or the Bounding Aisle, about 60 ft. long, by 24 broad. It contains a remarkable monument, called Queen Mary's Tomb, and over its name of 'Bounding' to its powerful echo, the startling effect of which is sometimes exemplified on visitors by the sudden and violent shutting of the door. Besides the Abbey Paisley contains six other churches belonging to the Establishment, six to the Free church, six to the U. Free church, three Independent, two Baptist, one Methodist, one Presbyterian, one Episcopal, one Wesleyan Methodist, one R. Catholic, one Unitarian, and one New Jerusalem. Almost all these churches are substantial and commodious buildings, but none of them is otherwise possessed of much architectural merit. After the Abbey church, the only edifice particularly deserving of notice are the County Buildings, forming a quadrangular pile in the castellated style, containing in its W. or front division, a courthouse, county-hall, townhouse, &c., and in its E. range, a house of correction, and common jail, with chapel and suitable arrangements, for the discipline, reformation and moral discipline of the prisoners.—and the Nelson educational institution, a large massive edifice in the form of a Greek cross, and surmounted by a magnificent dome; founded from a bequest of about £30,000 left, in 1839, by John Nelson, Esq. of Northwood, and opened in 1852; it supplies gratis an English commercial and classical education to the children of parents resident not less than three years in Paisley and who have died without leaving means to provide a suitable education for their family; and, in addition, a large number of boys and girls receive instruction upon payment of fees. The steeple of the former courthouse and prison still stands near the market-cross, forming at once a conspicuous and ornamental object and the Coffee Room buildings, situated immediately opposite to it, is adorned in its upper part with Ionic pilasters. The scholastic and literary establishments of Paisley include a grammar school, infant, ragged, industrial, and various other schools, a government school of design, Nelson's educational institution, already referred to, Hutcheson's charity school, an astronomical, mechanical and a philosophical institute, the latter with a valuable library of scientific works, and a museum, a literary association, an artisans' institution, a theological, a law, a medical, and a subscription library. The principal charitable institutions are the town's hospital, with a lunatic asylum attached, a dispensary and house of recovery or infirmary, a society for the education of the deaf and dumb, a widow and orphan, a female, benevolent, and various other societies.

Paisley early distinguished itself by its manufactures, and in its staples still remains unsurpassed by any town in the kingdom. Shortly after the Union, in 1707, had opened up a free trade with England, Paisley goods, consisting chiefly of coarse checkered linen cloth, and checkered linen handkerchiefs, many of them fine and beautifully variegated, came into great demand in the English market. Other fabrics of a lighter and more fanciful kind succeeded, and about 1760, a great number of hands were employed in weaving linen gauze, silk gauze was shortly after introduced, and Spitalfields, which had almost monopolized this branch of industry, soon found itself so completely outstripped, as to be obliged to relinquish the manufacture. As early as 1784, silk gauze alone is said to have been produced to the annual value of £250,000, and to have employed 5000 looms in the town and vicinity. The shawl trade was first introduced about the beginning of the present century, and though the prosperity of the other branches of manufacture prevented it for a time from attracting much attention, it continued steadily to advance and now as much from the excellence of the products as from their value, stands at the head of all the other staples. The shawls, chiefly in imitation of those of India, are made of silk, silk and wool, cotton and wool, either separately or in mixture. The Cashmere fabric was long imitated with considerable success, by using what was called Persian yarn, spun from a mixture of fine wool and silk waste for the warp, and a silk warp. A more successful imitation was afterwards made, by the introduction of what was called Tibet cloth, made simply of fine worsted yarn from the best of wool, scoured, raised and cropped so as to have a beautiful appearance. To complete the shawl made from this cloth, a rich figured border was sewed to it. These imitations, however, fell considerably short of the real Cashmere; and the possibility of attaining a nearer approximation seemed almost hopeless, when it was discovered that the object had been actually attained in France, by the simple process of employing, not fustians, but genuine material in the manufacture. This material was obtained both by importation from the Levant, and by the introduction of the Cashmere goat, which has now become acclimated in several French districts. The Paisley manufacturers are now able to make genuine Cashmere shawls, equal in texture to the most celebrated productions of the East, and far superior to them in beauty of design. In addition to those already mentioned, the three most important articles of manufacture are cotton thread, shirtings, different kinds of terran cloth, and carpets; shirt-printing is also earned on. There are also several cotton-factories, a large foundry, with steam-engine, and other machine shops attached; a silk throwing-mill, an extensive tannery a soap-work, several breweries and distilleries, blacksmiths and building-yards, chiefly for river steamers. The weekly market is well supplied, and there are four annual fairs, one of which, called St. James Day Fair, and held in August, is famous for its roses.

Palais, though it has only become a place of much importance in very modern times, is of very ancient date, and is generally supposed to occupy the site of the Roman Vandunaris mentioned by Ptolemy. About the end of the 17th century, a large Roman camp in the vicinity would be distinctly traced. This, however, was the only evidence of a Roman station, and if any town had previously existed, it had so completely disappeared that in 1165, when the monastery was founded, there seems not to have been even a village at the place. It was first erected into a free burgh of barony in the 1st year of the reign of James IV. but the power of electing the provost, bailies, and other office-bearers, was vested solely in the abbot. This right passed to his successors, and continued with the superiors of the lands long after the monastery had been converted into a temporal lordship. In 1558 the burgh having succeeded in purchasing immunity from this thralldom, obtained, among other privileges, that of electing its own municipal authorities. It is now governed by a provost, four bailies, a treasurer, and ten ordinary councillors; and sends a member to the House of Commons. Among the more eminent natives of Paisley are—Robert Boyd, successively principal of the universities of Edinburgh and Glasgow the ornithologist Wilson, the poet Tannahill and the comic poet R. A. Smith. Pop. (1851) 47,951

PAJARES-DE-LOS-OTEROS, a town in Spain prov. and S.E. Leon, with a church, a primary school, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1145

PAK PATTAN. PAK PATTAN (Paw town), a town in P. M. 98 m. S.W. Lahore about 6 m. from the Ravi. Lat. 30° 20' N. lon. 75° 15' E. It is built on the site of the ancient Artadjwah, and is celebrated as the place where Tamerlane and several other invaders of Hindoostan crossed the river boundary of the Punjab on the E. It is conjectured to have been the site of the colossal altars erected by Alexander to mark the E. boundary of his conquests

PAKA, two places Bohemia, circle Budechov—1 A municipal town, with a church. P. 2800—2 (44) A vil. on the W. side, about 9 m. from Gitschka, with a church, a school, two mills, and a mineral spring. P. 907

PAKEFIELD par. Eng. Suffolk, 771 ac. P. 718.

PAKENHAM, par. Eng. Suffolk, 3696 ac. P. 1184

PAKLA, or Unor, a river, N.E. Siberia, in the country of the Tchuktschi. It rises in a mountainous district, flows W. N.W., and, after a course of about 200 m., forms a common estuary with the Toison, in the bay of that name

PAKNAM, a town in Siam, 4 m. from the mouth of the Menam extending above 2 m. along the margin of the river but with seldom more than two or three houses inland from its banks. Both sides of the river are fringed with betanise

PAKOZD, a vil. Hungary Thither Danube co. and about 6 m. from Stuhlweissenburg with two churches, and a trade in corn, wine, cattle and swine. Pop. 1515.

PAKRACZ, a market in Austria, Slavonia, co. and 23 m. E.S.E. Pessan, the see of a Greek bishop, with R. Catholic and two Greek churches national schools, town-houses, and barracks. Pop. 1120

PAKSA, a market in Hungary, Thither Danube, co. Tolna, near the Danube, 62 m. S.W. Buda. It is much exposed to inundations, has two churches and a synagogue, and is a steam-boat station on the Danube. Pop. 6700

PAKWAN, a town in China, prov. Chekiang, on the banks of a river which falls into the bay of Hang-chow. It is a large, thriving place but appears, from the number of eating-houses, tea-shops, and pack-houses, provided for the accommodation of travellers and their goods, to have an important trade. On a canal in the neighbourhood, are two embankments, serving the same purpose as locks, small vessels being driven over an inclined plane by a windlass PALACHY or PALLACHOWA, a town, Hindoostan, prov. Coimbatore, 130 m. S.E.E. Seringapatam, defended by a small fort. It has a temple, and about 300 houses.

PALACIOS, numerous places, Spain, particularly—1 (del Sol), A vil., prov. Leon on the E. with a church, a primary school, and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth and hoops. P. 1327.—2 (de la Faldarna) A town, prov. and 27 m. S.W. Leon, near the Duerna with two churches, an old castle, town-house, prison, and primary school and a trade in corn, wine, and wax. Pop. 1745.

PALAEOPOLIS (anc. Efig) a town Greece, Murea, on the edge of the plain where the Peneus issues from the hills, 8 m. E.S.E. Gaurini. It contains a number of ruins, consisting chiefly of confused scattered blocks, some masses of brick-work, and an octagonal tower. The most remarkable object in the vicinity is the hill of Ella, rendered conspicuous by its lofty peak, crowned by a ruined tower PALAPETRO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont div. Novara, prov. Lomellina, 1 bank Sona with a church a school, and some trade in cattle and dairy produce. P. 1109.

PALAFOLLS, a vil. and com. Spain Catalonia, prov. and 40 m. from Barcelona, with an ancient castle in ruins, a church and a trade in cattle and agricultural produce. Pop. 1130.

PALAFURGELL, a town in Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 20 m. S.E. Gerona with a comfortable custom house, theatre, various primary schools, and a church. More than 500 persons are employed in making socks and bungs. Pop. 2696

PALAGONIA, a town Italy, prov. and 31 m. S.W. Catania, near Lake Palati, in an unhealthy district. Pop. 3500

PALAIK (Lak), a town and port, France, dep. Morbihan, cap. and on N.E. side Belle-Ile. It is defended by a fort; has a school of navigation, good quay, a ship, and a cable anchorage. Pop. 1780

PAI AJA, a town Tuscany prov. and 18 m. S.E. Pisa, on a hill, crowned by an old castle, and washed by the Roglio. It has a church and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1218

PALALAWANG, an important market, Isl. Sumatra, prov. Padang. It lies some days journey from the coast, on both sides the Kampar-river, and carries on a direct trade with Singapore

PALAMCOTTA, two towns Hindoostan Carnate—1 48 m. N.N.E. Cape Cooravar and 200 ft. above sea-level—2 89 m. S.W. Pondicherry

PALAMOS (anc. Palaeopolis) a maritime town Spain Catalonia, prov. and 18 m. S.E. Gerona lat. 41° 51' N. lon. 3° 4' E., on the Mediterranean. It has a church, an ex-convent of Augustines, now appropriated for primary schools, an hospital, a town-house, and a custom-house, but its harbour is rapidly filling up. It was here that Prince L. disembarced for Madrid after his defeat and capture at Pavia, in 1526. Pop. 1698

PALANKA (O. NEMETH and U.) [or Old German, and New Palanka], three adjacent vil. Hungary co. Bacs, on the Danube, 28 m. W. Peterwardein. They contain a Protestant, R. Catholic, and Greek church, and a synagogue, and have a considerable trade in corn, wine, silk and fish. Pop. 4697

PALATOFER, a town Hindoostan, prov. Gujerat, 18 m. E. Dacca. It is populous, the cap. of a small Mahomedan principality, tributary to the Golconda Comptees of Ghuzni are maintained here, and take their name from the place. Pop. 30,000.

PALAST, or PLASTOWCE, a vil. Hungary Thither Danube, co. Honh 2 m. from Ipoly-Nag with two churches, a fine chateau and numerous mills. Pop. 1189

PALATINATE (German, Pfalz), an ancient territory of Germany, which consisted of two divisions—an Upper and a Lower. The former which had an area of about 2765 sq. m. was surrounded by Bohemia and Bavaria, and now belongs entirely to the latter being included in its modern states of Oberpfalz and Oberfranken or Upper Franconia. The latter which had an area of 1890 sq. m., and was sometimes called the Palatinate-on-the-Rhine, from extending along both banks of that river is now shared between Rhenish Prussia, Baden, and Bavaria. The part belonging to the last includes a considerable part of the territory on the L. bank of the river and forms the modern Bavarian circle of Pfalz or Palatinate. It is one of the most productive portions of Germany but has suffered much from having been repeatedly the theatre of war

PALATINI, a vil. U. States New York, 56 m. W. Albany, with a Lutheran church, three schools, a hand-pipe factory, and several mills. Pop. 2823.

PALAU, a river Mindanoo, rises in Myana; lat. 13° 30' N. lon. 120° E.; flows E. to about 125° 40' E. when it takes a N.E. direction to Arad, then S.E., and falls into the Bay of Bengul, 50 m. S. lat. length, about 250 m.

PALAWAN or PARAGUAS an Isl. Indian Archipelago, forming the most W. of the larger islands of the Philippine group lat. 8° 27' to 11° 53' N. lon. 117° 18' to 118° 45' E. having the Calamian Archipelago on the N., the China Sea on the W. the Mindoro or Sooloo Sea on the E. separating it from Panay, Negros, and Mindanao, and the Balabak passage on the E., separating it from the N. extremity of Borneo. It forms a long and comparatively narrow belt, stretching about 260 m. N.N.E. to S.S.W., with an average breadth of about 40 m., and presenting no remarkable indentations except one to the N.W., and very little sheltered anchorage. The interior is traversed longitudinally by a mountain range, from which the surface slopes gradually on either side to the shore; is well watered and of considerable fertility and is said generally to resemble Borneo in its natural productions, which among others are supposed to include mangrove. Palawan belongs to a belt of brilliant white, fresh rich pure at Manila. It produces also fruits, wax, honey, rice, fowls, pigs, trapping edible-nests, gold, and pearls. Among the animals, flying and other squirrels are particularly numerous, and porcupines are often leopards occasionally seen. The birds are remarkable for the variety and brilliancy of their plumage, and some of the smaller species have notes resembling those of the nightingale. A great part of the island remains in a state of nature, only a few places on the coast acknowledging the Spanish rule. Among these is Tudy, the capital, prov. Calamian, in which the island is included; it is a miserable place, defended from pirates by a small fort, and so unhealthy that foreigners are sure to be attacked with fever within a fortnight of their landing. The natives remain in a very savage state.

PALAZZAGO, a vil and com. Italy Lombardy prov. Bergamo 2 m. W. by S. Alsemo with a large fine church and near it quarries of excellent freestone and wheatstone. Pop. 151.

PALAZZO a vil. and com. Naples, prov. Basilicata, 19 m. E.S.E. Mella on a hill overtopped with rich pasture. Pop. 5163.

PALAZZO-ARMANDO, a m. facility, prov. Mantua, on a healthy plain, not far from the source of the Calatibellota. Pop. 4700.

PALAZZOLO several places, kingd. of Italy particularly—1. A m. and com., prov. and 18 m. W. Brusca, on both sides of the Ofio, here crossed by a stone bridge. It is well built, has a magnificent parish church, an hospital, a theatre, an ancient castle, a large tannery, many silk and other mills, and a considerable trade in corn and silk. Pop. 3500.—2. A vil. and com., prov. Milan, 8 m. S. Bardesona, a bank Besova with a handsome church with three naves, a charitable endowment for widows, and near it ancient remains, supposed to have belonged to the Roman city Palatium. Pop. 1049.—3. A vil. gov. Venice, prov. Friuli, with three churches, and an oratory. Pop. 1200.

PALAZZOLO, a m. Sicily prov. and 19 m. W. Syracuse numerous, including remains. Pop. 3000.

PALAZZOLO, a m. Naples, prov. Salerno, 13 m. S. Bova, on a hill with two churches. Pop. 1250.

PALEMBANG, formerly a kingdom, now a Dutch prov. lat. Sumatra, S. coast, bounded, N. W. by Jambi, N.E. and E. the Strait of Bangka, S. the Lampung districts, and W. Benconen. It is divided into several districts, and its chief towns are Palembang the capital, Indrapoera, Moeara-Kempah, and Lahat. Towards the coast the country is flat and marshy but inland it is hilly and contains several vil. courses. In 1858, an eruption took place of the volcano of Boeki-Kava, on the Benconen frontier, which caused much damage. The province is watered by the Mook, Komaring, Ogan, Lintang, Kalangie, Sebangue, Barjos-Audin, &c., some of which are united by artificial canals, and many of which, in the rainy season, overflow their banks in the lower grounds. The soil is fertile, and yields pepper, cotton, gambos, dragons' blood, lacquer-wood, benzoin, gambier, &c. European vegetables grow well, and fowls, pigs, sheep, small wild deer, and buffaloes, are better here than in Java. Trade is carried on with Java, Roroo, Singapore, Penang, Siam, and China.—(Van der Aa.)

PALEMBANG, a m. Sumatra, cap. above prov.; lat. 2° 47' S.; lon. 107° 36' E., on the Mook, here called the Palembang, about 50 m. above its mouth. The town is spread out on both sides the river, and along some creeks, so that communication between the various parts must be maintained by boats. Many of the inhabitants likewise, elderly Chinese, live constantly on the river. Palembang is the residence of the provincial authorities, and is very favourably placed for commerce, the river having a depth of four to nine fathoms, and being abated by the tide. The population, consisting of natives, Arabians, Europeans, and Chinese, amounts to about 60,000.—(Van der Aa.)

PALENA, a m. Naples, prov. Abruzzo Citra, 13 m. S.W. Lanciano, at the foot of a mountain; with an hospital, and manufactures of coarse woollens. Pop. 3000.

PALENCIA, a prov. Spain, Leon, bounded, N. by Santander, E. Burgos, S. Valladolid, and W. Leon. It is fertile, watered by the Carrion, Orosa, Pisuerga, and many others; is traversed in its entire length by the canal of Cardine, and contains copper-mines, and abundance of chalk, gypsum, and sulphate. Agriculture, although in comparatively prosperous state is confined to grain, produced in great abundance, wine, vegetables, fruits, oil, and flaxseed; and a considerable number of sheep and goats are likewise reared. The principal manufactures are blankets, serge, and bala, in which there is extensive trade with the whole kingdom. The roads are among the best in the kingdom. Area, 4599 sq. m. Pop. about 180,000.

PALENCIA [anc. Pallantia], a city Spain, Leon, cap. above prov., 117 m. N. by W. Madrid finely situated, on the Carrion, over which there are several fine bridges in the neighbourhood. On the N.E. and S. the town is surrounded by a wall, 34 ft. high, and 9 ft. thick; and on the W. it is washed by the Carrion, but it is commanded by two hills in the vicinity. It has seven gates, generally broad and well-paved streets, three fountains, several promenades, an episcopal palace, an immense hospital, a sumptuous theatre, and a court-house, a cathedral, of light and elegant Gothic architecture, founded by Don Sancho of Navarre, king of Navarre, on the site of one more ancient; a barracks capable of containing 600 horses and 1500 infantry; five parish churches, six convents, an academy with teachers in philosophy, mathematics, and theology various elementary and advanced schools, a gallery of pictures, and a library. About a third of the population, both male and female is employed in the manufacture of blankets and flannels, with which Palencia not only supplies all Spain and Portugal but also a number of places in other countries. They are all sold on the spot. In connection therewith are several dye-works, tanneries, and felt-mills. Next in importance ranks the manufacture of sash, for which there are five large mills; there is also a sugar factory, and one for coarse cloth, a brandy and liquor distillery, manufacture of wax and tallow candles, cards for wool-combing, and every kind of delftware. Here was held the council which declared to be null and void the marriage between Urzua, daughter of Alonso VI., and her cousin Alonso, king of Aragon. The hospital of San Juan founded by the Ord., was previously his palace, and he was married here to Ximena. Juan I. allowed the women of Palencia to wear a golden head on their head-gear for their successful bravery in defending the city when it was besieged by the Black Prince. It was afterwards frequently occupied, and particularly by Fry in 1612. Pop. 11,470.

PALENQUE, a vil. Mexico, Dep. Chiapas 60 m. N.E. Ciudad Real. Near it are extensive and magnificent ruins of what is supposed to have been a large city.

PALENZUELA (Valcam de), a m. Spain, Leon, on the W. frontier of OM Castilla, prov. and 27 m. E.N.E. Palencia. It has two churches, a primary school, courthouses, and prison, manufactures of woollens, two flour-mills, and a trade in corn, wine, &c. Pop. 1372.

PALEO-CARRO [anc. Florio], a vil. Greece, in the S.W. of the Morea, on an affluent of the Diapontine, about 8 m. N. Kalamata. It has several remains of Cyclopean architecture, and fragments of a Doric temple.

PALERMO [anc. Panormus, Tremi, Palermus], a seaport m., cap. Sicily beautifully situated on the W. shore of the island, on a wide bay, partly enclosed by lofty hills. Its numerous spires, domes, and towers, give it a very imposing appearance.

about 140 m.; breadth, about 80 m.; area, nearly 10,000 sq m. The surface is generally mountainous, being traversed by branches from the chain of Lebanon, one of which stretches S. in a direction nearly parallel to the coast of the Mediterranean, forming the water-shed between its basin and that of the Dead Sea; while another, turning north to the E. stretches along the left side of the valley of the Jordan. The mountains, composed generally of Jura limestone or coralline, but often capped or pierced by rocks of volcanic origin, attain their greatest height, of about 10,000 ft. in Mount Hermon, where they first become detached from the principal chain. None of the other heights exceed 5000 ft. but many of them have acquired great celebrity from the frequent notices taken of them in Holy Writ, or the wonderful events of which they have been the theatre. The most remarkable are Carmel forming a promontory in the Mediterranean, on the S.W. side of the Bay of Acre, Tabor, or the modern Jebel Ter at the N.E. extremity of the plain of Esdraelon Elal and Gersam, in the valley of Samaria, Gilboa and Nebo or Pisgab, on the E. side of the Jordan; and Zion, Moriah, and the Mount of Olives, in and near Jerusalem. The mountains are separated by deep valleys or level plains and the whole country, though in many parts left almost desert, is rich in natural beauty, and by the fertility which it displays wherever it is under regular culture, fully justifies the early description given of it as a land flowing with milk and honey. It is watered by numerous streams, but its only river of any consequence is the Jordan, which flows in a valley remarkable for its depth; the Lake of Tiberias, from which it issues, being 84 ft., and that of the Dead Sea, into which it falls, being 1537 ft. below sea-level. The limited extent of Palestine and the insignificant place which it holds as a marine fragment of the Turkish dominions, will not allow it to be made the subject of much geographical detail, but the deep historical interest naturally attaching to it, requires that notice should be taken of the more remarkable changes which it has undergone.

The name Palestine, derived from the Hebrew Palesteheth, and meaning the land of the Philistines, does not occur in Scripture, and is properly applicable only to the S.W. part of the country stretching along the shores of the Mediterranean. It appears to have been first used by Greek authors, and derived additional currency from its adoption by Josephus and Philo. In most modern names was Canaan, which it evidently owed to the descent of its inhabitants from Canaan, the fourth son of Ham and a grandson of Noah. When thus named, in the time of the patriarchs, it was parcelled out among a number of independent tribes or nations, the Kenites, Kenizzites and Kadmonites, on the E. of the Jordan; the Hittites, Perizzites, Jebusites, and Amorites, in the hill country of the S.; the Canaanites proper in the centre, from the Jordan to the coast; the Gergashites, on the E. shore of the Lake of Tiberias; the Hivites, in the N. among the ramifications of Lebanon; the Philistines on the S. and the Phoenicians on the N. coast. In the time of Moses, the country E. of the Jordan was conquered and divided among the tribes of Reuben and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh. Under Joshua, the work of conquest was carried on to the W. of the Jordan and the whole territory though not to the extent originally promised, allotted to the remaining half tribe of Manasseh and the other ten tribes, the larger portion of the S. falling to the tribes of Judah and Benjamin. Under Solomon, the work of conquest appears to have been completed, and all the land which was originally promised was included within the limits of his kingdom. By the folly of his son Rehoboam, the kingdom was rent in twain, and subdivided into the separate kingdoms of Judah in the S., and Israel in the N. The latter kingdom was often designated by the name of Samaria, its capital. The division of the country into tribes was completely broken up by the captivity which carried away ten of them to Babylon, and supplied their place by a new colony. After the destruction of the Babylonian empire, Palestine fell under the dominion, first of the Persians, and then of the Macedonians. In the time of our Saviour when the Romans had established their supremacy, it was divided into the four provinces of Galilee in the N. Samaria in the centre, Judaea in the S., and Perea, which included all the country E. of the Jordan. Under Constantine, Palestine, now regarded as the Holy Land, acquired new interest, and recovered in some degree from the calamities by which it had been laid desolate and in 696, on the division of the empire by Theodosius, and the formation of two empires, a W. and an E., Palestine became a province of the latter. Thus was its condition at the time when Islamism began to make its conquests. Palestine, unable to offer any resistance, soon fell a prey; and Omar, in 636, after taking possession of its capital, converted it into one of the provinces of his caliphate. The severities exacted towards the Christians having roused the indignation of Europe, gave rise to the Crusades, and Jerusalem became for a time the capital of a Christian kingdom. Ultimately however, Mahometanism prevailed, and Palestine sunk into a degraded state from which, as yet, it has not shown any symptoms of recovering. The sultans of Egypt ruled it till 1517, when it was taken by the Ottoman sultan, Selim I. and incorporated with the Turkish empire. As present, the whole of Palestine W. of the Jordan is divided into seven districts, El-Kode, including Jerusalem, Jericho, and about 200 villages; El Khalil or Hebron and the S. part of Judea, Gaza, on the S. coast, with the towns of Gaza and Jaffa. Ludda, at the environs of ancient Lydda; Nablous or ancient Nysaar and Samaria; Acre, including Mount Carmel and a part of the plain of Esdraelon, and Safet or Safur, nearly identical with ancient Scythopolis.

PALESTINA [anc. Phoenicia], a n. Papal State, 78 m. E.S.E. Rome. It is one of the most ancient Greek cities in Italy and had risen to importance long before Rome was founded. It continued for many centuries to be a splendid city and appears to have reached its highest prosperity during the reigns of the first Roman emperors, several of whom frequently resided in it. The remains of its magnificence are still visible, but the present town is built chiefly on the ruins of a temple of Venus, which stood at the foot of the height which was crowned by the temple. The only modern buildings of any interest are the deserted Barberini palace of the 17th century, the baronial church of Santa Rosalia, and numerous tombs of the Colonnae and Barberini families. P 439

PALFA a vil Hungary Thithes Danube, co. and 16 m from Tolma, on the Bar. It has two churches, and a trade in corn and tobacco. Pop. 1238

PALGRAVE, par Eng Suffolk, 1474 as P 740
PALGRAVE, a fortified town, Hindostan, prov Gujrat, cap. principality of its name, 25 m. N.W. Ahmedabad lat. 24° 11' N. lon 72° 50' E. It is surrounded by a brick wall flanked with towers; and, being a frontier town on the main route to Rajpootana, is a place of considerable importance. Pop. 20,000

PALIANO a n. Papal State, 52 m. E.S. E. Rome. P 5043
PALIGGLIANO, a n. Naples, prov Otremio, 18 m. W. N.W. Taranto. Pop. 2000

PALIGHAULT a n. Hindostan, prov Malabar, cap. dist. of same name, 68 m. S.E. Calicut. It consists of a number of different groups of houses and hamlets, containing a large population, and clustering round a fort which was built by Hyder on his conquest of Malabar. The country, containing about 125,000 inhabitants, is partly covered by dense forests, containing much valuable tank timber.

PALINURUS SHOAL, Arabia. See AMOL-KUM
PALISEUL, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov Luxembourg, 35 m. W. N.W. Arlon with an oil, a saw, and four flour mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1069

PALISSE (La), a n. France, dep. Allier, 24½ m. S.E. Moulins, on the Loire, with manufactures of cotton, flax, shoes, boots, &c., and a trade in cattle, grain, hemp, and manufactured goods. Pop. 1701

PALK BAY or GULF, the strait or channel which lies between the N. extremity of Ceylon, and the S. and of the peninsula of Hindostan, about 40 m. wide at the narrowest part, and probably about 85 m. in length, having the Bay of Bengal on the N.E., and Adam's Bridge on the S.W. It is not frequented except by boats and small coasting vessels; the water being usually about all over 1, 6 or 7 fathoms in some places, to 4, 5, and 6 fathoms, renders the navigation unsafe for large ships.

PALKOWITZ, or PALKOWITZ, a vil. Austria, Moravia, 12 m. from Freyberg with a church. Pop. 1692

PALLANZA, a n. Italy Piedmont, div. and 82 m. N. Novara, cap. prov of same name on Lake Maggiore, nearly opposite to the Borromean Islands. It is well built, has several handsome churches, an ancient massive tower used as a balcony, two convents, a college or gymnasium, in which both the royal and communal schools are accommodated, an infant school a townhouse, surrounded by arcades, resting on granite pilasters a theatre, barracks, and a well-arranged prison has manufactories of cotton and starch, a large silk-mill, driven by steam, four saw-mills, dye-works, and a trade in corn, horses, and cattle. Pop. 2000.—The town, about 86 m. long, by 16 m. broad, is generally mountainous, and not very fertile but has quarries of white marble, and of the finest granite in Italy.

PALLASKENRY, a small town in Ireland, co. and 12 m. W. Limerick, near the Shannon with a Methodist meeting-house and school, and, at a short distance E., a handsome parish church. Pop. 618.

PALLER, a town in Hindostan, Ajmer, on an affluent of the Leroy 40 m. S. E. of Jodhpur. It is a place of considerable commercial importance. Chinese and other European manufactured goods, are imported to a large extent.

PALLING-HEAR-TEE SHIA, par Eng Norfolk 905 ac. Pop. 467.

PALLISER ISLANDS, a group of four isles. Low Archipelago, 8 Pacific Ocean, about lat. 15° 47' S., lon. 146° 30' W. One of these islands is 15 m. long, by 9 m. broad another is 31 m. long, by about 4 m. broad. They were discovered by Captain Cook in 1776.

PALLO, or RABBIT ISLAND, a small isl. Indian Archipelago, S. of Sangir Island; lat. 8° 2' N. lon. 128° 30' E. about 8 m. in circumference, inhabited and cultivated.

PALMA, several places, Spain.—1 An episcopal city cap. of Majorca, 180 m. S. Barcelona, lat. 39° 34' N. lon. 8° 45' E.

In the bottom of a bay 12 m. in length and 16 m. in breadth. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre, with a S. W. exposure, and enjoys an extremely mild and salubrious climate. It is surrounded by a compactly built wall, 65 ft. thick, with 18 bastions, and 8 gates S. fronting the small S. facing the land, on which side the wall is gilt with a dry ditch, while a dense brava protects the seaward portion. The streets are straight and narrow, but a few of them are broad paved, and provided with footpaths laid with tiles. There are several squares.

The Cathedral, which towers majestically over all the other public buildings, was founded by James the Conqueror. The principal facade is very modest and simple, having no other ornament than two beautiful towers at its angles and the portal on the E. side is full of Gothic enrichments. Probably there is not in Spain a finer structure in the Germanic Gothic style than the Eschaleira, begun in 1426 by Guillermo Sagrera, a Majorcan architect, and finished in 1448—with its 12 portals its octagonal towers at the corners and its beautiful and grandiose balustrade surrounding the cornice, and marking the dome. Not less magnificent is its interior divided into three aisles, by lofty and elegant columns, with spiral flutings. The palace of the governor, and the townhouse, deserve particular notice, further than that the last contains a gallery with portraits of eminent natives of the island. There is a tolerably conspicuous group of small and old-fashioned theatre, seven parish churches, one of which, St. Michael's was formerly a mosque, a great number of convents, some of them now converted to secular uses and several charitable institutions, and a general hospital founded in 1466 by Alonso V. Palma is also well provided with educational institutions, as well in fact as Madrid itself. Among these may be specified the Academy of Medicine and Surgery, another called the Chirurgical, a normal school, for primary instruction in all kinds of secondary instruction, where the higher branches of education are taught; a national school, and the Colegio de Sanlepe, for poor young men who devote themselves to the church. There is also a school for orphan girls, as well as two others for females, the Colegio de Gracia, founded in 1510, for the education of young ladies of rank, and the Colegio de Puritas, founded in 1808, also for females. In addition to these there are about 30 private schools. There are also two public libraries, and a museum of paintings.

At the centre of the port rises the celebrated mole, which, running out from the bastion facing the E., advances into the sea about 900 yards, and on each side of it is the ship-building yard, where numerous vessels are employed in the construction of the swift iron vessels, so well known and highly prized in the Mediterranean. On the E. of the mole is an open dock, which is, however, rapidly being filled up. On the S. side of the bay there is a fort on St. Carlos point, whose guns command a wide range. Two lighthouses stand at the entrance of Porto Pi, a narrow road, where the largest frigates might anchor in small number however. About midway between the city and Porto Pi, is seen the castle of Bellver on an eminence, surrounded by pine groves. The Lascruvia, which is spacious, and admirably constructed, has the best anchoring ground in fact.

The industry and manufactures comprise linen, woollen, and silk threads, soap, glass, brandy thread, besides a number of oil and flour mills. Navigation and mercantile traffic are in a state of considerable activity, and its large importations from the peninsula and foreign countries constitute Palma the mart of the whole island. On an average of the two years, 1844 and 1845, the number of vessels with their tonnage, entered was—vessels, 588 tons, 55,428. Departed—vessels, 517 tons, 48,852. It is said that Melchior conquered Majorca, at all events, it is certain that he brought 8000 Romans from Spain to colonize it. Pop. 40,486.—2 A town in Andalusia, prov. and 20 m. S. W. Cordova, in the angle formed by the confluence of the Guail with the Guadalquivir. It is well built, and has broad, well paved streets, a courthouse, jail, granary, endowed school, church, four hermitages, several convents, an hospital and a promenade. 20 flour-mills fourteen oil-mills two potteries, a manufactory of soap, five flunkies, and three brick works and a trade in grain, oil, cattle, fruit, and timber. Pop. 5538.—3 A vil. prov. Merida, 5 m. E. Cartagena, on a plain, near the Mediterranean, with a primary school a church, a cemetery, and three hermitages. Pop. 2701.

PALMA, two ins. Naples.—1 Prov. Lavore 4 m. S. E. E. Ada, with three churches, two convents, an old castle, and an hospital. Pop. 6786.—2 Sicily, prov. and 14 m. S. E. of Syracuse. It is well built, has several churches and carries on a brisk trade in almonds and oil. To the S. of the town, crowning the summit of a hill, stands the castle of Monte Churo a large square keep with outworks. Pop. 8400.

PAI MA (La), the most N. W. of the Canary Islands; lat. (N. point) 28° 51' 18" N. lon. 17° 53' 30" W. (a) 33 m. N. to S., by about 15 m. broad, esp. Sta Cruz de la Palma, one of the principal ports. The island consists for the most part of elevated mountains, generally covered with snow and furrowed by deep ravines, and in the N. the coast is high and precipitous. The climate is agreeable and healthy, but the island is subject to the ravages of the lowest and to volcanic eruptions by which a new mountain was formed in 1568. In the N. of the island is the largest, though long dormant crater, said to be 18 m. in circumference, and about 2684 ft. deep. The highest part of the mountain is the peak called Roques, 8426 ft. above sea-level. Besides a small quantity of grain, La Palma produces abundance of wine, fruit, almonds, honey wax, and some silk, with which are manufactured taffetas, black satin, and plain ribbons. Although more populous than Lanzarote and Fuerteventura, it is equally poor and miserable, so that at least three-fourths of the inhabitants live generally on the root of the fern. P. 35,880.

PALMA (La) a town in Spain Andalusia, prov. Huelva, 80 m. W. Seville, on the Pecosuela and the Matagorda. It has four squares, a public granary townhouse, two primary schools, and a parish church, with a fine tower 100 ft. high. Pop. (aggravated), 3680.

PALMA (NUOVA), a town, kingdom of Italy, gov. and 56 m. N. E. Venice. It is regularly fortified, has four churches, an hospital, theatre, barracks, several silk-mills, and a considerable trade in silk. Pop. 2800.

PALMA (Sta Cruz de La) the cap. of the island, one of the Canaries. It lies on the E. coast, in a spacious bay 7 to 10 fathoms in depth, and was declared a free port in 1802. It contains several monasteries, a townhouse, an hospital for the sick, a founding hospital, a chair of Anatomy, several schools, and two public fountains. St. Salvador's, the parish church, is a large, handsome, and fine-ornamented building, with three naves. The people, who are very industrious, are employed in weaving the cloths of the country, but they are especially distinguished for their silk dresses. Almost all the girls in the town are engaged in the manufacture of ribbons, stockings, parras, coral, and gloves of silk. The sweetmeats of Palma are also much esteemed; and in shipbuilding, its carpenters are famed for the strength, swiftness, and beauty of their vessels. Pop. 5641.

PALMAR, or LOMAN DE SAN JUAN, a tn. Spain, prov. and 3 m. S. Murcia, with a public school, a parish church, and a cemetery. Near the entrance of the town stands a handsome Turkish bridge across a canal for irrigation. Pop. (aggravated), 5561.

PALMARIA, a small isl. Mediterranean, Gulf of Genoa, belonging to Sardinia, lat. 44° 3' N.; lon. 9° 15' E., only about 3 m. long, by 1/2 m. broad.

PALMAR.—1. Numerous small isls. Brazil, particularly three in prov. Rio-de-Janeiro, one in the bay of that name a short distance E. of Isl. Governador, a second in the Araripe, on the outside of the same bay, and the third in the B. of the prov., off the coast of dist. Paraíba. They take their name from the palm-trees which cover them, and give them a graceful and picturesque appearance.—2. A river, E. Africa, Zanzibar, flowing into the Indian Ocean opposite Pemba Island.—3. (Carr.) A headland, W. Africa, Guinea coast, having a fine light lat. 4° 23' N.; lon. 7° 44' 15" W. (n.) The harbor here, which is the only one on the coast between Sierra Leone and Beaulieu, is spacious, secure, and protected by a reef from the swell of the ocean.—4. (Lat.) A small isl. New Granada, prov. and 15 m. N. W. Buenaventura, in Choco Bay, on the Pacific, lat. 4° N. discovered by Pizarro in 1527.

PALMAS (Lat.) a city, N. E. coast, Isl. Gran Canaria, and one of the Canary Islands until 1833, when Sta. Cruz de Tenerife was raised to that dignity. It is overlooked by two lofty hills, and extends E. to W. by the small river Gullaga, here crossed by a handsome bridge of three colonial arches. Las Palmas is the largest, most beautiful, and most populous town in the Canaries and enjoys a perpetual summer, the range of the thermometer being only from 66° to 91°. In general the houses are large and of elegant and solid architecture, with terraced roofs and balconies and the streets, especially in the N. and more modern part of the town, are straight, remarkably neat and clean, and beautifully paved. There is a fine alameda in the centre of the city and three outside the walls. Among the public edifices, the most remarkable are the sermoneo theatre, the museum in the buildings formerly occupied by the Inquisition, an insignificant cathedral a gigantic mole 334 ft. long by 84 ft. broad, begun in 1811, three parish churches and a chapel of ease, six convents, only one of which still retains its original destination, ten hospitals, a magnificent general hospital, an hospital for elephants an orphan asylum, a founding hospital, a Magdalen asylum, a poorhouse, an academy of design, two schools for primary education, an institute for the higher branches of education, with a rector and twenty professors and masters, a seminary of sciences where the classics, theology and other sciences are taught, and which is resorted to from all the islands, a library and musical society, boards of commerce and agriculture, and two libraries. Outside the town are a B. Catholic and a Protestant cemetery. It has manufactures of hats, equal to those imported from England and France, chairs, soap, delft, woolens, carpets, glass, leather linens, flour, and sailing-tackle but the principal branches of industry are ship-building, fishing, and sugar-cane, and some trade with the surrounding islands the West Indies and Europe to the last of which wine and cochineal, now extensively cultivated, are exported. It was declared a free port in 1852. Pop. 17,382.

PALMEIRAS, a tn. Brazil, prov. São Paulo, near Curitiba. It has a parish church, and some trade in cattle, and the other produce of the district, and near it is a mine of quinquaver. Pop. (district), 3150.

PALMELLA, a tn. and par. Portugal prov. Alentejo, on a height, 16 m. S.E. Lisbon. Pop. 3590.

PALMER'S LAND, Antarctic Ocean, S. from the E. Shetland Isles, lat. (E. extremity) 69° 25' S.; lon. 57° 55' W.

PALMERSTON, par. Ind. Dublin; 1518 ac. P. 1511.

PALMERSTON, an isl., S. Pacific; lat. 16° 0' 4" S., lon. 165° 19' W. discovered by Cook, June 1774.

PALMERSTOWN, par. Ind. Dublin; 1880 ac. P. 238.

PALMI, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria Ultra L., on the Gulf of Gioja, 21 m. N. E. Reggio. It is pretty well built; with eight squares and regular streets, surrounding in a handsome square, the centre of which is adorned by a fine fountain. It has three churches, and manufactures of silk. Pop. 3016.

PAIMOLI, a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra, 13 m. S.W. II Vico, on a lofty mountain. It is defended by a castle, and has a convent. Pop. 1480.

PALMYRA (the Tower of Scripture) a ruined city, Syria, path, and 130 m. N.E. Damascus. The ruins, apparently of buildings of the first three centuries of the Christian era, extend S.W. to N.W., in an unbroken line, nearly 1 1/2 m. They comprise ruined colonnades, temples, and arches, and a wilderness of columns. The most remarkable object, however, is the building supposed to have been the Temple of the Sun. It is 134 ft. long, by 47 ft. wide, and in a good style of architecture, having a portico of 140 columns. About 300 yards W.S.W. of this edifice, there is a richly-ornamented archway and 13 Corinthian columns, in the best style. The singular sepulchral towers of the Neoplaton occupy the gorge and part of the slope of a hill some are tolerably perfect, but the greater part are quite in ruins; they have generally flat roofs but in some few instances they terminate with a stone pyramid. Amidst these venerable remains of a polished people, appear, at present, about 80 and cottages, whose wretched inhabitants obtain a scanty subsistence by cultivating a few detached spots whereto find their grain and sheep.

PALMYRA, a tn. Puerto, lat. 5° 50' N.; lon. 162° 25' W. It is flat, uninhabited, of coral formation, about 14 m. long, E. to W. and 7 m. broad including a lagoon partly around, but there is no fresh water.

PALMYRA, numerous places, U. States.—1. A vil. New York, 195 m. W. by N. Albany with four churches, two academies, fifteen schools, two carriage-factories, and several mills. P. 3000.—2. A vil. and post township, Michigan on the Raisin with a distillery and several mills. P. 678.—3. A township, Ohio, 153 m. N.E. Columbus. Pop. 1829.

PALNACHIE a vil. Scotland, co. Kirkcubright, on the Urr 6 m. S.E. Castle Douglas. It has a quay, which admits vessels drawing 17 ft. water at spring, and 12 ft. at neap tides, and carries on a considerable trade, importing coal, lime, &c., and exporting grain to the extent of 1000 quarters annually and other agricultural produce; cattle, timber, bark, &c. Pop. 509.

PALO two places, Naples.—1. A vil. and com. prov. Principato-Citra, 9 m. E. Campagna, near a small lake of same name. It contains a convent. P. 8060.—2. A vil. and com., prov. and 11 m. S.W. Bari, on a height; with two convents, and manufactures of soap. Pop. 6041.

PALO (Ed.) a scattered vil. Spain, prov. and 3 m. from Malaga, with two primary schools, and a church. Agril. trees, fishing, and tin-mining employ the inhabitants. P. 1646.

PALOAN HAY, a bay, Indian Archipelago N.W. coast Isl. Mindoro. It lies S.E. E. Point Calvary; is of a semi-circular form, with an entrance 4 m. wide, and extending N. inland 3 m. It affords excellent shelter in the N.E. monsoon, and is convenient for obtaining supplies when passing through Mindoro passage. There are no dangers in the bay, sounding at entrance, 45 to 50 fathoms; best anchorages in N.E. extremity, in 14 fathoms, 1 m. from the beach.—(Nautical Magazine, 1853).

PALACE, a vil. Hungary, Hither Themas, co. and 7 m. from Ungvár, with a handsome church, a B. Catholic church, and six schools. Pop. 1804.

PALOMAR SAN ANTONIO DE, a tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 4 m. N. Barcelona. It has a small, dark church, a Moorish building, a courthouse, a public and several private schools, a steam-factory for spinning, another for pressing cotton, a third for flax-spinning, and several other mills, and six churches. It is an increasing and industrious place, finely situated, and well supplied with water. Pop. 4545.

PALOMARES-SAN CARLOS, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 5 m. N.E. Comarca, with a parish church, a handsome town-house, a prison, and a primary school. Manufactures of woollen cloth, a dye-works, and a trade in corn and cheese. Pop. 1860.

PALOMBARA (anc. Comarca), a vil. Papal States, 19 m. N.E. Rome. Pop. 3094.

PALOONSHAH, a tn. Hindoostan, prov. Hyderabad, 20 m. N.W. Rajamahendry; lat. 17° 55' N., lon. 81° 5' E. It is of considerable extent, but contains mostly of some huts; and has a fort of little strength. Writhe weapons of various kinds, including muskets, spears, swords, &c., were at one time manufactured here to a considerable extent.

PALOS, a to., in Colombia, W coast, S. side of Palos Bay, lat. 0° 54' S.; with a small Dutch fort and some trade. Pop. above 2000.—The city formed by a promontory jutting to the coast of the island, is about 18 m N to S., with a width of 5 m.

PALOR, a to., in Spain Andalusia, prov and 4 m S. E. Huelva, near the mouth of the Tinto, in a bay of the Atlantic. It is well built, has a parish church and primary school, and a harbor, interesting as the spot from which Columbus sailed on his first voyage to America, August 3 1492. Pop. 843.

PALOTA several places Hungary particularly.—1 A vil Thither Thoms, co Comand, 36 m W N W Arad with a R. Catholic church, an elementary school and some trade in cattle, sheep, swine, poultry and fruit. P 8667.—2 A vil, co and about 7 m. from Poth with a Protestant church P 1434.—3 A market to, co Vasvár, 12 m. W Stuhlweis anburg with two churches a synagogue, and a handsome cinema; manufactures of woollen cloth, and two mills Pop. 4994

PALE, a to., in Spain Catalonia, prov and 19 m E. S. E. Girona, surrounded by ancient Moorish walls, flanked with towers. It has a church hospital courthouses, and primary school, several mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1819

PALIE or YANUO, a lake Tibet 60 m S. W. Lhasa. It is nearly circular about 100 m in circumference, and inclosed a large island, on which is a Buddhist temple.

PALU or PALOO, a to. Assam Turkey pass, and 55 m N. Diarbekir, 1 bank Murad, the E. arm of the Euphrates. It is badly built contains 1000 families 400 Armenians, and 800 Musulmans. The former are employed either in manufacturing or in general trade 300 houses are worked producing cloths from native cotton and there is a dyeing establishment and a tannery

PALUD (La), a vil France, dep Vaucluse, 14 m N N W Orange, near 1 bank Rhone. Pop. 3190

PALLDI a to. Naples, prov Calabria-Citta, 4 m S. E. Rossano with two churches Pop. 1770.

PALZZA a to. kingd of Italy gov Venice prov Friuli in a mountainous district, almost entirely surrounded by the Julian Alps, 84 m N N W Udine, with four churches and several mills Pop. 1360

PALMI two places, Hungary.—1 (Monostor), A vil co Bihar between Oradea and Debrecen in a fertile district with a Protestant church, and a trade in corn. P 1155.—2 (Kozman) A vil near the former, with a considerable trade in agricultural produce. P 1366

PAMAKANSA, a small dist. and its cap. or nominally, a kingdom, in Madura, forming the central portion of the island between Bomanap and Bangkallang. It is reigned over by a prince, with the title of Paramuhara but in reality forms a Dutch dependency of the province of Soerabaya, in Java. The soil is dry and not very fertile. Pop. 18,000.—The towns contain a palace of the prince and a fine mosque and carried on a good trade. Pop. 5000.

PAMALANG—1, A to. and river, Java, N coast, prov Tegal, 75 m W Samarang.—2 A cape, 12 m E N E above town.

PAMANOENKAN a to. Java, prov Krawang on river of same name, 77 m E by S. Batavia, a few miles from the town, formerly the capital of a principality. Cape Pamanoekan lies 14 m. N W from the town.

PAMBE, par Eng Hants, 2150 sq. P 644.

PAMBU, a vil Brazil, prov and 340 m N W Bahia, 1 bank São Francisco, with a parish church and primary school, inhabitants chiefly engaged in cultivating cotton and raising cattle, near it are mines of silver and copper. P 1900

PAMEL, a vil and town Belgium prov Brabant, on the Dender 13 m W Brussels, with two breweries, and a trade in cattle and agricultural produce. Pop. 2640.

PAMIERS (Latin, Agennae), a to. France, dep. Ariege, on the Arago, 12 m N. P. 1011. It is a cheerful looking place, composed of generally well built houses and of spacious regularly-formed streets, in the see of a bishop and has several fine monuments, a cathedral, surrounded by a Gothic octagonal tower of bricks, seven other churches, a Carmelite convent, palace de justice, episcopal palace, and a very large hospital, a court of first resort, a communal college, diocesan seminary, secondary ecclesiastical school, and agricultural society, manufactures of serge, nails, files, paper, and liquors; worsted, cotton, saw filling and flour mills and a trade in corn, wool, horse-hair, hosiery &c. Pop. 5970

Vol. II

PAMIR, or PAMIR, an elevated plateau, Central Asia, Independent Turbary between Shukaban and Tarzhad extending N to the khans of Kokan, and S. to the mountains of the Hindoo Kooch. Its highest point rises nearly 18 000 ft. above sea-level, and its centre is the lake of Shik-hoi, from which the Oxus or Amoo takes its rise. The plain extends six days journey on every side of the lake, and is inhabited by nomadic Kirghizes, who feed large herds of cattle on its short but rich pasture. The climate is very cold, the snow never disappearing even in summer from its ravines, and the inhabitants covering their whole bodies even heads and faces, in sheepskins, to defend themselves from its severity. No grain is grown, and the use of it as flour to be made into bread is not known by the inhabitants who subsist on flesh and milk.

PAMLI(X) SOL VD, a shallow lagoon, U States, S. E. coast, N. Carolina. It is 80 m long, 6 to 20 m wide, and separated from the ocean by long, narrow, sandy islands. It receives the Tar and Neuse, and on the N communicates with Albemarle Sound.

PAMPANGA, a prov Philippines at Luzon N. W. Manila, bounded, N by Pangasinan W Zamboanga S. Balabac, and E. Nueva-Ejida length, N to S about 60 m breadth about 45 m, cap. Bacolor. It is the richest and most beautiful prov of the Philippines and has sometimes been surnamed New Castile. It consists of an upper and a lower portion, the former occupying the interior and the latter continued from it to the sea. Upper Pampanga being traversed only by mountain torrents, is indifferently watered and therefore remains, for the most part, in a state of nature, covered by forests the haunts of bears and tigers. Lower Pampanga is remarkable for its fertility and has even a superabundance of moisture, many parts of it being regularly laid under water during the rainy season and capable of almost continual inundations. Its principal river, which bears the same name rises in the mountains of Caravalla, and after receiving the Dimalay Hongkong, Sator and Opan, joins the Quingoa a little below Cadaval. It is a navigable throughout the greater part of its course, and contains gold among its sands. The principal productions are rice, cotton, tobacco, and indigo. Fruits are very abundant, and of excellent quality. The inhabitants are very industrious, and though chiefly employed in agriculture, display much skill in weaving various tissues, and manufacturing different articles of earthenware. Pop. 177 045

PAMPARATO a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, dep. Cui prov and S. Mondovì, with a large church palace, a small castle flanked by a tower, manufactures of utensils and other articles in wood and a trade in chestnuts and cattle. P 2646.

PAMPAS, a name given to some of the vast plains of S. America particularly—1 The plain stretching from Terral Fuero, N. through Patagonia and part of La Plata, over 27 of lat. or 1900 m, where they meet El Gran Chaco (see Chaco) and from the E. slope of the Andes, to the shores of the Plata and Atlantic area 1 620 000 sq m, an extent so great that while their N margin is bordered by palm-trees, their S extremity is almost continually covered with ice or snow. Immense portions of this great plain, particularly N of the Colorado, and extending for 1000 m E to W are nearly as level as the sea, and without a stone, or any other object, except a solitary tree (the ceylon), which is seen at vast distances rising like a great landmark. (See PATAGONIA and PLATA (La)).—2, (old Sauranambi), vast plains in the N. E. of Peru, covering an area of about 60,000 sq m. They are traversed from S to N by the Ucayali and though in parts almost without trees, are in others covered with immense and magnificent forests. Several parts of them have been brought under cultivation, but in general they remain in a state of nature, and are ramed over by various tribes of Indians.

PAMPATAR, a to. Venezuela, E shore Margarita, a fortified well situated for commerce, and a free port.

PAMPALUNA (Squash, Pampaluna, French, Pampaluna) a vil Spain, cap. modern prov and ancient kingdom of Navarre, 197 m N. E. Madrid, on the skirts of the Pyrenees, 1 bank Arga. It has always been regarded as the principal fortified place in Navarre. The citadel, which is separated from the town by an esplanade, and which is occu-structure. After the usual of that at Antwerp, contains sufficient accommodation for 1000 or 1200 men, and the number of soldiers necessary to garrison the town, in the present neglected state of the fortifications, would be 7000 to 8000. For the most part, the streets are straight, well paved, and clean. There are three large and three small squares, a courtyard, theatre, baths, a circus for bull fights, and several fine promenades. The fortifications are abundantly supplied by a magnificent aqueduct, nearly 12 m. in length, carried through tunnels for upwards of 5 m., and in one portion over 97 arches, 25 ft. in span, and 65 ft. in height. Although the cathedral which is small dates as far back as 1597 in its facade, in the Corinthian style, was built in 1783. One of the chapels is dedicated to Ignatius Loyola, who was wounded here in defending the citadel, and who conceived, during his recovery the idea of founding the order of Jesuits. There are four parish churches, also a number of convents, most of them used as barracks, military hospitals, or schools. Pampeluna has always been distinguished for its love of letters and zeal in the promotion of education. It abounds in schools of normal theological, primary, and advanced, and can boast also of an academy of design, as well as a medical and surgical college. The charitable institutions consist of a large general hospital, a house of mercy, and a foundling and lying-in hospital in one. Besides agriculture, which is limited to a small extent of territory, the only branch of industry worth mentioning is the manufacture of linens, two works of this description having been recently established. In 1512 it was besieged by the Duke of Alva, and capitulated after only two days' resistance, again, in 1521, it surrendered to the army of Francis I. In 1608 the French took it by stratagem and held it during the war till it was blockaded in 1613 by the Duke of Wellington after the battle of Vittoria. Pampeluna was again occupied by the French in 1808. Pop. 15,715.

78

PAMPER, a co. Chalmers. See PAMPER.

PAMPILHOZA, a tu and par Portugal, prov. Beira-Baixa, N from Thomar, near the Salto, an affluent of the Zesere. P. 9462.

PAMPISFORD par Eng. Cambridge 1500 ac. Pop. 559.

PAMPLEMOUSSES, a vil Mauritius, near a stream of same name, about 7 m from Port Louis. It has a R. Catholic church, a tomb erected to the memory of Paul and Virginia, and an excellent botanic garden.

PAMPLONA — 1. A prov and in Spain. See PAMPLONA. — 2. A tu. Nav. (Girona), dep. Bayona, cap. prov of same name, on an affluent of the Ebro, in the beautiful plain of Euzkadi. Santo Eze N. N. E. Bayona. It is large and regularly built, has a college, several churches, and numerous convents, one of which is gorgeously decorated. Pop. 3200. — The prov area, 1845 sq m. produces cotton, corn, sugar, tobacco, and wheat and in the mountains are mines of gold, silver and copper. It sends two senators and four deputies to the Congress, and twelve provincial deputies to the Cortes. Pop. 59,610.

PAMPOLUX, a m. France dep. Deux-Sèvres, 14 m. N. N. E. Melle. Pop. 1250.

PAMPUR, or PAMPURA, a tu Chalmers, I. bank Jafim, across which there is a bridge of several arches. 7 m. S. E. of the city of Chalmers, lat. 54° 5' N. lon. 74° 46' E.; in a level tract of great fertility where superior cotton is grown. It is surrounded by luxuriant orchards and gardens, and contains a bazaar, and two Mahometan shrines.

PAMUNKEY a river U. States, rises in the Blue Ridge, Virginia, where it is formed by the union of the N. and S. Anna; flows S. E. and after a course of about 80 m., unites with the Mattaponi in forming the York, an estuary branching off from Chesapeake Bay.

PANAGUR, a tu. Hindoostan, prov. Gundwana, dist. and 11 m. N. Gurrah. It is an ancient place, containing several Hindoo temples.

PANAMA a city New Granada, on S. coast, Isthmus of Panama, at the head of the bay of same name. lat. 9° 37' N. lon. 79° 50' W. connected by railway with Chagres on the Caribbean Sea. It lies on a tongue of land, extending a considerable distance out to sea, and the principal streets extend across the peninsula from sea to sea. The buildings, mostly in the old Spanish style, are of stone, generally substantial and the larger have courts or patios. The public edifices comprise a beautiful cathedral five convents, a nursery and a college. The harbour is protected by a number of islands a little way from the mainland, some of which are of considerable size, and highly cultivated. There is good anchorage under them all, and supplies of ordinary kinds, including excellent water, may be obtained from most of them. It has some trade in native produce with S. America, and exports hides, shells, coffee, and gold-dust to Europe but is now chiefly important as a station on the route to California, and for the mails between Great Britain and various ports on the Pacific Ocean. The site of the old city of the same name is about 3 m. E. from that of the present. The former was sacked and reduced to ashes by the buccannier Morgan. Pop. consisting of a mixed race, about 8000.

PANAMA (DAY OF) See PANAMA (ISTHUS OF). PANAMA AND DARIEN (ISTHUS OF) a dep. New Granada, called Istmo, forming the connecting link between N. and S. America, and separating the Atlantic from the Pacific Ocean. lat. 7° 20' to 9° 40' N. lon. 77 to 81 W. It has the shape of an arc curving round E. to W. for about 300 m. with a breadth varying from 50 m. to 70 m. and presenting its convex side to the Caribbean Sea, while its concavity is occupied by the large bay of Panama. This bay which, at its mouth is 125 m. across, and which penetrates inland about 120 m. has, for the most part, low and swampy plains, noted for their unhealthiness contains numerous islands, particularly on its E. side, where the group, called Pearl Islands, covers about 400 sq. m.; and is indented by several harbours, of which those of Panama in the N., and San Miguel in the E., are the best known. The bay is usually tranquil, and not disturbed by much wind or sea, but destructive tempests occur usually occur in it; and during the rainy season W winds send in a heavy swell, the tide rises 2 to 4 fathoms. On the N or southerly coast, the most remarkable indentation is the Gulf of Duran, near the E. extremity Port Escoose, and in its immediate vicinity, Caladonia Bay, and Lamon or Navy Bay, a little E. of Chagres. This indentation is very little known. In approaching the N coast from the Atlantic, a range of lofty heights is seen stretching apparently in an unbroken chain, at a short distance from the shore and it was long supposed that the barrier thus presented was characteristic of the whole isthmus, and precluded the idea of forming great thoroughfares across it to accommodate the traffic of the two oceans. More correct information has been recently obtained, and it is now understood that a large part of the isthmus consists of low hills, valleys, and flat or undulating plains, watered by considerable streams generally well covered with excellent timber and capable of yielding all the more valuable tropical productions in tolerable abundance. The minerals also are important, and include, in addition to gold which long was, and is supposed might still be, worked to advantage, rich veins of iron and copper. One great cause of the ignorance which has prevailed in regard to the isthmus was the jealousy of the Indian inhabitants, who, acting upon the maxim which experience proves to be but too well founded that the white man's foot is the Indian's grave, have ever been on the watch to prevent a regular survey of the country and have even been so successful in deterring private adventurers from exploring it, that in the more E. part of it no white man has yet (1858) crossed directly from sea to sea. The Atlantic coast of the isthmus was discovered by Christopher Columbus in 1502, but the comparatively short distance across it was not ascertained till 1814, when Donce Nunes di Balboa, governor of Duran, at the head of a party of which Francisco Pizarro was one, set out on an exploring expedition and from the top of a hill, obtained the first view of the Pacific. In 1630, a Scotch settler, projected by Pizarro, the founder of the Bank of England was formed near the Gulf of Duran on that part of the coast where the names of Caladonia Bay and Port Escoose still mark its locality. Great hopes were entertained of it by the nation; but owing partly to the hostility of the Spaniards, and partly to the jealousy of the West India proprietors, seconded by the English Parliament, it proved a failure, and brought ruin on many families. This settlement, which had almost been forgotten, is apparently about to be revived under better auspices, and on a scale of magnificence which its early founders, however sanguine could scarcely have ventured to anticipate. From recent survey it has been ascertained, that Port Escoose is an excellent harbor, and Caladonia Bay an ample and commodious roadstead and to meet the wants, not of any individual state, but of the whole mercantile world, it has been proposed to cut a gigantic canal, stretching from ocean to ocean, from Port Escoose, in a S.E. W. direction, to the mouth of the Savanna, in the harbor of Barlen, communicating with the Gulf of San Miguel (which see). The dimensions suggested, 140 ft. wide at bottom and 80 ft. deep at low tide, are amply sufficient for the passage not only of the largest vessels which now traverse the ocean, but the still larger vessels which have recently begun to be spoken of, but as yet exist only in idea. The summit level, only 150 ft., consists of a narrow ridge of hills, gradually sloping down into a plain on either side the materials to be cut through, though hard, are peculiarly favorable to the security of the banks, the estimated expense is $12,000,000. Meanwhile the isthmus has become a thoroughfare, and a communication between the oceans has actually been accomplished, by a railway carried in a S.E. direction from Lamon or Navy Bay to Panama.

PANANGOODY, a town in Hindoostan, Carnatic, dist. Tonoreilly, 31 m N N E Cape Comorin lat. 8° 31' N lon. 77° 55' E.

PANANICH or PANANICH, a vil. Scotland, co. and 99 m. W Aberdeen, l. bank Dee with chalybeate springs, the water of which greatly resembles that of the German Balnear and is very efficacious in gravel, and is scorbatic and scrofulous affections.

PANAOA, a small ill., Philippines, in lat. 10° N, in the Baroque passage between Leyte and Mindanao.

PANARANO, a m. Naples, prov. Firmopisto-Ultra 9 m. N W Avellino; with a church and four chapels. Pop. 1800

PANARIA (anc. Hyperia) one of the Lipari Isles, Tyrrhenian Sea, off N coast, Sicily greatest length, E to W, 3 m. breadth, 2 m. It is rocky and of volcanic formation but in several places very fertile, and produces a good deal of olive-oil. It has a small harbor on the S. Pop. 300.

PANARO, a river Italy, rises in Mount Cimone, N slope Apennines, in S. of duchy Modena flows directly N N E past Buonporto and Tundo, skirting the W frontier, and enters the Papal States and at Bondeno divides into two branches the one of which flowing E joins the canal of Cento above Ferrara, while the other forming the main trunk, flows N., and joins the bank Po, after a course of nearly 90 m. It becomes navigable at Buonporto.

PANAROFKAV, a m. Java, Strait of Madura, prov. and 17 m. S E E. Bascoi, on a bay of its name, and in the midst of fertile rice fields. Behind it rises a volcano which continually emits smoke. It is a point whence many ferry to the island of Madura.

PANAU, or PUNAWA, a river, India, runs among the Nandahood hills in the E. of the Mysore enters the Carnatic, flows S.E. past Kuttangerry and Koyota, and after a course of about 250 m. falls into the Bay of Bengal at Cuddalore.

PANAY, an ill. Indian Archipelago, the most central of the Philippines, lat. 10° 35' to 11° 50' N; lon. 123° to 123° 10' E, lying on the S W Mindoro, on the E. Leyte, and on the S E Negros, from which it is only separated by a comparatively narrow channel. It is nearly in the form of a triangle, with its angles pointing respectively S.W. N.W. and N.E. and is about 110 m. long by 100 m. broad. It is mountainous particularly in the N.E. and S.W. and has a remarkably fertile and well-watered soil maintaining a large number of inhabitants, who are patient, industrious, and intelligent, and have made considerable progress in civilization. In the interior are large forests of the finest timber, the haunts of buffaloes, wild oxen, stags and bears, as well as numerous birds of the richest and most varied plumage; the plains, generally under good cultivation, raise large crops of rice, maize, sugar, tobacco, coffee, cacao, cotton, and pimento. The numerous streams are well supplied with fish, and their mouths are frequented by great numbers of crocodiles and caymans. Excellent turtle are found along the coasts. Many factories have made considerable progress, and a particular species of tobacco called managwa and pasas, are remarkable both for the beauty of their designs and their rich and varied colours. They are woven mostly by the females. The men employ themselves chiefly in agriculture, fishing, hewing timber, and in manufacturing oil and sugar. Many also are employed in commerce, in the protection of which they make distant voyages. Panay is divided into the three provs of Capiz, Iloilo and Antique. Iloilo is the capital P. 463,980.

PANBAN, a vil. Hindoostan in Manderan, opposite the mainland the usual place of landing and embarkation for pilgrims.

PANBEIDIP, par. Scot. Forfar 5 1/2 m by 2 m. P. 1372. PANCALEIGH, a m. Italy Padstow, div. and S. Tarn. l. bank Po with an ancient church, communal schools, an hospital, the remains of an old castle, and a trade in corn, millet, wine, and hemp. Pop. 2840.

PANCHSHIR, a valley, Cabool 8 m. Hindoo Koonh, about 70 m. long, 8 W to N E, breadth, usually 1 1/2 m., and somewhere exceeding 2 m. watered by a stream of pure name. Though naturally sterile, considerable crops have been brought under cultivation and so industriously managed that no district in the country in proportion to its extent, maintains a larger population which, confined to within 40 m. of its entrance, is estimated at 7000 families, or about 40 000 individuals. The staple products are furnished by the orchards and mulberry plantations. The inhabitants are of lawless and marauding habits, which they exercise not only on passing strangers, but in perpetual feuds among themselves. The rugged surface of the valley is dotted over with metallized dwellings, rendered strong both by nature and art.

PANCORBO (Ponte Aquino) a vil. Spain, Old Castile, prov. and 23 m. N.W. Burgos on the high road to France, between two lofty hills, which, with the river and the road between them, form for about the space of 1 m., a very striking and picturesque gorge. That on the E. runs into the Pyrenees, on that on the N. there are remains of two castles, both destroyed during the wars of independence, though sub-consequently repaired, and ultimately laid in ruins the one in 1828 by the Duke of Anguilla, the other in 1835, by the Carlists. Besides two parish churches, the town contains a courthouse, a prison, a beautiful public fountain, a primary school, and seven flour-mills. The French army in passing, left a garrison here in 1813, but since was, by the Duke of Wellington's orders, had to both forts with successful result. The one was taken by storm and the other capitulated. P 1187 PANCRAE (87) a par England, co. Middlesex, forming an extensive portion of the N. division of London and including the suburbs of Camden town, Kentish town, Euston town, part of Highgate, &c. and the terminus of the London and North Western, and the Great Northern railways. Area, 2716. Pop. 166,956.

PANORAMA VILLAGE AND FARM - From House of Captain's Village Pantheon on Engraving

PANCHAGREEK or WALK ST PANCHAG, par Eng Devon 5782 ac. Pop. 460.

PANCHAZ, a vil. Bohemia, circle Brannau, near Graf anstern, with a church. Pop. 1020

PANCHAZIO (RAN), a vil. and comm. duchy and 2 m. W Parma, with several fine villas, a primary school, a type-foundry, and a trade in corn, wine, hemp, and silk. P 3270.
PANCBOYA a market in Hungary military dist. Temesvar, and 6 m. E.N.E. Belgrade 1. bank. Dniepr, near its confluence with the Danube. It has a great number of good houses, occupied chiefly by Greek merchants, and German artists and artisans, contains a R. Catholic and a Greek church, a mathematical and a girls' school, has manufactures of best root sugar &c. and carries on an important trade with the Turks. Pop. 11,710

PANDI, a vil. Hungary. Hither Danube, on and 24 m. from Perth with a Protestant church. Pop. 1078

PANDACA, a vil. Philippines, al. Luzon, prov. Tondo on an island, formed by the Isang above Manila. It is a substantial place in a fertile district, has a powder magazine and raises large quantities of hay for the supply of the capital. Pop. 4622

PANDINO a town and comm. Italy. Lombardy prov. and 8 m. N.N.E. Lodi. It is surrounded by an old wall formerly defended by a castle, of which only four towers now remain. It has two churches.—THE DISTRICT abounds in fruit, and is famous for its peaches. Pop. 1756.

PANEA, or PANEA, a vil. Palestine. See BANIA.

PANFIELD par Eng. Essex 1475 ac. Pop. 275

PANGANGEN, or PANGANGEN, al. India. Archipelago, off S.E. extremity Celebes, lat. (S. and) 5° 30' E. lon. 122° 30' E. about 60 m. long, by 16 m. broad. Part of it is very low flat, and covered with fine trees, it is also, in general well peopled.

PANGARAN a vil. al. Ceylon on the Mahaveliganga, 88 m. S.E. Candy, inhabited chiefly by the Lakkas, a trading class of Mahometans. It is a place of considerable extent.

PANGASINAN a prov. Philippines, lat. Luzon, N.W. Manila bounded, N. by prov. Bataan, E. the mountains of Igorotes and the river Agno, S. prov. Pangasinan and Zamboanga, and W. the Gulf of Lingayen. It is one of the best cultivated provinces in the Philippines; and produces abundant crops, particularly of rice and indigo, both of which are exported in considerable quantities. Almost all its streams contain more or less gold among their sands, and yield good returns to those employed in washing them. The inhabitants are very industrious, and excel in many species of manufactures, particularly jewellery, cabinet work, and ship building. In the last their skill has long been celebrated; and vessels of from 600 tons to 700 tons have been built at the port of Lingayen which is the capital. Pop. 231,805

PANGBOURN, par Eng. Berks, 1395 ac. Pop. 800

PANGHU an isl. China Sea. See PACADORA ISLAND.

PANGONG a salt lake, W. Tibet, 100 m. E. Leli 14,000 ft. above sea-level, length, 100 m. breadth 3 m. to 4 m. area of basin about 7000 sq. m. Its water is a strong solution of bitter salt.

PANGONTARAN a small isl. Sooloo Archipelago, lat. 6° 9' N. lon. 120° 30' E., about 10 m. long, by 4 m. broad. It consists of an entire bed of coral, with scarcely any appearance of soil, yet it abounds with coconut trees. Though destitute of good fresh water it is said to be well stocked with cattle, goats, and fowls, and to be well inhabited. It was formerly settled by the Spaniards.

PANIAN or POKARY a support m. Hindoostan. Mala bar coast, 36 m. S. by E. Calicut lat. 10° 45' N. lon. 75° 38' E. It has numerous mosques. A large portion of the population are fishermen. The principal exports are teak wood, coconuts, rice, and rice, the chief imports, wheat, pulses, sugar, salt, and opium.

PANIOCOLO a vil. Naples prov. and 12 m. N.W. Naples, at the foot of Mount Marino. Pop. 3250.

PANIPUT a town. Hindoostan, prov. and 60 m. N. by W. Delhi lat. 29° 32' N. lon. 76° 51' E. 4 m. in circumference, and formerly surrounded by a brick wall. It imports salt, grain and cotton cloths. Principal export, coarse sugar which is produced in the vicinity.

PANISIERES, a town. France, dep. Loire, 20 m. N.E. Montbrison. Napkins and table-linen are made. P. 1160

PANJAR a territory Hindoostan. See PANJAB.

PANJAKO — 1, An isl. off W. coast, Malay peninsula, Bay of Lager, E. of Selangor and Junkney, which it greatly resembles in its features, and from which it is separated by a channel, studded with rocky islets, lat. 26° N. lon. 98° 30' E. greatest length 30 m. mean breadth about 4 m. — 2 A small coral isl. N.W. coast, Java, bay and 8 m. N. Bentam. It yields coconuts, bananas and rice. Pop. 256.

PANJIM or NEW GOA a town. India. See GOA.

PANKEH, a vil. Denmark, dioc. Holsten, 17 m. E. Kiel with a castle, built by the prince of Hesse-Darmstadt. P. 940

PANKOTA (O and U), two nearly adjacent vills, Hungary, on and about 10 m. from Arad the former occupied by Walschians, and the latter by Germans. They contain several handsome mansions have a fruitful soil, and produce excellent red and white wine. Pop. 7300.

PANKOUR, a small isl. Strait of Malacca lat. 4° 16' N. lon. 100° 58' E. It produces sugar cane, rattan, trees yielding oil, dammer and crooked timber PANNAH, a town Hindoostan prov. Allahabad, 87 m. S.E. Chatterpore lat. 24° 45' N. lon. 80° 13' E. with many handsome temples, several large tanks, and on the margin of the largest, the ruins of a palace.

PANNAL, par Eng. York (W. Riding) 4520 ac. P. 1376.

PANORMOS, two ports, Greece on the one on the N. of Isl. Mycon, and the other in Isl. Skiathos.

PANSEN, Bremen, or PANSEN, a town. Bohemia, circle Leitmeritz, 6 m. N. by W. Prague. It contains two castles, two hospitals, and a saw-mill, and has manufactures of hosiery and paper. Pop. 1086.

PANZKEA-DOROS, a vil. Hungary. See HANZKEA.

PANTAR, an isl. India. Archipelago, between the 94th. Orinby and Lombok; lat. (N.E. point) 8° 10' S.; lon. 124° 30' E. The channel between this island and that of Omley, is called Pantar Strait. It extends N. W. E. and S. S. W. about 24 m. is completely rather intricate, and is little frequented by English navigators.

PANTEAGUE par Eng. Mouthmouth 3454 ac. P 2849
PANTELELLA (anc. Cotegre), an isl. Mediterranean, 56 m. E.S.E. Cape Bon in Africa, and 80 m. S.W. coast of Sicily, on which it depends, forming part of dist. Girgenti; length, N to S, 9 m., breadth, 6 m. It is mountainous, and of volcanic formation, and fertile. It has two caverns, the one very warm and the other not cold, that a vessel of water placed in it is said to freeze in a short time. There are several good roads. The principal town Pandisera, is built in the form of a semicircle around a harbour, which has an entrance almost closed in with rocks, and is defended by a castle, used as a state prison, and two other forts. Pop. 5000.

PANTICOBA, mineral-medical baths Spain prov and 40 m. N. Huesca, 14 m. N.E. Jaca, near the village of L'antousa. It is one of the highest inhabited spots in the Pyrenees, being about 8500 ft. above the sea.

PANTIN (Latin Pantini), a vil. France, dep. Seine, on the E. of Paris, and properly one of its suburbs. It is surrounded by fine fields and gardens and has a parish church, manufacture of covers and hydraulic lime, worsted and cotton mills, and gypsum quarries. Pop. 2341.

PANTOV par Eng. Lincoln 1996 ac. Pop. 182.

PANTURA, a maritime village, Leyon, W. coast, 12 m. S. Colombo, a place of considerable trade with a custom-house, church, Wesleyan chapel and school. P. 1109.

PANUCO an ancient town Mexican Confederation, state Vera Cruz, beautifully situated on a river of same name, 18 m. W. Tampico. It is subject to occasional inundations, and now contains only about 4000 inhabitants but formerly when occupied by the Huastecas, must have been of vast extent and importance, as its ruins can be traced over an area of many miles. Many of these ruins are of great interest, and indicate a high state of civilization.

PANWELL, a tin Hinduistan prov. Arrungabad, 27 m. E. Bombay lat. 18° 59' N., lon. 74° 18' E. on the Pan. 7 m. from its mouth. It is a pretty large place, carries on a considerable trade, and is the great ferry to Bombay.

PANWORTHILL and PANWORTH par Norfolk 1902 ac. Pop. 476.

PAO, a river, Venezuela, rises among the mountains, bordering Lake Valencia flows S.E. and joins bank Cojode total course, 120 m.

PAO D'ALBO a tin Brazil prov and 40 m. W. S. W. Pernambuco, on bank Capiziba, with two churches. It exports cotton. Pop. 1400.

PAO D'ASACON (Sugar Loaf), an enormous rock of pure granite, devoid of vegetation, Brazil rising up abruptly from the sea to the height of 600 ft. W. side entrance into the Bay of Rio-de-Janeiro. It is of conical shape, and forms a most conspicuous land mark. On the mount on which this rock stands is the fort of São-João, which crosses its fire with that of the forts of Vilagallão Santa Cruz, and Lage, so as to defend the passage into the bay.

PAOLA, or PAULA a tin Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra, on a height near the shore of the Tyrrhenian Sea, 18 m. W. N. W. Cosenza. It is defended by a citadel, and two towers or forts. It has three convents, two hospitals, and many features of woodland, fish ponds, and cultivation. Pop. 4800.

PAOLO DE LORAINO (anc. San Lorenzo)
PAOLO (anc. San Lorenzo), a tin Naples, 1 Prov. Capitanata, 8 m. N. W. S. W. Benevento, on a hill; with a handsome palace, two churches, two oratories, and a convent—2 a tin Naples, prov. Lavoura, 1 m. S.E. Aris. Pop. 3505.

PAOU, PAU, or SANDEWOOD, one of the larger Fingee Islands; lat. 17° 8', lon. 173° W., greatest length, E. S. E. to W. N. W. 96 m., average breadth, about 25 m. It has a rugged surface, with numerous volcanic peaks, and also several deep bays well covered with wood, one of them called Sandwood Bay forms a large segment of a circle about 6 m. in diameter, and though encumbered by large reefs, has ample space and excellent holding ground for anchorage. The ground around it is low, but immediately behind rises in lofty and picturesque peaks; one of which, called Corobato, is 2000 ft. high. The bay takes its name from the large supplies of excellent sandwood which were at first obtained from it, but are now exhausted. Pop. about 14,000.

PAPA a market in Hungary Thutier Danube, on and 27 m. N. W. Veszprim. It contains a Greek cathedral church, a handsome edifice surmounted by two towers, built of brown black stone, two minarets, two castles, an old and the new latter a large and handsome structure, with fine gardens a courthouse in which the county meetings are held alternately with Veszprim; a Protestant college, a M. Catholic gymnasium and an infirmary. The principal manufacture is stoneware. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. Pop. 15,000.

PAPA-SERVA, one of the Shetland Islands, Scotland, at the entrance of St. Magnus Bay. It is 2 m. long, by 1 m. broad, flat and sandy but produces good barley, oats, potatoes, and pasture, inhabitants chiefly fishermen. Pop. 382.

PAPA STROSSA, one of the Orkney Islands, Scotland, N. E. Strossa, 8 m. in circumference and remarkably fertile. It contains the ruins of several ecclesiastical buildings. Pop. 28.

PAPA WESTRAY one of the Orkney Islands Scotland 1½ m. N. E. Westray. It is 3½ m. long, by 1 m. broad, and fertile. Pop. 340.

PAPAGAGIO or PAPAGAYO, a group of islands, Brazil, off S.E. coast, prov. Rio-de-Janeiro, between Capes Enx and Buzios. Vessels find good shelter among them, its water from 20 to 30 fathoms deep.

PAPAGAYO a gulf and volcano, Central America. The gulf is formed by the Pacific on the coast of Nicaragua, extending 115 m. from Point Desolado to Point Santa Catalina, and stretching inland in some places 45 m. The volcano is situated between the Partido and the shore of the gulf.

PAPAL SI LA TER, or STAZIA OF THE LUCCHESI (Italian Stato Lucchese, Stato Romano, or Stato della Chiesa—Stato, Stato Pontificio, or Stato Romano, or Stato Papale, or Stato, German Kirchen Staat), a state, Italy lat. 41° 15' to 43° N., lon. 10° 50' to 14° E. bounded before its partial absorption into the kingdom of Italy by Austria Italy E. the Adriatic, S.E. Naples, S.W. the Mediterranean W. Tuscany and N. W. Modena. Its shape is very irregular N. to S. from the mouth of the Po to Cape Corallo its length is about 280 m., greatest breadth, Ancona on the Adriatic to Civitavecchia on the Mediterranean, 140 m. least breadth, from the N. E. corner of Tuscany to the Adriatic coast, nearly on the parallel of Perù, not more than 13 m. area including the isolated territories of Bismonte and Pontevico included by Naples and excluding the small territory of San Marino, which forms an independent republic 11,974 sq. m. For administrative purposes, the Papal States were divided into ten comares, seven legations (legations) and 20 delegations (delegations) the names of which, with their area and population are exhibited in the following table—

LEGATIONS AND DELEGATIONS	Area in sq. m.	Pop. 1868
1. House of CHURCH, LACAZIONE	1,865	810,555
2. Bologna	977	349,433
4. Bari	616	223,216
5. Ravenna	109	165,412
6. Urbino-Pesaro	1,787	257,800
7. Viterbo	478	174,117
DELEGATIONS
8. Ancona	301	170,616
9. Astoria	761	219,754
10. Cambrico	312	98,412
11. Ferrara	329	304,116
12. Lodi	148	56,317
13. Perugia	1,761	219,754
14. Spalini	254	191,463
15. S. Maria	267	174,117
16. S. Maria	618	139,470
17. S. Maria	378	58,412
18. S. Maria	546	141,500
19. S. Maria	302	16,510
20. S. Maria	40	55,910
Area of water and rocks	11,977	2,469,118
Total river area	11,977
Urban area	15
Total area	11,992

The coast-line measures about 870 m., of which 210 m. are on the Adriatic, and 160 m. on the Mediterranean and on both ness is generally flat and marshy, unbroken by a single lay of any magnitude, and not possessed of any tolerable harbours except those of Ancona and Civita-Vecchia. The interior is traversed in a S.E. direction by the central chain of the Apennines, which enters it from the N.E. of Tuscan, and quits it on the N. of Naples, and sends several low ramifications both to the E. and W. The loftiest summits of the chain within the Papal States are in the E., where Mount Vettore, near Castelluccio, rises to the height of 8138 ft. Mount Sibilla, 7210 ft. and Mount Pamino, 8250 ft.

Rivers.—The Apennines forming the great water-shed of the country, divide its waters nearly in equal portions between the two seas—the Adriatic receiving its share by the Po, which forms nearly the whole of the N. boundary, the Volturno, the Po di Primaro, Lamonio, Metauro, and Ronco united, Marone, Foglia, Metauro, Metauro, Glicenti, Tronto, and other smaller streams, and the Molise river receiving its share partly by the Marta Suro and tributaries of the Garigliano, but more especially by the Tiber. None of these rivers, except the Po, and the Tiber, is of much navigable importance. They are however exceedingly useful wherever the country is sloping or undulating by the use made of them in irrigation where the ground becomes low, and spreads out into extensive flats, the advantage is lost, and the rivers become the worst scourges of the country by the pestilential swamps which they form. All the lakes of any consequence are on the Molise or Adriatic side of the water-shed. The largest are the Fucine or Trasimene, the Bolsena, and the Bracciano. After these come Vico, Pila de Lago, Albano and a number of lagoons along the coast.

Geology and Minerals.—The whole of the N.E. part of the Papal States, extending along the shores of the Adriatic from the mouth of the Po S. to Rimini, and inward as far as Bologna and Ferrara, consists of low flats forming a continuation of the diluvial gravel and alluvium which cover the plains of Lombardy. These are succeeded by a belt of tertiary strata, chiefly travertine, sandstone and marls which line the whole of the Adriatic shore from Rimini past Ancona to the mouth of the Tevere. This belt, which has its greatest width inland to the W. of Ancona, and between the towns of Ugento and Pesaro, is succeeded W. by a still narrower belt belonging to the upper extremity of the secondary formation, and composed of cherty and other calcareous rocks, which, being older than the other tertiary belt, dip in an E. direction beneath it. Farther W. and still lower in the series, is a large tract almost entirely occupied by the Jura limestone, extending W. from near Ancona to the Tiber and then N. to the vicinity of Borgo San Sepolcro in Tuscan. To the W. of this, a small zone of the tertiary formation already mentioned again intervenes, but soon gives place to a very large development of volcanic rocks. These, composed principally of trachyte, basalt and tuff, stretch from Aquasparta in the N. to the S. of Velletri, extending without interruption between the Lakes of Bolsena and Bracciano, and W. from the capital to the shore. At other parts of the shore the secondary rocks and deposits already mentioned again appear—the Jura limestone at the S. extremity where it forms the promontory of Civita or Civitavecchia, the travertine rock at Civita Vecchia, the trachyte and tertiary marls both at Velletri and the mouth of the Marta northwards, and the diluvial and alluvial deposits on both sides of the mouth of the Tiber and to a still larger extent in the Pontine Marshes, and along the coast from Nettuno to Fregene. The only metal which has yet been discovered, in sufficient quantity to justify the working of it, is iron. The other minerals are the stone of Tolfa (so excellent as to have tempted the government to make a monopoly of it) sulphur, saltpetre, rock-salt, several varieties of marble, pumice-stone, bitumen, saltpetre, alabaster, gypsum, shell, coal, foliaceous corals, and pettles clay. In several localities, fine rock crystals and garnets are found.

Climate and Vegetation.—In all the districts traversed by the Apennines and their ramifications, the air, though occasionally keen, is pure and healthy, but, in the lower grounds, pestilential vapours overhang the atmosphere, and malarial fevers to such a fearful extent, that large tracts have been almost converted into uninhabitable deserts. To the N. of the Apennines, the winter temperature is far lower than on the S. slopes; and hence, in the former locality, owing more to this cause than to any deficiency of summer heat, oranges, lemons, and similar fruit, cannot be successfully grown in the open air, while in the latter locality winter is little felt, the most delicate fruits grow freely and vegetation is never so completely checked, as not to give signs both of life and vigour. The influence of the sirocco is often severely felt on the S. coast, and would be almost insupportable, were it not tempered by breezes from the sea and the mountains. The soil is, in general, possessed of great natural fertility, and, when cultivated with the best skill and industry, produces heavy crops of ordinary grain, maize, pulse, hemp, and flax. Unfortunately, however, large tracts of the richest land owing to their unhealthiness, are left almost in a state of nature, to be roamed over by flocks of sheep, tended by a few shepherds, whose wan and sickly hues indicate the kind of atmospheric influences to which they are exposed. Other extensive tracts—to which certainly, the same objection does not apply—does they are the healthiest in the country—are necessarily excluded from regular cultivation by the elevation and rugged nature of their surface. Tracts of this description lie along the central ridge of the Apennines and their loftier ramifications, but fail not to yield profitable returns from the verdant pastures and magnificent forests which generally clothe them. After deducting all the land which, owing either to its nature or the unhealthiness of its climate, cannot be cultivated it has been estimated that the proportion of arable land remaining does not amount to one-fifth of the whole and even of this, no small portion is occupied with vineyards, olive yards, orchards, gardens, &c. It cannot therefore surprise us that, in ordinary years, notwithstanding the general warmth and natural fertility, the grain produced barely suffices for the consumption the wonder rather is that it does not fall considerably short of it, since all rural operations are performed in the most sluggish manner, with the rudest implements. Three crops of wheat are often succeeded by one of maize, and another of pulse, and then, as if to complete the scourging process, hemp or flax is taken. The same sterility is displayed in the very soil of the process, and, instead of the threshing-machine and the flax-press, the grail, when harvested is usually trodden out by cattle, and winnowed by the hand. Both the vine and the olive thrive well, but, though cultivated to a considerable extent, they are too carelessly and unskillfully prepared to create much foreign demand. A valuable product, to the management of which greater attention is paid and from which considerably more profitable returns are obtained is silk which is produced in great abundance, particularly in the N. and along the shores of the Adriatic, and of such excellent quality, that some of it, as that of Fossombrone and Bologna, is not surpassed in Europe. Among subsidiary crops, confined for the most part to particular localities, may be mentioned rice, on the plains of Bologna and Ferrara, tobacco, in the neighbourhood of Ancona, cornmeal, anise, and maize, in the legations of Forlì and Ravenna and sugar-cane, indigo, and cotton, near Terracina. Besides ordinary fruits, the orange, citron, and pomegranate are common, the date, also, is occasionally met with. Live stock are numerous, but, for the most part, of inferior breed. Sheep and goats appear to be the least valued for their wool and fleece than for their milk, from which great quantities of cheese, some of excellent quality are made. Great numbers of swine are reared on the coast of the forests. Game is not abundant and, though the coast is teem with fish, and the number of meagre-days in the Roman calendar creates an extraordinary demand for it, the fisheries are so much neglected, that the chief supply is obtained by importation. The honey obtained from bees is partly exported, but the wax is scarcely sufficient to meet the consumption.

Manufactures and Trade.—Manufactures have made very little progress, and are chiefly confined to a few domestic articles of primary necessity. Among these may be mentioned the crêpe velin, bannons and linen dresses of Bologna, the silks of Bologna, Rome, and Perugia, woollens and hosiery of the two last towns, artificial flowers, perfumes, leather, paper, umbrellas of Terni, muscotoonery, straw and other hats, wax-tapers, beads, crucifixes, false pearls, jewellery, moccasins, &c. Trade is very much hampered by the want of navigable streams, canals, and good roads and more especially in regard to the last, by the numerous banditti which are allowed to infest them. The Apennines forming a sep-ration between the N and S, and the transport of goods across them being practicable only in particular places, and on the basis of miles, prevents the free interchange of commodities; and hence it is not unfrequently happens that the same article which forms an export in the N figure as an import in the S. In addition to some of the above manufactures, the exports are timber, charcoal, potash, oil, silk, alum, sulphur, gall nuts, wax, tallow, bones, rags, sails, almonds, pears, apples and works of art; the imports are colonial produce, cattle, provisions, including salt fish, metals, chiefly iron from Elba and lead from Great Britain, woolen and cotton tissues, drugs, &c. Accounts are kept in crowns or scudi—484 divided into 10 pachi, and again subdivided into 100 baccioli. The Roman lb is nearly equal to 12 oz. avoird., the rubbo or bushel varies so much in the different legations, that it is almost impossible to specify it; the worle of wine is 18 gals., and that of oil about 1/2 less the foot is 11-73 English inches the palmo or palm 1/2 of a foot, or nearly 38 inches, and the milio 1629 yards, or about 1/2 less than the English. The Roman post is about 73 English miles.

Government.—The government is of a very peculiar description, not easily reducible to any of the generally recognized forms though in its leading feature, it is an elective monarchy in which the hereditary principle is so completely ignored, that all heirs of the sovereigns body bear the brand of illegitimacy. The sovereign, who bears the name of Pope, or Pape, must be at the time of his election, a cardinal-priest, and is chosen for life by his fellow cardinals, who constitute what is called the Sacred College, and must all be priests. The hierarchical principle thus displayed is not confined to the higher offices but is continued throughout the whole series—the priestly being an indispensable qualification for the tenure of any civil office, though in regard to some, the priestly character seems to be more nominal than real, as individuals regarded as priests while in office, are sometimes not truly in orders and again become laymen when the office expires. The number of cardinals, in imitation of the evangelists sent out by our Saviour is limited to 70 and all vacancies may be filled up by the Pope absolutely without control though, in practice, the number is seldom complete. When the Pope dies, the Cardinal Chamberlain occupies his place till the third day when the funeral takes place. On the tenth day, the cardinals meet in secret conclave, and are shut up till a majority of two-thirds are agreed as to a successor. Even then the election is not determined, as Austria, France, and Spain have each a veto on one candidate. In the event of their exercising it, the whole process must again be gone over and full scope is given for all kinds of intrigue. The government is administered by boards or congregations, presided over by a Cardinal Secretary of State, as prime minister. The principal congregations are the Camera Apostolica or Treasury presided over by the Cardinal-Chamberlain, the only minister who holds office for life; the Cancellaria or Chancery—presided, the Cardinal-Chancellor, the Dataria, for ecclesiastical benefices the Rota, for municipal police the Congregazione de' Monti, for public debt, the Sacre Consulta, the political and civil administration of the government, the Segreteria or Court of Seal, and the Sacra Rota or Supreme Court of Justice. The consistory of Rome is presided over by a governor who has very extensive powers, and can inflict capital punishment: the provinces, or Legatione and Delegations, by legates and delegates, each assisted by a council, consisting of the procurators of the chief town, and from two to four councillors, nominated by the Pope for five years. The delegations are subdivided into districts (discreti) headed by governors, who act as judges without appeal, in all civil cases under 500 scudi, and subject to appeal in minor criminal cases. The appeal is, in the first instance, to the Collegiate Courts, which is composed of the delegates, two assessors, an ordinary judge, and a member of the Consistorial Council, and has primary jurisdiction over the whole delegation. Above the Collegiate Courts are three superior Courts of Appeal. One is the Segnatura at Rome, another sits at Bologna, and the third at Ancona. A still higher Court of Appeal is the Sacra Rota, the limit of whose jurisdiction is not very easily defined, as it once extended over the whole Christian world, and is still very extensive in all countries where the Pope's authority is generally recognized. It is composed of twelve prelates, six of whom are appointed by the Pope, two by Spain, and one each by France, Germany, Tuscany, and Milan. The system of law is extremely defective since it scorns all the modern improvements in jurisprudence, and refuses to recognize any codes but the Canon Law and Corpus Juris. The exact amount of the Papal revenue cannot be ascertained. A great part of it is derived from the sale of offices, which is a source of which a small amount is exhibited. The secular revenue is estimated at about 21,000,000. About one-half of it is derived from customs, excise, and monopolies, all levied on principles which enlightened states have long abandoned. About one-third is derived from taxes on land. Of the remainder, the largest item is furnished by the lottery. The army in ordinary times, amounts to about 14,000 men, of whom 4400 belong to two regiments of Swiss. A few gun-brigs and smaller craft, and two steamers, compose the Papal navy.

Church, Education, &c.—The ecclesiastical establishment, exclusive of Rome, numbers 9 archbishops, 60 bishops, 13 abbots, the number of secular priests is 3500 of regulars or monks 10,000, and of nuns 8000. In point merely of numbers, the thing is evidently overdone, but in point of efficiency for any purpose, religious or moral, the whole machinery is defective in the extreme, and often proves a fruitful source of the vices which it is professedly intended to prevent or correct. The R. Catholic religion is here, of course, completely dominant, and to subject of the Pope is allowed to profess any other at least if he has been baptized. The non-performance of this rite in the case of the Jews, is probably one of the reasons why an exemption is made in their favour, and they are allowed to have eight synagogues. Education is wholly in the hands of the clergy, and makes a good show upon paper the educational institutions including eight universities two primary at Rome and Bologna, and six secondary bishops schools in all the districts rich enough to support them and communal schools, one of which ought to be in every commune. In point of fact, however, instruction is actually provided for not more than one in fifty of the population, and is, for the most part, as very meagre, as to give good ground to suspect that its real object is not so much to educate as to supplant education. Thus, at all events, in its general result, and the state which it directs to be pursued and wrest in Christendom, has the most ignorant, the most lawless and the most dissatisfied subjects.

History.—The Papal States as containing the nucleus of the last and greatest of the ancient empires which swayed the world, have a history full of interest: but their existence under the very anomalous form which they now present, dates only from the middle of the 8th century. Long before this period the bishop of Rome had acquired vast ecclesiastical influence, and under the name of Pope, claimed to be the supreme visible head, and spiritual guide of Christendom but his temporal possessions lay within a very narrow compass, and he often suffered from the visits of foreign aggressors, who treated him with very little ceremony. One of the most formidable of these was Attilius, king of the Lombards. To rid himself of his presence, Stephen II. who was then Pope, and perfectly aware of the inability of the Greek emperor to assist him, applied to King Pepin, who not only warmly espoused his cause and expelled the Lombards, but in 755 granted to the Pope and his successors a right in perpetuity to the territories from which he had expelled them. The Lombards, who were very much dissatisfied with Pepin's donation as soon as they learned his death, then they collected an army, and laid siege to Rome. Charlemagne, Pepin's son and successor hastened to the rescue, and not contented with removing his father's grant, considerably enlarged it. At first the Pope had been contented to hold his temporal possessions under the Greek emperor whose sanction was requisite to confirm his election, and in whose name justice continued to be administered, even in Rome. But this yoke, which was never borne meekly, was, by a series of dexterous manoeuvres and intrigues, gradually loosened and ultimately thrown off. Stephen V., on his election in 816, found himself in a condition to decline his confirmation by the emperor, either of the East or West. Papal ambition had now free course, and all the numerous claims which virtually placed the Pope at the head of all sovereigns as their lord paramount, not only in spiritual, but also in temporal things, were shamelessly advanced. Such claims, not withstanding the ignorance and superstition which prevailed, could not fail to elicit forth strenuous opposition, and several, though a fierce struggle took place between the pope and the emperor of Germany, and was not terminated for centuries. But when it did terminate, the Pope was victor, having not only succeeded in obtaining a recognition of his most arrogant pretensions, but in adding largely to what was called his patrimony. The temporal supremacy which the Pope had asserted was not allowed to remain a dead letter, and in almost all the disputed successions which arose in Europe, he was seen acting sometimes as the selector, but often as the self-nominated umpire, disposing of crowns at pleasure, and as called his purpose at one time absorbing subjects from their allegiance to their sovereign, and at another excommunicating them for refusing to yield it. The Pope, however, did not always prove victorious in the struggle which it provoked or even escape unscathed. Several of the individuals raised to the papedom were stained with monstrous vices, and thereby greatly weakened his moral influence. Others, to advance the interests of nephews or bastards, were not over-scrupulous in carving dukedoms for them out of St. Peter's patrimony, and even disputed elections took place, which threw the rival popes into the hands of sovereigns, who took care not to suppose their cause without sustaining for compensation. In this way the papal sovereignty though apparently at its very much had been greatly weakened, and to the beginning of the 15th century, symptoms of decay were strongly manifested. Councils had hitherto been the emblematic tools of the popes, but the Council of Constance boldly asserted its independence and showed a determination either to share in the supremacy of the Pope, or to question its reality. Subsequent to this event, several popes instead of increasing their temporal possessions, found it difficult to maintain them. The most important additions were made by Julius II, who regained Ravenna and several other territories which had been lost, and moreover added Bologna. He died in 1513 and was succeeded by Leo X, whose pontificate, though in some respects the most splendid on record, proved the most disastrous to the papacy. During the 16th century the Reformation commenced and ultimately delivered the better half of Europe from spiritual thraldom. The Pope thus not only lost some of the richest sources of his revenue, but was compelled silently to withdraw several of his most arrogant pretensions and in regard to temporal authority to descend from his lofty eminence as king of kings to the comparatively humble station of a sovereign of the Papal States. Since then there has not been much in the history of these States deserving of particular notice. The most memorable events have occurred towards the end of the last, and since the commencement of the present century. In 1757 the French seized the N. legations and annexed them to their Glaupine Republic and in 1810 the whole of the Papal States were incorporated by Bonaparte into his kingdom of Italy and the Pope and several of his cardinals were carried off to France, where they remained under surveillance till Bonaparte's downfall in 1814. The Pope again possesses his temporal sovereignty, though obviously by a very precarious tenure. He could make no official resistance against foreign aggression, and he was recently (Nov. 24, 1848) driven from his capital by civil war. He has returned, but only to occupy a position most humiliating to any sovereign, and scarcely most damaging to his lofty pretensions.

PAPANTLA, a vil. Mexican Confederation, state Vera Cruz, 180 m. N.E. Mexico. It lies on the coast, and is the centre of a very rich agricultural district, but owing to the heat and insalubrity of the burning climate, is inhabited almost entirely by Indians, and is only occasionally visited by traders from the coast. The fertility though now thus devoted once contained, at the distance of about 8 m. from the village a magnificent city, the massive ruins of which still exist, and indicate its ancient splendour. Among other remains are those of a beautiful pyramid, one of the most perfect of the old Mexican structures. It is built of sandstone, beautifully squared and jointed, and faced by hard stone, which appears to have been polished. Measures 120 ft. on every side at its base and consists of seven stories, gradually narrowing, and topped by a stair of 57 steps, each 1 ft. high, and terminating at the sixth story. The seventh story appears to have been the altar on which sacrifices were offered. Trees, plants and vines, which, in course of time have sprung from the joints and crevices of the structure, add much to its singular appearance.

PAPABI, a vil. and par. Brazil, prov. Rio-Grande-do-Norte, on a lake of same name, 4 m. S. Natal; with a church and a primary school. Inhabitants employed in fishing, and in making various articles of export.

PAPABQUIARO, a tu. Mexico, dep. and 62 m. W. N. W. Durango, 1 bank Culiacan. Pop. about 8000.

PAPENBERG an vil. Japan dividing the harbour of Nangasaki into an outer and a middle portion. Though not above $\frac{1}{2}$ m. in circuit, it is rendered very conspicuous by its lofty height, and presents a remarkable appearance, being planted with a row of trees from its base to its summit.

PAPERBURG, a tu. Hanover, gov. Osnabrück, near 1. bank Ems, 23 m. S.E. Emden with a church, many features of salicloth and cordage, several distilleries saw-mills, and extensive building-yards. Pop. 6250.

PAPENDRECHT a vil. Holland, prov. S. Holland 11 m. S.E. Rotterdam, on the Merwede, with a church and school. Pop. (agricultural) 1888.

PAPHOS, a seaport in Cyprus. See PAPHOS.

PAPOZZE a vil. kingd. of Italy gov. Venetia, prov. Padovana, 5 m. S.E. W. Adria, near 1. bank Po with a church, three oratories and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 2600.

PAPPI NHILM, etc. Bavaria, Middle Franconia, c. bank Altmühl, 33 m. S.E. Ansbach; with a handsome chateau of the Counts of Pappenheim, a church, synagogue, Latin school and manufactures of stone and earthen ware, mezzochium pipes, cutlery and saddles. At Solenhofen, about 1 m. distant, is the finest quarry of lithographic stones yet discovered. P. 3183.

PAPPELWICK par. Eng. Sussex 5250 P. 107.

PAPRA, a small vil. Lower Saxony, prov. Beland, 1 m. W. by N. Theodor, or Pong. lat. 6° 15' N. lon. 96° 15' E.

PAPRADNO, a vil. Hungary, Higher Danube, on Trent schin, about 24 m. from Silein. It has a 1. Catholic church and quarries of good building stone. Pop. 2377.

PAPUA, PAPUAMED or NEW GUINEA, a great island immediately S. of the Equator and N. of Australia, between the Asian Seas on the W. and the Pacific Ocean on the E., and connecting the Indian Archipelago on the one side, with the Polynesian groups on the other. The general direction of the island is W. N. W. and E. S. E. Its most E. point is Cape of Good Hope, in lat. 0° 19' S. Its most W. point, Cape Sulu, opposite to Melauwiti Island, from which it is separated by the Straits of Galloway, and about 100 m. S.W. from Cape of Good Hope, is in lon. 131° 2' E. The most S. and also most E. point of the island appears to stand in lat. 10° 24' S. lon. 161° 12' E. The continuity of the land quite so far perhaps, is not yet fully established yet recent surveys have shown that the greater part of the coast laid down in our maps as Louisaude on the authority of Bougainville (1768) really belong to New Guinea, which has been traced actually from Beach Bay in lon. 159° 4' E., above two degrees beyond, or E. of Cape Rodney hitherto regarded as the S.E. extremity of the island. The length of Papua from Cape Sulu to its S.E. extremity is about 1500 m. Its breadth varies greatly, deep points, at the W. end of the island dividing it into narrow peninsulas, but from lon. 156° to 146° E. it is compact, and has a breadth of from 200 m. to 400 m. Its area may therefore be estimated, in round numbers, at 250,000 sq. m.

Discovery—As this vast island is as yet known chiefly through the reports of navigators, who have sailed along its shores, and as no Europeans have explored its interior, or penetrated shore a mile or two from the sea-shore, and that only at a few points, we have no such acquaintance with it as would justify the attempt to describe systematically its natural features and characteristics. The fragmentary knowledge of these matters actually obtained, may be reproduced most advantageously as regards both the general relation and just appreciation of particulars, in connection with, or appended to, the account of the series of maritime discoveries from which it is derived. According to some writers, the first discovery of New Guinea was made 1513, by the Portuguese navigator, Albuca, but it is more certain that in 1573, G. de Menezes, on a voyage from Goa to the Molucca Islands, was driven by a tempest to these shores. Yet the Spaniards claim the discovery for Alva de Seaveria, who, in 1528, touching upon, and gave his name to the N coasts about the Cape of Good Hope.

Barredin's Land extends about 100 m. from the Cape of Good Hope, when the coast turns nearly S. at the commencement of a deep bay. A little S. of the promontory thus formed, stands the village of Doré, a point where recent voyagers have gathered much of their information. Cape D'Urville about 300 m. E. by S from Doré, forms the E termination of the great bay which has also a depth S. of 200 m., and is named after Geelvink, who ran along its eastern shores in 1705. At the bottom of this bay, lat. 4° 30' S., lon 151° 40' E. New Guinea is reduced to an isthmus not above 20 m. wide, and which may be considered as dividing the island into two portions: the E, tolerably compact, and extending through 10° of longitude, and the W 5 in length more broken and peninsular. A great inlet, discovered and examined by M. Ulcer in 1791, enters this portion from W to E about 100 m., and reaches within 40 m. of the W shores of Geelvink's Bay. If we pass from the Cape of Good Hope round Cape Salt (the most W point) we come upon the coast discovered by Vink in 1803, and crossing the mouth of M. Ulcer's Inlet we arrive at the projecting land seen by Pool in 1636. Thence, following a very irregular coast in its general direction E, we reach Ray's Land (1678), which leads to the S. side of the isthmus already mentioned at the bottom of Geelvink's Bay. This completes the current of the W and deeply-indentured portion of the island. Beyond or E of the isthmus, the E. coast trends S.E. about 150 m., then turns S. and S.W. an equal distance to Cape Vaalaba (False Cape). A great portion of this tract was traced by the Dutch ship Duyfhuys in 1604. E. by S from Cape Vaalaba, at a distance of 200 m. is the line of coast N. of Torres Strait, which appears to have been first seen by Bampton and Ait in 1793. Again at a distance of 200 m. further E. the slopes of New Guinea were seen by Bougainville in 1768. The opposite coast at this (the E) end of the island was discovered by D. Entrecasteaux in 1785. The coast adjoining these to the N.W. was seen by Dampier in 1700 and the remainder of the N coast of the island towards Cape D'Urville, was discovered and traced for a considerable distance as early as 1616, by Schouten and Lemaire. It would be easy to lengthen this list of navigators who claim a share in the discovery of New Guinea, but it is here expedient to pass to the discovery of the island of earlier voyagers (the name of Forrest alone, who in 1775 collected in Doré Bay much valuable information, deserving distinct mention), in order to make room for a rapid exposition of the various important surveys made along the coasts of New Guinea within the last quarter of a century.

Dutch Settlement.—In 1826, the Dutch brig Douglas, 1 sentent Koff sailed from Amboyna, to examine the S.W. coast doubtless with a view to the selection of a site for a colony about 100 m. N.E. of False Cape, a wide opening discovered was supposed to be the mouth of a great river and recovered the name of the Douglas. The examination of this supposed river was one of the objects of the expedition sent from Batavia in 1839 to the same coast. Captain Bieussboom, in the Triton, entered the Douglas, but after a tedious navigation in it of some days he retraced his course, fearing that delays might mar the execution of another task entrusted to him. A little more perseverance would have enabled him to solve the mystery of the supposed river. He then sailed round False Cape, lat. 8° 24' S., lon 137° 38' E., and arrived E. to take possession of New Guinea, from the 140th meridian E. of Greenwich westwards. He executed his order, however, by one degree, and formally took possession of the island from its W extremity to the 141st meridian. He then retraced N.W. to Kay's Land, and in Triton Bay he erected the fort of De Bus. The scenery round this fort was rich and pleasing, the mountain rising immediately behind it to a height of 3400 ft. But the rankness of the vegetation rendered the narrow and sheltered plain exceedingly unhealthy, so that after the settlement had struggled for a few years, it was found necessary to abandon it. In 1850, another Dutch expedition resumed the survey of the Douglas, and this time with success. The supposed river proved to be a strait about 90 m. long, and terminating the tract which terminates in Cape False. It received the name of the Princess Marianne's Strait, while the low woody tract to the S. and W. was called Prince Frederick's Island.

Vol. II.

Recent Surveys.—The French expedition, commanded by Duperrey and Dumont D'Urville (1823-6, 1827-8, 1837-40), have also added not a little to our accurate knowledge of the S. W., and the N coasts including the Bay of Geelvink. And lastly, two vessels were sent successively by the British Government—namely, the Fly, Captain Blackwood, and the Redoubtable, Captain Owen Stanley—to survey the passages through Torres Strait, S. to Sydney and E. into the Pacific. These expeditions fully accomplished their express objects, and obtained results of most valuable value to navigation. But, besides, they have made us acquainted with a long line of coast on the S.E. side of New Guinea.

Aspect of the Country.—E. of Torres Strait (lon 143° E.), the coast forms a deep bay extending through 7° of longitude, and forming the S. 1 on the E. side of this bay the shore is lined for about 150 m. with a barrier of coral reefs, 5 m. to 15 m. distant, with many openings, and including within them secure and spacious harbours. The coast is in some parts bold, Mount Astrolabe the highest summit of a group rising close to the shore, has an absolute height of 5800 ft. but behind these, at a great distance in the interior a much loftier chain of mountains may be distinctly traced in favourable weather, through an extent of 250 m. These mountains sink to the shore at Heath Bay, lat. 40° 30' S. lon 150° 40' E. Following then N.W. from that point, the chief summits are—

	lat	lon	Height
Mount Seaking	8° 42' S.	150° 140'	11150 ft.
Mount Sere	8° 23' S.	148° 0'	11150 ft.
Mount Owen Stanley	8° 54' S.	147° 30' E.	15225 "
Mount Yula	8° 18' S.	146° 0' E.	15048 "

The W side of the great bay adjacent to Torres Strait presents a totally different character. Captain Blackwood found it to be a great mainly flat, covered with dense forests, and intersected by innumerable fresh-water channels, forming a network of canals, of all sizes, from that of a narrow ditch, to a width of 5 m. and depth of 5 fathoms. In short, this coast has, for a length of 70 m. or 80 m., all the characteristics of the delta of a great river. The whole coast is formed by immense mud banks, extending 10 m. or 12 m. out to sea, and having a general depth of only two fathoms. The rivers flowing through these numerous channels seem to be always full and owing to the great body of fresh water issuing from them, they imbue the sea to a great distance. The largest of the openings have not width, and that which seems most likely to be an arm of a great river, lies in lat. 8° 42' S. A long tract of coast S. of Princess Marianne's Strait, has a similar character. The mud-banks extend so far out, that even small vessels can hardly approach within 10 m. of land from the isthmus S. of Geelvink's Bay high mountains are visible to the E. but as the general direction of these chains seems to be from W to E, they recede from the S. coast, and soon disappear. The N coast of New Guinea is said to be generally mountainous, as well as the W. peninsular portion and it was even surmised that some of these mountains rise above the snow line.

Climate.—Regarding the climate of New Guinea, we possess but few and scattered notices and can only venture to surmise that it is strongly contradistinguished from that of the neighbouring continent, Australia, being as remarkable for abundant humidity, as the latter is for the want of it. This difference is to be ascribed not only to its position close to the line and within the range of the monsoons, and equatorial strata of vapour, but also to its lofty mountains. Hence it is, that Torres Strait seems to separate two worlds of totally different aspects: the one a dry desert, with scanty vegetation and scarcely a palm-tree; the other, covered with dense and varied forests, and spreading out into vast alluvial plains, formed by the continual deposit of great rivers.

Plants.—The forests of New Guinea abound in trees of gigantic size, among them is the Dryobalanops, or eagle-trees (of Sumatra). On the low S.E. shores, the sugar-palm lines the banks of the rivers. The natives cultivate, with more or less care, rice, maize, yams, cocoa-nut, sugarcane, and at least three species of banana. Wild nutmeg and other spices are found in the woods, but the only productions of those forests, sought after at present, are the bark of the Palaus and Messop, which are carried by the Malays to Japan and China, where they are esteemed for their supposed febrifuge and other medicinal properties.

Animals.—The mammals of New Guinea appear to be few in number. Of the species hitherto collected, the greater number belong to the marsupial animals, like those of Australia. The kangaroos, however, are specifically distinct, and two species (Dendrolagus) have the peculiar habit of living in trees. In birds, little indeed appears to be known; but about 60 species are already known. Brilliant feathers, particularly those of the bird of paradise, are among the articles exported by the Malays. The most numerous tribe is that of the parrots, and New Guinea may without impropriety be called the Land of Corcorans.

Achakmatu—The W shores of New Guinea have been visited for ages by Malays, chiefly from Ceram, who have in some places settled on the coasts, and intermarried with the natives, whom they call Orang Papua, that is, men with fringed hair. To Malayan influence perhaps, it is due, that the natives have always manifested violent hostility to Europeans, which has been unjustly ascribed to their barbarity. The Papuans are negroes of small stature, distinguishable from African negroes, by the narrowest and lateral compression of the head, by the smallness, and almost disappearance of the chin, by the excessive thickness of the lips and breadth of the nostrils, the nose being often curved downwards by the weight of the ornaments attached to it. But this description does not apply to all the natives of New Guinea, who are evidently a mixed people great variety of features (Malay, Jewish, and Papuan) as well as of color. The opinion has been expressed by some travellers, that the opinions have therefore entertained that the inhabitants of the island are divisible into two races, seems to be as unfounded as the assumption that they are in the lowest stage of savage existence. Even on the coast most remote from those habitually visited by the Malays, the Malayan arts of boat and house-building are well understood. The natives at the E end of the island have large canoes, with outriggers, and double leaved sails of matting. Their dwellings, raised above the ground on stilts, are of the same construction as those seen on the low coast visited by Captain Blackwood, where the people seem to be unusually barbarous, there was seen a house 100 ft long, with an arched roof of bamboo, well thatched, the building being strong and capacious enough to receive 200 or 500 people. The use of iron is unknown among them. The men are nearly naked indolently plained and tattooed. The women wear petticoats made of strands of pandanus leaf and several of these, of various colors, are often worn in succession, as on the other coast. See also the accounts of Captain Boscawen, Captain Cook, Koll's Voyage, by Burck, Gordon, Sutherland, Voyage de la Koll's Voyage, by Burck, Modern, Brue, de Jukes, Voyage of the Fly, Mc Gillivray, Voyage of the Rattlesnake.

[illegible]

PAPWORTH two pars. England, co. Cambridge —
1 (St. Agnes) 1290 ac. Pop. 151 — 2, (St. Eversaf), 1091 ac.
1 m. 126.

PAQUETA aniel Brazil bay of Rio-de-Janeiro; about 4 m long, and 3 m. broad fertile, and well cultivated, the low grounds being laid out in beautiful small country-seats, and the higher grounds covered with coffee and sugar plantations. It contains two churches.

PARA, a vast marshland, but slowly populated by Brazil: lat. 4° 30' N., to 9° S. lon. 45 to 64 W.; bounded N by Venezuela and New Granada, English, Dutch, and French Guiana, and the Atlantic; E. prov. Maranhão;
S Guyana and Mato Grosso; and W Para and Rondonia.
Area, 1,384,370 sq. km. On the N frontiers are several mountain ranges of considerable height, but the great features by which the province is characterized are its immense plains, the campos of the rivers which flow into the Amazon, and the slopes of the cordillera formed by the course of the Amazon, which, though not uniform, differs little from those of
On each of and to the N and S, the ground gradually rises till in the former direction it forms the watershed between the basins of the Amazon and the Orinoco, and in the latter between the basins of the Amazon and the Rio-de-la-Plata.
In the E. part of the prov. the Tocatima, and a number of minor streams, carry their waters directly to the ocean, but, with the exception all the other rivers are tributaries of the Amazon. The principal of these tributaries are the Negro on the left, the Madeira, Tapajós, and Xingú, on the right bank. The spaces which separate the tributaries from the main stream, and from each other are either occupied by tracts of peatlands, and almost interminable forests, or stretch out into alluvial plains, often clothed with the richest verdure, and almost always of inexpressible fertility. The richness of the soil succeeded by the heat of a tropical sun, produces vegetable forms of gigantic magnitude, from which timber of all purposes, and excellent manure, are obtained. The principal parturient is obtained while even the gymnosperms undergrowth furnishes endless varieties of plants and shrubs, of the greatest value both in medicine and in the arts. In the comparatively limited tracts which have been brought under cultivation the most important crops are manioc, rice, millet, coffee, cotton and sugar-cane. In respect of minerals the province is comparatively poor. Gold and silver em-eralds, and other precious stones occur, but only to a small extent. The principal exports are sugar, wax, and oil, and to be preferred to Brazilian wood species: maratubá, contigüous; and other elastic gums; balsam copaiba, pimento, iron, timber, etc.

For administrative purposes, Para is divided into six comarcas—Alto Amazonas, Cameta, Bragança, Grão-Para, Maespa, and Santarém, or Tapajós, subdivided into 20 municipal districts, named after the principal towns which they contain. It sends three deputies to the General Legislative Assembly and appoints one senator. The Provincial Assembly consists of 38 members, and holds its sittings in Para, or Belém. Pop. 225,000, or about six to the square mile.

PARÁ, mesaling Father of Waters, a name originally applied to the Amazon and its tributaries, but now confined to the E. estuary which receives its chief supply of water from the Tocantins. It has a direct length from N.E. to S.W. of about 200 m., with a width varying from 12 m. or 16 m. to 40 m. at its mouth, where it is greatest. It is remarkable for its bore which at spring-tides rushes in impetuously in a westward 15 ft. in height.

PARABIAGO a vi and com Italy Lombardy prov and 15 m W N Milan r bank Olma with a large and handsome square a church and an educational institute, and extensive manufactures of silk goods. It is the birthplace of Bonaventura Cavalieri whose work on Indivisibles is said to contain the first germ of the differential calculus. P 8185.

PARABUTI a vil Hungary, Hither Danube, so Bacs, 29 m W Peterwardein with a Greek and a R. Catholic church. Pop. 3408.

PARACATU, a tn. Brazil, prov. Minas-Geraes, 890 m N W Ouro-Prato with four churches, an intendencia, town-house, a Latin and a primary school, and a considerable trade in sugar rum, coffee, sheen, and bacon salt, iron implements, and pieces of European manufacture.

PARACATU a river, Brazil, which rises a little W above the town proceeds E, and after a course of 240 m., much of which is navigable, joins the bank São Francisco, in lat. 16° 25' S.

PARACEL, an archipelago, China Sea, containing several groups of low islands and shoals, having their nearest extremity about 80 m. off the coast of Cochin China; lat. 12° to 17° N., and lon 111 to 118° E. They consist of the Amphibious Islands. Woody Island, about 3 m. in circuit, covered with some coconut trees. Lincoln Island, the most E. of the Paracombes, and about 3 m. in circuit. Triton Island, or Bank, in the S.W. of the archipelago, and stretching N or S.E. about 3 or 4 m., North, Discovery Valadon, or Bombay Shoals. Drummond, a Money, Roberts and Crescent Islands, and Pismo Peak.

PARACOMBE, par. Bag. Devon, 4863 so Pop. 460. PARADAD, a tin. Sp. Sp. Andalusia, prov. and 30 m. E. of Seville, with a small semicircular, a prov. and 30 m. E. of Seville, three hermitages, and two fountains. Pop. (agricultural) 4388.

PARADEIS, a vil. Anatolia, Syria, cirle and near Jundun burg with manufactures of ironware, chiefly shovels, and a copper and an iron mill. Pop. 1180.

PARAGA, a vil. Hungary. Hither Danube co. Desc. about 12 m from N. with a Greek church and a crane in town. Pop. 1010.

PARAGAI, a river, S. America rises in Bolivia, prov. Chiquito, and proceeding N. forms part of the boundary between that country and Brazil, enters prov. Mato Grosso, and joins L. bank Gnapore, about 300 m. below the town of Mato Grosso, lat. 18 30' S.

PARAGUA, a river Venezuela, runs on the N. slope of the Sierra Paracuana flows N., then E. and falls into the L. Orinoco, 30 m. below Barceloneta, lat. 6 50' S., lon. 62° 50' W. total course, 240 m.

PARAGUAY, a river. Brazil rises in the Serra de Chapada, prov. Bahia, and descending from the mountains by a series of lofty cascades, proceeds E. in a very crooked course passes the towns of Cochoira and Maragogipe, and enters the W. shore of the bay of All Saints, by a very wide mouth. It is the largest river which enters the bay and is said to have a course of nearly 900 m. It is navigable by small vessels up to the town of Cochoira.

PARAGUANA, a peninsula, Venezuela, prov. Coro, extending into the L. Orinoco, lat. 12° lon. 70° W. and connected with the mainland by the long and narrow isthmus of McAdams. It is about 40 m. long by 35 m. broad and is mountainous in the centre, with a gradual slope towards the coast.

PARAGUAY, a name at one time used in a very extensive sense, so as to include the whole of the immense regions of S. America between lat. 16° S., and the straits of Magellan and between Chili and Peru, on the W., and Brazil on the E. now confined to the republic properly so called extending from lat. 21° to 27° S. and lon. 54° to 58° 40' W. The space thus inclosed forms a very compact territory, nearly in the shape of a parallelogram, about 430 m. long N. to S., with an average breadth of about 300 m. and consequently containing an area of about 86,000 sq. m. On the N. its limits with Brazil are only vaguely ascertained but in all other directions it enjoys the advantage of great natural boundaries—the Paraná on the E. and S., and its tributary the Uruguay on the W. The whole surface thus belongs to the basin of these two rivers, a mountain range of considerable elevation stretching between N. to S. so as to form many water-sheds and send the drainage in opposite directions but nearly in equal portions. The distance of the water shed from the river scarcely anywhere exceeds 100 m. and hence the tributaries by which the drainage is conveyed are more remarkable for their number than their magnitude. By far the largest is the Tiberina, which, owing to an E. bend in the water-shed, has its course considerably prolonged, and being augmented by several large affluents from the N. becomes a noble stream before it reaches the Paraguay. The surface, as already observed, is mountainous in the centre, and also in the N.E., where a significant known by the name of the Sierra-de-Maracay, or Cordillera-de-Maracay, breaks off from the central chain, and proceeding E. to the banks of the Paraná, interrupts the navigation of that river and forms one of the most remarkable cañons in the world. The river which, above the rapids is 12,600 ft. wide, begins to force its way through a deep, narrow gorge, and becoming suddenly contracted to 130 ft. pours down its immense flood with tremendous fury, and a noise which is heard at the distance of 18 m. From the mountain region the surface rapidly descends, first presenting a finely diversified succession of lower heights, and then spreading out into rich alluvial plains, which, not infrequently, in the immediate vicinity of the larger streams, are converted into swamps. The climate, though temperate, has its extremes best greatly modified by the inequalities of the surface, but concurs with the natural fertility of the soil in producing a vegetation of almost unequalled luxuriance and grandeur. In the forests are found at least sixty varieties of timber, admirably adapted for all purposes in which elasticity durability or buoyancy is required; dye-woods, gums, drugs, perfumes, vegetable oils, and fruits, in almost endless variety. Many of the hills are literally covered with the yuca root. (The Ficus) a most contemptible substitute for the tea of China, and the principal beverage of one-half of S. America. The larger plains are roamed over by immense herds of cattle, which though scarcely required for food in a country otherwise so richly provided, yield valuable products in the shape of hides, tallow, hair, horns, bones, &c. and on all the alluvial tracts where cultivation is attempted with instruments, however primitive and imperfect, sugar-cane, cotton, tobacco, rice, maize, and in short the greater part of the most valuable products, both of the tropical and the temperate zones, are raised in profusion. A country thus highly favoured by nature, has already collected a population estimated at 1,300,000. Thus though far greater than usually found in S. American states, bears no proportion to its capabilities which if fully developed, would probably furnish a larger amount of human substance than any other tract of equal extent on the surface of the globe. Unfortunately, various political causes have seriously interfered with the advancing prosperity. In the contest with the mother-country, its isolated position gave it decided advantages, and almost at once, by a single effort, it succeeded in emancipating itself from the Spanish yoke. But it was only to fall under one still more galling. Dr. Francia who commenced his political career in 1811 as secretary to the revolutionary junta, having been elected consul exchanged the name for that of dictator in 1814, and thenceforward till his death in 1840 at the advanced age of 84 retained it with a firm grasp, both in name and in reality. His tyranny, justly regarded as one of the most remarkable political phenomena of modern times, was maintained by a system of espionage so rigorous, and at the same time so widely spread as to bring fear and distrust into every household, and by a strict prohibition of all intercourse with other nations. This thralldom ended with the dictator's life, and a popular government was immediately established by the election of two consuls to serve for two years. This form of government, notwithstanding the obvious defects, has hitherto been well administered, and not only has the restriction on foreign intercourse been removed, but the country has been declared free and open both to foreigners and commerce. The benefits of this liberal arrangement have, however, been in a great measure frustrated by the selfish policy of the government of Buenos Ayres, which, taking undue advantage of its command of the outlet of the La Plata has hitherto been too successful in crippling the trade not only of Paraguay but of the extensive regions beyond it abounding in valuable products, to which the Paraná and Uruguay furnish the only available means of transport. The defeat and flight of Rosas, the dictator of Buenos Ayres, in February 1852 have changed the state of affairs. On October 1 1853 in accordance with a decree of the Provisional Director of the Argentine Confederation, dated August 31, the navigation of the Rio-de-la-Plata, the Paraná and the Uruguay, is opened to all foreign vessels under 120 tons register.—Bulletin of the American Geographical and Statistical Society New York, 1853, c. 1.

PARAGUAY, a large river S. America.

PARAIIHA, a maritime prov. N. E. of Brazil, bounded N. by Rio-Grande do-Norte, E. the Atlantic, S. Pernambuco, and W. Ceará. It stretches N. to S. along the coast for about 110 m. length E. to W. about 480 m. area, 51,948 sq. m. It is covered by a series of ramifications from the Cordillera-Borborana, which stretches E. to W. Between the ridges are valleys of considerable extent, sloping gradually towards the coast, and each containing a stream of some magnitude, fed by numerous torrents from the ridges which inclose it. The largest of these rivers gives its name to the prov., and drains the central valley N. of it are the Mananaganga, and the Guaja or Guajohi, the latter forming the N. boundary of the prov., and separating it from Rio-Grande do-Norte to the S.

in the Guyana, separating it on the S. from prov Pernambuco. Much of the soil is of a sandy texture, not capable of yielding good crops under any circumstances, and rendered almost absolutely barren by long droughts, which continue without intermission from six to eight months in the year. The higher grounds are generally of the class known by the name of cangaço or shrubby lands, covered with trees made stunted and deciduous by want of moisture and moisture in some of the low valleys, however, along the banks of streams, tracts of good alluvial soil occur, and are employed in raising sugar-cane and rice. On many of the mountain slopes mandioc, cotton, millet, and tobacco are found to thrive, while the loftiest summits are not unfrequently covered with forests which furnish excellent timber or valuable gums and balsams. Many species of palms, some of them of remarkable height, grow spontaneously on the low flats which line the coast. The principal exports are cotton, sugar, and rum. Parahiba sends five deputies to the general legislative assembly, and appoints two senators. The provincial assembly composed of 28 members, holds its sittings in the town of Parahiba. The educational establishments include a lyceum or college and 46 primary schools. Pop. 280,000.

PARAHIBA, a tn. Brazil, cap. above prov Pernambuco, about 16 m from the sea, and 65 m N Pernambuco. Its leading streets are paved, houses of stone, and roofed with tiles, and two copious fountains yield a supply of excellent water. It has an old Jesuit college, partly converted as the residence of the governor and commandant, and partly by the House of Assembly and the courts of law. Custom-house, where cotton is inspected before embarkation; townhouse; escolástica seven churches, hospital barracks, and a number of religious houses belonging to the Carmelites, Franciscans, and Benedictines; a lyceum or college, in which Latin and French, mathematics, geography, history, rhetoric, and philosophy are taught, and two primary schools. The harbour at the town is easily accessible, and much frequented by coasting vessels, which generally load with cotton, sugar, Brazilian wood, gums, and balsams. Vessels of 150 to 200 tons cannot get farther up than Fort Cabedello about 5 m below. Pop. in and out, 15,000.—The river, rises in prov Pernambuco, in Serra-Jubiana, near the sources of the Capibaribe flows first N.E. then almost due E through prov Parahiba and falls into the sea by two unequal mouths which form the island of Camba, or São Bento. Its mouth has from 9 ft. to 14 ft. water and is defended by two forts—Forto Cabedello on the S., and Forte Velho on the N.

PARAHIBA DO RUI, a tn. and river Brazil. The tn. prov an 170 m N.W Rio-de-Janeiro, at the mouth of the river of its name, here crossed by a stone bridge, with two churches, and a considerable trade, chiefly transit in coffee, cotton cloth, salt pork, cheese, and other produce. Pop. dist. 3000.—The river rises in E. of prov São Paulo, about 50 m. N.E. Pernambuco flows W. and then E.N.E. across prov Rio-de-Janeiro, to the frontiers of Minas-Geraes, where, being joined by the Parahibana it flows E., separating Minas-Geraes from Rio-de-Janeiro, crosses the Foz de, and continuing its course between provs Rio-de-Janeiro and Espírito-Santo, finally turns E.S.E. and falls into the Atlantic at the town of its own name, after a course of above 500 m. Its channel is much obstructed by cataraets, and large sandbanks almost close up its mouth.

PARAHIBUNA, a tn. Brazil prov and 80 m N.E. São Paulo with a church, and a trade in tobacco, coffee, millet, legumes, and salt pork. Pop. dist. 2000.

PARAHITINGA, sometimes erroneously called São-Luis-de-PARAHIBA, a tn. Brazil, prov São Paulo, 1 bank Parahiba, a little above the confluence of the Parahibana, 70 m W Rio-de-Janeiro with a church, and a considerable trade in wine, sent to São Paulo and Rio-de-Janeiro. Pop. dist. 4000.

PARAMARAQUATÁ a pass. See ANDARA.

PARAMARIBO, the cap. of Dutch Guiana or Surinam on the river Surinam, about 19 m from its mouth, lat. 5° 45' N. lon. 56° 55' W. the centre of the Dutch West Indian trade. It is intersected by three canals, and the streets generally lie at right angles to each other. It has a government-house and other official buildings, Calvinistic, Lutheran, and R. Catholic churches, a Moravian chapel and two synagogues, a workhouse, orphan-hall, a military hospital and large burrank. It carries on an active trade, exporting sugar, coffee, cotton, cacao, and indigo and importing grain, salt fish and beef, tobacco, horses, candles, and European manufactures. On September 8 and 4, 1822, above 100 houses and warehouses were destroyed by fire. Pop. (1844) 15,000, of whom 9000 slaves.—(Van der A.)

PARAMATTA, a tn. New S. Wales, co. Cumberland on river of same name, here crossed by a bridge in a beautiful and well-cultivated district, 16 m W.W. Sydney. It occupies a large space, consisting of houses built of brick or white freestone, generally detached from each other, and partly surrounded by gardens, and arranged in regular streets, of which the principal one is about 1 m. long. The public buildings, substantial and well constructed, include a government-house, pleasantly situated on a height among gardens, with an observatory attached, an orphan institution, and a convict lunatic asylum. Woollen cloth, and a soft woollen fabric, which takes its name from the town, are manufactured to some extent and in the vicinity there are large salt works, and copper-smelting furnaces. Pop. 446.

PARAMITHIA, a tn. European Turkey, Albania, 33 m. S.W. Janina, beautifully situated on the side of a rock, on the summit of which is a castle. The streets in the most densely inhabited part are narrow and dirty, but in some parts the dwellings are pretentiously grouped and the appearance of the place is rendered attractive by streams, stone fountains, Greek churches, and mosques, interspersed with cypresses and all kinds of foliage. Pop. 5000.—(Lear's Journal in Albania and Thracia.)

PARAMO-DAS-RUI, a vil. Spain, prov and about 60 m from Leon with a church, courthouse, primary school, manufactures of linen, and several flour-mills. Pop. 1296.

PARAMISHIE, Kurile Islands. See POMORANIE.

PARANA, a large river S. America. See PLATA (L.)

PARANAGUA, a tn. Brazil, prov and 180 m. S.S.W. São Paulo, S. shore bay of same name. It has a criminal court, four churches, a townhouse with prison attached, an old Jesuit college, now used as the custom-house, a Latin and two primary schools, a theatre, and hospital, an excellent harbour admitting vessels of 800 to 400 tons, and an important trade in timber, rice, flour, wheat or Paraguay tea, legumes, mules and huns. Pop. dist. 7000.—The bay is of an irregular shape about 12 m. in diameter, and is divided into two channels by a low island called Mel, with several little hills upon it, which, to vessels at a distance appear like separate islands. It receives several small streams, and is well covered with timber from which a good many vessels are built upon the spot.

PARANAHIBA, a tn. Brazil prov and 30 m N.W. São Paulo, r. bank Tiete with a church, an almshouse, and a trade in cattle, sugar, rum, and cotton. Pop. dist. 7000.

PARANAN, a river Brazil, rises in prov Goyas, and flows N.W. receives the Corrente Gallieno, Almas, Arraías and other streams and joins the Palma in lat. 12° 26' S. The united stream, total course 260 m. takes the name of Paranaíba.

PARANAPANEMA, a river Brazil, rises in prov São Paulo, flows N.W. receives the Itapetinga on the right, and the Apitah and Tabagi on the left, and joins r. bank Parana, after a course of about 400 m. Owing to the numerous cataraets in its channel, it is nowhere navigable.

PARANG, a mountain pass Patl, in the W. Himalayas, which is the summit, is 15,000 ft. above sea-level, lat. 32° 30' N. lon. 78° E. In ascending it, high walls of cliffs, displaying a natural section of a multitude of strata, rise on either side at least 1500 ft.

PARANPERA, a river Brazil, rises in prov Minas-Geraes, flows first S.W., then N.W., and, receiving several small streams, joins r. bank São-Francisco, about 40 m. below the junction of the Para. total course, about 250 m. Its banks are fertile, and some gold is found in its sands but it is nowhere navigable.

PARARATI, a river Bolivia, which issues from the N.E. extremity of Lake Grande flows E.N.E. and, after a course of about 60 m., falls into the S. shore of Lake Uru.

PARATI, a tn. Brazil, prov and 100 m W.S.W. Rio-de-Janeiro, W. shore, Bay of Angra dos Reis. It is well and regularly built, has three churches, a Latin and several primary schools, a townhouse, an hospital, and an important trade in sugar coffee, rice, millet, and especially rum, supplied by 150 stills within the district. Pop. dist., 10,000.

PARATZ, a vil. Hungary, on Tamas, on the river of that name, with a R. Catholic church. Pop. 2692.

PARAY, in Maine [anc. Parochia-Mensis], a tn. France, dep. Seine-et-Loire S. m. W. by N. Charolais, 1 bank Bourbince. It is well built, has a handsome Gothic church, erected in 1004, and a communal college. Pop. 3803.

PARCHIM, a walled tn. Mecklenburg-Schwerin, 1 bank Elbe, near Lake Waken, 21 m. S.E. Schwerin. It has a court of appeal for the whole duchy of Mecklenburg, two churches, townhouse, synagogue, gymnasium, and several elementary schools, a posthouse, hospital, and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, a chisery factory, worsted mill, tanneries, distilleries, and tile-works. Pop. 6489.

PARCHWITZ, a tn. Prussia, prov. Sillesia, gov. and 10 m. N.E. Liegnitz, r. bank Kainbach, and on the Breslau and Langfuhr railway. It is walled, has four gates, three churches, a castle, an hospital, a townhouse, two mills, dye-works, and tanneries. Pop. 1206.

PARDÓ a river Brazil, formed by the junction of the Sangungu and the Vermelho in thos. of prov. Mato-Grosso. The first part of its course is almost a continuous series of cascades, of which no fewer than 28 have been counted within a distance of 120 m. After it has passed these though its current still continues rapid, it becomes a large and majestic river and, after a course of about 280 m. generally S.E. joint r. bank Paraná, in lat. 21° 26' S. Owing to the rapidity of the current, the descent is made by canoes in six days at farthest, whereas the ascent requires at least 60 days.

PARDUBITZ, a walled tn. Bohemia, circle Chrudim, on the Chruditz, here crossed by a bridge, at its junction with the Elbe, 13 m. S. by W. Kowitzgrün. It has a coat, four churches, a high school, three hospitals and manufactures of paper and articles in iron and copper. Pop. 2646.

PARAGUAY, a vil. Groelien Archipelago. See PAROS.

PARAGUAY, a cordillera Brazil in N.W. of prov. Mato-Grosso lat. 16° to 19° S. Its general direction is N.W. to S.E. nearly parallel to the course of the Guaporé which it segments by numerous small torrents but it sends out numerous branches, which form a considerable portion of the province. Within it is the São Lucas (Seven Lakes) in which the Paraguay takes its rise. The principal chain gradually lowers as it approaches the banks of the Madureira, and merges into plains which take the same name, and extend over a space of nearly 800 m.

PARÉDES, several small places, Portugal particularly Parédes-de-Berra, a tn. and par. prov. Beira Alta, about 20 m. S.E. Lamego, on a height. Pop. 800.

PARÉDES-DE-MAYO, a tn. Spain, prov. and 16 m. N.W. Palencia. It has a townhouse, a prison, two endowed schools, four churches, a monastery, an hospital, and three hermitages and some wool-spinning, for the manufacture of the serges of Palencia. Pop. 6014.

PARÉDON, or GREAT PARÉDON KEY, a small isl., W. Indies, in the Bahamas Old Channel 50 m. N. Cuba. It affords good anchorage, with shelter both from sea-breezes and land winds.

PARÉNZO, a tn. and seaport, Austria, Illyria, on the Adriatic, 80 m. S. by W. Trieste. It is the seat of a bishop, has an ancient cathedral, a harbour sheltered from all winds except the N. and deep enough to admit large merchant vessels, trade chiefly coasting and for the most part, carried on in small vessels from 10 to 80 tons. Pop. 2190.

PARÉTO a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. and B. Acqui r. bank Erro with three churches, a magnificent palace, the remains of three old castles, and a trade in wine and wool. Pop. 3860.

PARÉZOW, in Russia, Poland 47 m. S.E. Stedie, near two large lakes. Pop. about 1200.

PARGA, a fortified seaport, European Turkey Albania 47 m. S.W. Janina lat. 39° 16' 24" N. lon. 20° 28' 30" E. [n.], on a rocky peninsula which separates two small bays and is so steep, that the houses almost appear to be constructed one above another. A strong, though small acropolis, defends the town, and the harbour is protected by a small fortified island.

PARHAM, two pars. England—1, Suffolk 2212 ac. P. 582.—2, Sussex, 1264 ac. P. 55.

PARIA (Gulf of) a magnificent inlet of the Atlantic, S. America, between an. Trinidad and mainland of Venezuela lat. 10° 30' N. lon. 62° W. 35 m. long, by about 25 m. broad. It communicates with the ocean by two channels, the N. called the Dragon's Mouth, 13 m. wide, and divided by three islands into four passages, and the S. called the Serpent's Mouth, about 10 m. wide. From both channels a current perpetually flows out. The Gulf possesses good anchorage, receives several rivers, including some arms of the Orinoco and abounds in fish. It was discovered by Columbus in his fourth voyage, in 1508.

PARIMA (SIERRA) an irregular cluster of mountains, Venezuela lat. 4 to 6° 30' N. lon. 64 to 67° W. con. named S.E. with the Sierra Pacaraima and giving rise to the Orinoco and other large rivers.

PARINACOCCHAS, a lake, Peru dep. Ayacucho, prov. same name, 138 m. N.W. Arequipa, 20 m. long N.W. to S.E.

PARIS [anc. Latetia Parisiorum], the capital of France, and after London the largest and most populous city in Europe lat. (observatory) 48° 50' 13" N. and lon. 2° 20' 30" E. (a) 212 m. S.E. London on both sides, and on two islands of the Seine, 111 m. from its mouth. It has recently and the suburbs of about 20 millions of inhabitants, surrounded with fortifications, consisting of a wall 83 ft. in height, bastioned and terraced, lined with a fosse about 40 ft. deep, and embracing both banks of the Seine with a continuous enclosure, and of outworks composed of 14 detached forts. These fortifications take in much of the suburbs, and the even of the surrounding country, but the proper limits of the town are traced by an interior wall, erected at a much earlier date, for fiscal purposes. In this wall are 50 gates or barriers which form the proper entrances of Paris and at which the octroi or duties on goods brought into it, are levied. Many of these barriers are magnificent structures. Among others may be specified the Barrière de Neuilly consisting of two pavilions, and having in front the splendid triumphal arch of l'Ecole; the Barrière du Vaucluse, de St. Martin, de Fontainebleau de Neuilly de Charente, and de Passy. Outside the barriers and their connecting wall is a large zone, finely planted, which nearly makes the circuit of the town and forms an excellent, though not very much frequented promenade. It receives the name of the Bois de Boulogne to distinguish them from the Inner Bois de Boulogne, which form a similar internal zone, consisting in their finest parts, of a magnificent central thoroughfare, bounded on either side with a double row of trees, under which a broad and elevated pathway has been formed and lined by elegant shops and mansions, the whole forming a scene of animated gaiety and splendour which no other capital in Europe can equal.

The Seine traverses the city in a N. W. direction and has a medium breadth of about 450 ft., nearly one-third less than that of the Thames at London. It is shallow and navigable only by barges and small steamers. Its quays are built of solid masonry and form large terraces with a roadway in the centre, and a footpath on either side generally planted. They extend about 11 m. and in addition to the splendid walks which they afford serve the important purpose of protecting the lower parts of the city from inundations, from which, previously to these enclosures, it often suffered. The number of bridges is 27, all of stone, with the exception of seven suspension bridges, three of a combination of stone and iron and one of wood. The most deserving of notice are the Pont d'Austerlitz, or Pont du Jardin des Plantes 400 ft. long by 87 ft. broad with stone piers, and five arches of cast iron from the Pont Neuf, an ancient bridge, the longest of all centrally situated and forming one of the principal thoroughfares the Pont des Arts a light and elegant iron bridge of nine arches resting on stone piers; the Pont de la Concorde or Pont de Louis XVI., adorned with 12 colossal statues of white marble and the Pont de Jena a remarkably handsome structure, consisting of five elliptical arches, and decorated with a cornice imitated from the temple of Mars at Rome and garlands of oak and laurel.

The houses are almost all built of white calcareous stone. Their general height is from five to six stories, arranged as distinct tenements, and reached by a common stair, as still used in the cities and large towns of Scotland. Very frequently however the stair is entered immediately from the street, but is preceded by a porte cochée or carriage entrance leading into a court, round the sides of which the houses rise in lofty piles; but of course the more spacious mansions are separate tenements.

Streets and Squares.—The streets in several of the newer parts of the town are straight, wide, airy, and excellently paved, both in the centres for carriages, and on the sides for foot passengers; but, as a general rule, the streets are irregular in the extreme, cutting each other, not in parallel lines, but at all kinds of angles, and many of them, even in leading thoroughfares, so narrow that carriages have difficulty in passing and persons on foot often run considerable risk of bodily injury. The best streets after the Grand Boulevards wards, which have been already mentioned are the Rue de Rivoli on the N bank of the Seine, the Rue de la Paix, continued across the Place Vendôme, and thereafter by the Rue de Castiglione, the Rue Royale, the Rue du Champ d'Orléans, and the Rue des Pyramides. The squares are neither large nor numerous. By far the finest, both from its position and its buildings and monuments, is the Place de Concorde. It is situated between the gardens of the Tuilleries on the E. and the still larger, if not finer gardens of the Champs Elysées on the W, opens S. on the Pont Louis XVI., which leads directly to the Chamber of Deputies, and N. on the Rue Royale, terminated by the beautiful colonnade of the Madeleine, and is adorned with various monuments, of which the most conspicuous is an obelisk transported from Luxor in Egypt. The only other square deserving of notice are the Place Vendôme, an irregular octagon lined by lofty edifices of uniform appearance, the centre occupied by a lofty column modelled on that of Trajan at Rome, and covered with bas-reliefs cast from 1200 pieces of cannon taken in war, the Place de la Bastille, occupying the site of the notorious prison of that name the Place du Châtelet, with a fountain in its centre, consisting of a circular basin 20 ft. in diameter with columns 55 ft. high, divided by bands of bronze gilt, inscribed with Napoleon's principal victories, and the Place du Carroussel, between the Tuilleries and the Louvre, and containing a triumphal arch 45 ft. high by 60 ft. long and 30 ft. broad, designed after the arch of Septimius Severus at Rome consisting of a central, and two smaller lateral arches, the entablature supported by eight columns of red marble over each of which is a statue, while a low attic above the entablature is crowned with a triumphal car, occupied by a female figure, and drawn by four bronze horses, the whole forming one of the finest monuments of which France can boast.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.—The public edifices and other objects of interest are so very numerous, that an enumeration of the most remarkable is almost all that can be here attempted.

Eglise.—Of these the most celebrated is the Cathedral of Notre Dame, situated on one of the islands of the Seine, called the Île de la Cité. It is a vast cruciform structure, with a lofty W front, flanked by two massive square towers. Three simple piers, composed of a series of retreating arches, covered with figures, lead into the interior, which consists of a nave with double aisles and transepts, and terminates in an octagon. The whole length of the church is 390 ft. width of transept 144 ft., height of vaulting 102 ft., height of towers 204 ft., width of W front 136 ft. The whole building, with exception of some comparatively modern alterations, is in an early and pure style of pointed architecture, sufficiently provided, but by no means overloaded with ornaments, remarkable for their high degree of finish and delicacy. The church of La Madeleine is a modern structure of singular magnificence. It stands on an elevated position fronting the N end of the Rue Rivoli. Its style is purely Grecian. A colonnade of 52 isolated Corinthian pillars goes completely round it; and on the walls opposite to the spaces between the pillars, is a row of niches filled with colossal statues of saints. The pediment at the S. end, and to be the largest sculptured pediment in existence, exhibits an immense alto-relievo by Lemercier, covered with figures, many of them of gigantic dimensions. The interior consists of a vast unbroken nave, lined with red marble, and lighted from above by four circular apertures in a richly gilded ceiling supported by majestic Corinthian columns. The edifice is surpassingly gorgeous, but has none of the solemn majesty which should characterize a church. The church of St. Genevieve, once better known by the heathen name of Pantheon, when it was intended to make it the first resting-place of such gods and demigods as France could furnish, stands on the S. side of the Seine, near the Jardin des Plantes, and makes a conspicuous appearance, with its large dome 229 ft. in height. It is nearly in the form of a Greek cross, 336 ft. long by 222 ft. broad, and is entered by a portico of 12 fluted Corinthian columns 60 feet in height, and six in diameter, supporting a triangular pediment of vast dimensions. The other churches most deserving of notice are those of St. Denis du St. Sacrement, St. Etienne du Mont, remarkable for its square tower and circular turret, a little detached from it, and interesting as the burial-place of Pascal, St. Eustache, after Notre Dame the largest church in Paris, St. Germain l'Auxerrois, with nothing so remarkable as its belfry, from which the signal for the massacre of St. Bartholomew was first tolled, St. Louis, St. Germain des Prés, St. Germain, with a chapel regarded as the most beautiful in Paris; St. Laurent, St. Marguerite, St. Medard, St. Merri, St. Nicholas du Chardonnet, Notre Dame de Lorette, a beautiful modern church of small dimensions, St. Paul and St. Louis on an elevated platform, approached by a flight of steps, with a magnificent front fine colonnade, and a lofty dome, St. Pierre du Gros Caillou, St. Roch, the burial place of Corneille and the church of the court during the time of Louis Philippe, St. Severus, with a tower terminating in a singular pyramidal roof, St. Thomas d'Aquin, Du Val de Grace, less remarkable for external than for internal beauty with a dome, heavy without, but so finely painted within as to be considered one of the finest frescoes in France, St. Vincent de Paul, a splendid modern church finely situated on an eminence the church of the Sorbonne, so called from having belonged to the celebrated school of that name, containing the finely sculptured tomb of the Cardinal de Richelieu, and St. Sulpice, a handsome edifice, commenced in the 17th, but not finished till the middle of the 18th century. The Protestants have several churches, of which the best are those of the Oratoire, and Unitarian formerly belonging to the E. Catholics, but both ceded by Government to the French Calvinists. There are also two English Episcopal chapels, one of them a modern Gothic edifice, for the use of the embassy a Greek chapel, which the Russian embassy attend and two synagogues.

Palaces.—The Tuileries so called from the tile-works which originally occupied its site, continued for centuries to be the chief Parisian residence of the sovereigns, till France ceased to possess them. It was commenced by Catherine de Medici in 1564 was enlarged by Henry IV and was brought nearly to its present form by Louis XIV. The extreme length of its façade is 1009 ft., and its breadth 108 ft. Owing to the irregular manner in which it has been built it is difficult to class it under any particular style of architecture, but the effect more from the great length and varied outline, than from any excellence of detail, is very imposing. The principal front looks W. through the garden to the Place de la Concorde, and consists of a central façade, with columns on the first, second, and third stories, respectively of Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite orders, and of two pavilions. The flower-garden, immediately

PARIS, FROM NEAR THE PONT ROYAL, LOOKING UP THE GARDEN.

On the left are the Tuileries and the Louvre; in the centre distance the Dôme des Invalides and the Colonne; in the distance to the right is the tower of the Portico at St. Germain; the bridge I. nearly a mile and a half from Pont Royal, Pont de la Concorde, Pont de la Sèvre, Pont de la Seine, 1. the and 2. which is near the Palais des Beaux-Arts, Pont Neuf, and Pont de la Concorde.

In front, is raised off and intended to be private, but the rest of the garden or park, laid out in alleys and finely-planted groves, with sheets of water and numerous groups of statues, is one of the principal holiday resorts of the citizens. East of the Tuileries, and mainly separated from it by Place and Rue du Carroussel, stands the Louvre, which was originally built to be, and still continues to be called a palace, though it has long ceased to be a state residence, and forms the great national repository of works of art. It forms the four sides of a square, and presents four external fronts. The principal entrance is by the E. front, which taken as a whole, ranks as one of the finest pieces of architecture of any age. A striking feature in it is its grand colonnade, composed of twenty-eight coupled Corinthian columns, with a wide gallery behind. The S. front, facing the Seine, bears a considerable resemblance to the E. and almost vies with it in splendor. The W. and N. fronts are comparatively plain. The interior, with its contents, will be more appropriately noticed along with the museum. Not far from the Tuileries and Louvre stands the Palais Royal, which is entered from the Rue St. Honoré by a Doric arcade and gateway. It forms a court, the N. side of which contains the principal building, while the E. and W. sides consist of two wings, projecting towards the street. Behind which, again, is the 'Galerie d'Orléans,' a wide and lofty arcade, paved with marble and roofed with glass, and lined on either side with a range of elegant shops. Immediately N. is the garden of the Palais-Royal forming a rectangle of 700 ft. long, N. to S. by 300 ft. broad. It is partly laid out as a flower-garden, and partly planted with rows of fine-trees. All around the garden are buildings of uniform architecture, standing on arcades, which form a broad gallery while the first floor is laid out in shops, which are among the most elegant in Paris. The second floor used to be much occupied in a less respectable manner by gambling and similar infamous establishments, but the most of them have been rooted out, and their place supplied by restaurant and coffee-shops. No space of equal dimensions is so much frequented as the Palais Royal and nowhere can a stranger get a readier glimpse of all the phases of Parisian life. Much farther to the W., at the corner of the Rue du Faubourg St. Honoré stands the Elysée Bourbon, which has many interesting sanctuaries connected with it, and the name of which has recently been rendered familiar from the occupation of it by the First Emperor. It does not possess much architectural merit. The Luxembourg, on the S. side of the Seine, was built by Marie de Medici, on the model of the Pitti palace at Florence. It is a fine structure, remarkable alike for its solidity and the beauty of its proportions, and was the place of meeting of the Chamber of Peers, while that body existed.

Government and Municipal Buildings.—The Chamber of Deputies or Corps Legislatif is held in the Palais Bourbon, so called from having been originally erected by a descendant of Bourbon, and afterwards occupied by the house of Orléans a branch of that family. Its principal front, looking N towards the Seine, is adorned by a magnificent portico of twelve Corinthian columns, supporting a pediment with an attigonal base-culvet, and is approached by a flight of twenty steps. Immediately behind is the chamber itself, a semi-circular hall, ornamented with twenty-four Ionic columns of white marble, and fitted up in crimson cloth and gold. The Palais de Justice, where the principal courts of justice are held, is an immense pile of building situated on the W part of the Ile de la Cité. The principal halls are those of the Court of Cassation, formerly the High Chamber of the Parliament, and the Court of Appeals. The Hotel de Ville, situated in the Place de Grève, notorious for the wholesale murders committed in it during the revolution forms an immense quadrangle, with four splendid angles. The ornaments of the principal front are richly sculptured. Over the gallery, which is approached by a flight of steps extending along the whole of the W front. The Salle de la Bourbe, where business is transacted, is a large apartment, of the Ducal order, surrounded by arcades. The deeply-curved ceiling is divided into sixteen compartments, covered with fine monochrome drawings, which have the effect of base-relief. The Tribunal de Commerce, and other courts more immediately connected with trade and commerce are located in this building. The Treasury (Hotel des Finances) is an immense building, in the Rue de Rivoli. The Register Office (Hotel des Archives Royales) occupies the former palace of the Prince de Bourbon, and is more interesting from the value of its records, extending over a period of 1700 years than remarkable for the merits of its architecture. In connection with the records of the kingdom, may be mentioned its printing establishment (Imprimerie Royale) occupying the buildings of the Palais Cardinal, so called from having originally belonged to the Cardinal de Rohan. It is one of the largest and best-regulated establishments of the kind in Europe, and possesses so complete an assortment of types, that it has printed the Lord's Prayer in 150 languages.

Museums, Libraries, &c.—At the head of these stands the magnificent collection of the Louvre, the buildings of which have already been described. It forms one of the chief attractions of the capital, and contains of various galleries, to each of which a slight reference must be made. The Museum of Paintings of the Italian, Flemish and French Schools (Musée des Tableaux des Ecoles Italienne, Flamande, et Française) contains above 1400 pictures and though justly deprived of many of the master-pieces, which had been brought to it from all parts of Europe, by a system of wholesale spoliation is still one of the finest galleries in existence. In addition to it there is another Gallery Française, containing modern French pictures among which that of the forts de France are conspicuous and a large and excellent Spanish gallery. The Salle de Bijoux contains curious and valuable cups, vases, porcelain jewellery, precious stones, and many remarkable articles of vertu, belonging chiefly to the middle ages. Adjoining is the Salle des Supt. Chénobios, containing copies of some of Raphael's finest frescoes in the Vatican. The Greek Museum (Musée Grec) is particularly rich in Etruscan and Grecian vases, and in articles obtained from Herculaneum and Pompeii. The Egyptian Museum is enriched with the fruits of the French researches in Egypt, and as regards to all that relates to domestic life in its interior details, is unsurpassed by any other collection.

The Collection Standish—so called from an Englishman of that name who bequeathed it to Louis-Philippe—contains some good original paintings, and a library of rare books among others, the Bible of Cardinal Ximenes, valued at £1000. From the ante-room of this collection, a small staircase leads to the Naval Museum (Musée de la Marine), which contains beautiful models of vessels of all classes, both finished and in every stage of construction. Models, also of the principal naval ports of France, and a museum of Indian arms and ornaments, from the Pacific and N. America. The Musée des Dessins contains about 1800 drawings, including numerous specimens of the great masters of all schools. The Musée des Antiques, entered from the vestibule at the bottom of the grand staircase, comprises a series of apartments on the ground floor, and forms a remarkable and interesting collection of about 1100 articles, consisting of statues, busts, vases, &c. The Musée de la Sculpture Moderne contains the best specimens of sculpture and statuary which the modern French school has been able to furnish, but is poor in those of foreign artists.

The Musée du Luxembourg, contained in the palace of that name, is appropriated to the finest works of living central porch is a brass equestrian base-relief of Henry IV., and in the wall a series of niches filled with statues of the most distinguished French magistrates. The interior court, approached by a flight of steps, is surrounded by an arcade and portico with Ionic columns. The Grande Salle or Salle de Fêtes, occupying the whole length of the central portion of the building, is very magnificent. The Admiralty (Hotel de la Marine) forming the N.E. side of the Place de la Concorde, is a beautiful structure which, under its original name of Grande Mairie de la Commune, was the place where the crown jewels were kept, and, previous to the revolution contained an immense number of valuable and curious objects. The Mint (Hotel des Monnaies) from the Quai Conti, on the S. side of the Seine, and contains an immense collection of coins and medals, the ground plan includes eight courts, with ranges of buildings in which all the operations connected with coinage are carried on. The Post-office (Hotel des Postes) in the E. of the Palais-Royal, has a handsome front but the whole building, though well arranged, does not possess much architectural merit. The Exchange (La Bourse) in the Rue Vivienne, is a beautiful modern structure, only completed in 1826. It is in the form of a parallelogram, 312 ft. by 126 ft. surrounded by a range of sixty-six columns, supporting an entablature and masked attic, and forming a covered French artists, purchased by Government. The Musée d'Histoire Naturelle, together with the Jardin des Plantes or Botanical Garden, in which it stands, is at once one of the most attractive and instructive places of resort in Paris. The situation, property so called, is rich in the collection of Corvier and other distinguished names, and possesses, besides excellent specimens in all the branches of natural science, a good menagerie. The Musée d'Artillerie occupies five galleries: one containing sets of ancient armour, and the other four arms, instruments, machines, and models of those used by the artillery service. The Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers, occupying the very extensive buildings which formerly belonged to the abbey of St. Martin des Champs, contains a most valuable and interesting collection of machines, models, drawings, &c. relating to almost all branches of industry. The most important library is the Bibliothèque Royale Impériale or Nationale (for it has borne all these names by turns) occupying a vast building, almost devoid of ornament, but containing one of the largest and most valuable collections in existence. The books and pamphlets amounting in number to about 1 000 000, the MSS. many of them of extreme rarity and interest, to 80 000, and the maps and plans to 800 000. In addition to these, there is a collection of engravings, contained in 80 000 vols. or portfolios, with 1 400 000 plates. A gallery of ancient sculpture, in which the most remarkable object is the Egyptian statue of Denderah, and a cabinet of antiquities, consisting chiefly of coins and medals, to the number of 100 000, many of them rare, and some unique. The other more important libraries are those of the Arsenal, 300 000 vols and 8800 MSS. St. Geneviève, 250 000 vols and 8000 MSS. Mazarine, at the Institute, 200 000 vols. and 8700 MSS. De la Ville, 55 000 vols. De l'Instruction Publique, 100 000 vols., De l'Université, 50 000 vols., de Lamoignon de l'Etat, 80 000 vols. De l'Ecole de Médecine, 30 000 vols., De Musée d'Histoire Naturelle, 80 000 vols. and libraries of greater or less extent, attached to almost all the public institutions, and government, judicial, and municipal offices.

HOTEL DE VILLE, PARIS.—From a photograph by Ph. Roux.

Educational Establishments.—The University of Paris said to have been founded by Charlemagne, and long one of the most celebrated in Europe, was suppressed at the revolution, and an entirely new system of public education adopted. At the head of this system is the University of France, which, properly speaking, is only a board of education consisting of a council of nine members, presided over by the Minister of Public Instruction, as grand master and having under it twenty-two inspectors-general of studies. The most extensive school of Paris is the Academy consisting of five faculties—science, with ten ordinary and eight supplementary professorships; letters, with twelve ordinary and seven supplementary theology with six ordinary and five supplementary; law, with seventeen ordinary and eight supplementary; medicine, with twenty-six ordinary. After the Academy come the Collège Royal de France, with twenty-seven professors; the colleges attached to the Musée d'Histoire Naturelle, with fifteen; the colleges of Louis le Grand, Henri IV., Bourbon, St. Louis, and Charlemagne, attended each by about 1000 pupils; the Ecole Polytechnique established in the buildings of the old Collège de Navarre, a celebrated institution, in which the greatest mathematicians which France has produced have been teachers and not a few of them have been deemed the Ecole Centrale des Arts et Manufactures, for the education of engineers; directors of manufactures, builders, &c.; the Ecole Normale, for training professors of a higher grade, and several Ecoles Normales Elementaires, for ordinary male and female teachers; Ecole des Ponts et Chaussées, consisting of about 100 pupils, taken from the Ecole Polytechnique, to be instructed in all the branches of civil engineering; Ecole des Mines, kept in the magnificent Hotel de Vendôme with a full complement of professors in every branch relating to mining operations and a most valuable mineral museum, which fills eleven rooms, and contains the geological collection of the Paris Museum formed by Orvier and Brongniart; Ecole des Chartes, in which paleography, or the art of deciphering and studying ancient MSS. is taught; Ecole des Langues Orientales Vivantes (School of Living Oriental Languages), with seven professors; Ecole de Pharmacie, with ten professors, and the sole power of dispensing apothecaries, who cannot practice till examined here; Ecole Gratuite de Dessin, de Mathématique, et de Sculpture et d'Ornement, a kind of mechanical Institute. Ecole Speciale et Gratuite de Dessin pour les Jeunes Perceuses, in which young women, intended for the arts or similar professions, have the means of studying figures, landscapes, flowers, &c.; Palais des Beaux-Arts, in which gratuitous lectures on all subjects connected with the arts are given, by twenty-one professors; Ecole Veterinaire, a celebrated establishment, not in Paris, but at Alfort, in its vicinity. Conservatoire de Musique et de Declamation, for the instruction of both sexes in music, singing, &c. by a numerous body of the first professors, male and female, and numerous primary schools, superior and infant schools, &c.

Hospitals.—The civil hospitals of Paris are divided into three classes—general hospitals, special hospitals, and hospitals for almshouses. The general hospitals are the Hotel Dieu, the most ancient of all the Parisian hospitals, situated partly on the S. side of the Ile de la Cité, and partly on the S. side of the river here crossed by a covered bridge, and forming a very extensive and admirably-managed infirmary, which, on an average annually receives about 11 000 patients. Hopital de la Pitié with 800 beds, and an average of above 10 000 patients. Hopital de la Charité with 550 beds, and 8000 patients, and the Hopital Necker, Cochin, and Beaujon. The chief special hospitals are those of St. Louis for cutaneous diseases. Hopital du Midi and Hopital de Lourcine, both for syphilitic complaints. Hopital de la Maternité. Hopital des Enfants Malades, and Hopital des Cliniques. The hospices are the Bostre or Hospice de la Vieillesse, for old men and the Salpêtrière or Hospice de la Vieillesse, for old women. Two similar Hospices des Incurables, and the Hospice des Enfants Trouvés [Foundling Hospital], a large establishment, in which the abuses notorious in regard to foundling hospitals, notwithstanding some attempts here made to remedy them, continue almost unabated. In addition to the above classified hospitals, are numerous establishments of a benevolent nature, well deserving of notice. The most celebrated of these is the Hotel des Invalides, or asylum for old soldiers, a magnificent establishment, capable of receiving 5000 pensioners. Its gilded dome makes it one of the most conspicuous buildings in Paris and it is also one of the largest and most magnificent, presenting a solid front in three projecting masses 212 ft. long, and four stories high. Among other benevolent institutions are the Institute Asylum [Maison Royal de Charbonnet] two blind asylums the deaf and dumb institute [Institution Royale des Sourds Mutes], and a great variety of societies, both public and private, for distributing food and clothing, and reclaiming those who have gone astray.

Prisons and Correctional Establishments.—The former are nine in number, and several of them have acquired a dreadful notoriety from the deeds perpetrated in them during the fury of the great revolution. The principal are La Force, containing 1500 separate cells, and distinguished by its classification of prisoners and excellent sanitary regulations; St. Pelagie, recently converted partly into a political prison and partly into a kind of hulks for convicts whose punishment is of short duration; St. Lazare, a general female prison, which has generally an average of about 1000, and receives annually about 10 000 prisoners; Depot des Condamnés for criminals condemned to the guillotine or death and remarkable for being at once light, airy and healthy, and yet one of the strongest places of custody ever erected; and the Maison Centrale d'Education Correctionnelle, with very much the air of a feudal castle. The prisons to which the most mortal interest attaches, are the Palais du Peuple from which Louis XVI. was led forth to the scaffold; the Conciergerie, from which Marie Antoinette was led forth to the same fate; and the Abbaye, the most gloomy of all the Parisian dungeons, and, during the reign of terror, a perfect den of horrors.

Places of Sport and Amusement.—Of the former, several have already been modestly mentioned, and the only one which seems to call for more special notice is the most celebrated of all—the Champs Elysées. It stretches W. from the Place de la Concorde to the Barrière de l'Etoile for about 14 m., gradually widening out from 875 yards to 700 yards. It consists of a central road, lined with trees, and with wide walks and open spaces on each side crowded, particularly on holidays, with all grades of Parisian society, and presenting one of the gayest and liveliest scenes which can well be imagined. The public shows all take place here; and, even on the most ordinary occasions, all kinds of attractions are to be found in the shape of shows, masked balls, panoramas, strolls, &c. The theatres of Paris and its immediate suburbs afford accommodations for 80,000 persons; and the reason for such amusement is in strong and general, that the attendance is usually full. The most important are the Académie Royale de Musique or French Opera, capable of containing about 3000 persons; the Italian Opera, the Opera Comique, the Theatre Francaise, the Odéon, the Theatre de la Gaîté, for vaudevilles and melodramas, Theatre des Folies Dramatiques, Theatre du Vaudeville, Theatre des Variétés, Theatre du Palais Royal, Theatre Porte St. Martin, Theatre de l'Ambigu Comique, Theatre du Pantheon, remarkable as occupying one of the earliest churches of Paris; and the Cirque Olympique. Numerous other places of amusement are always open, many of a more rational, but not a few also of a questionable kind. A place of resort, though certainly not of amusement, furnishing one of the most interesting and impressive sights of the capital, is the celebrated cemetery of Père-la-Chaise.

Societies.—Literary, Scientific, &c.—At the head of these stands the Institute de France, which has acquired much celebrity, that the most distinguished European philosophers owed the honour of being admitted to it as foreign associates. It consists of 224 ordinary members, all of whom receive a salary of about £80 42 francs academicians, without salary 53 associates, and 220 correspondents; and is divided into five sections or academies—the Académie Française, specially devoted to the French language, the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres, for general literature, learned languages and antiquities the Académie des Sciences, subdivided into 11 sections, embracing the different branches of physics, mathematics, natural history, medicine, rural economy &c.; the Académie des Beaux Arts, for painting, sculpture, architecture, engraving, and music, and the Académie des Sciences, Morales et Politiques for history, moral sciences, jurisprudence, political economy and statistics. The Institute overshadows most of the other societies, many of which, however, have distinguished themselves, and are well known under the names of the Antiquarian Philomathie, Natural History Geographical Statistical Philodélie, Asiatic, Anatomical, Medical, and Agricultural Societies, &c.

Manufactures of France.—The Government possesses only two property manufacturing establishments—that known by the name of the Gobelins, celebrated for its tapestry and carpets, made, however not for sale, but the supply of the palace, and for presents and that of tobacco, which the Government holds as a monopoly and carries on in a vast establishment on the R. side of the Seine, producing about a fifth of all the snuff used in the kingdom, and yielding an annual profit estimated at £2,800,000. In the other branches which are free, the most important manufactures are articles of jewellery and precious metals—silver and ivory, trinkets, fine hardware, paper-hangings, saddlery, and other articles in leather—embroid-work, oranges, various articles of dress, silk and woolen tissues, particularly shawls and carpets, lace, embroidery artificial flowers, combs, machines, mathematical and optical instruments, types, books engravings, refined sugar, chemical products, &c. The value of all the industrial products of Paris in 1847, was, after a very careful investigation, estimated at £58,545,194. In 1845, during the turmoil of the last revolution, they fell to £37,100,000 in other words, to less than one-half of what they were before. The value of the exports, composed almost entirely of the above articles of manufactures, was declared at the custom-house of Paris in 1846, to amount in value to £1,980,577, and in 1850, to £2,219,189. The estimated revenue of the city for 1851, is £1,860,735, and the expenditure, £1,940,735.

People.—The inhabitants of Paris have long considered themselves at the head of European civilization: and if such an success can be gained by mere external polish, they perhaps deserve it. In matters of dress and fashion, the lead is conceded to them by a kind of unassailable consent, and though their manners have suffered considerably by the stormy periods through which they have passed, and the numberless barbarities accompanying them, their active politeness has not been lost, and none succeed better, nor only in punctuating the agreeable arts of life, but even in observing the outward decencies of society. Beneath this pleasing surface, however, a strong and polluted current is perpetually running; and there is no part of the world where the more substantial virtues are more rare, and where so much dissimulation exists within such narrow limits. The principles of infidelity, and the abominations of socialism, have found a hearty welcome in large masses of the population, and produce their influence in the lamentable fact, that every child born in illegitimacy, the exact number of the births for 1851 were, legitimate 21,689, illegitimate 10,635. The only virtues in which more northern nations might probably surpass them with advantage is temperance, though the quantity of liquors consumed by each Parisian is somewhat startling. In 1851, there were consumed in Paris:—

	Gallons.	Cider.	Gallons.
Wine	80,788,328		604,692
Spirits	1,194,231	Beer	9,573,844

This will give above 29 gals. wine, 1½ gals. ardent spirits, and 8½ gals. beer or cider, to each individual, man, woman, and child, of the 1,031,550 inhabitants of Paris. These quantities are, of course, exclusive of the plentiful libations imbibed by the working-classes on Sundays, and other holidays, outside the barriers, where drinks of all kinds may be enjoyed at a cheaper rate than within the walls, from not being subject to the heavy duties of the city.

History.—The origin of Paris is involved in obscurity, but the account to which most credit appears to be given, is, that a wandering tribe having settled upon the banks of the Seine, built upon the Ile de la Cité, to which they retired with their flocks and herds when any of the neighbouring tribes made incursions upon them, which they were otherwise unable to resist. To this natural stronghold they gave the name of Lutetia, supposed to be derived from the Celtic lutetia, meaning Dwelling of the Waters, while they themselves, for some reason not well explained, took the name of Parisii. When Julius Cæsar conquered Gaul he accordingly here found a tribe of Parisii, with a capital called Lutetia, connected with the shore by two bridges. They defended themselves bravely, but were overcome, and Cæsar, after rebuilding the town, which had been nearly destroyed, surrounded it with walls and further defended it by erecting two forts at the extremity of the bridges. The Gauls were exchanged for Roman divinity, civilization made rapid progress, however, in the course of the 500 years of the Roman dominion, Lutetia rose to be a place of considerable importance, and became the capital of N. Gaul. In the beginning of the 6th century it suffered much from the northern hordes, and ultimately fell into the hands of the Franks, headed by Clovis, who, having embraced Christianity made it his residence in 508. Under his descendants it became the capital, first of a kingdom of same name, and then of the kingdom of Neustria.

In 987 a new dynasty was established in the person of Hugo Capet, from whose reign downwards, Paris has continued to be the residence of the kings of France. In the latter part of the 12th century Philip Augustus mounted the throne, and built the castle of the Louvre and several churches, paved the streets, and enclosed a large part of the buildings with walls, flanked with towers. The various schools which had existed separately became united under the common name of University which now began to occupy a prominent place among the literary establishments of Europe. Under Charles V. new walls and districts were erected, with the view more especially of guarding against the incursions of the English, who made frequent incursions into the suburbs. The fortifications failed to produce the desired effect; for in 1420, during the reign of Charles VI., the English made themselves masters of the city and were not dislodged from it for sixteen years. In 1487 and 1488, under Charles VII. Paris was ravaged by pestilence and famine, and much was the desolation, that wolves appeared in herds, and prowled about the streets. Under Louis XI. a course of prosperity again commenced. The area of the city extended over 1414 a., and its population amounted to 500,000 souls. In 1470 the first printing-presses were introduced, and the post-office was established. Francis I. demolished the old castle of the Louvre, and commenced a new palace on its site, rebuilt several churches, opened up better communications between the different districts, and made so many improvements that the whole city assumed a new aspect. But the Reformation having commenced, and excited numerous converts in all parts of the kingdom, bigotry and intolerance in alarm began to do their work, and the fires of persecution were lighted up. Paris, in consequence, became the theatre of many bloody deeds, crowned at length, in 1572, during the reign of Charles IX., by the horrible massacre of St. Bartholomew. During these transactions the city could not prosper, and though some new edifices were commenced, among others the palace of the Tuilleries, it was not till the wars of religion ceased at least to be openly carried on, after the accession of Henry IV. that the work of embellishment in good earnest again commenced. The Hotel de Ville was begun, the Pont Neuf finished, great additions made to the Tuilleries, and many new streets and quays built. The works began were completed, and many others undertaken during the reign of Louis XIII and XIV. the latter of whom, notwithstanding his lavish expenditures at Versailles, was able to rival all that his predecessors had done for the embellishment of Paris. Louis XV. had contributed his share of improvement, and Louis XVI. was proceeding in a better spirit, in the same cause, when the Revolution commenced, and with it the work of vast demolition, carried on to such an extent that some of the finest edifices of the city were converted into ruins, and many of the most venerable monuments of art completely destroyed. A stop was put to this barbarism, first by the Directory, and afterwards by Bonaparte, by whom, in particular, many works, distinguished alike by utility and splendor were undertaken and completed. During the restoration of the Bourbons, the work of embellishment did not proceed with much rapidity, but from 1830, when Louis-Philippe was called to the throne, to 1848 when the revolutionary spirit once more gained the ascendancy, and drove him into exile, Paris made wonderful advances, both in magnificence and general prosperity. Since then it has been her lot more than once to see bloody battles waged, and hear the thunder of artillery roaring in her streets. Pop. (1846), 1,084,196 (1851) 1,021,530.—(St. Fargan Dictionnaire de la France, Paris, Galligani's Guide de Paris, Annuaire de la France, Paris, Le Guide de Paris, 1855, etc., de l.)

PARIS, numerous places U. States the most important are—1, A vil. and township, New York, 95 m WNW Albany with three churches, three cotton, and two paper factories, two tanneries, two distilleries, and a number of grist, saw, and other mills. Pop. (1852), 1890—3, A vil. Kentucky, 86 m E Frankfort with two churches. P 300

PAKITA a gulf, Central America, W side Gulf of Panama, about 80 m across, by 20 m deep. The town of Parita, at its S W extremity, is a place of some trade.

PARIVARA ISLANDS, E Pacific Ocean, S E coast, New Guinea, lat. 9° 12' S, lon. 145° 50' E. They are three in number the largest only three-fourths of a mile in length, of a triangular shape, and rising to a height of 234 feet, with irregular cliffs along the sea-margin.

PARKANY a market in Hungary Ritzer Danube, co. Gran, 1 bank Danube opposite the town of Gran with a church, and some trade in fish. Pop. 1374

PARKGATE, a vil. England, co. the 10 m N by W Chester, on bank Dee, and on a branch of the Kirkcaldy and Chester railway commanding a beautiful view of the Welsh coast, with a port, once of importance, but rendered almost inaccessible by a sandbank. It is now chiefly known as a fashionable and much-frequented watering-place.

PARKHAM, par Eng. Devon, 8806 ac. P 951

PARKHEAD, a vil. Scotland, co. Lanark, 2 m E Glasgow, of which it forms a suburb. Inhabitants principally employed in hand-loom weaving. Pop. about 1160.

PARKUR, a dist. Banda about lat. 24° N lon. 71° E, bounded N and N W by the Little Desert, and on all other sides by the Runn of Ombi; greatest length, E to W 35 m, breadth, 20 m. Though of limited extent, it derives importance from being the only cultivated spot within a large tract of country. It is sandy with a range of rocky hills running N and S. near its E. border and during the rainy season is partly under water. It produces scanty crops of bajrae, a kind of millet, and other coarse grain, but has good pastures, which rear a great number of cattle, from the milk of which much ghee is obtained, and partly exported. The only other article of export is the gum of the baobab and other shrubs. The only places of note are Nagpur and Varnavon; the former considered the capital, but the latter the more populous.

PARKUTA a small fortified town, Bulat, on the Indus, 25 m S.E. Iskard; lat. 33° 5' N, lon. 70° 51' E, with a manufacture of cottoned saddles, and some trade.

PARLA, a vil. and com. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 15 m S Madrid; indifferently built with a church, town-house, primary school, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1097

PARLEY (Warr) par Eng. Dorset 8407 ac. P 886

PARLOW a ta, Indian Archipelago, W coast, lat. Calabes on a river which flows into Parlow Bay lat. 1° 10' S. It consists of about 600 houses; is the residence of a rajah and has many workmen in gold and silver who make ear-rings and other trinkets. It carries on a considerable trade with Malacca, whence it imports opium, gunpowder, fire-arms, iron, steel brass-wire, and other articles.

PARMA, several places, U. States particularly a vil. and township, New York, 251 m. W by N Albany; with two churches, several schools, and manufactures. Pop. 3553

PARMA (Ducur or) a duchy, Italy comprehending the three duchies of Parma proper, Piacenza or Plasencia, and Guastalla, and the small principality of Lend. Guastalla forms a minute fraction of the whole, having an area of only 58½ sq m, and is completely isolated from the rest by the duchy of Modena, which incloses it on all sides except the N, where it borders on Austrian Italy. Its isolation and small extent make it unnecessary to consider it further in the present article. The other two duchies, usually comprehended under the common name of Parma, form a contiguous and compact whole, somewhat irregular in shape, though with resemblance to that of a square; lat. 44° 30' to 45° 7' N, lon. 9° 20' to 10° 30' E, bounded S. by Austria Italy, W. by Savoy, Sardinian States, S. by the Papal States and Tuscany, and E. by Modena; greatest length, E. to W, 60 m, central breadth, 43 m; area of Parma proper 1856 sq m, and of Piacenza, 1051 sq m, area of whole duchy including Guastalla, 2708 sq m.

Parma lies wholly between the Apennines and the S. or E. bank of the Po. In the S it is covered by the Apennine chain which here, in the Alpe di Suelcio, attains the height of 8907 ft., Orasio 8180 ft.; Parma, 8860 ft., and Reggato, 5778 ft. Several other summits exceed 5000 ft. Many of the rivers are mere torrents, they all flow N.E. to the Po, which is the only stream available for navigation. The largest of them are the Tidone, Trebbia, Nura, Olivasana, with its tributary Rigo, Arda, Taro, with its tributaries Strozza and Ceno, Parma, with its tributary Baganza, and Enza. The Alpine lakes are numerous, but small, among them may be named Santo, Gemio, Belleno, Verde, and Lago dell'Alpe.

The climate is, on the whole, temperate, the air pure and healthy, with exception of the districts near the Po, where the atmosphere is impregnated by noxious vapours. The prevailing winds are N.W. N.E. E. and W. and the atmospheric changes are often sudden violent hurricanes and whirlwinds arise, and hailstones desolate the plains. In the town of Piacenza, on the banks of the Po, the thermometer gives the following results—mean annual temperature, 58° 30' to 59° Fah; greatest heat, 91 to 98° Fah; greatest cold, 20° to 15° Fah; clear days 133 rainy, 38 snow, 14.

The far greater part of the duchy is arable, almost the whole of its softer districts being composed of the chalk and accompanying strata, which form the upper extremity of the secondary formation. To the N. tertiary marls, travertine, and sandstone, appear stretching in a narrow zone, E. to W across the duchy. The minerals are not of much importance, though they include iron which is worked to some extent; copper, found only in one vein of considerable thickness; salt, of which there are several rich springs at Salto Maggiore. Lithographic stones, millstones, whetstones, beautiful marble, and fine rock-crystals.

The loftier mountain ridges are generally covered with forests, chiefly of hardwood trees, among which the most common are the ash, beech, oak, walnut and chestnut at lower elevations, elms, poplars, alders, and willows abound. The lower lands are almost covered with vineyards and orchards. From the former, the wine made is both abundant and excellent. From the latter, fruit, in great variety and of exquisite quality, are obtained; but the culture of them is said to have lately declined considerably, in consequence of the preference now given to the mulberry, which is well adapted both for the soil and climate of many parts of the stock, and yields valuable manure. But the great source of wealth is agriculture, which occupies the far greater part of the population, particularly in the low country, where the soil is remarkably fertile, and is cultivated with care, yielding abundant crops of all the ordinary cereals, together with maize, beans, tobacco, and hemp. Irrigation is well understood and generally practiced. The great husbandry also rears much abundance and great numbers of cattle are reared, partly for feeding and partly for the dairy. The latter is cultivated, and continues to produce the famous cheeses in which Parma gives its name, though certainly to a much less extent than on the opposite banks of the Po, especially in the province of Lodi. Hogs roam the forests in large herds, and maintain themselves on the mast. Game, chiefly of the smaller sort, including hares, partridges, quails, ducks, and other water-fowl, is very abundant, and the fishery of the Po has been deemed of sufficient importance to be converted into a government monopoly. The other streams remain free, and are said to be well supplied.

Manufactures have not made much progress. They consist chiefly of coarse articles of primary necessity, but also include silk, linen, and cotton goods, paper, gunpowder, hides, tobacco, brass, and earthenware, candles, soap and refined wax. The trade is very limited, and consists chiefly of agricultural produce, cattle, hogs, nut-oil, wine, and linen. In regard to weights and measures, the decimal system of France has been adopted, though in many parts of the duchy old measures prevail, and produce some confusion. The standard coin is the lire, which is considered equal to a franc. Accounts are kept in it, but the coins of other countries pass current.

Before Parma was incorporated into the kingdom of Italy the government was an absolute monarchic hereditary in the male line. All power legislative and executive resided in the sovereign who appointed all public functionaries, and governed by a ministry accountable only to himself. The laws consisted of a code promulgated in 1820 nearly the same as the Code Napoleon, though not without several modifications. Justice was administered by five courts—the Tribunale Supremo di Revencone, which sat in Parma, and had supreme jurisdiction over all the three duchies, the Tribunale di Appello, which sat in Piacenza, and had also universal but not supreme jurisdiction, two Tribunale Civili a Crema, one in Parma, and the other in Piacenza, and a Tribunale Civile Corrossionale, which had its seat in Borgoratto. Besides these courts, there were 45 inferior judges stationed in the different districts of the duchy. The R. Catholic religion is established, and is professed by almost all the inhabitants; other forms of religion are tolerated. Education is under strict regulation, and is wholly in the hands of the magistrature or the priests. For males, there are three classes of schools: 1. The Superiori or Facciliatori, established in Parma and Piacenza, and intended to furnish a superior professional education. 2. The Secondari, established in the chief places of each district, and some of the more populous communes they give instruction in Italian Latin, and belles-lettres. 3. The Primari, established in all the communes, to give gratuitous elementary instruction. For females, also, public instruction is provided, and is chiefly committed to certain orders of nuns. There seems however to be a considerable number of private female schools. For administrative purposes, the whole territory is divided into two governments—Parma and Piacenza, and three communities—Guastalla, Borgo-San-Domenico, and Borgoratto. Both governments and communities are subdivided into communes, of which the number is 104. The revenue amounts to 2,946,867. The army is estimated at 23,671 men.

Parma originally formed part of Gallic Cisalpine, and Liguria. After undergoing various vicissitudes during the decline of the Roman empire, it became part of the kingdom of Lombardy. Charlemagne having conquered that kingdom, made a present of Parma to the Pope, who long possessed it. In the subsequent quarrels between the popes and the emperors both Parma and Piacenza became independent republics. In 1512 Pope Julius II. regained possession, and in 1543, Paul III. erected them into a duchy in favour of his son Luigi Farnese, whose line became extinct in 1781. Don Carlos, son of Philip, of Spain and Elizabeth Farnese, obtained possession in the face of a protest by the Pope, and kept it till 1796, when he became king of the Two Sicilies.

A claim was now put in by Austria, but the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1748, gave possession to Philip, another son of Philip V. and Elizabeth Farnese. The victories of the French in Italy, in the beginning of this century, enabled Napoleon to seize the duchy, and attach it to his kingdom of Italy, under the name of the department of the Taro. After Napoleon's downfall, it fell to the Archduchess Maria Louisa for life, and then passed to the Duke of Lucca. Parm. (1861), 497, 543.

PARMA, a city in Italy, cap. above duchy, on the Parma, which divides it into two unequal parts, and is crossed by three bridges, 73 m. S.W. Milan. It is of a circular or oval shape, surrounded by walls flanked with bastions, defended by a canal, and entered by five gates. It has a gay and animated appearance, everything indicating prosperity and a rapid course of improvement. It is laid out with considerable regularity. The old Roman Via Emilia traverses it centrally throughout its whole length E. to W., forming the principal street, while several others take the same direction, or cross it at right angles. The principal squares are four, and one of them, the Piazza Grande, near the centre of the town and in the line of the Via Emilia, already referred to, is large and handsome. The houses generally have not much architectural merit, but many buildings both private and public, are well deserving of notice. Among the latter are the Duomo or cathedral partly Romanesque and partly Gothic, in the form of a Latin cross, with a fine octagon tower and dome in the centre the interior of which was painted in fresco by Correggio, flanked by a very lofty campanile and adorned with numerous sculptures and paintings by the first masters; the baptistery in the vicinity of the duomo, externally with eight, and internally with 16 sides, faced with Verona marble, and covered in its front with curious bas-reliefs; the church of La Steccata, one of the finest of which Parma can boast but not older than the 16th century crowned by a majestic dome; the monastery and church of San Giovanni, the latter in the form of a Latin cross; near the centre of which rises a dome, covered with some of the finest though unfortunately faded frescoes of Correggio, the church and monastery of the Annunziata, the former a large and handsome structure, and the latter which is one of the most conspicuous edifices in the city, enriched with paintings by Correggio and others; the Benedictine monastery of San Lodovico, remarkable chiefly for an apartment called the Camera di Correggio, on the walls of which that distinguished painter was induced, for the gratification of the abbot, to exhibit Diana and her nymphs in forms and drapery, beautiful certainly but not more beautiful than voluptuous; the old ducal palace, a somewhat gloomy and rambling pile, with a modern facade and adjoining it the Filippa, a large and imposing, though unfinished edifice, intended to form part of a new palace, and leading by a magnificent staircase to the Teatro Farnese, the Museo della Antichità, the ducal library, and the Academy and Gallery of the Fine Arts; the governor's palace, surmounted by a tower; and the townhouse, a fine but unfinished Tuscan structure, the lower part of which is used as a corn-market. The principal educational establishments are the female Superiori in which a complete professional education is given the college of Maria Luigia, and of St. Orsola, the diocesan seminary and the gymnasium. The benevolent institutions are numerous, and include the Ospedale della Misericordia, occupying a handsome Doric edifice, and capable of receiving 500 patients the lunatic asylum, or central hospital of Pazzi, the orphan, mendicant, maternity, and foundling hospitals the ascolto-de-pazzi, and infant asylum. The manufactures are of silk, and mixed silk goods, cotton, woollens, carpets, fringe, lace, rugina, and common earthenware; hats, carriages, furniture, sword cutlery, glass, wax and tallow candles, glass, confectionery, and musical instruments. There are also several silk-mills, tanneries, dye works, saltpetre works, and paper mills. The trade includes some of the above articles of manufacture, but consists chiefly of corn, silk, poultry, wine, and salted provisions. Parma is the residence of the sovereign the son of a bishop, the seat of government, of the supreme court, and all the most important offices of the state. It claims to be of Etruscan origin, though in the first notice of it it is spoken of as a Roman colony. It suffered so much during the Roman vicissitudes, as to become almost deserted, and having been re-peopled by Augustus, took the name of Augusta Julia Colonia. Its history in more modern times being identical with that of the duchy does not require to be repeated. P 40 896.

PARAHIBA, a tn. and seaport Brazil, prov. Piauh. A bank river of same name, about 12 m. from the sea, and 800 m. N.E. Odeira. The streams are wild, but improved. It has a coast of low, two churches, a custom-house, and a considerable trade in cotton, beef brought from the interior and dried hides, and is the only seaport of this prov., but admits only vessels of 150 tons. Pop. dist., 10,000.

PARAHIBA, a river, Brazil, which rises in the W slope of the Serra-de-Tibatunga, in the N.E. of prov. Goyas, flows N.E. forms the boundary between provs. Piauh. and Maranhão, and falls into the Atlantic below Parahiba. lat. 2° 50' S. lon. 41° 30' W. total course, about 800 m., of which about 600 m. are navigable. The main entrance at its mouth is about 1 m. wide and has never less than five to seven fathoms water. Its chief affluents on the right are the Uruguai, Gorgues, Piauh, Sambillo, and Longa, and on the left the Balas.

PARASSUS, or LOAKHTRA, now called ZAGORA, a mountain, N. Greece, Iavdia, about 55 m. N.W. Athens. It forms part of the Hellenic chain which separates the waters of the Ionian Sea from those of the Archipelago and attains the height of 5855 ft. Parassus was in classic times the sacred haunt of the Muses, and possesses, among other celebrated spots, the Castalian spring and the temple of Delphi, the site of which, on the S. side of the mountain, is now occupied by the town of Gestr.

PARNDON, two par. Eng. Essex.—1 (Great) 2211 at Pop. 488.—2 (Little) 584 ac. Pop. 62.

PARNDORF or PANDORF a vil. Hungary, co. Wiesloch, near Bruck, on the Letha, with some trade in corn and sheep. Pop. 1947.

PARNELLAH, a tn. Hindoostan prov. and 100 m. W. Bapatpur, with the fortress of Purnehur.

PARO, a tn. Hindoostan prov. Bhotan, 28 m. N. by W. Chuba, with a castle of considerable strength, manufacture of images and arms, particularly swords, daggers, and the like of arrows.

PARODI, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont div. Genoa prov. Nov. It is well built, has several churches and a trade in excellent wool. Pop. 3567.

PAROLA, a tn. Hindoostan prov. Candahar 85 m. S.W. Boorhanpore. A large and well-built place, strongly fortified.

PAROAMISAN MOL. VTAIN. See APOMAMISAN.

PAROS an tn. Grecian Archipelago, one of the Cyclades 4 m. W. of Naxos lat. 37° N. lon. 25° 10' E. length, N.E. to S.W. 18 m. breadth, 10 m. on the N. where it is indented by two deep bays between which the land projects N. and forms a peninsula. It is generally mountainous, but the soil, though often rocky is fertile, and in some places well cultivated, yielding much corn, wine, fruit, and cotton, great numbers of sheep, goats, and swine are reared. Its marble was extensively worked in ancient times and is the material of which some of the most celebrated pieces of statuary are composed, among others the Marble Venus, and the Lying Gladiator. Paroschis, a wretched place, occupies the site of the ancient Paros. Pop. 8000.

PARAMATTA, a tn. New S. Wales. See PANAMATTA. PARREY, a river England rises in a mountainous district on the fringes of Dorsetshire, near Shalbourne enters Somersetshire, traverses W. N.W., passing Lichester, Langport, and Bridgewater; falls into Bridgewater Bay, total course, 55 m. Its principal affluents are the Carey on the right, and the Tone on the left. It is navigable to Langport about 20 m.

PARRILLA (San-Lorenzo-de-la) a vil. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 20 m. Lugoña; with a townhouse, prison, hospital, primary school, several fountains, a church; agriculture, sheep-rearing and the manufacture of cereals for wool-combing, and ordinary woollen and linen. Pop. 3922.

PARRY, or MAYER, an tn. S. Pacific Ocean lat. 20° 7' S. lon. 157° 11' W. 2 m. in diameter and not more than 40 ft. above sea-level. It is well wooded, and has a considerable number of inhabitants, who have been converted to Christianity and have made great progress in civilization.

PARRY (Clare).—1 British N. America the N.E. extremity of the peninsula on the E. side of Franklin Bay, lat. 70° 6' N. lon. 125° 35' W. (N.).—2, E. coast, Greenland, lat. 73° 32' N. lon. 23° 3' W. (N.).—3 W. Greenland, E. head of Whale Sound near N. extremity of Ruffin's Bay, lat. 77° 0' N. 71° 28' W. (N.).

PARRY'S GROUP a number of small isles and pointed rocks, forming the N. cluster of the Arzobispo, or Bonin Islands, N. Pacific Ocean lat. 27° 45' N. lon. 142° 7' E. Their proximity to Japan and also to the great open-spaced whaling ground, renders them important. They were taken possession of for the British crown and a small settlement from the Sandwich Islands has been formed upon them.

PARSON'S TOWN, a tn. Ireland. See BRAN.

PARSONETOWN par. Ire. Louth 534 ac. Pop. 227.

PARTENHEIM a market tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, Rheinhessen, circle Alsea, with a church, a chapel, a synagogue, a castle, and two oil mills. Pop. 1845.

PARTENKIRCHEN, a market tn. Bavaria, 49 m. S.W. Munich with two churches, a Latin school, a mineral spring and a gypsum quarry. Pop. 1055.

PARTHENAY (see Purthenon, or Parthenon), a tn. France, dep. Deux-Sèvres, 25 m. N.E. Niort r. bank Thouet. It is in general badly built, streets very irregular. It has a church erected in the 9th century, a townhall, courthouse, hospital theatre, ancient and strong prison, normal school and the gate of St. Jacques, a construction of the 13th century, surrounded by battlements and having two elliptical towers 55 ft. in height, manufacture of coarse cloth, serge, druggists, leather, and a trade in grain and cattle. Pop. 2909.

PARTICK a populous bor. Scotland co. Lanark, on the Kelvin near its confluence with the Clyde, 2 m. W.N.W. Glasgow. It has an Established chapel a Free, and two U. Presbyteran churches an academy, and several schools extensive flour-mills and a cotton factory and near it are Newshields, ship-building yards, &c. It forms a suburb of Glasgow, many of whose citizens reside here and for whose accommodation numerous handsome and picturesque situated villas have been erected.

PARTICLES, par. Ire. Limerick 6490 ac. P. 1688.

PARTINICO a tn. Sicily prov. and 11 m. W. S.W. Palermo. Pop. 5000.

PARTNLY, par. Eng. Lincoln, 919 ac. Pop. 439.

PARTON par. Scot. Kirkcaldy, 7 m. by S. m. 908.

PARTIDGE ISLAND, Isle of Fundy, off S. coast, New Brunswick, near the entrance to St. John's harbour with a lighthouse having a fixed light 166 ft. above sea-level lat. 45° 14' N. lon. 66° 30' W. (N.).

PARTSCHEVORDE [Moravian Bartholomäus], a tn. Austria, Moravia, 38 m. E. Olmütz with a church, and three mills. Pop. 2001.

PARU, a river Brazil, prov. Para, which, after a S.E. course of about 300 m., enters the Amazon immediately above Almagu, or Paru.

PARULIA or PAROWICZ, a vil. Hungary co. Neutra. It is a struggling place, and so near Neutra as to be properly its suburb. Pop. 3069.

PARVICH or PARVICHO, a small tn. Adriatic, off Dalmazia, circle Zara, between Yeglia, on the N.W. and Arbe on the S. Pop. 1000.

PARWIGLI par. Eng. Derby 3247 ac. Pop. 493.

PAS-DE CALAIS, a dep. France, bounded, N. by Strait of Dover, W. English Channel, S. by Sea of W. and E. by dep. Nord, N.W. to S.E. 89 m. average breadth, about 54 m. area, 2505 sq. m. The coast is generally flat being only protected from the sea by a series of low sand-hills, of considerable breadth. In the neighbourhood of Boulogne, however, the beach attains a considerable elevation and is composed of a crumbling cliff, which is constantly yielding to the action of the waves. The interior also is for the most part flat, with a general slope towards the N.E., but a chain of hills stretches from Abbeville, and terminating in the cliffs of Boulogne, already mentioned. Its chief streams are the Aa, Lys, Scarpe, Liane, Canche, and Authie most of which are navigable within the department, which has, moreover the advantage of additional water communication by means of the canals of Calais, St. Omer, Arras, and Le Marck. Boulogne and Calais, its best harbours, are both shallow, and by no means easy of access. The soil, though not equally productive throughout, is in general excellent, producing in abundance all the ordinary coral and ligneous crups, large quantities of elongaceous corals and fresh for fishes. Mollusks also, both natural and artificial, are extensive, but in many parts, owing to the flatness of the surface, and the consequent stagnation of the streams, there is a good deal both of marshy ground and mud. The domestic animals are, in general, of inferior breeds. The fishing on the coast, particularly in the neighborhood of Boulogne, for the supply of the Paris market, is very scarce. A good deal of coal is worked, but the quality is so indifferent, as to be scarcely fit for domestic purposes. There is little live. Flax and cotton-stalk are both good and abundant; and there are many fine quantities of sandstone. The principal manufactures are common woollens, linens, hosiery, stone and earthen ware, paper, leather, oil, starch, spirits, and beet-root sugar. The trade is chiefly in corn, elongaceous seeds, oil, wax, and pottery. Pas-de-Calais is divided into 6 arrondissements—Arras, the capital Bethune, Boulogne, Montreuil, St. Omer. St. Pol subdivided into 43 cantons, and 908 communes. Pop. (1853) 692,994.

PARAGEZ, a tn. Spain, Seville, prov. Girona, on the Bay of Biscay 5 m. E. N. E. St. Sebastian, with two parish churches, a Jesuit college, a primary and two private schools, an old castle, a custom-house, a courthouse, and a good harbor at which a considerable trade is carried on. P. 961.

PASARON a tn. Spain, Estramadura, prov. and V. R. Cáceres with a church, an ancient castle, a townhouse place, and primary school. Manufactures of linen wax, and earthenware and several oil and flour mills. Pop. 1479.

PASCAIGUOLA a river and sound, U. States the former in Mississippi, formed by the union of the Chickasaw bay and the Leaf, and falling into the sound after a S. course of 200 m. for 50 m. of which it is navigable for small vessels and for boats 150 m. —The sound is situated off the mouth of the preceding in the Gulf of Mexico, states of Mississippi and Alabama. It is about 55 m. long, average breadth, 8 m. separated from the Gulf of Mexico by a number of low, narrow islands.

PASCO a tn. Peru, dep. Junin 140 m. N. E. Lima lat. 11° S. lon. 75° W. 18,000 ft. to 14,000 ft. above sea level. It is a newly built, but contains a population fluctuating between 12,000 and 16,000, according to the state of the mines in its vicinity. It is surrounded on three sides, N. E. and S. E., by hills of blue limestone, on the W. the hills are of sandstone, and on the S. W. of a blue slate. In particular spots, the silver is found mixed with lead and copper and at variable depths in different localities.

PASCUARO or PATZUQUARO, a tn. Mexico, dep. Morelos, on a bank lake of its name, 50 m. S. W. Valladolid. Near it are copper-mines. Pop. 6900.

PASEWALK, a walled tn. Prussia, gov. and 37 m. W. by N. Stettin, r. bank Ucker. It has a court of law, two churches and two hospitals and a distillery. It is an ancient place, and formed one of the towns of the Hanseatic league. In 1760 the Prussians were defeated here by the Swedes. Pop. 7347.

PASIG a tn. Philippines, isl. Luzon, prov. Tondo, on the Pang, E. bank Manila. It has a handsome church and a seminary. Pop. 16,440.

PASIG a river, Philippines, isl. Luzon, issues by over-branches from Lake Bay flows W. and falls into the bay immediately below the town of Manila, after a course of 16 m. It is of great width and depth at its mouth, and is navigable by vessels of 400 to 500 tons, up to the bridge of Manila and, but for that interruption, might be navigated to a much greater distance. Above the bridge, its channel presents a lively scene, from the number of barges, pinasses, and canoes which are constantly plying upon it, and bringing the productions of the interior to the capital. It is abundantly supplied with fish.

PASIGAN two of the Philippines, isl. E. of Leyte, W. of Zebu, and N. of Bohol near lat. 10° 30' N. lon. 116° 30' E.

PASITANO, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Citra, on the Gulf and 15 m. W. S. W. Salerno with a church, and a small harbor at which a considerable trade is carried on. Flavio Gioia, who is said to have invented the mariner's compass, was born here. Pop. 4000.

PAZMAN, an isl. Austria, off Dalmatia, and S. E. E. Zadar, about 9 m. long S. E. to N. W. with several villages. It is well covered with olive plantations and vineyards.

PASO (EL), a scattered vil. Canaries, isl. Palma, with a prison, a school, and manufactures of household linen; and silversmith weaving. Pop. 1377.

PASO-MEZ-NOBRE, a tn. Mexican Confederation, dep. and 280 m. N. Chihuahua, 1 bank Rio-Grande, at the foot of the mountains, in a wide and fertile plain. It consists of the towns proper which is a place of some strength, and might be made of much importance as a military post, and of suburbs, stretching for a long distance along the stream, and has an extensive trade in masts, wheat, wine, and a spirit distilled from the grapes, and called by the Americans 'Paso whiskey' Paso has acquired additional importance since it became a frontier town between the Mexican and the U. States republics, but it is still far from having attained the splendour which, judging from ruins in its vicinity it must once have possessed. Pop. about 10,000.

PASPATA a river Bolivia rises W. of Potosi flows first E. then S. E. and after a course of nearly 300 m. joins 1 bank Pilcomayo.

PASSAGE (RAYS AND WATER) two small seaport is. Ireland. —1 (Rays), co. and 6 m. S. E. Waterford, r. bank Suir; with a market-house, a Protestant and a R. Catholic chapel and two schools. Pop. 664. —2 (Water), co. and 6 m. S. E. Cork, with which it is connected by railway, with a church, a Methodist and a R. Catholic chapel, four schools and an extensive dock yard. The condition of the people here is, in general miserable. Pop. 2557.

PASSAGE ISLAND W. India. See COLOMBIA.

PASSAGE (LAW), a vil. France, dep. Lot-et-Garonne, 1½ m. from Agen, on the Garonne. Pop. 1938.

PASSAMAQUODDY river N. America, St. Charles (St. R.)

PASSAMAQUODDY BAY an inlet, Atlantic, coast of N. America, partly in Maine, and partly in New Brunswick. It extends about 13 m. inland, and at its entrance, which is divided into two passages by the island of Campobello, it is about 6 m. wide. It is never closed by ice, affords excellent shelter and has throughout a sufficient depth of water for ships of the heaviest berthen. Its waters swarm with fish, comprising mackerel, cod, and herring.

PASSARIAND a tn. kind of Italy, gov. Venice prov. and 16 m. S. W. Udine with a church, an old castle, and an extensive paper and two other mills. Pop. 9000.

PASSAROVITZ, a small in European Turkey Servia, 12 m. E. by S. Semendria, chiefly remarkable for a treaty concluded here between Charles VI and the Porte, in July 1718.

PASSAU [anc. Benederum] a tn. Lower Bavaria in a fertile plain in by high mountains and bustling population, at the confluence of the Ill, Inn, and Danube, 91 m. N. N. E. Munich. It stands on the S. E. frontier of the kingdom, and is a place of great consequence, being strongly fortified both by nature and art. It consists of four parts —Passau proper, built in the form of a triangle on the tongue of land between r. bank Danube, and l. bank Inn, Innstadt, r. bank Inn, Anger a suburb l. bank Danube, adjoining it Oberhaus, a fort strongly situated on a height 417 ft. above the river, and Rastadt, also l. bank Danube, but likewise traversed by the Ill. These parts communicate with each other by bridges, particularly two wooden ones of great length, across the Danube and the Inn, which are here nearly of equal magnitude. It contains few buildings of much interest; the principal are the cathedral, a handsome modern structure in the Italian style, with a bell-shaped cupola, the bishop's palace church of St. Michael the Jesuit college, now converted into a lyceum the townhouse, gymnasium, library, theatre, assembly rooms, industrial school, lunatic asylum, infirmary, and several hospitals. The manufactures consist of iron, copper and earthen ware, porcelain, crucibles, tobacco and snuff boxes. There are also several extensive breweries. The trade embraces a considerable number of articles, but the most important are linen and ironware. Passau is the see of a bishop, and possesses several provincial and city courts and offices. It is famous for the treaty signed in it in 1552, when Charles V., intimidated by the veterans of Maurice of Saxony was compelled to do justice to the Protestants, and secure them a full toleration. Pop. 10,211.

PASSCHENDAELE, vil. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, 28 m. S. E. W. Bruges, inhabitants employed in weaving and stockbreeding. Pop. 8014.

PARSEEK.—1, A vil. Bohemia, circle Bruslan, 4 m. from Hradstadi; with a church, a cotton-factory, a saw, and several other mills, and a trade in timber. Pop. 1893.—2, A vil. Meersia, circle Olmitz, 9 m. from Lititz, with a church, an oil, a saw, and a flour mill. Pop. 1904.

PASSENHAM per Eng. Northampton; 2380 ac. P 989
PASSENBERG, or PASSBERG, a tn. Prussia, prov. and 75 m. S. by E. Kasselberg, between hills Lohaus and Kalben. It has a Protestant church, manufacture of linen, and an active factory. Pop. 1371

PASSERO, or PASARAO (anc. Pachyma Promontorium), a cape, S.E. extremity of Sicily; lat. 36° 41' 30" N. lon. 15° 5' E. (2). It is a low, rocky point, S.W. Passero Island, and forms the E. side of the cove of Porto Paolo. The coast has a dreary and desolate appearance. In 1718, an English boat defeated a Spanish fleet.

PASSO-DO-LINHAZ, a tn. Brazil, prov. on the lake, and 20 m. E. Maranhão, on the São-Jão, with a church, and a primary school. excellent tobacco, rice, and millet are raised, and some timber cut, and fish caught.

PASSOROOLAN, PASAROKWANG, or PASAROKWANG, a prov. E. and, lat. Java bounded, N. by the Strait of Madura, S. the Indian Ocean, E. prov. Banoeki, and W. Kediri and Soerabaya, about 68 m. long, N. to E., and 40 m. broad, cap. Pasarokwan. The E. coast is level, but the S. is rocky and uninhabited. numerous small streams enter the sea on both coasts, but none of them is of commercial importance. There is a good deal of barren and waste land in the province, and also considerable tracts of well-cultivated ground the soil, especially in the hilly parts being in general fertile. Coffee, sugar, rice, cotton, tobacco and indigo are cultivated the last only for native consumption. Cocoa nut, rattan, bamboos, pigmug, various gum-trees, pango, mango, ananas, &c., are among the vegetable products. Deer, tigers, tiger-cats, caymans, apes, &c., and about 70 sorts of birds, are met with and fish are plentiful. It is divided into three governments—Pasarokwan, Bangli, and Malang, and subdivided into 30 districts. Pop. 810,000. The towns on the Strait of Madura, about 30 m. S.E. of Soerabaya, is intersected by a river here crossed by a large elegant bridge. Its streets are broad, planted with tamarind trees, and contain a number of good European houses. It has also a church, a government-house, and a school. Numerous residences of native nobles, a money market-place, and an active trade, all contributing to give the place a lively aspect. Its roads are protected by a fort, and vessels plying for Soerabaya here take in pilots.

PASSY a vil. and com. France dep. Haute Saône, prov. Flandroy 3 m. N.W. St. Germain on a height above a bank Arve. It has two churches, and a trade in corn and fruit, particularly excellent pines. Pop. 2040

PASSY or PASSY-LES-PAINS, a vil. France, W. and almost touching the walls of Paris, so as to be properly only one of its suburbs. It lies along the side of an eminence, or bank Seine, overlooking the Champ-de-Mars, and is well built. There is also a considerable number of hotels and taverns, where many of the Parisians spend their holidays, and drink their wine at a cheaper rate than they can do within the barriers. Pop. 5625

PASTAQA, a river S. America, rising in the Andes of Ecuador near Chimborazo, and after a S.E. course of about 400 m. entering the Amazon in lat. 4° 45' S. lon. 75° 30' W.

PASTERNA, a tn. Naples, prov. Larino, dist. and N. Gaeta; with several churches, and an hospital. Pop. 1625.

PASTO, a tn. Ecuador, dep. Cuzco, 8000 ft. to 9000 ft. above sea-level, 140 m. N.E. Quito with a beautiful church, and some traffic in varnished wood-work. Pop. about 7000.

PASTON, two par. Eng.—1, Norfolk, 1446 ac. Pop. 808.—2, Northampton 2150 ac. Pop. 1058

PASTOS-BONS, a tn. Brazil, prov. and 290 m. S. Maranhão, between the Tapajós and the Yaguaripa. It has a church, and some trade in cattle and cotton.

PASTRANA, a vil. Spain, New Castile, prov. Guadalajara, 37 m. E. Madrid, with a palace, a cathedral, a church, two primary schools, several convents and hermitages, a flour and two oil mills, and manufacture of hemp, paper, and hats. Pop. 2198.

PASTZTO, a market tn. Hungary, Hither Themas, on Hervas, on the Nagyva, 41 m. N.E. Pesth with a church, a synagogue, and a Cistercian abbey. Pop. 4710.

PATA, two places, Hungary.—1 A vil. Thither Danube, co. Buzag, 25 m. W. Flinckirban with a church, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1074.—2, A market tn. Hither Themas, co. Hervas, 89 m. N.E. Pesth, with a church. Pop. 2390.

PATA, a small ad. Socool Archipelago lat. 3° 40' N. lon. 121° E., inhabited, and contains a good stock of cattle, also some of white antelope earth.

PATA, or PATTA, an isl. and tn. E. coast, Africa, the latter in lat. 2° 5' S. lon. 41° E. The island lies between Knyd Bay to the N. and Pata Bay to the S., while it is separated from the continent on the W. by a creek named Mounda. It is about 12 m. long E. to W., and contained formerly three large and busy towns—Siu (now Sivu) Ampam, and Pata. Ampam, or as the natives would call it, Kpika, on the E. coast, was destroyed by the Portuguese in 1507, and seems to have never recovered its importance. Sivu, on the inlet N. of the island rarely visited, and never yet described by Europeans, is still, we believe, a considerable town, and held out against the Sultan of Muscat till 1840. Pata, on the S. side of the island, often sacked, but never retained by the Portuguese, continued long to rank among the chief places on the coast. Towards the end of the last century when the Arabs of Oman were sorely pressed by the Wahabih Pata recovered its independence, and ruled the coast from Sivu E. to the river Osi. But in 1817 it was compelled to submit to the Sultan of Muscat, the conquered chief or Sultan of Pata finding refuge in Kéu, a town on an island about 20 m. up the Osi. Pata is at the present day a small town, widely scattered the stone houses have for the most part gone to ruins, and the inhabitants, from 8000 to 4000, live in huts made of reeds closely interwoven, or of wattles plastered with mud, and roofed with reeds. The industry peculiar to the place, which was once celebrated for its fine cotton cloth, is now building. The drom (don) and chellages, the native coasting vessels, generally about 60 ft. long, and 14 ft. wide, but often larger, are constructed here or in the neighbourhood.

PATAGONIA, the extreme S. portion of the continent of S. America, extending from the Rio Negro, lat. 39° S. to the Strait of Magellan, lat. 53° S. 970 m. with a breadth varying from 420 m. to 200 m. It comprises two regions, differing in surface and climate, the one lying on the W. side of the Rio Negro, and the other on the E. and called respectively Eastern and Western Patagonia. The latter comprehends a number of large islands extending from the W. extremity of the Strait of Magellan to Cape Tres Montes, lat. 41° S. The principal are the Islands Adelaide, Haavoor, and Wellington the last 150 m. long and in some places 80 m. broad. All these islands are rocky and high, rising from the shores with a steep acclivity. The coasts which front the Pacific are bare being almost continually washed by rains, and beaten by violent winds, but those parts which lie opposite the mainland are wooded, and in some places the trees are high, and of vigorous growth. E. Patagonia, though generally low and level is not one universal flat, but a succession of slightly horizontal plains, called pampas, at higher and higher levels, separated by long lines of cliffs or escarpments. The ascent, however, is but slight, being not more than 8000 ft. above sea-level at the foot of the Andes. The Patagonian plains are dreary and sterile, and, though bare and show intersected by streams, the latter fail to fertilize the bleached soil. They are strewn throughout their whole extent with huge boulders. The plains, which extend along the coast for hundreds of miles, are tertiary strata, in one great deposit, above which lies a thick stratum of a white pumaceous substance, extending at least 500 m., a tenth part of which consists of marls. Indusoria. Over the whole lies the simple, spread over the coast for 700 m. in length, with a mean breadth of 300 m., and 50 ft. thick. These myriads of pebbles, chiefly of porphyry, have been torn from the rocks of the Andes, and watered in a period subsequent to the deposition of the tertiary strata. The ports on the R. coast are difficult of access, and afford little security to any but small vessels. The tides here run from 30 to 50 ft., increasing in height S. The principal known ports are Gallegos, lat. 51° 39' S.; Port Santa Cruz, lat. 50° 7' S.; Port San Julian, lat. 49° 12' S.; Port Desire, lat. 47° 6' S.; Nuevo Gulf, lat. 48° S.; and Port St. Antonio, lat. 41° S. The climate is very cold, especially S. of 45° Frost frequently occurs as soon as the sun has passed N. of the equator in summer the heat is excessive. The transition from the extremes of temperature is rapid after hot weather passing winds often rush in hurricanes over the deserts, which even the native sheeps. Rain seldom falls during three-fourths of the year and even during the three winter months very little falls from time to time it rains two or three days in succession. The prevailing winds are from the W. S. of 45° vegetation is nearly extinct, a tree or spot of green herbage appearing here and there only in some hollow places and ravines a few dark-looking shrubby bushes grow, but no trees can be discerned over the wide stony plains a few withered shrubs, and a yellow kind of herbage, is all in the way of vegetation that can be seen in these dreary regions. In the more N. parts a solitary umbel, the only tree that grows there, is observed at vast distances. In those N. parts where some vegetation is found, guanaco, caracaras, armadillos, and musk shrews. There are also pumas, wolves, and dogs and along the coast of the Atlantic, seals of various kinds are met with. Fish abound on the coasts.

The aboriginal natives of E. Patagonia, though by no means so large as they have been described, few of them exceed six feet and some inches, are a tall and extremely stout race. Their bodies are bulky, their heads and features large, but the hands and feet are comparatively small. Their limbs are neither so muscular nor so large-boned as their height and apparent bulk would induce one to suppose. Their colour is a rich reddish-brown. Falling in upon the head except their rough, dark, and coarse black hair, which is tied above the temples with a fillet of plaited or twisted awns. A large mantle, made of skin sewed together loosely gathered about them, hanging from the shoulders to their ankles, adds to the bulkiness of their appearance. In general, the women's stature, physiognomy and dress, so much resemble those of the men, that, except by their hair it is difficult for a stranger to distinguish them. The mouth is large and coarsely formed, with thick lips, but the teeth are often very good. They are generally of good disposition, but like other Indians, are utterly reckless in moments of passion. Their arms are balls, lances, bows and arrows. The balls are two or three round stones, large of hardened earth or metal. They are connected by thongs of hide, and are thrown, after a brief rotary motion, with such precision as to insure the entanglement of their victim. The Patagonians are excellent horsemen, and perform extraordinary feats of dexterity on horseback.

NATIVES OF PATAGONIA.—From History of Buenos Ayres, by B. Lynch.

W. Patagonia, in direct contrast to this E. country, is wholly a mountainous region; the mountains half sunk in ocean, barren to seaward, and impenetrably wooded inland. The climate is so disagreeable as to render the country almost uninhabitable. Clouds, wind, and rain are continual in their annoyance, and the dreached land is never dried up by evaporation before fresh showers fall. No part of the country is cultivated—the inhabitants live on their horses, and by the chase of the wild cattle which are found in the N. districts.—(Voyages, Adventures and People, Far West, Geo. Geo., etc.)

PATAJ, a market in Hungary, rather doubtful, as. Feeth with two churches. Pop. 8778.

PATAK, two places, Hungary.—1 (or Poteh) A vil. Elther Danube, co. Neograd, with a church. P. 1177.—2 (Gurte, Nagy, or Betteh) A market in Elther Thales, co. and 14 m. S W Zemplin on the Bodro, here crossed by a bridge with two churches, a castle, Protestant college, R. Catholic head national school, and Jews school, and a considerable trade in corn, wine, cattle, and fish. Near it is an extensive quarry from which excellent millstones are obtained. Pop. 6088.

PATAKA several places, Hungary particularly.—1 (Mama) A vil., co. Neograd on the Ripei, about 7 m. from Zelene, with a church a mineral spring, a saw and a flour mill, and a trade in timber. Pop. 1804.—2, (Ozka) A vil., co. Gyor on the Rye with a church, a handsome chateau with a park in the English style iron-works, and valuable iron and copper mines. Pop. 967.

PATAN a vil. Cushman 25 m. N W Siering lat. 54° 7' N lon 74° 31' E. with the remains of two ancient buildings containing well-carved and graceful figures of Vishnu and Loken.

PATANAGO a to Burmah 1 bank Irrawaddy, 78 m N by W Prome. Near it are noted asphaltum wells.

PATARA, a ruined city, Asiatic Turkey, 37 m S S.E. Malatya, in the valley of the Euphrates, whose estuary to the N of the town, once a splendid bay, is now a desert of moving sand, through which the river winds its way to the sea. It was long an important place, with a famous temple of Apollo, but now, among its extensive ruins, contains few early Greek remains.

PATANY [Patani] a prov Malay peninsula, E coast, extremely fertile in rice. Salt also is obtained in abundance. Its principal town, of the same name, is at lat 7° N, lon 101° 25' E. N.E. the town at the entrance of the Gulf of Siam, at Cape Patany, lat. 7° 4' N lon. 101° 5' E.

PATAPECO, a river U. States, Maryland, flowing S.E. and falling, by a broad estuary into Chesapeake Bay between Points North and Bodkin. It is navigable 14 m for ships drawing 18 ft. water.

PATAY [anc. Paternum], a vil. and com France, dep Loiret, 14 m. N W Orleans, with manufactures of woollen covers. It is famous for the defeat of the English by Joan of Arc in 1439. Pop. 1178.

PATCHAM, par Eng. Sussex 4999 sq. P. 490.

PATCHING, par Eng. Sussex 1748 sq. P. 271.

PATER, or PATERBOUR DOCK. See PATERBOUR.

PATERNA, several places, Spain, particularly.—1 A tn. Andalusia, prov. and 20 m. N W Almeria, with a church, prison, primary school a mineral spring an oil and several flour mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. P. 1294.—2 A tn. Valencia, prov. and about 39 m. from Alcohuete with a church courthouse, prison, primary school, several mills, and a trade in corn, wheat, and wool. P. 1165.—3, A tn, prov. and 8 m. W N W Valencia, 1 bank Turia, with a church, an old castle of the Marquis of Minalca, a courthouse, prison, primary school manufactures of linen and cotton cloth, numerous flour-mills, and a trade in corn, maize, and fruit. P. 1805.—4, (del Campo) A tn. Andalusia, prov. and 6 m. N E. Huelva, with a church, a suppressed Carmelite monastery, now used as a school, an old palace in ruins, a tavern-house, hospital, and a trade chiefly in corn, but partly also in oil, wine, and honey. P. 1678.—5, (de la Zivera) A vil. Andalusia, prov. and 34 m. E. Cadix, with two schools, two fountain and a church. Pop. (aggregated) 2485.

PATERNO three tns. Kingdom of Italy.—1, A tn. prov. Calabria-Ultra, dist. and 5 m. S Cosenza, with five churches, and a convent. P. 2090.—2 A tn. prov. Prampato-Ultra dist. and W N W San Angelo de Lombardi, with six churches. P. 2400.—3, [anc. Ephyre Major], a tn. Sicily, dist. and 10 m. N. W. Catania. It is a very motley place, and contains, among other antiquities, a tomb, the remains of baths, a grotto which bears the name of the nymph Thalia, an aqueduct, and the ruins of a large bridge over the Sinaia. Near it are copious mineral springs and a salt-works. P 9808

PATERMOSTERS (Great and Little) the former an extensive group of islands and islets, Java Sea. lat. 6° 25' to 7° 42' S; lon. 117° to 118° E. separated over a space of 150 m. in length, N. E. to S. W. and 80 m. in breadth, the latter a similar but less extensive cluster in the Macassar Strait, between Celebes and Borneo lat. 2° 8' S. lon. 117° 38' E. (a) They are covered with trees and have navigable channels between them, but the anchorage is unavailing.

PATLSON, a town, U. States New Jersey on the Passaic, near the celebrated falls, communicating by two bridges with Manchester which may be considered as its suburb, and on a branch of the Erie railroad 17 m. W. W. New York. Among its buildings and establishments are 16 churches, a courthouse and jail, a philosophical society with a valuable library, a mechanics society with a library and philosophical apparatus, an academy, and numerous schools. The great command of water-power early led to the selection of Paterson for the erection of numerous public works, among which are 20 cotton and several woollen factories, dye and print works, machine-shops, gunsmiths, saw paper and rolling mills, &c. The falls are forced by a headless precipice about 50 ft. high over which the river after rushing over its rocky bed is precipitated into a chasm, and afterwards emerges through a fissure. They have lost much of their original grandeur especially in the dry season from the diversion of the water by a dam to supply the numerous factories. 1 op. 11,839

PATERSON or YIMANTAN a river New S. Wales rises in a mountainous district in N. E. of the Durham, about lat. 32° S lon. 151° 30' P. flows S. E. E. and joins the bank Hunter at Horton. Its chief affluent is the Allen, which joins the L. bank, a little above the small town of Paterson.

PATERSON or MANGALATTA a group of isles, N. Pacific, Marshall Archipelago, lat. 8° 55' 48" N lon. 167° 43' P. They have a very fertile appearance, presenting one continuous chain of coconut-tree.

PATHHEAD, two places, Scotland.—1 A town to Fife, forming the E. suburb of Kirkcaldy. It is regularly built and has a handsome Established chapel a Free and a C. Presbyterian church and several schools. Many of the inhabitants are sea-faring people, but the generality of them are landmen, versed in the manufacture of trucks and coaches being carried on here to a great extent. Near it, on a bold projecting rock on the Firth of Forth stands the old castle of Ravenscraig formerly the seat of the St. Clairs, Earls of Orkney 1 op. 3977.—2 A village, Edinburgh, 4½ m. S. E. Dalkeith neighboring collieries

PATIA a river, New Granada rises near Poyajay flows S. W. and N. W. forming part of the boundary towards Ecuador and falls into the Pacific by several mouths, the chief of which are at Point Mariano and Point Guacacoma total course, 200 m.

PATIBRON a village, or hamlet, Hungary on Lake Neusiedler with a considerable trade in wine and wool. Pop. 1840

PATJITAN, a prov., S. coast Java bounded, N. by prov. Madang E. Kediri, W. Boerhaarta, and S. the Indian Ocean about 55 m. long E. to W. by 50 m. broad. Its coast is rocky, and to the interior it is mountainous, and not well suited for agriculture. Of its many streams, none of them important, the chief are Patjitan, Kotjan, Lotok, and Panggel. A trade is carried on with the neighboring provinces in buffaloes tobacco, gambier, iron, oil, cotton, hides, and dried fish. Patjitan at one time formed part of the kingdom of Djogjakarta, but was ceded, in 1812, by the Sultan to the British.

PATJITAN, a village, Java about prov. at the mouth of the river and on the bay of same name. It has a roadstead Vol. II.

protected by a fort and the products of the interior may be shipped here direct to Europe.—The bay is large and roomy and open to the S. On its E. side there is good anchorage and behind its E. point is Pollux Bay which is well sheltered from the S. wind.

PATKA a village Hungary Tithers Danube co. Stuhlweisburg, with two churches. Large cars are taken in a lake near it. Pop. 2020.

PATMOR, or St. GIOVANNI DI PATMO an is. Turkey in Asia, in the Grecian Archipelago, about 23 m. S. S. W. Samos, lat. 37° 17' N lon. 26° 25' E. greatest length N. to S., 12 m.; breadth nearly 6 m. circuit, about 28 m. It is very bleak and mountainous, consisting of an irregular mass of rock, unwooded, bare and barren. Where there is soil deep enough to admit of cultivation it is not unfruitful, and produces some corn, wine, and vegetables, though in quantities far too limited to meet the consumption. The inhabitants have some manufactures of cotton the material of which is chiefly grown on the island, but their chief subsistence is derived from fishing and commerce. For carrying on the latter they have the advantage of several good harbours, among others, that of La. Reale, which, protected by projecting capes is one of the safest ports in the Sporades. The principal town takes the name of Patmos, and is sometimes also called St. John. It stands on the edge of a mountain, and is reached by a steep and rugged ascent. It consists of about 200 houses, built of a white brown stone generally adorned with balconies, and presenting a pleasing appearance. On a height above the town stands a large convent, surmounted by several irregular towers and resembling a fortress. In a grotto belonging to the convent is the supposed abode where the apostle John who had been banished by Domitian to the island A.D. 94, saw the visions which he has recorded in the book of Revelation. Pop. vii. about 4000.

PATNA a city, Hindoostan, presid. Bengal cap. prov. Behar and a dist. or collectorate, and the seat of one of the seven circuit courts of the presidency. It is a bank Ganges, about 800 m. N. W. Calcutta lat. 25° 57' N lon. 85° 16' E. The city proper surrounded by deserted Hindoo fortifications, is little more than 1½ m. in length by about half that extent in breadth, but with its large suburbs, Patna stretches 9 m. along the Ganges and presents externally a striking appearance from the river many large and handsome flat-roofed houses with arched balconies, being interspersed with temples, mosques, Saracenic gateways of red stone, wide ghats or stairs from the water and bastions projecting into the stream the whole backed by a height on the land side. On its E. side is a large suburb in which are many large storehouses, and the palace and extensive gardens of Jaffir-khan, on the W. is the suburb Bankipore where are the E. I. Company's offices, and most of the residences of the European inhabitants. Internally the city has but one broad street, the other thoroughfares are adapted only for passengers on horseback, or on elephants. The dwellings of the middle classes have much of a Chinese character, each stage being surrounded by a verandah. The adjacent restaurants at Dinapore are handsome, and well laid out, in addition to a native bazaar, a covered vegetable market is stationed there. Patna is a stronghold of Mahometanism in India; the Mussulmans are more fanatic there than in Bengal, and they celebrate their festivals with great magnificence, meeting sometimes around the monument of Shah Aram in the centre of the W. suburb to the number it is reported, of 100,000.—(Bengal Chron.) A large trade is carried on in rice, opium, saltpetre, wheat, indigo, sugar and provisions generally amongst the mahomedans are tobacco, betel-nuts, liqueured wines, salt goods, and bird cages, which last display much delicate workmanship. All Haseepoor on the opposite side of the Ganges a large fair is annually held, to which shawls, pearls, gems, gold ornaments, and all other kinds of Indian produce are brought, and where visitors from the city and elsewhere in camps, luxuriously fitted up during its continuance. Pop. of Patna (1837) 284,182.

PATNA.—Four Chief Views in India

—The nursery of which it is the cap. is enclosed by the Ganges, and the diets of Shahabad and Bahar Area, 1878 sq. m. After Patna its chief towns are Dinapore, Patna, Baknotpur and Phoolwar. Pop. 1,200,000.—(Topographical Survey of India, Hamilton. Requisier Handbook of India, Roberts, Bengal and Agra Districts.)

PATNEY par Eng Wales 830 ac. Pop. 184
PATNIA, a to khamsa and 80 m. E.S.E. Khiva, near 1 bank Amoo-Daria. It consists of about 100 houses, and is inhabited by Uzbeks and Barts, who live chiefly by agriculture, and the sale of salt, obtained about 20 m. distant.

PATNA, a to Brazil prov and 340 m. W. Parahiba, on the small river Espinassu with a church and school and a trade in cotton. Pop. dist. 2000.

PATNA (Lutina) a to khamsa, Brazil, in S.E. of prov São-Pedro-do-Rio-Grande about 180 m. N.F. to N.W., near the coast, and in a direction almost parallel to it, with a width varying from 12 to 80 m. It receives the waters of Lakes Vímila and Mirim, the latter by a channel called the Rio-do-São-Gonçalo. On the S.E. it discharges itself into the sea by another channel which is about 4 m. broad, and is known by the name of Rio-Grande, though its length does not exceed 8 m.

PATNA, or BALIABARA (see Patna) a to export to Greece, in N.W. of Morea. E. side full of sugar cane, 10 m. S.E. W. Lepanto. It consists of several streets and regular streets intersecting each other at right angles, several of them lined with arcades. Many of the houses are large, but the majority are only of one story, being built thus low as the best protection against earthquakes, which are here very frequent. The public buildings include several churches, two hospitals, and a celebrated castle, of great strength, which the Turks after they had lost the rest of the country continued to hold during the greater part of the war of independence. The mahomedans consist chiefly of capotes made of a mixture of goats hair and wool, and famous throughout Greece, both for their quality and cheapness and the trade is chiefly in corn, wine, oil, fruit, particularly raisins, silk cotton wood and hides. Pop. about 7000.—The Gulf lies between the N.W. part of the Morea and Lephina, formed on the W. by the capes of Sciropha and Pappa, and communicating on the E. with the Gulf by the Strait of Lepanto greatest length, E. to W., about 80 m., greatest breadth, 14 m. It is exposed to heavy swells, which makes its navigation difficult and somewhat dangerous, particularly in winter.

PATREE, a to Hindocstan, prov Gajerat, 44 m. S.E.E. Halandpur. lat. 23° 7' N. lon. 71° 51' E. It is large and populous, defended by three walls in a state of decay.

PATRIA (see. Literna Palus) a lake, prov and 18 m. N.W. Naples, about 1½ m. in circuit. Near it are the ruins of the ancient Lutetia and the tomb of Scipio Africanus, who spent here the last seven years of his life.

PATRIK, two pars. Eng. 1.—1, Isle of Man P 3925

—2 (Brompton) par York (N. Riding); 5737 ac. P 1159

PATRIK'S (St.), two pars. Ire. —1, Clare and Limerick; 5408 ac. P 4182.—2 Kilkenny; 4187 ac. Pop. 1113

PATRICHOFF a small tn. or vil. England, 1 Jan coast, 5 m. W. Manchester, with an Independent, and two Methodist churches, several schools and a millinery factory. There are here an extensive manufactory of steam-engines a silk-mill, which employs about 1000 hands, a quilt manufactory and a spinning and weaving factory.

PATRINGTON a small market tn. and par. England, on York (E. Riding), 16 m. S.E. Hull. It has a fine church, with a lofty, octagonal spire. Wesleyan Methodist, and a Primitive Methodist chapel and eight schools. The manufactory of flax is carried on in the immediate vicinity to a considerable extent, as are likewise hosiery and pipe-lines. Area of par., 4494 ac. Pop. 1837

PATRICBOURNE par Eng Kent, 1637 ac. P 284
PATROCINIO a to Brazil prov Minas-Geraes, 80 m. N. Araxa with a church and some trade in cattle. P 1500

PATROCINIO, or BYRKA'S ISLAND, N. Pacific Ocean lat. 28° 9' N., lon. 175° 48' E. about 4 m. in extent of volcanic formation with good anchorage on the W. S. W. side; a coral reef stretches 8 for about 2 m. on the S.E. side. It is frequented by sea-eals, sea-elephants and green turtles and fish abound on its coast.

PATROLHA (SANTO ANTONIO DA) a to Brazil prov São-Pedro-do-Rio-Grande 40 m. L.N.E. Porto-Algre, with a church two primary schools, and some trade in sugar, rum, mandioc and millet. Pop. dist. 8103.

PATSKHKAU a walled to Prussia gov and 47 m. W. S. W. Oppeln a bank Rhenus. It has a provincial and town court two churches, a synagogue, and hospital. Much fields and powder mills, fax and other mills. Pop. 3883

PATSBURG a vil Hungary on Rhas, 3 m. from Balnak with a trade in wheat and cattle. Pop. 2116

PATSHULL par Eng Stafford 1850 ac. 1 112

PATTA, an isl and to E. Africa. See PATA

PATTADA a vil and com. isl Sardinia, 21 m. S. E. Sassari. It is tolerably well built, has several churches, and a communal school manufactures of woollen and linen cloth brick and tile works, smelting, and a trade in corn, wine, brandy, cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 3303

PATTESEN a tn. Hannover principality Kalsenberg 8 m. S. Hanover with a church, manufactures of linen, and three blast-furnaces. Pop. 1633

PATTESELY par Eng Norfolk 820 ac. Pop. 15
PATTI a tn Sicily prov and 33 m. W. N.W. Messina it is well built with regular streets, a cathedral a house of refuge, and the remains of a splendid abbey founded by king Roger and manufactures of earthenware. Pop. 5000

PATTIAHAI a city Hindocstan, prov Delhi lat. 30° 16' N. lon. 75° 22' E. surrounded by a wall and having in the centre a square called in which is the residence of the rajah. It contains numerous temples mosques, reservoirs, and many tombs of devout Mahomedans. It is also celebrated for its gardens.

PATTINGHAM par Eng Balop and Stafford, 4042 ac. 1 op. 1033.

PATTISHAI L, par Eng Northamp. 2460 ac. P 775

PATTISWICK par Eng Essex 1837 ac. P 854

PATUN a modern tn. Hindocstan prov Almora, 58 m. S.E. Kotah, lat. 24° 32' N. lon. 78° 16' E. It is well and completely built the streets are wide and regular and intersect each other at right angles. The whole is surrounded by a substantial wall, 8 ft. or 10 ft. thick, and from 12 ft. to 16 ft. high with round bastions.

PATUNAGEE a vil and com. Belgium, prov Halant, 5 m. S.W. Mosa. It is a scattered place, with numerous coal-pits near it, in which the inhabitants are mostly engaged. There are also a steam-engine factory, four breweries, and a corn-mill. Pop. 6866.

PATUXENT a river, U States Maryland, flows chiefly S.E. E. and enters Chesapeake Bay by a broad estuary, total course, 90 m. for 40 m. of which it is navigable for vessels of 250 tons.

PATZAU, or PACHAU to Bohemia, 16 m. S.E. E. Tabor, with a castle, a church, townhouse, hospital school, manufactures of woollens, a dye-work, and three mills. Pop. 2621 PATYUM, or PATYUM, a tn. Central America, S. and 40 m. W. N.W. Guatemala. Pop. 5400.

PAU (Latin, PAVUS), a tn. France, cap. dep. Basses Pyrenees, on a lofty ridge, a bank Gave du Pau, here crossed by a fine bridge, 56 m. S.E. E. Bayonne, lat. 43° 17' 30" N. lon. 0° 23' 30" E. and commanding a magnificent view of the W. Pyrenees. It has several squares, of which the Place Royale, with a finely planted promenade, and a marble statue of Henri IV. and the Place-de-la-Comedie, communicating with a suburb by a bridge which spans a deep ravine, are the most deserving of notice. The most conspicuous and interesting edifice is the castle in which Henri IV was born, overlooking a lofty peak at the N. extremity of the town, and overhanging the Gave. It is a huge, angular, and irregular structure, flanked with towers, of which five still remain, the highest, or donjon, having a height of 100 ft. and another called the Tour-de-la-Memorie being the traditional asylum which Margaret of Valois gave to Calvin and other persecuted reformers. Great part of the castle was restored in good taste, and provided with antique furniture acquired at great expense by the late king Louis-Philippe. It has a court of appeal for depe Basses Pyrénées, Hautes Pyrénées, and Landes, courts of first instance and commerce, a university academy college, agricultural society, and society of sciences, literature, and art. The manufactures consist of tapestry, linen and excellent table linen, carpets, carpets, paper, and leather. The trade is in wine, Bayonne ham, salt provisions, excellent chestnuts, printed cottons, iron &c. Pau has given birth to two sovereigns, Henri IV and Bernadotte. Pop (1852), 14,541.

PAU (GAVE DE), a river France, formed at 1,500 ft. dep. Hautes Pyrénées, by the junction of the Gave de Gavarnie, from Mont Pardis, and the Gave de Barège flows first N N W past Argente, then N W across dep Basses Pyrénées, and past the towns of Pau and Oloron, enters dep Landes, and turning almost due W joins 1 bank Adour after a course of about 85 m. Chief affluent, the Gave de Oloron.

PAUGARIMBO, a riv. prov and river Peru. The town situated upon the river and cap prov is about 60 m E N E. Cuzco. The province consists of an extensive valley enclosed by the Andes is well wooded and is of considerable fertility producing wheat, barley, maize, fruits of various kinds, and cane. The river, called also Xambiri after a N. W. course of nearly 300 m joins 1 bank Aprumac. Its chief affluent is the Yilambumbi.

PAULLEAC a town and port, France, dep. Gironde, 27 m N N W Bordeaux, 1 bank Gironde. It has a pilot station, lighthouse, and good anchorage. Vessels too large to ascend laden to Bordeaux, usually discharge here and on outward-bound ships take in provisions and water. The chief trade is in timber, grain, cattle, building-stone and the well known Alsace wines. Pop 1880

PAUL, two towns, Eng Cornwall 3433 m. Pop 3448 —2, York (E. Riding), 10361 m. Pop 884.

PALL-DE-LOMBARDY (Str) See LOMBARDY.

PALL (Str), numerous small towns and villages France. The following are the more important —1 (de-Fenouillet) A in dep. Pyrénées-Orientales, 23 m W N W Perpignan, 1 bank Agly with a trade in cattle, grain, hides, and wool. Near it are two mineral springs—one cold the other with a temperature of 78° to 82° Fahr. Pop 1927—3 (de-Jarret) A in dep. Lot, 10 m N E St. Etienne, 1 bank Cevenon with several silk mills a foundry and mill factory and some trade in grain, iron, silk, and coal. Pop 1452—4 (de-Dax) A vil and com France, dep. Landes near Dax with an ancient and beautiful Gothic church, blast furnace, and other iron-works. Pop 2027—5 (de-Chatouin) A in dep. Drôme, 16 m S. Montélimar with numerous Roman remains including what is supposed to have been an amphitheatre, and a gate called Pan-Jovis [Panum Jovis]. It has a spacious and venerable church, built, it is said, by Charlemagne; woolen and silk fabrics are manufactured. Pop 1508.

PAUL (Str), A in U. States, com. Minnesota territory, 1 bank Mississippi, 12 m below the Falls of St. Anthony. It is of recent origin but has made, and is making rapid progress, from 300 to 300 houses were erected within its corporate limits in 1852. It has a number of houses substantially built of brick or stone several large hotels and public buildings, including churches of handsome appearance. Boatsmen calling at St. Paul ply regularly between Galena and the Falls, and a boat for St. Louis leaves daily—3 A vil 1st Bourbon, 19 m S W St. Denis agreeably shaded with aquatic trees—4 An isl Indian Congo lat. 38° 48' 48" S, lon. 77° 53' E about 9 m long, N W to S E, by 5 m broad with good anchorage on the E side. It contains hot springs, and on the E side is a basin formed by an extinct crater now filled with water, and abounding with fish, as do all the coasts of the island. Seals are numerous—4 An isl Low Archipelago lat. 19° 36' S, lon. 14° 5' W (n)—5 An isl. Mexican America, lat. 27° 29' N lon. 109° 14' W (n)—

6. A small isl N America, Gulf of St. Lawrence; with two fixed lights, lat. (N point) 47° 14' N, lon. 50° 5' W (n)—7 A river W Africa, Liberia rises in the Kong mountains flows S W, and falls into the Atlantic N W Monrovia—8, a small prov Brazil See RIO-PATULA.

PAULS (Str WALLING) par Eng Herts 3678 ac. Pop 1175.

PAULERSPUY par Eng Northampton 2901 ac. Pop 1162.

PAULGHATONCHERRY a British fort and station, and a remarkable pass, Hindustan, presid. Madras.—The pass is a funnel-shaped opening in the W giant, between the districts of Malabar and Coimbatore 20 m. in breadth, and through which a level way exists between the Malabar and Coimbatore coasts.—The strait in the pass, 45 m from the W coast, lat. 10° 45' N, lon. 76° 28' E, and 800 ft. above the sea, is at the union of five roads, has good military accommodation and a climate upon the whole very favorable for both Europeans and natives.

PAULI several places, isl Bardonia, particularly—1 (Lathra or Paulatze) A vil prov Basilica with several churches, an old castle, primary school, and a trade in corn, wine, fruit, abies, hides, and cattle. Pop 2938—2 (Perru), A vil div. Oghuz N side of a marsh of same name. It has four churches an elementary school, and a trade in corn, wine, and poultry. Pop 2260.

PAULIPPA (Str) [anc. Rosconia or Rosconium-Yalunum] a town France dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N N W Le Fay built on the site of the ancient capital of the Vellaves. P 1449.

PAULI (Str) [anc. Phigaleia] a vil Greece, Morea, dist. Messenia on a stream of same name, 3 m. S Gradina. It consists of two parts, called the upper and the lower street. The former stands within the walls of an ancient city understood to have been Phigalia. These walls, which form a very curious specimen of the military architecture of the Greeks, are of great extent and were defended by numerous towers partly circular, and placed on frightful precipices. On the highest elevation just within the walls stand the remains of the citadel. The lower street is situated in a small valley between the walls and the river.

PAULI a vil and par England on York on the Hamber 2 m S W Holm with a Norman church a chapel of ease a Wesleyan chapel and the remains of a convent, inhabited chiefly by fishermen, and famous for its shrimps. Area of par 10 864 ac. Pop 884.

PALILLO a town Italy Lombardy prov and 12 m N by W Lodi. The seat of a district court and offices with church and an oratory and a trade in flax and linseed. Pop 1674.

PALLTON, par Eng Somerset 1086 ac. Pop 3104.

PAUMHON (I AM or CHANDEL or) a strait about 1 m wide, separating the island of Manteran from the mainland of India, navigable for small craft.

PAUNTLEY, par Eng Gloucester 1967 ac. P 265.

PAUSA, a town Saxony circle and 24 m S W Zwettau, with manufactures of linen hosiery and leather a bleachfield, dye-works and bathing establishment. Pop 2760.

PAUTKE, a river S America, which rises in the E slope of the Andes, in the N W of Potosi, not far from Guanoa flows N E and joins 1 bank Amazon a little above S Fran cisco de Borja, after a course of about 170 m. Its chief affluent is the Zamora, after receiving which, it becomes very glib, and is called the Santiago.

PAYENHAM, or PAYENHAM par England, Bedford, 1840 ac. Pop 556.

PAVIA [anc. Ticinum] a city, Italy Lombardy, gov and 19 m S S W Milan, cap deleg of same name, beautifully situated 1 bank Ticino which here forms the boundary between Austria Italy and the Sardinian States, is crossed by a magnificent covered bridge of eight arches, and about 2 m below the town falls into the Po. It is surrounded by ancient walls, which have a circuit of about 3 m, including a far larger space than its present inhabitants require and giving it in connection with numerous palaces either ruinous or untenanted, a deserted and melancholy look. It consists of a principal street, called the Strada Nuova, or Corso, which craves it centrally, contains its most important edifices, and constitutes its great thoroughfare and of a great number of minor streets placed at right angles to the Corso, and occasionally opening into squares. Within the last 80 years 47 ecological edifices, including three of the largest and finest churches, have been demolished. Of those which remain, the most important are the Cathedral, a large, heavy unfinished structure, crowned with a lofty dome, remarkable chiefly for the air of gloom thrown around it, giving its interior the appearance of a vast cavern above ground, but containing some good paintings, and a beautiful side chapel, with the tomb of St. Agostino. San Michele, a heavy marble edifice, apparently of Lombard origin, and supposed to belong to the 6th or 7th century. Santa Maria del Carmine an enormous Gothic church of imposing exterior built in 1378, and possessed of good paintings; Incoronata, or Santa Maria de Capapovera, in the cinque-cento style by Bramante and San Francesco, built of the finest brick work, and presenting a beautiful specimen of pure Italian Gothic. The only other edifices particularly deserving of notice are the Castello, erected by Galeazzo Visconti 1480-90, on the site of the old palace of the Lombard kings once celebrated for its grandeur and magnificent collections, but now only a gloomy ruin partly stiled up as a barrack; its theatre, and several towers, once so numerous, that Pavia was surmised the city of the hundred towers. Of the few still existing those of Boleslavo and Malino are the most conspicuous, and are each about 190 ft. high.

Among the educational establishments, the great boast and chief ornament of Pavia has long been its university which is one of the oldest in Italy having been founded by Charlemagne, and in its palmy days about the beginning of the 16th century was attended by about 3000 students. Its students still average 1600. The buildings which it occupies have little to recommend them beyond their size, and the regularity of their construction but the library of about 50,000 vols. is valuable, and the collections include among others, one of the best anatomical museums in existence. Beside the university there are three colleges connected with it, a gymnasium, an ecclesiastical seminary, a school of painting, a school of design and sculpture, an institute of fine arts, two superior and five minor elements, and two infant schools. Beyond the walls, but connected with its educational establishments, are botanical and agricultural gardens. The chief charitable endowments are a large and well-endowed general and two orphan hospitals, a montepieta, a house of industry and reform, a female penitentiary, &c. Pavia has not a single manufacture of any importance and its traffic is almost solely confined to the supply of its own local wants.

Pavia was a place of considerable importance during the reign of Augustus. It afterwards came into the possession of the Lombard kings who made it their capital and erected many edifices, more remarkable for magnitude than taste. Near it in 1525 the Imperialists defeated the French and took their king, Francis I. prisoner. Pavia has given birth to many distinguished men, among whom are, Pope John XIV. and Lanfranco, a celebrated theologian afterwards archbishop of Canterbury. Pop. 28,169.

PAVILLY [anc. Pavicaeus] a town in France, dep. Seine-Inférieure, 13 m. N.W. by N. from Rouen with manufactures of cotton goods. Pop. 5,122.

PAVLOV [anc. Pavlov] a Russia, gov. and 45 m. S.W. Nijni Novgorod, a bank Oka. Many of the houses are well built of brick, and there are several extensive establishments for the manufacture of various articles of hardware. Hence the town is sometimes called the Russian Birmingham.

PAVLOVSK two places, Russia.—1. A small town, gov. and 20 m. S.E. St. Petersburg, of very limited extent, but well built, with straight, well laid-out streets, a small fort, which Peter the Great took from the Swedes, a very pretty church, a marine asylum, and a military and a lying-in hospital. Its great attraction, however, is its imperial palace or chateau, with an extensive garden, laid out in the English style.—2. A town and S.E. of Voronezh, a bank Don. It is well fortified and has four churches. The women work a great many worsted stockings and mittens. The trade is in fish, wine, and melons. Pop. (1851) 3728.

PAVONE a villa and com. Italy, Lombardy prov. Brescia, 4 m. N. from Lecco, a bank Mella with three churches, and several mills. Pop. 1471.

PAVONI a town, Italy, Piedmont, div. Turin prov. and 8 miles with a Roman church and the remains of an old castle, and a trade in corn, vegetables, and fruit. Pop. 2440.

PAWEEA a town, W. Africa, Gambia, on the river from the coast to Dahomey composed chiefly of low square huts, very neat and clean. It has several large markets, well supplied with provisions and different articles of manufacture, including native cloth, and English cheapened handkerchiefs. Pop. about 16,000.

PAWLETT par. Eng. Somerset 8566 ac. P. 586
PAWLUCKETT, in U. States, partly by Massachusetts and partly in Rhode Island, on both sides of the river at the falls (50 ft. high) of same name, and on the railway from Boston to Providence, and from Providence to Worcester. It occupies a pleasing site, has seven churches, numerous and extensive cotton-mills, print-works and machine-shops, considerable manufactures of boots, shoes, carriages, chairs, and cabinet-makers building-yards, and an extensive trade. The first factory for weaving cotton cloth by water-power in the U. States, was erected here in 1790.

PAWTUCKET a village and port of entry U. States, Rhode Island, on both sides the Pawtuxet, here crossed by a bridge, 5 m. S. Providence. It has two churches an academy three cotton and two woollen factories, and several grist-mills. The harbour is safe and convenient.

PAXO one of the Ionian Islands, 10 m. S. the S.E. extremity of Corfu and 7 m. W. of the S.E. coast of Albani, about 6 m. long N.W. to S.E. and nearly 3 m. broad surfaces extremely rugged and soil very poor. The chief products are olives, almonds, and vines. Considerable numbers of oxen and goats are reared on the pastures and sheeps are very abundant on the coast. The best harbour is in the channel between the S. shore of Paxo and the small island of Antipaxo but the most frequented harbour as well as principal town, is Ceyo on the N.E. side. Pop. about 5000.

PAXTON two par. Eng. Hunts.—1. (Great), 1120 ac. P. 410.—2. (Little), 2040 ac. P. 224.

PAYENDWEN a valley Burmah. See HUKONG.

PAYERNE or PAYERNEN a town and par. Switzerland, cant. Valais, a bank Rhone here crossed by Stone bridge bearing a Roman inscription, 10 m. W. Yverdon. It is an ancient place, surrounded by walls and thought, on the whole, poorly built, has two churches one of them a modern structure the other belonging originally to a Benedictine abbey founded in 961 by Bertha, Queen of Burgundy and now only used as a female school. Payerne has few manufactures, but, being centrally situated carries on a considerable transit trade, 1 op. 3723.

PAYNEBURY, par. Eng. Devon 2698 ac. P. 544.
PAYN-GARRE or WAIN-GARRE, a river inundation rises in high table-land N. of prov. Gundwana flows very circuitously first E. then S. and then S.W. and, after a course of above 200 m., joins a bank Wurda. Its chief affluent is the Khaman, which it receives on the right.

PAYTA, a seaport in Peru prov. Truxillo, lat. 5° 5' 30" S., lon. 81° 5' 30" W. (N.) between Sechin Bay and Cape Blanco. It is built on the slopes and at the foot of a hill S.E. side of the bay, and at a distance is scarcely visible, the houses being of the same colour with the surrounding cliff. They are slightly constructed of an open sort of basket-work, which, when the air blows freely against the rocks, which are high and peaked are thatched with leaves some of the walls are plastered with mud, but, generally speaking they are left open. The town is said to contain 5000 inhabitants, and is the seaport of the province of Payta. The port is the best on this coast, and is frequented by vessels of all nations, who call there for cargoes, principally cotton, bark, hides, and drugs.

PAZ (La), a dep. Bolivia, comprising, for the most part, those valleys of the Cordilleras, the streams from which combine to form the Rio-Beni. Its provinces are La Paz, Paces, Sucre, Yungas, Oruro, Cochabamba, and Misiones, which extend from lat. 12° to 17° S. between the Andes and the Rio-Beni. Its population may be estimated at 240,000.—The provinces embrace the abrupt slopes which descend from the elevated plateau down to the palm forests and rich plains of the Yungas.

PAZ (La) DE AYACUCHO a city Bolivia, cap. above deep and prev. built in a deep ravine the Quebrada-de-Chucobas, 620 ft. below the level of the Lake of Titicaca, lat. 13° 16' S. above sea-level, lat. 16° 5' 54" S. lon. 68° 39' 58" W. The ravine of La Paz descends S.E. in a diagonal formation, the stream which flows through it, from and round Illi-most the swamy surroundings of which are seen E. by S. is one of the chief sources of the Amazon. The city is built in an amphitheatre on both sides of the river, but the public edifices are chiefly on the E. bank. Nine fine bridges cross the two quarters; each of which is subdivided into several other sections by deep ravines. Of the fifteen churches in the city the Sagrario or cathedral claims most attention being large, and effectively, though somewhat coarsely ornamented with figures of angels executed in basalt. Opposite to the cathedral is the Plaza Mayor or principal square. There are also a college of sciences, a seminary, a school of mechanical arts, a university, and an academy of jurisprudence. Nine-tenths of the inhabitants are Ayacucho Indians, whose national costume, as well as language, prevail in it. The foundation of Nuestra Señora de la Paz dates from 1548. The town, being situated conveniently between the fertile valleys of the Yungas and the port of Arica, soon rose to importance. In 1805 it was made the seat of a bishopric, and in 1820 changed its name to La Paz de Ayacucho, in memory of the victory which completed the liberation of the republic. Pop. (1847) 45,000.—(Cortés, Progreso de las Américas, 1848-49.)

PAZMAAD two places Hungary.—1 A vil Thicker Danube co and about 14 m N Strahovsburg on an eminence, with a church and a chateau. P 1691.—2 A vil Thicker Danube co. and about 4 m from Raab, in a hilly district with a Protestant church. 1 1088

PAZONY a vil Hungary Thither Thama co Szabolcs about 8 m from Nyir Eghazs with two churches. P 1271
PE (Br.) a tn France dep. Haute-Pyrénées 8 m N N W Argelès, with a large and handsome church, school, and manufactures of cloth, handkerchiefs, rags, combs, and implements of husbandry. Near it, copper and lead are mined. Pop. 1516

PEACE a large river British N America, rises near the W coast, about lat. 51° 20' N lon 127° W; flows generally S.E., then N.E. to near Athabasca Lake, where, turning N, it is named the Slave River and falls into Great Slave Lake, near lat. 61° N lon 113° W total course 800 m

PEACH a small rd N America, near the Canadian shore of Lake Superior, a vil on a fishing station

PEAK or Huan Piao a divt. England forming the N W angle of Dorsetshire and consisting of a wild and romantic tract, full of mountains and moors, and celebrated for its limestone caverns and grottoes, containing many remarkable natural curiosities

PEAKIRK, par Eng Northampton 830 ac P 929
PEARL, an isl. S. Pacific, near the centre of the Gambier group, lat. 23° 58' S lon 134° 05' 21" W about 6 m in length, elevated particularly towards its S. extremity, where Mount Duff rises to the height of 7448 ft. It is well clothed with trees, and evidently of volcanic formation, though surrounded by a coral reef.

PEARL,—1 Anisl N America, off the W coast of Newfoundland, Bay of Islands.—2 Isl. New Granada, bay and about 80 m S.E. Panama. They consist of the isla Del Rey Pedro Gonzalez and San Jose with a number of small islets. The pearl-fishing is successfully pursued

PEARL, a river, U. States, rises near the centre of Minn. sleeps, flows S. by E. forms for some distance the boundary between Minnesota and Louisiana, and divides itself into two arms, one of which falls into Lake Superior, and the other into Lake Pontchartrain; total course, about 240 m. for 180 of which it is navigable for small craft, but it is much obstructed by trunks of trees, sandbars, and shallows.

PEARL RIVER, a river China See CHU KIANG
PEASEMORE, par Eng Berks 2048 ac P 869
PEASENALL, par Eng Suffolk, 1965 ac P 820
PEASMARSH, par Eng Sussex 3718 ac. P 898
PEATLING, two pars Eng Leicester—1, (Magna) 1900 ac. P 801.—2, (Lesser) 870 ac. 1 210

PEBMAWTH, par Eng. Essex 2028 ac P 683
PEBWORTH, par Eng Gloucester, 3460 ac. P 787
PECAGO, a tn Spain, New Castile, prov and about 35 m from Cuenca, 1 bank Júcar with a well-built church, a town-house, primary school, two flour-mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1466

PEGGIOLI, a tn Tuscany prov and 19 m S E Pisa, r bank Etr. It is well built, has a court of justice, a church, the remains of an old castle, and a trade in olives, wine, silk, cattle, and dairy produce. Pop. 2554.

PECETTO two places, Italy Piedmont.—1 A vil. and town, 8 m S.S.E. Turin with a church a monastery a public school and a trade in wine and wool. Pop. 2150.—2 A vil and town, div. Alessandria 8 m. from Valenza with a church, a courthouse the ruins of an old castle, brick-works lunaticas and a trade in wine silk and figs. Pop. 1800

PECHELICE, a prov China. See PACHOLICE.

PECHIN a tn Bohemia See BECHIN

PECHINA a vil Spain Andalusia prov and 4 m. from Almería, 1 bank Almería with a townhouse, prison primary school, and parish church. Near it are the baths of Alamillo. Pop. (agricultural), 1,553

PECKHAM, a hamlet, England, co. Surrey, near a branch of the Surrey Canal 4 m S S E London. It consists of a long line of handsome buildings, and numerous detached mansions and villas, and has a handsome church with a pinnacled tower and octagonal spire two Episcopalian chapels, one of them surmounted by a low tower terminating in a spire, and adorned with stained glass. Baptist and Independent chapels, a Unitarian system, chiefly for poorer inmates, a large silk-factory and a cemetery belonging to the London Cemetery Company, and covering 50 acres. Pop. 19,444

PECKHAM two pars, Eng Kent.—1 (East), 8356 ac P 2254.—2 (West), 1883 ac P 545

PECKLESHILL, a tn. Rhensia Prussia gov and 45 m S.S.E. Minden with a church and a synagogue. P 1634

PECKLETON par Eng Leicester 3020 ac. P 309

PECORARA a vil and town Parma, Italy and 35 m. S W Piacenza, near the Lido river with a trade in cattle, wine, sheep and goats. Pop. 2804

PECO a vil and town, Belgium prov Hainaut, 7 m N Tourney L. bank Scheldt with a church a school a distillery brewery, and several oil and flour mills. Many of the inhabitants employed in coal mining. Pop. 2451

PECS a tn Hungary See PECKRECHT

PECSVAK, a market tn. Hungary Thither Dautica, co. Baranya, 3 m N.E. Pázdren with a church barrack, millinery, and a paper-mill. Pop. 585

PECZI 1 a vil Hungary Thither Danube, co. and about 10 m. N.E. Pesth with a Protestant church, and a castle, with a library, which is rich in Bibles. Pop. 1830

PEDANA a tn Sicily prov and 7 m. N N W Catania, on S slope of Etna. Pop. 2068

PEDDA BALAPOOR a tn. Hindoostan prov Mysore, 23 m N Bangalore, lat. 13° 17' N, lon 77° 37' E with a large and strong mud fort.

PEDDAPOOR a considerable tn. Hindoostan Northern Circars 17 m. N Coringa, lat. 17° 8' N lon 82° 15' E

The native habitations are in the best style of the Decian

PEDER (GEMET and LUTTI) two rivers U. States the former rises in N Carolina near lat. 36° N flows, under the name of Yadkin first E, then S.E. enters S. Carolina, and falls into the Atlantic by the Bay of Winyaw, total course 350 m, of which 200 m are navigable for boats of 60 or 70 tons. LITTLE PEDER rises in N Carolina, and enters the Great Pedee 34 m above its mouth.

PEDERNAL RA, a tn and par Portugal prov Estremadura, in a small bay of the Atlantic, 34 m N W Santarum Pop. 1930

PEDERNOSO (Ed.) a tn Spain New Castile, prov and 61 m S.W. Cuenca. It is poorly built, has a church, court house prison, and primary school, manufactures of saltpetre several flour-mills, and a trade in corn and fruit. Pop. 1224

PEDIR, a tn N coast Sumatra, principally of same name 80 m. S.S.E. Achern principal exports, betel-nut, pepper, gold-dust, various native bees wax, catnip, and Ceylon Pepper to the N.W. is in lat. 5° 19' N, lon. 96° 5' E (c)

PEDIR (S) a vil Spain Catalonia prov and 14 m from Barcelona with a prison primary school, church manufactures of cotton thread and dyes, a flour and screw oil mill, and a trade in wine and fruits. Pop. 1957

PEDMORE par Eng Worcester 1474 ac. P 218

PEDRA BRANCA a tn Brazil, prov and 90 m W N Bahia, in a dell on the Serra of same name. It is built of wood, and has a church, and a primary school.

PEDRAZA, a small tn. Yucatan, prov and 40 m. W. Yucatan. Pop. 3000.

PEDREIRA, a tn. Spain, Andalusia prov and 58 m. E. S. Sevilla with a modern church, townhouse, prison, primary school, manufactures of articles in esparto, several oil-mills, and a trade in oil and corn. Pop. 1247.

PEDREIRO two places, Portugal.—1, (-Grande), a tn and par., prov Beira-Alta, 36 m. N. E. Thomar t. back Zamora, here crossed by a bridge of remarkable height. It contains a Dominican convent, and near it are important iron-works. Pop. 2640.—2, (-Pequeno), A tn and par. 1 bank Zamora, almost opposite to the former. Pop. 1244.

PEDRO, several places, Spain.—1, (-Abad), A tn and Andalusia, prov and 30 m. from Cordova with a church, court-house, prison, two primary schools, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth and several oil and flour mills. P. 1696.—2, (-Barrodo), A vil. Spain, Old Castile, prov and 32 m. S. W. Avila with townhouse, prison, parish church, primary school, several fountains, and two hermitages, flour oil and fulfing mills, dye-works, and manufactures of ordinary clothes, lace, musins and apolinos. P. 2110.—3, (-de Bermejo), A vil., prov and R. R. Leon with a church, a primary school and numerous ironed oil mills. P. 1287.—4, (-Muñoz), A tn. Zeto Castile prov and about 65 m. from Ciudad-Real with a church, court-house, prison, and primary school and several flour-mills. P. 1960.

PEDRO (Sic), numerous small places, Portugal.—1, The most important, (-de-Sil) a tn and par., prov Beira-Alta, 12 m. N. W. Viseu at the confluence of the Sil with the Vouga. Pop. 1700.—2, A prov Brazil. See São-Pedro.

PEDROCHE, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov and 32 m. N. N. E. Cordova with a church, manery suppressed convent, court-house, hospital, Latin and primary schools, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth and a trade in corn and agricultural products. Pop. 1944.

PEDROLA, a vil. Spain, Aragon, prov and 23 m. N. W. Saragossa with a court-house, and prison an endowed school, a church and two hermitages. Pop. (agricultural) 1770.

PEDRONERAS, a vil. Spain New Castile, prov Cuenca 22 m. S. E. Madrid regularly built, with two court-houses, two prisons, a primary school, a church and four hermitages, manufactures of garters, garters, wedding clothes, etc. of silk, cotton, and fine wool, two fulfing and seven flour mills and a trade in manufactured goods, grain, etc. Pop. 5185.

PEDRINHO (L.), a vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov and 28 m. N. E. Sevilla, with a court-house, prison, primary two schools, an hospital, and a church, manufactures of iron, a soap-work, two flour and oil mills, and brandy distilleries, cattle and mule-driving also occupy a number of the people. P. 2094.

PEDROSO a vil. and par. Portugal prov Douro 8 m. from Oporto. Pop. 3570.

PEEBLES, PEEBLESBERG, or TWEEDDALE, an island co. Scotland bounded S. by Dumfries, S. E. Nairn, N. and N. W. Edinburgh and W. Lonsay greatest length, N. to S. about 80 m., greatest breadth, rather less than 22 m., area, 204 160 sq. m. of which 34 732 are cultivated. The greater part of the surface consists of mountain moor, and the first prevailing to such an extent as to render the general elevation greater than that of any other county in the S. of Scotland the highest summits varying from 2400 ft. to above 2900 ft. This portion of the county contains much wild and striking scenery. The prevailing rock is whinstone, or greywacke, much of it of excellent quality but a great part of it of so laminated a structure as to be unfit for building. White and red freestones are common in the N. part of the county and both coal and limestone have been long wrought at various points. The Tweed is the only river in Peeblesshire of any note, but there are numerous rivulets, tributaries of the Tweed. Most of these abound in salmon and trout. The county returns a member to Parliament, principal town, Peebles. Pop. (1851), 10,728.

PEEBLES, a royal burgh and market tn. on a high above county 20 m. S. Edinburgh on a slightly-elevated tongue of land formed by the junction of the Eddystone water with the Tweed. Its houses are generally of whinstone, two stories in height and with bell-towers. It has a county hall and jail, in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1844, a townhall, an Established a Free, and two t. Presbyterian churches, a pest hospital and a R. Catholic chapel, a grammar and several other schools, an institution for instruction in literature and science, with a reading-room and library attached, and a museum. Inhabitants principally dependent on the retail trade, and on agricultural employment, and the various branches connected with it. Pop. 41,748 of tn 1861.

PRESBURY, a vil. U. States New York, 100 m. S. Albany, 1 bank Hudson, with eight churches, an academy, six iron-foundries, and two tanneries. Pop. 2000.

PEEL, a small opposite to Isle of Man W coast; lat. 54 13' 38" N; lon 4 42' W (N), chiefly remarkable for the remains of its ancient castle and cathedral, the former standing on a small rocky island, separated from the town by a narrow channel. It has a church, and Methodist chapel, and an endowed grammar-school. The harbour and pier are now utterly neglected. P. 2342.

PEEL (De) an extensive elevated peat tract, Holland, provs. N. Brabant and Limburg, giving rise to numerous streams flowing in all directions. It extends N. to S. about 80 m., with a width of about 10 m.

PEEL RIVER.—1, A river E. Australia, rises in the mountains which form the S. boundary of Liverpool Plains, near lat. 31° 40' S. lon 161° 20' E., and pursues a circuitous course, in a N. W. direction to its junction with the Darling at Pockstaro. It receives numerous affluents of which the most important appear to be the Connolly, and its tributary Turrahbell which join it on the 1. bank. In the first part of its course, it forces its way through a mountain pass, and then downwards through a valley into an open country. In the lower part of its course, it is better known by the name of 'Nancy'.—2, A river N. America, formed by a number of torrents descending from the W. slope of the Rocky Mountains, about lat. 63° N; and lon 120° W. flows N. W. and near 1 bank Mackenzie, at the commencement of its delta, near lat. 67° N; and lon 136° W.

PEEL ISLAND and S. Pacific, belonging to the Archipelago or Borneo group, lat. 27° 2' S; lon 143° 10' E. It is the largest island of the group, is situated near its centre, and has two bays one of which on the S. E. is clear and deep, and has good though somewhat exposed anchorage. This bay called Port Lloyd abounds with sharks.

PEEN, a river, Germany issues from a lake of same name, in Mecklenburg Schwerm, flows first N. E. past Demmin into Prussian Pomerania, then S. S. E. and after a course of 70 m., falls into the Little Haff near Usedom.

PEER PUNJABI a tn. British N. S. S. S. W. lon 27° 6' N; lon 68° E. 8 m. W. from the Indus.

PELAGAJAR, a vil. Spain Andalusia, prov and 7 m. E. Jaen with a court-house, a prison, primary school, an hermitage church, and numerous oil and flour mills. P. 2516.

PEGAU, a tn. Saxony circle and 14 m. S. by W. Leipzig, 1 bank Elster. It is walled and has manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and particularly stout in which it carries on a considerable trade. Pop. 3093.

PEGILI a vil. and econ. Italy Piedmont, div. Genoa, 3 m. from Voltri on the Gulf of Genoa with two palaces, three churches, and manufactures of silk goods, a silk mill, a fishery and several flour-mills. Pop. 8560.

PEGLIA, a vil. France dep. Alpes Maritimes, div. Nice, 9 m. from Bezaudun, with a church and a trade in wood and a kind of green sand which is made into paint. Pop. 1800.

PEGNITZ, a tn. Bavaria, Upper Franconia, on the Pegnitz, 80 m. N. E. Nürnberg. It is walled, has two churches, a tannery some trade in fat cattle, and three mills. P. 1904.

PEGO, a tn. Spain Valencia, prov and 44 m. N. E. Ali cant. It has clean and commodious streets, four squares, a court-house, granary hospital for the sick, two endowed schools, a church, two hermitages, and several mills for rice, oil, and flour. The only article exported is raisins. Pop. 5365.

PEGU a country of India beyond the Ganges, formerly a powerful and independent kingdom, and subsequently a province of Burmah, but in 1855 annexed to the British Indian empire. It occupies the S. extremity of Burmah lat. 18° 45' to lat. 19° 30' N. and extending E. and W. from the Salween to the Bay of Bengal. It thus comprises the whole delta of the Irrawaddy. There are several ranges of mountains in the province, but generally speaking, it may be considered a level country. The soil is naturally very fertile, but cultivation has been almost entirely neglected since the conquest of the country by the Burmans, although, previous to that event, the Peguans were industrious and skillful agriculturists. The minerals of the province comprise iron, tin, and lead, rubies, sapphires, and rock-crystals are also met with. Besides the numerous branches of the Irrawadi, which overpreads as with network the whole S.W. surface of the country, another large river called the Setaung waters the E. extreme, and falls into the Gulf of Martaban. The Salween, as already mentioned, forms its E. boundary. Amongst the natural productions of the country is teak timber. The principal object of cultivation is rice, which is raised with little trouble. Tigers, elephants, buffaloes, deer and other animals abound in the woods, and in the extensive tracts which have been left to be overrun with jungle. The principal parts of Pegu are Bhamo and Rangoon. The Peguans are called by the Burmans Talawa or Talaga, and by themselves Monsa. Pop. estimated at about 70,000.

PEGU, an ancient city and cap. above prov. 1 bank Irga river about 70 m N Rangoon, lat. 17° 30' N lon 96° 30' E formerly a place of great importance with a population of 160,000 and forming a quadrangle, each side of which measured 1½ m. The present town is on the site of the old, and consists of but two streets, one parallel to the river, and the other leading out to a great pagoda, a huge structure occupying the summit of a fine hill having a gradual ascent. It is a pyramidal building composed of brick and mortar, octagonal at the base, and spiral at the top, each side of the base measuring 162 ft. Pegu was stormed and taken by the British, June 4, 1853.

PEI HO, or NORTH RIVER, a river (China, prov. J) of cheboi, rises near the great wall flows S.E., and joins the Ku-ho and Hoan-ho 70 m S.E. Pekin and 80 m above the mouth of the united stream in the Gulf of Petcheloo. It is navigable for boats to within 30 m. of Peking.

PEILAL, a town, prov. Silesia, gov. and 33 m. S.W. Bresla, chiefly inhabited by Moravians. It has a castle, church, manufactures of linen and cotton goods, and several mills. Pop. 4196.

PEINE, a town, Hanover principality Hildesheim r bank Fusa, 21 m N. by E. Hanover. It is walled has a R. Catholic church, Capuchin monastery, hospital and old castle now used as a house of correction manufactures of linen and tobacco, a flax-mill and a trade in yarn and cattle. P. 3991.

PEINGHIE, a town, Pegu, r bank Irrawadi lat. 18° 31' N lon. 94° 54' E. Near this place a great part of the teak timber is procured which is exported from Rangoon to British India. Large ships have been built here, though at the distance of 200 m. from the sea.

PEIPUS, or TROMBOKOZ-CHEKO lake, Russia, between gavs Petersburg, Revel, and Lwowa greatest length, 50 m breadth, 30 m. The depth is considerable, and has floated 24-gm frigates. It receives the Embush and Kosa on the S.W., the Tchernia on the E., and the Zetsoha on the S.E. and discharges itself on the N.E. by the Arova into the Gulf of Finland. It is well supplied with fish. In 1702 a naval engagement took place on the lake between the Swedes and Russians. The latter had the advantage.

PEISERA, or PRUDZY a town Russian Poland 84 m N.W. Kalisz, r bank Warta here crossed by two bridges. It has a R. Catholic and two other churches, a synagogue, monastery, two schools, and a military hospital manufactures of linen and leather; and a trade in cattle. P. 1841 3316.

PEISEY, or PEASEY, a vil and com. branch, dep. Savoy, prov. Tarentaise in a mountain valley of same name, 11 m N.E. Montdore. It has a church, and a considerable trade in Gruyere cheese. In the top of the valley at the height of about 5000 ft. above the sea, are the celebrated argilliferous lead-mines of Passy, discovered in 1714, worked first by an English company, then by a Scotchman and a Dutchman, and still employing about 374 miners, though not nearly so productive as when first opened. Pop. 1700.

PEISKRETSCHAM, or PRACOVIC a town, Prussia, Silesia, gov. and 38 m. S.E. Oppeln, on the Drama with two churches, a castle, synagogue, and hospital a spinning and a rolling mill, and a blast-furnace. Pop. 3864.

PEITZ, a town, Prussia, gov. and 80 m. S. Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, r bank Mula, with a church, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth a spinning mill, and iron works. Pop. 2844.

PEIZE a vil. Holland prov. Drenthe, 11 m N by W Amer, with a church. Pop. (agricultural), 1161.

PEKALONGAN, a N prov Java, bounded N by the Java Sea, E prov Samarang R. Banjoemas and W Tegal, length, E to W 80 m breadth, 18 m cap. Pekalongan. It is a hilly island flat towards the coast, and generally well-watered and healthy, the chief products are coffee and rice. In the hills there are thermal springs, and sulphur is found. Some trade is carried on in native produce, partly through its three ports, Pekalongan Batang and Pabean which are only suited for small vessels. Manufactures of indigo and sugar and in gold, silver, iron and copper, pottery ware and in other ordinary articles of native industry, are carried on. Many Hindoo antiquities are scattered over the province. Pop. 224,000. — The town is a pretty small place, on the coast at the mouth of the Kalu-Pekalongan, with an open roadstead. Many of the houses are built of stone, and the river is crossed by an elegant bridge, and on the one side of the stream is the government-house, and on the opposite a fort. An active trade is carried on with Batavia.

PEKELA, two contiguous vils. Holland, prov. and 31 m S.E. (Irongen 1—1, Nieuwe) 1 bank As with three churches and a school two boat-building yards, two inns and some boat traffic and turf-cutting. Pop. 4048—2, (Oude) It has two churches, a synagogue, and two schools, some boat-traffic, and turf-cutting. Pop. 5908.

PEKING, or TIENTSIN (Chinese King-tse, or King-tse, the residence of the court) the cap. of the Chinese Empire, prov. Petcheloo on an extensive, barren sandy plain, between the rivers Pei Ho and Hoan He lat. 39° 54' 18' N lon 116° 27' E. It is about 40 m. from the great wall and 100 m. from the Gulf of Petcheloo. The appearance of this vast city in approaching it, is by no means unimpressive, little or nothing of the buildings inside the walls being seen. The entire arcant of the walls and suburbs of Peking is reckoned at 25 m. The wall is 30 ft high, and 35 ft thick at the base, diminishing to 12 ft. at the top. It is found new throughout with large bricks, laid in a mortar of lime and clay which in time, becomes almost as durable as stone. Square towers, projecting 50 ft. from the outer side of the walls, occur at intervals of about 60 yards and the whole is surrounded by a ditch. There are in all 16 gates leading into the city.

The present city of Peking consists of two portions the N. or Tartar city called Nan-Chang and the S., called Nan-Chang. The former is built in the shape of a parallelogram facing the four quarters of the globe, and consists of three inclosures, one within the other, each surrounded by its own wall. The innermost inclosure or area is called Kin-Chung [prohibited or forbidden city] and contains the imperial palace, and buildings connected with it, in which the emperor and royal family reside. It is about 2 m. in circumference is surrounded by a solid wall faced with glazed bricks and covered with yellow tiles. The second inclosure is an oblong square about 8 m. in extent, surrounded by a wall about 20 ft. high. It was originally intended for the officers of the court, but is now occupied by Chinese merchants and tradesmen. The third inclosure comprises the open city, which presents all the evidences of an industrious people, intent on the pursuit of gain, mercantile bustle pervading every corner of it. Many of the principal streets of Peking are spacious, hung more than 100 ft. wide, but they are unpaved, and in rainy weather impassable from mud. Amongst the principal public buildings of Peking, besides those already mentioned, are the Temple of Eternal Peace, belonging to the Empress, and the largest and most splendid temple in Peking, the Mahommedan mosque, the observatory the church of Heaven a Lord, with a convent attached to it, considered one of the finest specimens of architecture in the city, but now going to decay. There are also religious edifices, appropriated to many forms of religion, the principle of toleration being here carried to the utmost extremity—amongst them are the Greek and Latin churches, Islam mosques, Buddhist temples, besides temples dedicated to Confucius, and other deities mortals. Amongst the more valuable institutions of Peking is the national college, Han-tsin yuen, where all Chinese learning and literature are concentrated, also Manchoo, Chinese, and Russian, all religions, though some of them are proscribed, share the honour of being sanctioned within its precincts. The other learned and scientific institutions of note are the medical college, astronomical board, and the imperial observatory. Peking is situated solely by its being the seat of government, having no trade, except that which is produced by the wants of its vast population. The principal part of the provisions required comes from the R. province, or from the stocks reared in the N. part of Petchelo, the adjacent plain producing but a small amount of the food demanded. A considerable portion of the taxes levied upon the productions of the whole empire is paid in kind, and is here stored up; the amount of rice alone in these granaries at one time of the year is enormous, but they are often empty before the new crop is gathered, so that a great many die for want of food. The large establishment of the emperor and the numerous persons in the employment of the government, who are paid out of the public revenue, absorb a great portion of the grain.

Peking is regarded by the Chinese as one of their most ancient cities, but it was not made the capital of the country until its conquest by the Mongols, about 1262. Pop. about 2,000,000.—(Guthrie's China Opened, The Middle Kingdom.)

PELAGO, Davis Atchefs of (Hans Ice)

PELAGO, a group, Caroline Is. 8° 30' N. 156° 30' E. They are about 20 m. in length, extend nearly N. E. and S. W., 87 m., and are completely encircled by reefs. The largest island is Babelthap forming the N. E. part of the chain 24 m. long with a high hill on its W. side. Most of the other islands are rather low but cultivated. The inhabitants are a tribe of Malays. They wear no clothes. Their huts are very simple, but they show some ingenuity in the construction of their boats. Several vessels have been nearly cut off when touching at these islands.

PELAGO, a group, Caroline Is. 8° 30' N. 156° 30' E. They are about 20 m. in length, extend nearly N. E. and S. W., 87 m., and are completely encircled by reefs. The largest island is Babelthap forming the N. E. part of the chain 24 m. long with a high hill on its W. side. Most of the other islands are rather low but cultivated. The inhabitants are a tribe of Malays. They wear no clothes. Their huts are very simple, but they show some ingenuity in the construction of their boats. Several vessels have been nearly cut off when touching at these islands.

PELEW ISLANDS, a group, Caroline Is. 8° 30' N. 156° 30' E. They are about 20 m. in length, extend nearly N. E. and S. W., 87 m., and are completely encircled by reefs. The largest island is Babelthap forming the N. E. part of the chain 24 m. long with a high hill on its W. side. Most of the other islands are rather low but cultivated. The inhabitants are a tribe of Malays. They wear no clothes. Their huts are very simple, but they show some ingenuity in the construction of their boats. Several vessels have been nearly cut off when touching at these islands.

PELLHAM, three parls. Eng. Herts. —1 (Herts. 1601 as P. 298—2 (Herts. 1535 as 1 658—3 (Stocks 628 as P. 138)

PELLAGROUDF, a vil. Ceylon 5 m. N. E. Colombo which it supplies with coffee, jaggy, arrow-roots, betel leaves, and different sorts of fruits and vegetables. It contains a Protestant and a R. Catholic chapel, and a school. Pop. 800

PELLICAN ISLAND, an isl., N. E. coast Australia, Princess Charlotte Bay lat. 13° 50' S. lon. 143° 42' E. 3 m. long low and sandy frequented by great numbers of pelicans, great land-crabs, plovers, gulls, and sand-pipers. Fertil, also, are the trees.—(1 Copy of the Gazetteer) PELLING ISLANDS, — Yellow Sea, off coast of Corea, lat. 38° 24' N. lon. 124° 28' E., 10 m. long, by 4 m. broad —2 Indian Archipelago near E. coast Celebes lat. 1° 50' S. lon. 123° 15' E. (a) about 50 m. long by 16 m. broad. On its E. coast are many smaller isles, with numerous rocks and shoals.

PELLISSANNE, [anc. Pellissane] a tu. France dep. Bouches-du-Rhône, 16 m. W. N. W. Aix r. bank Toulon, well built with a spacious square, and manufactures of silk, cotton, pottery ware, and olive-oil. Pop. 1857

PELLISIA, an ancient tu. Turkey in Europe, Macedonia near the Vardar or Axius, about 6 m. S. E. Janina-Vardar. Its site is merely attested by a few ruins but it is celebrated in Grecian history as the place where Philip of Macedonia was brought up, and his son Alexander the Great was born

PELLERIN, a tu. and com. Italy 22 m. S. W. Parma; with a suppressed convent, primary school and a trade in cattle. Near it are salt-works. Pop. 5312

PELLERD, a vil. Hungary co. Baranya, 2 m. from Fünfkirchen with a chateau, and some trade in sheep, corn, wood, and wine. Pop. 1109

PELLER, or Peller, a vil. Bohemia, circle Casanau, about 15 m. from Deutsch-Brod with a school and extensive iron-works. Pop. 1118

PELLER ISLANDS (St. Edward) a group, Australia, close on shore, S. W. coast Gulf of Carpentaria. The largest are named West Island, S. W. Island, N. Island, Centre, and Vandenberg Island. The N. point of N. Island is Cape Fallow lat. 15° 50' S. lon. 138° 2' E. (a) See Pellaw

PELOPONNEUS. See MORIA
PELOPOTAS, or PELOPOTASCO-DE-PAULA, a tu. Brazil prov. São-Pedro-do-Rio-Grande, on S. W. extremity of Lake Patos, with a church and a harbour whence are exported dried beef, hides, horns, tallow, and other produce. P. 2419

PELSALL, a small vil. England on Stafford, 8 m. N. E. Wolverhampton, containing two chapels and a school. P. 1132

PELWORM, an isl. Denmark 8 m. off S. E. coast Schleswig. It is of a compact and somewhat triangular shape, but has so low, that it requires the constant efforts of the inhabitants to guard against inundations. Previously to the great flood of 1834 Pelworm formed part of the island of Nordstrand. Area, 19 sq. m. Pop. 2000 chiefly pea-sants, fishers, and pilots.

PELYNT, par. Eng. Cornwall 4088 ac. P. 799

PEMBA, or HUTUKA, an isl. E. Africa, coast of Zanzibar, N. from Zanzibar, lat. (N. W. point) 4° 52' S., lon. 39° 44' E. about 40 m. long, by 10 m. broad. It is low well-wooded, and fertile; rice is cultivated and carried to Zanzibar, the E. shore is nearly straight in a N. N. E. and S. S. W. direction the W. shore is irregular and deeply indented in its outline, having a chain of islands and reefs fringing it, by which several bays and harbours are formed

PEMBOYR, or PEMBOYA, par. Carmarthen 6676 ac. Pop. 1271

PEMBREY, par. Wales, Carmarthen 26735 ac. P. 8310

PEMBRIDGE, par. Eng. Hereford 7077 ac. P. 1319

PEMBROKE, several places, U. States.—1 A vil. and township New Hampshire, 8 m. S. E. Concord with a town-house, academy and various factories. Pop. 1855.—2 A vil. and township Massachusetts 28 m. S. E. Boston, with two churches, 13 schools, and a number of saw mills. P. 1258

PEMBROKE, or PEMBROKEPOUR, a maritime co. S. Wales, forming the extreme W. of the principality bounded, N. E. by Cardiganshire, E. and S. E. Carmarthenshire and bay, S. Bristol Channel and W. N. W. St. George's Channel area, 610 sq. m. Its coast line is extremely irregular being deeply indented with numerous bays and inlets, and studded with islands. The shores also are, in general high and the cliffs perpendicular. The surface is generally undulating and greatly diversified with alternate hills and dales, decorated with rich meadows and corn-fields. The hills, however do not attain any great elevation the highest summit, Fframh Top, being but 1754 ft. above sea-level. The anthracite or stone-coal tract beneath the county is a continuation of the great coal basin of S. Wales, which extends over the whole coast of Carmarthen Bay. Copper-ore has been found in small quantities, but slate and coal are the only minerals worked. In the S. part the limestone and old red sandstone formation afford soils of excellent quality, but in the coal and slate districts the land is very inferior. The climate is humid and very mild. The soils approaching the sea-shore have long been celebrated for the production of barley, wheat, oats and potatoes are the principal crops some of the first is said to be of very superior quality and remarkable for an extraordinary degree of transparency. Black cattle are fattened and sent to the London market. The horses are small-sized, but much esteemed. Manufactures unimportant chiefly domestic coarse woollen articles of clothing the fabrics are valuable, particularly those of herring and salmon. Chief towns—Haverford West, Pembroke, St. David's, and Tenby. The county sends a member to Parliament. Pop. 34,140

PEMBROKE, a par. and municipal bor. and seaport m. S. Wales, co. Pembroke, on a creek of Milford Haven, 206 m. W. London; lat. 51° 41' 48" N. lon. 4° 57' 15" W. (a) It has a townhall custom-house, several churches, and several places of worship for Dissenters, and a small endowed grammar-school. At the W. extremity of the rocky ridge on which the town stands, are the fine picturesque ruins of an ancient castle or fortress, erected in 1092, the remains of which give evidence of its former magnificence and grandeur. About 3 m. N. W. from the town is Pater or Paterchurch, where is situated Pembroke dock. The dock-yard comprises an area of about 60 ac., and is inclosed by a lofty wall of stone, which includes various public offices, a chapel, and residences of the principal officers. It contains 13 ships for ship-building. The town, recently built here, consists of several streets of neat and well built houses partially paved, with numerous good shops, and a neat inclosed market-place. Pop. 19 101.

PENBURY, par Eng. West 8481 ac. P 1114.
PENPELPORT a vil. Prussia, gov and almost close to the walls of Düsseldorf, whose inhabitants have here a number of handsome villas. Pop. 2360

PEN or PAGE, a lake, Itzema, gov Tver 8 W Ostobkov length, N to S, about 15 m., greatest breadth 3 m. forming the source of the Volga.

PENACASITILLO, a vil. Spain, prov and 2 m from Santander with a church a primary school, and a trade in maize, corn and fruit. Pop. 1041

PENACOOVA a vil and par Portugal prov Douro 10 m. N N E Coimbra, r bank Mondego, from whose sands some gold is washed here. Pop. 8200.

PENAFIEL, or AREXIPANA DE BOURA, a tn Portugal prov Douro, r bank Tamega, 19 m. E N E Oporto. It has a beautiful parish church, adorned with an elegant portal, and supported within by Ionic columns; a handsome townhouse, two hospitals, and a school of rhetoric and philosophy. Pop. 3560

PENAFIEL a tn Spain, Leon, prov and 30 m E by S. Valladolid on the Duraton in an angle formed by it and the Douro. It occupies a haught, crowned by an ancient, but strong and well-preserved castle, is nearly surrounded by a stone wall and ditch; and has three churches, a nursery, two primary schools, two hospitals, manufactures of woollen cloth, bombazine, earthenware, &c. dye-works and flour mills, a trade in manufactures and in agricultural produce. Pop. 1453.

PENAFLORE, a vil Spain, Andalusia prov and 42 m N E Seville, r bank Guadalquivir. It has a courthouse, prison, granary two schools and a church with a very handsome tower. Pop. (agricultural) 1785.

PENASQUILA, a vil. Spain, prov Valencia, 20 m. N Almenia. It has a small castle, built by the Romans a courthouse and prison two endowed schools, a church three blankets manufactures, a tanning and six flour mills. P 1280

PENALLY par W. des. Bushbuck, 3383 ac. P 894

PENALSORDI, a tn. Spain, Biscaya prov and about 80 m from Badajoz with a church townhouse hospital, and primary school, manufactures of linen, a flour-mill, and a trade in cattle and corn. Pop. 1728

PENALTA par Eng. Monmouth 2284 ac P 467

PENALVA D ALVA, a tn and par Portugal, prov Beira-Baixa, on a height above r bank Alva, about 20 m. E N E Coimbra. It has a grammar-school and manufactures of coarse woollens. Pop. 1500

PENAMACOR, a tn. Portugal prov Beira-Baixa, 23 m. S. S. E. Guarda, on a lofty rock. It is a place of considerable strength, being surrounded with walls, and defended by a castle. Pop. 1585.

PENANG or PRINCE OF WALIS ISLAND [native, Pulau Pinang or Arcea Island, from the abundance of the areca-tree on it] a British settlement, Strait of Malacca, dependent on the presidency of Bengal, consisting of an island situated between lat. 5° 14' and 5° 37' N., lon 100° 8' and 100° 29' E off the W coast of the Malay peninsula, from which it is separated by a channel 2 m. to 5 m. across. The island is of oblong shape about 19 m. in length, N to S and 8 m. in breadth, area, 150 sq m. Its surface is uneven and rocky it is intersected by a hill range, mostly covered with tall trees and jungle and Captain Woods, who surveyed it in 1840, found West-hill to be 2715 ft. Mount Macalister or Government hill, 2550 ft. and Mount Alvin, 2384 ft. above the sea. From the coast, the height declines to the E and W and low swampy flats again bounded by a belt of coconut trees, fringe the shores. The island has two or three rivulets.

Soil, Climate, and Products.—The highlands are of granite and plastic formations, traversed by veins of mica and quartz; the lower hills are chiefly of laterite the subsoil of the slopes consist of granitic detritus or reddish clay, covered by a thin vegetable mould the flats on the E. and W sides of the island are wholly alluvial. Tin-ore is abundant, but little wrought, a whitish clay of decomposed felspar, and well adapted for making broken pottery is very plentiful. The climate, though not so fine as that of Malacca, is remarkably agreeable; in the higher districts it resembles that of Madeira: the morning and evening breezes are invigorating, and general showers fall at intervals throughout the year. The temperature on the lower lands ranges between 64 and 60°, the mean annual temperature of the island being 79° Fah. The regular wet season begins in September and ends in November. Rain is then sown and is raised in February or March, and in seasons sufficiently moist, the seed often yields seventy-five fold, in unsuccessful years the deficiency in rice is made up for by plantains and bananas. Maize is the only other cereal product cultivated. Some spices, in particular, seem to flourish here better than in any other part of the world: nutmegs, cloves, peppers, pimento, and ginger, grow luxuriantly; the nutmegs, maize, and cloves are considered superior to those of Banda and Amboma and two crops of pepper are gathered annually—one in January and the other in June. Tobacco, coffee and cotton are raised only for home consumption. The sugar-cane thrives and the tea-plant grows well. Many of the ordinary kitchen vegetables of Europe are abundant and cheap: native products include yams and sweet potatoes, and amongst fruits the mangosteen, rambutan, durian, guava, pineapple, orange, lime, mulberry, grape, &c. Amongst large timber-trees are the tank, merbau (Melastomaceae Ambonensis) wood-ool or distamar-tree, mouthhouse, cypress, and numerous varieties of bauxites and rattans. Besides various species of monkeys, lemurs and bats, wild cats and hogs, peacocks, parrots, and other birds, are native as are a great variety of small birds of brilliant plumage, the preparation of which for export to England, forms a somewhat important branch of native employment. Buffaloes and cattle are extensively reared for dairy or farm purposes, and hogs in great numbers by the Chinese for food. Goats and sheep are scarce. Poultry are plentiful and salted ducks-eggs are an important mercantile commodity. The coast abounds with fish, twenty varieties of which, caught principally by the Malays, are sold in the markets. Numerous varieties of crabs, oysters, &c. abound, together with sea and river turtles, the eggs of which are much prized by the natives.

Vol. II.

Trade.—Before the establishment of Singapore as the chief port of transhipment between Europe, India, and the Eastern seas, Penang had a very extensive transit trade with all the countries of the Indian Archipelago and Chinese seas, as well as with the ports of British India, Europe, and America. At present, however, its trading connections are much more limited, and chiefly with the E. coast of Sumatra, Java, and the ports of the Transvaal provinces, the islands and W side of the Malay peninsula, and with Singapore. Its imports consist of pepper, benzoin, camphor, gold-dust, screw-nuts, rice, rattans, sago, sulphur, tin, strack, sugar, oil, tobacco, edible swallows, naris, tramping, and ivory, in return for which

78

It exports British and India piece-goods, cotton, opium, iron, steel, coarse woollen and worsted cloths, and coarse cutlery. The total exports in 1849 amounted to 6,345,600 rупes (262,460), and the imports to 7,219,825 rупes (271,962). Penang is also the depot for the tin wrought at Junkinoy, and places in the Malay peninsula, of which metal it exported in 1850 about 30,000 piculs (1195 tons).

George Town, the cap. which stands on a promontory near the N.E. extremity of the island, lat. 5° 25' N. lon. 100° 19' 45" E. (N.) is of considerable extent, neat, clean, and built in regular streets, with a few good European houses, but the majority of wood, roofed with palm-leaves, and raised from the ground on posts, as in other Malay towns. The plain around it is dotted over with pretty bangalows, surrounded by well planted gardens. The public buildings comprise an English church, St. Catharine and Armenian chapels, the government houses, exchange, arsenal, and storehouses, good barracks, a post-office, and a civil hospital, with a jail and convict hospital in the island suburbs. The port has two commodious piers for landing and shipping goods, and the harbour is very safe and well sheltered having a depth varying from 5 to 8 fathoms, accessible for vessels of 400 tons to within a few yards of the shore. It can be entered, however only from the N. side of the island. Further south on E. side island, is the small but pretty village of James Town, opposite the hilly island of Pulau Jawa, which is within a mile from the shore.

History.—Penang was made over by treaty to the E. I. Company in 1786, and in 1803 it was erected into a separate presidency. In 1830 however four years after Malacca and Singapore were incorporated into the Straits settlements, the whole three were united under a governor subordinate to the Presidency of Bengal.

Population.—According to the official census made in June, 1851, there were 43 143 inhabitants, distributed as follows:—

	Male	Female	Total
English and descendants...	179	169	347
Malay	8,711	7,668	16,379
Chinese	13,142	5,204	18,346
Malabares	5,616	5,084	10,700
Macassarines	1,487	1,973	3,460
Total	28,645	14,723	43,368

(Newhall's Malacca Crawford, Pinlayson, Davidson Jour. & I. Archipelago, Singapore Free Press and Fanning Gazette Documents on the E. I. Company's Library)

PENARANDA DE-BRACAMONTE, a tn. Spain, prov. Leon, and 26 m. S.E. Salamanca. It has a courthouse and prison, two schools, an hospital, a church, a Franciscan convent manufactures a kind of frieze, common in Murcia, Andalusia, and Galicia saddle-bags of every kind pack-saddles of milk and wool saddle-girths, and hats. In 1811 the French here defeated the Spaniards. Pop. 3488.

PESARIYA, a vil. Spain prov. Aragon and 48 m. from Teruel, with a courthouse, school, and church. Pop. 1567.

PENARTH, par. Wales, Glamorgan 1507 as P 105.

PENAS or SAN PEDRO, a tn. Spain, prov. Murcia, and 16 m. S.W. Albacete, surrounded by a slight wall. In the square stand the courthouse, the prison, and the clock-tower. It has also two schools, and a parish church. Perched on the summit of a hill, immediately above and commanding the town, stands the well-known fort of some name, considered almost impregnable. There are a chocolate and flour mill soap-works, manufactures of ordinary linen, &c., and a trade in wine, cotton, sheep, and wool. Pop. 7208.

PENAS (Gulf of) an inlet, Pacific coast of Patagonia, between Wellington Island and the peninsula of Tres Montes, lat. 47° 30' S. lon. 75° W. It is 65 m. wide, extends inland about 65 m., and includes the Guyanese Islands.

PENBRYN, par. Wales, Cardigan; 8847 as P 1659.

PENCAITLAND, par. Scot. Hadd., 4 m. by S. P 1137.

PENCAREGG, par. Wales, Carmar. 10,822 as P 1123.

PENCOMBE, par. Eng. Hereford; 4590 as P 597.

PENCOYD, Eng. Hereford; 879 as P 586.

PENCUN a vil. in. Prussia, gov. and 15 m. S.W. Stettin. It has a castle, a church, an hospital, and manufactures of straw-hats, a brewery, and a trade in cattle. P 1454.

PENDBRYN (Lowen and Ureux), par. Wales, Brecon, 12,766 as P 1777.

PENDINE, par. Wales, Carmarthen; 1376 as P 161.

PENDJCHEHER, or PUNJMANA, a river, Afghanistan, which descends from the S. side of the Hindoo Kooch, flows first S.W., then S.E. and, after a course of about 180 m joins the bank Cabool. Its chief affluent is the Ghorubun.

PENDELBURY a vil. and township, Essex, co. Lancaster on the Bolton and Skirgtham Canal and the Manchester and Bolton Railway; with a square-bell Norman church, an independent chapel several schools, and manufactures of plan and printed cotton. Pop. 2193.

PENDLETON a suburb of Manchester N.W. side of that city on an acclivity. It consists chiefly of a continuation of the principal street in Salford and forms part of the main road leading from Manchester to Liverpool, Bolton, &c.

It has a church, an Independent, and three Methodist chapels several schools a mechanics institute, and extensive cotton spinning calico-printing, bleaching and dyeing establishments, in which the inhabitants are chiefly engaged. Pop. 14,324.

PENDOCK, par. Eng. Worcester, 1168 as P 802.

PENDOMER, par. Eng. Somerset 1090 as P 78.

PENDOLAN, par. Wales, Glamorgan 5504 as P 368.

PENEDO a tn. Brazil, prov. and 60 m. S.W. Alagoas.

It has three churches a townhouse, a Franciscan convent, and a Latin, and a primary school. The inhabitants raise large quantities of cotton rice, millet, legumes, and mandarin. P dist. 14,000.

PENEDON a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Beira-Alta.

89 m. N. by W. Guarda with some Roman antiquities. P 690.

PENEGOR, par. Wales, Montgomery, 8065 as P 928.

PENELLA two places, Portugal — 1. A tn. and par, prov. Douro. S.E. Coimbra. Pop. 1460 — 2. A tn. and par, prov. Beira-Alta, 18 m. N. Trancoso. Pop. 712.

PENFIELD, a vil. and port township, U. States, New York, 223 m. N. by W. Albany with three churches, an academy, a lyceum and several mills and factories. P 2842.

PENGUN ISLAND see COCKET ISLAND.

PENHA, a vil. and par. Brazil, prov. Minas-Geraes, on the Itapah, 80 m. S.W. Minas-Novas; with a handsome square, in the centre of which is a church. Pop. 1000.

PENHA, a vil. Brazil, E. shore of Ilha Parica, opposite the town of Bahia, with a stone church, and two primary schools.

PENHOW, par. Eng. Monmouth 1784 as P 373.

PENHURST, par. Eng. Sussex 1402 as P 120.

PENICHIE, a tn. Portugal, prov. Entre-douro and the coast of the Atlantic, 47 m. N. by W. Lisbon. It ranks as a fortress of the first class, more, however on account of the strength of its natural position, than of its fortifications. It has a small harbour, and carries on an active fishery. P 2596.

PENIG, a tn. Saxony, circle and 35 m. S.E. Leipzig par. hank Mulde, here crossed by several bridges. It has a court of law a castle, with a park, and important manufactures of bookery, woollens, and calico, and bleachfields a paper, cotton, and other mills. Pop. 8996.

PENISCOLA, a maritime tn. Spain, Valencia, prov. and 41 m. N.E. Castellon-de-la-Pena, on a rock about 140 ft. high. It is a place of strength of the second rank, but it is greatly neglected, and the streets are narrow, crooked and ill paved.

It has a courthouse a government house, two endowed schools, a church, and several hermitages. Navarro, who was governor in 1810, betrayed the place to the French. Pop. (agricultural) 1891.

PENITENCE, a market tn. and par. England, on York, 7 m. S. Don, and a station on the Manchester and Sheffield Railway 8 m. W. S.W. Barnsley. It is well and regularly built, has a parish church, Independent, Friends, and Wesleyan chapels, a free grammar-school; quarries of pavement, of which large quantities are sent to London, collieries, and manufactures of linen. Area of par. 21,580 ac. Pop. 6803.

PENITENCIA, an isl. Brazil. See BARRAGUA.

PENJAB the five rivers. See PUNJAB.

PENJINA, a river, E. Siberia, rises on S.E. side of the Sumnerov Mountains, flows S.E. past the town of Penjing, and a little below falls into the bay of that name. After a course of about 160 m. It receives the Akien on the right.

PENJINSK, a gulf, Siberia, in N.E. of Sea of Okhotsk, formed on the E. side by Kamchatka, and on the W. by a peninsula which separates it from the Gulf of Gilytsk. It is about 150 m. long, by 80 m. broad and at its N.E. extremity, at a town of same name, receives the Penjin.

PENKRIDGE, a small settlement in par. England, on the state route 4, is a fine stone building in the Gothic style. A Primitive Methodist chapel, a national school, and some small churches. Races are held here in September. Area of par. 19,605 ac. Pop. 8816.

PENLIMMON, a name sometimes applied to a mountain range of S. Wales, which curves round from E. to W. for a distance of 49 m. separating Montgomeryshire from Shropshire on the E., Radnorshire on the S., and Cardiganshire on the W. but is more frequently confined to the mountain mass which forms the W. termination of the range. It is situated on the frontier of co. Cardigan and Montgomery and consists chiefly of three summits, the loftiest of which has a height of 1465 ft. is composed chiefly of shale, containing no minerals of any value, and gives rise to both the Severn and Wye, and several other minor streams.

PENLLINE, par. Wales, Glamorgan 1784 ac. P. 1531.

PENMACHNO, par. Wales, Carn 11,208 ac. P. 1531.

PENMAEN, par. Wales, Glamorgan 1538 ac. P. 114.

PENMAEL, par. Wales, Glamorgan 3395 ac. P. 495.

PENMON, par. Wales, Anglesey 7139 ac. Pop. 326.

PENMORF, par. Wales, Caernarvon 10,107 ac. P. 1109.

PENMNYDD, par. Wales Anglesey 3100 ac. P. 666. PENN a vil and par. England, co. Stafford near the Wolverhampton canal 2 m. S.W. Wolverhampton. It has a parish church with a square tower, an almshouse, and manufactures of locks, keys, nails, &c., for Wolverhampton. Area of par. 3998 ac. Pop. 1160.

PENN, par. Eng. Beds 4970 ac. Pop. 144.

PENN TAY, a vil. U. States, New York, 173 to W. Albany; with five churches, an academy, a courthouse, a jail and manufactures of carriage and ploughs, flour and saw mills, a tannery and two printing-offices. Pop. 1800.

PENNA, a mountain, Parma, on the confines of the study of Puzosia. It is one of the loftiest summits of the Apennines in the duchy having a height of 5860 ft. The Taro and the Ceno have their sources in it.

PENNAJ, (Lower and Upper), par. Wales, Merioneth 7461 ac. Pop. 606.

PENNAR, par. Wales, Montgomery 5000 ac. P. 749.

PENNAR, a river Hindostan, rises among the low dryrock mountains near Mysore, lat. 13° 25' N., lon. 77° 21' E. flows N. to lat. 16° N. when it bends round and flows E. to the Bay of Bengal near Nellore, at lat. 14° 35' N. lon. 80° 12' E. Enters length, 800 m. The channel is in general sandy, but also rocky in many parts.

PENNARD, two pars. England, Somerset—1 (East) 2829 ac. Pop. 675.—2 (West) 8063 ac. Pop. 871.

PENNARD, par. Wales, Glamorgan, 2203 ac. P. 848.

PENNICUK, a vil. and par. Scotland, co. and 9 m. S.W. Edinburgh on the E. It has a neat parish church, in the Gothic style, a Free, and two L. Presbyterian churches, a parochial school and extensive manufactures of paper. During the war, Penicuik had a very large depot for French prisoners. Area of par. 20,000 ac. Pop. 3003.

PENNINGHAM, par. Scot. Wigton, 16 m. by 6 m. Pop. 3672.

PENNINGTON, par. Eng. Lancaster, 2767 ac. P. 489.

PENNSYLVANIA, one of the U. States of N. America, lat. 39° 45' to 42° 17' N. lon. 74° 44' to 80° 34' W. bounded N. by New York, N. W. Lake Erie, W. Ohio and Virginia, S. Virginia and Maryland, and E. Delaware and New Jersey. greatest length, E. to W. 310 m. greatest breadth, 163 m. area, 44,000 sq. m. It has been shaped out with so much regularity, that except on the E., where it has two large projections and indentations, its sides form an exact parallelogram facing the cardinal points. The surface is decidedly mountainous, being traversed S.W. to N.E. by the Allegheny chain and crossed by many smaller ranges, which are more or less parallel to it, and take the local names of Blue Mountains, Balding Hill, Laurel Hill, &c. On the E. side, the Alleghenies are rugged and steep but on the W. descend very gradually and then stretch out into an extensive table land. In the S.E., the surface loses its mountainous character and becomes hilly or undulating. The principal rivers are the Delaware, which forms the E. boundary of the state, and runs within it the Lehigh and the Schuylkill, the Susquehanna, with a continuous series of rapids during the last 50 m. of its course, and the Allegheny, which rises within the state, runs S. for a time to the east side of New York and then returns to unite at Pittsburg with the Monocahela coming from the S., in order to form the Ohio. The climate in the S.E. is subject to frequent and sudden fluctuations; in the N. among the mountains it is more settled, but often in winter very keen and to the W. of the Alleghenies, owing chiefly to the prevalence of S.E. winds is milder than toward the E. The transition from summer to winter is decidedly marked, but spring is short, frolic, and inclement. Autumn is the pleasantest season, and though sometimes oppressive from excessive heat, is for the most part serene and beautiful. The thermometer at Philadelphia ranges from 6° to 88°, and at Pittsburg from 10° to 94°. The variations of the climate do not impair its salubrity and Pennsylvania is one of the healthiest states of the Union. The soil has various grades of fertility, but is in general well adapted for agricultural operations. The richest and most highly cultivated tract is S.E. of the mountains on both banks of the Susquehanna. The most important crops are wheat, oats, rye, and Indian corn. barley may be regarded as almost a failure. Potatoes and tobacco are largely grown and flax more partially. Live stock, including oxen, cows, sheep, and swine, are abundant and large quantities of dairy produce are obtained for export. Next in importance to agriculture are the mineral products of the state: coal, iron, and salt occurring in almost inexhaustible abundance. In the whole of the mountain districts of the S. and E. to the W. of the Susquehanna, an intricate coal field occurs over an area estimated at 976 sq. m. while to the W. of the Alleghenies a vast bituminous coal-field, of which Pittsburg may be considered the centre, has been traced over an area of 21,000 sq. m. The coal strata of both these fields contain many valuable seams of ironstones and both the smelting and working of iron have long been regarded as perhaps the most important interest of the state. The number of iron works in the E. field is 264, and in the W. 140, and in 1847 the production of pig-iron was 358,500 tons, and of malleable-iron, 268,700. This great production, however, was greatly owing to a high price of iron ore, and has since rapidly declined, in consequence of its inability to compete with the iron of Great Britain. In some branches however, as in making cut nails and boiler-plates the Pennsylvania iron masters are still able to defy competition. After iron, on the manufacture of which, in its various forms about a tenth of the whole population is still supposed to depend, the most important manufactures are woollen and cotton goods that of maple-sugar also is so extensively carried on that the annual production is estimated at 7,000,000 lbs. Both the foreign and inland trade has been largely developed. In 1851 the exports, nearly all composed of domestic products, amounted in value to £1,115,840, and the imports to £2,951,325. The total shipping of the state is 258,939 tons, of which 64,305 is registered for foreign trade. The inland trade has been greatly promoted by important works of internal improvement, more especially canals and railroads, forming a complete network in the E. portion, and thence W. across the centre of the state, the former, for a length of 680 m. and the latter not far so actually, amounting to a length of 1087 m. The largest religious denominations are first, the Methodists next the Presbyterians and Baptists, and lastly, the Episcopalians, E. Catholics, Congregationalists, and Quakers. The higher educational establishments are chiefly the Philadelphia University, the Western University at Pittsburg, Dickinson College at Carlisle, Jefferson, Allegheny, and several other colleges. The common schools, exclusive of those of Philadelphia, which are placed under a separate management, amounted, in 1849 to 8678, each attended on an average by 43 scholars. The legislature, chosen by the universal suffrage of the white residents of a Senate of 38 members, elected for three years, a third retiring annually and a House of Representatives, of 100 members, elected for one year. Harrisburg, though an insignificant place compared with Philadelphia and even with Pittsburg continues to be the capital. The first settlement in the state was made by a company of Sweden in 1639. The Dutch afterwards gained possession but it was wrested from them by the English in 1664. A subsequent settlement was made in 1681 by the celebrated Quaker, William Penn, from whom the state has derived its name. Pop. (1850), 2,311,785.

PENOBSCOT, a river and bay, U States, Maine. The river, formed by the union of several streams in the W part of the state, flows mostly S. and, after a total course of about 340 m. 52½ into the bay of same name, 40 m. below Bangor, to which place it is navigable for vessels of heavy burden. Its principal affluents are the eastern Penobscot, the Watkinson, and the Penticost. —The bay is about 30 m. long, and as many bays at the entrance. It contains numerous islands, of which Deer and Fox islands are the principal. PENPONT a vill and par Scotland co. Dumfries, between the Forth and the Nith, 2 m. W S.W. Thornhill. It has a plain but neat parish church, a Reformed Presbyterian, and a U Presbyterian church, two parochial schools two free-schools, and vestiges of an ancient castle. Extent of par. 21 m. by 5 m. Pop. 1411.

PENQUENES, the Azores.

PENREHOB, two pars. Wales—1, Carnarvon, 555 ac. Pop. 112.—2 (Llangy) Anglesey 8694 ac. Pop. 652.

PENREHYN, an isl., S. Pacific Ocean, lat. (N. point) 8 55' N., lon. 156° 6' W. (N.) of coral formation, low and densely covered with trees, it is about 9 m. long N. E. and S. E. W. and about 5 m. wide, with an extensive lagoon having in it many coral patches. The inhabitants, who are numerous, are of a most savage and ferocious disposition.

PENRICE par Wales Glamorgan 5246 ac. P 398.

PENRITH or PENRITH, par Wales, Pembrokeshire 8081 ac. Pop. 431.

PENRITH a vill. New S. Wales, co. Cumberland, 25 m. N. W. Sydney, on the Nepean, with a Protestant and a R. Catholic church.

PENRITH a market in and par England, co. Cumberland, 17 m. S. by E. Carlisle, a station on the Lancaster and Carlisle Railway, and overlooked by the ruins of an ancient castle. The houses are generally well built of stone, and it has two churches, one of which is of recent erection, and remarkably handsome two Methodist chapels Primitive, Independent, Presbyterian, and R. Catholic chapels, and several schools, including a free grammar-school. Inhabitants engaged in weaving cotton, linen, and woollen goods, and in brewing and tanning. Area of par 7664 ac. Pop. 7387; of co. 6083.

PENRICE, par Eng. Monmouth 2695 ac. Pop. 363.

PENRY, an ancient port market in, sea-port, Eng. Lancashire, co. Cornwall, 2 m. N. W. Falmouth, at the head of a branch of Falmouth harbour. It has a townhall and market-house a church, places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans a free grammar and national schools. The port is a member of Falmouth, and has a considerable trade in exporting granite, which is worked a few miles from the town. The manufacture of paper, woollen-cloth, arsenic, and gunpowder is carried on and in the vicinity are some tanneries, breweries and saw-mills. Pop. 8557.

PENNACOLA, a seaport in U States, Florida, on a bay of same name in the N. of the Gulf of Mexico, on a low sandy plain. It is built in the form of a parallelogram with regular streets and public squares, and is the principal port of entry in Florida, though the harbour is too shallow to admit vessels drawing more than 8 ft. There is, however good anchorage below, and one of the most valuable navy-yards belonging to the Union. Pop. 3800.

PENSELWOOD, par Eng. Somerset 1101 ac. P 451.

PENSFORD (or THOMAS) par Eng. Somerset 616.

PENSHURST, a vill and par England, co. Kent, on the Eden, near the junction with the Medway 6 m. W S.W. Tunbridge. It has an ancient but handsome church, with many fine monuments; a Baptist chapel two national schools, a fine old manor near the vill, called Pemberton Place; several saw-mills, manufactures of paper and stone-quarries. Area of par. 4626 ac. Pop. 1698.

PENSHURST, a vill. England, co. Stafford, on the Stour-bridge and Northwich Extension Canals, 2 m. W S.W. Leek, with a handsome modern church, Wesleyan, and New Connexion Methodist chapels; and some of the largest iron-works in South Staffordshire. Pop. 4874.

PENSHORPE, par Eng. Norfolk, 758 ac. Pop. 11.

PENSTHOW, par Wales, Mont., 1290 ac. P 110.

PENTECOST (ISLAND), one of the Cumberland Islands, off N.E. coast Australia lat. 20° 23' 10" S. lon. 145° 55' 30" E. It rises abruptly from the sea to the height of 1140 ft.

PENTELE (Dana-) a vill Hungary, Thither Danube, co. and about 85 m. N. Stuhlweisensburg, near the Danube, with a church. Remains of Roman antiquities have been found here, supposed to have belonged to the ancient city of Alantaria. Pop. 2193.

PENTELICUS a mountain, Greece, forming the E. extremity of the Hellesus chain, 16 m. N. E. Athens and a little W of the Bay of Marathon, celebrated for its quarries of white marble, which furnished the materials of some of the finest structures of the capital and are still worked to a limited extent. Height, 8600 ft.

PENTENISIA, a group of islets, Greece, in the Gulf, and about 7 m. W N. W. of the island of Egina.

PENTERY, par Eng. Monmouth 478 ac. Pop. 94.

PENTIMA a m. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Ulteriore II dist. and 6 m. N. W. Sulmona. It occupies the site of the ancient Corfinum famous for the war which the inhabitants maintained against the Romans. It contains two churches. P 1800.

PENTLAND FIRTH, a channel separating the main land of Scotland from the Orkney Islands. It is about 17 m. long, E. to W., and 6 m. to 8 m. broad. At its E. extremity are the Pentland Skerries, two small islets, and several adjacent rocks, which were formerly the scene of numerous shipwrecks. On the larger of these, about 4½ m. N. by 2 m. from Dunburgh Head, is a lighthouse, with two fixed lights 100 ft. apart—the one 170 ft. and the other 100 ft. high lat. 55 41 12 N. lon. 2° 55' 0" W. (s).

PENTLAND HILLS, a range, Scotland, co. Edinburgh, Peebles and Lanark, commencing 4½ m. S. by W. Edinburgh, and extending S.W. for about 16 m. The highest summit, East Carnethy Hill about the centre of the range is 1578 ft. above sea-level.

PENTLOW, par Eng. Essex 1847 ac. Pop. 880.

PENTNEY, par Eng. Essex, 588 ac. Pop. 674.

PENTON two pars Eng. Hants.—1, (Griffen), 1688 ac.

Pop. 412.—2 (Mansel), 1044 ac. Pop. 310.

PENTREVOELAS, par Wales, Denb., 8144 ac. P 561.

PENTRICH, par Eng. Derby 8889 ac. Pop. 8557.

PENTRIDGE, par Eng. Dorset, 1764 ac. Pop. 256.

PENTRYCH, par Wales, Glamorgan, 8975 ac. P 1569.

PENWORTHAM a vill and par England, co. Lancaster on the North Union Railway, which has here a magnificent viaduct over the Ribbles consisting of five arches, each 190 ft. span, about 1 m. S. W. Preston. It is an ancient church, on a height overlooking the valley of the Ribbles a Wesleyan chapel, a free grammar-school, and a charitable endowment. Area of par 11,317 ac. Pop. 5723.

PENYCLAWDD, par Eng. Monmouth 514 ac. P 42.

PENZA, a gov. Russia, bounded N. by gov. Nijon Novgorod, W. Tambov S. Saratov and E. Simbirsk greatest length, E. to W. 170 m. greatest breadth 145 m. area, 12,392 sq. ac. m. As a whole, it is an extensive flat, somewhat monotonous, but occasionally intersected by small hills, which in the S. W. form the water-shed between the basins of the Volga and the Don. To the latter basin only a very small portion of the government, drained by the Khorop and its tributary Vorona, belongs the affluents of the Volga are the Souz, Inzara, Ist. Mekha, Vol, and Vicha. The climate is mild and salubrious, though the winter cold is occasionally severe. The soil is fertile, and well adapted for raising all kinds of grain and roots. Hemp and flax are extensively, tobacco and hops occasionally grown. The principal fruits are apples, pears, and cherries. The forests are extensive and consist chiefly of birch, oak, larch, and alder. Considerable attention is paid to the rearing of cattle, particularly horses, of which several good breeding studs are kept. The rearing of bees is so general as to form one of the most important branches of rural economy. All kinds of game abound, but fish are very scarce. The principal mineral is iron, of which valuable mines are worked in the neighbourhood of Trillick. Millstones are quarried extensively. The manufactures are chiefly confined to the cottages of the peasantry where great quantities of flax and wool are spun, and coarse stuffs woven; but there are several blast-furnaces and other iron-works, saw-mills, glass-works, sugar-refineries, and above all distilleries, which are both numerous and on a large scale. The chief exports are corn, flour, tallow, leather, soap, wax, honey, pomace, wool, and timber. Education, nominally under the superintendence of the university of Kasan, is miserably neglected; and the only printing press in the government belongs to the crown. Pop. (1880) 119,000.

PENZA, a tu. Russia, cap. above gov., on a height near the junction of the Pensa and Sura, 510 m. S.E.E. Nijni Novgorod. It is mainly built of wood, with the exception of the cathedral, which is of stone. Besides the cathedral, there are 11 parish churches. The principal manufactures are leather and soap, and in these a considerable trade is carried on. Penza is the residence of the governor the see of a bishop conjoint with Saratov, and possesses several courts of justice, a theological seminary, and gymnasium. P. 13,000.

PENZANCE, a municipal bor., seaport, and rapidly improving market in England, co. Cornwall, on N.W. side Mount's Bay 24 m. S.W. Truro lat 50° 7' 0" N. lon 5° 31' 30" W. (n.) The situation of the town is exceedingly picturesque, standing on a beautiful shore finely carved and surrounded by rocky eminences. It has two churches, both of which are fine buildings. Baptist, Independent, Bible Christian, E. Catholic, and three Methodist chapels, an elegant town hall, market-house, custom-house, and post the last 800 ft. in length with a light house at the extremity. Penzance is the head-quarters of the Royal Geological Society of Cornwall, which has a splendid collection of minerals. It has a natural history and anti quarian society a mechanics institution, a public library a grammar, and numerous other schools, and several benevolent societies. The trade of the town is considerable tin and copper which abound in the vicinity are exported in large quantities as are also china clay and pilchards. The imports consist chiefly of timber, iron, hemp, tallow, hides, &c. The fishery in pilchards and other fish is carried on with great activity. Tin-smelting, tanning, and manufactures in serpentine, are carried on. The climate is mild and the winters abound in beautiful scenery. Lord Exmouth and Sir H. Dary were born here. On June 23 St. John's or Miscommar's Eve, and on June 28 or St. Peter's Eve, at dark, ten-barrels are placed along the centre of the principal streets, about 100 ft. apart these are simultaneously set fire to, and the space on either side is traversed by boys and girls with long ten-torches, which are lighted and swung round the head. This seems to be a relic of the ancient sun worship. Pop. 9214.

PENZING, a tu. Lower Austria, 1 bank Vienna W. Vienna with a number of fine villas belonging to outcasts of Vienna, a parish church, a military barracks, and a bathing establishment and two cotton and silk print-factories. P. 4185.

PENZLIN, a tu. Mecklenburg Schwerin 41 m. S.E.E. Güstrow. It has a market place, a church manufactures of vinegar, and earthenware, and a trade in tobacco. P. 2063.

PEORLETON, par Eng. Worcester, 1474 ac. P. 286.

PEORIA, a vil U. States, Illinois, r bank Illinois River 68 m. N. Springfield with six churches, an academy four schools, a courthouse, and a jail saw-mills, a tannery, a brewery, and two printing-offices. Pop. 1467. — PEORIA LAKE an expansion of the Illinois, extends about 20 m. N. by E. from the village.

PEPER-HANDY par Eng. Surrey 1454 ac. P. 193.

PEPPARDTOWN, par Ire. Tipperary 4779 ac. Pop. 900.

PEPPERELL, a vil and township, U. States Massachusetts, 88 m. N. W. Boston, with two churches, an academy and eight schools paper manufactures, and several grist and saw mills. Pop. 1571.

PEPE, a suburb of Constantinople, occupying the summit of the promontory bearing its name, on the opposite or N. shore of the Golden Horn, and immediately above and beyond Galata. From its elevated and beautiful situation, it is a favorite place of residence with the European inhabitants, and with the merchants generally, who have their places of business in Galata. It is the head-quarters of diplomacy and the residence of the Dragomans. Some of the foreign ambassadors also had palaces here, but were driven from it by a great fire which occurred in August 1831, and by which their residences were destroyed. To calamities of this kind Pera is singularly subject. In 1849, 200 houses, and 50 shops were consumed in the richest and most populous quarter of the town, inhabited exclusively by Europeans, and on the following day 600 more buildings were destroyed in what is called the Christian quarter. Between 1841 and 1848, there were 18,750 houses consumed by fire, accompanied by an immense loss of property.

PERAK, a territory or kingdom, occupying a considerable part of the W. of the Malay peninsula, having Koda N. Kelangore S., the Straits of Malacca W. and the central range which traverses the peninsula longitudinally on the E. It is partly mountainous, but has also rich and beautiful plains, with an alluvial soil. It possesses rich veins of tin, and gold is washed from many of its streams. Pop. exclusive of unknown tribes in central region, estimated at 35,000.

PERAK, a river, peninsula of Malacca. It rises in a mountain range in the S. of above territory flows W. S. W., and falls into the Strait of Malacca. total course, 80 m.

PERALADA, a vil. Spain Catalonia prov and 24 m. N.E. Gerona, 1 bank Llobregat with a school an ancient castle, a palace of the counts of Peralada, and a church. P. 1295.

PERALEDA DE LA MATA, a tu. Spain, Extremadura, prov and 58 m. N.E. Caserte, with a courthouse, prison, two schools, a church manufactures of coarse grey cloth three oil three water and four flour mills, and some trade in sheep and hogs. Pop. 8500.

PERALTA, a tu. Spain prov Navarra, 23 m. S. Pamplona, on the Arga. It has spacious and well-kept gardens, three squares, a courthouse, two primary schools a church, a flour and several oil mills. Pop. (agricultural) 3304.

PERANZANES, a vil. Spain, prov and about 70 m. from Leon with a church, courthouse, and prison, a flour-mill and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1887.

PERASTO, a tu. Anetusa Dalmatia, 6 m. N.W. Catro, on the Gulf of Cattaro with three churches, and a dale guarded castle inhabitants generally peaceful, and in very indifferent circumstances. Pop. 1900.

PERAWA, a small tu. Hindostan, prov Malwa lat 24 10' N. lon 75 5' E. irregular and mostly built.

PERAY (St.) a tu. France, dep. Ardèche, 8 m. S. Tournon in a valley noted for the richness of its wines. P. 1678.

PERBETE, a vil. Hungary, Thither Danub, co and 14 m. N. Komorn, with two churches, and some trade in cattle, wood, and wine. Pop. 1581.

PERCHIE (La) (Latin, Cenones-Persick) a dependency of san prov. Manza, now included in dep. Savile, rne, E. and S. of the Vol. and E. of the capital was Montevideo.

PERCK, a vil and com. Belgium, prov Brabant, 9 m. N.E. Brussels with breweries, a flour mill and famous nurseries. Pop. 1069.

PERUT ISI AND 6 m. in group, N.E. coast Australia, Northumberland group lat. 21 81' S. lon 160° 18' E. (n.) The largest is about 12 m. or 14 m. in circumference. It consists of a series of hills running in ridges many of them covered with gum-tree scrub and all with long grass growing in flats. A species of pine, and a few salubrious palm groves on the island. The birds include black and white cockatoo, swamp pheasant, and crowns. Turtles frequent the shores.

—(Voyage of the Endeavour)

PERDJANSK a seaport in Russia, gov. Ekaterinopol on the Sea of Azov, between Mariupol and Taganrog. It is of recent origin, but having a good harbour, has increased rapidly and carries on a considerable trade chiefly in wheat and fine wool. Pop. about 2500.

PEREDRA, a vil. Hungary a river Danube, co. Presburg 12 m. from Tyrnau, on the Helleg. A good deal of pastel or wool is grown in the district. Pop. 1893.

PEREIRA, two places Portugal prov Dorro — 1 A tu, and par 6 m. W. Coimbra. Pop. 1690 — 2, (junior) A tu and par 30 m. S.E. Oporto. Pop. 928.

PERLKOP or On Kari (anc. Zepkree) a tu. Russia, gov. Taurida, 86 m. N. K. W. Simferopol, on the isthmus of Perakop. It has strong fortifications of wood, with a kind of castle built of stone, and contains a Greek church and mosque. Its site is very unhealthy, and malarial fevers are common. The chief trade is in salt, of which immense quantities are annually sent into S. Russia. There are several large fairs frequented particularly by Nogai Tartars. — The frontier, about 20 m. long by not more than 4 m. wide where narrowest, connects the peninsula of the Crimea with the mainland, and separates the Sea of Azov from the Black Sea, having the Gulf of Sivash in the former sea on the E., and the Gulf of Perakop in the latter sea on the W.

PERELLIA, a vil. Spain, Catalonia, prov and 80 m. S.W. Tortosa, in a valley with a courthouse, church, two primary schools, and four oil-mills. Perello is strongly situated, and in the inscription of 1640, made a vigorous resistance to the Catholic army under Vaudemont. Pop. 1144.

PERBAY, or PERBAY, v. Hungary, Hither Thule, co. Abasjar 12 m. from Kassa; with two churches. P. 1097

PERESLAV-KALAZH, or PERESLAV-KALAZH, a tn. Russia, gov. and 75 m. N W Vladimir, E shore of Lake Pleskovo. Its eastern ramparts have been converted into a promenade, and has a cathedral, numerous churches, three monasteries, a cannery, manufacture of linen and an active trade with St. Petersburg. Pop. 7000.

PERESLAVI, a tn. Russia, gov. and 150 m. W N W Poltava, at the junction of the Alta and Truboch. It is surrounded by an earthen wall, and defended by a dilapidated fortress, and is very indifferently built. It has a cathedral, and nine other churches, a monastery, a school, manufacture of brandy and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 7000.

PERGAMON, a tn. Turkey in Asia. See BASSANO.

PERGE, a ruined city, Asiatic Turkey about 50 m. E. S. E. Smyrna. Its site, between two hills washed by the Cestrus, and backed by the mountains of Taurus, is extremely beautiful, and the remains include a palace of vast extent, a theatre, about 330 ft. wide, with its seats for the most part entire, and a stadium almost perfect, but now used as a place for running camels.

PERGINE, a tn. Austria, Tyrol circle and 7 m. E. S. E. Trento. It is well built, has two churches, a castle, hospital, and Capuchin monastery. Pop. 3695.

PERGOLO, a tn. Italy, the Marches, deleg. Urbino a Pesaro, on the Cosmo. 16 m. S. E. Urbino with manufactures of cloth and tinners. Pop. 8000.

PERGUSA, a small lake, Sicily, prov. Caltanissetta, N. of Piazza. From the banks of this lake, according to fable, Proserpine, while gathering flowers was carried off by Pluto.

PERIAMUS, or PERIAMUS (Latin, Periamus) a vil. Hungary, Thither Thule, co. Torontal, on the Maros with a church and some trade in corn, wine and wool. Pop. 3445.

PERIANA a vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 30 m. from Malaga with a courthouse, an endowed school, a church, an oratory and three fountains. Pop. (agricultural) 2278.

PERIAPATAM, a tn. (Indoosian) prov. Myora, 37 m. W Sarumpatam lat. 12° 22' N lon. 76° 11' E with ruined fortifications.

PERIBONACA or PERIBONCA a river Lower Canada, flows S. W. W., and falls into N. shore Lake St. John.

PERIERA, a tn. France, dep. Moselle, 10 m. N by E Contancourt with a considerable trade in clover-seed. P. 3032.

PERIGORD (La) (Latin, Petro corvina Agri), an anc. prov. France, which now forms dep. Dordogne. Periguenx was its capital.

PERIGULUX (Latin, Perigulux) a tn. France, cap. dep. Dordogne, on a slope forming a bank L. Isle, here crossed by a fine bridge, 66 m. E. N. E. Bordeaux. Its internal appearance is far from prepossessing, and in some respects it is a dull dirty place. The exterior is bordered by several green alleys, and there are good promenades, adorned by brown statues of Fœnion and Mœnigau. The principal edifices are the cathedral, a Pyrenean structure in the form of a Greek cross, with a tower 127 ft. high, and five cupolas surmounting the four squares formed by the arms of the cross, and a larger square in the centre the public library containing 16,000 volumes the prefecture, a handsome modern edifice, the palace-du-judice, hospital barracks, theatre museum &c. Periguenx is the see of a bishop, and possesses a court of first resort and commerce, an agricultural society and communal college. It has manufactures of bombazine, serge, hosiery fine lace, cutlery and sells also marble-works, a wrought-iron mill, distilleries, and manufactures of leather and a trade in flour, brandy, salt, leather, iron, wool, cattle, poultry, and particularly a kind of partridge and truffle pie, extensively exported, and well known by the name of pâté de Periguenx. It was one of the eight towns needed to the Protestants, for security, by the peace of 1563. Pop. (1852), 11,970.

PERILJA a tn. Venezuela, dep. Zaba, prov. and 83 m. N. W. Maracaybo 1 bank Paria, 30 m. above its mouth, in Lake Maracaybo. Pop. 8000.

PERIM or PERIM an isl. Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb, about 4 m. off the coast of Yemen in Arabia; length, 6 m.

PERINALDO (Padre Rosalia) a vil. France, dep. Alpes-Maritimes 26 m. S. E. N. E. Nice, with a beautiful church, and a monastery; a trade in wine and oil, both of first-rate quality. Pop. 1660.

PERINEOS, or PERINEOS, a mountain range, Brazil prov. Goyas. It contains the loftiest summits in the prov., part of which it traverses E. to W. nearly in lat. 16° S., and forming a kind of centre to the great Cordillera of Brazil, sends out numerous branches in different directions. It furnishes the sources of various rivers, some of which flow N. to the Tocantins, and others S. into the basin of the Parana.

PERIVALK, par Eng. Middlesex 686 ac. Pop. 23

PERKATA (Nagr) a vil. Hungary, Thither Danube, co. Stuhlweissenburg, 4 m. from Adony with a church, a castle and a trade in corn, cattle, and wine. Pop. 2464.

PERIAK, or PERIAK, a market to Hungary Thither Danube, co. Zala, 16 m. N. W. Koprivnica; with a church. Here it is a good deal of silk is produced. Pop. 2570.

PERILAVAROS, a vil. Hungary Banat, dist. Temesvar and 36 m. E. Peterwardein, with a R. Catholic, and three Greek churches. Pop. 2674.

PERLEBERG a town in Prussia, gov. Potsdam, 73 m. N. W. Berlin on the Stupenitz. It has a Protestant church and chapel several courts and public offices and manufactures of woollens and chimney. Pop. 6143.

PERLEPE, a to of about 500 houses, Turkey in Europe Macedonia, 21 m. N. E. Monastir, on the Kumbur.

PERM, an E. gov. Russia, bounded, N. by Volga and Tobolsk, E. Tobolsk, S. Orenburg, W. Yaskai, and N. W. Volga, lat. 56° 18' to 61° 55' lon. 58° 50' to 64° E. greatest length N. W. to S. E. 620 m. breadth, about 400 m. area, 90,000 sq. m. This government being traversed N. to S. by the Ural chain is divided into two unequal portions, a W. and an E. the former, of course, in Europe, and the latter in Asia. The Asiatic portion, the less of the two belongs to the basin of the Arctic Ocean which receives its waters through tributaries of the Obi. Of these, the most important are the Shura, Zobra, Tura, Neira, Irkutsk and Jack. In the S. it contains several lakes, of which the largest is the Maysa. The European portion belongs to the basin of the Caspian, with exception of a small portion in the N. W., drained by the Petchora, and of course belonging, like the E. portion, to the Arctic Ocean. By far the most important river in the European portion is the Kama, which, entering the government on the N. W. proceeds through it in a very circuitous direction receiving numerous tributaries on either bank. Of these, the largest are the Yshera, Kosa, Koria, Olva, and Tschudra, with its affluent Sitta. From the principal Ural chain the surface descends in a succession of parallel terraces. On the lowest summits snow and ice continue for nine months in the year, and hence the climate, naturally rigorous, from its high latitude and inland position, has its rigour greatly increased. Beyond the 60th degree, regular culture becomes impossible, and the far greater part of the surface is occupied by forests and marshes. Extensive forests also stretch far into the S. and the soil being generally not very fertile, large tracts remain uncultured. The government is rich in minerals, and possesses extensive mineral tracts, on which vast numbers of the inhabitants are employed in collecting gold and also apparently inexhaustible beds both of iron and salt. The vast quantities of fuel required in order to work these extensively and to advantage give a great additional value to the timber of the forest and make the surface covered by it of far greater value than it could be in any other form. Game, both large and small, is common in the forests, and many of the inhabitants gain a livelihood by hunting fish, including bothurgeon and salmon, abound in the rivers. With exception of several branches of industry immediately connected with the mines, there are few manufactures. The chief are soap, leather, tallow-candles, potash, and glass. The trade derives great facilities from the Kama and other navigable streams, and has acquired some importance. The principal articles are metals, marble, wool, salt, fur, tallow and tar. Nearly three-fourths of the inhabitants are Russians, and belong to the Greek church, the rest consist of Tartars, Tcheremissians, Bashkirs, &c. and though many of them have nominally embraced Christianity, not a few are Mahomedans, and among others different forms of paganism are said to prevail. The governments of Perm and Ufa are under one military governor. Some assertions have been made to extend education, but the number of scholars to the population is only 1 in 294. For administrative purposes, Perm is divided into 12 circles. Pop. (1850) 1,676,560

PERM, a to Russia, esp. above gov. r bank Kama, at the confluence of the Jazguchlo 950 m. E. by S. St. Petersburg. It is built with considerable regularity in straight and spacious streets, and has two churches, several other public edifices, surrounded by a park, a gymnasium, theological seminary, a civil and a military hospital, extensive copper and iron smelting and refining works and a considerable trade with the island districts. Pop. (1851) 13,362

PERNAQUA or PARANANHA, a to Brazil prov. Piahi E. side of a large lake, 250 m. S.E.W. Oeiras. It is the residence of a justice of the peace, and has an elegant church built of stone. Near it the best tobacco in Brazil is grown and in it, as well as in horses and mules, there is a considerable trade. Pop. dist. 4000

PERNAMBUCO, a maritime prov. Brazil bounded N by Ceará and Paraíba, E. the Atlantic, S.E. prov. Alagoas, S. Sergipe d'El Rey, Bahia, and Minas-Geraes, W. Goias, and N.W. Piahi, area, 109,896 sq. m. It is of very irregular shape, forming a long and comparatively narrow, tract, curving round N.E. to S.W. becoming very much contracted towards its centre, from which it gradually bulges out on either side, so as to have a considerable width at both extremities. The coastline, forming the whole of its E. boundary has an extent of about 120 m., lat. 7° 35' to 8° 50' S. It is low and uninteresting, lined towards the sea by long and dangerous coral-reefs, and towards the interior generally well covered with wood. The country beyond gradually rises, and ultimately becomes mountainous being traversed by several chains, of which the Calceis in the N, the Piahi and Tabatinga in the W and S.W. are the loftiest and most extensive. The far greater part of the province belongs to the basin of the São-Francisco, which forms its boundary on the E and S for many hundred miles, and drains it both directly and by numerous streams, of which the most important are the Corrientes and Grande. In the N.E. another basin of much less extent is formed and sends its waters directly to the sea by the Capibaribe, Ipojuca, and various other streams. The climate is hot and moist, and the soil generally fertile. The principal cultivated crops are the sugar-cane and cotton, the latter extensively exported to Europe. The forests, which cover almost all the mountainous parts of the province as well as much of the lower ground, yield inexhaustible supplies of timber, both for ship-building, carpentry and ornamental purposes. Dry-woods also of superior quality and trees which distil balsams, gums, and resins of the most valuable descriptions, abound. Some gold is found, and excellent quarries of marble might be opened in several districts. Manufactures, of marble so called do not exist; but great numbers of the inhabitants are employed in the sugar-works and distilleries. The extensive export of sugar, rum, and cotton, naturally leads to a corresponding extensive import, chiefly from Britain and the U. States. The provincial assembly consists of 13 deputies to the general legislative assembly, and appoints six senators. P. 500,000.

PERNAMBUCO, or PERANCA, a to Brazil, esp. above prov., on the most eastern part of S. America, at the mouth of the Capibaribe lat. (Fort Fleck) 8° 58' S., lon. 84° 51' 45' W. (a). It consists of three distinct parts or parishes—Riadis proper, or São-Felipe-Gonzalez, occupying a sandy and somewhat elevated peninsula, which stretches along the shore, and is separated from the mainland on the W by the Biberibe. Santissimo-Baeramento, occupying the Isle of Santo-Antonio, between the peninsula and the mainland, with the former of which it is connected by a stone and with the latter by a wooden bridge, while two others are twined by the Biberibe and Camaribe, previous to their junction; and São-Vieira or Sacramento, situated on the mainland W of the other two parts, on uneven ground, and built in the form of an amphitheatre. Riadis proper, the principal seat of business, is composed of brick houses, generally of three, com-monies of four and even five stories, but the streets, though paved, are narrow. The houses of Santo-Antonio are well built, but not so regularly as those of Riadis. Its streets, however are wider but unpaved, have side-walks, and are lined with the principal shops. São-Vieira is the most modern quarter and has the greatest number of showy buildings, but the streets are irregularly formed, and the houses want uniformity. The whole three divisions are extremely dirty; and though surrounded with water are deficient in drainage. Good drinking-water can only be obtained by bringing it in barrels from a cascade of the Biberibe, near Olinda. The harbour consisting of a natural basin lies within a line of reefs, which form a kind of breakwater, though the sea in high storms throws its surges partly over it, and dashes in with great fury through certain openings in it. It has from 16 ft. to 50 ft. of water, but the best-sheltered part has from only 40 ft. to 12 ft. It is defended by several forts, and provided with a lighthouse, visible about 12 m. off. The principal buildings are the old Jesuit college, now occupied by the governor's palace, the provincial legislature, and several public offices, a large pile, of gloomy appearance, with walls of enormous thickness two parish churches, several convents provided with churches, the episcopal palace, general and orphan hospital, a lyceum, in which English, French Latin, rhetoric, and philosophy are taught; various primary schools, and an hospital. The trade which is of great extent, consists in raw sugar, timber both for ordinary and ornamental purposes, dyewoods and above all cotton of superior quality. The chief imports are cotton and linen tissues, hardware and earthenware. Pop. in, 12,000 dist., 88,000

PERNAU, or PERANOW, a to Russia, gov. Livonia, at the mouth of the Pernau, in the N.E. corner of the Gulf of Riga, 102 m. N.N.E. Riga. It is defended by a castle has a Greek and two Lutheran churches, a superior and four elementary schools. A harbour which though too shallow to admit large vessels, enables it to carry on a considerable trade in flax, hemp, corn, linseed, hemp-seed, wood, and leather. Owing to the lowness of its site, prevailing winds from the S.W. expose it to dangerous inundations. Pop. (1849), 5740

PERNES [acc. Paterne] a to France, dep. Vendée 4 m. S. Carpentras, l. bank Neque, with manufactures of silk, brandy, and wine. Pop. 2613

PERNIE, a vil. Holland, prov. S. Holland on the Merwede 18 m. W.N.W. Dordrecht with a church and a harbour; inhabitants partly engaged in fishing and partly in flax culture. Pop. 1485

PERONNE [ant. Perovna Peromacourus] a to France, dep. Somme, 32 m. E. by N. Amiens, r. bank Somme, on the slope of a hill, surrounded by extensive marshes, strongly fortified, and commanded by a castle, now ruinous. Its principal public buildings are the church of St. John, a town-hall, communal college, hospital, theatre, convent, and convent bell-tower. It has manufactures of woollen fabrics, combed, laces, leather, sugar oil, brandy, and spirits; and a trade in grain, wool, and brandy. Perouse was formerly a town of considerable importance, and from its never having been taken, obtained the name of La Pucelle [The Virgin]. The early kings of France had a palace here, and several of them are interred in the church. Attached to the castle is an ancient tower, Tour Herbert, wherein Charles-le-Simple died in confinement, and Louis XI. was detained by Charles-the-Bold, till he signed a disadvantageous treaty called The peace of Perouse. Pop. 9540.

SELYET AND MARKET-PLACE PERONNE.
From Recherches de Taylor. Viergeux 1840. L. Antoine Verrier.

PEROS-BANHOS, a group of six. See CHAGOS.

PEROSA two places, Italy. Piedmont—1, A in div and 25 sq. W. S. W. Turin, 1 mi. bank Chiavone here crossed by stone bridge. It has a church, communal school, and a trade in corn, cattle, and sheep. A great many of the inhabitants are fatuous, and affected with gout. Pop. 1500.—3, A vil and com., div Turin, prov. and about 5 m. S. Ivrea, with a tower and some other remains of ancient castle, and a trade in corn and dairy-produce. Pop. 750.

PEROTE, a tn. Mexico, dep. and 72 m. W. N. W. Vera-Cruz, with a castle, used as a staple prison. Near it is a lofty mountain of same name. Pop. about 7500.

PERFENNAAD a maritime tn. Hindoostan prov. Malabar lat. 11° 8' N., lon. 75° 54' E. with houses mostly of stone, and greatly superior in many respects to those generally to be met with in India.

PERPIGNAN [Latin Perpignanum] a tn. France, dep. Pyrenees-Orientales, partly on a gentle slope, and partly in a wide and fertile plain, on bank Yse, 58 m. S. W. Montpellier. It is surrounded with lofty walls flanked with bastions, and defended by a citadel, occupying a height which completely commands the town. Guarding the entrance from Spain into France by the E. Pyrenees it has been fortified with the greatest care by the most celebrated engineers, and ranks as a fortress of the first class. It is nearly in the form of an oval, the shorter axis of which exceeds 1 m., and the longer 2 m., and is by no means well built. The streets are narrow and almost closed over in many places by the wooden balconies of the houses, which attract less attention by their architectural merit, than by the Moorish form of their structure, and the peculiar physiognomy of their inmates. Almost all the public buildings date from the period of Spanish rule, and are either of brick or rounded pablos. The principal are

PORT NOTRE DAME CASTLE, PERPIGNAN
From Mother of Taylor's Voyages des E. Indes, France.

Go. cathedral, founded in 1524, the church of St. Jean Le Vieux, of much more ancient date; the church of St. Paul, the library, containing 13,000 volumes; university, palace-de-justice, hotel de ville, college, hospital of St. John, prison, mint, and arsenal occupying an old Carmelite convent. It is the see of a bishop, has a court of first resort and com. mercio, communal college, diocesan seminary society of agriculture arts, and commoners' university, and botanical garden; manufactures of broad-cloth and other woollen stuffs, playing cards, candles, chocolate, and whip handles, leather and brandy; and a trade in wine, brandy, white honey, fine wood, oil, iron, silk, cork and some other products of the S. It was the capital of the former province of Roussillon, and was not united to the French crown till the treaty of the Pyrenees in 1659. After the lapse of nearly two centuries, it still bears strong indications of its having long been under Spanish dominion. Pop. (1852), 17,612.

PERRAINDA, a large tn. Hindoostan prov. Arrangabad 70 m. S. E. Ahmednagar lat. 18° 16' N. lon. 75° 54' E.

PERRANARWOTHA, par. Eng. Cornwall 1796 sq. Pop. 1624.

PERRANUTHNOE, par. Eng. Cornwall 1182 sq. Pop. 1229.

PERRANZABULOS, or PERRAN-IN-DE-SAND a vil and par. England, on Cornwall on the Bristol Channel, with a small harbor 7 m. W. N. W. St. Michael. It consists chiefly of detached cottages, inhabited by miners, and has two churches, a Wesleyan chapel, extensive mines of tin, copper, lead, and zinc, and a plebeian fishery Area 1140 sq. Pop. 3114.

PERROT two par. England—1, (North), Somerset, 1248 sq. Pop. 299.—2, (South) Dorset; 1451 sq. P. 874.

PERROT an isl. Lower Canada, in the St. Lawrence, S. W. of the isl. of Montreal between the Lake of the Two Mountains and the Lake of St. Louis. It is about 7 m. long N. W. to S. E., and contains several villages.

PERRYBURG, a vil U. States, Ohio at the head of steam-boat navigation on the Maumee, 117 m. N. N. W. Columbus with three churches, a courthouse, a jail, and manufactures of various kinds. Pop. 1053.

PERRANTE, a river. France, which issues from a lake near Nyon, prov. Poissin, flows easterly N. W. past Belgard and Corbe, and falls into the Balise a little below Colberg total course, 50 m.

PERSBERG, a vil. Sweden, lin. Carlsbad, 5 m. N. W. Philipstad. It is celebrated for its iron-mines, about 12 in number, which have long been worked, and to a great depth in a hill, which appears to be almost one mass of ore.

PERSEPOLIS (Persian Ishtak) an ancient Persia, prov. Farsistan long the cap. of the Persian monarchy in a beautiful plain near the Araxes, 82 m. N. N. E. Shiraz. Its early history is lost in obscurity but it had long been one of the most important cities of the East and had reached its highest splendour when it was taken and destroyed by Alexander the Great; according to some in a drunken frolic, and according to others as a just retaliation for the devastation which the Persians had committed in Greece. The ruins still lie scattered over a large surface, but the only one which particularly attracts attention is an immense pile of buildings supposed to have been the palace of Darius which Alexander burned. It occupies a platform 1450 ft. long, by 802 ft. wide, is approached by flights of steps cut in the rock, and exhibits vast portals, one of them formed by two enormous sphinxes, pillars walls, and staircases, adorned with elaborate sculptures, and base-reliefs, and covered over with various cuneiform inscriptions.

PERSERIM, Turkey in Europe. See PHERRIN.

PERSHORE, a market tn. England, co. and 9 m. S. S. E. Worcester 4 m. bank Avon. It has two churches, of which that of the Holy Cross occupies a portion of the old abbey of Pershore, and is a noble structure, a Baptist chapel, national schools for boys and girls, and a mechanics' institute. The chief trade is wool-stapling, thrashing-machines are manufactured to a considerable extent. Immense quantities of fruit and vegetables are raised in the vicinity for the markets of Manchester, Birmingham, and other large manufacturing towns. Pop. 2717.

PERSHORE, two par. Eng. Worcester—1, (St. Andrew) 9260 sq. P. 2356.—2, (Holy Cross), 2580 sq. P. 2028.

PERSIA (Arabic and Persian, Dun, French Pers, German, Perien), a kingdom of W Asia, lat. 35° 40' to 33° 50' N, lon. 44° 30' to 51° 30' E; bounded, N by Russia, the Caspian Sea, and Independent Turkey, E by Afghanistan, S.E. Baluchistan, S. the Indian Ocean, Strait of Ormuz, and the Persian Gulf and W Anatolia Turkey; greatest length, N.W. to S.E. 1150 m., greatest breadth, E.W. to S.W. 850 m. It is divided into the provinces of Aserbaïjan, Gilan, Mazandaran, Attra, Laristan, Azerbaïjan, Kermanshah, Irak-Ajemi, Khorasan, Fars, Luristan, Kerman, and Lorestan; total area, 368,846 sq. m. Pop. about 8,000,000. Principal towns, Tabriz, the capital, Isfahan, Tehran, Astrabad, Balfooch, Kermanshah, Kerman, Hamadan, Bushahr, &c.

General Features.—Persia belongs to the vast and elevated table-land, which, commencing in the W, on the E frontier of Anatolia Turkey, stretches E without interruption into Afghanistan and thence to the borders of India. The W part of this table-land forms the far lower portion of the Persian dominions. To the E, where it is only politically separated from Afghanistan, it does not possess any natural boundaries; but has its limits in other directions well defined by lofty mountain ranges, which descend, with more or less rapidity on the N towards the Caspian, on the W towards the plains of the Tigris and Euphrates, and on the S towards the Persian Gulf. Persia may thus be described, in general terms, as consisting of an extensive central plateau, occupying at least three-fourths of the whole surface—a series of mountain chains bordering the plateau on all sides except the E, and an outer border of more or less width, consisting for the most part of gentle slopes, low valleys, and level plains. The E part of the plateau forms the great deserts of Khorasan and Kerman, and is one of the most desolate regions of the globe (see KHORASAN and KERMAN). Towards the W the plateau improves in appearance. Saline incrustations are there of less frequent occurrence, the quality of the soil improves, and the surface, being both more diversified and more broken by lofty heights, obtains more moisture, and can be successfully cultivated. This indeed, holds true generally, in regard to the interior edges of the plateau, where the mountain ranges begin to rise, tracts of considerable fertility extending along their bases, and to some distance up their slopes, but it is only on the outer edges of these slopes, and downwards towards the plains that a rich varied and magnificent vegetation is found. This, however, does not apply to the S. mountains, which, approaching close to the Persian Gulf, leave only a narrow tract, with a S. exposure, and so extremely hot, as not only to wither up the plants but to be scarcely fit for human habitation, and applies only in part to the plains of the W, where moisture is often in excess and forms extensive swamps, from which pestilential vapours arise, but holds particularly true of the valleys and plains which have a N exposure, and slope towards the Caspian.

Mountains.—These have already been referred to as forming the lofty barriers which enclose the central plateau. The N chain, commencing far E, at the Hindu Kush, by which it becomes linked to the Himalayas, traverses Afghanistan, and enters Persia on its E frontier near lat. 61° N, W of the town of Herat. Here it forms a mountain region, in some parts 200 m. wide, though in general much narrower, and, under the name of the Mountains of Khorasan, proceeds across the N of the province of that name first in a W N W and then in a W S W direction. While pursuing the former direction, the height nowhere exceeds 4500 ft., but in the latter, as the Caspian is approached, a much greater elevation is attained. The chain now takes the name of the Elburz Mountains, entering provs. Irak Ajemi and Mazandaran on the E, and shortly after, on the borders of these two provinces, attains, in Mount Dufarud, the height of 14,600 ft. From this point, which is the culminating point of the range, and exhibits on its declivities unambiguous signs of volcanic formation, the Elburz stretches W N W in three separate ranges, well maintaining an elevation so lofty, that several of its ridges continue covered with snow till the beginning of June. The Elburz chain, while many consider as terminating nearly opposite to the S W corner of the Caspian in the snowy M. Masala mountains, and then by Mount Sevalian, which, attaining the height of 12,000 ft., throws out numerous ramifications, by which it becomes linked with the mountains of Ararat. Thence, which, in the celebrated mountain of same name, directed, as a common property, on the borders of Russia, Persia, and Turkey, possess the loftiest summit of W Asia, form the common link by which the N and the W ranges of Persia are united. The latter commencing in the N.W., in the mountains of Koordistan, is continued E. in a broad and elevated belt, till it reaches lat. 34° N; then it changes its direction to S.E., and, under the names of the Mountains of Laristan, Awa Bakhtiari, and Fardis, spreads out and forms several separate ranges. One of these, proceeding E. between provs. Fars and Laristan, and across prov. Kerman, forms the S. range almost referred to, as separating the great plateau from the shores of the Persian Gulf. It is more remarkable for its length and width than for its elevation which, apparently never rises above 5000 ft. higher than the plateau forming its base.

Rivers and Lakes.—Considering the extent of Persia, its rivers are both few in number and insignificant. Not one of them is of any considerable importance, except the Euphrates; and even it cannot well be called a Persian river, as it only waters a small portion of the S.W. frontier. Its important tributary the Kerah (which see) however has its whole course in Persia. The Karoon rising to the W of the Kerah, pursues a course nearly parallel to it and, after receiving several considerable affluents, falls into the N.W. extremity of the Persian Gulf, from that point E. though extending for several hundred miles, and forming the only basis for the S. drainage of Persia, does not receive a single stream deserving of notice. Throughout the central plateau, the total absence of running water is still more apparent. From the S. slopes of the mountain ranges, which rise from its N. edge, much water, partly the produce of perpetual snow, necessarily descends in numerous streams which soon reach the borders of parched and sandy deserts and are immediately absorbed. The N slopes are so near the basin of the Caspian, to which they all belong, that the water which they supply though often in such excess as inundate the plains below, has too short a course to allow it to accumulate into rivers. The principal exception is furnished by the Kofed Rood or White River which, rising in the mountains of Koordistan, has found, or worn for itself, a channel, generally several hundred, and sometimes 1000 ft. below the general level of the table-land in which the first part of its course is performed, then borrows its way across the mountains of Masala, into a long valley, intersected between two of its ranges, and finally worked its way to the Caspian across the Elburz, at the celebrated Bulgher pass, after a course of about 550 m. Almost all the fresh-water lakes which Persia possesses are situated in prov. Mazandaran. They are numerous, though individually of limited extent. The salt lakes, on the contrary are few in number, but remarkable for their magnitude. The principal are Bakhtiari or Mirza, in the E of prov. Fars and Shiraz or Urmia, in the W of prov. Aserbaïjan. The latter in particular, is 80 m. long by about 25 m. broad. The water is much saltier than that of the coast, and, though generally shallow is safely navigated by vessels of considerable size.

Geology and Minerals.—The geological structure of Persia has not yet been carefully and completely explored. The whole of the interior with very few exceptions, appears to be occupied by strata belonging to the tertiary formation. On the E. a belt of secondary strata stretches N. to S., near the frontiers of Afghanistan and on the W. a similar belt has been traced among the mountains, which form the boundaries of the great plateau. Gneiss and crystalline schists form great part of the mountains which extend from Laristan E. across the S. of Kerman into Baluchistan. The same rocks are more largely developed in the mountain ranges of the N., where, besides forming the nucleus of the principal axis, they cover a considerable width, both on the N. and the S. slopes, and along the base. The only remarkable interruption to the continuity of the gneiss and schists of the N. is in the chain of the Elburz, in which the effects of recent volcanic agency are strongly manifested. The rocks which bound the Elburz plain of Lake Urmia on the W., are also volcanic. The most celebrated of the mineral products of Persia is the turquoise, the most valuable mines of which, producing gems of surpassing beauty, and in considerable quantities, are in the vicinity of Nishapur, to the W of hunted. Among the metals, iron, argentiferous lead, copper and antimony, are said to be abundant, though they have not yet been mined to great extent. Rock-salt may be obtained in unlimited quantities in almost every quarter, and sulphur is dug almost solely from the crumbling cone of Mount Dzumdar. Naphtha is found in many places; a celebrated gum or bitumen, called masi, is collected in Fars; and not only is marble of the finest quality quarried, but coal also is said to have been discovered in Aserbaïjan.

Climate.—The extremes of heat and cold are most sensibly felt on the central plateau, where the winter is as rigorous as the summer is hot. The dryness of the atmosphere, however, makes the air generally pure, and the sky cloudless. The shores of the Persian Gulf are scorching in summer by a burning heat, and become so unhealthy that all the inhabitants who have the means abandon them, and retire to the adjacent mountains. On the S. side of the N. mountain ranges, snow falls early in November. In such situations, as at Teheran, ice is seen up to the middle of March. Cold winds from the N. prevail in April, and, even during summer, great and sudden changes of temperature are not uncommon. On the S. side of the mountains, in the plains of Gilan and Mazanderan, the climate is like that of tropical regions, in which a dry and a rainy season regularly alternate and vegetation has a luxuriance not often met with in much lower latitudes.

Vegetation, Agriculture, Zoology, &c.—The general barrenness of the interior of Persia, particularly in its E. and S. regions, has already been referred to. The long belt of sandy shores which line the Persian Gulf is nearly as barren as the desert table-land, but is often interspersed with plantations of date-trees, which here find a genial climate and grow to great perfection. Among the mountains of Khuzestan, Bakhtiari, and Luristan, forests of oak and other trees are not uncommon, though in general they are stunted in their growth, and degenerate into a low jungle. The only true forest-land of Persia is the S. side of the lofty ranges which overlook the Caspian. There all the mountain sides are covered with dense and magnificent woods of oak, beech, elm and walnut, intermingled with box-trees, cypresses, and cedars. Along the slopes extensive open glades often occur where the ground becomes covered with a rich herbage, on which numerous herds of cattle, chiefly for the dairy are reared. Lower down, though still at some thousand feet above sea-level, wheat and barley are extensively cultivated. In the level and rich plains below, vegetation of every kind is remarkably luxuriant. The sugar-cane and orange come to perfection, and are common; the pomegranate grows wild, the cotton plant and mulberry are extensively and successfully cultivated, large tracts are occupied by the vine, and orchards, loaded with exquisite fruits—figs, apricots, peach-like plums, cherries, apples, and pears—occur in every quarter. Even the swampy shores of the Caspian are covered with a tall growth of saline plants and reeds, available for building, and many other domestic purposes. In these low plains, the only grain under extensive and regular culture is rice; and the principal auxiliary crops are cotton, madder, sugar, madder and tobacco. An other rice district, of large extent, occurs in Aserbaïjan, where large rice fields, producing rich crops, occupy the greater part of the low lands which surround Lake Urmia. Irrigation is well understood, and extensively practised, and on lands generally of no great fertility good returns are by this means obtained.

In the most pastoral districts, and more especially on the fertile slopes and plains at the foot of the S. side of the Elburz chain, where luxuriant meadows are often seen, considerable attention is paid to the dairy. The stock, however is generally of an inferior description, though black cattle, of great size and beauty, distinguished by the Indian hump, are not uncommon in Mazanderan. Sheep and goats are much more numerous. The former, chiefly of the large-tailed variety, furnish the far greater part of the animal food which is used, and no inconsiderable portion of the clothing; the wool being not only extensive, but often allowed to remain on the skins, which are formed at once into cloaks and jackets. The latter particularly in poor Kerman, yield a wool little inferior to that of Cashmere. The other domestic animals are more, generally of a large and superior description, singularly strong, hardy, and sure-footed, and used, more than any other animal, for transport; horses, much improved by crossing with those of Arabia, and famous for strength, speed, and beauty; and camels. The more remarkable wild animals are the lion, occasionally seen in Persia, and a few other places; leopards, including the cheetah, used for hunting; tiger-cats, lynxes, bears, wild boars, hyenas, wolves, porcupines, eagles or mountain sheep, and less or mountain goats. Birds in numerous flocks are found only in particular spots. Among others are pheasants, frequenting the plains on the S. E. corner of the Caspian; pelicans and bustards along the sandy shores, and often far in the interior of the deserts; blackbirds, thrushes, and other well known songsters, but more especially the bulbul or eastern nightingale. Among destructive fowls the locust is noted for the fearful ravages which it often commits. Fish abound only in the Caspian, and on the shores of the Persian Gulf. At the mouths of the streams which fall into the former valuable sturgeon fisheries are carried on chiefly by Russia. The rivers contain few fish and Urmia, the largest of the lakes, is wholly destitute of them.

Manufactures and Trade.—The manufactures of Persia are more numerous than important, though in a few articles they continue to retain some of the celebrity which they acquired in early times. Among these may be mentioned various kinds of silk goods, as taffetas, velvets, and broadens, made exclusively at Ispahan, Kashan, Astrabad, Yezd, and other places, not only for home consumption, but export, particularly to Turkey and Russia. Carpets and felts in Khuzestan, and many of the central districts of Irak Ajemi. Arabian cloaks, and woollen stuffs, made in Khuzestan, and in large demand in the country as well as Arabia, shawls, in imitation of those of Cashmere, made of the fine wool of the goats of Kerman, the fire-arms of Kermanshah, the sword daggers, and other cutlery of Ispahan, Shiraz, and Meshed; the copperware of Kashan the gold brocades of Ispahan. Coarse woollens and cottons, much made to a very great extent, for the clothing of the poorer classes, have in numerous instances been entirely supplanted by the cheaper and better products of Great Britain and Russia. The internal trade is wholly carried on by caravans. The principal articles imported from the East, are musk, leather, lamb's skins, stags of camels hair, shawls, ambores, oil, glass, hardware, amber, coral, precious stones, saffron, indigo, spices, &c. The exports to the East, are velvets, silk and cotton stuffs, &c. From Ispahan and Yezd articles in gold and silver bronze, brass, copperware, &c. from Kashan musk, lacquered ware, ivory ornaments, dates, lemons, and tobacco from Shiraz, and shawls and some other articles from Kerman. The Caspian and the Persian Gulf furnish many important items. The traffic of the former, carried on chiefly at the ports of Enzeli, Bakufrash, and Astrabad, is almost entirely monopolized by Russian subjects that of the latter formerly carried on chiefly at the port of Gombroon, but now much more at that of Basrah, employs a considerable number of vessels, owned, for the most part, by Armenians, Arab, and Indian traders. By the latter alone, Great Britain imports to some extent, broad cloths, and other woollens, cotton goods, shawls, jewellery, arms, cutlery watches, earthen and glass ware, metals, &c. receive chiefly in return, silk, gall-wax, madder and other dyes. Though Persia has a considerable extent of sea-coast, both along the Caspian and the Persian Gulf, it possesses very few vessels of any description, both its coasting trade and its more distant commerce being almost entirely carried on in foreign bottoms.

Government, People, and Language.—The sovereign of Persia is an absolute and uncontrollable despot. His principal ministers are the Vizier, Azam, or Grand Vizier, and the Amser a Dowlah or lord high treasurer the former commanding the army in the sovereign's absence, and managing all foreign affairs, and the latter superintending the collection of the revenue, and whatever relates to the interior. Both ministers, though the more slaves of their master, are, in regard to all other persons, as absolute as himself. Each province is governed by a Beglarbeg, or Barak, generally a prince of the blood, or high noble who appoints his lieutenants or Hakims, under whom there is a long series of subordinates. For the administration of justice there are two classes of courts, one called Sheriah, which decides according to the Koran, and the other, called Dik, which decides according to customary law. Between the two the chance of justice to the subject is very small. The revenue, chiefly derived from land and poll taxes, import and export duties, tributes from nomadic tribes, etc. has been estimated at from 21,500,000 to 22,000,000. The standing army consists of about 15,000 men, who have received European discipline, but the chief force consists of irregulars, who on emergencies may exceed 200,000 men, a large proportion of them being cavalry, who perform feodatory service. The population, about 8,000,000, contains a considerable mixture of other nationalities, particularly Turan and Arab; but the Persian portion of it is still strongly marked by distinctive features. The stature is generally shorter and the whole frame of a more slender make than the European standard. The complexion is fair but the hair, long and straight except on the beard, which is bushy is almost invariably jet black. Their intellectual qualities are naturally of a high order and enabled them, at a very early period, to take a lead in civilization, but their moral qualities are very defective. Under the most plausible exterior, they often conceal the deepest cunning, falsehood, and deceit. This remark, however, applies more especially to the fixed population, for among the nomadic tribes, the opposite virtues are by no means uncommon. The elaborated fire-worship of the ancient Persians has still some followers, particularly in the S. provinces of Farsistan and Kerman; but Mahometanism is the established religion and is followed by the great body of the people. Polygamy, of course, is both authorized and encouraged, and all the vices which it engenders are everywhere displayed. Persian forms one of the principal branches of the great family of Indo-European languages. It is remarkable for its softness and harmony, which admirably adapt it for the highest forms of poetry, and has the same written character as the Arabic, which in other respects, it greatly resembles. It possesses numerous works both in literature and science: those in the former bear a high reputation: those in the latter with the single exception, perhaps, of mathematics, are of a very unsatisfactory and juvenile description.

History.—Few nations began at an earlier period to appear on the great stage of the world and have continued so long to perform a prominent part upon it. According to the description of Persian geographers, whose country was in its greatest glory its territory comprehended four seas—the Caspian Sea, the Black Sea, the Red Sea, and the Persian Gulf and six great rivers—the Euphrates, Tigris, Araxes, Phasis, Oxus, and Indus. Passing over a series of fabulous dynasties, we arrive at that of the Achæmenides, or Kianians which commenced about 750 B.C. and furnishes the first records which can be considered authentic. Shortly after this period, Persia appears to have been merely a province of the Assyrian empire, on the dissolution of which it fell under the power of the Medes, B.C. 706. Darius, the founder of the Median monarchy was followed at some distance by Cyaxares, whose successor was Astyages. With his death, B.C. 580, the Median dynasty terminated, and the true founder of the Persian monarchy one of the most distinguished characters of ancient times, appears upon the stage. Cyrus the Great having established his ascendancy over the Medes, carried his victorious arms into the west, overthrew Croesus, king of Lydia, and filling a series of remarkable Empires, Babylonia, by the conquest of Babylon and its dependencies, extended his empire to the shores of the Mediterranean. An expedition against the Scythians proved fatal to him, B.C. 529, and he was succeeded by his son Cambyses, the most important event of whose reign was his conquest of Egypt. On his death, an impostor pretending to be his brother Smerdis, mounted the throne, but shortly after, on the discovery of the fraud, was slain by the nobles, who then gave the crown to one of their own number called Darius Hystaspes, who united his conquest into the East as far as the Indus. In the West, the lands of Asia proved too narrow for his ambitions, and he passed over into Europe. Here, after making various conquests, he encountered the Greeks, by whom he was defeated on the field of Marathon. His successor Xerxes, having marched toward Greece at the head of the most gigantic armament which the world has yet beheld, first at Salamis, and then at Plataea met with even greater disaster than those which had befallen his predecessors, and with difficulty saved his life by almost solitary flight across the Hellespont. Greece assumed the offensive, and after many years of struggle, almost always disastrous to Persia, a new conqueror appeared in Alexander the Great, and completed her downfall. The Macedonian empire was soon built up by the death of its founder, and Persia, become only one of its fragments, was long passed from hand to hand among contending competitors. About B.C. 174, it fell into the hands of the Parthians, and was ruled by Mithridates I., under whom the Persian power extended from the Indus to the Euphrates. Rome was now in her full career of conquest, and Persia was well fitted both to temper her ambition, and try her prowess. The first direct intercourse between them took place B.C. 93, when Mithridates II. sent an embassy to Syria. In less than 40 years after war between them had commenced, and though by no means always to the advantage of the mistress of the world, the greater part of Persia was ultimately held as a fief of the Roman empire. Struggles for independence, however continued to be almost incessantly made, in the times both of the Greek and Roman emperors, and Persia produced several native princes whose fame as warriors or conquerors of their country is still held in lively remembrance. They belong to what is called the Sassanian dynasty which commenced as early as A.D. 226, and continued though under circumstances of greater or less depression, till 551 when it succeeded in surmounting all obstacles and attained its highest prosperity under the celebrated Khosro Nushervan, who swayed the sceptre over realms scarcely less extensive than those which Persia possessed in the time of Xerxes. At a later period (A.D. 590-628), another Khosro, distinguished by the name of Khosro Parviz, after commencing his Sassanian dynasty, and exhibiting that of the Caliphs during whose ascendancy for the two subsequent centuries, the history of Persia became blended with that of Arabia and the other realms subject to these potentates, ceased to be national. The long period, however, did not pass away without vast changes among which the most astonishing is the extinction of the ancient religion and the general adoption of Mahometanism. About the middle of the 9th century, the spirit of independence revived and a new dynasty arose in the person of Kader Ibn Loh, who threw off allegiance to the Caliph and regained sovereignty as Shiraz over territories nearly identical with modern Persia. It is impossible here to follow in detail the numerous changes which have subsequently taken place. In the beginning of the 11th century, the Seljuksian Turks made their descent from central Asia and succeeded in placing their Sultan, Toghr Beg, on the Persian throne. His successors retained possession till the last of the 12th when in 1194 by the Shah of Khwarezm who had scarcely established a Khwarezmian dynasty, whose descendant, Genghis Khan made his appearance at the head of 700,000 Mongols, and overthrowing all opposition ruled Persia with a rod of iron. The Mongol ascendancy was maintained after his death in 1259 first by his immediate descendants, and afterwards by the hereditary nobles, who throwing off allegiance to a common head, divided the country into a number of separate and hostile independent states. This state of matters was suddenly terminated in 1501 by the invasion of Timurlane and his Tatars, who spread devastation wherever they appeared. All Persia was completely at his feet, when he was carried off by death in 1504. The anarchy of petty independent states returned but was finally suppressed in 1502 by Ismail Shah who, partly by valor and partly by the reputed sanctity of his race as descended from Mahomet, worked his way to the Persian throne, and founded the Safi or Seefie dynasty, which reached its greatest prosperity during the reign of Abbas the Great (A.D. 1586-1637). This prosperity faded away during the feeble reigns which succeeded, and in 1722 a successful revolt of the Afghans, followed by a series of victories, enabled them to place the Persian crown on the head of their chief Meer-Mahomed. The Afghan ascendancy soon yielded to the prowess of the celebrated general, Nafiz-

Kouli, who, after fighting profusely in defence of the Soudan dynasty declared it at an end, and formally assuming the sovereignty which he had long virtually possessed began to reign in 1786, under the title of Kadi-Shah. His extraordinary talents raised Persia to a remarkable degree of power and influence. One of his most memorable exploits was the invasion of India in 1789, when he took Delhi, and obtained booty which has been valued at above 400,000,000. His greater abilities were counterbalanced by cruelty and avarice, and he was assassinated in 1747. A period of confusion succeeded, and was not terminated till 1796, when Age-Mahomed-Khan-Kajar of Turcoman origin, ascended the throne, and became the founder of the Kajar dynasty. The very common fate of Persian sovereigns awaited him, and in 1797 before he had reigned two years, he was murdered by his attendants. His nephew Babak Khan, succeeded him under the name of Fath-Ali Shah. The most remarkable events of his reign were two disastrous wars with Russia, the one ending in 1813, with the loss of extensive territories along the Caspian, and the other in 1828 with the loss of Erivan and all the country N. of the Araxes. In 1833, he was succeeded by his grandson Mahmud Mirza.

PERSIAN GULF (Lahm Persicus Autem Mare Babylo-nense), an arm of the Indian Ocean, between lat. 26 and 30° N. and lon. 47 and 56° E., and separating Persia from Arabia greatest length, 560 m. medium breadth about 100 m., and communicating with the Indian Ocean by the Strait of Ormuz, 35 m. wide. The only river of importance which it receives the Euphrates but numerous small streams descend from the mountains on the Persian side, where the coast is bolder than on the Arabian side. It makes numerous small indentations on both coasts but has no important harbours except Bushire on the Persian coast and Bussorah, which has at some distance above the mouth of the Euphrates. It contains many islands of which the largest are those of Kaban and Ormuz, on the coast of that name, and the Bahrein Isles, on the coast of Arabia. In the same locality, and also in various other places coral reefs are very common.

PERTAUGHGURK two places Hindostan.—1 A fortified town Malwa lat. 24 2 N lon 74 51 E. The surrounding country is very rugged, and much covered with jungle.—2 A tn. Oude 7 bank Gye, 90 m. S E Lucknow surrounded by a decayed wall and possessing a famous castle Pop. (agricultural), 10,000

PERTENHALL par Reg. Bedford 1805 ac P 405
PERTH, a tn. in Van Diemen's Land co. Cornwall 13 m. from Launceston on the South Rail.

PERTH, the cap. of W. Australia, and of co. Perth r bank Swan River, 10 m. above its mouth in the Indian Ocean lat 31° 57' 24 S. lon. 115° 52' 45' E. (A.) It is merely a large, straggling but finely-situated village.—The country, 40 m. long, by 28 m. broad, is intersected by the Darling range, from which several offsets run N E and S W. In its N E W part are numerous lakes around which is good pasture. The principal rivers are the Swan and the Helena.

PERTH, a tn. Upper Canada, cap. dist. Bathurst, on a height above a stream of same name, which by means of two locks has been made navigable to the Rideau Canal 43 m. N N E Kingston. It is regularly laid, and has an Episcopal, a Free, a Methodist, Baptist, R. Catholic, and two Scotch Presbyterian churches a handsome court-house, and jail. Several of the houses built of stone or brick, are ornamented with white columns, which abound in the neighbourhood Pop. (1822) 1816.

PERTH, or PERTHMANNA, a large central co. Scotland bounded, N. by co. Aberdeen and Inverness, E. Forfar, W. co. Argyll, Stirling, and Dumfriesshire, and S. co. Stirling, Clackmannan and Kinross with a small detached portion on the N shore of the Firth of Forth, between the co. of Clackmannan and Fife, 5 m. long, by about 3 m. broad. Extreme length E to W 63 m., breadth, N to S, 60 m. Estimated area, 1,689,220 ac. of which 21,000 ac. are water. Its surface is beautifully diversified with mountain and valley, wood, rock, lake and river alternating with wide and fertile plains, in a high state of cultivation. In short, all the more striking characteristics of the finest and most picturesque scenery of Scotland are concentrated in this single county, combined with the most favourable specimens of its pastoral districts. The part of the Grampian chain in Perthshire comprises some of the highest summits in the kingdom three of which approach 4000 ft. above sea-level while several others are between 2000 ft. and 3000 ft. the highest in the county is Benlueira, estimated at 2845 ft. The beautiful and extensive valleys or Straths of Perthshire, are no less remarkable than its mountains. The principal of these are Strathallan, Strathmore, Strath Tay Strath Airthie, and Strathmore, the last extending into Forfarshire. Next come its fertile and picturesque Glens Glen Affric, Glenorchy (Glenkiln), Glendowie, and numerous others. The N W and N parts of the county belong to the great primitive district of the N. of Scotland many of the mountains, including some of those in the Grampian range are composed of mica-schist, interstratified with hornblende-schist and quartz rock, and in some parts with a small portion of crystalline limestone. The Ochil Hills, in the S E part of the county, consist chiefly of porphyry and amygdaloid. The principal rivers are the Tay, the basin of which comprises nearly the whole county the Forth, Earn, Teith, Lyon, Garry, Truncheon, &c. The chief lakes are Loch Tay a magnificent expanse of water 15 m. long Loch Leven, Loch Rannoch, Loch Katrine, and several other smaller but not less beautiful lakes. The cultivated land in the county is estimated at about 660,000 ac. or about one-third of the whole surface. The most valuable tract of low land is what is called the Carme of Gowrie, being the district bounded by the Tay on the S. and W. the Sidlaw Hills on the N. Its soil is mostly a deep rich clay (and in point of fertility it is not perhaps surpassed if equalled, by any land in the kingdom). The lower part of Strathmore consists of a similar soil and is hardly less fertile. In the Carme of Gowrie, and other more fertile tracts, wheat and beans are the principal objects of cultivation. In the midland districts, barley and m. the higher ones, are the principal crops. Potatoes and turneps are also extensively cultivated. Considerable quantities of fruit are produced in the vale, particularly in Gowrie. The linen and cotton manufactures are carried on to a certain extent in the county still on the whole, Perthshire may be regarded as an essentially agricultural district. The fisheries on the Tay are about the most valuable in Scotland. Perth returns two members to Parliament, one for the county, and one for the city. Principal towns—Perth, Orfick, and Dundee. Pop. 138,660

PERTH, a city and royal bur. Scotland cap. above co., beautifully situated r bank Tay, here crossed by a simple but elegant bridge of nine arches, 860 ft. long by 22 ft. wide and at the common junction of the Dundee, Forth and Aberdeen Junction, the Scottish Midland Junction the Scotch Central and the Perth line of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railways, 33 to N by W Edinburgh. From whatever quarter it is approached, it presents a very striking and attractive appearance, owing partly to its noble river partly to the verdant slopes and well-wooded hills by which it is surrounded and partly to its spacious and beautiful meadows, situated on its N. and S. sides, and called, respectively, the North and South Loch. The former, during the margin of the river and partly converted into a level race-course, and the latter intersected by the main entrance by the Edinburgh road, surrounded with rows of stately trees, and with stately villas. The town, once surrounded by walls, flanked with towers, of all of which no vestiges now remain, is laid out with considerable regularity, and contains several spacious streets, crossing each other at right angles, and some handsome terraces and crescents. The principal thoroughfare called, successively Prince Street, John Street, and George Street, commencing at the bridge, stretches on from S. to N. across the town, nearly parallel to the river, and is lined with substantial and handsome houses, built of freestone. It is intersected by High Street and South Street, which are equally well built and many of the more modern residences in other quarters are in a style of elegance not often seen in provincial towns. All the streets are well lighted with gas and an abundant supply of water filtered from the river, and raised by steam into a lofty circular tower, is distributed by pipes both to public fountains and private dwellings. The public buildings include St. John's, a very ancient structure, in the pointed style, with a massive square tower, terminating in a spire, originally forming only one church, but now converted into three parish churches, St. Paul's, also a parish church, of modern erection, with a lofty steeple, three Scotch lished chapel, an Episcopal church, in the cathedral style, now in course of completion, one Original Seceder, one Baptist, four Free, three U. Presbyterian, and two Independent churches, the County Buildings, an elegant Grecian structure, facing the Tay, with a portico of 12 fluted columns; immediately behind it, the City and County Prison, the Penitentiary or General Prison, forming one of the largest edifices of the kind in Scotland, originally fitted up as a depot for French prisoners, greatly enlarged since; the City and County Infirmary, the Royal Asylum, lately situated on N. side of Kinnaird Hill in a park of 12 ac.; the Academy occupying a handsome building in the centre of Boar Terrace, and furnishing a superior course of education; the Grammar and various other schools; the Antiquarian Society occupying a handsome building called Marshall's Monument, which contains a public library in addition to the museum of the Society; a neat theatre, and infantry and cavalry barracks. The principal manufactures consist of cotton coloured goods, intended specially for umbrella covers, checked and striped ginghams, window, and pale plaids, imitation Indian shawls, many of them for the Turkey market, handkerchiefs, scarfs and trimmings, ink, carriages, castings, and various articles in iron. There are also several breweries and distilleries, bleach and print fields, dye-works, tanneries, ropewalks, a large flax and several flour mills, and building-yards, at which both steamers and sailing vessels are constructed. The trade, favoured both by the numerous railways which centre here, and the river which in consequence of important improvements now admits vessels of 300 tons to the town, is large and increasing. The imports from foreign ports, and more especially from the Baltic, are timber, cheese, clover, and linseed, flax, spirits, indigo, bark, small, madder, tea, honey, &c. and, coastwise, coal, lime, salt, manure, &c. The foreign exports are chiefly, but, coastwise include large quantities of potatoes, chiefly to London, corn, timber, and dates. In 1860 the registered tonnage of the port amounted to 58 vessels, carrying 4930 tons; the vessels entered were, coastwise, 142 (1045 tons); colonial 1 (311 tons); and foreign 146 (3869 tons); cleared were, coastwise, 155 (10 218 tons) and foreign, 8 (593 tons).

Perth is generally supposed to be of Roman origin, and to have had Agricola for its founder. Its earliest known charter is dated 1108, but it was first erected into a royal burgh in 1210, by William the Lion. Till the death of James I. in 1437, it was the capital of Scotland; for which its central locality made it admirably adapted, and both then, and subsequently it became the scene of some of the most remarkable events in Scottish history. Among others may be mentioned its capture, and the carrying off of its records by Edward I. of England in 1366; the murder of James I. in 1437; the various meetings and events connected with the progress of the Reformation; the repeated visitations of the plague, the Gowrie conspiracy or Raid of Ruthven in 1600; the capture of the town by Montrose in 1644, after his victory of Tippermuir; its capitulation to Cromwell in 1651, and its occupation, first by Viscount Dundee in 1690, and afterwards by the Highlanders in 1715 and 1746. Perth, as a royal burgh is governed by a guild, a dean of guild, four bailies, a free burgh, and 19 councillors, and sends a member to the House of Commons. Many distinguished individuals have been born or less intimately connected with Perth; but among its natives, it seems unable to number any higher name than that of Patrick Adamson, archbishop of St. Andrews, who possessed some merit as a poet, but is better known for his truckling and tergiversation. He both changed the name of telephus bishop and afterwards exemplified it in his own person. Pop. 24,035.

PERTH AMBOY a town and port of entry U. States, New Jersey, at the head of Raritan Bay 42 m. N. E. Trenton. It has three churches, two schools, and a pottery and is much resorted to in summer by the inhabitants of New York. The harbour is easy of access, safe, and commodious. Pop. 1803.

PERTHUIS [anc. Perthuis] a town, France, dep. Vancluse, 184 m. S. E. Apt on the Loze. It is surrounded by ramparts, and has a handsome church, seminary college, and some distilleries. Pop. 5723.

PERSTWOOD (Grove), par. Eng. Wilt. 450 ac. P. 29. PERU several places U. States of America.—1, A vil and township, New York, 153 m. N. Albany, with two churches, 18 schools, a woolen factory, two tanneries, and several saw and grist mills. Pop. 2134.—2, A vil. and post township, Ohio, 98 m. N. Columbus, with a church 14 schools, a distillery, two flour and two saw mills. Pop. 2000.

PERU [French, Pérou, in. anc. chro. claud. Perŭ] a republic, S. America, formed out of the former Spanish viceroyalty of same name, bounded N by Ecuador, B and E by Bolivia, W the Pacific Ocean, and E. Brazil, lat. 2° 29' to 21° 28' S. lon. 68° to 81° W. area, about 481,160 sq. m., though the want of a settled boundary on the N. precludes the possibility of stating its area with precision, length, N to S., about 1200 m., width E. to W. varies much where greatest it is about 700 m. The coast-line extends through 1500 m.

According to the Correio Penseiro, of July 80 1845 Peru is divided into the thirteen departments of Amazonas, Ancash, Arequipa, Ayacucho, Callao, Cuzco, Huancavelica, Junco, Libertad, Lima, Moquegua, Puno, and Tarma, and subdivided into sixty-three provinces with a total population of 1,736,850. The chief inland towns are Lima, the capital, Arequipa, Cuzco, Huancayo, and Puno and the principal seaports are Huanacabo, Callao, Arica, Lambayeque, Pisco, Payta, Iquique, and Talca.

Gen. rel. View—This country exhibits great varieties of physical character, and all on a great scale. But from every point of view its grandest feature is the Cordillera of the Andes, which seen from the coast, has the appearance of a vast wall, apparently impassable. The region between the Andes and the Pacific Ocean, has a width of under 100 m., but of its whole surface, only a very small portion is habitable. It is generally rugged, and covered with mountains or hills, from 10 000 ft. to 5000 ft. in height projecting in rapid descent to the Cordillera to the sea, and generally consisting of bare rock, wholly devoid of life or vegetation. It is only where streams force their way across this tract, from the Andes towards the sea, that verdure makes its appearance, and the cultivation of the ground becomes practicable. Hence this region, in which only the traversable valleys, under favourable circumstances, are fit for the growth of wheat, is generally distinguished as Los Valles. But the streams from the mountains, though full and rapid above, generally sink in the dry, sandy ground lower down, and seldom reach the sea. While most of them are but occasional torrents, flowing during the rainy season (of the highlands) and dry nine months of the year. On the most favoured portion of the coast, these valleys are, on an average, 12 m. asunder, but they are more frequently separated by intervals of 15 or 20 m. Towards the N. they are more widely asunder, so that between Lambayeque and Sechura, there intervenes a dry desert of 90 m. Above the maritime Cordillera, between the ridges of the Andes, nature assumes quite another aspect, and there, Las Sierras, as the elevated region is generally called is now the chief, as it was anciently almost the exclusive seat, of the population of Peru. Beyond or E. of the mountains, the country sinks into boundless plains, watered by numerous and great rivers, which attempts are now being made to open to foreign commerce, by a company formed in the U. States, and connected to a great extent with important forces. The same given to this country is Montaña, or the wooded region. It is but imperfectly known and many ages will probably elapse before it becomes occupied by men of European race.

Mountains and Highlands—The Andes of Peru (see Andes) include the nearly extinct smoking volcano of Arequipa and numerous other lofty peaks, forming two ranges, between which is the table land, or sierra, naturally diversified into regions differing widely in character. The chief are the heights of Pisco, of Cuzco, the valleys of the Rio Junco, and of the Marañon. The first of these lies at one of those points where the branches of the Andes unite, the ridge sinking into an elevated plain which has here a general height of 14,000 ft. This region is traversed by chains of hills from 500 to 1000 ft. high, and has everywhere a rugged and forbidding aspect. Though the climate is the most disagreeable and comfortable possible, and the Puna, or difficulty of respiration, is severely felt, yet the value of the precious metals, with which this region abounds, have attracted to it a comparatively dense population and it has been more frequently visited, and more fully described by strangers, than the smiling and luxuriant regions lower down. The table-land of Cuzco, extending from the S. frontier of Peru, to lat. 12° 30' S. has a length of about 150 m., and a width of 100 m. At the city of Cuzco, lat. 12° 30' S. it has an absolute elevation of 11,500 ft., but slides rapidly towards the N., so that at the banks of the Rio Marañon it is not probably more than 9000 ft. above the sea. On the heights of Pasco there is no cultivation whatever. But here, between the S. and most elevated part of Cuzco, where the quinoa (Chenopodium quinoa) is cultivated, to the plantations of sugar-cane at Inca we find most of the grains and fruits of Europe in the greatest perfection. The valley of the Jaula adjoins the table-land of Pasco, descending rapidly S. about 100 m., and resembles in general character the lower portion of Cuzco. It is perhaps the most populous portion of Peru, and at the same time the least known. The valley of the Marañon from lat. 10° to 5° S., is for the first 100 m. little more than a narrow defile descending rapidly, it then becomes, for 200 m. a wide and fertile valley, having a mean absolute height of about 3000 ft. The Pongo of Rontema, at its northern termination, is but 1250 ft. above the sea. A great portion of this valley has all the characters of the tropical regions.

Lakes and Rivers.—On the table-land of Pasco, 16 at no great distance among, the Lake of Lauricocha, whence issues the Mantaro or Tumpapaca (the latter name is but little used) the Lake of Chichicocha, 12,500 ft. above the sea, from which the Huallaga flows S. E. and the Lake of Quinacocha, which gives birth to the St. Juan, lower down called the Mantaro and one of the chief tributaries of the Apurimac. These rivers all make some hundreds of miles lower down, greatly increased in magnitude and together with the Uruyali, which rises further S. and takes a wider sweep to the E. form the grand but simple system of the waters of Peru. The Mantaro rises, as has been stated, on the table-land of Pasco, and runs for 400 m. between the Cordilleras of the Andes during the first 150 m. of its course in a narrow rocky valley it descends about 10,000 ft., thence to the Pongo of Rontema, 1253 ft. in height it flows about 250 m., with a fall of 1800 ft. Within this distance it is navigated in canoes and balsas. Below the rapids at Tompepaca, close to the Pongo of Rontema, the river flows N. E. and then E., for 150 m., till it descends the rapids 7 m. in length at the Pongo of Mantacocha. At the foot of these rapids in the town of Boya, in Maynas, a province of Ecuador whence it may be navigated downwards in small vessels. The Huallaga, on leaving the highlands, takes a tortuous course of 500 m., collecting numberless small streams, till it joins the Marañon, in lat. 5° S. and lon 76° W. It flows for the most part, between hills covered with dense forest, but for the last 100 m. it winds through level, marshy plains. The Ucayali is, after the Marañon the greatest of the Peruvian rivers. At their junction it is indeed apparently the greater of the two the streams which form it lie chiefly between lat. 11° and 16° E. The Uruyachi and Tambo the latter uniting the Apurimac and Mantaro or Rio Jaula, join to form the Uruyachi, which, just below the junction, descends a violent rapid called Yuclo del Diabla. It is supposed to be navigable for 500 m., but its course through the plains is little known. Among its chief tributaries from the mountains, is the Pachico which is reported to be navigable a long way up, so that were it not for the fierceness of the wild tribes inhabiting its banks, and the difficulty of navigating them from their impenetrable forests, it might afford a convenient access to the central portion of Peru. Lake Titicaca, except that of Maracaybo, the largest lake in S. America, is partly in Peru and partly in Bolivia.

Climate.—The very peculiar climate of the maritime region of Peru, excited the wonder of the European discoverers of that country and remains to this day but imperfectly explained yet may be accounted for by the position of the mountains and prevailing winds. On a portion of that coast an rain has fallen within the memory of man; and on most of it a shower of rain is a remarkable phenomenon, generally supposed to be connected with an earthquake. For six months, from November to April, the sky is clear, and the burning rays of an almost vertical sun would convert the country into bare rock or dust, if it were not that this is the rainy season in the higher regions, whence copious streams pour down to fertilize and beautify the valleys. These torrents soon dry up on the cessation of the rains in the mountains; but then the sky along the coast becomes overcast, the heat of the sun is intercepted by a thick mist, called garra, which falls like a heavy dew, and freshens the vegetation, while it mitigates the heat. The cool ocean currents, and the streams of air descending from the snowy heights of the Andes, sea, with their united influence, only mitigate agreeably the heat of the coast, which, on the sea-side, is often excessive. In Lima, 600 ft. above the sea, the thermometer varies from 60° in winter to 85° in summer. In the region refreshed by the garra or small rain, extending to the height of from 1600 to 3000 ft. above the level of the sea, various tropical plants, including the banana, sugar-cane, cotton, and sweet potato, grow with considerable luxuriance. To this zone succeeds the perfectly rainless region, reaching to the elevation of about 7000 ft., where it is bounded by the rain-line. This region, which is absolutely rainless, consists of piles of barren granite rocks, broken, however, by narrow valleys, formed by the mountain streams, in which the orange, plantain, and other tropical fruits ripen. These valleys or ravines give access to the region of the Sierre, which lies above the rain-line and constitutes the temperate zone of Peru. Vegetation produced by the influence of natural rains now first begins to clothe the W. side of the Andes. Pasture haciendas appear at first scanty, but gradually increasing in luxuriance, in conjunction with the growth of wheat, barley, maize, potatoes, fruits, &c. which are cultivated on the temperate plains and slopes of the Sierra up to the height of 10,000 ft. From this upper limit of this zone to the height of 14,500 ft. extends the domain of grasses, with a character wholly alpine, past-moors often covering a great extent. The country in general is available only for sheep pasture. Still higher up, alpine plants and lichens continue to flourish, to an elevation in some cases of nearly 17,000 ft. If we proceed to the E. slope of the Andes, we find there an important general change in the elements of climate. On the W. side, the prevailing wind during some months of the year is from the S.W. The S. wind predominates during the other three months. These winds are both cool and dry. But E. of the Andes, the regular equatorial winds from the E. come loaded with humidity and checked by the mountains pour down copious and in some places perpetual rains. The W. side of the Andes is almost destitute of trees, with the exception of a few belts of wood in the ravines or along the rivers that traverse the valleys at the foot of the mountains. On the E. side the tall forests cover the low plain and ascend with hardly diminished magnificence to a height of 5500 ft. where the tropical character of the woods ceases. The temperature on the E. side of the Andes is higher than that on the W., making a difference in the limits of the vegetable zones of about 2000 ft. (8° or 7° Fah.), and at the height of 3000 or 4000 ft. la capa de la niebla, the brow of the forest, as it is termed by the Peruvians presents one of the most charming spots on the earth enjoying a delicious and equable temperature, matchless fertility with forest and mountain scenes of incomparable grandeur.

Earthquakes.—The coast of Peru enjoys a perpetual aerial calm, its atmosphere is never darkened or disturbed by heavy rains, by thunder-storms, or hurricanes. But, on the other hand, it is peculiarly subject to subterranean convulsions. Earthquakes have frequently laid Lima in ruins, and export once shows that 45 smart shocks may be expected there in a year. Devastating earthquakes have happened several times in a century. The last took place in 1806; that of 1746 was the most destructive. On that occasion, the sea retired to a great distance, then suddenly rushing back, overwhelmed the town of Callao, the port of Lima, the site of which appears to have sunk with the shock. Of its inhabitants, about 3000 only 16 survived the catastrophe.

Geology.—Accurate geological observations have as yet embraced but a small portion of the wide surface of Peru. Red sandstone frequent on the coast, is also the prevailing rock in the plains of the interior, where it is associated with the granite of rock-streets, the latter occupying, at the valley of the Huallaga alone, an area of 1000 sq. m. It occurs also on the coast, and is not wanting even on the heights of the Andes. Granite and porphyry, appearing on the coast, exand also to the highlands, but the prevalent rocks on the sierras are—trachyte, granite, porphyry and diorite. The sides of the valleys between Titicaca and Cuzco, are formed chiefly of clay-slate. Round Arequipa, and thence to Titicaca, the soil is all volcanic, yet there is no active crater in the neighbourhood, though the cone of Arequipa still smokes smoky. In the S. of Peru, chiefly in the maritime provinces of Tumbes, and in the neighbourhood of Iquique, an extensive deposit of salt, nitre, and nitrate of soda exists, the sandy region over which it extends nearly 3° (lat. 19° to 22° S.), in length, N to S. is a barren desert. In many parts, the houses and molesters for cattle are built of blocks of salt. Of the nitrate of soda, the supply of which may be said to be inexhaustible, 289,880 tons have been exported from Iquique, from 1880 to 1886. The observations of Mr Darwin have led him to the conclusion, that the coast of Peru has risen 55 ft. since it was first inhabited. Since the great earthquake of 1746, the coast near Lima, which was raised on that occasion, has been constantly sinking. The water-courses further N., near the base of the Andes, furnish abundant proof of natural convulsions, many of them exhibiting the wear of centuries, being now laid dry.

Mines.—It is said that gold may be found in all the passes, and nearly all the rivers from the Andes wash down auriferous sands. The richest gold-mines or diggings are about Huaylas and Tarma. It is difficult to estimate the amount of gold actually obtained, the business of washing the sands being carried on almost wholly by Indians, without capital or machinery, and with much secrecy. Little of the gold is coined, and probably the larger portion of it is smuggled to the coast. It is known however that in four years, 1835-8 duty was paid on 2698 marks (about 280 000) which is supposed to be a fourth of the actual produce. Silver also which is the chief metallic production of Peru, is very widely distributed, and small mines of it are worked secretly in all parts of the country. But the chief mines of silver which having attracted the attention of capitalists, and become centres of Indian population, are fully known, are those of Huancayo, near Miraflores. Huancayo, in Huamanga, Pisco, Lamas, and Huancabamba. The treasures contained in the Cerro de San Fernando at Hualgayoc, were first discovered in 1771. There are now 1400 bocaneros or pits opened in the hill, through which veins of silver run in all directions. Cerro de Pisco is hardly inferior in mineral wealth to Potosi. The town stands at the height of 15 678 ft. above the sea, and the hill on which it stands is all hollowed out, so that were not earthquakes here very rare, the whole would be soon reduced to a heap of ruins. Most of the bocaneros or mouths of the mines are within the houses of the miners in the town itself, some of them serve as dwellings. They are generally shallow, and not above 500 out of some thousand openings deserve the name of shafts. In the Cerro de Pisco are two very remarkable veins of silver, the one going from N to S has an ascertained length of 8600 ft., with a breadth of 418 ft.; the other stretching W N W to E. S. E., is 9400 ft. long, and 800 ft. wide and is supposed to intersect the preceding vein exactly under the market-place in the town. The silver produced from 1830 to 1866, has been calculated to amount to 1283 millions of Spanish dollars ($297 000 000). In eight years, 1836-43, the silver coined in Lima alone amounted to $4,000,000. The great height at which the mines are in many instances situated; the impossibility of conveying machinery to them on the banks of rivers, the want of timber, the high price of all the necessaries of life, present great difficulties in the way of carrying on of mining operations with spirit and profit, even were the needed capital brought to bear; consequently the mining of Peru is still in a very low state. Quicksilver is abundant, and chiefly found at Huancabamba in the interior, copper, lead and iron are also found in various places, but in a country where the cost of carriage is so excessive none but the most precious products can yield a profit. In 1836, English miners discovered good coal at Cerro de Pisco, at an elevation of 14,700 ft. Brown coal is also found in the sandy deserts of the coast, N. of Arica; and in the province of Tumbes has a buried forest underneath the sand, the wood of which is neither charred nor petrified. It affords excellent fuel, and is much used in the preparation of saltpetre, the chief production of that coast.

Vegetation.—In botanical species, Peru is incomparably rich, owing to the various natural regions comprehended in it, each of which has its own flora. W Peru is poor in plants, especially in trees; E. of the Andes, the species are exceedingly numerous, and most of them affect the arborescent form. The character of a tropical vegetation becomes more perfectly developed as we descend the mountains; and in the plains, the forest closely resembles those of equatorial Brazil. On the higher parts of the E. Andes are to be found the representatives of families (in the Geniæ), which are elsewhere found in S. America. On the W coast, palms are hardly ever found wild, the cultivated species are the Jubas from Chili, the date-palm and the coco-nut. On the E. side, each of these kinds has many and varying representatives; the tree ferns also are peculiar to the lower slopes and plains E. of the Andes. Among the characteristics of the forests on this side, may be mentioned the prevalence of the Canelo, which occurs nowhere else in such numbers and variety. From these forests Peru derives, in general little advantage. The cinchona yielding the Peruvian or Jesuit's bark (called in Peru, Cascailla, the yellow bark of commerce, from which the well known febrifuge quinine is extracted) is almost the only article drawn from them for exportation. Another production, which thrives in the same soils as the cinchona, but extends much lower down and succeeds best in the plain and swamps in the hottest places, is the coca (Myrsine coccinea), the leaves of which are chewed, as a stimulant by the Indians and which being consumed in immense quantities is a very important article of the inland trade. Tobacco, formerly monopolized by the crown, is now generally cultivated, and being excellent, finds a ready sale in Chili. The sea-board also produces excellent sugar, which not only supplies home wants, but is largely exported. Cotton also is produced in considerable quantity, and is nearly all exported. Fruits are abundant—the banana, orange, pineapple, papaya, chirimoya, guava, &c. as well as culinary vegetables and grains, from the yuca and yuca, to barley and the oat, which latter grow at an elevation of even 15 000 ft. The vine is cultivated on the W coast, merely for the production of brandy. Agriculture in Peru is in the lowest condition; the excessive dryness of the W coast, the natural barrenness and devotion to mining which characterizes the masses the remoteness of the Mombas, or E. side of the Andes, with the deficient means of internal communication, all tend to discourage its progress.

Zoology.—Extensive tracts may be found on the W side of Peru in which life seems to be wholly extinct, and not even insects are found in the sand. Yet that region has its own peculiarities to it, namely a few very destructive to flocks of sheep, a mephitic animal or polecat, an other, some opossums, and gigantic snakes. The birds of W Peru are few, with exception of the sea-fowl which inhabit the shores in countless multitudes. A few deer and wild swine, which attain a great size to the valley of Lima, are the chief mammals. Iguanas and hawks are the chief reptiles; the serpents are small and rare, and excepting one species, harmless. The plants are found only on the highlands, where the poor Indians, unable to purchase or support mules, still employ it as a beast of burden. The knurled species—the guanaco, the alpaca, and the vicuña—remain wild in the mountains. Above their haunts are to be found only marmosets in the hollows, and the condor nestling in the highest rocks. Of the animals inhabiting the forest region, the only one that brows the soil of the sierras is the puma or lion, as it is often called which sometimes attacks the sheep on the highlands, and occasionally extends his excursions even to the coast. The E. side of the Andes is so remarkable for the abundance in the W for its want of animal life. Parrots on the W are few on the E. they are disagreeably numerous. About twenty species of them are found in this region and here also, in the forests, the monkeys are innumerable, only one species, the black coatli ascends as high as the Ceja (about 4000 ft.). At this elevation is found also the S. American bear; the larger animals, the tiger, sloth, cat, marmoset, &c., belong to the low forest. Here also bamboo grows numerous, and, on the banks of rivers, are mangroves. Alligators swarm in the rivers; and, in the inundated plains, the boa constrictor attains a terrific size. Pastoral husbandry has made as little progress in Peru as agriculture; and, indeed, it is equally repelled by the natural circumstances of the country. In the maritime regions the scarcity and dearth of water as well as of fodder, make it impossible to keep cattle. All the lucerna which can be grown by irrigation barely suffices for the mules, which are indispensable. On the E. side, where nature is more bounteous, the mules, and still more the vampire bat are fatal to cattle. A considerable number of cattle, however, are reared in some parts of the sierras which abound in rich pasturage. In Huanuco and Cuzco likewise are to be found good herds of cattle, and some attempt at dairy farming. The feeding of sheep on the uplands is for the most part abandoned to Indians.

Trade and Commerce.—Peru exports chiefly precious metals, nitrate of soda, alpaca and sheep's wool, quinquina bark, sugar, cotton, Chunchilla skins, hides, straw hats and gummo; and imports all kinds of manufactured goods, wines, tobacco, and spirits. With the interior and the neighbouring states, a trade is carried on in bristly grain, corn, tobacco, &c., besides the chief articles already named. Two-thirds of the foreign trade are carried on with Great Britain from which cotton goods were imported, in 1849-51 as follows:—

	Cottons (spins)	Cottons (yards)
1849	1,128,791	18,771,814
1850	6,214,060	11,346,817
1851	10,796,225	17,687,869

The exports of guano, the supplies of which are, practically speaking, inexhaustible, might be greatly increased were a more liberal policy adopted. The quantity exported to Great Britain was as follows, in 1847-50:—

1847	tons, 5	1848	tons, 1,567
1849	61,045	1850	56,983

The total quantity exported in 1850 amounted to 472 42 tons, and was of the value of £3,124,864. The total value of the exports in 1850 was £5,245,491.

People, Habits, Education, Religion.—Fully a half of the population are probably Indians a fourth white men or creoles, and the rest coloured people of mixed blood, the negroes being nearly all on the coast, are now reduced to a few thousands. The Peruvian Indians—that is to say those descended from the subjects of the Incas—are to be found chiefly in the highlands. They seldom descend to the E. side of the Andes. In physical characters they scarcely differ from the Indians of the E. forests, to whom they are superior in civilization. In Peru they have preserved, in some degree, their nationality, most of the small towns on the highlands are inhabited wholly by them. Their language is the Quechua, though, towards the S., the Aymara becomes prevalent. Large districts occur in which few understand Spanish; the Quechua being adopted even by the creoles. Agriculture is the favourite occupation of the Indians; but, in towns, they carry on also some trades in a lazy manner merely to provide for their wants, and never with a view to making fortunes. Their women are free, and they have little inclination to increase their by adopting habits of civilized life. They are content with poverty and wretchedness, and cling pertinaciously to the customs of their ancestors. Only a few of their noble families still possess estates. In the missions of the E. plains, Quechua is the adopted language; the Jesuits having soon perceived the necessity of discouraging a multiplicity of tongues. The Peruvian army, in the wars of the revolution, was composed almost entirely of Indians, who fought well, and underwent fatigues which no European would have encountered. By the laws of the republic, the Indian is on a level in political rights with the white men, yet the creole, though conscious of his own superiority, still looks down with contempt on the Indian who fought his battles. The Peruvian creole is tall, but slender and feeble, while levity, scholasticism, and incapacity of mental labour show his want of moral strength. The creole females lose their bloom totally at an early age.

INDIANS OF HUASTECO, AND OF THE COAST AND MESTIZOES
From De Poir's Travels, Voyage autour du Monde.

Education is in a low condition. The university of San Carlos, at Lima established in 1570 and the most ancient of the American universities had, in 1851, only fifty-five students. As to the education of the lower orders it is wholly neglected, and in the interior men qualified to fill public offices, by being able to read and write, are not always to be found. The dominant religion is R. Catholic, but a fair amount of toleration is granted to other creeds.

History, Government, &c.—Peru was the greatest and most civilized state of S. America at the time of the discovery of the New World. When treated by the Spaniards from the Incas, whose dominion extended along the Andes through 28 degrees lat. 7° N. to 18° S. It became with some reduction of the four vice-royalms of Spanish America. In 1718 the province or as it was called, the kingdom of Quito was separated from Peru and annexed to the newly-created vice-royalty of New Granada. In 1778, again, the provinces of La Plata, Potosi, Charcas, Chiquitos, and Paraguay, were withdrawn, in order to form the vice-royalty of Buenos Ayres. It was the last of the Spanish American colonies which broke loose from the mother country. In 1821 a patriot force of Chileans and Buenos Ayrenses, under General San Martin, expelled the Spaniards, and after a succession of engagements, obliged the Spaniards to retire into the interior when the independence of the country was proclaimed. The contest, however, was obstinately continued, until the decisive battle of Ayacucho in 1824 which was soon followed by the final expulsion of the Spaniards. Its limits remained, for the most part, unchanged by the revolution the provinces dismembered from it, in the N. forming at first part of Columbia, and afterwards the republic of Ecuador while those on the S. were ceded to Bolivia. In 1826, Peru, harassed by contending factions, solicited the aid of Santa Cruz, president of Bolivia, who came with an army, and succeeded, after a series of sanguinary actions in tranquillizing the country, whereupon a co-federation was formed, composed of N. Peru, S. Peru, and Bolivia, Santa Cruz being named Supreme Protector. This state of matters continued until 1835, when in consequence of a bloody battle fought at Yungay, Santa Cruz was driven out of the country, and the confederation brought to a close, and both countries—Peru and Bolivia—returned to their previous limits and forms of government. The republic of Peru was, until of late, continually distracted by parties struggling for power, but more plausible promises prevail now and dealings with maritime nations were more freely invited by the liberal tariff of 1853. The constitution, adopted in 1826, is a copy of that of the U. States. The legislative power consists of a senate and a chamber of deputies; in the proportion of one deputy to 20,000 inhabitants, and five senators in each province. The chief executive power is in the hands of the president, to whom is joined a vice-president. In 1850 the revenue was $3,189,000; expenditures, $1,867,000; and the public debt, $3,718,000. In 1861, the revenue had risen to $4,349,156; the expenditure to $4,590,316; and in 1863 the public debt to $6,507,548.

PERUGIA [see Perugia] a N. Papal State, cap. S. of same name, on the side and summit of a lofty mountain washed by the Tiber 54 m. N. Rome. It is surrounded by lofty walls, and defended by a citadel; has frequent but spacious streets, and many remarkably handsome buildings. Its chief edifices are the cathedral, a fine bold Gothic edifice of the 15th century, and possessed of a valuable library, rich in works and MSS connected with biblical literature; eight churches, all of these interesting structures the convent of Sant'Agnes, the confraternity of San Bernardino, the convent of San Severo, containing the first fresco painted by Raphael, and the Benedictine monastery of San Pietro de' Carmine, a magnificent establishment, with an ancient church, supported by marble and granite pillars taken from a heathen temple and so rich in pictures as almost of itself to form a gallery; the Palazzo Comunale, a majestic edifice of the 15th century; the Sala del Cambio or Exchange, no longer required for that purpose, but interesting from the number of the frescoes with which Perugia has covered its walls; and two fine massive gates, the one the Arch of Augustus built of massive blocks of travertine without cement, and the Porta Marsica, an interesting specimen of Etruscan workmanship. Perugia possesses a university, which is one of the oldest in Europe, a sumptuous cabinet of antiquities, museum, botanical garden, public library of 80,000 volumes in academy of fine arts, and a lunatic asylum, one of the first in which the efficacy of the system of non-restraint was proved. The manufactures, not of much consequence, consist of velvet, silk stuffs, brandy, &c. The trade is in corn, wool, spun silk, and cattle. Perugia, under the Romans, was one of the 12 principal cities of Etruria. Having taken the part of Mark Antony in the war between him and Augustus, the latter took and sacked it. It had recovered the disaster when Totila, one of the northern barbarians, took it after a siege of seven years, and put many of its inhabitants to the sword. Pepin-le-Bref, king of France took it in the 8th century, and made a present of it to the Pope. It suffered much during the contests between the Guelphs and Ghibellines, and both in the 14th and 15th centuries was fearfully ravaged by the plague. The celebrated painter, Pietro Vannucci or Perugino, though born in Città della Pieve, long made Perugia his adopted home and died in it a victim of the plague, in 1524. Pop. 18,501. The municipality greater length N to S 66 m., breadth 54 m., area, 1094 sq m. is traversed in all directions by offsets of the Apennines. The principal stream is the Tiber which here receives the Chisecio and Nestora. In the W is the Lake of Perugia. The soil is fertile, producing in abundance corn, wine, fruits, oil, and silk. Cattle, sheep, and swine are numerous, and the rearing of poultry and bees is an important occupation. Manufactures have made good progress, and consist chiefly of cotton, woollen, and silk goods, parchment, hosiery and leather. The trade in these articles is considerable. Pop. 110,316.

PERUGIA (Lago di) or LAIGO TRAIENNO [anc. Trasi meane Lacus] a lake, Italy near the E frontiers of Tuscany deleg and 9 m. W Perugia, about 8 m. long, varying in breadth from 7 m. to 4 m., surrounded with olive plantations. It contains three islands—Isola Maggiore, Isola Minore, and Isola Polvece and abounds in fish. It has no visible outlet, and its surface has been gradually rising from the deposit of alluvial matter constantly carried into it. Humboldt gained a signal victory over the Romans near its shores.

PERUWELZ, a tn. and com. Belgium, prov. Hamant, 15 m. W by N Mons, generally well built, with a square, a chapel, several schools, manufactures of hosiery, leather, tanneries, dye-works, breweries, quarries, limeworks and other works. Pop. 7342.

PERVISE, a vit and com. Belgium, prov. W Flanders, on the Yser, 19 m. S.W. Bruges, with two breweries, an oil, and two flour mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. P. 1215.

PERWEEZ, a vit and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on an affluent of the Great Geste, 25 m. S.E. Brussels, with manufactures of military, a brewery, a tannery, three mills; and a trade in cattle and swine. Pop. 3577.

PERWUTTUM, a tn. Hindoostan, N.W. extremity of the Karnul territory, 1 bapki Khetra, 65 m. S by E Hyderabad; lat. 16° 35' N., lon. 78° 5' E. It contains several Hindoo temples, which are enclosed in an oblong square, 600 ft. long by 570 ft. broad, the walls of which are covered by an infinite variety of sculptures.

Vol. II

PERZAGNO, a vit. Austria, Dalmatia, 3 m. from Caltaro, on the shores of the Adriatic, is a very fertile district. It has a parish church; inhabitants engaged in commerce. Pop. 1500.

PERALÉ, a large vit., lat. Ceylon, 6 m. N.W. Manar, long a port of entry and export, with a custom-house which was abolished in 1822. It has a church. The inhabitants employ upwards of 300 canoes in the fishery. According to tradition the R. Catholic missionary Francis Xavier, first landed here on his mission to India.—(Ceylon Gazetteer.)

PERASU [anc. Perasura] a tn. and export, kind of Italy, deleg Urbino e Pesaro, on a rocky and wooded height, near the mouth of the Foglia, in the Adriatic, 19 m. E.N.E. Urbino and the sea of a bishop. It is walled, defended by a citadel, and has clean and well-kept streets, a marketplace, adorned with a marble statue of Urban VIII. a cathedral of little architectural merit, several other churches, more or less enriched with paintings, the ancient palace of the Dukes of Urbino, now occupied by the legats, a library, the mineralogical museum, and a botanical garden. The manufactures are almost confined to a few articles of primary necessity though the pottery early made here was long famous. The harbour formed by the mouth of the Foglia, has become shallow, but the trade in the wine, fruit, particularly silk, oil, silk, and other products of the district, is considerable. Pop. 17,519.

PESCADORIS—1. (Pelagos Islands) An isl group, China, in the Fukien Channel, between Isl. Formosa and the mainland. They extend N and S about 50 m. and some of them rise 800 ft. above sea-level. Between Pangni, the largest island, lat. 23° 30' N. lon. 119° 35' E. (p.), and Fisher Island, the next in size, is a good harbour, and in the former are several villages and a Chinese garrison. The N. extremity of the group consists of bleats rocks and coral reefs. Population of the group is estimated at 8000, of whom a large part are fishermen.—2. An isl group, close upon the coast of Peru \ from Callao lat. 11° 47' S. lon. 77° 20' W. (p.)—3. Three groups N. Pacific Marshall's Archipelago, lat. (and group) 11° 19' N. lon. 167° 35' E. (p.)

PESCARARA, [anc. Aternus]—1. A tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Giulia, 8 m. N.E. Cassi on the Aterno, where it falls into the Adriatic. It has a good fortress, and contains five churches, four monasteries, a seminary, and two hospitals. The fishing on the coast is abundant. Pop. 2260.—2. A river Naples. See Aterno.

PESCAROLO a tn. and com. Italy, Lombardy, prov. and 10 m. E by N Cremona, r bank Aspieve, with a church and three chapels, and some trade in corn and flax. Pop. 1508.

PESCHIE or Pescari a tn. Naples, prov. Salerno 4 m. E.N.E. Ischia, with an annual fair. Pop. 1480.

PESCHICI a tn. Naples, prov. Capitanata, 57 m. E.N.E. San Severo on a lofty height near the Adriatic. Pop. 1600.

PESCHIERA, two places kind of Italy.—1. A tn. and com. prov. and 30 m. N. Mantua, at the S. extremity of Lake Garda, where the Mincio issues from it. It is a straggling place, but is defended by a strong castle and has two churches, a custom-house, and a considerable trade. Pop. 1611.—2. A vit and com., prov. and 5 m. W. Milan, between the Adda and the Lambro with several mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1052.

PESCHIO AGRICOLA a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Ultra II, S.E. Civita Ducale with six churches 1 1833.

PESCIA, a tn. Tuscany, prov. and 30 m. W.N.W. Florence, on the Pesa, here crossed by two elegant stone bridges. It is well built, is the see of a bishop, has a court of justice, and several public offices; a cathedral, with a fine painting by Raphael two other churches, several schools and charitable endowments; numerous silk and paper mills, several tanneries, and a trade in silk, wine, and oil. P. 6505.

PESCINA, a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Ultra II, 10 m. S.E.E. Avezzano, near the E. shore of Lake Fucine. It has a handsome cathedral a church, a monastery, and a seminary, a secondary, a foundling and an ordinary hospital. Cardinal Masani was born here. Pop. 3000.

PEROO, several places, Naples.—1. (Costanzo), A tn., prov. Abruzzo-Ultra II, S.E. Belmonte, with seven churches and a convent.—2. (de-Manno), a tn., prov. Principato-Ultra, 10 m. W.N.W. Ariano; with a sulphureous spring. P. 1740.—3. (Lezzeno), A tn., prov. Salerno, 9 m. N. Salerno.

76

Pop. 1000.—4, (Pague), A. to, prov. Badajoz, S.W. MIRA, on a lofty eminence; with four churches and a convent. Pop. 4000.—5, (Amassano), A. to, prov. Abruzzo-Ultra I, S. Clivio di Fiume, with a convent. Pop. 850.—6, (Passeo), A. to, prov. Santo, N. N.E. Isernia. Pop. 1000.—7, (Johde), A. to, prov. Lugo, 5 m. N. E. Sora, at the foot of the Apennines. Pop. 2400.

PERSEQUIRO an island, Portugal, off the coast of prov. Alentejo, 40 m. W. Orliz. Its defended by a strong castle.

PERHAWER, or PERHAWER, a territory Afghanistan, but now incorporated with the Punjab; lat. 33° 27' to 34° 25' N. lon. 71° 29' to 73° 12' E.; and bounded, N. by Suvel, and the country between it and the Indus E. part of the same country, the Indus and the Salt or Kala range; S. the other territories of the Afghans building the same range and W. the Khyber mountains and the Afghan provinces of Jalalabad, length, 55 m.; breadth, 50 m.; area, 1800 sq. m. The soil is naturally fertile, and being well watered by the Indus, Cabool River, and other streams, yields two very productive harvests every year. The one, sown in autumn and cut about the end of April, consists chiefly of wheat, barley, pulse, and the usual staples of colder climates; and the other, sown as soon as the ground is clear of the former, and reaped in autumn consists chiefly of rice, maize, millet, and the staples of warmer climates. The rice in particular called Bara, because grown on ground irrigated by that river, is the finest in the world. Other crops, more or less extensively cultivated, are melons, cucumbers, pumpkins and gourds of various kinds, ginger, turmeric, tobacco, cotton, various oil plants, the sugarcane, only to be used as a sweetener, and numerous fruits, all of them however with the exception of the quince, more remarkable for their abundance than their flavor. The great rivers from Khorasan and Cabool into India, flow through this province by the Khyber Pass and across the Indus. Pop. roughly estimated at 600,000.

PERHAWER, or PERHAWER, a town, Punjab, cap. above territory, on the Bara, 95 m. W. by N. Attock, lat. 33° 59' N., lon. 71° 40' E., 15 m. E. from the E. extremity of the Khyber Pass. It is walled at intervals there are strong bastions, so that it is capable of making a defence at the same time, it is commanded by the fort, whose garrison has the power of preventing the citizens from being refractory. The principal thoroughfare or street, the only good one in the town, is a very broad, and has houses of one story on both sides of it, and communicates with a large open area, used for a granary. A little further E. is another open space of a circular form, the prettiest part of the town, surrounded by regularly-built houses with a circular row of minarets in front. A third area afterwards occurs, occupied by silk and cloth merchants, saddlers, sword makers, &c. To the right and left of the main thoroughfare described, the town covers a large space of ground, the by-lanes are very narrow dirty and offensive, and the houses generally uncleanly in appearance. The manufactures are but trifling, consisting chiefly of lozenges or seeds of cotton, dyed light-blue, with borders of bright coloured silk. Sold in bags in large quantities in the vicinity, where there are also two rich lead-mines. Nitre and sulphur are likewise obtained. Perhawer has greatly fallen off, both in wealth and population, since the beginning of the present century. Since then, its once numerous mosques, many built in a splendid style of Oriental architecture, have been incessantly polluted by the Sikhs, and are going to decay, while extensive ruins in many parts speak of ravages and recent violence. In the same time, the population has fallen from about 100,000 to 45,000.

PERNITZROFEN, a vil. Austria, Styria, circle Marburg, on a stream of same name, near Jahring. It has a castle, a church, and some trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1515.

PEROLINA, a vil. Hungary, co. Komlos, 58 m. from Nagy Miskolc with a fine mill, and a trade in corn. P. 1140.

PERQUERA, a m. Portugal, prov. Beira-Alta, near Viseu, 1. bank Douro; with an annual fair. Pop. 1750.

PERQUERIA GUARDIA a vil. Mexican Confederation, dep. Nuevo Leon, 20 m. N.W. Monterrey, and formerly celebrated for its silver-mines and salt-works.

PERSTONALIA, a river, Siberia, rises in the S. of gov. Tomsk, flows N.W. and joins 1 bank Obi, about 80 m. below Hysla; total course, 100 m.

PESTH, co. Hungary, Higher Danube, bounded, N. by Honth and Neograd, N.E. and E. Hova, S.E. Little Kumania, S. Bacs, W. Biskupienburg, and N.W. Komorn and Gran, area, 5063 geo. sq. m. In the N. and N.W. it is much broken by hills, but in all other directions presents the appearance of an extensive flat. It is traversed by the two most important rivers of Hungary, the Danube and the Theiss, and yet is very imperfectly watered. The Danube is chiefly confined to its W. frontier, the Theiss flows only through a small portion of the N. and hence, between the two, there is a large space left overcharged with stagnant water, and extremely covered with swamps, but scarcely cultivated by a running stream. The soil is of very indifferent fertility, but where not covered with sand and heath, or consisting of morasses, it is in general carefully and skilfully cultivated, and good crops both of corn and tobacco are raised. Along the right bank of the Danube are vineyards, from which an excellent red wine is made. The only minerals of any consequence are marble and building-stones.

PESTH, PESTHUM, or PEST the most populous town of Hungary, cap. above co., on the E. or 1 bank Danube, across which it communicates with Buda or Hova by a noble suspension bridge, 187 m. E. Vienna. It stands on a flat, and consists of the town proper and of four suburbs. The former, also called the old town, is irregularly built, and has dark narrow streets, the gloom of which is occasionally relieved by handsome mansions. The suburbs mostly of modern construction, are much more agreeable and regular, particularly the one called Neustadt or Leopoldstadt, forming the N. division of the town. The new market-place within it is remarkable for its extent, and the regularity and beauty of the buildings by which it is surrounded. The largest building of Pesth, called the Josephinische or Neupollnische, is in this division, and forms a huge pile, used partly as artillery barracks, and partly as military magazines. One of the finest parts of the town, is the bank of the river along which a quay about 14 m. long has been erected, and lined with handsome, lofty houses, brilliantly whitewashed. The public edifices are neither numerous nor interesting. These most deserving of notice are the parish church, a Gothic structure, the sul-terity, with 40 professors and 1900 students the church attached to the university, one of the landmarks in the town, with a lofty tower and fine tracery; the national casino, national theatre, capable of admitting 3000 persons; the museum, the cabinet of coins and medals; the university library, with 80,000 volumes; the county building, observatory, botanical garden, gymnasium, school of dance, normal high school, English female institute, the house of invalids, and several other hospitals and benevolent establishments. The manufactures consist of silk and cotton goods, various instruments, wool, best-sugar, leather, jewellery, etc., and the trade, which is very important, and makes Pesh, after Vienna, the most important commercial town on the Danube, is chiefly in corn, wine, wool, wood, and cattle. Pesh, though not the capital of Hungary, is the seat of the chief judicial tribunal, called the Kraszka's Rada and the Supreme Tribunal, which together constitute the supreme appeal court of the kingdom. Near it is the Rakosvár, a plain where the Diet, the great national assembly of the Magyars used to be held in the open air, and the deputies attended by their vast retinues of vassals, sometimes swelled to the number of 100,000 men, who remained encamped in tents during the continuance of the sittings. At the first of these assemblies held in 1438 Matthias Hunyadi was elected king. The Rakos is now famous for its annual horse-race. Pop. (1848) 100,500.

THE TOWN HALL SQUARE, PESTH.—From Buda-Pesth Illustration.

PESTO or PERVET (anc. Perusia), a ruined N. Naples, prov. Principato-Città, dist. and 19 m. S. S. W. Campagna, is a plain on the Gulf of Salerno. It was first a Greek colony, and fell under the power of the Romans, n.c. 275. After the fall of the empire it continued to flourish, but was ultimately destroyed by the Saracens towards the end of the 9th century. It still retains part of its walls, consisting of large blocks joined together in the most perfect manner without cement, and one of its four gates forming an arch 46 ft. in height. Among the buildings are a temple of Neptune, the four sides of which have a range of 86 pillars, surmounted by an architrave and frieze of the Doric order; a large and imposing edifice, called the Basilica for want of a better name but supposed to have been a temple of Ceres; a theatre and amphitheatre of which however there are only a few traces.

PÉZAK, a vil. Hungary Thibet Thess, co. Torontal 13 m. from Komlos with a church, and a trade in corn, maize, and wine. Pop. 3045.

PÉTERLEE, Peterlee, a CHINESE PEHLEE, or PEHLEE, the most important prov. of China proper and containing the capital of the empire lat. 36° to 41° 35' N. lon. 113° 40' to 116° 45' E., area, 58,949 sq. m., bounded, N. by Mongolia and prov. Leao-tung, the great wall forming part of the frontier, E. the Gulf of Petchilio, S. provs. Shantung and Honan, and W. prov. Shensi. It is generally level and very flat, especially along the coast and in the S. parts, though a few ridges of hills traverse the N. and W. portions. It is populous and well cultivated, yielding millet, wheat, pulses, fruits, and a little rice, though by no means fertile, and only producing a small proportion of the food required for the capital. It is well watered by the Pe-ho and its numerous affluents, has several considerable lakes, and contains coal, marble, granite, and brick and pottery-clay. Besides the capital, the provinces contain several large cities, of which Peking-foo, the residence of the governor; and Tientsin-foo, the entrepot of the trade which comes through the Pe-ho, are the most important. Through the latter a large trade is done in salt. Pop. 27,990,871.—The Great, formed by a large moray bay of the Yellow Sea, stretches N. to S. 160 m., and penetrates inland 190 m.

PÉCHENEG, a n. Russia, gov. and B. Kharkov, 7 bank Severn-Dnepr, with five churches. Pop. 7000.

PETCHORA, a river, Russia, rises in N. of gov. Perm, on W. slope Ural Mountains flows almost due W., then turns N. across E. part of gov. Volodga, enters gov. Archangel, and, on reaching lat. 66° N., makes a long curve S. W. to lon. 39° E., when it suddenly turns due N. and falls into the bay of the Arctic Ocean by a great number of mouths. Total course about 900 m. Its principal affluents are the Rima and Ussa.

PÉTEGHEM, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. S. Flanders, 15 m. S. S. W. Ghent, near I. bank Scheldt, with a brewery, eye-work, pump manufactory, and some corn and oil mills. Weaving and husbandry occupy most of the inhabitants. Pop. 1284.

PÉTÉN, a lake, Central America, state and 172 m. N. Guatemala, near the frontier of Yucatan about 70 m. in circumference, and in some places has a depth of 30 fathoms. It includes several islands, of which Peten, the most considerable, was formerly a principal seat of the Yucatan Indians, and contains the modern town of Flores.

PETER, see Petrus.

PETER and PAUL (Sts.), esp. Kamschatka. See Pr. Obozretelen.

PETER BOTT MOUNTAIN. See Macarones.

PETER 1. an isl., S. Antarctic Ocean, discovered in 1831, in lat. 68° 57' S. lon. 9° 48' W. It is about 24 m. in extent, and attains the height of 4000 ft.

PETER (St.), several parcs. England.—1 Wales, Carmarthen 5185 ac. Pop. 16,024.—2, Derby, 5741 ac. Pop. 15,528.—3, Hereford; 60 m. Pop. 2330.—4, Here, 5740 ac. Pop. 8746.—5 Jersey 8971 ac. Pop. 2497.—6, Kent, three parcs.—1 (27 ac.), 3212 ac. Pop. 3975.—2 (27 ac.), 59 ac. Pop. 1198.—3 (27 ac.), 81 ac. Pop. 875.—7, (27 ac.) Guernsey Pop. 1152.—6, Essex; 1236 ac. Pop. 3404.

PETER (St.), two parcs. Scot., co. Orkney.—1 F. 457.—3 (or North) Pop. 3844.

PETER (St.), a lake, Lower Canada, an expansion of the St. Lawrence, 9 m. S. W. Three Rivers 21 m. long, 15 m. to 20 m. broad, and in many places not exceeding more than 10 ft. or 11 ft. deep. It includes numerous islands, and receives several rivers. Its waters abound with fish.

PETER (St.), numerous places, Hungary particularly.—1 A vil., co. and 9 m. from Komorn with two churches and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1080.—2, A vil., co. Temesvar, on the Kőrös with a church. Pop. 1840.—3 A vil. Thibet Danube, co. and 8 m. from Wieselburg, with a church. Pop. 1898.—4, A vil. Transylvania, dist. and 8 m. from Kronstadt, with a Protestant and a Greek church. Pop. 1594.—5, A vil. Transylvania, on an affluent of the Maros about 26 m. from Radnót, with a Protestant and a Greek church. Pop. 1024.—6 (Baz.) A vil. Thibet Danube, co. Pressburg, on the Miava. Pop. 1538.—7, (Kapos) A vil. Thibet Danube, co. and 20 m. N. E. Stuhlweisburg in a fertile valley with a Protestant church, and a synagogue P. 1889.—8, (Rat) A vil. Thibet Thess, co. Torontal, on the Maros, 27 m. N. W. Temesvar, with a church, and some trade in cattle, wine, and wool. Pop. 3587.—9, (Sop) A market on Thibet Thess, co. Borsod, 9 m. N. W. Miskolc, with a Protestant and a S. Catholic church, a school, and some trade in corn, wine, and cattle. Pop. 8225.

PETER'S ISLANDS.—1, Anisl. N. Atlantic Ocean near the coast of Newfoundland, lat. 40° 41' N. lon. 55° 57' W.—2 Two small isls., S. coast Australia lat. 37° 21' S. lon. 138° 39' E.—3, An isl., S. Pacific; lat. 68° 57' S. lon. 90° 46' W. Heights upwards of 4000 ft. named after the emperor Peter I. by Bellingshausen.

PETER'S POINT (St.), a Channel Islands, esp. Isl. Guernsey, on the shore of a bay E. side, occupying the slope of a hill, and presenting a very attractive appearance from the sea, but which is not maintained by a nearer inspection. The streets are narrow steep, and crooked, but mostly well paved, and lined by old looking dusky houses. The environs are exceedingly beautiful, being studded with the handsome residences of the gentry who all live outside the town. The most interesting buildings are St. Peter's church, with a tower in the centre, surmounted by a low spire; St. James church, Elizabeth college, public hospital and the sea-market, one of the handsomest and most commodious to be seen anywhere. There are here two or three chapels of ease, and several places of worship for dissenters a public library assembly-room, mechanics institute, courthouses, prison and several banks. The harbour, formed by two piers, is small, but sufficient for the trade of the place. The roadstead affords convenient anchorage. Port George, a regular fort station on the heights, stands about half-a-mile S. from the town. It is considered to be of great strength. Pop. 16,778.

PETERS (St.), a small town, par. England, co. Kent, 1 m. from N. B. point Isle of Thanet or the North Foreland, and 2 m. S. by W. Margate. It has a church, Baptist and Wesleyan chapels, a set of well-endowed almshouses, and a charity and schools. Area of par. 8113 ac. Pop. 2975.

PETERS (St.), four parcs. Ireland.—1, Louth; 3428 ac. Pop. 18,789.—2, Roscommon; 7898 ac. Pop. 5603.—3, Wexford; 1405 ac. Pop. 1164.—4, (and Part of), Limerick; 4974 ac. Pop. 1180.

PETERBOROUGH, a town in Upper Canada, esp. dist. Col. born, on the Orombea, about 78 m. N. N. W. Coburg. It is well laid out, presents a handsome appearance, and has seven churches and chapels, a substantial courthouse and jail, and several mills, foundries, and distilleries. Pop. (1849) 2181.

PETERBOROUGH, an episcopal city, and arch. bor. England, co. and 23 m. N. by E. Northampton, I. bank Nise, with stations on the Great Northern, Eastern Counties, Northampton and Peterborough, and Midland Counties railways. In the old town the houses are various in height and extent, yet mostly and substantially built, some of the streets are spacious and the whole well paved and lighted with gas, and the market place is a fine square area, not inferior to any in the kingdom. The W. suburb, or new town, consists of most modern dwellings. The entire city is supplied with good water from rock wells. The principal building is its cathedral, founded by Paula, son of Paula, fourth king of Mercia, PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL, West Front. — From Bellon's Collection.

in 855, and destroyed by the Danes in 870. Being rebuilt in 936, the valuable gifts bestowed upon it by Edgar secured the name of the city to be changed to Glidenburgh, the golden city, which title ultimately gave place to its present name, derived from the saint to whom the church is dedicated. In 1116 great part of the edifice was destroyed by fire, and in the following year its restoration was commenced, but not till the opening of the 16th century did the structure assume its present aspect. The prevailing character of the building is Norman but it exhibits examples of transition, early English, decorated English and perpendicular styles. The most commanding feature of the building is the W. front piers in the engraving consisting of three magnificent piers, each 90 ft. high, surmounted by pinnacles and pinnacles, and flanked by towers with spires and pinnacles. The whole front forms a square of 150 ft. in height and breadth. Catholus of Aragon, wife of Henry VIII., was interred in this cathedral, also Mary Queen of Scots, but the remains of the latter were afterwards removed by James I. to Westminster. The winter processions show the remains of a cloister, a fine perpendicular gateway leading to the cloister, a massive tower and gateway connecting to the bishop's palace, and an old chapel, now used as the free grammar-school. Peterborough contains only one parish church, but has also places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Methodists. The other public buildings of any interest are the townhall, the new jail, the corn exchange, and the stations of the Great Northern, and Northampton and Peterborough, and Midland railways. The educational means of the city comprise the grammar-school an endowed charity school, a national school for both sexes, infant schools, and a number of private academies. The charities include the monastic almshouse, public dispensary, and other useful institutions. There are a theatre, and a literary and philosophical institution. The chief trade of Peterborough consists of coal, corn, wool, and timber which are conveyed along the Nene in barges; but it has received an impulse from the facilities of railway transit, and live and dead stock, and agricultural produce, are now sent in considerable quantities by rail, to London and other districts. It sends two members to Parliament. Thorpe Hall, a fine old mansion, formerly belonging to the Fitzwilliam family, is in the immediate neighbourhood. Pop. 8193.

PETERCHURCH par. Eng. Harford, 8069 ac. P. 780.
PETERCULTER, par. Scot. Aberdeen, 7 m. by 4 m. Pop. 1851.

PETERFALVA a vil. Hungary Bihor Themas, co. Neutra, 40 m. N. Pressburg; with a church, a townhouse, and three mills. Pop. 1116.

PETERHEAD, a seaport in Scotland, co. and 96 m. N. N. E. Aberdeen on a peninsula, the west E. point of Scotland, connected with the mainland by an isthmus, nearly 1 m. in breadth, and 1 m. E. of the mouth of the Ugie, in the German Ocean.

It is built to the form of a cross, and consists of five principal and several minor streets; the former well formed, well paved lighted with gas, and lined with houses, for the most part substantially built of granite, and often of handsome appearance; it is lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water. The buildings and other objects chiefly deserving of notice are the parish church, a handsome granite structure, with a spire 116 ft. high, a chapel of ease, a large and elegant Esplanade, a Free & U. Freehyetian, a Wesleyan, a R. Catholic, and two Independent churches, a town house, of a quadrangular form, and surmounted by a spire 116 ft. high, a market-cross, consisting of a granite pillar of the Tuscan order, a custom-house, an academy, a parabolic, a ragged, and various other schools, a mechanics institute, a valuable museum of natural curiosities and antiquities, and a subscription and a mechanics' library. The manufactures, which are unimportant, include some woollen and other goods, woven chiefly for houses in Aberdeen, castings, cordage, twines, and glass. In the building yards a considerable number of boats and large vessels is constructed. The trade is extensive, and has the advantage of two good harbours, the one on the N., and the other on the S. side of the peninsula; the water in the former being at spring-tides, about 15 ft., and in the latter from 12 ft. to 14 ft. The access to both harbours, though not naturally difficult, is greatly facilitated by a light-house on Buanan Ness, and in addition to other important improvements, which have been executed at an expense of 250,000, free communication between the harbours has been effected by cutting across the isthmus, and thus enabling vessels to get out in all states of the wind, while the communication with the mainland is still maintained by a custom swing-bridge. The principal imports are lime, wool, meal, pork, butter, cheese, eggs, fish, oil, and granite. The granite is obtained from excellent quarries, extensively worked in the vicinity, the fish, including both herrings (of which in 1851, there were cured here 65,668 barrels), and white fish, are chiefly obtained from the productive fisheries on the coast, in which a considerable number of boats is employed. The Greenland whale-fishery is among the most important interests of the town, the vessels fitted out for the whale and seal fishing in 1855, were 27 carrying 7855 tons. In 1851 there entered 50,841 tons of shipping of which 8599 belonged to the foreign trade; and there cleared 27,501 tons, of which 8175 were in the foreign trade. During the summer, Peterhead is much frequented by bathers, for whose accommodation both hot and cold baths have been provided, and in the vicinity are mineral springs, the principal of which, called the Wine Well, from the sparkling of its water, contains mixtures of iron and lime, and common and glaucous salt, and is in high repute for cases of indigestion, intestinal obstructions, and nervous disorders. The only places of interest near the town are the ruins of the ancient castles of Roddam and Ravensburg. As a borough, Peterhead is governed by a provost and 11 councillors, and unites with Banff, Cullen, Inverury, and Kintore, in sending a member to parliament. Its port, which formerly ranked only as an appendage of that of Aberdeen, is now separate and independent. Pop. 7593.

PETERHOF a vil. Russia, gov. about 10 m. N. & W. St. Petersburg. Its great and costly attention is its imperial palace, built in 1711, by Peter the Great, on the plans of the southeast Le Mond. It is a large but not very regular office, situated on a height on the Gulf of Finland, and surrounded by beautiful gardens, adorned with fountains, cascades, and groves. Pop. (1849) 3309.

PETERSBURG, a handsome town and port of entry, U. S. Coast, Virginia, 34 m. S. Richmond, on bank Appomattox, 19 m. above its entrance into the James. It has seven churches, a courthouse, and a jail. Flour, grist, and saw mills, roperies, tanneries, and printing-offices. It is one of the most commercial towns in the state, and carries on an active trade in the export of flour and tobacco. The river is navigable to this place for small craft, and the falls immediately above it afford extensive water-power. Pop. (1850) 14,800.

PETERSBURG (Sr), a gov. Russia, bounded N. by Finland and Lake Ladoga, N. E. Olonets E. and S. E. Norvich, S. Pskov, W. Lake Peipus, gov. Rostov or Kholmogorski, and Gulf of Finland, greatest length, N. E. to S. W. 265 m. breadth, 90 m., area, about 12,900 sq. m. It is, for the most part, a low flat, covered, to a considerable extent, with lakes and swamps, excepting small portions of the N. and S. the former being broken by the low hills of Olonets, and the latter partly traversed by a ramification of the Valdai mountain range. The whole of its drainage is carried into the Gulf of Finland, either directly by the Neva, Loupa, and Narva or indirectly by the Volkhov, Svir, Pechora, and Onega, which have their mouths in Lake Ladoga. The climate is severe, and the soil by no means fertile. Not above one-third of the surface is under cultivation, and the corn produced falls far short of the consumption. The forests are very extensive. There are no minerals of any consequence. Manufactures have advanced by rapid strides, particularly in the capital and trade, both foreign and domestic, is very extensive. For administrative purposes, the government is divided into eight districts. The greater part of it belonged to ancient Ingria, which during the war between the Swedes and Russians, in the time of Charles XII. became the principal theatre of hostilities, and in consequence suffered dreadfully. Ultimately Peter the Great succeeded in conquering it, and it was finally secured to Russia by the peace of Nystad. Pop. (1850), 991,000.

PETERSBURG (Sr) the capital of the Russian empire, near the mouth of the Neva, in the Gulf of Finland. lat. 59° 56' 30" N., lon. 30° 15' (observatory) E. (n.) The site is elbow. The Neva, on approaching the termination of its course, turns first N. and then W. After proceeding a short way in the latter direction, it divides into three main branches the first of which, under the name of the Great Neva, proceeds N. the next, or central branch, flows W. S. W., under the name of the Little Neva, and the third, forming properly a continuation of the main stream, and therefore called the Great Neva, flows S. W. and incloses a large tract of peninsula surrounded by water on three sides, and contiguous with the mainland only on the S. The branches form a number of islands, the two largest of which, separated from the peninsula by the main stream and Great Neva, are the Aptekarski or Apothecaries Island on the N., and the Vasilievskoy or Basilisk Island on the W. In the N. W. subordinate arms of the river form a number of smaller islands, of which the more important are the Petrovskii, Krestovskii, Kamennoi, and Elaginskii. These islands particularly the two largest, a small portion of the N. bank, and the winds of the peninsula on the S. bank, forming a series of flats which, taken as a whole, have nearly an oval shape, and are so low as to be constantly exposed to inundation, constitute the site of St. Petersburg. The Neva thought a broad, lively and pellucid stream, is generally shallow, and at its mouth is encumbered by a bar with not more than 9 f. water, so that the large vessels which are built at the city docks can only be transported as keels, to be fitted out at the great naval station of Cronstadt, about 16 m. below. Though an attack of the city by sea may be all but impossible, the approach by land presents no obstruction to an invading force, except a deep ditch or canal, stretching across the S. part of the peninsula, and a dike, situated on a low island, so near the centre of the city, that its guns, so far from defending, could not be used without demolishing it.

The larger and finer part of St. Petersburg being built on the peninsula, takes the name of the Bolshaya Storona or Great Side. All the rest to the N. on the islands and a bank, is designated the Petzhrborskiy. The communication between the former and the latter is maintained only by one stone and three boat bridges, but the deficiency is supplied by numerous ferry-boats of uncouth shape and fantastic colouring, which are constantly plying to and fro. Owing to the leviness of the site, though the loftier pinnacles and domes are seen at a considerable distance, the city whether approached by land or water cannot be said to become distinctly visible before it is actually entered, and hence the general impression produced is greatly heightened by a feeling of surprise. The stranger suddenly finds himself between noble granite quays, bordered by edifices of almost unrivalled splendour or in spacious streets of apparently interminable length, straight as an arrow unbroken by the slightest unevenness, and lined with lofty buildings of uniform structure, often lavishly adorned, and, in colour at least resembling marble. It is true that the impression is somewhat weakened by a narrower inspection, the greater part of the houses proving to be only of wood or brick, garmented with plaster. As it is impossible to obtain a complete view of the city from without, recourse is often had to the numerous towers, on which watchmen stand sentinel day and night, to give the alarm of fire, but by far the best station is the tower of the Admiralty, centrally situated on the S. W. part of the peninsula and on the bank of the Great Neva, and provided with galleries, from which all parts of the city may be seen in succession to the greatest advantage. Looking S. over the peninsula from this commanding station three small narrow streets, the Moika, next the Oshelars, and last the Fontanka, may be traced straddling aerolically from E. to W. and dividing the whole space into three quarters called respectively, the First, Second, and Third Admiralty Sections.

Radiating immediately from the tower, intersecting canals, and spanning them by handsome granite bridges, are the three principal streets, the Nevskii Prospekt or Nevsk Prospekt, on the right, the Gorskhovala Oulitsa or Puss Prospekt, in the centre, and the Yemomonskii Prospekt or Resurrection Prospekt on the right. The eye wanders along these streets from oad to and without obstruction. They are all of great length, width, and beauty, but the finest every way, and the greatest thoroughfare of the city, is the Nevskoi Prospekt, which is 7 m. long and 120 ft. wide, and has a double carriage-way with foot-paths paved with granite, or avenues shaded with lime-trees. Beyond the Fontanka Canal, both on the S. and E., and bounded in the former direction by the city fairs, and on the latter by the main stream of the Neva, is a large space, almost entirely covered with buildings, and forming in addition to the three Admiralty sections already mentioned, the Narva, Karakond, Kupetsko and Foundry quarters. Considerably to the E., on the S. bank of the river, may be seen the large villages of Great and Little Okhtin. Turning now to the opposite side of the town and looking N., the busy scene presented by the river immediately below first attracts the eye, which then wanders along the splendid quay which lines the E. side of the Vasilevskoy, and is bordered by a succession of noble edifices. The buildings of this island are chiefly confined to its S. and E. portions the W. and N.W. forming the far larger portion of the whole, is covered with trees or is under grass cultivation. On the N.E. the most conspicuous object is the island situated chiefly on the small island of Petersburg, but also possessing an extensive outwork on the island of Aptekarskoy, from which it is only separated by a narrow channel. N. of this outwork, another quarter of the city commences, and takes the name of the Petersburg quarter. It is much less compactly built than the Admiralty sections, the buildings gradually becoming more isolated, and giving place to extensive parks and gardens. The main resort is still more applicable to the islands of the N.W. which are chiefly occupied by places of amusement, public gardens, villas, and country seats. On the N.E. beyond the Narva, and on the S. bank of the river is the Viborg quarter which has already acquired considerable extent, and is rapidly advancing in importance. Few cities surpass St. Petersburg in public edifices.

PROSPEKT NEVSKOI ST. PETERSBURG.—From Dostoev, Vopros Fotograf on Beach No.

Churches.—The first in rank is the metropolitan church, or cathedral church of the Kenna Mother of God, in the Nevskoi Prospekt. It is in the form of a Greek cross, and has in front a large convex porch of Corinthian columns, from the centre of which a tower, somewhat deficient in elevation, rises, and is surmounted by a gorgeous dome. In the interior, 56 gigantic mosaics support the roof, and in niches along the sides are colossal statues of the Grand Duke Vladimir, Alexander Nevsky St. John, and St. Andrew. The Isaac church, finely situated a little S.W. of the Admiralty, in one of the largest open spaces of the capital, is much admired for its simple but lofty style of architecture, its grand proportions, and noble positions. The mere foundation of it, formed of piles sunk in swampy ground, is said to have cost £200,000. It is in the form of a Greek cross, and has five great sections, each approached by three broad flights of steps, and each whole flight composed of an entire piece of granite. Each entrance has a superb peristyle, with round monoliths of polished granite, 80 ft. in height and 7 ft. in diameter supporting an enormous frieze, above which, to twice the height of the peristyle, rises the chief and central cupola, glistening with gold, gilt on copper and supported by 30 granite columns. The Benozh church, situated to the N.E. of the peninsula, and originally belonging to a convent which still forms a vast pile, is built of white marble, and ornamented by five blue domes spangled with golden stars. The Frochajevsky church, or Spass Frochajevskoi faher one of the largest in the city, belongs to one of the oldest regiments of the guard, and is overladen both without and within with military trophies. The railing around the church-yard is formed of 800 French and Turkish cannon, mounted on three on granite pedestals, while every niche and recess of the interior is ornamented with captured columns and balustrades, pushed horse tails, &c. The church of St. Peter and St. Paul situated on the N. side of the island, is rendered conspicuous by its lofty and elegant gilded spire, but the building itself has a dingy and wretched appearance, and an interior which from the number of bays of fortresses, captured eagles, pushed horse tails, and balustrades of office, looks like an arsenal than a church. The chief object of interest is the imperial vault, where the remains of Peter the Great and of all his successors repose. There are numerous other Russian churches not underscoring of particular notice. The church of the English factory, situated W. of the Admiralty, is a splendid building, richly fitted up and seated for 1500 persons. The Dutch church is remarkable for its ample revenues, derived from grants of land made to it by Peter the Great, and afterwards built upon. Of the several churches possessed by R. Catholics, the principal one, situated in the Nevskoi is an elegant structure, with a Corinthian colonnade and a finely proportioned dome. In connection with the churches may be mentioned the monastery of St. Alexander Nevskoi, the only one in St. Petersburg; it is among the most celebrated in Russia, ranking next after that of the Trinity in Moscow and of the Cere in Kiev. It was founded by Peter the Great, and contains within its walls, churches, towers, monks' cells, and gardens. The great attraction here to the Russians, is the monument containing the remains of the saint, a consecrated grand duke. It is in the form of a pyramid 15 ft. high, of solid silver, and with the ornaments around it, also of silver is said to weigh 5000 lbs., or considerably more than two tons. The principal church or cathedral, built by the Empress Catherine, is of large dimensions, and surmounted by several domes. The interior is richly decorated with Italian marble, and the ornaments and treasures are of vast value. The long red cloisters which cluster round the church have a fine look, and are occupied by between 50 and 60 monks, who superintend a classical school, at which the average attendance is about 1000.

Palaces.—These are both numerous and remarkable for their colossal dimensions. The Winter Palace, while the emperor resides in it is said to be inhabited by 8000 persons. It is situated immediately E. of the Admiralty, with a front to the Neva of more than 700 ft., and is in the form of a vast square, the angles of which nearly correspond to the four cardinal points. It is the largest palace in the world, being one-third larger than that of the Emperor of Austria, and is not surpassed in point of splendour. It was so completely destroyed by fire in 1837, that it was necessary to rebuild it and one of the not least remarkable facts connected with it is, that its present form was the work of two short years. The interior is gorgeous, almost beyond description, consisting of suites of splendid halls, filled with marble, statues, precious stones, vases, and pictures. To the E. of the Winter Palace, and connected with it by several covered galleries, is the Hermitage, built by the Empress Catherine, in a style similar to that which made Frederick the Great build his Sans Souci, as a place where the night lay aside the cares and fumes of state. Its principal facade faces the Neva, but possesses little architectural merit. It is loaded, however, with precious objects of art and sword, and has a very valuable picture-gallery. The Marble Palace, not very appropriately called, since far less marble than granite and iron has been used in its construction, lies considerably E. of the Hermitage, near the Trinitzki bridge; it has a dark gloomy look, and its walls are of such massive blocks as to suggest the idea of a fortress rather than a palace. About 1 m. further E., on the banks of the Neva, stands the Taurida Palace; it is a long low building, of no merit; and is only remarkable for a ball-room of the extraordinary dimensions of 320 ft. long, by 70 ft. wide, and requiring 30,000 wax-candles to light it up completely. The Amvethoff Palace, on the Great Prospekt, near the Fontanka Canal, closes the brilliant range of buildings of which that street is composed. Though handsomely built, and now the favorite residence of the imperial family, and the place where the emperor receives ambassadors and holds the greater number of his councils, it does not possess much interest. The New Michaeloff Palace, so called to distinguish it from the Michaeloff Palace, or rather castle, built by the Emperor Paul, and now occupied by the school of engineers, is the residence of the emperor's brother, and is thought to be the most elegant building in St. Petersburg. Attached to it are fine ranges of offices, in one of which a celebrated riding-school is kept, the youth of which often perform feats and tournaments in the presence of the Court.

Government Buildings.—The Admiralty, to which as furnishing the best station for obtaining a full view of the city, reference has already been made, is an immense brick building, situated on the N. side of the square of same name, and surmounted by a slender tower with a gilt cupola. The main part of the building, from the centre of which the tower rises, lies parallel to the river with its N. side but has its principal facade on the S., facing the square. The length of this facade is nearly $\frac{1}{2}$ m., and at right angles to it are two sides stretching from its extremities N. towards the river, the E. side bounding the Winter Palace, and the W. the Isaac Square and Senate house, and each 450 ft. in length. A large portion of the Admiralty is occupied as school-rooms for naval cadets. Immediately below it, on the N., being the Brustin quay are Bostrats of ancient Rome, from which the approach of shipping may be observed. This attitude, with its bastions and bristling embrasures, mounted with 100 cannon, and defended by a garrison of 3000 men, forms a very conspicuous object. Besides the church of St. Peter and St. Paul, which has already been described, it contains within its inclosure the Mint and in its vicinity presents an object of great interest in the cottage of Peter the Great, consisting of three small apartments, one of them his chapel and containing, among other relics of that extraordinary man, the little boat which he constructed, and which may be considered as the germ of the powerful navy which he afterwards formed. Among the many other government edifices to which a general reference must suffice, the arsenals and ranges of barracks are particularly deserving of notice.

Literary Museum, &c.—The Imperial Library occupies a large building near the Kasan church in one of the finest squares of the city facing the Nevski Prospekt. It contains 400,000 printed volumes, and about 15,000 MSS. It has derived the greater part of its treasures from the spoils of Poland. The Oriental MSS. are particularly valuable and extensive. The only other libraries entitled to particular notice are those of the Academy of Sciences, 100,000 vols; of the Hermitage, 120,000 vols of which 10,000 are in Russian and of the Alexander Nevski Monastery, which, though very limited in extent (only 10,000 vols) has collections of MSS. of very great rarity and value. The principal museums are those of the Academy of Sciences, occupying a large portion of the magnificent buildings of that celebrated body, on the Vasilievskoy on the banks of the Great Neva, opposite to the Admiralty and including an Asiatic museum, rich in all kinds of curiosities relating to the East—an Egyptian museum, with a few fine specimens of papyrus, but not otherwise interesting, an ethnographic museum, enriched by the collections of various Russian travellers and navigators, and a general collection of coins and medals, in which the Russian series is very valuable and complete a good mineralogical, and a remarkably fine botanical collection, a museum of natural history containing an admirable collection of birds, exquisitely stuffed and well arranged, and among the larger fossil animals of which Siberia furnishes numerous specimens, a mammoth, perfectly fresh, the exception of one of the hind feet, 18 ft. long, exclusive of the tusk and at least 3 ft. higher than the elephant. The Academy of Fine Arts, also situated in the Vasilievskoy, on the banks of the Great Neva, has a portion of its magnificent apartments occupied as a picture-gallery; but is better known as an artistic school. A much more extensive and celebrated gallery is that of the Hermitage Palace, which comprises 41 rooms and contains splendid specimens of almost all the great masters. Two separate rooms are filled with an extraordinary collection of jewels, amethysts, medals, snuff-boxes ivory carvings, &c., and in the rooms more especially appropriated to pictures may be seen exquisite specimens of malachite and violet jasper, in the form of vases, ewers, &c. The other most important collections are the Rumovsk Museum containing a large collection of minerals, models and antiquities; and the museum attached to the Mining School, containing a large collection of fossil conchology, models of mines, mining instruments, &c., but distinguished particularly by its mineralogical treasures, unequalled in Russia, and thought not to be surpassed anywhere.

Educational Institutions.—At the head of these is the University only founded in 1819, but provided with 60 professors, and attended by about 500 students. The Chirurgical Medical Academy, founded by Peter the Great, receives about 600 pupils, and enjoys a high reputation. Military education, in all its branches, regarded as one of the first interests of the state, forms a conspicuous feature in the educational system of Russia, and is provided for liberally in the extensive dockyards, and in the immediate vicinity are a number of important public buildings, among others, the Holy Synod, where all the highest concerns of the church are regulated, the Hotel de l'Etat Major or head department of the army, adorned with a triumphal chariot and the War-office, conspicuous by its profusion of gigantic columns. On the opposite side of the Great Neva, stands the Exchange, and W. from it, facing the Little Neva, the Custom-house, both large and imposing structures. Immediately adjoining are two high and slender towers, adorned like the Columns colari by its mineralogical treasures, unequalled in Russia, and thought not to be surpassed anywhere.

ST ISAAC SQUARE AND SENATE HOUSE, ST PETERSBURG.—From Dostoff, Voppe Photographers on Russia, &c.

Educational Institutions.—At the head of these is the University only founded in 1819, but provided with 60 professors, and attended by about 500 students. The Chirurgical Medical Academy, founded by Peter the Great, receives about 600 pupils, and enjoys a high reputation. Military education, in all its branches, regarded as one of the first interests of the state, forms a conspicuous feature in the educational system of Russia, and is provided for liberally in numerous institutions. The Mining School, whose admirable mineralogical collections have already been referred to, is one of the most remarkable establishments of the capital. It occupies a grand and imposing structure, so situated as to form a very conspicuous object from the sea, and maintains above 300 pupils, who, after remaining eight years, and receiving a very liberal education, are sent to superintend the Government mines, or placed in the Mint. The Academy of Fine Arts has a building, fronting the Nevsky, 400 ft. long, and 70 ft. high, adorned with columns and pilasters, and surmounted by a central cupola, on which a colossal Minerva sits. This academy is already mentioned, is partly appropriated as a picture-gallery, but also occupied as a school of art, in which 300 pupils are maintained and educated. In addition to these, it furnishes residences to the professors, academicians, and other artists, so that the whole number of persons accommodated under its roof is estimated at not less than 1000. The other principal schools are, the Technological Institute, in which 215 pupils, men of respectable tradesmen, receive a general education, and special instruction in the various mechanical arts, cotton-spinning, weaving, carpentry, &c. the Central Pedagogical Institute or normal school, two gymnasia; the Female Institute of Smolnoi where 500 young ladies are carefully and gratuitously educated; the Ecclesiastical Academy the principal Protestant, the agricultural, commercial, veterinary, and various other schools.

Science.—The only one of these which can be said to have acquired a European reputation is the Imperial Academy of Sciences, which has long been distinguished for the valuable papers published in its Transactions. Most of them, however, are not the production of native talent, but of such celebrated foreigners as the government has had the wisdom to attract by the liberality of its patronage. Numerous other societies of repute exist, under the names of Russian imperial medical pharmaceutical mineralogical, economical agricultural, educational military, philanthropic, and artistic.

Hospitals, &c.—Of these, by far the richest and most splendid, but unfortunately the least benefited, is the Voenno-Morskoi Don or founding hospital. It is situated close to the Fontanka Canal in the best part of the town; has the air of a palace and, with its courts, gardens, and dependencies, covers a space of 28 acres. It was founded by Catherine II. The number of children received at first did not exceed 300 but has increased so rapidly that the number of annual admissions now exceeds 7000. No question is asked of those who bring them, but the simple one, whether or not the child has been baptized. The mortality is very great but, in consequence of the constant influx, the number of children of all ages, under the charge of the institution, exceeds 25,000. The largest ordinary civil hospital of St. Petersburg is the Obshchii, situated on the Fontanka Canal; it receives all applicants, but makes a small charge on those able to pay it. The military hospital is capable of containing 3000 patients. Various other hospitals are found in different quarters of the town.

Theatre, and Places of Amusement.—In addition to the theatre of the Hermitage, there are three of large dimensions—the Bolshoi or Great Theatre; the Alexandr Theatre, and the French Theatre. The three, as well as all similar establishments, are under the immediate management, and kept up at the sole expense of the Government. The passion of the Russians for scenic amusement is strong, and hence the attendance is usually full. Besides these theatres, there is a large wooden one in the island of Kammenoi, open only in summer. On the same island, and some other smaller islands adjacent, besides the numerous villas to which the greater part of the families who can afford it retire to spend the summer, are public gardens, with coffee-houses and taverns, swinging-yokes, Russian menageries, and other national amusements, which, on holidays, attract crowds of citizens, and afford the best opportunities of seeing Russian life in many of its most characteristic forms, and without disguise. In other quarters, however, and nearer the city or within it, the more noisy and frivolous amusements are excluded, and the gardens are laid out so as to furnish admirable promenades, or even serve a higher purpose. Of the latter description is the admirable Botanical Garden of the Aptekarskoi Island, which is open to the public on holidays, and is one of the most interesting sights of the capital; but, as a mere promenade, the Summer Garden takes precedence of all others. They are situated close to the Trinitzki Bridge, and though not very extensive, being only $\frac{1}{2}$ m. long, by $\frac{1}{4}$ m. broad, they form the great lounge of the population. Among the festivities which take place here the most extraordinary is that of Whit-Monday when a fair, which both bears the name and has the reality of a wife-market or bride-show, is held, the sons and daughters of the tradesmen assembling in their best attire to fix their partners for life. The whole affair seems so odd, that one cannot help feeling somewhat incredulous; but Kuman, who witnessed it, gives the following description:—The marriageable girls, decked with Oriental profusion of ornament, are ranged along the alleys of the garden, with some members of their respective families and the swank or match-makers behind them. The men, passing along at liberty to enter into conversation with any of the girls, and the acquaintance thus commenced often terminates in marriage.

Public Monuments.—Two of these are particularly deserving of notice. The one is the equestrian statue of Peter the Great, by Falconet, and the other the column by Montfard erected in honour of the late emperor Alexander. The statue, situated near the S. extremity of the Isaac bridge, facing the Neva, represents the emperor with head uncovered, and encircled by laurel, in the act of mounting a precipice, one hand holding the reins, while the other is calmly outstretched as in the act of benediction. The composition of the Caracottas finely with the very impetuosity of the horse, which stands on its hind legs springing forward while a serpent lies trodden beneath its feet. The pedestal a granite block, brought from a Finnish village 12 m. from St. Petersburg, and originally 45 ft. long 30 ft. high, and 25 ft. wide, was unfortunately broken in the cutting, and so much diminished, that it now forms two jointed blocks, 35 ft. long, 20 ft. broad, and only 14 ft. high. The height of the emperor's figure is 11 ft., and that of the horse 17 ft. The brevity and simplicity of the inscription in Russian and Latin harmonizes with the spirit of the statue.—Petrus Petrus, Christianus Vovrova, Prince, Catharina Secunda, alexander. The Alexander column stands in the open space between the Ritz Major and the Winter Palace, and is the greatest monument of modern times. It consists of a single shaft of red granite upwards of 80 ft. high, and computed to weigh nearly 400 tons, placed on a pedestal composed of an enormous block of the same red granite, about 25 ft. each way, and surmounted by a capital formed of Turkish cannon, above which the statue of an angel 14 ft. and of a cross 7 ft. are placed. The height of the whole is 150 ft.

Residence and Markets.—These are remarkable enough in themselves to justify a separate notice, and derive particular interest from the insight which they give into the Russian mode of doing business. The principal one, to be found in almost all Russian towns of importance, takes the name of Gostinnii Dvor, or Merchants' Inn. That of St. Petersburg has one of its four sides in the Nevskoi Prospekt, and is of irregular form, the longest being 1300 ft., and the shortest not more than 250 ft. A colonnade, of the height of the first story, goes round the building, and has a flat roof from which, as in a pavement, access is obtained to the magazines above. The court within is intersected by lanes and alleys, and partitioned off into many hundred compartments, in which every variety of merchandise is displayed, but with this peculiarity, that each separate quarter has its particular class of goods, and hence, according to its class, takes the name of Iron Row or Felt Row, or Book Row, &c. It has been estimated that in the Gostinnii Dvor, and dependent buildings, the number of dealers cannot be much less than 10,000. The most of them are men in blue coats and blue caps, with scarlet hair and beards, who keep up the appearance of customers, and importuning them to purchase. There are two other principal houses, called the Apendix Block and the Technika Dvor, containing about 5000 booths, tents, and stalls, but though, in some respects, even more characteristic than the Gostinnii Dvor, they resemble it in much, in arrangement and general features, as to make a separate description unnecessary.

Manufactures and Trade.—Several of the most important manufactures of St. Petersburg belong to Government, which then interferes with labour; not so much, it is said, for the profits which it yields—though these, especially when mate-police exist, are very considerable—but for the purpose of furnishing means by which all other parts of the empire may be instructed. One of the oldest and most splendid of the Government factories is the Spalerno where Gobelins tapestry and carpets are made; the latter partly for sale, but the former only for the furnishing of the Imperial palaces or for presents. Other important Government factories, celebrated either for their magnitude or the excellence of the articles produced in them, are those for the manufacture of playing cards, a monopoly at which 3000 hands are employed, porcelain, where the fine vases presented by the Emperor to foreign princes are made, and many objects of great value and beauty are exposed for sale, and plate and cut glass. The Government has also a very extensive cotton-factory, and iron-foundry chiefly for casting cannon and other ordnance. Several of these establishments are rivalled by those of private individuals, the most of whom are British. The principal articles, in addition to those already mentioned, are wools, silk and linen tissues, carriages, leather, and articles in leather, paper, earthenware, and mineral matters, such as wax and seal, corals, soap, tobacco, cabinet work, jewellery, watches, and various articles in gold, silver, mixed metals and bronze. Ship-building also, is carried on to a great extent for the navy, in the public dock yards and for commercial purposes at several private yards. The shallow waters of the river and the bar at its mouth, not admitting the passage of vessels which draw more than 9 ft. water might seem, at first sight to oppose an insurmountable obstacle to the building of ships of the line, but the advantages of being able to carry on the more important parts of naval architecture within the capital under the immediate eye of the Government are so great, that large sacrifices are made for the purpose, and the hulls, when finished are floated down, by means of canals, and other ingenious and laborious contrivances, and the other equipments transmitted by lighters to Cronstadt, where the ships are finally fitted out for sea. In 1863 there entered the port of St. Petersburg 2284 vessels—aggregate tonnage, 460,000 and there cleared, 2201—aggregate tonnage, 447,890. The shallowness of the river, and consequent want of a good harbour in the capital is a serious drawback to trade. Other advantages however compensate for this defect. With exception of Riga, there is no other proper port by which Russia is accessible on the W while the system of inland navigation by rivers and canals, is so complete and extensive as to give uninterrupted communication with the Black and the Caspian seas. The trade accordingly is of vast extent. The principal exports (value £3,429,016 in 1858) are tallow, hemp, and flax, metals, grain, hempseed, linseed, timber, vegetable oils, hides, leather, furs, skins, polish, tar, bristles, wax, and coarse linen cordage, wax, currier, linings, &c. The imports (value £11,864,488 in 1858) colonial produce, raw cotton, cotton yarn, cotton stuffs, fine linen, woollen and silk goods, hardware, dyes, lead, tin, coal, wines, &c. A very large share of this extensive trade is engrossed by the British.

St. Petersburg, having been founded by Peter the Great, in the beginning of the 18th century, is entirely modern, and has nothing so remarkable in its history as the rapidity with which, in spite of natural disadvantages, it has advanced to its present magnitude and magnificence. Instead of being situated in the heart of a beautiful and fertile district, the whole country around, when not forest or swamp, consists almost of morass, waste, or of poor arable land, from which the utmost exertions of industry fail to procure grateful returns, while the city itself is so low that whenever at the time when the volume of the river is augmented by melting snow and ice, a strong wind sets in from the S.W. as to retard the current, inundation, to a greater or less extent, almost invariably lays part of the lower streets under water, and has sometimes risen to such a height as to cause fearful calamities. In one of these inundations, which happened in 1824, and the height of which is indicated by marks upon the houses, above 16,000 persons are said to have perished. One great evil inseparable from this swampy alluvial site is the want of a solid foundation for the buildings. Water is found a few feet below the surface, and continued digging never succeeds in getting beyond a bed of mud. The consequence is, that all the houses must be built on piles, and an enormous expense incurred before they begin to appear above the surface. Peter the Great, however, was not the man to be daunted by ordinary difficulties. Even in his reign, St. Petersburg not only received the name, but assumed the appearance of a great capital. Its progress was not very rapid under his immediate successors, who were disposed to give Moscow the preference, but his later descendants, counting it an honour to follow in his steps have carried on their embellishments on a scale of almost unexampled magnificence, and none of the oldest and proudest of European cities have much to boast of when brought into comparison with St. Petersburg. Pop. (1858) 532,241.

PETERSBURG — A. v. Novaya, circle Olmitz; with a mill. Pop. 1181 — 3 A. v. Austria, Salcia, circle Troppau, with a parish church. Pop. 1376.

PETERSBURG vulgarly PRZECISÓW, a town in Prussia, Silesia, gov. and S.W. Legnica with a shroud numerous mills and bleachfields and a trade in timber. Pop. 3018.

PETERSFIELD a par. bar. England co. Hants, 23 m. E. N. E. Southampton with a fine equestrian statue of Wil. III. a town hall, a church, an Independent chapel, a college for boarding and educating paupers, and a national school. It sends a member to Parliament. Pop. 6550.

PETEISHAGEN a town in Prussia, Westphalia, gov. and 6 m. N. N. E. Münden, 1 bank Weser with a Protestant church, a castle, and normal school, manufactures of linen and tobacco and an active fishery. Pop. 2804.

PETERSHAM par. Eng. Surrey 600 ac. I. 658.

PETERSHAM a vil. and township, L. State, Massachusetts, at the source of the West Brook near its confluence with the Mv. 80 m. W. by N. Boston. It has a Baptist and two Congregational churches, several schools, two taverns and a number of saw and flour mills. P. 1850, 1227.

PETPETHAL a vil. Baden circle Middle Rhine, bail and 9 E. Oberkreuz with a chalybeate spring and a bathing establishment, which is much frequented. Pop. 1510.

PETERTON — I. A par. Eng. Monmouth, 8284 ac. P. 151 — 2. super-Ely, par. Wales Glam. 3010 ac. I. 221.

PETITON par. Eng. Lanc. 1544 ac. P. 376.

PETISWALD a vil. Bohemia circle Leitmeritz, on the frontiers of Saxony 21 m. S. E. Dresden with a church, manufactures of spoons and five mills. Pop. 2390.

PETISWALD (Mittel) a town in Prussia, Silesia, gov. and S.W. Breslau with a castle, two churches, saw-works, and saw and other mills. Pop. 2364.

PETERTAY par. Eng. Devon, 3500 ac. P. 561.

PETERVARAI a market in Hungary. Higher Theres on Heves 15 m. N. W. Erika with a church, an elegant classroom, and some trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1630.

PETTERWARDEIN or VARADIN (Latin Petruvarium) a town in Austria, Slavonia, only regimental district of same name 45 m. N. W. Belgrade. It stands partly on a steep rock and partly on a flat below and is the strongest fortress on the Danube. Opposite to it is the town of Nauas with which it communicates by a bridge of boats. The fortifications are extensive and contain barracks for a garrison of 10,000 men, but the town itself is very small. It has four churches, a military hospital, an arsenal, an gymnasium, and three normal schools and a trade in wine and fruit. Extensive marshes in the neighbourhood make the air unhealthy. A great victory was gained here in 1716 over the Turks by Prince Eugene. Pop. exclusive of garrison 4033 — The district forms an irregular belt of land, about 100 m. long but on an average not more than 20 m. broad; and consists generally of an extensive marshy flat bounded by the Danube on the N. E. and E. and the Sava on the S. The only product deserving of notice is the wine of Carlowitz. Area. 935 sq. m. Pop. 107,800.

PETHAM par. Eng. Kent 3255 ac. P. 630.

PETHERICK (Larzel) par. Eng. Cornwall, 1215 ac. Pop. 235.

PETHERTON two small tns. England, co. Somerset — 1 (South) A. tn. and par. 14 m. S. E. Taunton, 1 bank Perrott has a spacious cruciform church, places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans, and a free school. Devices nail-clutch and kid-gloves are manufactured to a small extent. Area. 5311 ac. Pop. 2608. — 2 (North) A. tn. and par. 7½ m. S. E. Taunton has a handsome church, with a lofty tower and an endowed school for twenty boys. Area 10,885 ac. Pop. 3845.

PETHELWIN, two pars. Eng. -1, (bards), Devon 8187 sq. m. Pop. 545-2, (bards) Cornwall; 5084 sq. m. P. 874.

PETICOMAG, a river, New Brunswick. See COMIC.

PETINA, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, N.E. Campania, at the foot of Mount Alburni. Pop. 1500.

PETIT BORDAUX, a vill. and com. France, dep. Haute-Loire, div. Fagny 5 m. from Bourville in a valley of its own name. It has a church, a house of lignite, and a trade in cattle, butter, cheese, charcoal, and articles in wood. William Fickel, a professor in the University of Paris, by whose care the first printing-press in that capital was established, was born here. Pop. 3205.

PETIT-CARAT, a seaport tn. and dist., W. Indies, Isl. Guadeloupe, on a bay of same name, W. coast Grande Terre, about 9 m. N.E. Pointe-à-Pitre. It has a considerable export of sugar and the district sends a great number of cattle. Pop. 5390.

PETIT KASHMIR, a vill. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 17 m. N.E. Mons; with manufactures of lace, a brewery, an oil, and two flour mills. Pop. 2109.

PETIT MARONNI, a vill. and com. Edgema, prov. and 12 m. E. Lodge with extensive manufactures of woollen cloth, numerous dye-works, a brewery, two brick works, and limestone and pavement quarries. Pop. 1651.

PETITLAD, a large tn. Hindustan prov. Gujarat 15 m. N. by R. Cambay lat. 22° 38' N. lon. 72° 57' E. with a good stone rampart.

PETROON, a tn. China, Manchouria, on bank Amur 78 m. N.W. Kirin-Uda, a place of banishment.

PETRA, a ruined city, formerly cap. of Arabia Petrea, to which it is supposed to have given its name in a narrow valley of the Wady Musa, surrounded by lofty and for the most part, precipitous mountains, about 110 m. S.E.E. Jerusalem. It is mentioned in Scripture (2 Kings xiv 7, Isaiah xvi 1) under the name of Sela was taken by Amarah king of Judah, who changed its name to Jekabiel and from the notices of it by Strabo, Ptolemy, Josephus, and various Christian writers appears to have been a place of considerable extent and great magnificence, and to have at one time commanded a large share of the traffic of the East. It contains a number of remarkable excavations, and covers a large space with its ruins, but the only building actually standing, though in an imperfect and dilapidated state, bears the name of Pharaoh's House, and seems to have been a palace. It is in the form of a square 34 yards each way. The river walls are nearly entire, and the E. one is surmounted by a handsome cornice. The front facing the N. was adorned with a colonnade, of which four pillars are still standing, and behind the colonnade is a piazza, from which three apartments are entered, one of them by a noble arch from S.E. to 40 ft. high.

PETRA, a tn. Spain, Isl. Majorca, 6 m. from Palma with a seashore several schools, two churches, an oil and numerous corn mills and a brandy distillery. Pop. 2669.

PETRALIA BOTTANA, a tn. Sicily prov. and 8 E. Palermo, near it are bituminous schist, iron pyrites, asphalt, and petroleum. 1 op. 6400.

PETREL, a tn. Spain, Valencia, prov. and 22 m. N.W. Almansa, in the valley of Ebro; with a townhouse, a prison, a famous Moorish castle on the hill which commands the town, two primary schools, a church, and two hermitages. Five parishes, a tile-works, an oil and two flour mills. Pop. 2537.

PETRELLA, a tn. Naples prov. Salerno 10 m. N.E. R. Campobasso. Pop. 3378.

PETRIEVENK, a market to. Austria Slavonia co. Verdes, on the Drava, 37 m. S.E.E. Pünfkirchen, with a church. Pop. 2046.

PETRIKAU, or PROKONIST, a tn. Russian Poland, on the E. Kalkoff, in a marshy district. It has seven R. Catholic churches, two monasteries, a university, a Jesuit college, and a gymnasium. Pop. (1841), 7422.

PETRINA, a tn. Austria, Croatian military frontier on the Kalpe, 33 m. E. Crikvenica. It is built chiefly of wood has a square plateau with multistoried two churches, a castle, several schools, and an hospital. Pop. 4064.

PETRIU, a tn. Nam. L. bank Hong-Kong, 53 m. E. Hankow lat. 18° 45' N. lon. 101° 15' E.

PETRU MARY, a vill. Hungary Thibier Thibier, on, and about 13 m. S.W. Temevar, with two churches. P. 1885.

PETROCKSTOW, par Eng. Devon; 4000 m. P. 874.

PETRONELL, a market tn. Lower Austria, near R. bank Danube, 23 m. S.E.E. Vienna, with an ancient parish church, three chapels, and a large and magnificent castle. Pop. 1102.

PETROPAULOVSKI or PETROPAULOVSKY, a seaport tn. Asiatic Russia, on a bay of same name S.E. coast, peninsula of Kamtschatka lat. (approx) 55° 1' N., lon. 156° 45' 30" E. It is defended seaward by a small battery; consists chiefly of two good streets, one of them broad and macadamized; and a number of detached wooden houses (clashed with reeds or dried grass, and surrounded with palisaded curtains and gardens) and has a Greek church of fantastic construction, a school, an hospital, several government offices and work shops, extensive sheds for drying fish which is the staple article of produce and export, and a small but excellent harbour. Pop. about 606.

PETROPAVLOVSK, a tn. Siberia gov. and about 180 m. W. Omak on the Irkutsk. It is a place of considerable strength, and is regarded as the most important military station on the line of that river. Its trade is very extensive, being a principal entrepot for the traffic between the E. and W., and a station for the overland traffic from Bokhara, Kulu, and the Kirghiz steppes. Pop. about 4000.

PETRORE (Str.), -1 par Eng. Devon; to an. P. 1025. -2 par Wales, Pembroke; 567 m. P. 86.

PETROVALK, a vill. Hungary so and 17 m. S.E.E. Pecs with a Protestant and a Greek church. Inhabitants, Slovaks and Rarais, all agriculturists. Pop. 5369.

PETROVITICH, a walled tn. European Turkey Romania, 50 m. N.W. Seres. It has a considerable trade in tobacco, which is grown in the vicinity.

PETROVU RAZLO, a vill. Austria, Slavonia, general ship Peterwardein, about 2 m. from Wetzova, with a R. Catholic church. Pop. 1815.

PETROVOSKELO, a vill. Hungary, Thibier Danube, at the confluence of the Oak E. with the Theiss, 4 m. from O-Boces. It has a R. Catholic and a Greek church and a trade in corn cattle and wine. Pop. 5573.

PETROVSK two tns. Russia -1 gov. and 70 m. N.W. Saratov near R. bank Volga on the slope of a hill and surrounded by the ruins of a fortress. It has ruins, a school, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1500. -2, gov. and N.W. Jurelev. Pop. (1842) 1603.

PETROVODSK, a tn. Krasn. gov. Olenok on the Losolevka, where it falls into Lake Unga, 123 m. N.E. St. Petersburg. It is poorly built has two wooden churches, a school and infirmary, an important marine and cannon foundry a gunpowder, falling and several saw mills and considerable manufactures of iron and copper ware, which find their principal market at St. Petersburg. Pop. (1842) 7567.

PETROV, a tn. Hungary, near Kormar.

PETS (U), or Bera, a market in Hungary on Tereza on the Temez, 13 m. S.W. Temevar with cavalry barracks. Pop. 1259.

PhTHM or PhTHM, a tn. European Turkey, Albania, near R. bank White Drino 50 m. N.E. Goutari. It has a number of mosques, and extensive manufactures of arms. Pop. 12 000.

PETREA (Mavran), and Raza, two vills. Hungary, forming a market to. co. and 10 m. W. And, on the Maros, in a fertile district with a R. Catholic church, and a considerable trade in horses, cattle, sheep and tobacco. Pop. 18,441.

PETT par Eng. Sussex 2350 m. Pop. 364.

PETTAU, or PRUZA (Latin Petovus), a tn. Austria, Styria, carols and 15 m. S.E. Harburg R. bank Drava, supposed, from the great number of antiquities found in it, to have been a place of great importance under the Romans. In 1806, on one of the first incursions by the Turks, it lost 16,000 inhabitants. It is now an insignificant place, with several disagreeable streets, a few churches, a school, a house of invalids, hospital, three monasteries, and some trade. It produces a good wine known by the name of Saethberger P. 1590.

PETTAUGH, par Eng. Shetland; 794 m. P. 286.

PETTIE, par Scot. Inverness; 8 m. by 4 m. P. 1764.

PETTINGOE, a market in Ireland, co. Donegal and Fermanagh, on the Temez, 15 m. S.E. Donegal; with a church, a R. Catholic chapel, Methodist meeting-house; two schools, and a dispensary. Pop. 406.

PETTINAIN, par Scot. Lanark; 8 m. by 2½ m. P. 448.

FETTINENGO, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div Turin, N. E. Spila near the Siroa, here crossed by a bridge. It has an ancient church with a magnificent portal and a lofty and elegant spire. Two monasteries, manufactures of woollen stuffs, bonnets, gloves, and slippers, and a trade in these and fruit, particularly chestnuts. Pop. 2370.

FETTINENGO, par Eng Sudelf. 1767 ac. P 379
FETTON, par Eng Salop 823 ac. Pop. 68.

FETTON, a vil. and com. Naples, -1 Am. prov Abruzzo: Ultra II, 6 m. S. S. Salerno, on a mountain. P 1800-2; A. m. prov Salerno, 10 m. S. E. Ischia. Pop. 1800

FETTYDUR, a harbour, Scotland, on Fife, 1 m. S. Kinghorn, N. shore Firth of Forth, and directly opposite Leith. It was formerly the principal ferry station across the Firth and still is a place of considerable traffic.

FETWORTH a market tn. and par England co. Sussex, 43 m. S. W. London irregularly built with a market-house and town-hall, a handsome church, with a lofty spire 160 ft. high, places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Calvinists, a free school, several almshouses, and a library and scientific institution. Area of par, 6982 ac. P 3439

FETZKAU, or FETKA a market tn. Bohemia, circle Budweis, about 7 m. from New Paka with a church, a school, a townhouse, a bathing establishment, manufactures of potash, two distilleries, and a mill. Pop. 1366.

FETZER, par Eng Sussex 4588 ac. Pop. 412
FETZERANG a tn. Italy Piedmont div and R. E. Cuni 1 bank Vespa, or Lancia, well built with two handsome modern dome churches, an hospital, a charitable endowment, an ancient palace, the remains of two feudal castles, manufactures of cotton, linens, and a trade in wine. Pop. 6080

FEVINGTON See FEVERLEY

FEWSEY, par Eng Wilt 4781 ac. Pop. 1291

FEYFHOARE, a tn. France, dep. Landes, 12 m. S. Dax, r. bank Gave de Pau at the foot of a hill crowned by an ancient castle. It has a lively trade in timber from the Pyrenees, and building-stone quarried in the vicinity. P 1648
FEYFON, or FEYFON, a tn. Hindooon, prov and 31 m. S. Aurangabad on the Godavari, long famous for its manufacture of cloths, with beautiful silk, gold, and silver borders

PEZA (La) or LAPEZA, a tn. Spain, Andalucia, prov and 24 m. from Granada with a courthouse and miserable prison, an endowed school for children, a church, manufactures of silk, charcoal burning, and numerous flour-mills. Pop. 3486.

PEZA a river Russia, flows in gov Archangel about lat 65 N., and lon 60° E. flows S. S. E. and joins r. bank Mezen 35 m. above the town of that name, total course, 140 m.

PEZZANAS (Lazio, Frosone), a tn. France, dep. Hérault, 1 bank Hérault, at the confluence of the Peiza, 26 m. W. W. Montpellier. It is well built has several spacious streets the ruins of an old castle, a fine parish church, and a theatre manufactures of linens, napkins, muslin, molasses, woollen and cotton covers, hats, soap and chemical products; several cotton and silk mills, extensive distilleries and a trade in grain, dried fruit, wood, olive-oil, peppers, cotton silk wool, and more especially brandy, wine, and spirits. Pop. 7217

PEZZELLA (La La Torreme, a tn. Spain, Nav. Cantab., prov and 80 m. E. Pavia, near the Urdia, with a church, prison, and primary school, manufactures of linen, two flour mills, and a trade in alcohol. Pop. 1197

PEZZANA, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div Novara, prov and S. Verceil with two churches, a charitable endowment, and a trade in corn and rice. Pop. 2340.

PEZZARE, or PEZZARO a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy prov Brescia, dist. and 5 m. S. E. Borgonovo with several churches, a missionary school and some low-foundries, supplied from mines wrought in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1663 PFaffenHOFEN, a tn. Upper Bavaria, on the Ilm, 26 m. N. Nurnberg, with four churches, a townhouse and hospital, woollen manufactures, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1912.

PFaffenAU, a vil. and par Switzerland can and 24 m. N. W. Lessau. It has a handsome modern church inhabitants employed in agriculture or cattle-rearing. Pop. 1871

PFALLZ See PALESTRINA

PFALSDORF, a tn. Rhenish Prussia, gov and 48 m. N. W. Düsseldorf. It is a struggling place, but the houses are generally well built. It contains a Protestant and a R. Catholic church, and was founded by Frederick the Great, who peopled it with a colony from the Palatinate. P 2670

PFARRKIRCHEN a market tn. Lower Bavaria, l. bank Roth, 26 m. W. E. W. Passau. It has two churches and an hospital, manufactures of cloth, and a trade in horses and grain. Pop. 1672

PFEDDERBREIM, a tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, circle Rheinhessen, 4 m. W. W. Worms. It is walled, has a court of justice, three churches, a ruinous old castle, and several mills. Pop. 2031

PFEFFERS, PEFFERS, or PEFFERS, a tn. and par Switzerland, cant. and 31 m. E. St. Gall. It is famous for its baths, situated in the vale of the Tamina, about 4 m. above the village, in what has been described as one of the most extraordinary spots, even in Switzerland. The baths are situated on a narrow ledge of rock a few feet above the impetuous torrent, and the buildings which form them, consisting of two piles connected by a chapel are so deeply sunk between the rocks that the sun, in the longest summer day, is visible above them only from ten to four o'clock. From 100 to 200 patients can be received at a time. The spring has a temperature of 98° Fah. and the baths which are vapour are 12 or 14 shallow wooden pans, each large enough to allow several patients to take them simultaneously. Their great efficacy is undeniable, but is not easily explained, as a pint of the water contains scarcely three grains of saline particles. The spring generally ceases to flow in winter but continues from spring to autumn. The water has little taste or smell, and is drunk as well as used in baths. A little further up the stream is the ancient Benedictine abbey of Pfäfers only recently suppressed. It is a vast edifice, built in 1605 in place of another destroyed by fire, and is much more remarkable for its splendid site than for its architecture.

PFEFFIKON and PEFFIKON a vil. and par can. and 11 m. E. Zurich, at the extremity of lake of same name. It has two small spinning-mills. Pop. 8011

PFORTE, or CONFLUENZA, a vil. Prussia, prov Saxony gov and 16 m. S. W. Merseburg, on the Little Saale, with a parish church and a celebrated school, at which from 180 to 190 scholars are maintained and educated gratuitously.

PFORZLIHM, a tn. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, at the confluence of the Enns and Nagold, 15 m. S. E. Karlsruhe. It is walled, has a castle and castle church, a high school, deaf and dumb institution, hospital, and several other charitable establishments manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, ordinary and macaron leather, trinkets, chemical products, copper and iron ware, and several spinning, oil saw, and other mills. Reichen in one of the most distinguished professors of the Reformation was born here. Pop. 7200

PFREIMD, a tn. Bavaria, Oberpfalz, 50 m. E. Nurnberg; with three churches, a castle, Franciscan almshouse, infirmary and Latin school, a mirror-polishing establishment, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1692

PHILLINDORF, a tn. Baden, Lake circle, on a hill above the Oellbach, 19 m. N. Constantine. It was once an imperial town, governed by its own counts but was almost destroyed in the Thirty Years War. It contains an hospital, and has some manufactures and trade. Pop. 1700

PHILLINGEN, a tn. in Württemberg, circle Schwarzwald, 4 m. S. Heilbronn, with manufactures of hosiery, paper-mills, and a trade in fruit and cattle. Pop. 4017

PHLYDS, a vil. Austria, Tyrol, circle and 22 m. S. S. W. Innsbruck, opposite to St. Anton with which it is connected by a bridge at the entrance of the famous pass of St. Antonthal. It has a church and an hospital. Pop. 1319.

PHONGSTADT a tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov Starkenburg, 8 m. from Hensheim well built with a church, a synagogue, and numerous mills. Pop. 3068

PHYV, a vil. and par Switzerland cant. Thurgau, on the Thur, here crossed by a handsome bridge, 10 m. S. W. Constance. It stands on a lofty eminence, in a fertile district has a church, which is used in common by Protestants and R. Catholics and an old castle. Pop. 1006

PHALSBURG (mo. Palatinate) a tn. France, dep. Meurthe, 12 m. E. N. E. Barrebois, strongly fortified by Vauban and commanding the passes of the Vosges. It has a large and richly-decorated church of the reign of Louis XIV., a handsome townhouse, conventual college, formerly a Cistercian convent, a barracks, extensive arsenals, and manufactures of brandy, liquors, bricks, tiles, &c., and a trade in grain, wood, wine, cattle, and building-stone. Pop. 2612

PHARI or PARMORA, a fortress, Tibet, towards the Russian border. Lat. $29^{\circ} 45'$ N. lon. $80^{\circ} 14'$ E. It is an irregular stone building, famous of great strength by the natives.

PHARSALEIA, a city, European Turkey. See SAVALANDER.

PHILADELPHIA, an Isl. Persian Gulf. See PERSEPOLIS.

PHILADELPHIA, a city, Greece. See PERSEPOLIS.

PHILADELPHIA, a city, Turkey in Asia. See ALIA RUMI.

PHILADELPHIA, a city U. S. State, Pennsylvania, next to New York the largest city in the American Union, 125 m. N. E. Washington, advantageously situated between 1. bank Schuylkill, on the W., and 2. bank Delaware, on the E., 5 m. above their confluence lat. (Schuylkill) $39^{\circ} 57'$ N. lon. $75^{\circ} 50'$ W. (a). The river, bending towards each other approach till not more than 2 m. asunder, and form a neck of land rising gradually from either bank to the height of about 64 ft. above ordinary high-water mark. The city is built on this neck of land, stretching continuously over the whole space between the rivers, and to a considerable distance N. and S. particularly along the Delaware, so as to have a total perimeter of about 9 m. It consists of the city proper and of several districts or suburbs, which nearly equal it in extent, and are immediately contiguous to it, though placed under different municipal jurisdiction. Both city and suburbs are remarkable for the regularity and uniformity of their structure. The city in particular consists of a parallelogram formed almost with mathematical exactness, except on its E. and W. sides, where the streets facing the rivers have been allowed to deviate a little in following the line of their banks, and in laid out in long lines of streets cutting each other at right angles, and running as nearly as possible in the direction of the cardinal points either E. and W. or N. and S. The whole area is thus subdivided into a great number of isolated blocks, so uniform in appearance as to produce somewhat of a monotonous effect, and occasion considerable perplexity to a stranger from the want of distinctive features to mark out the different localities. The two principal streets, Broad Street and Market Street, meeting a little W. of the centre of the city cut it longitudinally and transversely into four nearly equal sections. The former running N. and S., is 180 ft. the latter extending E. and W. from river to river 100 ft. wide. With the exception of Broad Street and Market Street, already noticed, Mulberry or Arch Street 66 ft. and the two Front Streets, each 60 ft. wide, all the other principal streets have a uniform width of 50 ft. Some of the blocks made by the intersection of the streets, instead of being built upon, have been formed into squares. Among others may be mentioned Independence Square, laid out in shady walks and grass plots Washington Square, affording an elegant promenade Franklin Square, with a magnificent fountain in its centre and Penn Square. Many of the streets are well planted with rows of trees, and all of them are well paved well cleaned by an excellent system of sewerage, for which the gradual slope to the river affords great facilities well lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water raised from the Schuylkill at Fairmount by powerful and ingeniously-contrived water-wheels. The houses are substantial buildings, chiefly of brick, and generally with few pretensions to elegance of architecture but from the abundance of white marble obtained in the neighbouring counties of Montgomery and Chester, many of them are approached by flights of steps and rest on basements of the material. The different colors of the basement and superstructures thus form a pleasing contrast, the effect of which is heightened by other railings, often topped with brass.

The public buildings for the most part either constructed throughout or faced with the beautiful white marble already mentioned, are generally handsome, and do not suffer by comparison with those of any other city in the Union. The first notice is due more however on account of its venerable antiquity and historical recollections than its architectural merit, to the Independence Hall, in which the Declaration of Independence was framed and signed. Independence Hall, which has been carefully preserved without any alteration of its appearance at the time when the founders of American freedom sat in it, contains a statue of Washington, which, though only of wood, is said to be an excellent likeness. The Custom-house, built originally for the U. S. Bank, is a beautiful Grecian structure, modelled on that of the Parthenon at Athens, entered through a fine Doric portico of eight marble columns, 43 ft. in diameter and 37 ft. high. For outlines and proportions, few edifices of the city can vie with those of the bank. The Pennsylvania Bank, built of white marble has, on each front, a portico of six Ionic columns. The General Bank is faced with a marble front, and adorned with a Corinthian portico; and the Bank of North America, deserving of notice as the first institution of its kind in the U. States, has lately erected new premises, conspicuous both for the taste and elegance displayed in their architecture. The U. States Mint has two Ionic fronts, each 123 ft. long and adorned with Ionic porticoes. The Merchants Exchange is distinguished by a semi-circular portico on its E. front, and an imposing Corinthian colonnade rising from an elevated basement. The Eastern Penitentiary, in the N. W. corner of the city, occupies a square of 16 acres, surrounded by a wall 30 ft. high with turrets at its angles, and is built on what has been called the Phœnician principle, the different cells so radiating from an octagonal tower in the centre, that the sentinel placed there has them all at once within his view. The U. States Navy yard, in the S. E. quarter of the city, incloses an area of about 13 acres, fronting the Delaware, and in it some of the largest ships of the Union have been built and fitted out.

MECHANIC LEONARDSON, PHILADELPHIA. — From a Lithograph after A. P. KILGORE.

The churches of the different denominations number above 100, of which 28 are Methodist, 27 Episcopal, 25 Presbyterian, 16 Baptist, 13 E. Catholic, 7 Friends, 5 Lutheran, 4 Reformed Presbyterian, 4 Associate Presbyterian and the remainder miscellaneous. Among these are 12 exclusively appropriated to coloured persons. The Jews have three synagogues. Several of the churches stand out as prominent ornaments of the city, but the far greater number are devoid of towers or steeples or any other features to distinguish them from the other buildings. Among others, notice is due to the Episcopal church of St. Stephen, a fine specimen of Gothic, and ornamented by two octagonal towers. Christ Church, also Episcopal, the oldest church in Philadelphia, having been founded in 1691, and conspicuous by its spire, 196 ft. high, containing a chime of bells. St. John's, E. Catholic, a Gothic structure, flanked at each of its front corners with square towers; the First Presbyterian, said to be modelled on a Grecian temple, and entered by a portico of six Ionic columns; and the Fifth Presbyterian, distinguished for the beauty of its architecture.

Among the educational and literary establishments are the University, occupying two handsome edifices, enclosed by open grounds, and comprising three departments—the academic, medical, and dental—the last the oldest and largest in the Union, having an attendance of 400 to 500 students. Jefferson Medical College, Pennsylvania Medical College, and Howard College for orphans, named after its founder who left funds so ample that he directed half a million sterling, or more if necessary, to be expended on the buildings alone, but coupled the bequest with the very singular restriction that no ecclesiastic, missionary, or minister should hold any appointment in the college, or be admitted for any purpose or as a visitor within its premises. The directions as to the buildings have been fulfilled both in the latter and the spirit, and the grand central edifice, or the college properly so called, and the side edifices, where the teachers and pupils reside, form together by far the most magnificent establishment for instruction which the Union can boast. The restriction presented a greater difficulty, because it seemed to intimate an intention on the part of the founder to exclude the objects of his benevolence from the privilege of religious instruction and to train them up in a kind of practical heathenism. The difficulty has been happily surmounted by an ingenious interpretation of another part of the deed, which directs that pains shall be taken to instil into the minds of the scholars the purest principles of morality. From this it has been inferred that he could not have intended to exclude the use of the Bible, where alone the purest morality can be learned or a general course of religious instruction, by which alone the practice of pure morality can be successfully enforced and hence the directors of the institution have felt themselves justified in leading the students to have family worship morning and evening and to perform regular religious services twice every Sunday, either personally or by some competent layman. In addition to the colleges now mentioned, a comprehensive and efficient system of public education has been established the city and county of Philadelphia having for this purpose been erected into a separate school district. This system includes a high school in which under a principal and 10 professors, a superior course of education is given, embracing ancient and modern languages, mathematics, science—natural, mental, moral, and political—drawing, &c. next grammar next secondary and last primary schools. In these schools there are about 400 female and 100 male teachers, and not less than 50,000 pupils, the whole maintained at an annual expense of not less than $40,000. The principal literary and scientific associations are the American Philosophical Society possessing a valuable library of 20,000 vols., a cabinet of minerals, fossils and antiquities and has published several volumes of transactions the Academy of Natural Sciences, occupying a new and splendid hall and possessing a library of 19,000 vols., and a cabinet of natural history supposed to be the best in the U. States, and particularly rich in birds, of which the specimens are about 25,000 the Athenaeum, which occupies a fine building in the Italian style, and has a library of 10,000 vols., the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, accommodated in the buildings of the Athenaeum and the Franklin Institute, for the promotion of the mechanical arts. The largest and most valuable library of the city, founded in 1781 chiefly through the influence of Dr. Franklin, now contains above 60,000 vols.

Among the numerous benevolent institutions are the Pennsylvania Hospital, a spacious and well managed establishment, consisting of a centre and two wings, with a large and beautiful area, in which a colossal bronze statue of William Penn has been placed the U. States Marine Hospital, occupying an extensive and elegant edifice of white marble, with a fine Ionic portico, and intended to provide for invalid officers and sailors of the navy, the Almshouse, a very large structure of imposing appearance, situated within an enclosure of 10 acres, intended to provide for the poor of the city and adjoining districts, and containing on an average not less than 2000 inmates; the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, the Institute for the Blind and many other humane establishments.

Manufactures are carried on to a large extent, and employ numerous industrial establishments—saw-mills, foundries machine shops, woolen and cotton factories print and dye works ropewalks, tanneries, distilleries, breweries potteries, sugar-refineries building-yards &c. Other articles produced are cutlery and hardware, plate, and various articles in precious metals brass and copper wire glass, paints and drugs, furniture, books, including a great number of periodicals, newspapers, &c. Trade is still more extensive and continues to make rapid progress. In consequence of the admirable facilities already possessed or in course of development. In the Schuylkill and Delaware, it possesses the advantage of a double port the former for domestic or internal trade and the latter chiefly for foreign commerce. That of the Delaware, in particular the channel of which is here nearly 1 m wide, admits vessels of the largest size directly from the coast, though at the distance of 120 m. The facilities for navigation and communication, three bridges span the Schuylkill—one a handsome suspension bridge, among the first of the kind erected within the Union another a wooden bridge 1250 ft. long and a third, which in magnificence of structure far surpasses the others, and is so spacious as to serve both for a railway and an ordinary thoroughfare. This railway is only one of a number by which Philadelphia has been brought into immediate communication with the most important cities of the Union and made theemporium of a vast and increasing traffic, chiefly with the S. W. and N. W. The exports in 1852 consisting chiefly of wheat and Indian corn in flour and grain, beef pork hams and other provisions lead from manufactures, woolen manufactures candles and tallow and sperm oil bark cotton in bales, coal, tobacco, furniture, &c. amounted in value to nearly one million sterling. The imports in 1851 exceeded two and a half millions. In 1864 the number of vessels which arrived at the port was 616, of 133,935 tons and departed 506 of 153,735 tons.

Philadelphia was founded by William Penn in 1682, and laid out on a plan which, in its outline and divisions, is seen ually the same as that which still exists. In this plan, he is said to have attempted to realize the idea he had formed of ancient Babylon. Owing to the wisdom of its founder, and his strict observance of equity in dealing with the native Indians, the city had comparatively few obstacles to struggle with, and, reaching in its site advantages of which few cities can equally boast, made rapid progress. One of the most fortunate events in its history was the selection of it for a residence by the celebrated Dr. Franklin, to whose practical wisdom and philanthropy it is indebted for many of its most important improvements. It made an important figure during the Revolutionary war, the Declaration of Rights having been adopted in it in 1774, and the Declaration of Independence passed from it in 1776. In 1777 it fell into the hands of the British, and remained in their possession for about nine months. In 1787 the Convention which arranged the Constitution of the United States met in it. In 1790, the first Congress under that Constitution, by selecting it for their place of meeting, essentially made it the capital of the Union, which it continued to be considered till 1800, when it was supplanted by Washington. Pop. in Philadelphia (1850) 408,762.

PHILATES, a town in Turkey in Europe, Albania, 24 m. S. by E. Delvino, houses mostly separated from each other by gardens of olives, and regularly peopled with leopards for masonry. The vicinity is fertile and produces much corn, oil, and tobacco. Pop. about 4000.

PHILIP ISLAND a British royal settlement S Pacific Ocean, S. from Norfolk Island lat. 29° 5' S. lon. 167° 47' E. (N.) of considerable height, and on the N and W very rugged and few trees, and those much lost by the S E winds.

PHILIP ISLANDS—1. Two small isls. Caroline, 5 m. apart lat. 8° 0' N. lon. 140° 32' E. They are nearly united by a long sandy spit above water they are low covered with shrubs, but few tall trees—2. A small isl., about 1½ m. long and ½ m. broad. 3½ m. from the landing place Sydney Bay. On its S. side is a remarkable peak—3. An isl., Low Archipelago, 32 m. long and 120 m. in circumference. It is low and incloses a lagoon. Its few inhabitants are of docile disposition. Lat. (W point) 16° 27' S. lon. 144° 1' W.

PHILIPPEVILLE a fortified town, Belgium prov. and 23 m. S.S.W. Namur. Its barracks can accommodate at least 5000 men. It has a church a chapel a communal house, and an hospital manufactures of earthenware, quarries of marble, and saw mills both for marble and wood. Pop. 1165.

PHILIPPEVILLE, a seaport and recently formed city Algeria, prov. and 393 m. N. E. Constantine, near the ruins of the ancient Buzanda, at the head of the Bay of Stora. It is well laid out, has several spacious squares, and fine streets, a large military hospital with a handsome chapel a parish church, and a chamber of commerce, and a brisk trade. Pop. (1849) 7245 of whom 6153 were Europeans.

PHILIPPI a ruined town, European Turkey Macedonia in a plain 10 m. S E Drama. It took its name from Philip Augustus and Antony on the other and from its having afterwards become the scene of the sufferings and labors of the apostle Paul, who founded his church under the remarkable circumstances recorded in Acts xvi., and addressed one of his epistles to it. It is now a heap of ruins, of which the most remarkable are the remains of the Acropolis, crowning an isolated height, and consisting of three ruined towers, and considerable portions of walls and those of a kind of palace, the original splendor of which was altered by exciting pillagers, and capitals of the finest white marble.

PHILIPPINES, or PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, an archipelago in the Pacific Ocean, of a triangular form N E of Borneo having W the China Sea, E the S Pacific, and E the Sea of Celebes; lat. 5° 35' to 19° 38' N., lon. 117° 21' to 126° 5' E. It consists of 40 islands of considerable size, and a large number of smaller ones. Of the former the chief are Luzon Mindoro, Samar, Panay, Leyte, Zebu, Negros, Bohol Mis dano, and Palawan (which see). The shore-lines and internal surface of the larger islands are extremely rugged and irregular. Their magnificent mountain ranges are clothed with a gigantic and ever-blooming vegetation, and between these lie extensive slopes and plains of the richest fertility, watered by numerous lakes and rivers, which afford abundant means of irrigation and transport. On the W parts it rains from June to September but in October a change of wind transfers the rains to the E parts. These rains are so intense as to make vast lakes of the low grounds, and to render the highways impassable. The heats are tempered by perpetual moisture, and by the alternations of the land and sea breezes. The climate on the whole is healthy. Earthquakes are frequent, and often very destructive.

Metaliferous mountains everywhere occur. Gold is procured in the sand of the rivers. Iron stone is found yielding 80 per cent of iron, and rich specimens of copper attest its presence. Among the numerous volcanoes, extinct or active abundance of sulphur is found. Coal exists in some spots, but is not worked to any extent. There are vast deposits of limestone and marble, and negro-producers of magnesian and aluminous. The mountains are covered with gigantic timber. Among plants cultivated for use are the sugar cane (from which the rice apple (Broussais cuneata), the balsam-gum tree (Boronia goodenifolia) for their filaments, the cocoa, and other palms, the cotton, coffee, and cacao-tree the sugar-cane, indigo, tobacco, and the tamarind. Cassia, clove, the wild nutmeg and the red and black pepper vines are found in Mindanao. Rice is raised in large quantities, both for home consumption and export. To these add maize, wheat, yams, the sweet potato, and a great variety of delicious fruits, oranges, lemons, &c.

The buffalo is employed in villages, and as a beast of burden. Both it and the ox are found in a wild as well as domesticated state. The Philippines produce small but spirited horses, deer, hogs, goats, and sheep diminutive foxes and gualles several varieties of monkeys, wild cats, the lepus, a kind of flying cat &c. The woods are full of game-cocks, pigeons, eagles, pelicans, herons, wild ducks, quails, and the smallest-sized falcon known.

The jungle swarm with bounding birds, parrots, and the rhinoceros-like Manis (see ante). On the shores are found the sea-eagles, whose nests are so prized by the Chinese as food. The lakes and rivers teem with crocodiles and fish. Fish, also, including crustaceans, are found in great variety in the seas and there is no lack of serpents, lizards, insects, and reptiles.

The natives are of diverse origin. Wild tribes, some of which are extremely ferocious, still haunt the mountains. The chief mountain tribes are the Negritos, diminutive negroes, who have given their name to the island Negros, though not confined to it, and the Aetas, or Aetas, a dusky or copper-colored race, which, like the Dyaks of Borneo, slay men for the sake of procuring their heads. But the great mass of the subjects of Spain are divided into the Tagals, including Luzon, and the Manilas, who inhabit the other islands. These speak respectively the

RUINS AT PHILIPPOPOLIS.—From Capt. Stewart, R. F. Sketches in Macedonia.

of Macedonia by whom it was fortified rose to be a place of considerable importance and possesses great historical interest, both from the memorable battle fought in its vicinity A.D. 42, between Brutus and Cassius on the one side, and Dyaks of Borneo slay men for the sake of procuring their heads. But the great mass of the subjects of Spain are divided into the Tagals, including Luzon, and the Manilas, who inhabit the other islands. These speak respectively the and Bataan tongues, each of which has a variety of dialects. The Tagals are more addicted to agriculture than the Bataans, who, like the Malays, are attached to a sea-life and fishing. Both Tagals and Bataans unite the indolence and the artistic ingenuity of the Hindus, with the vindictiveness of the Malays and their passion for sorcery. The Chinese play an important part in the Philippines. Restricted to tillage by the law, their activity and address make them indispensable as mechanics, shopkeepers, and traders. They have civil regulations and a police of their own conform to the British church, celebrate with great magnificence the festival of their patron saint, St. Nicolas and being envied and hated by the Indians, add the Government in maintaining that balance of opposing interests to which mainly it looks for the support of its own institutions. Half-castes, Indo-European and Indo-Chinese, engross much of the business and wealth of the islands. The independent tribes are partly Mahometans and partly heathens. The subjects of Spain are professedly Catholics, and under a hierarchy with the archbishop of Manila at its head.

The textile productions of the Philippines are 52 in number, from the delicate and costly pina mulina, made from the pine-apple fibre and asesame made from it, mixed with the abaca filament to coarse cottons, tacking and the beautiful meta made of the abaca and grommet palm fibres. Hats and cordage are manufactured to a considerable extent, and as a Government monopoly, cigars European art is successfully imitated by the natives in ship-building and coach building in the dressing and varnishing of leather, and in the manufacture of cordage. An extensive trade, which has increased rapidly since the dissolution of the Company of the Philippines in 1834 is carried on in exporting sugar, tobacco Manila hemp, indigo, coffee, birds'-nest, trepang, eye-woods, hides, ratana, mother-of-pearl, gold dust, &c. and in importing manufactured cotton goods, sugar, stores, wines and liquors, porcelain, cutlery, metals, drugs, &c.

Luzon is distinguished as a grand division from all the other islands these being called Bataans. All, however, are, together with the Marianas Islands, under the same central government at Manila. The whole Spanish dependencies are divided into 83 provinces, but some parts of these are only nominally subject to Spain. The provinces are divided into pueblos, or townships.

The supreme civil and military government is in the hands of a governor-general appointed by the crown. Besides being commander-in-chief of the land and sea forces he is president of the supreme court of justice, vice-patron (patron, visceroy) and sub-delegate judge of convicts, posts and expenses. In the discharge of these functions he is assisted by ministers and justices with whom to advise or to whom he may delegate his powers. An alcalde mayor or corregidor is appointed directly by the crown for each of the provinces, as administrative, judicial and fiscal officer. The regulations for their conduct are excellent, but the execution bad. Each pueblo under a native gobernadorcillo, or mayor popularly elected and these again are assisted by inferior officers, chosen also from the natives presented by the inhabitants. The Chinese and Chinese half-castes are allowed magistracies of their own. Both army and marine consist almost entirely of natives.

History.—The Philippines were discovered by Magellan in 1590, and after repeated expeditions, several of which proved disastrous, were finally annexed to the Spanish dominions, and named after Philip II. They were designed as a field rather of missionary than of commercial enterprise, at least, if possible, for the unkindness of cruelties practised by the Spaniards in America. Hence, the religious orders have from the first had great influence in the establishment and institutions of the colony and to them the land chiefly belongs. In 1763 Manila was taken, and for a short time held by a British fleet. Since the loss of her occasional American possessions the Philippines are now of great importance to Spain and their production and trade are in a state of rapid development. The total population has been estimated as 5,000,000 but, from more accurate data, is found to be 5,575,000. (Mallet's Los Iles Philippines, M. Miching. Wilkes.)

PHILIPPOLIS, a vil. S. Africa, in the Griqua country, on a flat surrounded by remarkable hills of basalt. It consists of a single street of mud cottages, a Dutch missionary chapel built of stone, and a number of mat huts.

PHILIPPOLIS, or FLIDIA in European Turkey, Roumetia, on an island formed by the Maritsa, 86 m. W. N. W. Adrianople. In 1818 it was almost totally destroyed by an earthquake, but it has since recovered through its trade and manufactures in silk cloth. Pop. 80,000.

PHILIPPOVA a vil. Hungary, on Bacs 8 m. from Kala, with a church. The soil is strongly impregnated with sulphate. Pop. 1167.

PHILIPPSBURG a town Baden dreie Linteln in h. Rhine, in a marshy and unhealthy district, 16 m. N. Carlsruhe. Its fortifications, once strong were demolished in 1799 after a bombardment by the French. It contains a superior burgher school and has some trade in cattle and wool. Pop. 1840.

PHILIPPSBURG or GRAND BARR a seaport in, W. Indies, sep. St. Martin one of the Leeward Islands on the Dutch portion, S. W. coast. It is a large place, with a good harbour, a considerable trade and three large ponds, where salt is manufactured for export.

PHILIPSIAND (Str.), an isl. Holland in the N.E. corner of prov. Zealand. It is fertile contains a village of same name a church and a school. Pop. 654.

PHILIPSTAD or FLYVSTAD, a town Sweden, 120 and 86 m. N.E. Carlstad on a stream which flows out of Lake Lärne's Lake Duglas. It has a handsome church, and a trade in iron. Pop. 530.

PHILIPSTOWN three parts Ire. Lond. — J. 1038 sep. Pop. 418 — J. 2880 sep. Pop. 1809 — J. 2800 sep. Pop. 85.

PHILIPSTOWN a small market in Ireland King's co. on the Grand Canal 4½ m. W. by S. Dublin, with a hand some court-house and cavalry barracks the parish church of Kilderry, a R. Catholic chapel and two schools. P. 748.

PHIL LACK par Eng Cornwall 5337 sep. P. 4890.

PHILLEGH or FLILLY par Eng Cornwall, 2303 sep. Pop. 446.

PHILIP (Punt) Australia. See MELBOURNE.

PHILOE an isl. in the Nile Upper Egypt, above the first cataract, and near the confines of Nubia, 6 m. S. S. W. Assuan. It is of small extent, but contains some of the finest Egyptian architectural remains in existence, including four temples a long colonnaded avenue several obelisks, a Roman triumphal arch and many other remains of antiquity.

PHO-KANG or LO YANG a lake, China, in the h. of prov. Kiangsoo, about 80 m. long N. W. to S. E. by about 28 m. broad. It receives the Kanhsong on the S., and discharges itself on the N. into the Yang-tse-Kiang. It is subject to violent storms.

PHOCCEA a town Asiatic Turkey. See IROCHIA.

PHOCHIA or FOCHIA (anc. Phocæa), two nearly contiguous towns Asiatic Turkey Anatolia 28 to N. W. Smyrna. The one called Phocæa Vucelha is magnificent, but the other Phocæa Nova is a place of some importance defended by a citadel and with pop. 4000.

PHOENIX a group of small isls., S. Pacific Ocean lat. 3° 8' to 4° 50' S. lon. 171° 5' to 174° 40' W. of coral formation.

PHOENIXVILLE, a town U. States Pennsylvania, in the valley of French Creek, at its junction with the Schuylkill, and on the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, 24 m. N. W. Philadelphia. It has a neat church an academy, and other schools several extensive manufactories, rolling mills, and coal and cotton factories, &c. Pop. 8000.

PHOENIX a town Hindostan, principally Behawalpoor close to the Bannu frontier lat. 29° 11' N. lon. 73° 4' E. It has a good bazaar, but little trade. A fort with very high walls in great decay and an antique palace.

PHOONGA, or PONGA a town Lower Siam at the S. extremity of a point of land N. of Junkneylon, lat. 8° 18' N. lon. 96° 25' E. The land and other produce of the island just named are exported hence on elephants, and by the river Bandon to Chauly in the Gulf of Siam and thence to Bangkok.

PHOOKHIN a town Siam W. shore Gulf of Siam, at the mouth of a broad and rapid river called the Thakham, on the road from Ligor to Bangkok. It is famous for the excellence of its steel and iron. Pop. about 1200.

PHU YEN-TRAY or PHOUYAN, a town and harbour, dist. of same name, Annam, E. coast lat. 15° 25' N. lon. 109° E. A bank and near the mouth of a river. There are here three different anchorages for vessels and the harbour itself, on which the town is situated, is land-locked.

PHUK(OK or Koa DU, an isl Gulf of Sim. See KOU.
PI-CHU-LE prov China. See PACHULKY.

PIACENZA [anc. Placentia, or Placentia, P. cis, Placentia], a cap. pnia, seat, duchy of same name, on a large meadow fertile plain, 7 bank Po, a little below the confluence of the Trebbia, and nearly equidistant from Parma and Milan being about 86 m. N.W. of the former and 87 m. S.E. of the latter. It is fortified entered by five gates, and has three principal squares, the Piazza d'Armi, a spacious and airy square, having a park, with gloomy and deserted-looking streets. Among the principal edifices are the cathedral, built in 1123 in the form of a Latin cross with a tasteless Gothic superstructure. Beside this is the church of S. Maria della Pace, and the church of S. Antonio, the most ancient church of the town and once the cathedral. Beside S. Maria di Campagna, said to be after the design of Bramante, crowned with a magnificent dome, and particularly rich in paintings. San Sisto, a beautiful well-kept church, with a fine altar, and a fine organ, and a noble facade adorned with statues and a fine portico. The town is situated on a hill, and is the capital of the province of Piacenza and of the Comune, generally regarded as one of the most magnificent structures of the kind in the 15th century though only about a fourth of the original design has been completed, and presenting a fine front crowned by turrets, and adorned with an arched and pillared colonnade, to which is added in the Piazza de' Cavalli, are bronze columns, and a fine fountain. The Palazzo del Governatore, the Palazzo del Governatore, the Palazzo del Tribunale, a large irregular plan accommodating not only the civil and criminal appeal courts, but the law faculty and school of anatomy the custom-house, or Palazzo della Dogana, the college of S. Peter in which a complete course of instruction in mathematics and natural philosophy is given and a library of 30 000 vols., are situated in the Piazza d'Armi. The town is also the seat of a primary and elementary schools an Episcopal seminary a large civil and military hospital occupying with other buildings the suppressed church of San Sepolcro which was designed by Bramante two orphan and founding hospitals, numerous other charitable endowments, and two theatres. The main features consist of various descriptions of national goods, leather articles such as from including brass armaments, mathematical instruments and sundials, and carvings in wood and ivory, and a great variety of silk and paper mills. The trade is chiefly confined to grain and cattle.

Placentia is the seat of a bishop, and the seat of an supreme court of appeal, a superior civil and criminal court, a court of commerce, two courts of primary resort and various public offices. Its origin is ascribed by some to the Etruscans, by others to the Gauls. In the year of Rome 582 it became a Roman colony and the year after was rendered famous by the battle of Treadia, fought in the vicinity between Hannibal and the Romans. It was destroyed by the pirates in 101 B.C. and was again destroyed by the Goths in 476. It was again destroyed by the Goths, but soon recovered and had been a very flourishing city when the decline of the empire brought the northern hordes into Italy. After remaining long under their domination, it became an independent republic in 1128. It lost its liberty in 1254 passed under the hands of various masters, among others the Visconti under whom it followed the fortunes of Milan. After the battle of Ravenna, in 1512 it became subject to the pope as one of whom Paul III. bestowed it, along with the duchy of Parma, on his natural son, Alexander Farnese, properly identified with that of Parma. Among the distinguished natives of Placentia, are Lucius Calpurnius Piso, father in law of Julius Caesar; pope Gregory X., Alessandro Farnese, Larentius Valla, and Pietro Tulliostrati, a celebrated navigator and father-in-law of Columbus. P 24,837

PLAINEAU [Latin Plaine] a vil. and com. Italy, Lombardy, 10 miles N. of Milan. S. E. of the city of Milan, with church, reservoir, and an old castle; manufactures of leather, and a famous rope-making factory. Scotch, or Plaisance, the historian of the people, says born here. Feb., 1485

PIAGGINE, a co Naples, prov Principato-Citra, 10 m. N E. il Vallo, with two churches and a convent. P 2042

PIAN CASTAGNAJO DEL MONT AMIATA, 8 mi. sud com Tuscany 11 mi. from Ardiglasso. It is walled has a hand some church, an excellent castle, and a trade in timber and fruit, particularly chestnuts. Pop. 2555.

PIANO DI MONTE is a vil. and com. Tuscany, prov. Arezzo, in the upper valley of Arno, 5 m. E. Fiesole with two churches and a considerable trade in corn, wine, and oil. Pop. 2685.

PIABA, a river Russia, rises near NW frontier gov Simbirsk, flows W N W into gov Nijni Novgorod, then back E S E to Simbirsk, passing the town of Sergatch, and joins I. bank Volga. total course, 150 m.

PIANA, or PIANA DE GRISTO s in Sicily prov and 10 m S S.W Palermo, inhabited by a colony of Albanians, who took refuge here in the 15th century, and still retain their peculiar manners and customs forms. Loc. 4000.

PIANELLA, a tn Naples, prov Abruzzo-Ultra I, ? m.
S.E. Civita-di-Penna, with an ancient cathedral two other churches, two convents and an hospital Pop. 8450

PIANELLO-OTTERIOMI (anc. Planellae), a vill. and com. FATHS 15 m. S.W. PIACENZA with a primary school, the remains of an old castle, and a trade in cattle; near it agates, jaspers, and other pebbles are found. Pop. 8328

PIAVEZZA & vll and com Italy Piedmont, div and 7 m W N W Turin, l bank Dora-Baltes, with a court of justice four churches a convent and an old castle. P 2141

PIANELL a vil and com Italy Piedmont, div Cogl, prov and about 6 m from Mondovì on the Po. It has a handsome church a public school manufactures of iron implements, and a silk mill Pop 1710

PIANGO a village and town Italy Lombardy prov Bergamo,
S. part of Val Camonica, 1 bank Olisio, with three churches.
Near it much silk and inferior wine are produced and there are two iron hills, and an excellent millstone quarry P 4374

PIANOSA — 1 An al Adriatic, belonging to Naples prov Capitanata, N F of the Trentini group, about 12 m off the shore (lat. 43 14' N, lon. 15 50' E, nearly 2 m longer than 1 m broad — 2) (anc. Piansana An al Tuscan, Tyrrhenian Sea, 8 S W of Elba about 10 m in extent. It lies low but is fertile and well wooded and has marble quarries, which were worked by the Romans. Among other remains is a temple of granite. Arrippa, the nephew of Augustus, was banished here, and murdered by order of Tiberius

PIANURA a tn Naples, prov and 4 m W Naples. Near it excellent wine is produced, and much of the lava used in the building of Naples is quarried. Pop. 1100

PIASCO a vil and com Italy Piedmont, div Com, prov and about 8 m from Saluzzo with two churches, a monastery a large feudal castle a public school, limestone quarries, and a trade in wine and chestnuts. Pop 1870

PIASINA Lake and river Siberia, gov. Yemissinsk. The LAKE, intersected by the parallel of 70° N. is about 70 m. long N to S, with a central breadth of nearly 48 m. is fed chiefly by the Norilsk and discharges itself by the Piasina, which, issuing from its N. extremity flows eircumstantly N and falls into the Arctic Ocean, near lon. 90° E., total course about 280 m. Its principal affluents are the Dudinka, Amara and Pira.

PIAUIH is a poor Brazil, bounded N by the Atlantic E by Ceará and Pernambuco, S. I. Pernambuco and Goyaz, and W Maranhão areas, 109 668 sq. m. It has a coast-line of 70 n., and emits into one harbor and that very mild current, formed by the Barra-d'Algar, the E. mouth of the Piauí. The surface, though partly broken by low hills, is generally level. The climate is E. The hills, where the Barra does Douz rain rises to a considerable height. The principal, or rather only river is the Farnahim, which during almost the whole of its course forms the boundary between this province and Maranhão. Towards its head the surface has a general slope, and accordingly pours all its drainage into it by numerous tributaries, the most important of which are the Farnahim, the Barra-d'Algar, the Barra-d'Algar, and the Barra-d'Algar. The climate is extremely warm. During the three hottest months of the year the streams and lakes are often laid completely dry. The surface, from its flatness, is well adapted for cultivation and the soil, generally composed of alluvium is of great natural fertility. Where a deficiency of moisture is not experienced, as on the banks of the larger streams, tobacco, rice, sugar, and cotton are raised, and are usually cultivated, and even in those districts which suffer more from drought, the rainy season lasts long enough for the growth of millet, harvest, manioc, and cotton. The province is not so densely wooded as is common within the tropics, many of the extensive plains having only a covering of herbs or verdure. The various species of palm, however are tolerably common, and so are a few of those for building and other ordinary uses. In some steep hills, the trees are not so abundant, the rocks confining the hills are different.

over great part of the province and by a kind of washing process, the inhabitants manage to obtain considerable quantities of common salt, or a substance which admits of being substituted for it. The rearing of cattle, esteemed the best in Brazil, constitutes a principal source of wealth to the province. Horses also of an excellent breed are numerous, and furnish an important branch of traffic. For administrative purposes Piauí is divided into six comarcas—Oeiras, Marvão, Parnaíba, Parnaíba, Campa Major, and São Gonçalo. It sends three deputies to the general legislative assembly and appoints one senator. The provincial assembly consisting of 28 members, holds its sittings in Oeiras. Pop. 80,000.

PIAUI two rivers, Brazil.—1. Rises among mountains, in the S of the prov. to which it gives its name flows N through plains devastated by immense herds of cattle, and after a course of about 160 m., joins r. bank Canindé, about 60 m. below the town of Oeiras.—2. Rises in the N of the Serra das Bananilhas, in the E. of prov. Minas-Geraes, passes near the Lake of Douce whose surplus waters it receives, and proceeding N E, joins r. bank Jequitinhonha below São-Gonçalo. Its channel is deep and rich mines of gold were once worked upon its banks.

PIAVE a river Italy Veneto, rises in Mount Parilla, belonging to the Noris Alps, at the N E extremity of prov. Belluno, flows S S W past Pieve-di Cadore, and Belluno then bearing round past Keuron and Quero, flows S E past San Dem and after a course of nearly 150 m. falls into the Adriatic by two mouths, about 20 m. N E. Venice.

PIAUEIRO a lake, Russia in the W of prov. Archangel about 50 m. long, N W to S E E, by about 15 m. broad. It receives the waters of Lake Toppe at its S E. extremity, and discharges itself at the N E into Lake Kovdo.

PIAZZA a town Italy Prov. and 18 m. S E E Calcutta, set in an isolated height. It is the see of a bishop, and has a great many churches and convents, a college, and two secondary schools. Pop. 15,000.

PICA, or PICA, a town in S. Peru prov. and about 18 m. S S E. Tarma lat. 9° 30' S. and 76° 24' W. It stands on a very sandy soil on the E. margin of the Pampa, at the base of an arid mountain range and consists chiefly of bamboos plastered with mud but has a number of principal houses built of sun-dried bricks though of only one story. Cultivation is very limited. Earthquakes are frequent, andague is prevalent.

PICARDIE (La), an ancient prov. France, bounded N by Artois and French Flanders, W by the English Channel and Normandy S by the Isle of France, and E by Champagne. It now forms dep. Somme, and part of depts. Aisne, and Pas-de-Calais.

PICABENT a vil Spain prov. and 9 m. from Valencia with a square, a chapter-house, two primary schools, a church, and hermitage. Pop. (agricultural) 3181.

PICERNO, a town Naples, prov. Basilicata, dist. and 9 m. W Potenza, with a collegiate church and a convent. Marble is wrought in the vicinity. Pop. 4000.

PICHINCHA a volcano, Ecuador belonging to a lofty range of the Andes, forming the most remarkable volcanic group in the world, about 7 m. W Quito and N W of Cotacachi lat. 0° 11' S. and 78° 50' W. It has five distinct summits, the loftiest of which is 15,924 ft. above sea level, and covered with perpetual snow. Its most remarkable eruptions were those of 1635, 1677, 1690 and 1698. It gives name to a province.

PICHINCHU, a town Naples, prov. Salerno E.S.S. Sora, with manufactures of woollen goods. Pop. 2900.

PICKENHAM two towns Eng. Norfolk.—1. North, 1590 ac. Pop. 280.—2. South, 1890 ac. Pop. 180.

PICKERING, a market town and par. Eng. East. and 23 m. N E. York. It is of great antiquity and strugglingly built has an ancient and spacious parish church, places of worship for Independents, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, the Society of Friends and Swedenborgians, and a free school. Large quantities of iron ore are mined here and in the neighbourhood, the material for which abounds in the contiguous moors. Area of par. 31,785 ac. Pop. 4161.

PICKHILL, par. Eng. York (N. Riding) 5006 ac. P. 777.

PICKWELL, par. Eng. Leicester 1480 ac. Pop. 172.

PICKWORTH two towns Eng.—1. Lincoln 1473 ac. Pop. 281.—2. Rutland, 3480 ac. Pop. 187.

Vol. II.

PICO (the Peak) One of the larger Azores Islands, lying close to Fayal and San Jorge lat. (E. point) 38° 24' 42" N., lon. 28° 8' W. (a). It lies E S E to W N W, is 55 m. long by 8 m. broad at its W or broadest extremity, and is traversed throughout by a volcanic ridge rising in the Peak 7815 ft. above sea-level and visible in clear weather 80 m. off. It is rocky and repulsive in appearance at first sight, and covered with rugged lava. Still there is some rich and fertile soil, yielding an abundant supply of grain and pulse besides figs, oranges, which form a considerable article of trade, and excellent grapes from which a large quantity of wine is annually made. Pico possesses the finest timber-trees of the Azores particularly cedar and white yew, and large numbers of sheep, cattle, and goats feed on the pasturage of the rocky heights. The last violent eruption of the Peak took place in 1718. Besides Lages, its capital there are two other towns, and several villages, all on the shore. Pop. (1840) 18,500.

PICOU a town Upper Canada cap. Prince Edward a dist., pleasantly situated on an arm of the Bay of Quinte, which divides it into two parts. It is well built, has many excellent houses, several of them of stone Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist, and R. Catholic churches a handsome courthouse and jail, a brewery distillery two foundries two saw-mills, three tanneries and a considerable trade. Pop. (1852) 1599.

PICOU a town New S. Wales, on Camden, 46 m. S W Sydney on the Stone-quarry rivulet.

PICOT, a maritime town N coast, Nova Scotia, 72 m. N E Halifax, lat. (harbour light) 45° 41' 20" N.; lon. 62° 40' 10" W. (a). It is well built, and possesses an excellent grammar-school, and public library. The harbour is safe and commodious, and the trade of the place considerable.

PIDARRO (also Zindarros) a small seaport in Greece Morée, on the Gulf of Daria, 26 m. S E Corinth. It is a miserable village on the right shore of the bay on entering it, and not on the site of the old town, which was situated on a rocky promontory running out into the bay and connected with the land by a narrow swampy isthmus. Zindarros gives its name to the constitution promulgated on the 1st January 1832 having been the place where the General Congress of deputies from all parts of Greece assembled on that occasion.

PIDDINGTON, par. Eng. Essex, 2368 ac. P. 253.

PIDDINGTON, two towns England.—1. Northampton, 1990 ac. P. 1056.—2. Oxford, 2322 ac. P. 120.

PIDDLE (North), par. Eng. W. Worcester 810 ac. P. 149.

PIDDLEPHINTON, par. Eng. Dorset, 924 ac. P. 800.

PIDDLELOWN a vil. and par. Eng. Dorset, 6 m. E N E Dorset, on the Piddle with a large parish church, and an Independent chapel. Area of par. 7653 ac. Pop. 1997.

PIDDELTRENTIDE, par. Eng. Dorset, 4497 ac. Pop. 800.

PIDLEY (or Fenton), par. Eng. Hants. 8739 ac. Pop. 533.

PÍE DI CAVALLIO, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Turin prov. and about 10 m. N Biella on the Cervo with a parish church. Pop. 3188.

PIEDIMONTE, two towns Naples prov. Salerno.—1. 31 m. S W Campobasso with a palace, three colleges and eight other churches, two monasteries, two hospitals, a seminary and manufacture of woollens and paper. Copper-mines are worked in the vicinity. Pop. 6100.—2. (de San Germano), S S E Sora with a collegiate, and four other churches, and an hospital. Pop. 1950.

PIEDMONT (Italian Piemonte) a country on the frontier of Europe forming a large and very important portion of the kingdom of Italy lat. 44° 10' to 46° 25' N. lon. 6° 20' to 10° 10' E. bounded N by Switzerland, E Switzerland, Austria Italy and the duchy of Parma; S. div. Genoa and Nice W France, and N W Savoy greatest length, N N E to S S W 168 m. greatest breadth, 180 m.; area, 11,915 sq. m. The loftiest range of the Alps, the Lepontine and Pennine, encircle it the N and N W the Graian and Cottian Alps on the W, and the Maritime Alps on the E. while a large part of its E. frontier is watered by Lake Maggiore and the Ticino. The space enclosed within these barriers forms one of the most beautiful and fertile portions of Europe, commencing on the N, the S, and the W in majestic mountains, and thence descending by magnificent terraces and finely-undulating slopes to the rich plains of the Po. To the basin of this river, and consequently to that of the Adriatic, all the surface belongs. Besides rising within Piedmont, and winding circuitously across its centre, the Po receives within it on the right the Maira, Tanaro, Scrivia, and Stura; and on the left the Olona, Sangone, Dora Riparia, Braia, Dora Baltea, Sesia, Agogna, Terdoppio and Ticino, with numerous minor streams. Few of these are of navigable importance; but, from the extensive and skillful use made of them for purposes of irrigation, it is almost impossible to overrate the advantages derived from them. In every quarter they are seen acting as an essential agent in the production of most important crops of wheat, maize, rice, beans, hemp, and hay. In all of these, after fully satisfying its own wants, it has a large surplus for export. What also is grown, and silk obtained in great abundance and vast numbers of cattle are reared both for fattening and the dairy. The most valuable minerals are iron and marble but there are also mines of argilliferous lead and copper. The manufactures consist of silk, woollen cotton, and flax tissues, and there are great numbers of silk mills. The exports are chiefly grain, cattle, silk, hams, wine, wool and iron. The great body of the inhabitants profess the R. Catholic religion but the mountain districts have from time immemorial contained great numbers of Waldensians, attached to a purer faith and well-known throughout Europe for their great loyalty with which they have been treated and the heroic patience with which they have endured. Piedmont is divided into four divisions.—Turin the capital, Alessandria, Cuneo, and Novara. Pop. (1848) 2,134,155.

PIEDRABUENA a vil. Spain, New Castle prov and 15 m. W Ciudad-Real with low, alt-built houses, but regular and paved streets two squares a townhouse, parish church a grammar two primary schools and a hermitage manufactures of linen, mattresses, oil mills, and charcoal. Near it are numerous quarries of granite, one of lime, and one of argilliferous lead. Pop. 2800.

PIEDRAS—J a tn Venezuela dep and r bank Orinoco 71 m. W W Angostura. 2 a headland La Plata, W shore, estuary of La Plata, and 94 m. N E. Buenos Ayres.

PIELIS or PIELISMAA a lake, Russia, Finland, in the N E of curde Kuopio greatest length N W to S E about 70 m. greatest breadth about 15 m. It contains several large islands, and discharges itself by a stream of same name into Lake Oulujoki. The town of Pielis is on the S. shore.

PIEMONTE a tn. Naples, prov and S E. Naples, with three churches and a convent. Pop. 1200.

PIENZA a walled tn. Tuscany in the Val di Oropa, prov and 24 m. S E. Siena. It is the seat of a bishop and has a cathedral bishop's palace, the remains of an old castle, and a trade in corn and dairy produce, particularly cheese. P. 1308.

PIER a town (SAS), a vil and com Italy Piedmont, div Genoa inclosed between the W walls of Genoa and I bank I oliviera. It has a very pleasing appearance and contains a number of palaces and elegant mansions two churches a house of refuge and an elegant theatre. Pop. 1715.

PIELLA a tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov and 28 m. W N Barcelona, with a courthouse, a prison, a primary school an hospital two churches, and several chapels. Manufactures—lace spinning and weaving cotton and earthenware. P. 2949.

PIELTOWN, two pars. 1st —1, Maath 2581 ac Pop. 399 —2 Westminster, 4231 ac. 1 op. 699.

PIELMONT a vil U States, New York r bank Hudson 135 m. S by Albany with two churches, an academy a woolen factory gear and saw mills, and several stores. The New York and Erie Railway commences here.

PIENO a river (SAS) a tn. Tuscany, about 18 m. N Florence, with an ancient church, and school. Pop. 1439.

PIERRE. See PERRE.

PIERRE CASTELLE (N) a vil and com Belgium, prov Hainaut, 15 m. N W Mons, with a church, chapel, primary school distillery and several oil and flour mills. Manufacturers mostly engaged in weaving and knabandry. P. 2375.

PIERRE D'ATON (SAS) [see Pogus Abenensis] a vil and com France, dep Savoie, near r bank Isère, at the foot of the Col de Fréjus, 11 m. P E Chambéry. It is a neat, well laid place, and has a celebrated school, steel-works, and a trade in wine. Pop. 5498.

PIERRE (La) an inlet of the English Channel, off the coast of the French dep. The-Val Vienne, 13 m. S E. St. Malo. It is defended by a fort.

PIERRE (St.), numerous places, France, particularly—1 (de Oléron), A tn, 1st Oléron dep. Charente-Inférieure, 17 m. W Rochefort. It has a court of commerce, a tile-work, and some trade in corn, wine, brandy, vinegar, salt, &c. Pop. 1493 —2 (Egise), A tn, dep Manche, 11 m. E. E. Cherbourg with a fine modern chateau built on the site of an ancient strong castle, and manufactures of linen and leather. Pop. 1453 —3 (de Montebello) [Latin, Montemorello Sancto Petro] A tn. dep. Nièvre, 14 m. S. Nevers, on a large lake which is well supplied with fish. It has a trade in wood, bricks, and tiles, and particularly clay, which is much used in the finer kinds of earthenware, and exported to Paris and Rouen. Pop. 1842 —4, (de Colas) A tn. P. de Colas, forming part of the suburbs of Calais, with important manufactures of metal buttons, glass basins, leather, best-roof sugar and refined salt. Pop. 9458.

PIERRE (St.) a tn. W India cap. of Martinique, N W coast lat 14 44 N lon 61 18' W. It is built upon a narrow strip of low land, and runs parallel to the beach of a coralline bay and the hills behind almost overhanging the houses, which are in general well built, in a superior style of European architecture, and the shops are numerous and well-stored. The town contains some fine churches a botanic garden and is well fortified. The best anchorage in St. Pierre's road is at its S part, where there are some sharp cliffs and rocks. Fort Bourbon has a compassed harbour for 2400 tons. P. 10 000.

PIERRE (St.) a vil off St. Coast, Newfoundland belonging to France, area about 8 sq. m. It has a rugged surface, consisting chiefly of rocky heights of about 500 ft. with flatter parts covered with ponds and marshes. The vegetation is almost confined to birches and stunted pines very few vegetables are raised, and there is nothing which deserves the name of agriculture. The inhabitants subsist chiefly by fishing. The chief town, of the same name, on the S. E. coast of the island has excellent trade in which large vessels find good anchorage. Pop. (1849) 1150.

PIERRE (St.) par Eng Monmouth 691 ac P. 65. PIERRE (ATTE) a tn. P. de Lata a tn. France, dep. Drôme, 14 m. S. W. Montélimar, near r bank Rhône at the base of a rock surmounted by the ruins of an ancient castle 1 op. 2940.

PIETEF MANTINGEN, a tn. S Africa, cap. of Natal colony finely situated on a slope above Little Bushman's river, about 50 m. N W Port Natal. The town, which is only very partially built, has been laid out in the form of a parallelogram about 1½ m. long by 1 m. broad divided into nine parallel streets crossed by five others at right angles and each 75 ft. wide planted for the most part, in front of the houses with syringas, willows, and other trees. Several of the houses are substantially built of stone or brick and the public buildings include an Episcopal and a Wesleyan church, a large government school a township extensive barracks, &c. Pop. about 3000.—The division of Mantingeng or Peter-Mantingeng, is well watered, and well adapted for irrigation, contains much valuable timber and has a rapid vegetation, which covers the surface with a strong and rank grass, on which great numbers of horses and cattle are pastured.

PIETRIEN or PIETRIEN, a tn. par Switzerland, com. and 17 m. N N W Bern, in a fertile district at the foot of the Middle Jura, with a church and several schools. Pop. 1882.

PIETROI E, a vil Italy, Venezia, prov and 6 m. S. E. Mantua, near r bank Minio. It suffered much during the sieges of Mantua in 1776 and 1797.

PIETRA a tn. Italy Piedmont, div Genoa, prov and 9 m. N E Albenga, W side Gulf of Genoa, where it has a small harbour. It is an ancient place, has a court of justice, a parish church, with fine wood-carvings, a Franciscan monastery and an hospital. Pop. 2056.

PIETRA, several places, Naples—1, (Abbondanza) A tn. prov Salerno, N W Lucania, on a rock, and with five churches. P. 1590 —2 (Conella) A tn. prov Abruzzo-Ulteriore I, S. E. W. Teramo with two churches. Pop. 1000 —3, (de Funi) A tn. prov Principato-Ulteriore N. E. Montesano, agreeably situated on a hill with two churches and five chapels. Pop. 5500 —4, (de Monte Carmine), A tn. prov Capitanata, dist. and 6 m. S. W. San Severo, at the extremity of a fertile valley with a convent. Pop. 2100 —5, (Ferruccio), A tn. prov Abruzzo Citeriore, R. Lanciano, on a rocky hill. Pop. 500 —6, (Malavita), A tn. prov L'Aquila, N. E. Caserta, at the foot of a mountain.

tain, with a convent. Pop 1600.—7, (Sopio), A to, prov Lavoro, E S E Piedmonte, at the foot of Mount Malone, with two churches. Pop. 1700.—8, (Soverato) A to, prov Principato-Ultra, N W Arollino with two churches. Pop. 2154.—9, (Varano), A to, prov Lavoro, N W Caserta, with a church and two convents. Pop. 8000

PIETRACATELLA, a to Naples, prov Salerno, 14 m. E Campobasso. It stands on a rock, and contains four churches. Pop. 1700

PIETRAGALLA, a to Naples, prov Basilicata 12 m. N E Potenza. Pop. 8400

PIETRALTA, a vil and com. Belgium, prov Brabant, R E Brussels with a brewery, a four-mill and a trade in cattle and agricultural produce. Pop. 1511

PIETRALTA, a to Naples, prov Principato-Ultra, W N W Ariano. Pop. 1800

PIETRAMALA a to Naples, prov Calabria-Ultra, 18 m. S S E Taio, at the foot of a mountain nearly 3 m. from the Tyrrhenian Sea. It is defended by a castle, and contains two churches and a convent.

PIETRAPAGLIA, a to Sicily, prov and 6 m. S E Caltanissetta. Sulphur, gypsum, and other mineral substances, are found in the vicinity.

PIETRABIANCA, a to Tuscany, prov and 17 m. N W Pisa, at the foot of a hill crowned by a strong castle. It is walled has three gates, criminal court, two churches as ancient palace, now used for public offices and marble quarries. It is surrounded with marshes. Pop. 4470

PIETREBAIS (Chapelle, St J. Auguste) a vil and com. Belgium, prov Brabant 18 m. S S E Brussels, with a brewery, a distillery and a trade in agricultural and other produce. Pop. 1189

PILATO, several to Naples.—1, prov Principato-Ultra, 9 m. N W La Spezia, 3 1/2 m.—2, (ad-Sphim), A vil, prov Principato-Ultra, N W Salerno with two churches, a convent, and hospital. Pop. 2000.—3, (ad-Paternus) (anc. Pateraus), A vil, prov Naples. Pop. 2460.—4, (Arclane) A vil, prov Salerno, 10 m. N Ischia, on a fertile hill. Pop. 1200.—5, (de Mordio) A to prov Calabria-Ultra II S N Iossio, almost entirely destroyed by the earthquake of 1783.—6, (in-Coleto) A to prov Otranto, 14 m. S Lecce, in a beautiful valley with two churches five mountains, a monastery, and two hospitals. George Castriota, marquis of Scanderberg, with an army of 10,000, here defeated a tenfold larger army of Turks. Pop. 7750.—7, (de-Fine), A to, prov Lavoro, 27 m. S E Nora. It has two churches and an hospital. Pop. 1000.—8, (de-Lame), A to, prov Otranto S W Lecce. Pop. 1250.—9, (Vernotico), A to prov Otranto, 10 m. N W Lecce. Pop. 1500

PILTRO (Sax) three places, Sicily.—1 A vil prov Syracuse, 2 m. S S W Modica, on a rocky point in a bay of same name. It is a miserable place, but is defended by a large tower.—2, A to, prov and about 18 m. W Mazara. Pop. 2000.—3 A to, prov Mazara, in a ravine of the mountain above Patti, in a healthy district. Pop. 2600

PIETRI (di) Montezuono (San) a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div Coni on the Grana. It consists, for the most part, of wrenia, trees, and has a church. Pop. 1849

PIEVE, numerous places, kind of Italy particularly.—1, (de-Losato) A vil and com. prov and 3 m. S Milan, on bank Lancia with a church. Pop. 1091.—2, (San-Geronimo) A vil and com. prov and S E Mantua, near bank Po, with a church and numerous forges at which fire-arms are made. Pop. 1015.—3, (de-Olmo) A vil and com. prov and com. S E Cremona. P. 1291.—4, (Forti-Morone) A to and com. prov and S E Pavia, 1 bank Po, here crossed by a suspension bridge. It has two churches. Pop. 3915.—5, (San-Geronimo), A vil and com. prov Cremona, with a church. It stands in a fertile corn and fax district. Pop. 1015

PILVE, or PIERRE DEI TETTO a to France, dep Alpes Maritimes, prov and 12 m. N W Ocella, on a mountain slope above the Arons. It is a well built, and has three churches, a monastery, a sunnery, an hospital, and a public school. Pop. 3000

PIEVE DEI CAIRO, a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div Novara, prov Lomellina, near 1 bank Po, 15 m. S S E Mortara; with a court of justice, a triumph arch three churches, and a charitable endowment.

PIEVE-DE-CADORE, a to Italy. See CADORE.

PIEVE (SANTO STEFANO) a to Tuscany, prov and 17 m. S E Arezzo, on bank Tiber. It is walled, has a criminal court, and several public offices, and a church. Pop. 1635.

PIG IRLAND.—1, An Isl. E Pacific Ocean, Lonsdale Archipelago, lat. 11° 20' N lon. 108° 15' E composed of some slate with frequent veins of quartz. The hills the highest of which is between 400 ft and 600 ft, although often running in ridges, have a rounded outline, and the soil on the smooth grassy places—comprising three-fourths of the island—is composed of disintegrated rock, mixed with pieces of undecomposed quartz. The grass is very luxuriant, without being rank. The natives are dark copper-coloured, the hair fringed out into a mop, in some instances of prodigious size the physiognomy much varied, some having a savage and ferocious aspect. Their spears are made of polished cocco-nut wood, 5 ft. to 10 ft. long, sharp at each end, and neatly balanced. They are a dangerous race, and not to be trusted.—(Voyage of the Rattlesnake).—2, See CHANAY ISLAND.

PIGHTLESTHORPE, par Eog. See PIGTHORPE.

PIGNA, a vil and com. France dep Alpes Maritimes, div and 24 m. N E Nice. It has a parish church. P. 2775

PIGNAN a to France, dep Herault 3 m. W Montpellier at the foot of a hill with several dwellings of brick. Near it is a fine Gothic church, supposed to date earlier than the 12th century. Pop. 3001

PIGNAN (Latin Agnoscere) a to France dep Var, 20 m. F N E Toulon, tolerably well built, but with irregular ill-paved and dirty streets. It has numerous distilleries of brandy, and several copper-smithies. Pop. 2166

PIGNA (GALLI) a vil Naples, prov Lavoro N W Caserta. It is the residence of the bishop of Calvi, and has a church and a convent. Pop. 1980

PIGNO VLA, a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div Genova, prov Lavagna, not far from Lavento. It is an ancient place and has a large square and a church. Pop. 1895

PIKET or POLZAN, a vil Austria, Croatia, between Fucine and Lume with a parish church. Pop. 1639

PILA, a vil Hungary Nether Danube, on Rats, about 8 m. from Sebestenitz, in a hilly but fertile district, with a church. Pop. 1460

PILAO AGOSTO, a to Brazil, prov Bahia on an small islet above 1 bank Rio Francisco, lat. 14° 15' about 110 m. below the confluence of the Grande. 85 m. W Jacobina. It has a church, a primary school, and extensive salt-works cattle are also reared. Pop. dist. 5000

PILAR three places Brazil.—1 A to, prov and 40 m. N W Parahiba, 1 bank Parahiba. It stands in a plain surrounded by swamps, the unhealthiness of which is greatly modified by alternate breezes from the land and sea, and consists chiefly of a large parallelogram adorned at one of its extremities by a parish church and at the other by a town-house with a prison beneath. It also has two primary schools. Sugar-cane and cotton are cultivated. Pop. 1000

—2, A to, prov and 170 m. N Uyoa, almost entirely enclosed by the Tuluza and Vermejo tributaries of the Amazon. It has spacious and paved streets four churches a Latin and a primary school, but many of the houses are tottering and decaying. Pop. at one time 14,000 now only 1000.—3 A vil and par, prov Rio-de-Janeiro dist. Luanca, 1 bank Lian, with a church and many houses of showy appearance, sugar-cane, rice, millet, legumes, and coffee are cultivated. P. 3000

PILAS, a to Spain Andalusia, prov and 20 m. W Seville, with four squares, and a large townhouse, a primary school, hermitage, and three primary schools, flour and oil mills brandy distilleries, brick and tile kilns. Pop. (agri cultural) 2373.

PILAT, or PILATE.—1 A mountain range France, belonging to the chain of the Cevennes. It stretches E to N through part of depts. Loire and Rhone, and on its higher slopes to its summit is almost entirely covered by pine-trees.—2 A lofty mountain, Switzerland, can. and S W Lucerne. Its highest peak Timbalhorn, rises 7115 ft. above sea level

PILAYA or TURRA river S America, rises in E slope Andes, near S W frontier Bolivia, flows E N E under the name of San Juan and then under that of Filaya, and after a course of nearly 800 m. joins E bank Pilcomayo, nearly doubling its volume, about 29° 30' S. It gives its name to a district in the department of Potosi.

PILCOMAYO, or ARAGUAT, a river S. America, rises in Bolivia, on the E. declivities of the Andes, near lat. 19° S., lon. 67° 50' W. from which point it flows S. E. passing a little to the S. of Chiquitos, under the same conditions of the Chichivito, to about lat. 21° 10' S. lon. 68° 50' W. where it is joined by the Pilaya thence it flows S. W. and S. E. W. across the Gran Chaco in La Plata, and falls into the Paraguay about 6 m below or S. of Assumption lat. 23° 20' S. lon. 67° 40' W. Its entire length is between 700 m and 800 m. On account of its shallowness during the dry season, and the great current in its narrow parts, it does not appear likely to become usefully navigable. About 100 m. from its mouth it divides into two branches, the N. or main stream, called Pilcomayo or Araguat Guari, and the S., Araguat Wini; the latter enters the Paraguay by two mouths, 24 m apart, and the most W. one 9 m S. from the mouth of the main stream.

PILGRAM, or PILGRAMOW TOWN, a tn Bohemia, circle and 35 m. E. Tabor on the Beateborsch with three churches, a townhouse, and bathing establishment, manufactures of woollens, a worsted, and several other mills. P. 3500

PILGRAMSDORF (Gaza and Kuzma) a vil Prussia, prov. Silesia, gov. Legnica, circle Goldberg-Haynau with a church, a small tile work three mills and a sandstone quarry. P. 1969

PILHAM with GILBY par Eng Lincoln 1100 ac. Pop. 132

PILICA — 1 A river Poland rises N. of Cracow flows due N. then E. N. E. and joins l. bank Vistula total course, 160 m. — 2 A tn Poland, 34 m. N. W. Cracow near the source of the Pilica with two R. Catholic churches a convent, sawmills, and manufacture of linen and leather. P. 1450

PILIS a vil Hungary Hither Danube on and 17 m. N. W. Pesth with a Protestant church, three chateaux and some trade in wine and cattle. P. 1970

PILLATON, par Eng Cornwall 2478 ac. Pop. 893

PILLAL a tn, and seaport 1 Russia, gov. and 25 m. W. E. W. Königsberg, at the entrance of the strait forming the communication between the Frischehoff and the Gulf of Danzig. It is defended on the W. by a strong fort, and has a good and commodious harbour. It has much the appearance of a well-built Dutch town, contains a Protestant church, a navigation and superior burgher school and carries on an active fishery and a considerable trade. P. 4539

PILLESTON two par Eng Warwick — 1 (Honey) 1890 ac. P. 227 — 2 (Priors) 1460 ac. Pop. 108

PILLETH par Wales Radnor 1897 ac. Pop. 12

PILLIBEL or PIRANAT a tn Hindoostan prov. and 160 m. E. Delhi, on the Gurrath. It has an elegant mosque and a large fair at which large quantities of rice are sold.

PILLKALLAN a tn Prussia, prov. E. Prussia, gov. and 14 m. E. Gumbinnen with two churches and manuf. factories of worsted mittens, a brewery and two mills. 1 1638

PILLNITZ, a vil. Saxony, circle and 7 m. N. E. Dresden, r. bank Elbe; with an elegant castle, in which several of the sovereigns of Europe met in 1791 and entered into a coalition to oppose the progress of the French revolution. P. 443.

PILLTOWN a market tn. Ireland, co. Kilkenny near l. bank Rye 11 m. N. E. Waterford. It is well built, has a manse-house, a barwick, a R. Catholic chapel close by the town, several schools, and, in the vicinity, a small farm of six acres appropriated to agricultural instruction. Some flax is spun here, but the female population is supported in great part by embroidery, chiefly for Glasgow houses.

PILOT ISLAND or PIERREMAN'S ROCK, an inlet, entrance of the Red Sea between Perim Island and the Arabian coast. Large quantities of excellent oysters are found on it.

PILDON par Eng. Dorset 648 ac. Pop. 65

PILSEN (Krum), PIESEN or PIESEN, a tn Bohemia, cap. circle, in a plain between the Mies and Hradek, which by their confluence a little below form the Beroun, 55 m. S. W. Prague. It is walled, entered by five gates, and is well built and well paved has a deanery church, a splendid Gothic structure of the 13th century, 16 other churches, a town-house Franciscan monastery, theatre, lycæum, gymnasium, barracks infant and other schools and important manufactures of woollens, leather, and iron-ware, and a considerable general trade. Coal, iron, and alum are worked in the neighbourhood. Pilsen possessed a printing-press as early as 1475. It has suffered much by war and was for some years the headquarters of Wallenstein. P. 9798. — The canals, area of 1444 sq. m.; has mines of silver, lead, and iron, is well wooded; grows much hemp and flax rears large numbers of live stock, particularly sheep, and has important manufactures of cloth, iron, glass and stoneware. P. 210 183

PILSNO, a tn Austria, Galicia, circle and 18 m. P. Tarnow near the Wulka with a deanery church, and an Augustinian monastery. P. 1060

PILTEN a tn Russia, gov. Courland r. bank Vindau 90 m. N. W. Mitau once a place of some importance, and the residence of the bishop of Courland, but now in a poor dilapidated state. It has a castle built by Waldemar II. of Denmark in 1220 a church, and a school. P. (1853) 4066.

PILTON, three par. Eng. — 1 Northampton 1478 ac. Pop. 148 — 2 Rutland, 832 ac. Pop. 86 — 3 Somerset, 2098 ac. Pop. 1158

PILTON a vil and par England co. Devon, on the Teo, here crossed by a bridge which communicates with Barnstaple. It has a parish church, and manufactures of woollen cloth and lace. Area of par. 1861 ac. P. 1881

PILMICO a parochial dist. Eng. co. Middlesex par St. George, Hanover Square, city of Westminster. It is bounded N. by St. James and the Green Parks and though of comparatively recent origin is one of the finest quarters of the metropolis and the site of Buckingham Palace. Among its streets and squares, Grosvenor Place, Wilton Crescent, Wilton Place, Eaton Place, Belgrave Street, and Belgrave Square, deserve special notice and among its public buildings are the two churches of St. Michael and St. Peter.

1 18PEIRIE par Eng Dorset 4510 ac. P. 617

PINA a vil Spain Aragon, prov. and 28 m. S. E. Barcelona, l. bank Ebro. It has a townhouse and prison, a palace well frequented elementary schools, an hospital, a church and several hermitages. P. (agricultural) 1965

PINANG mt. Strait of Malacca. See PENANG

PINAREJO a tn in Spain, New Castile, prov. and 8 Cañosa with a church townhouse, and primary school manufactures of linen, and a trade in corn and cattle. P. 1465.

PINASKA a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, dir. Turin, prov. and 7 m. W. Ivrea l. bank Cissone with two churches. P. 277

PINCHEBECK, par Eng Lincoln 11 640 ac. P. 8007

PINCHEBELLY a market tn. Hungary Thither Danube, co. and 26 m. N. W. Tolna, l. bank Rapos with a church and some trade in wine and cattle. P. 2290

PINCOW a tn Russian Poland, l. bank Nida, 28 m. S. S. W. Kielce with a castle five churches, and a gymnasium. The Swedes defended the Poles here in 1703. P. 1806

PIND-DANOR KHAS a tn Punjab, 98 m. N. W. Lahore lat. 33° 35' N. lon. 71° 55' E. It consists of three small collections of houses, situated close to each other, and about 4 m. from the Jallum. It is the great mart for the produce of the salt-mines of the Salt range near which it lies; the salt being sent through it to be shipped on the Jallum. P. 6000

PINDAMONHANGANA a tn Brazil prov. and 190 m. N. E. São-Paulo r. bank Paraíba, with a church and a chapel. It has a fertile district, in which much sugar-cane, coffee, tobacco and cotton are grown and many cattle reared. P. 600

PINDUS, a mountain chain European Turkey which, breaking off nearly at right angles from the Tcherdagh or Scordius, the W. part of the Balkan, stretches nearly due S. between Albania and Macedonia, and then S. E. through the W. part of Thessaly, where it may either be considered as terminating on the borders of Livadia, or as continued in a S. E. direction under the names of Parannus, Halcon, Otharon and other celebrated mountains to Cape Colonna. Pindus thus defined, takes different names in proceeding from N. to S. Between the waters of the Black Sea and those of the Aegean Sea, the Pindus is the chain of the mountains Karesin, Bero, and Magna Pindus. Thence to the S. E. of the lake of Oclidea we have the mountains of Grammos and Eorens and still farther to the E. and S. E. the mountains of Monaro, to which some geographers give the name of the whole chain, probably because in Mount Monaro it attains its culminating point 8850 ft. The mountains of the chain appear to consist chiefly of granite and calcareous rocks the former composing their nucleus, and appearing in their loftier summits the latter lying chiefly along their sides and at their base. They are generally well wooded, and are underlaid by valuable mineral deposits. The principal streams to which they give rise are the two Drins, Sozob, Beratino, and Volosna, which fall into the Adriatic, and the Calmasa, Aris, and Aspropotamos, which fall into the Ionian Sea.

PINEGA.—1 A river, Russia, rises in the h of gov Vologda, enters gov Archangel and pursuing a very circuitous course in the main N W, joins r bank Northern Dwina, S.E.E. Khologmaysk total course, about 800 m.—2 A vil Russia, gov Archangel. L bank above river 98 m S.E.E. Archangel, with a church. Pop. 300

PINEBOLO a tu langd. of Italy, Piedmont, 31 m S W Turin, cap. prov of its name at the mouth of the valley of the Cissone. It is very irregularly built, but has several squares among which that called the Piazza d'Armi is conspicuous, and forms a finely planted walk. The principal buildings are the cathedral a modern structure of no great merit; the church of San Maurizio, an ancient Gothic edifice several monasteries and numerous, an episcopal seminary, a college and several other schools, an ordinary an orphan and a flourishing hospital a townhouse episcopal palace a theatre, and handsome infantry and cavalry barracks. The manufactures consist of woollen cloths, silks, iron-wares, stearns, vermucelli, liquors, and brandy, and the trade is chiefly in wine silk, hemp, paper wax, and wool for carpentry and fuel. Pop. 18501.—The prov. area about 430 geo sq m is traversed by the Cottian Alps partly on the W N and S. The Po waters it on the E and renews its waters in part directly, but chiefly by the Cissone and its tributary Poliese. A considerable importation of corn is necessary to meet the consumption but small silk, wine and excellent fruit are produced and the pastures rear great numbers of cattle. The forests also are extensive, and furnish abundance of timber and fuel. Pop. about 110 000

PINLS (Isles of) an Isl S Pacific Ocean off S W end of New Caledonia lat. 22° 38' S lon 167° 25' E about 43 m in circumference. Near the shore the land is generally low and rocky with little soil but very thickly wooded about 3 m inland the soil improves and from that, to the centre of the island to the N W side, the ground rises with a gentle ascent, with very little timber and a rich alluvial soil forming a large clear space of hundreds of acres. From this clear space the land rises gradually towards the peak which is situated on the S.E. part of the island and is thickly wooded to the top. Many species of fine timber grow on the island particularly pine, which attain a great size. Pop. about 2500

PING, a prefix in the name of numerous Chinese places.—1 Ping-Hai, a tu prov Quangong on Harbin Bay 65 m E N.E. Maaso.—2, Ping Liang, a tu prov Kansoo; lat. 36° 50' N lon 108° 30' E.—3, Ping-Lao, a tu prov Quangong, 150 m W N W Canton.—4, Ping-Yang, a tu prov Shannoo, L bank Fuen-shi, 127 m S. by W Tai Yuen.—5 Ping Yuen, a tu prov Koochei; lat. 28° 40' N lon 107° 40' E.

PINEIRO several places Portugal, particularly.—1 (de Azeite), A tu and par prov Bura, near Viseu Pop 700.—2, (de Lampouco), A tu and par prov Douro, 26 m S F Oporto. Pop. 1821.—3, (de Maoso) A tu and par prov Beira Alta, near Lamego. Pop. 1800

PINEEL, a tu, Portugal, prov Beira-Alta 20 m N E Guarda. It is walled, the use of a bishop and has a town house, a superior school for ancient languages, rhetoric, and philosophy several fine fountains and a considerable trade particularly in worsted. It is supposed to have been founded by the Turduli several centuries before the Christian era It was rebuilt by Alphonsus I. in 1179 Pop. 1908

PINROE, par Eng Devon, 1785 ac. Pop. 637

PINILLA, a vil and com Spain, Leon, prov and N.E. Zamora, with a church, a courthouse, prison and primary school, manufactures, serge, tile-works, bookbinds, and a trade in wheat. Pop. 1011

PINKAFELD, or PINKAFEL, a market tn. Hungary Thaur Deauze, on Eebenurg on the Pinkabach, 19 m W Güns. It has considerable manufactures of woollens, particularly flannels, baize, and small nails or sprigs, and cerries on an extensive trade in horses. Near it is a spacious and much frequented mineral spring. Pop. 4000

PINAE, or PINAWT, a tu, Prussia, prov and 38 m W N W Posen, with a church, a synagogue and manufactures of woollen and linen cloth. Pop. 2074

PINNEBERG a vil Denmark dist Holsten, on the Pinnaue 11 m N W Altona with remains of an ancient castle. Pop. 1100

PINNER par Eng. Middlesex; 3730 ac. Pop. 1810

PINNOCK (87), par Eng Cornwall 1487 ac P 827

PINO several places, Spain particularly.—1 (de Valencia) A vil and com Estramadura prov and about 40 m from Caceres, with a chapel Pop 1860.—2 (de Frangueda) A vil and par Estramadura prov Caceres, F Ciudad-Rodrigo, with oil and flour mills. Pop. 376

PINO or CHINER a vil and com Italy Piedmont, div and 3 m S.E.E. Turin, with a church a suppressed convent a communal school and near it two ancient castles. Pop. 1706

PINOS, several places Spain particularly.—1 (de Gual or Puzillog) A vil and com. Andalusia, prov and 6 m E Granada, with a church, courthouse, prison and school a paper, two oil, and two flour mills Pop 938.—2 (del Rio) A vil Andalusia, prov and about 70 m S Granada with two churches, a chapter-house, prison, and school and manufactures of soap, a distillery a quarry of building-stone, several flour and oil mills, and a strada in all and wax. Pop. 2108.—3 (Puebla) A vil com. Andalusia, prov and 12 m W Granada, with a church courthouse, prison, and primary school; manufactures of linen and soap, several flour-mills, and a trade in corn, maize, and fruit. Pop. 3375

PINOS.—1 An Isl Caribbean Sea, Gulf of Darien lat. N P point 8° 1 30' N lon 77° 48' W a) It is of the form of a horse-shoe, 6 m long, and covered with fir, palms, oranges, and lemons. Between its shores on the S. and the continent, there is a channel of good depth for vessels.—2 An Isl near 30 m off S coast, Cuba lat. (S W point) 21° 27' N lon 83° 18' W (a) It is 45 m in length and 84 m broad and abounds in pastures and very large trees also in goats. It has several very secure and well sheltered runs

PINOSO a vil Spain, Andalusia, prov and 38 m W Alentejo, with a townhouse and prison, two schools, two churches, several hermitages, a brandy distillery four-mills, and oil presses. Pop. 3504

PINOK a tu, Russia, gov and 148 m S.S.W. Minsk 1 bank Pripyet, which here renews the 1 run. It stands among marshes is very indifferently built, has several churches, an old Jesuit college, a synagogue and a school considerable manufactures of Russian leather an extensive land trade, and several fairs Pop (1861), 8716

PINLO, a vil Spain, New Castle, prov and 14 m S. Madrid, regularly built with a townhouse the remains of a feudal castle two primary schools a promenade, a parish church, two oil and two flour mills Pop. (agricultural), 2504

PINXTON a vil and par England co Dorset on the Bournemouth and Cromford Canals, and a railway to Mansfield, 3 m S.S.E. Alfreton with a neat church at some distance, a Wesleyan chapel and a school. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries. Area of par 1310 ac. Pop. 949

PINXARREL one of the branches of the Indus, which enters the ocean by the Foor mouth 15 m N W (lat of Korea PIN/GAU a district of Upper Austria, archb Salzburg comprising chiefly of the upper valleys of the Isar and Salza which both have their sources in it. It is mountainous, and abounds with wild and romantic scenery. Its wealth consists chiefly in its cattle, of which it rears great numbers, and it has also mines of copper and lead. The chief town is Zell.

PIORREI a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div Turin, not far from Carignano. It has two churches and two stories. Pop. 2214

PIOTRILLO or IUCOLA Piona, a vil and com. Austria Italy prov and 7 m E N.E. Milan, with a church, a chapel, and three castles. Pop. 1745

PIOMBINO a seaport tn. Tuscany, 69 m S.S.W. Florence. It is walled, and defended by a citadel and three forts, and was once the capital of an independent principality of same name. It has a handsome church a small harbour with some trade and a fishery. Near it are the ruins of the old town of Populonia. Bombarry in 1803, destroyed Piombino, with the duchy of Lucca, on his sister Eliza. Pop. 1595

PIOMBASCO, a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div and 18 m. S.W. Turin with two churches an ancient castle, and a free school. Pop. 3481

PIOTTA a tn. and com. laquei of Italy gov. Venice, prov. and 12 m. S.E. Padua, near the Brenta, with a castle, five churches, two chapels, and a seminary and manufactures of woollen and silk. Pop. 4000

PIOVINO a vil and par Italy Veneto, prov. and 17 m. N.W. Vicenza, on the Beche with a church, two castles, and quarries of building-stones. Pop. 1800

PIPAIX, a vil and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 9 m. E. Tournay with two breweries, a flour-mill and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1820

PIPE-DE-L'ESPE, par Eng. Stafford 1620 ac. 1 180
PIPE Enwast par Eng. Stafford 816 ac. P 90

PIPER LAKE, N.E. coast, Australia, Temple Bay Cape York lat. 12 12 S., lon. 143 8' E. They are four in number low landy and wooded, the largest about 3 m. in circumference. Vast numbers of white pigeons come from the mainland to roost on these lakes. There was formerly a small establishment for curing trapping on the largest.—(Voyage of the Beagle)

PIPERNO a tn. Italy Sicily, and 10 m. S. E. From some near a bank Amanteo. It is ill built, the sea of a harbor, and has several churches and convents. Pop. 8595

PIPIY a tn. Hindostan, prov. Bengal N.E. Malabar About the middle of the 17th century it was a great resort of European commerce and at first the only place in Bengal with which the Mogul emperors allowed the English to trade

PIQUE a vil L. States Ohio 65 m. W. by N. Columbus a bank Miami with five churches five schools a market street, and saw mills. Pop. 1481

PIQUITA a river Brazil rises in the Serra d' Itaqueira, in S.E. of prov. Mato Grosso, flows W. receives the flaghills on the right, and the Itaqueira or Itaqueira, passes within 4 m. of the Sertão in flowing in an opposite direction to join the Itaqueira, and after a course of 120 m., joins the bank São Lawrence or Porruca

PIE-JE-ALP a tn. in Punjab near the confluence of the Ghara and Chenab lat. 29 28' N. lon. 71 16' E. with a good bazaar and a fine Mahometan shrine covered with lacquered tiles, and adorned with minarets and cupolas. Near it are extensive ruins of brick built structures

PIE PAKE, a vil, a lofty range of mountains, forming part of the S.W. boundary of Cashmere, and separating it from the Punjab. Its greatest direction is N.W. to S.E. entire length, about 40 m. Its highest point is supposed to be about lat. 33 40' N. and is estimated to be 15 000 feet above sea-level. At the S.W. extremity in the pass, generally called the Pie-Pajal Pass about 12 000 feet high

PIE PUTE, a celebrated place of pilgrimage beside on the Delta, and one of the ruins of the Indus S.W. Fatah. The buildings, in the form of a crescent, occupy a commanding site on a lofty limestone hill

PIRAICABA a tn. and par Brazil So Conservação

PIRACICABA a tn. Brazil prov. Piauí 220 m. N.E. Coarua, on a small stream of its own name with a church, a trade in cotton, sugar cane and mandioc. Copperas and alum were abundant. Pop. 2000

PIRACUNA, a river Brazil rises in Lake Tarrá, prov. Maranhão, and flowing N.E. for about 100 m. falls into the bay of Camu. In the rainy season canoes proceed up almost to the lake, and take in cargoes but in the dry season scarcely get up beyond 30 m.

PIRELLA, a port in Greece, Lavada, nome Atiki, on an isthmus between the mainland and a rocky promontory on which the tomb of Thamiastides stood, overlooking the Gulf of Salamis, 5 m. S.W. Athens. It forms the port of the capital, was formerly connected to it by the celebrated Long Walls and now communicates with it by a macadamized road. The modern town, which has risen up since 1834, contains about 1000 houses, many of them handsome, and the port or basin, though rather difficult of access, has great depth, and has been recently provided with a quay capable of accommodating a large number of merchant vessels. In 1847 the number of vessels entered was 2507 (22,207 tons), and cleared 2565 (89,862 tons)

PIRIBANI a tn. Brazil prov. Rio-de-Janeiro, 1 bank Piriba, here crossed by a bridge, 30 m. N. Rio-João-do-Pra da, with a church, a prison, and a considerable transit trade. Pop. dist. 2500.—The stream rises in the Serra dos Orgãos, flows N.E., and joins the Paraíba. Total course 80 m., most of which is navigable for canoes

PIRIBANO, a port in Sicily on its N. coast, prov. and 40 m. W. S.W. Messina, with some export trade in wine, oil, and corn. Pop. 3900

PIRANGA a tn. Brazil, prov. Minas-Geraes, 166 m. N.W. Rio-Janeiro, with three churches. Pop. 1200

PIRANHAS, a river, Brazil, rises in the Serra dos Cariris, prov. Paraíba, in a craggy spot, held in high veneration by the natives from its having a succession of shoals flows N.E. and N. across provinces Rio-Grande do Norte, and enters the ocean by three mouths; the Amarago on the E., the Conchos on the W., and between these two the Cavallos, which being the largest of the three, may be regarded as the continuation of the main stream; total course 400 m., chief affluents Poize, Picozo and Serido.

PIRANO a tn. and seaport Austria, Illyria gov. and 13 m. S.W. Trieste on a peninsula in the Bay of Largorona. It has very narrow streets, an old castle in a dilapidated state, two churches a townhouse, a Franciscan monastery, and a high school. The harbour is shallow and fit only for coasting vessels, but ships of the largest size find good anchorage and perfect shelter in the roads. There are good building docks, and both trade and fishing are extensive. Pop. 6250

PIRABA, a small vil. British Guiana, E. border of Lake Amara and on the water-shed between the basins of the Amazon and Essequibo lat. 8 36' N. lon. 59 62' W

PIRATÉ Island, See AMOYRA

PIRATES ISLANDS, a group near the head of the Gulf of Tonquin lat. 21 10' N. lon. 108 30' E. (a)

PIRATINIM a tn. Brazil prov. São-Pedro-do-Rio Grande, 150 m. S.W. Porto Alegre, the source of river of same name with a church, and a fertile district, in which much cotton, fax, wheat, and other cereals are grown, and many cattle reared. Pop. 8678 — The stream rises in above prov. flows W. S.W. and falls into the channel, improperly called the river of São Gonçalo by which Lake Mirim discharges itself into Lake Patos. Total course, 100 m. It is navigable at all times for about 16 m. and in the rainy season light vessels get up nearly 40 m.

PIRATINY a river Brazil, prov. São Pedro-do-Rio-Grande, descends from the Serra da Cachulle Grande de los Tajos, flows N.W. and falls into the Uruguay about lat. 28 10' S. after a course of nearly 140 m.

PIRA or PIPARA river Bolivia, rises in a mountainous district near Samapata, flows N.W. passing near the town of Santa Cruz de la Sierra, and after a course of 140 m. joins the bank Umpey. In the lower part of its course it sometimes takes the name of Flores.

PIRIBRIGHT par Eng. Surrey 4579 ac. Pop. 637
PIRIBASEN, a tn. Bavaria, circle Philip, 72 m. W. S.W. Leinzen. It is walled, well built has a Catholic and two Protestant churches, a synagogue, and Latin school manufactures of shoes, musical instruments, straw bask, and mirrors. 1 pop. 2536

PIRINA a tn. Saxony circle and 10 m. S.E. Dresden a bank Elbe. It is walled, and entered by two gates, has a court of law and several public offices, five churches, and an orphan asylum; holding docks, some shipping, manufactures of enamel porcelain, earthenware and beet-root sugar, and a considerable trade on the Elbe. A little above the town on a lofty rock stands the castle of Sonnenstein, originally a fortress and since 1806 and now converted into a lunatic asylum. P. 5178

PIRINITZ [Moravia] a market town, Austria, Moravia circle and 8 m. S.E. Igls, on the Retziana. It has an ancient castle three churches, and two synagogues manufactures of woollen and cotton cloth, a walk mill, and some trade in wool. Pop. 8470

PIRON, an Isl. Lomada Archipelago lat. 11° 20' S. lon. 158 30' E., about 5 m. long and 1½ m. broad, of moderate elevation, and sloping gently towards each extreme. It is hilly a range of low grassy hills, with smooth rounded top, a straggling belt of wood—often mangroves along the shore—patches of brush here and there in the hollows, and on the hill tops, scattered along the ridge, a few solitary tall, bushy trees, with silvery-looking foliage.—(Voyage of the Beagle)

PIRTON, three parts. Eng 1-1. Area 2580 ac. Pop 897
—3, Oxford, 5140 ac. Pop. 692 —3 Worcester 1669 ac.
Pop. 358.

PIRTH-MUK, a vil. Hungary. Thither Tulas, co Bihar, in a fertile district 2 m. from Dobron, with a Protestant church. Pop. 1184.

PISA [anc Pæns and Aplos, French, Pise], a tn. Tuscan comp. comp. of same name, on the Arno here crossed by three stone bridges, one of them a magnificent marble structure, 44 m W Florence, on the railway thence to Leghorn. It is surrounded by walls and ditches, defended by a citadel, entered by five gates, and forms a circuit of nearly 6 m. much of the space enclosed being unoccupied. The river is lined by handsome quays, the streets, though not straight, are spacious and well paved, and the houses are always substantial, often elegant, and remarkable for the profusion with which marble has been employed in their construction. The most remarkable edifices and establishments are the Cathedral, one of the noblest ecclesiastical structures of Italy built of marble, in the form of a Latin cross richly adorned within and without surmounted by a lofty all'italian dome. The Baptistery an immense rotunda, adorned with numerous columns and in the S.E. end contains a celebrated by the Campanile sculpture and crowned by a noble dome, the Campanile Pendent or Leaning Tower, of a circular shape, built of white marble, and fronted with 207 columns and leaning over so strongly that it still remains doubtful whether the deviation from the perpendicular is the effect of design or of accident. The Campo Santo, the most remarkable edifice of the kind in existence consisting of a rhomboidal court, lined with arcades of white marble adorned with bas-reliefs, frescoes and paintings, by the earliest Italian masters, and full of remarkable monuments; the Grand Ducal Palace the Torrione (Palazzo del Comune) the Courthouse (Palazzo Pretorio), the University anciently famous, and still one of the most celebrated in Italy the Sapienza or college, with six professors, and an attendance of about 600 students, the botanical garden, one of the oldest in existence, the museum of natural history, with many interesting geological specimens the Fine Casa delle Mercantorie, a large, well-manned, and well-manned hospital; the infirmary, two farming hospitals, a house of refuge, and mont-de-piété. The manufactures consist of silk, woolen, and cotton goods; worsted and spun silk, soap, white-lead, vitriol, and glass, and the trade is chiefly in corn, oil, and wood for fuel.

THE LEANING TOWER AND AROUND OF THE CATHEDRAL, PISA
From Le Voyage de P. de Bologne.

Pisa is the seat of an archbishop, the residence of a civil and military governor, the seat of a court of first resort, and several important public offices, and possesses several societies, economical literary, scientific and artistic. It became at a very early period an ally, and afterwards a colony of Rome, and was greatly favoured by Augustus, and adorned by Hadrian and Antoninus. On the fall of the Roman empire it was pillaged by the Goths, and afterwards subjected by the Longobards. In the 9th century, under the protection of Charlemagne, it made rapid progress and in 888 having made considerable acquisitions of territory it became an independent republic, and by the 10th century had succeeded, by military prowess and commercial enterprises, in taking a lead among the Italian States. It became mistress of Sardinia, Corsica, and Carthage, and its fleets ranged the Mediterranean both giving powerful assistance to the Crusaders, and making a gainful traffic by transporting them to the shores of the East. In the 13th century in an encounter with the Genoese, she lost the greater part of her fleet, and the flower of her troops, and almost immediately after became a prey to numerous petty tyrants. In 1406 she came into the possession of the Florentines, and has since followed the fortunes of Tuscany. Pop. (1859) 28,853. — THE COMPACT area 590 geo. sq. m. or, including Elba and several small islands, 968 geo. sq. m. in the S.E. end and centre is occupied by manifestations of the Apennines, but the N. consists of extensive plains which in the N.W. towards the shore become flat, containing several shallow lakes, and forming large and unhealthy swamps, known by the name of Marzucca Piana and Marzucca Volterra. The soil is generally fertile, and corn, wine, oil and fruit, are very abundant. Pop. 245,348.

PISANG (Pelo) a small isl. off S.W. coast, Sumatra; lat. 6° 8' S. lon. 104° 4' E. (n.) about 1/2 m. diameter, where water and soil are unwholesome may be obtained by digging down 4 or 5 ft.

PISCIOTTA a tn. Naples prov. Principato-Citra, 9 in S. II. Vallo, near the Tyrrhenian Sea, with a palace a handsome church a convent, and a successful fishery. The environs produce excellent fruit, wine and oil. Pop. 8000.

PISOX a tn. Fern dep. Lima I. bank and near the mouth of the Piaseo, in the bay of same name lat. 13° 43' S. lon. 76° 17' W. n. It has acquired some importance by the exportation of brandy and it has recently become more active and populous owing to the near vicinity of the Guano Islands. Piaseo has suffered much from earthquakes, and more recently from the war of independence. Several parts of it have been rebuilt and much has recently been done in the way of improving and ornamenting it. The harbor, which is secure, with good anchorage, is about 1 1/2 m. from the town. Pop. about 8000.

PISLOIT a small isl. W. coast, Asiatic Turkey Anatolia, 28 m N. Rhodes about 8 m long and 2 to 3 m broad.

PISLEK a tn. Bohemia, r. bank Watsava, here crossed by one of the finest stone bridges in the country. 58 m S. by W Prague. It is surrounded by an old and lofty wall flanked with numerous towers is well built, and has four churches, a gymnasium military and swimming school barracks and hospital and manufactures of linen and woollen cloth potash and iron-ware. Pop. 5448.

PISFORD, or Pisford par. England, Northampton, 2700 ac. Pop. 639.

PISNHI L. par. Eng. Oxford 785 ac. Pop. 192.

PISNIA, or Pisnias, a vil. Austria. See Murau.

PISNIA, or Pisnias, a vil. Hungary co. and 9 m from Buda, in a fertile district, with the remains of a Roman fort and mineral springs. Pop. 1403.

PISKOREVCE, a vil. Austria, Slavonia, co. Virova; about 4 m. from Donkerer with a church. Pop. 1848.

PISOGNE a tn. and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. and 20 m. E. Bergamo E. above the lake. It is well and regularly built has a fine square, surrounded with arcades, and fronting the lake an old church on an eminence, about 1/2 m. from the town, and a modern church manufactures of iron, which is extensively mined and smelted in the neighbourhood, and a considerable trade in corn cattle cheese, wool, iron, wood, lime, and millstones. Pop. 3157.

PISSA, a river, E. Prussia, issues from Lake Wyntzen near the town of that name on the frontiers of Poland, flows easterly N.W., passing the town of Gumbinnen, and at Insterburg unites with the Angerap in forming the Prugle, after a course of about 70 m.

PITSEVACHU, a waterfall, Switzerland con. Valais, 4 m. N W Martigny. It is formed by the Rhodanus near its confluence with the Rhone, and is chiefly remarkable for its height, which is nearly 800 ft.

PISTOCIO, a m. and com. Naples, prov. Basilicata, dist. and 20 m. S. Matera. Pop. 6780.

PISTONA (anc. Pistorum), a t. Tuscany 20 m. N W Florence, with which it is connected by railway near 1 hour. Ombrone. It is surrounded by lofty walls, which have a circumference of nearly 3 m. and entered by four gates. It has several large and handsome squares, spacious, well-paved, and well formed streets; is the seat of a bishop, and the seat of a court of first resort, and several public offices, contains a cathedral of ancient date, faced internally and paved with marble, and adorned with fine sculptures and paintings, the church Dell'Unita, with a magnificent dome, several other churches, a townhouse, courthouses, cabinet of natural history several schools and hospitals, and has manufactures of woollen and silk goods, tanneries, silk-mills and a trade in silk, straw bonnets, and cattle. Fine rock-crystals, called Pistoia diamonds, are found in the vicinity and pistoles are supposed by some to have been first made here. Pope Clement IX. was a native. Pop. (1853) 11,811.

PISEBEGA, a deep and rapid river Spain which rises in prov. Palencia flows S. and S W and falls into the Douro, about 8 m. S W Valladolid, total course. 125 m. direct distance principal tributaries the Arlanzon Arlanza and Carrion.

PIT, a river Siberia, rises in prov. Irkutsk, near lat. 60° N. and lon. 97° E. flows N. W. past the town of Pitkin, and joins the Yenisei, 10 m. below the town of Yenisei, after a course of about 240 m.

PITAVGUL, a t. Brazil prov. Minas-Geraes 110 m. N W Ouro-Preto nearly 2000 ft. above sea-level with three churches a Latin and a primary school a court of justice; and a trade in rum, considered the best in the prov. sugar cotton, wine, horses, and cattle. Pop. dist. 5000.

PITCAIRN ISLAND an isl. S. Pacific Low Archipelago lat. (Adamstown) 23° 37' S. lon. 130° 52' W. length, E. by S and W by N 2½ m. breadth about 1 m. its coast is almost perpendicular throughout its whole extent, and is moreover fringed with formidable rocks and reefs making it impossible to land except at a very few points—one at the W. end and another on the N. E., called Bounty Bay. The last is that generally used, but even it becomes impracticable in strong winds. The island, rising to the height of 1100 ft., becomes visible at a distance of 50 m. and when more nearly approached presents a somewhat wild but beautiful appearance. Its summits are clothed with luxuriant verdure, and the bases of its lofty cliffs are skirted with thickly-branched evergreens. But the mostest which attracted to Pitcairn Island is derived far less from its physical than from its moral features. In 1790, 9 British sailors, mutineers of the Bounty landed on it with 18 natives of Tahiti 6 men and 12 women. They found proof of former, but no actual inhabitants, and might easily have managed, from the natural fertility of the soil, to subsist in tolerable comfort. But violent dissensions soon arose, and they commenced killing each other and at the end of 10 years the only survivors were John Adams, an Englishman the females, and 19 children. Providentially among the articles which the mutineers had brought with them were a few Bibles and prayer-books, and Adams, partly by the personal of them was strong with remorse for his past life, and became a genuine Christian convert. He immediately commenced the religious training of the little community, and with such remarkable success, that probably none the first planting of the gospel, its genuine fruits have never been produced more purely and abundantly than on this lonely isle of the Pacific. Every successive visitor seems to vie with those who preceded him in lauding the inhabitants for their numerous virtues, social and domestic. Their kindness and hospitality are of the purest and most unfeigned kind. Every individual of suitable age can both read and write; drunkenness is entirely avoided; quarrels in the most common of the term are unknown; and when disputes do arise, they are either settled at once by a magistrate, annually appointed by the voice of all the males and females above 16, or with the assistance of a jury; and in the rare case of continued misunderstanding, by the final decision of the captain of the first man-of-war that visits the Island. On July 30, 1851, when this interesting community was visited by H. M. S. Chloe there numbered 81 males and 79 females in all, 160 souls. The village in which they are congregated is situated a little W of Bounty Bay, and consists of well-built, clean, and comfortable dwelling-houses, and a large and substantial building, used both as a chapel and school-room. The women are chiefly employed, in addition to their domestic duties, in cultivating the ground which yields abundance of potatoes, yams, some maize, and many varieties of fine fruit: pineapples, pumpkins, bread-fruit, melons, oranges, lemons, &c. These are exchanged for wearing apparel, and other necessities obtained from whale-ships. The men, besides building houses, and doing other heavy mechanical work, spend much time in fishing and in hunting the goats.

PITCHCOMBE, par. Eng. Gloucester 217 ac. P. 145.

PITCHFORD, par. Eng. Bucks 924 ac. P. 59.

PITCHER, a vil and township, U. States, New York, 127 m. W S W Albany with two churches an academy several schools, a woollen factory, two tanneries, and grain saw and felt-mills. Pop. 1564.

PITCHEFORD, par. Eng. Salop, 1645 ac. P. 164.

PITCHELY, par. Eng. Northampton, 8980 ac. P. 610.

PITCOMBE, par. Eng. Somerset 1050 ac. P. 411.

PITTA—1 A seaport in Sweden 18½ N. Bohuslän, cap. dist. 83 m. S W Torsholm, on an isl. in the mouth of the Pitea, here crossed by a long wooden bridge. It is regularly built, but all the houses are of wood and very indifferent. It has a harbour and docks through the trade is of very limited extent. Pop. 1921.—The river carries some small boats. Lappmark, stretches across the whole kingdom from the coast to the frontiers of Norway. It is extensively covered with lakes and morasses and has miles of argeous land but is very thinly peopled.—2 A river Sweden which issues from Lake Pitken, on the coast of Norway flows S. E., expanding into several large lakes and after a course of about 220 m. forms a wide estuary and falls into the Gulf of Bothnia near the town of Pitken.

PITTCO (anc. Pitconum) a vil and par. Lincolnshire above the Ouse, 5 m. N. Pitcon with a church, and a castle. Pop. 1808.

PITTELIO, a vil and com. Tuscany 20 m. N W Pisa, with a church the remains of an old castle, a school and an extensive paper-mill. Pop. 8195.

PITHIVIERS (Latin, Autunum Pithivernum), a tn. France, dep. Loiret, on the ridge and slope of a hill near the Orléans, 25 m. N E Orléans. It is a regular well built place, with a very large square and a considerable trade in wool, wine, honey, and particularly excellent saffron which is grown in the district. It is famous for its almond-trees and bark-pest. Pop. 8803.

PITI a dist. dist. among the W Himalayas, belonging to Great Britain and bounded N by dist. Rupesh, W dist. Lahul and Kulu, S dist. Kuluwar, and E. the Chinese territories, from which it is separated by the Parang. It consists principally of the valley of the Piti, from which it derives its name, and is both covered and enclosed by lofty mountains, many of which have an elevation exceeding 20,000 ft. Some fertile alluvial tracts occur chiefly along the banks of the streams, and yield good crops of grain; but the greater part of the surface is naturally sterile, and is rendered still more so by the want of moderns, the climate being almost ruinous. The inhabitants show plainly by their features, that they are of Tartar origin. Almost the whole of them are Buddhists. They are comparatively few in number and live in small and distant villages, the houses of which are generally built of unburnt bricks, made of a fine lacustrine clay which is very abundant in the valleys. Their flat roofs are covered with a thick layer of the same material. The principal village of the district is Dinkar.

PITIC, a tn. Mexico dep. and m. the Sonora, 128 m. S. W. Mazatlan. It is an enterprise for goods of every description imported at Guaymas, and intended for the markets of Upper Sonora and New Mexico. Pop. 5000.

PITIGLIANO, a tn and com. Tuscany, 33 m. S. E. Grosseto; with a collegiate church, a castle, a palace belonging to the Orsini family, an hospital, two schools, and a trade in wine and oil. Pop. 3420.

PITMINSTER, par. Eng. Somerset 5120 ac. P. 1807.

PITNEY, par Eng Somerset 1500 sq. P 454.
PITTSCHEN [Polish, Przys, Zysowice, or Zysow], a town, gov and 82 sq. N. E. Oppels. It is walled, has a church, two chapels, townhouse, and hospital. Manufactures of wooden and linen cloth, a dye-work, tile-work, and several mills. In 1688 Maximilian of Austria was here defeated by Sigismund, king of Poland. Pop. 2074.

PITSELA, par Eng Essex, 1517 sq. P 246.
PITSLAGO, par Scot Aberdeen 84 sq. 18 sq. P 1801.

PITSLAGO (New), a vil Scotland, co. Aberdeen, 11 sq. S. W. Fraserburgh; with a small church, an Episcopal chapel, two schools and manufactures of linen and cotton goods.

PITSTONE, or PITTLITZSCHOWITZ, par Eng Bucks; 2836 sq. Pop. 645.

PITT or MARIS, an isl N Pacific, Gilbert Archipelago lat. 8° 20' 48" N. lon. 172° 57' E., about 6 m long, by 1 m broad; connected by a narrow channel with Taritaco, or Touching Island. It is very fertile, the only quadruped is the rat, which is in great numbers: there are few birds. Pop. about 5000.—2 See YAKUMU.

PITTS ARCHIPELAGO, a number of islands British America, N Pacific Ocean about lat. 58° 28' N., lon. 135° 48' W. Pitt's Island, the largest, about 80 m long by 30 m broad is separated from the mainland by Grenville's Canal, which in some places is not more than 4 m wide, and from Bank's Island on the S. by the Canal de Princeps.

PITTS STRAIT Indian Archipelago, separating the islands of Batakia and Selwatty on the N. W. extremity of Papua. It is about 30 m long, by 6 m broad.

PITTSBURGH, a royal and coal port, seat and par Scotland co. Life 84 m. S. W. by E. St. Andrews N shore, Fifth of Forth. It has a townhall with a small prison attached a parish and a U. Presbyterian church, and an Episcopal chapel. Inhabitants chiefly employed in the extensive fisheries of the coast. Pittsburger unites with the two Anstruthers, Chell, Chap. Kilbrunny and St. Andrews, in returning a member to Parliament. Pop. 1450.

PITTSBURG, a vil and town Belgium par W. Flanders, 19 sq. S. Bruges. The chief manufactures are iron, linen, flax and wool. Iron is exported and there are four breweries, an oil and four flour mills. Pop. 6178.

PITTINGTON, a vil and par England, co. and 8 m. E. N. E. Durham with an ancient church, chiefly in the Norman style, limestone quarries and extensive collieries. Area of par. 6727 sq. Pop. 6311.

PITTMACHA, a vil Austria, Croatia, 12 m. from Retzover. It is the headquarters of a frontier regiment and has a church. Pop. 1919.

PITTSBURGH, a town U. States, Pennsylvania, 210 sq. N. W. Washington, advantageously situated near the centre of a large and valuable coal-field in the angle formed by the Monongahela and the Allegheny in uniting to form the Ohio, and on the great trunk lines of canal and railway which have been carried westward from the Delaware to the Ohio over the valleys of the Schuylkill and Susquehanna and the intervening mountains. The site of the town is naturally rich in picturesque beauty but its site, in this respect, are much destroyed by the sulphureous vapours and dense clouds of smoke which are continually rising from the thousands of coal fires in its numerous factories and give the whole place a dingy, and almost dismal appearance. Pittsburgh consists of the town properly so called and of several large suburbs, with which, when on the opposite side of the river, the connection is kept up both by regular ferries and bridges. Of the latter the one across the Monongahela is 1600 ft. long, while the Allegheny has three, all of them covered, and one of them provided with a foot walk over its top. The first streets of Pittsburgh were built parallel to the Monongahela, others were afterwards built in the manner parallel to the Allegheny the interval between was left to be filled up as a rapidly-increasing population might require. The whole space being now occupied, the town has necessarily assumed a triangular form, which, not being in itself favourable to regularity of structure, has been rendered still more irregular from the want of a preconcerted plan. Many of the streets, however, lined with houses, for the most part built substantially of brick, have a respectable, and even handsome appearance; and all these are well lighted with gas, while the supply of water obtained from the Allegheny, and raised by a steam-engine 116 ft. above its level, is both excellent and ample. Of the adjacent places which, though separately incorporated, are properly regarded as only suburbs of Pittsburgh, the most important are Allegheny, on the S. bank of the river of same name, and Birmington on the E. bank of the Monongahela. The latter is distinguished chiefly by its manufacturing establishments; the former vies with Pittsburgh in its public edifices, and surpasses it in the elegance of its private mansions, which, often occupying dry and commanding positions, have been selected for residences by the wealthier classes.

Vol. II.

Among the public edifices no fewer than 35 churches are counted though their architectural merits scarcely entitle any of them to special notice, except the R. Catholic cathedral which, partly from the elevation of its site, presents a very imposing appearance, and the third Presbyterian church, which is a very handsome structure. By far the finest building is the new courthouse, consisting of a handsome Doric structure, adorned somewhat incongruously by domes. Other buildings or objects of note are the banks and hotels, several of which are large and handsome edifices; a museum possessed of many Indian curiosities, and the Western University of Pennsylvania.

Pittsburgh has almost inexhaustible sources of prosperity, both in its manufactures and its trade. Its coal-seams and iron mines, situated generally above the level of the rivers and torrents, are easily worked by means of adits, without deep shafting, or expensive drainage; while its rivers, canals and railways, bring it into immediate communication with the great commercialemporiums of the S. and E., and give it access to the productive regions of the W. Its industrial establishments include 13 rolling-mills, employing 3500 hands 80 large and several small foundries, employing 2500 hands 8 large and several small cotton factories, employing 1600 hands and numerous flat, bottle, and window glass factories, employing above 11 000 hands. In addition to these are extensive distilleries, in which looks, tobacco, coffee-mills, scotch axes axles, gun-barrels, and numberless other articles in iron and steel are produced. White-lead and glass windows, copper-smelting furnaces, and a large copper-rolling mill &c. The first steam-boat constructed on the western waters was built at Pittsburgh in 1811 and the important branch of industry thus commenced has made such progress, that for a series of years steam-boats, often so magnificent as well to deserve the name of floating palaces, have been constructed and fitted out at the average rate of one a-week. Almost constantly 80 or 40 of them may be seen along the wharfs destined for various parts on the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri. Pittsburgh occupies the site of a fort, called Duquesne, which was built by the French about 1754, and was used by them as a central point, from which, in conjunction with the Indians they spread terror along the frontier settlements of Pennsylvania. In an attack on this fort in 1755 the British were defeated, with the loss of their commander General Braddock. For some time Pittsburgh made little progress and in 1775 did not contain more than 30 dwellings within its present city limits. Even in 1796 the inhabitants were only 1396. Its first great start was made in 1811, on the introduction of steam navigation, but it was hardly to be said to have entered on its full career of prosperity till the opening up of its rich field of coal and iron. Its pop., which in 1820 was 7248, had increased in 1840 to 21 110 and in 1850 to 50 519. This does not include Allegheny and other suburbs. Adding them, the pop. cannot be estimated at less than 100,000.

PITTSFIELD, a town U. States, Massachusetts, on the frontiers of New York, about 120 m. W. Boston, in a wide valley between the Taconic and Green Mountains, at the confluence of the Fitchburg and Haverhill, and on the Western Railroad from Boston to Albany and two other branch lines. It is well built, and near its centre is a square with an area of about four acres. Fronting on opposite sides of this square, are the First Congregational Church, an elegant structure; and the Berkshire Medical Institution, which, as a medical school, enjoys a high reputation, and occupies a handsome and commodious range of buildings. Other edifices and establishments of note are the Second Congregational and Baptist churches, both new and tasteful structures; the Episcopal and Methodist churches, a young ladies' institute, an ecclesies and numerous schools. The manufactures are very extensive and include cotton and woollen goods, castings, machinery, cars, and carriages, hats, harness, cabinet furniture, tools, firearms, and musical instruments. The salubrious climate of Pittsford, its easy access and beautiful scenery, make it a desirable residence, and attract great numbers of summer visitors. Pop. (1860) 1872.

22

PITTSFORD several places, U. S. States, including—1 A vil. and township, Vermont, 70 m. S.W. Montpelier with three churches, numerous schools, two furnaces, and two saw mills. Pop. 1927.—2, A vil. and township New York, 215 m. W. by N Albany with two churches, several schools, a tannery, a brewery and a flour-mill. Pop. 1903.

PITZTHAL, a vil. Tyrol near Inns in a long and black valley of same name with a church. Pop. 1148.

PIUGUPUNT, a tn. Spain, Isl. Mallorca, 6 m. W Palma, with a church with a Gothic tabernacle, a richly laboured and very remarkable work of the 13th century, a primary school and a trade in corn, wine, fruit, and cattle. Pop. 1164.

PIUMHI, or LEVAKOVITZ, a tn. Bosnia prov. Monastir, 58 m. W.R.W. Foruzga with a church. The district is of great extent and very mountainous.

PIURA, a tn. Peru cap. prov. and on a river of same name, 240 m. N.W. Truxillo, in a district remarkable for its salubrity. It carries on a considerable trade in wool, cotton sugar fruit and other produce of the province.

The river rises in the W. slope of the Andes, flows W. N. W., then S.W. past the towns of Piura and Sechura, and falls into Sechura Bay in the S. Pacific, after a course of about 100 m.

PIVERO, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont prov. Turin prov. Ivrata, with several churches. Pop. 1068.

PIVNICZA, a vil. Hungary. Halberstadt co. and 11 m. N.E. Rzes with two churches and some trade in corn cattle, and flax. Pop. 210.

PIVNICZNA, a tn. Austria Galicia, circle and 28 m. S. Radosz, on the Peczud near the frontiers of Hungary. It has a church manufactures of linen and damask, and a paper-mill. Pop. 2060.

PIXLEY par Eng. Hereford 655 at P. 6. PIZZARRA (Sts), a vil. Spain, Andalusia prov. and about 15 m. from Malaga. It is regularly built has a church and a palace of Count Vis. Manuel. Its inhabitants chiefly gardeners or milkmen. Pop. 416.

PIZZIGHITONE, a tn. Italy Piedmont prov. Milan prov. and 12 m. W.W. Cremona on the Adda. It was once a fortress of great importance and still looks strong though the fortifications have been partly dismantled. At present it is chiefly used as a military place of correction, and a powder magazine for Lombardy. It contains four churches and a tower in which Francis I. of France, after his capture at the battle of Pavia, was detained 79 days preparatory to his removal to Spain. Pop. 3938.

PIZZO (St) a tn. and seaport, Naples prov. Calabria-Ultra II dist. and 6 m. N.W. Monteleone on the Gulf of St. Eufemia with an indifferently sheltered harbor and a considerable trade. The fishing particularly of tunny employs a great number of the inhabitants. In 1815 Murat, shortly after landing, was made prisoner and shot near this town.

PIZZOFFRATO a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo Ultra, 28 m. S.S.W. Lanciano; with three churches. Pop. 1070.

PIZZOLI, a tn. Naples prov. Abruzzo-Ultra II 7 m. N.W. Aquila at the foot of a M. h. mountain with three churches. Pop. 3500.

PLABENNEL, a vil. and com. France, dep. Finistère 15 m. N.W. Brest, on an eminence commanding a very extensive view, near it is a remarkable Celtic cemetery. P. 2525.

PLACANICA a vil. and com. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra II dist. and 17 m. N.E. Gerace. Pop. 1428.

PLACYNIA or PLACYNIA—1 A tn. Spain, Biscay, prov. Guipuzcoa, 8 W. St. Sebastian. It has a church a townhouse, a prison, and school, a royal munifactory of weapons and firearms, in a very desolate state, and four flour-mills. Pop. 1812.—2 A city Spain. See PLACYNIA.

PLACYNIA a tn. Italy See PLACYNIA.

PLACYNIA BAY—1 A large inlet, S. coast, Isl. Newfoundland 42 m. N. of its entrance, between Cape St. Mary and Capoten Range and extending inland 63 m. It includes several good harbours, but its W. side is crowded with islands, many of which are low, and surrounded by sunken rocks and reefs, forming a great obstruction to navigation.—2, A tn. and port, E. shores above bay 50' W. N. W. St. John. It was the capital when the French had possession on the island, but now consists of a number of small houses huddled together with a church, and a S. Catholic chapel.—3, Little Placynia, a small place, 5 m. N. the above.

PLADA, or PLANDU, a small Isl. Fifth of Clyde, off S. and Isl. Arran, with a lighthouse, having two fixed lights, 130 ft. above sea-level lat. 55° 23' 30" N., lon. 5° 7' 0" W. (n).

PLAITFORD par Eng. Wilt. 1178 at P. 380.

PLAN three places, Bohemia—1 A tn. circle and 28 m. W. N. W. Pilsen, on the Mlze, with a castle, a church, an hospital and a refinery of potash. P. 3899.—2, (Ober or Horst) PLAN A vil. circle and about 5 m. from Badwies, 1 bank, Moldau with a church, a chapel manufactures of linen, and three mills. Pop. 1011.—3, (or Planu) A vil. circle and 5 m. S.E. Tabor r. bank Lausitz with a church, a school, a potash refinery and a distillery. Pop. 709.

PLANCHER (Bas), a vil. France dep. Haute Saône 11 m. E.N.E. Lure, on the Bohan with a paper-mill. P. 1286.

PLAVES, a tn. Spain, Valencia, prov. and about 60 m. from Alicante with a church, coachhouse, prison school, flour and oil mills, and a trade in oil and wine. Pop. 1148.

PLANIK, a small Isl. France, Gulf of Lyons, 9 m. S. W. Marseilles. It is of a circular form, and nearly 1 m. in diameter. The shoals which surround it make the navigation dangerous a light has been placed upon it.

PLANINA or ALPEN a market tn. Austria, Styria gov. and 19 m. S.W. Laybach. It is well built has a church, an extensive factory of needles and several saw and flour mills. Pop. 1574.

PLANITZ, a market to Bohemia circle and 8 m. N. F. Klatzau on the Bratava with a church castle, townhouse and school some manufactures of woolen cloth a potash refinery tobacco, and three mills. Pop. 1244.

PIANSTADT a vil. Baden, circle Lower Rhine near Schwetzingen with a church a Benedictine abbey and manufactures of wooden holders for lead pencils. Pop. 1565.

PLAQUEMIN, a haven or outlet of the Mississippi (Sts) Louisiana, which quits the river about 117 m. above New Orleans and discharges itself into the bayou of Atchafalaya. The Mississippi is always near its extreme height before it sends any water into it.

PLANCHET a vil. France. See PLANCH.

PLAZENCIA (San AMBRASIA) a city Spain Estramadura prov. Caceres, 150 m. W. W. Madrid on the Tago, surrounded by a crumbling wall with 68 strong towers, built in 1197 by Alonzo VIII. of Castile. It is entered by six gates in good preservation has generally good and well-paved streets, and about a third part of the houses are well built among the best are the magnificent palace of the Dukes of Miraval, that of the Marquises of Santa Cruz de Paunaga, and the Episcopal palace. The other public buildings are the bridges, the old fort new ruins, the townhouse, a large building in the ground-floor of which are the prison, several hospitals, a number of elementary schools, a seminary, a college (incorporated with the university of Salamanca), in which, besides chairs of Latin and philosophy, there are several theological professorships, seven churches, various convents and burial places, and above all the cathedral, an ornate, delicately sculptured Gothic edifice of granite, but unfortunately unadorned. Water is brought from the sierras of Torno by an aqueduct carried in some places over arches of great elevation.

The manufactures are a factory for spinning silk, a soap-works, various oil mills, three sawmills, 12 flour-mills. Plazencia, once of great importance, never recovered the shock of 1809, when Castia, by neglecting the Duke of Wellington's repeated request, omitted to secure the passes of Balos and Puerlos, and thus left Soult come down on Talavera, who in passing plundered Plazencia without mercy. Pop. 6028.

PLANKI, or PLANKI, a vil. Austria, Croatia, 81 m. S.W. Carlsbad, in a beautiful valley. It is the residence of a Greek bishop, has a S. Catholic and a Greek church, and an old castle. Pop. 1166.

PLASSEY a vil. Hertfordshire on the Hooghly 80 m. N. Calcutta. Here on June 25, 1767 Colonel, afterwards Lord Clive, with a more hardy of men, consisting of 900 Europeans, 2100 Sepoys, and 100 Turpans, defeated Saraja Doria, with an army consisting of 50,000 foot and 18,000 horse, laid the foundation of the British empire in India.

PLATA A, an inlet, off Ecuador, lat. 1° 16' 30" S.; lon. 81° 15' W. about 8 m. long, covered with large bushes and low trees; and once a favorite resort of the braconiers.

PLATA (La).—A la. New Granada, 55 m. E. Poyayan on an affluent of the Magdalena. It is beautifully situated in the midst of a fertile country well built and has a considerable trade in agricultural produce.—2 Cap. Bolivia. See CHURCHILL.

PLATA (La), UNITED PROVINCES of a confederation, S. America. In recent times often called the Argentine Republic. It extends over the immense region bounded S. by the Rio Negro, W. by the Cordilleras of Chili and Bolivia, and N. by Bolivia. On the E. it is washed by the Atlantic Ocean, from the mouth of the Rio Negro N. to the Rueda La Plata, and thence its E. boundary towards the N. is formed by the Banda Oriental del Uruguay, the S. territories of Brazil, and by Paraguay. The mouth of the Rio Negro, the extreme N. limit of the state, is in lat. 41° S. but as that river makes a wide circuit N. the mean latitude of the S. boundary may be rather fixed at 39° 30' S. The N. boundary line between La Plata and Bolivia lies chiefly in lat. 22° S. The length of the state, from N. to S. therefore, is 17½ degrees, or in round numbers, 1900 m. Its greatest width is nearly 700 m so that its area is probably 800,000 sq. m.

Description.—This vast territory forms an oblong quadrilateral, the W. side of which for a distance of 1800 m. is bounded by the Andes. This boundary has never been thoroughly examined. Snowy heights and volcanic peaks have been recognized from a distance but the well-watered hilly regions and habitable low tracts at the foot of these mountains are still for the most part unknown. In some places lateral branches from the high Andes run into the plain to a distance of 160 or 200 m. and these high grounds have been generally selected for settlements. The E. portion also of the state round the river Paraguay is a hilly country. The plains S. and S.W. of Buenos Ayres, at a distance of 100 m. become hilly, and chains of hills (the Sierra Tinta Sierra Tapalquen, &c.) never rising 300 ft. above the plain, extend S.E. to W. and farther S.W. the Yantena mountain about lat. 36° S. lon. 64° W. stretches parallel to those hills and joins the Guamin range in the N.W. The highest point of the Yantena is about 2000 ft. above the plain, which rises from 800 ft. to 900 ft. above the level of the ocean. But the mountainous tracts form but a small portion of the whole territory, which generally spreads out into immense uniform plains, called Pampas. It deserves to be remarked however that though the Rio Negro forms at present the southern limit of Spanish colonization and asserted authority, yet the Spanish claims of sovereignty developing on Buenos Ayres, extend S. of that river indefinitely over Patagonia while, on the other hand a great part of the Pampas within the recognized limits of the state, particularly towards the S.W. is practically Indian territory.

Provinces.—The united provinces of La Plata are in number 18, and form three groups namely the E. or Litoral the N. or central and the W. which formerly constituted the Intendency of Cuyo. There are no accurate authentic accounts of the population of the confederate provinces. Approximate estimates, in which the independent native tribes are not included, represent it as follows—

		Pop.
E. or Litoral Provinces.	Buenos Ayres	286,000
	Santa Fe	30,000
	Entre Rios	80,000
	Cordoba	40,000
	Rio de la Plata	90,000
N. Provinces.	Santiago del Estero	55,000
	Tucuman	45,000
	Catamarca	30,000
	Salta and Jujuy	90,000
	San Luis	30,000
W. Provinces.	Mendoza	45,000
	San Juan	25,000
Total of the Confederation		830,000

A rough estimate in 1855 gave the total 1,121,800. The dist. of Green Obispo, containing about 100,000 free Indians and the desert S. as far as the Rio Negro are also considered to belong to the Argentine Confederation; as is also Patagonia.

Rivers.—A country of immense plains, bounded by distant mountains, is likely to feel the inconveniences arising from the imperfect distribution of its waters. This is exemplified in the instance before us. The Pampas are, to a great extent, condemned to sterility for want of streams to irrigate the soil; while, from their N.W. and N. confines—from the Andes and the mountains of Brazil—rivers of great magnitude descend, and meeting together pour their united waters into the ocean through a common outlet. This outlet is the river La Plata, which is in reality not a river so much as an ordinary receiving great rivers. At its mouth, between Cape St. Antonio and Cape St. Mary it has a width of 170 m. About 50 m. higher up, near Monte Video, where it is reduced to a width of 55 m. its waters are already quite fresh. At Buenos Ayres 160 m. farther up the land being low is not visible from the middle of the stream. The mouth of the tributary rivers and the termination of the La Plata, are situated 80 m. to 40 m. above Buenos Ayres. The current of this great river is perceptible in the Atlantic at a distance of 100 m. or even 200 m. yet the depth of the stream is by no means proportionate to its breadth. Above Monte Video its navigable channels are narrowed by sandbanks and so shallow are its southern shores, that at Buenos Ayres vessels of moderate size are obliged to anchor 5 m. to 9 m. from land. Even boats cannot run fairly on shore but are obliged to transfer their passengers to rudely-constructed large-wheeled cars, which convey them over some hundred yards of shallow water. The great rivers which unite to form the La Plata, are the Parana and Uruguay. The former issues from the N.W. by several mouths, the latter descends from the S., in a single channel 6 m. wide at its entrance. Between them they embrace a tract of flats about 80 m. in extent, the middle point of it being in about lat. 34° 15' S. and 40 m. nearly due N. from Buenos Ayres (lon. 69° 40' W.). The Uruguay which is said to take its name from its numerous falls rises near the coast of Brazil, in lat. 27° 30' S. and has a course of 600 m. In its course from the W. and S. through Brazil and the territory of the Missions, it receives its chief accessions from the E., and lower down the Rio Negro (which also the chief river of the Banda Oriental falls into it, just before its junction with the Parana. The Uruguay may be ascended in small vessels about 200 m. to the Salto Grande, which is a rapid practicable for boats during the floods.

The River Parana, Paraguay &c.—The Parana considered with reference to the magnitude and number of its tributaries, which seem however to be somewhat varied by the length of their course, is one of the greatest rivers of the American continent. On the W. it receives the Salado which rises in the Andes, in lat. 26° S., flows N. by through Salta, and then turning N.E. reaches the Parana, after a course of 1000 m. Further N. the Rio Uruguay, collecting the waters of Juny and Tartia, flows in a general direction parallel to the Salado. The Pilcomayo, rising in the neighbourhood of Potosi, joins the Paraguay after a course of 800 m. in lat. 25° 30' S. These three rivers drain the Cordillera of the Andes through an extent of 600 m. Further N. in the heart of the continent, the Paraguay takes its rise in Brazil lat. 13° 30' S., among those hills of Mato Grosso which separate the basin of the La Plata from that of the Amazon. Flowing N., it becomes navigable for vessels of 40 tons on reaching the Jauru from the W. lat. 16° 25' S. and 1200 m. from the sea. It drains a great extent of inundated country which during the floods, presents the appearance of a great inland sea, with an area of 20,000 sq. m. and known as the Lake of Xauxer. Lower down it receives the Pilcomayo and Rio Vermelho from the W., besides numerous smaller streams from Paraguay on the E., before it joins the Parana. The name of this river, now given also to a large tributary on its left bank, between it and the Parana, was originally Payaguay; that is, the river of the Payaguas the Indian tribe who dwell on, and alone navigated the stream. The sources of the Parana are situated in lat. 23° S. about 100 m. N.W. of Rio de Janeiro but some of its N. tributaries rise in lat. 18° S. Its course for the first 400 m. or 500 m. is chiefly N. then turning S. by W. it forms the E. limit of the country called Paraguay, and besides again uniting with the river Paraguay, in lat. 17° 30' S. where it takes the direction of the latter and flows S. Its length from its sources to its junction with the Paraguay, is probably 1800 m., and thence to the sea 600 m. more. In broadly current, and volume of water, the Parana has ten times the magnitude of the Paraguay, which is itself superior to the greatest European rivers. But owing to its rapid descent, and the mineralogical character of the country through which it flows, it is not navigable up for more than 250 m. to the Foz de Iguazú, lat. 25° 50' S. above which for 100 m. the stream is but a succession of rapids and cascades, as far as the Gran Salto, lat. 24° 4' S. where the great river previously assumes its breadth, reaches a channel only 60 yards wide. In the lower part of its course, below its junction with the Paraguay, the Parana is everywhere deep, broad, and unobstructed, except in the delta, where the deepest channel has often but 5 ft. of bottom. In general the rivers which join the Paraguay and Parana from the E., descend with great rapidity and offer little facility of navigation. Those from the Andes, on the other hand, wind slowly through an immense extent of level plain, and are available to a great extent as means of internal communication. The Salado is said to be navigable down from the neighbourhood of Salta. The Pilcomayo has been found to be too shallow even for boats. The Yunguyo on the other hand, has been descended from Orán to the Parana, a distance estimated with the windings of the stream at 1200 m. It has been stated also that one or two of the small rivers which flow into the Paraguay from the country of the Chiquitos, N. of the Gran Chaco, may be navigated. The floods conveyed to the La Plata by its chief tributaries, arrive at different seasons, and tend to equalize its waters throughout the year. This succession of floods at separate periods, is due in some measure to the various of climate and seasons throughout the wide basin of the La Plata, the margin of which from the Andes at the sources of the Salado to the springs of the Parana near the shores of the Atlantic has an extent of 2400 m. but still more to the difference in the rapidity of the descending waters. The Uruguay is flooded from June to November the Parana pours down its greatest torrents in December while the Paraguay swelled by the overflowing of the lake of the Xarayes, runs full of water from February to June.

Rivers of the Parana.—The rivers of the plains which do not belong to the basin of the Parana, have little relative importance, and are for the most part wasted by evaporation and terminate in occasional lakes, marshes, or salt-pans. The rivers Medanos and Tala, rising in Tucumán, unite with many smaller streams to form the river Dulce, which flows by San Diego del Estero in a S. E. course nearly parallel to the Salado, but long before it approaches the Parana it disappears in the hollow called the Salt-lake of the Porongos. From the hills of Cordova, in the middle of the plains, several streams, named respectively Frutos, Secundo, Tercero, Cuarto, and Quinto, wind in a general S. E. direction. The third and fourth of these unite, and reach, at times, the Parana. The rest spread over and are dissipated on the level plains. The rivers of San Juan and Mendoza and the country farther S. adjoining the Andes, seem to be all lost in lakes, such as the Guana-cabo, Sentero Bevedero, and Lira Langum or Bitter Lake, which, as well as their tributary rivers, the Mendoza, Tuzumay, Dominguez, Diamante, and Chadi Leuba, though represented in maps as in reality but little known to European geographers. The level plains immediately S. W. and S. of Buenos Ayres, are drained by another Rio Salado, which is dry the greater part of the year. Farther S. the hills connected with the Sierra del Volcan, and the Sierra Ventana, send numerous streams to the coast (lat. 39° S.) on the one hand, and on the other to the interior where they end in salt lakes. Nearly in lat. 39° 50' S., at the mouth of the Rio Colorado (Red river) called by the natives Caba Leuba, which has a course of 500 m. or 600 m. S. E. from the Andes, its sources lying between the 56th and 56th parallels E. of Male in Chili. It is a constant stream, but understood not to be navigable above 120 m. from its mouth.

Salt Marshes.—In this country of vast and level plains, the lakes, lagoons, and marshes, all more or less temporary and periodical, are relatively numerous and extensive. As a general rule, it may be laid down, that all the lakes and marshes E. of the Paraguay and Parana are fresh; on the W. they are, with few exceptions, salt. Of the former description, the most remarkable is the Lake of Ybura, in the province of Corrientes, extending from the S. bank of the Parana, where it flows W., to the E. bank of the same river farther S.

It is said to be filled by infiltration from the great river without any visible connection with it, and at times covers an area of perhaps 1000 sq. m.; but, like the Lake of Xarayes farther N., this apparently great sea has depth of water only for light canoes, and is covered with aquatic plants. The lakes of the W. and S. plains are all salt; but, besides those which have some degree of permanence, there are countless others which disappear soon after the rainy season has closed, leaving the ground saturated with salt to the depth of some inches. The saline deposits thus resulting from the evaporation of the waters which have washed the surface of the plains, vary in different localities. N. of Buenos Ayres, and also at a distance in the W. near San Luis, military salt (sulfate of soda) is found in great abundance, and is used in curing provisions. In other places are collected sulphates of soda (Glauber salt), and sulphate of magnesia (Epsom or English salt). From the latter which covers the plains round the fort of Melinara, W. N. W. from Buenos Ayres, is prepared the magnesia of commerce.

Pampas.—A country covered with a salt efflorescence, must be obviously dry and sterile; and such in truth is the general character of the plains of La Plata. If we consider the whole extent of the claimed territory of the confederation from the Strait of Magalhães to the frontier of Brazil, we shall find it broadly distinguishable into three regions—the Patagonian plain, extending from the Strait of Magalhães to the Rio Negro; thence the Pampas N. to the Rio Salado, S. of which and W. of the Paraguay, the latter river the Gran Chaco, runs as far as the country of the Chiquitos, within the Brazilian limits. The Patagonian plain is everywhere covered with coarse shingle, lava, or volcanic ash, and may be appropriately called a stony desert. It is true that some herbaceous plants and a few low thorny bushes may be discovered on it by an attentive eye but these do not suffice to hide its nakedness or to change its original character. This formation of coarse gravel composed chiefly of fragments of porphyry probably extends a good way N. of the Rio Negro, at the W. side of the plain along the foot of the Andes. On the E. it terminates at the mouth of that river, where begins a deposit of fine sand and clay which covers the plains round Buenos Ayres and some way up the Parana, and clearly marks the extent of the ancient estuary. This is pasture land not insurmountable, but of immense extent. As we advance N. in the Pampas and Gran Chaco, the increasing frequency of thorny mimosa and the cactus indicate the change of climate. In general the cultivable land of the confederated provinces is confined to the banks of the rivers, or rather to their mouths, for the banks of the Parana alone are habitable throughout; and to the country at the sources of the rivers. The intermediate tract between the most E. offshoots of the Andes and the Parana, is more or less arid and barren and even the W. states are separated from each other in some cases, as Cordova and Santiago del Estero the latter and Rioja, by salt deserts 100 m. or more in breadth, and raised but little apparently above the level of the sea.

Geology and Mineralogy.—The rocks which show themselves above the general plain of La Plata, in Entre Rios, Cordova, in the Ventana, R. of Buenos Ayres, and in the islands of the Parana, are chiefly granite. In the Ventana, the granite is covered to some extent by rocks of pure white quartz. The Patagonian plains, the Pampas, and Gran Chaco, are all characterized by a great diluvial formation which varies but little throughout in nature or in age. It consists of a calcareo-argillaceous conglomerate, in horizontal strata, and in the Patagonian plains exhibits a succession of terraces rising towards the interior the eastern declivity of each terrace presenting the appearance of an ancient sea-shore. The lower terraces are capped with lava, the thickness of which is strikingly contrasted with the glaring brightness of the cliffs and plains below. Extensive tracts in the interior are covered with volcanoes or with pumice, and the latter is even found stratified on the sea-shore hundreds of miles from the mountains. In the lower diluvial strata are found marine remains, partly of extinct, partly of existing species. These occur on the Patagonian coast, and for some distance inland, in the cliffs at Bahía Blanca, in those of the Parana, at the E. foot of the Corrientes, and even in some instances on the mountains themselves, at the height of nearly 14,000 ft. In the strata above the preceding, are imbedded the fossil remains of extinct mammals, generally of colossal size, and bearing striking analogies to the existing Fauna of Africa. These fossils also have been discovered throughout the plains and Pampas from Patagonia to the hills of the Chiquitos. From the lower part of the Rio Colorado N. the strata disappear and even a public being found in the soil for some hundred miles S. and W. of Buenos Ayres. In this extensive tract, a fine alluvium has been deposited to the old estuary of the Parana, on the diluvial formation of the Pampas. The deposition of fine sediment still goes on rapidly in the Plata, and in a few centuries perhaps that wide but generally shallow estuary will be converted into a delta of low islands, resembling in soil the plains on its S. shores. The Acapulco Cordillera, which separates Tucuman from Catamarca, and reaches the limit of perpetual snow (about 15,000 ft) abounds in mineral treasures in gold, in silver, and copper ores. The Famatina range also, in the province of Elioja, has the reputation of containing silver-ores equalling in richness those of Potosi. The iron of the Pampas, the true nature of which is but imperfectly known, merits a brief consideration. The large mass (weighing 1400 lbs) which figures in the British Museum as meteoric iron, was brought from the plains of the Gran Chaco, near the Rio Salado, about 200 m. E. of Santiago. When it first arrived at Buenos Ayres it weighed, perhaps a ton and yet it was but a fragment of a much larger mass imbedded in the ground. Chemists, guided by analysis, pronounce it to be of meteoric origin, but those who saw the original mass never doubted that it was a ferrous rock projecting from the ground. Similar masses of iron, containing nickel, and similarly placed, occur also in the desert of Atacama.

Climate.—In so extensive a region as that embraced by the confederate provinces of La Plata, there must naturally be a considerable variety of climate, yet there is one character which, with some slight modification, seems recognizable throughout—namely dryness. The rains carried from high latitudes by S.W. winds, are arrested by the Andes, S. of Chili. Those of the equatorial regions from the E. reach but a short way beyond the S. tropic, or are exhausted long before they arrive at the plains of the interior. Thus, while the country S. of Chili and W. of the Andes is deluged, and that E. of the Parana abundantly refreshed with rain, the plain between this river and the Andes labours under a deficiency of moisture. The drought is greatest in the Patagonian plains. At Carmen the Spanish settlement on the Rio Negro, in lat 41° S. and not far from the sea, the rains are still very precarious, and sometimes two years pass over with scarcely a shower. As we advance N. over the plain in the interior, towards the triple the humidity of the air increases, but owing to the increased evaporation and the prevailing levelness of the ground, there is still a deficiency of fresh water. Buenos Ayres, with the country immediately about and some way S. of it, has a climate differing widely in respect of humidity, from that just described for it is exposed to frequent and warm N. winds, which, blowing from the tropic down the valley of the Parana, over the extensive marshes of Entre Rios and across the Plata, are loaded to excess with vapour, affect the health disagreeably and make everything damp. The mean annual temperature at Buenos Ayres, is about 64° Fahr. the means of summer and winter heat being respectively, 72 and 52. In ascending the Parana, a rapid increase of temperature is experienced, and in the W. provinces, near the Cordillera, the local climate varies continually as might be expected, with the circumstances of height and exposure. The elevated plains of Mendoza are celebrated for their agreeableness and salubrity. Though Buenos Ayres stands in low level places, close to a shallow estuary and surrounded by marshes it is exempt from the severe inconveniences to such situations but its perfect salubrity is yet doubtful; since the constancy there acquires an irritability which renders the slightest wound or dislocation most dangerous; the most trifling hurt is not to terminate in lock-jaw. Though the temperature is equable, the sides are not always calm. The Pampero or S.W. wind sometimes blows with tremendous violence, driving back the waters of the Plata for miles from its shores, and bearing clouds of dust that completely intercept the light of day. Should rain then fall, as is often the case, the dust descends in a shower of mud. The mouth of the Plata appears to be one of the points on the earth's surface most frequently visited by violent thunderstorms near its shores, hailstones and lightning are particularly destructive.

Zoology.—The colossal animals of the Patagonian plains and the Pampas—the giant armadillos (megatherium and glyptodon) the llama, as large as a camel; the American horse, the elephant, toxodon and chlamyphorus—are now extinct, yet, with a few exceptions, animals of the same type but diminished size still remain. The guanaco or wild llama, is the characteristic animal of the plains. Towards the N. it has been displaced by colonization and cattle, though it still occurs with two species of deer. The vicuña, a hundred species, is hunted in the mountains of the W. provinces. The largest of the rodents—the giant of its tribe—is the capybara (hydrochaerus or water-pig). The tapir is met with frequently in the N. part of the state. The cougar or puma (American lion) the jaguar or tiger and the canoe are more widely distributed. Two species of catfish roam over the open plains the larger kind which is still inferior in size to the catfish of the Old World is rarely found S. of the Rio Negro. The blaena and tocoato, both allied to the marmoset, burrow in the plains. They live in numerous communities, and constantly undermine the ground which thus becomes dangerous to horsemen. The armadillo, of several species, and the agouti are often eaten. Of the birds, the most numerous and remarkable are of the predaceous kinds. The condor gallinazo and caracara vulture, attack wounded animals. The Turkey buzzard feeds on ass and shell-fish. Three species of parrots inhabit the Pampas. Further N. at Salta, the Gran Chaco, and along the banks of the Parana and Paraguay parrots become numerous, and the endlessly varied plumage of the tropical region begins to make its appearance. But the animals indigenous to these vast plains have been expelled, and superseded to a great extent by introduced species, chiefly the horse and horned oxen of the Spaniards. It is supposed that the province of Buenos Ayres alone possesses 4,000,000 head of cattle. The horses are not quite so numerous. Of the latter the greater number roam in the wild state in droves of from 6000 to 8000. Sheep also are numerous in the W. provinces, where the country is elevated. The horse of the Pampas is not so severely formed, but at the same time active, and capable of great fatigue. The multiplication of the horse has completely changed the manners of the aboriginal tribes who are now wholly equestrian and subsist chiefly on mares flesh.

Botany.—The plants of La Plata collectively present but scanty vegetation and few species. These vary considerably from S. to N. N. of the Rio Negro, where the coarse shrub of the S. plains gives way to the soil of the Pampas, barbasco grows more abundant than in S. latitudes and even thickets or as they are there called woods composed chiefly of a kind of willow occur in some places. The deficiency of trees is still apparent in Entre Rios, but the banks of the Parana are clothed with fine timber, and, on approaching the tropics, as well as the Cordillera, the vegetation becomes varied and luxuriant. Still the most conspicuous plants of Gran Chaco are thorny mimosas, and varieties of cactus. It is at the foot of the Cordillera, in Salta and Mendoza, that palm-trees and the usual ornaments of tropical forests are first met with. The indigenous plants as well as animals of this region have been to a great extent superseded by introduced species. The apple-tree, which now forms great forests S. of Chili from Valdivia across the Andes to the sources of the Rio Negro, has been planted by the Indians first or N. also at the E. base of the Cordillera. The peach-tree found also more rarely in the same situations covers the lands towards the mouth of the Parana, and supplies Buenos Ayres with fuel. It is planted for this purpose, in preference to every other tree, on account of its rapid growth. But the most dominating plants are the carob (a wild acacia) and the thistle, which occupy thousands of square miles W. and N.W. of Buenos Ayres. The thistles grow to such a height as to conceal a man on horseback, and so rapidly that travellers, surprised in the interior of the thistle region when the plant first shoots up, have little chance of extricating themselves from the miniature forest which in a few days surrounds them. The cactus thickets further N. are almost equally formidable. In Mendoza, the vine finds a congenial soil and climate, and excellent wine could be made if a demand existed for it.

Productions.—The chief wealth, it is obvious, of the provinces of La Plata, consists in the droves, herds, and flocks, spread over the Pampas. The agricultural products likewise available for exportation, is of little importance. The herds of the Pampas furnish annually for export above 8,000,000 hides to three must be added about 250 000 horse-hides. The following quantities were imported into Great Britain in the years 1845-1851:

EXPORTED HIDES IMPORTED FROM THE RIVER LA PLATA.

Imported hides	1845.	1846.	1847.	1848.	1849.	1850.	1851.
La Plata	108,400	48,206	162,500	126,200	294,775	107,100	178,800
London	219,500	18,6	181,300	380,000	380,000	189,200	238,700
Outports	84,800	11 610	34,300	44 100	86,600	117,200	81 900
Total	388,000	6,290	368,100	408,400	773,000	404,800	498,400

The preserved or jerked beef (charyu), that is dried in the air, exported in the year, averages about 500,000 cwt. The bones, horns, and hair of the cattle are also exported with goat and sheep skins, the fine furred skins of the otter and beaver. The yearly export of tallow may be estimated at the value of £200,000, that of wool at from £200 000 to £700,000. The wool has been improved of late years, and much of it is now of a very fine quality. The total value of the exports may be taken in round numbers at £4 000 000. The value of the imports is not so easily estimated, but may probably be taken at about the same amount as the exports. The following table shows the quantity of British cottons, silk lines and woollen manufactures imported into the river La Plata for four years—

Year	COTTON MANUFACTURES.				Silk and other manufactures.	Woolen manufactures.
	Yds. of Calicoes.	Yds. of Cottons.	Yds. of Cottons.	Yds. of Cottons.
1846	12,100	12,100	12,100	12,100	6,031	167 424
1848	12,700	12,700	12,700	12,700	6,031	167 424
1850	11,985 172	9,045 519	18,736	18 398	5,074	186,948
1851	6,462 707	6 535 736	18,610	18 610	5,074	186,948

The number of vessels employed in the trade of La Plata in 1849 and 1850 averaged 483 of these 91 were British, the other foreign flags accorded according to their number in the following order—the U States, Havana, Germany (Hamburg chiefly) Brazil and France.

People and Manners.—The provinces of La Plata labour under a misfortune common to all the S. American States, namely that of being occupied by a heterogeneous population, incompatible of intimate cohesiveness. The indigenous tribes belong to three races—the Araucanians, which includes the Patagonians, the Quechuas, and others, who now roam o'er the plains as far N. as the Rio Salado. The Peruvians, speaking the Quechua language which now reaches E. from the Cordillera as far as Santiago. In this language belongs the word Pampa, which signifies a trilateral plain. N. of the Salado and E. of the Parana the predominating race is that of the Guaranis or Warunas which extends a long way N. through Brazil. The Spaniards though comparatively few are now the dominant race. From their mixture with the native women have sprung up coloured races, differing according to the descent of their mothers, and forming, in the remotest districts, the majority of the population. In Buenos Ayres, and about the shores of La Plata, negro slaves were formerly numerous but at present only a few negroes remain, the slave-trade having ceased at the revolution, and slavery being abolished, but their progeny are still distinguishable among the coloured population. To the three races here mentioned, and the various coloured offspring of their intermixture, are to be added the Europeans of various nations (chiefly English, French, German, and Italian) who, as merchants or emigrants, settled in the remote provinces, especially in Buenos Ayres. In Buenos Ayres, the better class of people are rapidly adopting European dress and manners. Their imitation of foreigners may be traced even to domestic arrangements, and the management of their houses. They consume their time in smoking the siesta, and promenading in the cool of the evening. The business and industry of the place are almost wholly in the hands of foreigners. The inhabitants of Buenos Ayres have but little education and are by natural constitution extravely susceptible, of this peculiarity a curious proof is furnished by the fact, that the number of violent offences committed hereinafter considerably during the prevalence of the humid and disagreeable N. winds. The lower orders, who are mostly of mestizo, and still more of Mestizo descent, unite the dissipation and love of gaming of the superior class, with the simple and rude mode of life of the Gauchos or rustics who is the true type of the Spanish-American in and around the Pampas. The Gauchos wear a jacket of coarse cloth or sheep-skin, and breeches of the same material, open at the knees. His posco or mantle is a square woollen cloth, with a slit in the middle to admit the head. A coloured cotton handkerchief is tied over his head, and is surmounted by a wide straw hat. His boots are without a seam, being drawn without ripping from the hind legs of a horse, the angle at the hook-joints forming the heel of the boot. His ornaments are his spurs with immense rowels of silver and silver buckles on his breast and at his knees the handle of the large knife stuck in his waist-belt is also sometimes studded with silver. The women dress like the men in most respects, but their arms and neck are bare, and they are delighted when they can wrap themselves in shawls of the brightest colour. The ranchos or huts of the Gauchos is constructed of sticks interwoven with osiers and plastered with mud the roof covered with straw rushes or cow hide, a hide or horse-skin covers the doorway. Within, the only vessels or utensils are cows horns a small space paved with sheep trotters serve for a hearth the skulls of horses for stools. The Gauchos subsists almost wholly on beef and water pumpkins and the flesh of game, of which his reach, are luxuries little valued. He may be said to live on horseback, galloping perpetually over the plains, collecting his herds and droves, taming wild horses, or catching and slaughtering cattle. In such avocations he acquires a marvellous dexterity in throwing the lasso or noose, and the bolas or balls. This wild man is one of the most independent and proudest of mortals and covets with some traditional courtesy and dignity of demeanour the sentiments of a savage. His unrestrained mode of life, with abundant excitement, and few wants has its charms, and there are therefore many ranch proprietors who live in houses little better than ranches and adopt all the rude, unrefined habits of the Gauchos. In short, the spirit of the Gauchos who sleeps in the open air who spends his time in smoking, galloping or gaming and cares little for social development or political union pervades the confederate provinces of La Plata.

History.—In 1535 Don Pedro de Mendoza, on his way to Paraguay built a fort on the present site of Buenos Ayres, but that was soon destroyed by the Indians and it was not till 1580 that Don Juan de Garay took formal possession of the country and founded the city. At that time, and for nearly two centuries afterwards, the whole country, from the mouth of the Plata to the Pacific Ocean, Paraguay included, was comprised in the viceroyalty of Peru. The only advantage then recognised in the provinces connected with the Parana, was, that they afforded a communication with Peru. But the expectations thus conceived proved delusive, and La Plata became the channel not of a legitimate as much as of a contraband trade. In order to check this evil by vigorous government, La Plata, comprehending all the Spanish dependencies E. of the Cordillera, was severed from Peru in 1776, and erected into an independent government. In 1809 the conquest of Spain by the French released the Spanish American governments from their ties with the mother country, and the revolutions which then ensued narrowed the limits of La Plata, Tanja, and some other districts on the Cordillera, being annexed to Bolivia, while Paraguay became independent. The commercial prosperity of the interior provinces associated with Buenos Ayres depended wholly on the latter, which commanded the entrance of the Parana and the intercourse with Europe. But Buenos Ayres failed signally in the attempt to establish freedom on a basis of good order and stability and in respect to the associated provinces, it was always actuated by a selfish policy. Hence the discontent and disorders of the state. Between 1810 and 1826, Buenos Ayres had no fewer than thirty-four changes of government. In 1824, a general congress, decided by a large majority in favour of union, in preference to federation. But, as the government of a united republic would probably consist for the general advantage, whereas the government of Buenos Ayres, studying its exclusive interests, would be sure to rule in a confederation, the vote in question was practically annulled by the violent opposition of the latter state. Buenos Ayres avowed by predominant local interests, was unwilling to renounce its control over the navigation of the Paraná, or to cease to be the sole port of entry and thus death to the savage elements breathe the popular watchdog of the state. In 1823, Don Juan Manuel de Rosas, whose successes, achieved against the Indians in the Pampas had made him the idol of the Gaucho population was elected dictator of Buenos Ayres, with unlimited powers. He possessed the stern energy requisite for the management of his half-civilized countrymen but he was as incapable as they of comprehending the prospective benefits of a liberal and enlightened policy. Rosas, though secure from within, he provoked numerous enemies from without. His obstinate contest with Montevideo gave rise to the blockade of the Buenos Ayres waters by the British and French and to the alliance of Brazil with his enemies in Uruguay and finally to the invasion of Buenos Ayres by Urquiza, the governor of Entre Rios, when Rosas being defeated (February 1852) fled to England. The immediate consequences of this was, of course, that the navigation of the Paraná was declared open. — (History of the Viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres ed. by Gen. R. W. H. Woodbine Parish (3d edition) 1852, Two Thousand Miles Ride through the Argentine Province, by Wm M. Linn 1858 Colección de Obras y Documentos relativos a la historia Antigua y Moderna de las Provincias del Rio de la Plata por Pedro de Angelis, 1836 &c. Ensayo de la Historia civil del Paraguay Buenos Ayres y Tucuman, por el Don Gregorio Funes, 1816 Gegenwart und Zukunft der Plata-Städte, de Hamburg 1852).

PLATA (Rio de La) See PLATA LA (UNITED PROVINCES OF)

PLATAEA an ancient in Greece, near the modern vil. Kolia, 30 m N W Athens. The whole crest of the ancient walls may yet be traced and the acropolis, probably of the date of Alexander the Great, is very distinct.

PLATAMONA (anc. Horaeis) a small maritime town in European Turkey. 17 m S side Gulf of Salomou 17 m S E Mount Olympus with a strong castle or citadel on a rock.

PLATANA a small maritime in Asiatic Turkey on the S E coast of the Black Sea, 10 m W Trabzon where the ships that trade with the latter port find anchorage in the winter season.

PLATANI (anc. Comana) a river Sicily rises on N slope Neptunus Mountains near Val dell Olmo, flows S. and W through provs. Catanzetta and Girgenti and falls into the Mediterranean after a course of 76 m.

PLATANOS a town Turkey in Asia S coast Samos in a healthy district. It consists of about 300 houses, and has two churches.

PLATHE, a town Prussia, gov. and 86 m N E. Bietlin. 1 bank Rhine, with manufactures of woollens and serge and a general trade. Pop. 171.

PLATIDSEVA a vil Austria, Salzkammer 23 m P W Peterwardein with a Greek church. Pop. 1199.

PLATO a pretty little town New Granada, prov. Santa Marta, 42 m N W Mompos. 1 bank Magdalena with a considerable trade. Pop. 8000.

PLATTE — 1. A river, U States, rises in the Rocky Mountains by two branches, one on the frontiers of Oregon and the other on the frontiers of Utah 250 m apart, and called respectively the N and S forks of the Platte, they flow E and unite 400 m from their source, when the united stream, flowing mostly E, falls into the Missouri on the frontiers of Iowa, 80 m S. Council Bluffs, after a course of about 1600 m. Principal affluents, the Elk horn and the Loup Fork. It is from 1 m to 8 m broad but is so shallow and encumbered with islands, and has so much rapid current, that it cannot be navigated. — 2. Little Platte, a river, U States, rises in Iowa, flows S into the state of Missouri and joins the river Missouri 150 m W E W Jefferson City, total course, 150 m.

PLATTEN Flay, or BATHA, a mining to Bohemia, circle and 14 m N Elbogen, on the Plattenberg, with a church, handsome townhouse, and hospital. Near it are mines of tin and iron. Pop. 1800.

PLATTEN See, a lake, Hungary See BALATON

PI ATILING a market to Lower Bavaria, on the Isar here crossed by a bridge, 80 m N W Passau with three churches, a trade in cattle, and several mills. Pop. 1219.

PLATTSBURG a town U States, New York, on both sides of the Saratoga, near its mouth in Champlain Bay. W shore of Lake Champlain 150 m N Albany. It has recently made rapid progress and has four churches, a lyceum, academy and three schools, a courthouse, and other costly buildings, manufactures of leather machinery, woollen and cotton cloth; numerous saw and other mills and a considerable trade. Plattsburg has been selected as a military station, and large stone barracks have recently been erected on the shore of the lake in its vicinity. Some severe fighting, both by land and water took place here in 1814, between the British and the Americans, to the advantage of the latter. Pop. 5618.

PLATZ or STRAZ a market in Bohemia circle and 21 m N E E Budweis on the Tezarka with a castle, townhouse, church school a paper and an iron mill. Pop. 1523.

PLAL or PLALA, two lakes, Germany — The one in Mecklenburg Schwerin forms a very irregular expanse, about 9 m long N to S. by 8 m broad, receives the waters of Lake Elben on the E and discharges itself on the W into the Fide — The other in Prussia, prov. and a little below Brandenburg is an expansion of the Havel and is a main feeder of the canal of Fläse, connecting the Havel with the Elbe.

PLAU, a town, Mecklenburg-Schwerin circle Wundsch, and on a lake of same name, 53 m ESE Schwerin. It is walled, has three gates a Gothic church, savings bank and cyclo dispensary, manufactures of woollens and lace, boot building yards a distillery, some general trade and several mills. Pop. 2625.

PLAUF a town Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, 1 bank Gera 18 m ESE Gotha with a church, a townhouse an old castle in ruins, manufactures of porcelain a blacksmith and a trade in cattle. Pop. 810.

PLAUFEN, a town Saxony, circle Zwilkau in a basin 1/2 valley 1 bank Elster 78 m W W Dresden. It is walled and has a castle, several churches, a gymnasium normal school orphan and two other hospitals, manufactures of machinery watches philosophical instruments blood, leather wax-cloth and screens, calico printfields dye works, paper spinning, and other mills and a pitch-oven. 18th century the inventor of Dresden porcelain, was born here. Platten is an ancient place, and in 1490 was pillaged by the Hunsler. Pop. (1849), 11,871.

PLAVNA a vil Hungary Hither Danube 6 and 8 m S W Bacs with a church. 16 inhabitants employed in agriculture and in fishing. Pop. 124.

PLAYDEN par Eng Sussex 1805 ac. Pop. 314.

PLAYFORD par Eng Suffolk 1219 ac. Pop. 260.

PLAN a vil Scotland, 6 and 5 m S S E. Striving with a Free school, a well-endowed hospital and the ruins of an ancient tower. The English occupied here the night before their signal defeat at Bannockburn.

PLEASANT ISLAND a circular isl., S. Pacific Ocean lat. 9° 25' N. lon 157° 5' E. about 15 m in circumference, rather low covered with coconuts nut trees, surrounded at a distance of about 200 yards by a fringing reef, and has neither harbour nor anchorage. It is densely peopled by a good looking race, of a light copper complexion and of apparently mild and inoffensive manners, but who are not to be trusted. A good supply of coconuts and poultry may be obtained at this island.

PLEASANT VALLEY several places in the U States, comprising a vil and post township, New York 79 m S AI bany with three churches five schools grist flour, and saw mills and a woollen and a cotton factory. Pop. 3219.

PLEASANT VALLEY par Eng Derby, 8750 ac. 1 604.

PLEAUX, a town France, dep. Cantal 9 m S W Mauriac with a secondary ecclesiastical school and a trade in cattle, mules, sheep, wax and fat. Pop. 1516.

PLEBERSFELD, par Irel Kilkenny 898 ac. P. 263.

PI EIDELSHIM a town Württemberg circle Neckar 3 m W N W Marbach with a church and a mill. Pop. 1461.

PLEINRITZ, or PLEINRITZ, a market in Hungary, Hither Theres, emp. co. Gödö 90 m N E Pesth with a castle, a church, two iron-mills, and a marble quarry. Pop. 2102.

PLEISSE, a river, Germany rises in the W of Saazony flows N across the duchy of Saxe-Hildburghausen, and past the town of Altenburg; re-enters Saxony and joins r bank Elster at Leipzig, total course, 70 mi.

PLEIBSTEIN, or BLUMSTEIN, a to. Bavaria, Upper Palatinate, about 12 m. from Waiden, with two churches, the ruins of an old castle, an iron-mill, and glass-works. Pop. 1068

PIEMONCASTAL, or PLUMCASTAL, par Eng. Chester; 8131 sq. fms. 877

PLENCIA, a tn Spain, prov Biscay, above r bank and at the mouth of a river of same name, here crossed by a bridge of nine arches, N N E. Bibles. It has a church, an ancient courthouse, custom-house, hospital, two schools a harbour admitting vessels of 150 tons, and a considerable trade in exporting charcoal, cork, bark, and iron and importing brandy, sugar coffee, thread, earthenware, flour, and lard. Pop 1183.

PLENTY (SAV OR), on N. E. coast, North Island of New Zealand, between Cape Remy and Point Mercury a distance of 140 m., with a central width of about 60 m. Its shore is skirted by a belt of mud, from which the ground rises gradually in gentle slopes and hills, partly wooded and partly under cultivation, the whole contrasting very pleasantly with the generally barren appearance of the island. The vegetation consists of a growth of salade, which finely diversifies the scenery, and has many sheltered anchorage for small craft, but no harbour of any consequence except that of Port Tauranga, which has only a channel of 100 yards wide, and though deep enough for vessels drawing 20 ft. bends at no sharp an angle as to make its entrance very difficult. One of the most conspicuous objects in the landscape is the Mt. Hikurangi, which is situated about 5 m. from the S. shore a good isolated mountain, the height of 7200 ft.

PLESS, PLESSA or PLESON a vil Pussia, gov and 32 m. S E. Kostoroma, r bank Volga, at the junction of the Plessna. It has four churches and manufactures of woollen stuffs which form a considerable branch of trade. Pop. 1000

PIESCHEN or PIESCHU a tn. Prussia, gov. and 53 in RP Posen, on a small affluent of the Pruena with two churches manufactures of woollen cloth potash, and tobacco, and a trade in horses and cattle Pop 5657

PLESHY par Eng Lozek, 726 sq Pop. 851
PLESOVCE or PLASSOZ, a market tn. Hungary Hither Danube. co. Sohl, and 17 m S. Neusohl with a church. Pop. 1661

PLESS, a market in Austria. See FLITZCH.
PLESS, or PLESCH, a ts. Prussia gov. and 81 m. S E.
Oppeln in marshy district. It contains a castle, a Protestant and two R. Catholic churches, a synagogue, poorhouse, and two hospitals and has manufactures of woollen cloth, a sugar-factory, tile-works and numerous worsted-mills. Pop. 2414.

PLATEAU, s.n. France, dep Côte-du Nord 9 m W S W Lanion It has a Gothic parish church and on the coast, rather more than a mile from the town, is a small harbour which enables it to carry on some trade in corn, wood, iron, and so on. Pop. 1000.

coel. etc. Pop. 10866
 ILLESTCHIBULWO SALWIK, or KLESTHELKO-OKHO, a lake, Khamsa, gov. Vladimir, greatest length N-W to S-E, 6 m. breadth, 4 m. It receives the Trubek on the E. and discharges itself by the Nerl into the Khamsa. Peter the Great here built a frigate and several small vessels for the practice of naval manoeuvres. The lake abounds in fish, particularly a kind of herring, which is smoked in great quantities and sent to Petersburg and Moscow.

PLETTENBERG a tn. Rhemish Prussia, gov and 18 m S S W Arnsberg, on the Elze, with a court of justice, two churches, and an old castle. manufactures of woollen and PLEUBIAN, a small town in the north of France, on the English Channel. It has an annual fair. Pop. 1001.

PLIEGU (a) in a Spain prov and 80 sq W. Murcia with two squares, a church, courthouse, prison and primary school manufactures of common linen, two drillmills, an oil and several flour mills and a trade in charcoal, corn, maize, hemp, and wine. Pop. 3024

PLIENING, E. W., a v. L. Wertenberg, circle Hecker 6 m
S. E. Stuttgart, on the Kernab with a slouch; and manufactures of lawn and cotton. Tel. 2007

PLINA a tn. Croatia, in the first Banat regimental district, on the Glinu once fortified. It has a German school, and a considerable trade in cattle. Pop. 1600.

PLIUBA, a river, Russia, issues from a small lake in S. of gov Petersburg, flows circuitously N N W, and after a course of about 120 m., joins r bank Narova, on the confines of St. Petersburg and Ravel.

PLOAGHE, a vil and com isl. Sardinia, 18 m. E S W Sassari, on a small stream near Monti Rassa; once a place of some importance, and the see of a bishop. Pop. 2059.

PLOCHINGEN nvil Württemberg carols Neckar 6m.
E.S.E. Esslingen, r bank Neckar, at the confluence of the Eils with a parish church. Pop. 1769

PLAUZZE, or PLOCSKE a rd Austria, Dalmatia, 20 m. from Ragusa, on Mount St Elias with a court of justice, and a parish church. Pop. 1155.

1 LOCK, a to Krasnapol, a bank Vistula, 60 m NW Warsaw on a height. It is well, divided into the old and the new town, and has no less than 20 squares, which one, in the old town, is particularly large. It has a handsome cathedral, and 10 other E. Catholic churches a bishop's palace, in the centre of justice hold their sittings, 2 gymnasiums, and a convent, a synagogue, Plarist college, gymnasium and several elementary schools a theatre, an orphan asylum, and poorhouse, and a considerable trade, a station for ships, and several law courts. P. 40000.

PLOCKTON a maritime vil Scotland on Ross, W coast, 10 m. WNW Kintail, with an Established and a Free church, and two schools. Inhabitants principally employed in the fisheries which are extensively carried on here. 12 SEP in the fisheries which are extensive only carried on here. P. 302 PLOERMEC [Latm. Plormeca] a to France dep. Mor-bihan, 26 m N E Vannes. It is generally well built, and has two public squares a parish church, dating from the 12th century a handsome hospital and courthouses, a sort of first resort, and a communal college some trade in woollen stuff, tweed, linen, flax wool, honey, iron, and cattle. Its air is considered so mild and salubrious that soldiers labouring under affections of the chest, used to be sent to it, and very frequently recovered. Pop. 3324

PLOMBIERES, a watering-place, France, dep. Vosges, among lofty mountains, in a deep valley on the Angoulême, 15 m S. Epinal. Its springs are thermal, and considered very efficacious in stomach and nervous complaints, and attract numerous visitors. Pop. 1979

PLÖN, a tn Denmark duchy llostatem cap hall. of same name, on the Flöer-See, 23 m. N N W Lübeck It has two churches, a good grammar-school and on a height, overhanging and completely commanding the town is the palace of Plön. Inhabitants chiefly employed in weaving. Pop. 1800

FLONFIE-Ser a lake, Denmark, duchy Holstein It is 1800 ft. long, 100 ft. wide, and is the largest lake of the duchy having a circuit of about 24 m. and an area of about 11 sq. ac. It is very irregular in shape, and is divided into two parts, or rather the separated basins of Great and Little, by a long narrow land partly composed by the town of Flonfie, and partly by a narrow strip of land. Both lakes abound in fish, and Great Flonfie contains several small islands. A new island suddenly arose above the surface in 1803 and was suddenly disappeared.

FLONFIE, a village, Denmark, duchy Holstein, 12 m. from Flonfie-Ser.

aut. with important monthly fairs. Pop. 1069

PLOVER AND HERALD ISLANDS, a group in the Arctic Ocean about lat. 71 15' N and lon. 170° W consisting of a number of islets, situated a considerable distance within the outer margin of sea.

PI UCKLEY and PEVINGTON, per Edg Kent, 8047 sq.

Pop. 798.

PLUDENZ a tn Austria. See BLUDENZ
PLUDERHAUSEN a vil Württemberg circle Jaxt, on the Rhine, ball. Weiskorn; with a parish church P 1495

PLUM or PUMU, two islands, U. S. State. The one off the coast of Massachusetts, forms a comparatively narrow, narrow belt of land stretching 9 m. N. to S. from the harbour of Newburyport, in the mouth of the Merrimack, to the mouth of the Ipswich. It is much frequented in summer and has two lighthouses near its N. extremity. The other, belonging to New York, situated near the N. E. extremity of Long Island, is 3 m. long by 1 m. wide; has a very stony surface, destitute of wood, with exception of a small pine swamp. There is a lighthouse on its W extremity

PLUMBLAND, near Eng. Cumberland, 2870 ft. P. 800

PLUMBLAND, see ENG. CUMBRIANS, 197048. P 890.
PLUMENAU [Moravian, Plamenow] s in Moravia, 15 m.
S.W. Olmütz. with a church, and an ancient castle. P 1118.

PLUMPTON, two pars Eng.—1 Northampton, 1800 ac Pop. 50.—2 Sussex, 5423 ac. Pop. 333

PLUMSTEAD four pars. Eng.—1 Kent 8715 ac. P. 6873.—2, Norfolk 1273 ac. P. 200.—3 (Great), Norfolk, 1403 ac. P. 559.—4 (Little) Norfolk, 1395 ac. P. 209

PLUMSTEAD, a vil. S. Africa, Cape colony S Cape Town, a favourite residence of the colonists, on account of its salubrity

PLUMTREE, par Eng. Kents, 8450 ac. Pop. 507

PLUNGER, par Eng. Leicesters 1310 ac. Pop. 273

PLUVIGNER, a tn. France, dep. Morbihan, 18 m N.N.E. Locent. It has blast-furnaces, and other iron-works famous for casting bullets, bombs, and other projectiles a bark-mill, and in the vicinity a glass-work. Pop. 1203

PLYM, a river England, whose rises in Dartmoor Forest, co. Devon, flows S.E.W. and after a course of 18 m. falls into Plymouth Sound at Plymouth.

PLYMOUTH, a seaport in mun. and par bor. England, co. Devon, on the Sound of same name between the estuaries of the Plym and Tamar and at the terminus of the South

Devon Railway 36 m. S.W. Exeter; lat. (Moorst Wise) 50° 22' N. lon. 4° 10' 10" W. (s.) Taken in its largest sense, it comprehends what are called the Three Towns, or Devon part on the W. Stonehouse in the centre, and Plymouth proper on the E. but as the first is described under its own name, and includes the second in its parliamentary borough, the present article refers only to the third. Taken in this restricted sense, Plymouth covers an area of about 1 sq. m. bounded by the Sound and Catwater harbours on the S. and extending from Mill Bay on the W. to the mouth of the Plym on the E. The site is uneven, and somewhat rugged, consisting of a central hollow and two considerable eminences, one on the N., forming the suburbs, and the other called the Hoe, on the S., partly occupied by the Citadel, and partly laid out as a promenade. The elder parts of the town consist of narrow and irregular streets, devoid of architectural beauty and often steep and winding. But great improvements have recently taken place, particularly in the suburbs, where many handsome terraced ranges of buildings, and detached villas have been erected. Among others may be specified the noble pile of houses forming the esplanade on the Hoe. The market place, well situated near the centre of the town, is approached by three principal entrances, and though irregular in shape has an extent of nearly three acres. Water supplied by a stream brought by the skill and perseverance of the celebrated navigator Sir Francis Drake, from the source of the Merry in Dartmoor, by a winding channel nearly 24 m. long, is both ample and excellent. The public buildings include, in addition to the two parish churches of St. Andrew and Charles the Martyr, several places of worship connected with the Establishment, and numerous Dissenting chapels, of which the Independents have five, the Wesleyan Methodists three, the Baptists two the Plymouth Brethren two, the Unitarians, Friends, and several other denominations, one each. The other remarkable edifices and embellishments are the Citadel, situated on a bold headland, built chiefly of limestone and granite and flanked by three regular and two irregular bastions the Royal Hotel and Theatre, a large and elegant pile of buildings in the Grecian style, erected in 1813 the Post-office, on the model of a temple of Vesta at Tivoli in Italy, the Guildhall, the custom-house, a large and handsome granite structure, the exchange, the almshouse; the mechanics institute, possessed of a well-arranged and highly decorated hall the Plymouth and Cottesloe public library, containing, in addition to 10,000 vols., many of these rare and valuable, a large collection of original drawings, a selection of rare and unique series of prints and numerous articles of vertu the Grammar, Free, National, and various other endowed schools the Western College, or Congregational Theological Seminary the Fabbio Dispensary People's Penitentiary, Orphan Aid Hospital, Merchant Seamen's Hospital, Eye Infirmary almshouses workhouses, baths, the new borough prisons, the government prison, now partly converted into barracks the Royal Botanic Gardens, and the cemetery consisting of a tastefully laid-out enclosure of 10 acres.

The manufactures include soap, sailcloth, brushes, Roman cement, earthenware, rope and twine, &c., and there are also building yards, foundries two sugar-refineries, breweries, starch works, and flax, saw and flour mills, together with extensive limestone quarries on the Hoe. The fisheries, chiefly of whiting, hake, and mackerel are very productive. The trade also, both coasting and foreign—the former carried on with London Bristol, Newport, Exeter &c., and the latter chiefly with America, the W. Indies, Baltic, Mediterranean, and Australia, the last more especially for emigration—a very important. The port of Plymouth includes all the harbours, rivers, and creeks, between the Looe on the W. and the river Yealm on the E. The parts of the port chiefly appropriated for mercantile shipping are Sutton Pool and Mill Bay particularly the latter where extensive wet-docks are being formed, and the largest vessels lie in safety along its fine pier and pontoon even at low water. But Plymouth owes its celebrity not so much to these as to its importance as a great naval station, for which the spaciousness of its Sound, and the depth of water returned by its arms after penetrating far into the mainland, render it admirably suited. The Sound, however about 3 m. wide at its mouth being open to the S.W. winds, which here blow with great violence and throw in tremendous surges from the Atlantic, left vessels at anchor exposed to the greatest danger.

With the view of protecting the anchorage from this heavy swell, the stupendous national work, known by the name of the Plymouth Breakwater was undertaken, and has been nearly completed, at an expense of about £1,700,000. It consists of a central body of 1000 yards, and an arm or break at each extremity of 850 yards, making the whole length only 60 yards short of a mile. The height is from 56 ft. to 60 ft., the top 45 ft. broad and from two ft. to three ft. above the high water of spring tides, and the contents of the whole mass amount to 8,970,440 tons of limestone, together with 2,512,696 cubic ft. of granite, and other stone used in paving and fhaungs. On the W. end of the Breakwater a lighthouse, 68 ft. above the platform, and visible at the distance of 8 m., except in foggy weather has been erected, but the entrance into the Sound is guided by the still more celebrated Eddystone Light-house, which stands on a large cluster of rocks in the channel opposite to it, at the distance of 14 m. To secure the port against hostile attack, St. Nicholas, or Drake's Island, situated within the Breakwater, and connected with the S.W. shore by a range, or as it is called, Bridge of Rocks, uncovered at low water has been furnished with strong fortifications, which together with the citadel already mentioned, and several other batteries, are supposed to make it almost impregnable.

Plymouth, originally a fishing village, bore under the Saxon the name of Tamsworth, which, after the Conquest, was changed to that of Sutton, or South Town. It had been a considerable town under its present name in 1488, when a charter confirming its old, and granting many new privileges, was conferred upon it by Henry VI. In the reign of Elizabeth it obtained a new charter through the solicitation of Sir Francis Drake, to whom it was indebted for other important improvements, and on the threatened invasion of the Armada, equipped as its quota to the British fleet, which had here its rendezvous, seven ships and a 57-gun, a greater number than was furnished by any other except London. George III. with his Queen visited it in 1789, and Bonaparte arrived here in the Melampus in 1815. Plymouth is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen and 36 councillors, and sends two members to the House of Commons. Among its more eminent natives are Sir Thomas Edmonds, a distinguished statesman during the reign of James I., Sir John Hawkins, one of the admirals of the fleet which defeated the Armada; Jacob Bryant the antiquary and the painter, James Northcote, Frost, and S. Haydon. Pop. (1861), 60,129.

PLYMOUTH, several places, U. States.—1. a port in Massachusetts on the N.W. shore of Cape Cod Bay, and on the Old Colony Railroad 40 m. S.S.E. Boston. It is the oldest town in New England, but every house of ancient date or antique form has disappeared and the larger part of the buildings are of modern architecture and have an air of neatness and elegance. The public buildings include six churches, a courthouse, two academies, numerous schools, and Pilgrim Hall. The last, belonging to Pilgrim Society so called because formed to commemorate the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, is a plain and substantial granite structure, adorned with a Doric portico, and consisting chiefly of a spacious hall, containing many interesting relics of the pilgrims, and a large picture by a Boston artist, representing their landing here from the Mayflower Dec. 24, 1620. The manufacturing establishments include saw and flour mills, a tannery and several cotton-factories the cod and mackerel fisheries employ many vessels, and a considerable foreign trade is carried on, chiefly with the West Indies and Europe. The harbor, though spacious, is too shallow for vessels of the largest class and being only separated by a narrow belt of mud from the full fury of the Atlantic, has only been preserved from destruction by expensive bulwarks. Pop. (1860), 6025.—2. A vil. and township New Hampshire, 36 m. N. by W Concord, with a courthouse, a church, an academy, 12 schools, several stores and a number of grist and saw mills tanneries, and potteries. Pop. 1281.—3. A vil. and township, Connecticut, 25 m. W Hartford, with an Episcopal church, 18 schools, a number of grist and saw mills, a tannery a woolen, and a cotton factory. It is celebrated for the manufacture of clocks. Pop. 2205.—4. A vil. and township, Michigan, 25 m. S.W. Detroit with a Presby. terian church, 13 schools, a distillery a pottery and a number of flour and saw mills. Pop. 2103.

PLYMOUTH (New), or TALAMAH, a town and settlement, New Zealand, W. coast, North Island or New Ulster on a slope between the Hine-Toki and the Hauraki, 26 m. N.E. Cape Egmont. The settlement consists of a block of about 700 acres, and the town, which has been well laid out, presents a pleasing appearance. It has a substantial granite church, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels, an hospital, a jail a library museum and public library, a large Wesleyan mission school a tannery, two breweries, three flour-mills and two whaling establishments. The agricultural capabilities of the settlement are described on the most flattering terms, but a serious obstacle to its rapid progress is the want of a harbor. The roadstead though spacious, 10 to 12 fathoms deep, and sheltered on the S.W. by the Sugar Loaf Islands, is exposed on the W. and N.W. whence the wind often blows with extreme violence but the ground becomes so foul, and the water shallow and the surf increases so much that no vessel of any size can safely approach within 1 m. of the shore.

PLYMPTON (St Mary), par. Eng. Devon, 1923 ac. Pop. 2815.

PLYMPTON EARLS, a small market tn. and par. England, co. Devon, 4 m. E. Plymouth with a station of the South Devon Railway. It has a church, a place of worship for Independent Calvinists, well endowed grammar or free school a venerable old guildhall and near it are the remains of a castle founded in the reign of Henry I. Plympton Earls was the birthplace of Sir John de Baynham, his father having been master of the grammar school. Area of par., 373 ac. Pop. 883.

PLYMSTOCK, par. Eng. Devon; 3650 ac. Pop. 3502.

PLYMTHREE, par. Eng. Devon 2181 ac. Pop. 468.

PO (Latin, Podemus), the largest river of Italy, in respect both of its length and its volume of water; and hence styled by the Italians, the Father or King of Rivers. It rises on the confines of France and Piedmont in Mount Viso, one of the Cottian Alps, and flows rapidly descending in the channel of a mountain torrent, till, after having been augmented by several other mountain streams, it reaches Lombardy. Here it begins to be a majestic stream, and turning N., passes Turin. Shortly after, it assumes an E. course, traverses Piedmont, and reaching the southern of Lombardy, in Austrian Italy, is greatly augmented in volume by the accession of the Three of the left. Here, still continuing E, it forms the boundary between Austrian Italy and Parma, passing Piacenza on the right, and Cremona on the left. After skirting the N W portion of Modena, it again enters Austrian Italy, first turning suddenly N, and then again resuming its E. course. It afterwards forms the boundary between Austrian Italy and the Papal States, throws off several branches, and finally dividing into two principal arms, enters the Adriatic by two mouths, about 15 m. distant from each other, the larger and N arm taking the name of Po-di-Maestra, and the less, but more frequented, that of the Po-di-Goro. Its principal affluents are, on the left, the Cinesca, Sengone, Dora Riparia, Secra, Dora-Baltea, Sesia, Agogna, Terdoppio, Ticino or Tesin, Olona, Lambrò, Adda, Olho, and Mincio, on the right, the Vraia, Tanaro, Savaria, Bialora Trabbus, Nura, Taro, Parma, Enza, and Panaro. Its direct course, almost due E is 270 m.; its course, including windings, about 450 m. After its first 60 m. it begins to be navigable by small barges, but its navigation throughout meets with numerous interruptions. Below Piacenza, it is confined by artificial embankments, which are said to have originated with the ancient Etruscans and notwithstanding the immense sums which have been expended upon them, and the engineering skill which has been exerted in order to render them perfectly secure, the most disastrous inundations have repeatedly taken place. The embankments themselves have in one sense added to the danger. The deposits made by the river are perpetually tending to raise the level of the water. This makes it necessary to make a corresponding increase in the height of the embankment and the effect of these combined operations has been to lift the river so high above its natural bed, that it is actually on a level with the tops of the houses in the city of Ferrara. The Po is well supplied with fish including among others the shad, salmon, and sturgeon. The last is not fished in any other river of Italy.

PO a group of islands, Indian Archipelago. See RO.
PO-YANG a lake, China, in N part of prov Kiangsee. It is about 80 m. long by 40 m. broad and discharges its surplus waters into the Yang-tse-King.

POBLA, several places Spain Catalonia particularly — 1 (de Claramunt) A vil prov and N Barcelona, with a new and handsome parish church a grunary school, manufactures of paper, cotton twist, copper and earthen ware a distillery and several flour-mills. Pop. 1866—2 (de Llet, or de la Pobla), A m. prov and 84 m. N N W Barcelona, near the Llobregat with steep, narrow and winding streets a church, a suppressed monastery primary school and the remains of a Moorish castle and manufactures of cotton cloth belts, and worsted. Pop. 1287

POBOLEDA, a tn Spain, Catalonia, prov and 22 m. W N W Tarragona with a church, courthouse prison, and primary school flour and oil mills, numerous distilleries and a trade in wine and brandy. Pop. 1753.

POCKINGTON a market tn and par. England, co and 13 m. E by S. York, at the foot of the Wolds. It has a large and handsome parish church in the early English style, places of worship for Independents, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyans, a R. Catholic chapel, a gas works and national school a mechanics institute, and temperance hall. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in agriculture. Arm of par., 4888 ss. Pop. 3731

POCOMOKE, a river U States, rises in Dumont Swamp, on the confines of Delaware and Maryland, flows S W and falls into a bay of same name, a branch of Chesapeake Bay after a course of about 70 m., navigable to Snowhill

POCOONE a tn Brazil, prov Mato-Grosso, on a height 60 m. S W Curitiba. The houses are made of trunks of trees, plastered over with clay. It has a church, two primary schools, taverns, and prison, and a trade in sugar, rum, and cattle. Many of the inhabitants have from 5000 to 10,000 head of cattle. Pop. dist., 3600

POCS, or MARIA-POCS, a vil Hungary, Thither Theiss, co. Szabolcs, 4 m. from Bacher with a Greek and a R. Catholic church, a Basilian cloister, and a national school. P. 1866.

POCEAKY, a tn Bohemia See POLONATSKY

POD-BOLDOY or BODO-KBO-YARALTA a market tn. Hungary, co. Abonyevy 5 m. from Tallya with an old castle, and a handsome chateau. Near it are vineyards, from which an excellent wine is made. Pop. 1867

PODBORJE, a market tn, Austria. See DARDVAR.

PODERRAD or PODERAD, a tn, Bohemia, 31 m. N. Prague r bank Elbe, here crossed by a chain-bridge, and on the Vienna and Prague Railway. It contains a deanery church, with monuments and pictures a townhouse, military hospital and old castle, in which George, king of Bohemia, was born in 1420, and has a breeding stud, several mills, and some weaving and general trade. Pop. 2534.

PODORJA, a vil Austria, Dalmatia, circle Spalato; with a church. Pop. 1289

PODGORITZA a tn European Turkey, Albania, 33 m. N Soutari, 1 hour Montshi, at its confluence with the small river Ohluma, over which there is a long wooden bridge Pop. 6000 four-fifths of whom are Malometans.

PODGORZE, or JOMERSTANT, a royal free tn, Austrian Galicia, mela Bodina, r bank Vistula, opposite to Cracow with whose suburbs, Kazimierz, it communicates by a long floating-bridge. It is well built has a handsome market place, a R. Catholic and Lutheran church, a high school, and a considerable trade, particularly in salt. Pop. 1907 PODHOR (F, or PODAKK, a river rises on the frontier of Austrian Galicia and the Russian gov. Polinsk, flows S here forming the boundary between the Austrian and Russian territories and joins 1 hour Dniester a little above Chotyri after a course of about 100 m.

PODIERAD, a market to Bohemia, circle and 5 m. N N W Budweis, on the Moldau, here crossed by a bridge it has a church and a castle, saw mill and a tile work. P. 1817

PODIKOME (Miron) par Eng Somerset, 890 ac. Pop. 138

PODKAMITN, a tn Austrian Galicia, mela Zloczow, E by N Lemberg, with a Greek Catholic church and a Dominican monastery 1 op 2800

PODKILAVA a vil Hungary Hither Danube, co. Neutra, 12 m. from Freystadl, with a church and a flour-mill. Pop. 1042

PODOI, or PODOLAK a tn Russia, gov. and 23 m. S Moscow on the Tschir. It has a wooden palace, a church, a district school and some manufactures of silk. Pop. 1000

PODOLA a vil Hungary, co. and 32 m. N N W Neutra, r bank Danube with a flour-mill It is inhabited by Slovaks. Pop. 1217

PODOLIN See PODLEIN

PODOLSK, or PODOLIA a gov. Russia, bordering N by Volhynia, N E Kiev, E and S Kherson, S W Bessarabia and W Austrian Galicia, lat. 47° 33' to 49° 50' N lon. 28° 10' to 30° 25' E. greatest length N W to S E 250 m. greatest breadth, 80 m. area, 11,838 sq. m. The surface, though on the whole level is considerably diversified being traversed from N W to S E. by a low branch of the Carpe thians, which gradually descends towards the S and is finally lost in a kind of steppe. None of the hills of this branch have a height exceeding 600 ft. They form the water-shed of the government sending its waters on the N E side to the Bug and on the S W to the Dniester and ultimately through both to the Black Sea. There are no lakes of any consequence. The climate is temperate, bringing both the vine and the mulberry to maturity and the soil is generally calcareous, though in some quarters sandstone flint is occasionally prevalent. The soil is very much encumbered with stones, but is notwithstanding of remarkable fertility, producing corn, which, after satisfying the consumption leaves about one-third of the whole for export. The principal crops after oats, are hemp, flax, tobacco, and hops. The meadows and pastures are extensive, and of great luxuriance, rearing immense herds of cattle, which are of an excellent breed, and much prized in Germany to which they are extensively exported. Large quantities of fine melons, melons, and cherries are raised and the forests furnish excellent ship-lumber. Manufactures have made little progress, the chief product is brandy. The trade, in addition to agricultural produce and cattle, embraces a considerable number of small articles, and is almost entirely in the hands of the Jews. Education is under the superintendence of the university of Kiev, and is in a miserably neglected state. There is only a single printing press. 1 odelok is divided into 13 districts, and together with Volhynia, is under the military governor of Kiev. Pop. 1,409,960

PODOR a vil, W Africa, Fouta-Toro, 1 hour Senegal, lat. 16° 30' N lon. 15° W. It is of considerable size, and chiefly inhabited by husbandmen and sailors. It was formerly an important position occupied by the French.

PODVLK or Podvilk a vil in Hungary, co. and about 20 m. W. Arva with a church, manufactures of, and a trade in linen Pop. 1690

POGGIO-TO-TURKINA a tn. France dep. Alpes Mar-times, 31 m. W. Nice, on a gentle slope above 1 bank

1/2 m. near the former frontier. It was once strongly fortified but is now open, and consists of six squares and eight streets. It has a parish church a civil hospital a schoolhouse a gratuitous school a charitable endowment, maritime fairs of woollen cloth a filling and several oil mills. P. 1168

POGGIBONDI a tn. Tuscany near r. bank Elsa 19 m.

Q. Florence with a collegiate and several other churches an old castle, a theatre, and hospital and a trade in corn, oil and wine Pop. 6003

POGGIO a vil and com. Italy Venetia. prov. and 18 m.

R.E. Mantua It is a straggling place with a church, and an annual fair Pop. 8548.

POGGY ISLANDS (N and S.) two isls. off S.W. coast,

Sumatra. N. Poggly N 21° long. X N.W. to S.E. 7° and about half its breadth. lat. (N. point) = 8° S. lon.

99° 37' E. (S.) It produces excellent timber for ships masts and spars, many of the trees measuring 97 ft. below the branches. S. Poggly lies S.E. the former from which it is separated by a narrow channel called Sikakap Strait; lat.

(S. point) 3° 21' S. lon. 160° 41' E. (S.) It is about 86 m.

long and 9 m. to 12 m. broad. The sea-coast of both islands, in several places where the land is low abounds with coconuts, and some small spots have been planted with pepper vines

POGITELE a tn. Turkey in Europe Hierapetra 1 bank

Narenta, near the frontier of Dalmatia, 34 m. N.W. Ragusa.

It occupies a singular and picturesque position in a semicircular recess on the side of a hill and is inclosed on the upper side by a semicircular wall, terminated at each end by a tower, while, from the projecting extremities, walls stretch down from the summit to the river. The houses stand perched at different stages on the rocky ascent and near the centre of the lower part is a mosque, with a dome and elegant minaret.

Podvilk was formerly fortified, and was one of the strongholds of the old dynasty of Saba, taken by the Turks in the 15th century. Though not now capable of a strong defence it is regarded as a place of importance and is always governed by some distinguished person

POHORELLA a tn. Hungary Hither Thien, co. and 41 m. E.N.E. Munkacs with bank Gran with a church and iron works Pop. 1942

POHRELTZ, or PONORELTZ, a market tn. Austria,

Moravia, 17 m. S. by W. Brunn, on the Igau with a church and a synagogue Pop. 1710

POINT A PRINCE a tn. W. Indies, Isl. Guadeloupe, dep.

Grande-Terre 35 m. N.N.E. Baie de Terre. It is built chiefly of stone, has three public squares, a court of first resort, several public offices, many handsome edifices, and at the mouth of the entrance called Riviere Salée, one of the best harbours and safest anchorages in the Antilles. The trade of the far greater part of the island centres in it. It suffered greatly from a hurricane in 1823. Pop. about 15,000

POINT DE GALLE, a fortified seaport to Ceylon on a peninsula on the S. coast 25 m. N.W. Matara, and 70 m. S.E. of Columbo. lat. 6° 17' N. lon. 80° 17' E. The appearance of Galle from the sea is singularly beautiful and picturesque.

To the right is the fort, with its old walls and fortifications, jetting far into the sea. In the centre of the town, and rising above every surrounding object, are the two gables ends of the old church built by the Dutch. Further on is the quay surrounded by multitudes of canoes, and on a height is a neat and beautiful R. Catholic chapel while close to the harbour is the active town and bridge white, and shaded by numerous trees, the whole backed by verdant hills clothed to the summit with woods, and the most luxuriant vegetation. The fort is more than a mile in circumference, commanding the whole of the harbour but in its turn commanded by a range of hills about 700 yards distant it contains, besides the ordinary public buildings, a great number of houses occupied by

Moorish families, and a mosque, a Dutch church, Wesleyan chapel and wine shops. The trade of Galle chiefly consists in coarse rice, coconuts, oil, betel, clay, roots, coffee, cotton, rice, every cinnamon, and various shell. The entrance to the bay is about a mile wide, the soundings in it from 7½ to 4½ fathoms, but covered somewhat intricately by shoals. The entrance road is spacious, and in the inner harbour ships may lie in perfect security in 5 or 5½ fathoms abreast of the town. The mail steamers from Aden to Calcutta and China sail regularly at Point-de-Galle — (Ziridh's Ceylon, Roseburgh's E. I.

Directory)

POINT PALMYRAS a promontory and small tn. Hin-dooostas prov. Orissa, on the Bay of Bengal, 90 m. S.W.

the mouth of the Hooghly; lat. 20° 45' N. lon. 87° 5' E.

POINT PEDRO the N. extremity of Isl. Cayen; lat.

9° 45' N. lon. 80° 30' E.

POINT RAZ, a promontory France. See RAZ-DE-RAZ.

POINTINGTON par Eng. Somerset, 10¼ m. P. 188

POINTYFAS a small tn. Ireland, co. and 12 m. W. by

S. Armagh with a church, R. Catholic chapel and school

POIRIAO a tn. Italy Piedmont, div. and 14 m. S.E. Turin

1 bank Isère. It has two squares a fine public walk a court of justice, four churches, a Capuchin convent, a school, an hospital, a charitable endowment, and two old castles, one of them surmounted by five towers Pop. 5668

POISCHWITZ (Osek and Nukna), two nearly contiguous one villa. Prussia prov. Sillesia gov. and 13 m. S. Jagiowa, with a Protestant and a R. Catholic church a castle, and two mills Pop. 1975

POISDORF a market in Lower Austria, 40 m. N.P.

Vienne; with a church, a horse, cattle, and corn market

Near it are the interesting ruins of Falkenstein Pop. 2600.

POISSY (par. France) a tn. France, dep. Seine-et-Oise

11 m. S.W. Versailles, on the railway from Paris to Compiègne, 1 bank Seine, here crossed by a very long and ancient bridge

It is ill built, has a gloomy look and is extremely dirty. It has a weekly cattle market said to be the largest in France

The number of houses annually sold, almost all for the Paris market, has been stated at 77,000 oxen, 18,000 cows, 42,000 calves, and 330,000 sheep. Poissy is famous for a series of conferences held in 1601 in the vain hope of reconciling the differences between the R. Catholic and Protestant churches — Ben. taking the lead on the one side, and Cardinal Ap-ostoleste the post legat on the other. The first conference was attended by Charles IX. and his mother Catherine de Medici. 1 op. 738.

POITIERS (Latin, Poitennensis) a tn. France, cap. dep.

Vienne 179 m. S.E. Paris. Its space occupied is far larger than the actual population requires such of it being laid out in gardens, and even extensive orchards, and hence much of the town has a deserted and lifeless appearance.

The only scene of much activity is the market-place, which in general is densely crowded. The principal edifices are the cathedral said to have been founded by Henry II. of England in 1152 a large and majestic structure, in a style exhibiting the transition from the Romanesque to the Gothic

326 ft. long, 90 ft. broad, and 91 ft. high, and flanked with two towers, similar in shape, but of unequal size the church of St. Radegonde the temple of St. Jean once used as a church and now converted into a Musée or picture-gallery the church of St. Hilaire, the prefecture, the palais de justice, and the public library of 25,000 vols. Besides these are several interesting Roman remains, particularly the imposing ruins of an amphitheatre, larger than that of Nîmes, and capable of containing 22,000 spectators. The manufactures, which are not of much importance, consist of coarse woollen cloth, woollen covers, hosiery laces, leather playing-cards, and vinegar. The trade is in clover, linseed, and saltpetre seeds, corn wine, hemp, flax, wax honey leather sheep, and particularly goose skins. 1 others is the see of a bishop has a court of appeal for depts Vienne, Charente-inférieure, Deux-Sèvres and Vendée a court of first resort and commerce, a consulting chamber of manufactures, a society of agriculture belles-lettres, science and art, a university academy, a school of law a college, a secondary school of medicine, a free school of design and architecture, a botanical garden, and departmental survey. Near it, in 733 Charles

Martel defeated the Saracens and, in 1356 Edward the Black

Prince, with about 14,000 men defeated King John of France, at the head of 60,000. Pop. (1855), 24,495.

POITOU, a former prov. France, bounded N. by Anjou and Bretagne W. the Bay of Biscay, S. Brittany and Anjou, and W. Touraine Berry, and Marche. It was divided into Upper Fauton, capital Poitiers, and Lower Fouton, capital Fontenay. It now forms part of depts. Vienne, Deux Sèvres and Vendée.

POIX, several small places, France, particularly—1 Poix [Latin Pois] a to and com, dep. Somme, 17 m S.W. Arras, generally well built, with an ancient church and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop 1000.—2 A to, dep. Nord near Arras. Pop. 3037

POJANIK a market to. Hungary. Hither Danube, ca. 8 m. E S E. Neuzohl with two churches, and a considerable trade. Pop 1051

POKROVSKAIA, a to. Russia, gov. and 4 m. S E Saratov. 1 bank Volga with an extensive trade in salt which, after being made on the shores of Lake Elton is stored here in large magazines. Pop about 1500

POL, or PORT, a to. Baltic, belonging to Makhlenburg-Schwern, about 1 m. off the mainland 6 m N Wismar about 6 m. long by 3 m. broad. It is of considerable fertility and at its S side is penetrated by a bay at the extremity of which stands a small town of the same name, with a church. Pop. 1890

POL, or PORT, two places, France—1 (sur-Terraine) [Latin Sancti Petri de Papis], a to. dep. Pas-de-Calais at the intersection of seven important highways, 20 m W W Arras. It was once a place of considerable strength, and it is both irregularly and indifferently built. It has a communal college, manufactures of soap and casks, several breweries and brick and tile works. Pop 3142.—2 (de Lion) [Lat Statoconius Portus] a to. dep. Finistère, 10 m W Morlaix, on a slope which descends gradually to the sea-shore. It is clean and well paved, but in general ill built. It has two fine churches—one the cathedral with two towers placed with long and elegant lancet-windows and terminating in open spires and the other the church of Kreisker with a richly-ornamented square tower surmounted by a granite spire formed of open work, of remarkable lightness and grace, the whole 908 ft high. The only manufacture is linen but the small harbour of Penpol a short way off, enables it to carry on a trade in hemp, flax, thread, linen, paper wax honey &c. Many of the inhabitants are employed in fishing. Pop 3019

POLÁ [Latin Polus Polus] a to. Austria, 11 m. gov. and 34 m S. by E. Trieste, beautifully situated on a bay of the Adriatic, which is almost landlocked, and forms one of the loveliest havens in Europe. It is surrounded by walls flanked with bastions, and has a citadel occupying a height near the centre of the town and entirely commanding it. It is said to have been originally a Greek colony and after it had risen to great importance under the Romans, was destroyed by Caesar for its adherence to Pompey. It was rebuilt by Augustus, at the request of his daughter Julia, to whom it owes its Latin name. Under the emperor Septimius Severus it had a pop of 80 000 and contained numerous modern town is a poor deserted, and unhealthy place. The only building which deserves notice, and can be called modern though it dates from the 16th century, is the cathedral, which is built on the ruins of a Roman temple, and possesses many ancient fragments columns, &c. Pop. 945.

POLÁ, a river Russia, rises on the N E frontier of gov. Fakov enters Novgorod flows N. and after a very circuitous course of 120 m joins bank Lovat 9 m S Lake Ilmen

POLÁ DE LEZA a to. Spain, Asturias, prov. and 18 m S E Oviedo at the confluence of the Leza and Naredo. It has a handsome modern church an endowed school manufactures of agricultural implements and a considerable trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1328

POLÁ DE SIERRA a to. Spain, Asturias, prov. and 13 m E N E Oviedo. It has a magnificent modern church, two elegant churches, two schools, a courthouse and prison, manufactures of shoes and other articles in leather and two flour-mills. Pop 2500

POLÁ (SANTA) a to. Spain, Valencia, prov. and 12 m S.W. Alcorisa, on the Mediterranean R. side cape of same name. It is well built, defended by a castle, and has a church, two primary schools, manufactures of capes a valuable fishery a harbour and some trade, chiefly in agricultural produce. Pop 2215

POI AN a to. Spain. New Castile, prov. and about 10 m from Toledo near the Tago, with a church, courthouse, prison primary school and a trade in oil and corn. P 1358

POLAND [Latin Serennus Polus Polus, meaning Flat Land German Polen French Pologne], an extensive territory of Central Europe, which existed for many centuries as an independent and powerful state but having fallen a prey to internal dissensions, was violently seized by Austria, Prussia, and Russia as a common spoil partitioned among the three powers, and incorporated with their dominions.

In its greatest prosperity it had about 11 000 000 of inhabitants, and an area of 284 000 sq. m. stretching from the frontiers of Hungary and Turkey to the Baltic, and from Germany via the R. into Russia lat 47° to 56° N. lon. 15° to 32° E. The territory thus bounded formed one vast and remarkably compact kingdom divided into Great and Little Poland on the W. Moravia and Podolia in the centre, Volhynia, Podolia, and the Ukraine in the E. and Lithuania in the N E. The principal subdivision was into 31 palatinates and starosties.

The most characteristic feature of the surface is its uniformity. With exception of the Carpathians, forming its S.W. boundary and a ridge of moderate elevation penetrating into it from Siberia, it scarcely possesses a single summit deserving the name of hill, but is truly as its name implies, 'flat land' presenting the appearance of an almost unbroken plain composed partly of gently waving slopes, partly of cretaceous flint, partly of sandy tracts, so barren as to deserve the name of deserts, and partly of extensive meadows. The last contrary to the general rule occupy the most elevated part of the interior and consist of a broad belt curving irregularly in a N.E. direction from the Hungarian frontiers into Lithuania and though only from 400 ft. to 600 ft. above sea level forming part of the great European watershed, the waters on the one side of it flowing N. to the Baltic, while those on the other side flow S. to the Black Sea. The principal streams are the Vistula with its tributaries, Wieprz Bug, and Narew the Warta and Protna, tributaries of the Oder the Niemen and the Dvina, all belonging to the basin of the Baltic and the Dniester, S. Bug and Dniester with its tributary Pripr, belonging to the basin of the Black Sea. The physical configuration of the country is admirably adapted for its operations of agriculture, and the fertility of its alluvial tracts is so great, that it has sometimes been termed the granary of Europe. As yet, however its productive powers have never been fairly tested and its exports of grain, though large, are probably not a tithe of what they might be under more favourable circumstances. Next to grain and cattle its most important product is timber, which, in several quarters, forms large and splendid forests. The minerals include the precious metals in limited quantity, iron in sufficient quantity, splendid edifices, while the port was one of the great naval stations of Rome. Its ancient magnificence is still attested by numerous remains, particularly by an amphitheatre, which is still in good preservation and forms the most conspicuous object in the town when it is approached from the sea. The but of indifferent quality, and salt, chiefly in Galicia, where its value has long been worked on a very extensive scale and, to all appearance, inexhaustible. Owing to the inland situation of the greater part of the country, and more especially to the cold winds which blow from Russia on the E., and from the Carpathians on the S. the winter of Poland is almost as severe as that of Sweden. The summer is abundantly warm, but the general humidity of the atmosphere, and the miasma of the marshes, conjoined with a common neglect of cleanliness and other sanitary precautions, make disease sometimes, under peculiar forms, very prevalent. Little progress has been made either in manufactures or trade the former being chiefly confined to articles of primary necessity, particularly coarse woollen and linen cloth, for the weaving of which almost every family is provided with its domestic loom and the latter which is mostly in the hands of the Jews, who are more numerous in Poland than in any other part of Europe, being seldom on an extensive scale, though including the retail of an almost endless variety of objects.

POLÁ.—From Chiasso, View of the ruins of the city of Pola at Chiasso.

The Poles are the descendants of various Slavonic tribes, who, in the 6th century having proceeded up the Dniester entered the basin of the Vistula, drove out the Finns—the original inhabitants—and made themselves masters of the whole country from the Warta eastward, and around the shores of the Baltic. As a race they possess fine physical form, and are strong, active, ardent, and daring. Unfortunately, however these original qualities of the race, though preserved to a great extent by the privileged classes of the nobility and gentry whose birthright secured them in the possession of personal freedom, have greatly degenerated in the mass of the people, who, having been degraded into mere serfs, have sunk to the level of their condition are ignorant in the extreme and indolent. In this general prevalence of serfdom, it is easy to trace a primary cause of the disasters which have befallen Poland and enabled her enemies to succeed by a series of unprovoked aggressions in blotting her out from the map of Europe. A minority of her people had the misfortune in bondage, and the latter as if conscious that they had nothing to lose by a change of masters, left the battle of freedom to be fought by those who instead of allowing it to be enjoyed by all as a common boon had selfishly and unjustly monopolized it. The prevailing religion of the Poles is R. Catholic though it has not been permitted to retain its ascendancy without a struggle. The Reformation early took deep root in the country and made such rapid progress that bigotry took alarm and repressed it by lightning the fires of persecution. Since the Russians became masters, they have laboured in consistency and systematically to introduce their own religious system, and with a success which seems to intimate that the religious convictions of the inhabitants are held by a feeble tenure, and easily yield to the suggestions of interest. With similar zeal and perseverance the Russians are aiming at the extirpation of the Polish tongue by discouraging the cultivation of it, and not only introducing Russian into the public schools but making the knowledge of it an essential requisite for office. Among the numerous degradations to which foreign domination has subjected the Poles, there is none in which they appear more sensible than this attempt to complete their national destruction by the extirpation of their native tongue, which is said to be one of the richest and sweetest of the Slavonic dialects.

Poland was first raised in the rank of a kingdom by the Emperor of Germany in 1025 when Boleslaus Chrobry became its sole monarch. He belonged to what has been called the Piast dynasty being one of the descendants of Prince Piast, who as early as 840 had been acknowledged chief of all the Poles who dwelt between the Vistula and the Warta. His reign was long and flourishing, and the prosperity which he had commenced was continued and extended under his successors, Boleslaus II and III. The latter, however, courted the good which he had done, and laid a foundation for future disasters by following the practice then common in Europe—of dividing his domains among four sons, with only a nominal superiority in the eldest. The unity of the kingdom was thus destroyed and its further development impeded by civil dissensions, which did not terminate till 1596, when the monarchy again became united in the person of Ladislaus II. Sigismund, whose merits as a sovereign would have been more conspicuous if they had not been in some measure obscured by those of his son Casimir, in whom all the qualities of a great prince seem to have been happily combined. At his death in 1570, the male line of the Piasts became extinct, and he was succeeded by his nephew, Louis of Hungary. Louis was anxious to secure the succession to his youngest daughter Hedwig; but as this could not be obtained without innovating on the constitution, he endeavoured to accomplish it by converting the nobility and bestowing upon them privileges with so lavish a hand, as virtually to make them masters of the crown itself. Hedwig was crowned in 1572, and, by her subsequent marriage with Jagellon, duke of Lithuania, united that duchy to Poland. The Jagellon dynasty lasted for about two centuries, and the monarchy was thus truly hereditary though at each succession a diet was held, and the formalities of an election regularly observed but on the extinction of the Jagellons in 1572 the formal was converted into a real election, and when the throne became vacant the nobility and gentry with crowds of armed retainers, sometimes to the number of 100,000, assembled in the vicinity of Warsaw and obliged the candidates on whom they conferred it to bind themselves, both by his signature and oath, to observe what was called the pacta conventa. They then been confined to proper constitutional guarantees, they might have proved the safeguards of freedom but consulting, for the most part, of arbitrary and extravagant stipulations intended to confirm and extend the overgrown influence of the privileged class, they left the crown without power and the people without protection. On the death of Sigismund Augustus, the last of the Jagellons, Russian France Austria, and Russia, all brought forward their candidates, and endeavoured to carry the election by such appliances as the exigencies of the occasion might seem to justify—by violence, intimidation, intrigue, and bribery. Henry Valois of France was the successful competitor but his reign was short and inglorious, and no great issue occurred in the list of sovereigns elected under this monstrous venal system except that of John Sobieski who secured the throne in 1674. Even before his accession schemes of dismemberment had been suggested, and though the brilliancy of his reign and other concerning causes prevented them from assuming any definite shape the disorganization of the internal government and the anarchy which prevailed at every new election, made it obvious to all but the misinformed Poles themselves, that their attention was only postponed, and would sooner or later be effected. The first actual partition took place in 1772, and stripped Poland of about a third of her whole territory the respective shares of the spoil being—to Prussia 38,337 Austria, 27,000, and Russia, 42,000 sq. m. A second partition in 1793 gave Prussia 22,600 and Russia, 96,500 sq. m. The Poles now availed from their stupor and led by the heroic Kosciuszko, made noble efforts to regain their independence. But it was too late another partition took place in 1795 and the last king of Poland, degraded into a pensionary of the Russian court, died at St. Petersburg in 1798. A dawn of hope appeared in 1806, when Bonaparte effected to take the Poles under his protection and shortly after in accordance with the terms of the treaty of Tilsit, formed the duchy of Warsaw which, increased in 1809 by the addition of W. Galicia extended over an area of 60,000 sq. m. and contained 5,780,000 inhabitants. But the hollowiness of Bonaparte's friendship soon became apparent, and a few blustering proclamations were almost all that she could obtain in return for a lavish expenditure of blood and treasure in promoting his schemes of aggrandizement. The conquest of Vienna, composed mainly of the spoilers themselves, naturally enough confirmed these expectations, but by an arrangement which in the circumstances looks more like insult than generosity, erected the city of Cracow, with a territory of 460 sq. m. and a pop. of 93,000 into a free and independent republic. The successive partitions had given Austria 45,000 sq. m., with 5,000,000 inhabitants; Prussia, 17,000 sq. m., with 3,550,000 inhabitants; and Russia, 189,000 sq. m., with 4,600,000 inhabitants. About two-thirds of the Russian share was completely incorporated with the general government, and seemed to retain any distinctive appellation; but the remainder, containing about 49,000 sq. m. was erected into what was called the kingdom of Poland, and received a separate constitution from the emperor Alexander, drawn up in a more liberal spirit than might have been expected. It, however, to have been more liberally derived than actually executed and the Poles, taking occasion of the French revolution of 1800 rashly engaged in an insurrection which has only furnished Russia with a pretext for riveting their chains more closely. The name, kingdom of Poland, is still given to that portion of the Russian territories, but the country is now treated, in all respects, as an integral part of the Russian empire. It is bounded, N and W by the territories of Prussia, E by the Russian govt. of Białystok, Grodno, and Volhynia, and S by Austrian Galicia. It is divided into the governorships of Warsaw (the capital [see Moscow and Kalook]), Radom [see Kielce and Sandomierz], Lublin [see Pollackow and Lublin], Plock, and Augustow, has an area of 87,120 sq. m. and in 1860 had a population of 5,008,000. The republic of Cracow, also, after maintaining a feverish existence till 1846, was seized by Austria and incorporated with her kingdom of Galicia.

POLANGEN, a seaport in Russia, gov. and 180 m. N W. Wlad, on the Baltic. It is indifferently built, and has a fishery and a custom-house.

POLAR SEA (N) See ANTARCTIC OCEAN.

POLAR SEA (S) See ANTARCTIC OCEAN.

POLANOW (GROEN and USTER), two adjacent vils. Bohemia, circle Broumbo, 60 m. N E Prague, with a church, a rail-groves foundation and a school glass-works, potash-refineries, several mills, and a trade in wood. Pop. 3600.

POLCH or POLLACH a tn. Prussia, gov. and 10 m. W S W Coblenz, with a church, two mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1493.

POLERBROOK, par. Eng. Northamp. 2730 an. P 472. POLLESELLA, a market in Italy Venetia, prov. Polesina, 1 bank Po, 7 m. S S W Rovigo with a court of justice, several public offices, three churches, and a harbour. P 1142.

POLSEINE (Litha, Poleszyna Gniet Fsk) a vil. and com. Parma, duchy Piacenza, r. bank Po, 24 m. N W Parma. It suffers much from the inundations of the Po, but has a fertile district. Pop. 4370.

POLSEWORTH par. Eng. Warwick 6310 an. P 3104. POLGIARDI, a vil. Hungary Thuer Danube, co. Arva on the frontiers of Galicia, 141 m. N by E Pesth. It is a struggling place has manufactures of linen, and different articles in wood, and a saline spring, which is said to be very efficacious in rheumatic affections. Pop. 1449.

POLHORA, a vil. Hungary Thuer Danube, co. Arva on the frontiers of Galicia, 141 m. N by E Pesth. It is a struggling place has manufactures of linen, and different articles in wood, and a saline spring, which is said to be very efficacious in rheumatic affections. Pop. 1449.

POLIA, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra II, S. Nicastro Pop. 1560.

POLIGASTRO, or PALIGASTRO, a vil. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra II, 23 m. W N W Catrona, once a place of importance, and supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Petilia. In 1086 it was destroyed by Robert Guiscard and about five centuries after, when again flourishing, was sacked by the Turks, a calamity from which it has never recovered. The marshes and rice-grounds around it render it very unhealthy. It is now a mere village. P 400.—2 fac. Baron.

POLIGNAC, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLIGNANO, a tn. Naples, prov. and 30 m. E S E Bari, near the Adriatic. It has three churches, two convents, and a royal abbey.

POLIGNY (Litha, Poleszyna), a tn. France, dep. Jura, 49 m. N W Geneva, and in general clean and well built. It has a hotel de ville, an agricultural society and communal college manufactures of cottons, silk-wool, and leather; dye-works, and saw mills; a trade in corn, flour good rice wine produced in the district, brandy, turnery &c. There are quarries of marble and alabaster. Pop. 5581.

POLLACK, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLLACK, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLLACK, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLLACK, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLLACK, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLLACK, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLLACK, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLLACK, a tn. and com. France, dep. Haute Loire, 8 m. N W Fuy. It is built around a hill of volcanic breccia, on which are the ruins of the old castle of Polignac. P 2134.

POLING par. Eng. Sussex, 923 an. Pop. 103. POLISTINA, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Ultra I, 33 m. N E Reggio, in a healthy and fertile plain, with a church. Pop. 8700.

POLITZ, or POLICZ, a tn. Bohemia, circle and 27 m. N E Koeniggratz. It is very poorly built, and has a church a townhouse, and a town-school. It has repeatedly been almost destroyed by fire. Pop. 1899.

POLITZ, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 9 m. N Stettin. It is entered by four gates has a church, a postoffice, and a trade in horses and cattle. Pop. 1907.

POLIZCKA a tn. Bohemia, circle and 27 m. S E Chrudim. It is walled, flanked by 10 round bastions, entered by four gates, well and regularly built; and has a handsome square, a townhouse, a statue of Maria Theresa, two churches, a high, a female industrial school an hospital for the poor, and an infirmary. Pop. 3668.

POLIZZI, a tn. Sicily, prov. and 45 m. S E Palermo. Pop. 6300.

POLKOWITZ, a tn. Prussia, Silesia, gov. and 24 m. N by W Legnitz. It is walled, has a court of justice, and two churches. Pop. 2018.

POLLA, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra 9 m. N W La Sala, with four churches, three monasteries, and a nursery. Pop. 5700.

POLLAKSDOWN par. Ire. Kildare 1250 an. P 284. POLLÉ, a vil. Hanover princely Caisenberg 1 bank Weser, 88 m. S S W Hanover with a church, manufactures of hosiery a paper mill and a trade in coal. Pop. 1231.

POLLONZA a tn. Spain Isl. Majorca, 28 m. N E Palma. It has good and well paved streets, a townhouse church hospital asylum prison, and primary schools, a fine Jesuit college, partly ruinous, the church attached to which is one of the best of the class in Spain. The port and bay of Pollonza are a few miles N E, defended by the castle of Albufera. Manufactures of cotton and woollen textiles, plain cloth charcoal and so on. Pop. 6376.

POLLERSKIRCHEN, a market in Bohemia, circle Camlau 6 m. from Steier. It has a church, a school, a house school manufactures of potash and glass, a brewery, distillery and several glass-polling mills. Pop. 959.

POLLACHOWITZ, or POLSOVITZ, a market in Austria, Moravia, circle Hradisch near Waldsh. It is an ancient place, and was the first hubspoke seen formed in Moravia. Pop. 1073.

POLLER, a vil. and com. Belgium prov. and 16 m. E S E Liège. It has a worsted and two fulling mills quarries of millstone and whetstones and hankins. Pop. 1557.

POLLINGHOVE, or POLLINGHOVE, a vil. and com. Belgium prov. Flanders, on the Yser 27 m. S W Brugue, with two breweries, a bark two oil and five flour mills, and a trade in horses and cattle. Pop. 1749.

POLLNO a tn. Prussia, gov. and 22 m. E S E Klein, 1 bank Grabow, with a church, manufactures of cloth, several mills and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1444.

POLLNOCK, or BARNOCK, par. Scot. Bedford P 2243. POLLACKSHAW, a bor. of barony, and in Scotland, co. Bedford, 24 m. S W Glasgow, conveniently situated on the White Cart, and on the Glasgow and Harbaird railway. It has a neat townhouse, two Established and two Free churches, a U. Presbyterian and an Original Seceder church and a R. Catholic chapel several schools, a number of friendly societies, and an extensive public library. The inhabitants are principally employed in out-door spinning, hand and power loom silk and cotton weaving calico-printing, fancy dyeing and bleaching all of which are extensively carried on. P 6086.

POLLONE, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, dir. Turin prov. and near Biella with a square, and a handsome church. Pop. 1553.

POLLORNE, par. Ire. Kilkenny, 8396 an. P 1819. POLLUTRO a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Citra, 6 m. W N W N Vasto, on a steep rock, with an hospital. P 1800.

POLLVAY or KESZU POLLVAY, a vil. Transylvania, 50 m. from Csanad with a Greek church and mineral springs. Pop. 1680.

POLLONT, par. Scot. Stirling 6 m. by 2 m. P 8764. POLNA, a tn. Bohemia, circle and 21 m. S S E Camlau, with a deanery church, and two mills; inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture and weaving. Pop. 4916.

POLOCHIG, a vil. Central America, near lat. 18° 35' N., and lon. 90° 30' W., in Guatemala, dep. Vera Paz, some W., then N.E., passing the towns of Coban and Cajalon, then E., then N. and falls into the Gulf of Dulce, communicating with the Bay of Honduras. Total course about 150 m., part of which is navigable.

POLONGERA, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, dep. Cune, prov. and about 11 m. N.N.E. Salusa. It is tolerably well built, has a church and an old castle with a square tower, a seminary, and a small theatre. Pop. 1728.

POLONKA, a vil. Hungary, Hither Themas, co. Gomor, r. bank Gera 36 m. from Keszthely, with a handsome church, a school, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 2293.

POLOP, a vil. in Spain, Valencia, prov. and 7 E. Alcorca, with a church, courthouse, prison, primary school, has several oil and flour mills, and a trade in wine. Pop. 1902.

POLOPOL, a vil. and com. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and about 40 m. from Granada, near the Mediterranean, with a church, courthouse, prison, and primary school, several distilleries, and a trade in wine and brandy. Pop. 1630.

POLOTZK, [anc. Polotsk] a N. Russia, gov. and 60 m. W.N.W. Vitebsk, r. bank Dvina, and both banks Polotsk. It has some fortifications of no great strength, particularly a castle somewhat dilapidated, which was built by Stephen Balthor king of Poland, in the 16th century and numerous churches and monasteries, but most of the houses are old and very indifferently built. The most remarkable edifices are the old Jewish cemetery and college. It has some trade in flax and hemp which is sent to Maza. Pop. (1851) 11,151.

POLPENAZZE, a vil. and com. Italy, Lombardy, co. Milan, prov. Brescia, dist. and 6 m. S. Salo, on a small lake with four auxiliary churches and two mills. Pop. 1229.

POLPERO, a small seaport, England, on Cornwall, on the steep rocky sides of a narrow valley, through which a torrent falls into the sea, 5 m. E. Fowey. It has independent and Wesleyan chapels, a valuable fishery chiefly of pilchard, whiting, plaice, turbot, &c. a harbour, which admits vessels of 150 tons burden, and there is some export of grain, with imports of coal, oil, and limestone. Pop. 913.

POLSCHATEK or PRYKATSKA, a N. Bohemia, circle and 28 m. S.E. Tabor, with a demerit church, an hospital, and some manufactures of cloth. Pop. 2561.

POLSTEAD, par. Eng. Suffolk 34½ m. S. 10 p. 943.

POLTAWA or PULTAWA, a gov. Russia, bounded N. by Cosmoge, E. Kharkov, S. Platenkowsky and Kherson, and W. Kiev, lat. 48° 41' to 51° 51' N. lon. 30° to 26° E.; greatest length W. & W. to E.E. 212 m. greatest breadth, 145 m. area, 18,000 sq. m. It consists of an extensive and somewhat monotonous flat, highest in the N.E. and gradually declining to the S.W., where the Dniester flows along its whole frontier and directly or by its tributaries, Dniepr, Pivorka and Orel receives the drainage of all its surface. It is one of the most fertile and best-cultivated portions of the Russian empire, and exports about a fourth of its whole produce of wheat, oats, and barley. The meadows are both extensive and luxuriant, and the breeds of the numerous herds of cattle and flocks of sheep which graze there are in general of a superior description. The raising of bees is an important branch of rural economy, some peasants have 100 hives yielding priced honey of white colour. Both manure and trade are of very limited extent. The former are almost confined to woolfenn, leather, saltstare, and brandy, the latter consists chiefly of agricultural produce, including horses and cattle, hemp, flax, tallow, wool, honey and wax. Education, nominally under the superintendence of the university of Kharkov is miserably neglected. Apparently not one in 1000 of the population is at school. Poltawa is divided into 15 districts. Pop. (1859) 1,519,500.

POLTAWA or PULTAWA, a N. Russia, gov. above gov. on the Dniester, 344½ m. E.N.W. Moscow. It is walled, defended by a citadel crowning a small height, which rises up near its centre, and has spacious and regular streets. Houses generally of wood, though some are of stone and brick. It has 12 churches of which one is a cathedral, a convent, and a school for cadets. The trade, chiefly in cattle, corn, hemp, and wax, is very considerable, and the fair three in number, are very important. Under its walls, in 1709, Peter the Great at the head of the Russians, signally defeated the Swedes, under Charles XII. Pop. (1851) 24,071.

POLTEN, or HIRVOLE (St.) a N. Lower Austria, 1 bank Traisma has here divides into several branches, 55 m. W. & W. Vienna. It is somewhat of a circular shape, has three public squares, irregular but spacious, clean and tolerably well-paved streets. It is the see of a bishop, has several courts and public offices, a cathedral, and two other churches, an Episcopal palace, palace of the prince of Anspach, and of Count Bismarck, a seminary, a diocesan seminary, a military academy, English female institute, superior girls' school, borough hospital and infirmary, manufactures of plate and printed calicoes, matches and earthenware, paper, cotton, and other mills, tile-works, dye-works and breweries. P. 5600.

POLTIMORE, par. Eng. Devon, 1710 ac. Pop. 281.

POLWARTH, par. Scot. Dumfriesshire, 8 m. by 2 m. P. 881.

POLYAN (MAVYAN or GHERY), two nearly contiguous vils. Hungary, Hither Danube, co. Vasvár, 6 m. from Pápa, with a church, tile works, a mill, and a trade in wine and cattle. Pop. 1132.

POLYANKA (Baska) a vil. Hungary, Hither Themas, co. Zemplin, on the Topley, 6 m. from Vassa, with two churches, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1048.

POLYCANADRO [anc. Pholycondro] an Isl. Greece, Archipelago, one of the Cyclades, 18 m. S.E. E. Mide, greatest length, N.W. to S.E. 9 m., breadth, 8 m. It is mountainous, and the ground generally stony and parched. Corn and wine are raised in sufficient quantity for the consumption of the inhabitants. The town of same name stands near a rugged rock, about 5 m. from the shore.

POLYNESIA [Greek Πόλις many and Νεωσ an island] the name given to the N. & E. parts of Oceania, and consisting of the numerous islands scattered over that part of the Pacific Ocean, both singly and in groups. Of the latter the principal are the Sandwich, Marquesas, Society Navigator Friendly and Feejee islands, and the islands of New Zealand.

POLZIN, a N. Prussia, gov. and 30 m. S.W. Kselin, with several courts and offices, a church, an hospital and tailors establishments, manufactures of cloth and other woolen stuffs, waggons, leather and tobacco, several mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 2394.

POMARANIE, or RIMONARIE, a N. and com. Tuscany 12 m. S.E. Volterra. It is walled, has a handsome church of three naves, with some good paintings, a town house with a tower, an hospital and theatre. Pop. 3080.

POMARICO, a N. Naples, prov. Basilicata, dist. and 12 m. S. Matera with a convent, some good cotton is grown in the vicinity. Pop. 5457.

POMARCO, a N. and com. Parma, dist. and 18 m. S.W. Piacenza, near the torrent, Luretta. It is beautifully situated, and has a church, and a trade in corn, wine, and timber. P. 5119.

POMATA, a vil. Bolivia, dist. and 97 m. W.N.W. La Paz, N.W. shore of Lake Titicaca, 18,040 ft. above sea-level with two churches.

POMAZ, a vil. Hungary, Hither Danube co. and 12 m. N. Pesth, with three churches and a chateau. Pop. 2739.

PUMBA BASIN, or BAY, one of the finest harbours on E. coast Abyssinia, Moumbigne Channel, lat. 12° 27' 30" S., lon. 40° 25' E. The entrance, between two rocky points, is only 18 m. across, but the basin into which it opens is 9 m. long by 6 m. broad, and has almost everywhere sufficient water for the largest ships.

POMBA (Yalla Da), a N. Brazil, prov. Minas-Geraes, 1 bank river of same name, 60 m. E. E. Ouro-Preto, with a church, a townhouse, and a trade in sugar, rum, and swine. Pop. dist. 12,000.

POMBAL, two vils. Brazil — 1, Prov. and 260 m. W. Paraíba, on the Pinaro, 4 m. above its junction with the Piranhas one of the oldest towns in Brazil. It has a fine old church, a handsome townhouse, with prison, two primary schools, and considerable trade in cotton. Pop. dist. 4000 — 2, Prov. and 140 m. N.N.W. Bahia, with a church, and a primary school. Inhabitants, all of Indian extraction, cultivate cotton, but depend chiefly for subsistence on fishing and hunting.

POMBAL, a N. and par. Portugal, prov. Extremadura, near Leiria, with manufactures of hats. Pop. 3654.

POMBEIRO, two places, Portugal — 1, A N. and par., prov. Minho near Guimarães. Pop. 765 — 2, A N. and par., prov. Beira Baixa near Ossa. Pop. 1180.

POMBIA, and VARALLO-POMBIA, two nearly contiguous vills. Italy Piedmont, div. Novara, near Borgobello. Pombia is a well built and has two squares, a church and the ruins of a old castle. Pop. 1169. — Varallo-Pombia has a square a public walk, and several churches. Pop. 1973.

POMERANIA (German, Pommern), a prov. and duchy in the N. part of Prussia, bounded, N. by the Baltic, W. the duchy of Mecklenburg, E. prov. Brandenburg, and E. West Prussia; area, 9190 sq. m. It consists of a long and comparatively narrow tract of country, stretching longitudinally E. to W. The coast is generally low and sandy and is lined by a great number of lagoons, separated from the sea by narrow belts of land or low sandhills. The chief of these lagoons are the Bismarck, the Lehasee, and the Elstiner-haff, or Pommersche-haff. The last forms the embouchure of the Oder, and communicates with the Baltic by three channels—the Penne, Swane, and Davensow. Owing to the general lowness of the coast, where it is not protected from the waves by the downs or low hills already mentioned artificial embankments, like those of Holland, become necessary. Along the coast are a few islands, but none of them, except Rügen, Usedom, and Wollin are of great extent. The interior is almost a continuous flat, inclining somewhat marshy towards the sea, with a very gradual inclination towards the Baltic, by which all its drainage is received. The principal rivers are the Oder, Pennar, and Stolpe. The soil on the whole is sandy and indifferent, still there are many rich alluvial tracts, particularly along the banks of the rivers and lakes, producing a surplus of grain for export. Much of what is thus exported is of the finest quality and the Pomeranian wheat is well known in the English market, where it often commands the highest price. The domestic animals are numerous, and of tolerably good breeds, those which appear to attract most attention are sheep and swine. The forests are of large extent, and well supplied with game. Fish also are abundant. The only minerals of any consequence are a little iron, salt, and alum. Manufactures early made considerable progress, in consequence of the influx of French refugees, on the evacuation of the elites of Mantes, who introduced the manufacture of woollens and other fabrics. The possession of the Oder enables the province to carry on a considerable trade, both general and transit. The principal exports are cereals, cattle, wool, wax, and fish; the principal imports are iron, sugar, coffee, sugar, and other articles of colonial produce. Pomerania appears to have been originally inhabited by Goths, Vandals and Slaves. The first mention of it in history is in 1140. It long remained an independent duchy and was of much larger extent than at present. In 1827 on the extinction of the ducal family, the electoral house of Brandenburg claimed possession, but was obliged to give way to Sweden. On the death of Charles XII. the electoral house again claimed possession, and the whole was finally ceded to it except a part, which received the name of Swedish Pomerania. This part having been ceded to Denmark, was by it given up in exchange for the duchy of Lauenburg to Prussia, to which the whole of Pomerania now belongs. For administrative purposes, it is divided into three governments (Gouvernements), Stettin, Köslin, and Stralsund. Pop. (1846), 1,164,078.

POMEROON, a river British Guiana, which, after a tortuous N. course, enters the Atlantic 85 m. N. W. the estuary of the Essequibo.

POMEROY, a vil. and par. Island, on Tyrone, 8 m. N. W. Drogheda, with a R. Catholic chapel, and a Benedictine monastery. Area of par., 15 93 a. Pop. 2044. vil. 505.

POMFRET a market in England. See PORTFRET.

POMIGLIANO o' Asco, a cit. in Naples, prov. and 7 m. E. N. E. Naples with two churches. It was sacked and burnt by the French under Charles VIII., for having remained faithful to Alfonso of Aragon. Pop. 4700.

POMMERODUL, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, on the Haine, 11 m. W. Mons, with manufactures of soap, refined salt, and leather, a brewery two oil and two sugar mills. Pop. 1784.

PORONA, o' MAINTLAND, an isl. Scotland, the largest of the Orkney group, to the Atlantic on the W. and E., but separated by channels from Ross, Shapinsay, &c., on the N. and from Hey, South Ronaldsay, &c., on the S. greatest length, N. W. to S. E., 23 m.; breadth, where greatest, about 16 m., but when penetrated from opposite directions by Kirk-Yor. II.

PORETTI, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

POMPEII, or PORRETTA, an ancient in Italy about 1 m. from the gulf and 14 m. S. E. from the city of Naples, at the S. foot, and 6 m. S. from the crater of Vesuvius, by an eruption of which it was completely entombed, in 79. It had remained thus buried and almost forgotten, for nearly 17 centuries when it was accidentally discovered by peasants engaged in cutting a ditch. Excavations were commenced in 1770, and have been perseveringly continued till about a third of the whole area has been exposed. The walls, about 20 ft. high, and 20 ft. thick, and faced within and without with blocks of lava have been traced throughout, so as to show that the city was in the form of an oval, with a longer diameter of about three-quarters, and a shorter diameter of about half a mile and thus covered an area of 160 acres. The walls were pierced with six gates, and flanked with lofty towers; the streets are generally from 18 ft. to 20 ft. broad, one-third of which is occupied by side pavements, though one street, called the Breeta of the Bilremitha, has a central width of 26 ft. with two side pavements, each six ft. making the whole width 40 ft., and the houses frequently only of one, and seldom of more than two stories, when viewed in connection with the whole area of the town and the dimensions of its streets, seem to indicate that the population may have amounted to 20,000 or 25,000. The excavations of Pompeii derive their chief interest from the light which they have thrown on its domestic life and manners of the Romans.

mostly with terraces on their summits, and surrounded with a colonnade below. The Black Town or native quarter, on the W. beyond the canal, contains about 2800 houses or huts, of brick or earth, and a few pagodas. Its streets are broad and shaded by palm-trees, but so small with Hindu towns, it is dirty. A large house, two churches, a light-house, a public library, college for European children, several other public schools, a botanic garden, and a government park, are the chief objects and institutions. The fortifications, formerly strong, were destroyed during the war with the British, and by the treaty of Paris, they are not to be rebuilt nor is Pondicherry to be garrisoned by a native French force. The authority of the governor extends over all the French possessions in Asia. The territory around the town, 5 m. in length, N. to S., by 4 m. in breadth, is partly watered by the Ganges river but is not very fertile: some rice, indigo, tobacco, betel nut and coco-nuts are raised, wheat, with gunpowder, or fine cotton cloth dyed blue, India handkerchiefs, and cotton yarn, form the chief exports: the total value of which in 1843 amounted to $117,611. The imports in the same year amounted to $124,809 in value. The trade is declining, there being no harbour, but only a roadstead on which the craft lies almost as strongly as at Madras. The settlement was purchased by the French from the Buzapoor rajah in 1677 and taken by the British in 1761, 1765, 1768 and 1803. Pop. of territory (1849), 31,184 towns, about 40,000.—(Boissier Gazette 1841. Rep. on Central Ind. of Madras Presid., Haussmann's Voyage en Chine &c.)

PONTERRADA, a town Spain prov. and 57 m. W. Leon, divided by the rivers Sil and Boma. On the opposite bank of the former is a large suburb, connected with the town by a bridge of one arch. On bank Boma is another suburb also communicating with the town by means of a bridge. The streets are regular, clean, but rather narrow: two of the squares are provided with fagget arcades. It has a handsome but uncommensurate townhouse, two elementary schools, a general hospital and a founding hospital maintaining 200 children, a theatre, a Franciscan monastery, four churches, and a chapel two tanneries and four potteries. Pop. 4221.

PONG or BOKA, a prov. Borneo, dominions lat. 26° to 37° N. lon. 90° to 99° E. bounded, N. by Tibet, E. the Chinese province of Yunnan and W. Upper Assam: chief town, Moankhan.

PONGA, or PONGU, a river W. Africa, Senegambia enters the Atlantic by several mouths near lat. 10° S., lon. 14° W. The mud bar entrance is practicable at high water for vessels drawing 12 or 14 ft.

PONIKLA, a vil Bohemia, curie and 27 m. N.E. Hofschow, 1 bank Isar with a church and some manufactures of linen. Near it iron is worked. Pop. 1599.

PONORGU, a town Java, prov. Madjora 92 m. S.E. Semarang, with an extensive school, in which a large number of youths are taught Mahomedanism and Buddhism.

PONS, several places, France, particularly—1. (Latin Pons), A. tn. dep. Charante-inférieure, 15 m. S.E. Sables, 1 bank Sèvre, here crossed by three bridges, on a hill crowned by the remains of an old castle, with a lofty tower now used as a prison. It has a secondary ecclesiastical school. Pop. 2720.—2. (St. or St. Pons de Thomé), (Latin, Ponsus Pons Thomensis), Dep. Hérault, 56 m. W. R. Montpellier, 1 bank Jaur, which propels a considerable number of mill-houses and church are built of variegated marble quarried in the neighbourhood. It has a court of first resort, a second ray ecclesiastical school, communal college, and agricultural society; manufactures of woollen cloth, lace, and leather and trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 3780.

PONSACCO, formerly PONS de SACCO, a town Tuscany 18 m. S.E. Pisa, 1 bank Cecina, here crossed by an ancient bridge. It is regularly built, and has two churches, and a trade in corn, silk, cattle, and dairy produce. P. 2566.

PONSOMBY, par. Eng. Cumberland; 2265 ac. P. 180.

PONT numerous towns, France, particularly—1. (de Montau), (Latin, Montani Pons) A. tn. dep. Meurthe, 16 m. N.W. Nancy on the Moselle here crossed by a bridge. It has a square, surrounded by arcades, one of the houses of which, called the House of the Seven Deadly Sins, has a remarkably curious facade, adorned with ancient sculptures also a fine Gothic parish church of the 13th century, hotel de ville, cavalry barracks, hospital, and the old Abbey of St.

Mary, now converted into a seminary, a secondary ecclesiastical school, and a communal college. Manufactures of embroidery, coarse woollens, earthenware, leather, refined sugar, beer, and vinegar, and a trade in corn, wine, brandy, and flax. Dep. 6874.—2. (Antenne), A. tn. dep. Eure, 1 bank Rille, which here begins to be navigable, 30 m. W. Evreux. It is walled, regularly and well built and once had a castle, in one of the towers of which, in the early part of the 14th century cannon were used for the first time in France. The only building deserving notice, is the old church of Notre Dame des Prés now used as a tannery. The staple manufacture is leather, the number of tanneries being 40. The other manufactures are glass, hosiery and the hardware used in saddlery. The trade is in leather, corn, sugar, flax, thread, &c. Pop. 6369.—3. (Orval) A. tn. dep. Finistère, 18 m. W. S.W. Quimper, on a crumbling cliff about 300 ft. above, and washed by the sea, poorly built, with steep, ill-paved, and dirty streets. Pop. 1416.—4. (de Basseville), A. tn. dep. Isère, on the Guitard, here spanned by a bold bridge of a single arch, the middle of which forms the boundary between France and Savoy, 24 m. N. Grenoble. The most important part of the town is on the Savoy side. It has manufactures of linen, and hemp, twine, and a trade in corn and hemp. Pop. 1949.—5. (de Yver), A. tn. dep. Ain, 20 m. N.W. Bourg-en-Bresse, 1 bank Roysme. It has manufactures of cotton stuffs, earthenware, and leather, and a trade in grain, flour, wine, hemp, thread, poultry, horses, and cattle. Pop. 2808.—6. (de Châtenay), A. tn. dep. Puy-de-Dôme, 6 m. E. V.E. Clermont Ferrand, 1 bank Allier here crossed by a fine beautiful bridge, 722 ft. long. In the beginning of the 13th century it was one of the strongest places in Limagne, but the most conspicuous object now is a château, situated on a height above the river. The port of the town is used by the whole department, and has a considerable trade in wine, hemp, animal charcoal, coal, apples, wool, millstones, cloths, &c. Pop. 3621.—7. (de Mâ) A small town and export dep. Finistère, 12 m. S.W. Quimper at the extremity of a creek, which forms a well-frequented harbour. It has the remains of a castle, one of the towers of which is now used as the townhouse. Manufactures of linen and a trade in grain, potatoes, house wine, &c. Pop. 2841.—8. (de Bâle), A. tn. dep. Calvados, at the junction of the Iouges and Calonne, 30 m. E. N.E. Caen. It has a good cornmarket and manufactures of beer and a trade in sugar, cheese, butter, heavy cattle, wood, &c. William the Conqueror assembled here the states which resolved on the invasion of England. Pop. 1911.—9. (St. Mamet) A. tn. dep. Oise, 7 m. N. Soissons on the Oise here crossed by a fine bridge. It has three good squares, in one of which the church stands, manufactures of cloths and leather, several works for melting tallow, and a trade in corn, wine, and cattle. Pop. 2293.—10. (St. Eloi) (Latin, Ponsus) A. tn. dep. Gard, 1 bank Rhodan 32 m. N.E. Nîmes. It is in general ill built, has narrow, dirty streets, and a cathedral built by Louis XIII. to surmount the Protestants. The most remarkable object is the bridge over the Rhodan, and to be the largest stone bridge in the world. It was founded in 1265, and was 45 years in building. It consists of 33 arches, irregular in shape, the largest having an opening of 108 ft. and is 17 ft. wide and 3717 ft. long. It has a good harbour, and the trade in wine, oil, fruit, and silk is considerable. Pop. 6164.—11. (Pont-sur-Yonne), A. tn. dep. Yonne, 7 m. N.W. Beaune on the Yonne, here crossed by a handsome bridge. It has manufactures of coarse cloth, leather, and a kind of silks, well known by the name of Burgundy silks. Pop. 1810.

PONT or PONT, a town Italy, Piedmont, div. Turin prov. and 16 m. W. S.W. Ivrea. It has a court of justice, two towers, and a castellated gate the only remains of its ancient fortifications, two very ancient parish churches, a walled mall, and quarries of white marble. Pop. 4128.

PONT A CHATELAIN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 22 m. E. Mons, with manufactures of nails, a distillery, three breweries, two tanneries, several mills and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1748.

PONT DE-ARRENTA, a vil. and com. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and N. E. Tarragona, with a church, and outposts; manufactures of woollen cloth, cotton twist, and worsted; a distillery and several oil and fruit mills. Pop. 1400.

PONT DE-CAMARÈS, a town France. See CAMARÈS.

PONTA DO CASO, a sandy promontory, Brazil, which projects into the Bay of Mitharoki, about 4 m. N W Rio-de-Janeiro. An imperial palace, admired for the simplicity of its architecture, has been built upon it and many citizens of the capital have fine villas here.

PONTA VERDE, or PONTA DE JARAGUA, a promontory Brazil, prov. Alagoas, having the port of Pajussara on its N and that of Jaragua on its S side. The sea breaks upon it with great fury but about a mile outside of it the depth is 11 fathoms.

PONTACQ a vil France, dep. Basses-Pyrénées, 15 m. S E. Pau with manufactures of woollen goods, vinegar and leather, and a trade in leather, wool, and salt provisions.

PONTAFEL, a vil Austria, Illyria, circo's Villach in a narrow pass on the Fella, here crossed by a bridge, which by a tower built upon it marks the boundary between Italy and Illyria, and communicates with the village of Pontebba It has a blast-furnace Pop 1427

PONTAIPRET 8 to 11 A.M. See CAMBODIA.

PONTARLIER (Lain, Foss Arlesian) a tn. France, dep. Doubs, at the foot of the second chain of the Jura. 2715 ft. above sea-level 28 m. S.E. Besançon. It is regularly built with straight and well-cleaned stones lined by handsome houses, a cavalry barracks college, hospital, market-hall, townhouse, public library, and a fine promenade. A court of first resort, and a communal college, manufactures of turnery, scythes, and different implements, a blast and refining furnace, several forges, a copper smithy, a paper and saw mill, and a considerable trade in wormwood, cherry brandy whose imitations of Gnyne, settle and horses. Jeek work timber, marble, granite, &c. Pop. 4003

PONTASSIEVE, or PONT-A-SIVVE, a in Tuscany, 12 m E Florence, on the Sive, here crossed by a bridge with a court of justice, a church, an old castle, and a trade in corn, oil and silk Pop 1780

PONTCHARTRA, a vil France, dep Isere, 23 m. N W Grenoble Near this village, Lesdigueres, in 1691, at the head of 5700 French defeated an army of 14 000 men belonging to the duke of Savoy Near it is the chateau, where the celebrated Bevard was born 1 on 1780

PONTCHATRRAIN, a lake, U. States of America. Louisiana a few miles N New Orleans, communicating with Lake Manrepas on the W, with Lake Borgna on the E. and with New Orleans on the E through St. John a Bayou and canal length, 40 m. breadth, 25 m. depth, 9 ft to 18 ft. On the N it resolves several rivers, of which the Tangipahou and the Techefouche are the most considerable.

PONTCHY a vil. sud com. France dep Haute-Savoie div Faucigny, near Bonneville, in a fertile plain. It has trade in corn, cattle and dairy produce. Pop 1099

FOUR 18, numerous places, kind of Italian particularity
 1. A vill and com, prov and 6 m. NE Sondrio, a bank
 Adda, in a district covered with vineyards. Prov. 2788-2 (Lombardy), A vill and com, prov Como, 3 m. N L'Erie, on the Lambro, here crossed by a bridge with a church, the remains of an ancient castle, and a small town. Prov.
 2789-1 (St. Leger), A vill and com, prov and 80 m N E Bergamo, with four churches, a tannery and smelting furnace, and some trade in salted provisions. P 1690
 1. (San Pietro) A vill and com prov and 5 m. E of Bergamo, 1 bank Brembo, here crossed by a bridge. It is by built, has a church, five chapels, several dye-works, tanneries and a small iron-works. Prov. 2790-1 (St. Leger), A vill and com, prov Bergamo, 10 m. S of Bergamo, on the small trade. Prov. 1026-1 (St. Leger), A vill and com, prov

PONTE, several places, Portugal, particularly —, (1) (Lima), A to and par prov Minho, on the Lima, here crossed by a magnificent bridge. It is very well built, unobtainable chiefly employed in weaving linen and spinning flax. Pop. 1980 —, (2) (do Barco), A to and par, prov Xinbo, near Pontal do Lima, on the Lima, here crossed by an excellent stone bridge. Pop 800 —, (3) (do Sor), A vil and par, prov Alentejo, 34 m W S W Portalegre, on the Sor. Its houses are rambling built, and its strong fertility wide. Pop 1531.

PONTE-CONVO, a tiny Italy deleg and 20 m. S.E. From nona, in an isolated territory inclosed within the Napolitan prov. LAVORO I bank Garigliano. It is the see of a bishop and has a castle, a cathedral and six other churches. Pop.
8200

POVTE-DE-PINHEIRO a vil. Brazil prov., and 26 m. N E. Rio-de-Janeiro, 1 bank Macacu. It has an important trade in wood and the produce of the neighbourhood, which is shipped here for Rio-de-Janeiro.

PONTE DAMAZAO, a town 8 miles N. of St. Michael, one of the Azores. lat. 37° 40' N. lon. 25° 28' W. It is defended on the sea-side. W. by the castle of St. Brux, which on mount 90 pieces of cannon, and about 5 m. to the E. by the forts of San Pedro and Rocio de Cão. It is built with considerable regularity and the houses have a substantial and cheerful appearance, but the streets are wretchedly paved. The principal buildings are six churches, eight monasteries, and four convents, now unoccupied, and a neat English chapel. The anchorage in the rendeeira has both a bad bottom and is much exposed, and the harbor is so shallow, that vessels require to be loaded by means of small craft, but still the trade is considerable. It is chiefly in the hands of the British, of whom a considerable number are here resident including a consul. The chief exports are wheat, maize, and oranges and lemons, and the chief imports are sugar, coffee, &c. The population of the native inhabitants are very voluptuous, and morals are at a very low ebb. One of the main causes of this was the number of nunnies and monasteries, in which the inmates were not careful to preserve even the semblance of virtue. pop. 22,000.

POINTE-DELL'OLIO a tn. and com. Parma, duchy and 15 m S. Piacenza, r bank Naro here crossed by a handsome bridge of eight arches. It has a court of justice, a church, a primary school, a copper two iron and two paper mills, and a millstone quarry. Pop 3578

PONTE DO RIO VERDE, a vil and par Brazil prov Minas-Geral, 15 m N E. Campanha, on the Rio Verde, with a parish church, and a primary school

PONTEBBA a vil kingd of Italy gov Venice prov Friuli, r bank Pella with a church, and three mills.
lou 1400

PONTEDRA, or PONTADERA, a tu Tuscony 14 m. E Pisa, 1 bank Etr., here crossed by a marble bridge. It is well and regularly built has two churches and an hospital, manufactures of cotton and mixed goods, cordage, shuttles, dyeworks, tanneries, numerous humelins and a trade in corn, hemp flax and wine. Pop 5447

PONTEFRACI, or Pontreaf, a parliamentary and municipal borough, returning two members for England, on 24 and 24 M. S.W. York, on a height a little below the confluence of the Aire and Calder, and on the Wakesfield, Pontreaf and Goole railway. It consists of a spacious streets, and houses mostly well built of brick, and has a few remains of a celebrated old castle, which stood on the site of the present town. It is a town of history, as the scene of the murder of Richard III., and several other notorious two pathic churches one of them very ancient, and forming a very conspicuous object, both from its tower and its elevated site. Independent, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodist, Friends and B. Catholic chapels, a handsome townhall, courthouse, free, grammar British national, and other schools a mechanics institute, subscription library, dispensary, and a public hall. The principal manufactures include hals, iron and brass castings, earthenware, bricks and tiles, and in the vicinity are numerous flour-mills, productive coal-mines, and extensive garbance and nurseries, partly employed in growing liquorice, which is largely manufactured on the spot. The trade is chiefly in liquorice root, for which there are several extensive establishments and born of which large quantities are sold in the adjacent market. The borough is governed by a mayor, aldermen, and twelve councillors, and sends two members to Parliament. Pop. 116,163.

PONTELAND par Eng. Northumb., 10 073ac. P 1137
PONTelandOLFO a vil Naples prov Salerno, 20 m S Campobasso. It is walled has four churches, one of which is college-age and an hospital. Pgs. 4258.

PONTENURE a tn. and com Parma, dusky and 6 m. S.E. Piacenza, near the Vure, here crossed by a modern bridge of five arches. It is a very ancient place, and has a court of justice and a primary school. Pop. 2750.

PONTESBURY, par Eng Salop 10 667 ac P 8863
PONTSTURA, a tn. Italy, Piedmont, day and 25 m N W Alexandria, r bank l c; with a court of justice, hand some parish church two oratories and a school. Pop 184

PONTVEDEA, a maritime prov Spain, Galicia, bounded N E by prov. Lugo, N O by Orense, E by Ferrol, and W by the Atlantic, area, 3382 sq. m. This province is not only the most populous in Galicia, but it is also superior both in soil and climate. Its principal rivers are the Arnoya, Ulla, Lavea, and Octavay. The mine forms its N boundary with Portugal. It is not rich in minerals, the only mines in operation being two of tin. The productions of the soil consist chiefly of maize, rye, wheat, and millet, besides delicious fruits, a great quantity of wine, cherries, honey, potatoes, leguminous plants, flax and horehound in great numbers; horses, mules, sheep, and goats, are also reared and the swine, which are fed on maize, are much esteemed for their delicacy. The coasts abound with fish, especially sardines, which form a source of great riches. Besides flour-mills, there are manufactures of leather, earthenware, coarse woollen hats, linen, paper, tiles, and soap and many of the inhabitants are sailors and masons, the latter being employed in Portugal and Castile as well as Galicia. Pop. 420,000.

PONTVEDEA (Latin, Pons Vedea) a tn. Spain, Galicia, cap. above prov. 240 m. W N W Madrid on a peninsula formed by the confluence of the Lavea, Ulla and Ferrol, at a short distance from their entrance into the Atlantic, through the Bay of Pontevedra lat. 42° 30' N lon 9° 34' W. It is surrounded with a high old wall 2600 yards in circuit, and is entered by four large gates. On the N a handsome bridge of 13 arches spans the Lavea, and beside it are two wharfs and the prison. The houses are built of granite spacious, and generally two stories high and the streets are broad, paved, and clean. Some of the squares have colonnades and are used as market places. It has a barracks, a Franciscan convent, where the provincial courts are held and which on account of its commanding position has been used as a school, a normal and other schools, an hospital, two churches, one of which St. Maria a Gothic structure, is a master piece of its kind. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, though a few are fishermen, and there are some tanneries and flour-mills. Iron, wine, kidney beans, and hides are exported. Pontevedra was sacked in 1809 by the constant transit of French troops, who visited it repeatedly (see Historia). The sculptor was born here. P. 4141.

PONTVEICO a tn. and com Italy Lombardy prov. and 21 m. from Brescia, near a bank (Oglio) at the confluence of the Siroma. It is an ancient place surrounded by walls, and once defended by a strong castle, which still exists in a dilapidated state, contains many good houses, and carries on an important trade chiefly in corn and wine, being an emporium for the traffic of Brescia and the valleys, which here finds an outlet by the navigable Oglio. Pop. 5693.

PONTFALN par Wales, Pembrokeshire 625 ac. P. 41.

PONTIAC, a vil. U. States, Michigan, on the Clinton 28 m. N W Detroit, with a courthouse, a jail a church, several mills, an iron foundry, and two printing offices. P. 1900.

PONTIANAK, a tn. W coast, Borneo, on both sides the Poedjak, cap. Dutch prov. and kingdom of its name, almost on the equator line, 109° 20' E. It has some trade in gold dust and birds' nests. The province extends along the W coast of the island, from the frontier of Sambas, lat 0° 30' N, to lat. 8° S, and includes the districts or states of Mempawah, Landak, Tayang, Bontang &c. on its coast are numerous islands. It is ruled by the Rintja. Pontianak and numerous smaller streams; and in its N part has a large lake, named Malayo or Malayu. It produces pepper, sugar, rice, rattans, sugar, oil, wax, birds' nests, diamonds, and gold, of which last there are several fine mines. Some cotton and silk stuffs are made by the Bagle, and opium, rice, salt, linen, and Chinese wares, are imported. The commerce is now limited to the delta of the river Poedjak. It is marshy and damp, and the temperature ranges from 84° to 89° F. The river runs partly in lake Malayo, and partly in a stream flowing from a mountain range near the centre of the island. It flows W. S. W. in a very crooked course, past the chief towns of the small states of Rajah, Belimbau, Sintang, Sekidoo, Bungoon, Miloway and Tayang, and falls into the sea along with the Sintang and Sintang, by nine mouths; total direct course, about 840 m.

PONTICELLI, a vil. and com. Naples, prov. and 4 m. N Naples inhabitants cultivate kitchen-gardens. P. 5081.

PONTIFICAL STAIRS. See PAPAL STAIRS.

PONTINE MARSHES [Italian, Paludi Pontine, Latin Paludibus Pontinæ, French, Marais-Pontins] an extensive tract, Italy, forming the S.W. part of the leg. Pontine, stretching N.W. to S.E. from the village of Ponte to Terracina for 34 m. with a mean breadth of about 7 m.; area, about 80 sq. m. They existed during the time of the Romans, who, by the construction of the Appian way which traverses them, and cutting numerous canals, had laid a considerable portion of them dry; but the general neglect of the work during the latter years of the empire, and the subsequent confusion, allowed them to return almost to their original condition. Several of the popes, and particularly Pius VI. from 1777 to 1781, made many efforts to drain them, and partially succeeded, but large tracts still remain so unhealthy that they are almost uninhabited. When the draining is so completed as to admit the operations of agriculture, very heavy crops of maize and the ordinary cereals are raised.

PONTINOLO (anc. Pons Auresco) a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy prov. and 8 m. S E Bergamo on the Adda; with two churches, two old towers raised during the dominion of the middle ages a salt mill, tile-work, and brickwork. P. 1867.

PONTINGHIGHT or CHAMPS par Ang. Essex 1140 ac. Pop. 454.

PONTTIA, or PONTIDA a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy prov. Bergamo 1 m. N Caymo with a noble Gothic church de-vechia, and lineoline. It makes a considerable figure in the computations of the middle ages, and still shows the remains of two old castles. Pop. 1896.

PONTIVY a tn. France, dep. Morbihan, 1 bank and canal of Havre, 81 m. N W Vannes. It was once fortified and part of the ancient walls and gates still exist. Great additions were begun to be made to it by Bonaparte, who changed its name to Napoleonville. These works remain unfinished, and give the town a desolate appearance. It has a court of first resort, a college and numerous tanneries, and carries on a considerable trade in corn, linen, thread, leather, butter, horses, and cattle. Pop. 4565.

PONTLEVY, a tn. France, dep. Lot-et-Garonne 13 m. S S W Moles. In Benedictine college early acquired celebrity and still exists, being principally attended by foreigners, the greater number of whom are Spaniards. Pop. 1170.

PONTLEUE, a vil. France, dep. Sarthe, 2 m. S Mans, on the Sarthe, crossed by a handsome bridge. It has a fine promenade, manufactures of flannel, and some excellent bleach-fields. Pop. 1976.

PONTOGLIO or PONTE ALL OGIO a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy prov. Brescia, and 4 m. N W Chiari; a bank Oglio, with two churches and two seminaries. It is surrounded by vineyards and mulberry plantations. Pop. 1468.

PONTOISE (Latin, Abas Pons), a tn. France, dep. Seine-et-Oise, at the confluence of the Yonne with the Oise, here crossed by a handsome bridge, 19 m. N Yverdon. The houses are tolerably well built but most of the streets are narrow and steep. Its chief edifices are the church of St. Meelon, the public library, and a magnificent hospital. It has a court of first resort, and a college, manufactures of chemical products, and a trade in corn, cattle and flour. Pop. 4508.

PONTON, two pars. Eng. Lincoln — 1, (Gravel), 2980 ac. Pop. 689 — 2 (Lime), 1490 ac. Pop. 189.

PONTREUIL, a tn. Flanders, comp. Pina, at the foot of the Armentières, at the confluence of the Verde with the Magre, here crossed by two bridges, 81 m. N W N Florence. It is walled, has six gates and a castle, is the see of a bishop, has a civil and criminal court, several public offices, a large and handsome cathedral, five other churches, four monasteries, an Episcopal seminary, and several other schools, a courthouse, townhouse, episcopal palace, and three hospitals, manufactures of linen, cotton, hempen, and wax cloth, hats and leather, paper and powder mills, soap-boiling, dyeworks, the works, and a trade in wool, silk, cattle, corn, and oil. Pop. 4088.

PONT-LE-CAT (Lanc) (Latin, Pons Catensis), a tn. France, dep. Maine-et-Loire, 3 m. S E Angers, r. bank Loire, here divided into a number of channels, crossed by four bridges, which have an aggregate length of 2380 yards. The town consists of narrowways lined with houses in the direction of these bridges. Pop. 2626.

PONTPOOL, a market in England, co. and 15½ m. S.W. Monmouth, on a branch of the S. Wales railway. It is irregularly built, has an Episcopal chapel, places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, Friends, and Catholics. The art of imitating Japan varnish, from which the articles varnished were called Japan ware, was discovered here. This branch of trade, with the manufacture of Pottery-pool ware, or articles of polished iron, is still carried on, and a large portion of the population is employed in iron-works and forges, and iron-mills for making tin-plates. There is a considerable trade here in iron and steel. Pop. 3709.

PONZA, a group of islands Tyrrhenian Sea, belonging to Naples off coast prov. Lavoro, about 40 m. S.W. Gaeta. The most important are Ponza, Palmarola, and S. Elena. The two last are uninhabited, and covered with rocks and brushwood. Ponza, the largest, is about 4 m. long, N. to S., and rather less than 1 m. broad. It produces wine and figs, and has a productive fishery, extensive salt-works and a harbour capable of holding 50 large vessels, defended by a fort and a battery. The Romans used this island as a place of banishment, and Domitilla, one of the first Christian martyrs, suffered here by order of Domitian. The British took possession of Ponza in 1815, and next year restored it to Naples. Pop. 800.

PONZAFLORES, a tn. and par Portugal prov. Beira-Baixa, near Thomar. Pop. 1238.

PONZON, a tn. Italy. 1 liedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. and 9 m. S. by E. Acqui with a court of justice, a church, and a school. Pop. 5177.

POKIL, par Wales, Montgomery, 6801 sq. Pop. 4991.

POOL (Bourne), par Eng. Devon. Pop. 466.

POOL, or WALSH POOL, par Wales, Montgomery, 6801 sq. Pop. 4991.

POOLAJEFF, a tn. Balochistan, prov. Cutch Gundava, lat. 23° 3' N. lon. 68° 5' E.

POOLE, a seaport, bor. and market tn. England, co. Dorset, on a peninsula, in the N. part of Poole harbour and on the Southampton and Dorchester railway, 20 m. E. Dorchester. It is a very ancient place, supposed to have been frequented as a port by the Romans, had fortifications which were demolished in the reign of Charles II. and consists of an older and a more modern portion, the former of mean appearance, and the latter with several large and handsome houses. Its chief buildings are an elegant modern parish church, a chapel of ease in the Grecian style, Independent, Baptist, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodist, Friends, Unitarian, Swedenborgian and E. Catholic chapels, a townhall, guildhall, custom-house, British, national, and other schools, a workhouse, jail, and several almshouses. The manufactures consist chiefly of cordage and sail cloth. There are also several large building-yards, a valuable place and harbour, and a large, safe, and commodious harbour provided with extensive warehouses, and excellent quays nearly 1 m. long. The trade, both coasting and foreign is of considerable extent. In 1851, the coasters which entered were 687, of 46,998 tons and cleared 1773 of 52,898 tons, in the colonial and foreign trade, the vessels entered were 104, of 10,930 tons, and cleared, 102 of 11,947 tons. One of the chief local exports is clay for the Staffordshire and other potteries. Poole is governed by a mayor, five aldermen, and 18 councillors, and sends two members to Parliament. Many burrows and other early and quaint exist in the neighbourhood. Pop. 9255.

POOLE KERRY, par Eng. Wilt; 1110 sq. Pop. 192.

POOLE (St James), par Eng. Dorset 700 sq. P. 6718.

POOLEWICK, a vil. Scotland, co. Ross and Cromarty, par. Gairloch, at the mouth of the Ewe, by which Loch Maree discharges itself into Loch Ewe, 5 m. N. N. E. Gairloch. It has a neat Established, and a Free church, and several schools.

POOLKEE, a ruined city, Afghanistan prov. Peshawar, 7 li. S. E. of Kandahar, lat. 31° 35' N. lon. 61° 54' E. The ruins cover an extent of at least 16 sq. m., and consist chiefly of ramparts, towers, and gardens.

POOLYARH BAY, Isle of Man. See BALVARR.

POONAH, a city and dist. Hindoostan, promont. Bombay. The city is a plain about 2000 ft. above the sea, 80 m. S. E. S. E. Bombay lat. 18° 50' N. lon. 74° 3' E., stands at the junction of two affluents of the Beemah river, and has rather an European appearance. It is pretty well built, the main street is wide, and lined with buildings ornamented with paintings and mythological carvings, it has numerous pag-das, a Hindoo college, a British church, public library, civil hospital, arsenal, and barracks for two regiments of infantry, and one of cavalry. The European cantonments are on the E. separated from the city by a line of barracks and on the S. W. is the ramed palace of the Peshwa, or head of the Marhatta confederacy, whose capital was Poonah. This station is famed for salubrity, and is resorted to by most of the European officers of Bombay during the rainy season. It is an important military post, and has some manufactures of silks and paper, and well-supplied markets. Around it are numerous ruined hill forts on isolated peaks; and good roads connect it with Bombay, Ahmednuggur, Satarah, &c. Pop. has been variously estimated it may be 90,000, exclusive of troops.—The district lat. 16° 30' to 19° N., lon. 78° 30' to 79° E., and bounded N. by the dist. Ahmednuggur, W. by the Ghauts, separating it from the Concan S. by Satarah, and E. by the Nizam's dominions. Area, 5298 sq. m. It is an elevated table-land, watered by the Beemah and its tributaries, and abounding in unmineral heights formerly covered with strong fortresses. The villages are mostly open, but sometimes surrounded by hedges of cactus. Inhabitants chiefly Marhattas. After Poonah the principal towns are Secoor, Pandgaon, and Solapur. Pop. 604,990.

POOPO, or POPO, a vil. Bolivia, dep. and 106 m. S. by E. La Paz, formerly a very considerable place. Its ruins are still wrought to some extent. Near it are many curious ancient tombs. Pop. about 1000.

POOBA, a tn. Balochistan 125 m. W. S. W. Kalat, amidst groves of palm-trees yielding fine dates, which form the principal wealth of the inhabitants.

POORALI Y, a river, Balochistan rising in prov. Thalawan flowing S. into Lox, and after a course of 100 m. falls into the Indian Ocean in Sommeas Bay lat. 26° 38' N., lon. 66° 50' E. It is for the most part shallow but when swelled by rains becomes a furious torrent.

POORBUNDH, a large and populous tn. Hindoostan prov. Gujerat, peninsula of that name, S. W. coast, 55 m. S. E. Dwaraka lat. 21° 35' N. lon. 69° 45' E. It has a large trade, being an emporium for Gujerat and Malwa, with Persia and Arabia. To Muzat the exports are cotton, wheat, oil and millet, the imports thence raiment, raiment, &c. To Bombay the exports are grain the imports sugar, iron, steel, tin, lead, cloths, chinaware, broad cloths, pepper, spices, rice, &c. in small quantities. The modern port of Poorbunder was established on the site of the ancient city of Sudamayura.

POOREE, a tn. Hindoostan. See JODGERSNAUTH.

POORETOLK. See POUWERSOLK.

POORTON (Oxton), par Eng. Dorset, 664 sq. P. 109.

POORTVLEET, a vil. Holland, prov. Zealand, 4 m. W. N. W. Tholen, with a church and school. Pop. (agricultural) 1118.

POOSHUR, a tn. Hindoostan, presid. Bengal prov. and 4 m. W. Ajmer on the shore of a romantic lake, and a celebrated place of Hindoo pilgrimage.

POOTO or POTO an isl. China Sea. See POTO.

POPA (Futo) an isl. Indian Archipelago, Gilolo Passang lat. (S. E. point) 1° 12' S. lon. 129° 58' E. 15 m. or 18 m. long E. to W. and 9 m. broad. A semicircular hill like a bee-hive, and another oblong hill both near the N. W. end of the island, render it very conspicuous.

POPAYAN, a city New Granada, cap. dep. Cauca, in a fertile plain near the river Cauca, and near the volcanoes Parnaso and Sotaro 228 m. S. W. Bogota. It is regularly built, has fine streets, and although greatly diminished from its former magnificence, is still one of the principal cities of New Granada. It is the seat of a bishopric, has a university, a college, an hospital and other public institutions; and formerly had an extensive trade in the precious metals, now chiefly confined to agricultural produce. It was founded in 1536, and almost completely destroyed by an earthquake in 1824. Pop. about 8000, though at one time above 20,000.

POPE, or POPO, an isl. one of the Moluccas, lat. 4° 15' S. lon. 129° 45' E.; about 50 m. in circumference. It affords supplies of coco-nuts salt and dried fish.

POPERINGUE, a tn. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, on the Vliebeque, 34 m. S. W. Bruges. It is well and tolerably well built, has a handsome townhouse, three churches, and a chapel, an hospital, orphan asylum, college, school of designs, several primary schools, and a medical society. Many features of woollen stuffs, thread, leather, ropes, soap, and earthenware, oil mills, dye-works, blacksmiths, and salt-refineries, and a trade in the excellent hops of the district, and in corn and cattle. Pop. 10,489.

POPHAM, par Eng. Hants; 1857 sq. Pop. 104.

POPHAM, a par England, co. Middlesex, on the Thames, which bounds it on the E., W., and S., 3 m. S.E.E. London. It takes its name from the poplar-forest with which it is formerly abundant, and is inhabited chiefly by persons connected with shipping. It has a handsome church in the Grecian style, with a lofty steeple, a chapel of ease, with a handsome turret, Baptist, Independent, Wesleyan, and R. Catholic chapels, a sailors' home, national and other schools, a townhall, forming part of the union workhouse, an East India hospital, an institution for the promotion of literature and science, extensive works for the manufacture of plate-glass, machinery, &c., and several iron and brass foundries. The West India docks form part of the parish area, 1490 ac. Pop. 39,384.

POPILAR MARSHES, England. See DOGS (Isles of).

POPO a dist. W. Africa, included in the territory of Daromey, with two towns on the slave coast, Great and Little Pope. The former lying close to the sea, lat. 6° 15' 36" N. lon. 1° 38' 10" E. (a.), consists of mud huts irregularly buddled together, with a population of about 5000, who manufacture earthenware and cotton goods, but are principally engaged in the slave-trade.

POPOCATZETL, an active volcano, Mexico, dep. and 80 m. S.W. La Puebla. It is in the form of a cone composed chiefly of porphyritic basalt and rising upwards of 17,000 ft. above sea-level. The lower part is covered with forests but at the height of 12,700 ft. all vegetation ceases, and beyond this its sides are covered with pumice and ashes, for the most part concealed by snow. The crater is about 3 m. in circumference and 1000 ft. deep. Sulphur of excellent quality is extracted from it.

POPOLI, a dist. and com. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Ultra II. dist. and 9 m. N.W. Sulmona, with three convents, and two churches. Pop. 3840.

POPPELBAU a vil Prussia, Silonia, gov. and 13 m. N.W. Oppeln, with manufactures of potash and two mills. P. 1512.

POPPELSDORF a vil. Prussia, gov. Cologne, close by Bonn, on the Mühlbach, at the foot of the Kreuzberg and Yennsburg. It has a porcelain factory and a fine museum, and botanic garden in connection with the castle of Clemensruhe. Pop. 814.

POPPELBAU, a tu. Bavaria, Lower Franconia, dist. and E.B.E. Münchens, on the Lauer here crossed by a bridge, with two churches and numerous mills. Pop. 1240.

POFFI a tu. Tuscany, r. bank Arno, 38 m. E.S.E. Florence, with a court of justice, a church, an old castle, a theatre, two monasteries, and two schools. Pop. 1797.

POPFLETON (Newark) par Eng. York, 1150 ac. P. 944.

POPRAD, a tu. Hungary, See DEUTSCHENHOFF.

PORA, (N. and S.) two large lago, about 55 m. off W. coast, Sumatra. N. Pora extends nearly N.W. and S.E., about 70 m., lat. 1° N. lon. 95° 58' E. It is generally low, but rises to a high land, covered with wood, higher in the middle than towards the extremities, with a sandy beach in many parts. S. Pora, which is separated from N. Pora by Sandflower Channel, is about 26 m. long, and nearly 18 m. broad at the N. end, decreasing gradually to the S. extremity in lat. 3° 35' S. lon. 95° 58' E. It is mostly covered with wood, and rather low elevated than N. Pora. At some points on this island may be obtained wood and water, a few hogs, yams, some poultry and coconuts.

POPRACE, a vil Hungary, Hither Thmes, co. Zips about 11 m. from Leutschau, with a Greek church. Pop. 1017.

FORCA a market in Hindostan, prov. Travancore, 125 m. N.W. Cape Comorin. The Dutch East India Company formerly had a factory here for procuring pepper.

FORCAH a vil and par Tuscany, dioc. of Livorno, near the Lago di Fiesole on an isolated hill above the Lecole. It contains a church, and an old castle. Pop. 3061.

FORLE, a river New Granada, rises in the Andes, flows N.W., and joins the bank Nechi, 50 m. S.E.E. Cauca, total course, about 190 m. Gold is washed from its sands.

FORRESTER, a vil and par England, co. Hants, 2 m. E.S.E. Fareham. It formerly stood close to the sea, and had a harbour which was one of the principal stations of the British navy, and was defended by a strong castle, situated on a neck of land projecting into the harbour. The castle still exists, though in a dilapidated state, and with its walls includes a quadrangular area of 5 acres, with a broad and deep moat, but the retirement of the sea, and the consequent removal of the navy to Portsmouth, has made Portsmouth almost deserted. The parish church, a venerable uniform structure, is within the outer area of the castle. Area of par., 3949 ac. Pop. 726.

FORLEHOW a par. Russia, gov. and 40 m. E. Pskov, with a church, a school and the remains of an old castle, surrounded by a wall flanked with four towers, and a trade in corn and flax. Pop. (1849), 8964.

FORCO, a tu. Bolivia, dep. and 24 m. N.E. Potosi, cap. prov. and near the mountain or cerro of same name, is lat. 19° 50' S. and 16,000 ft. high. It is now an insignificant place, but was long famous for the richness of the mines in its vicinity, from which the Incas are said to have derived the greater part of their treasures. Here too were the first mines worked by the Spaniards after their conquest of Peru.

FORCOS (ILHA DO), a group of islets, Brazil, off coast, Rio-de-Janeiro, in the Bay of Flamengo, 16 m. N.E. lat. 21° 30' S. It is separated from the mainland by a channel which allows vessels to pass, and at several points affords good shelter where they can lie to take in water and provisions.

FORCUNA a tu. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 20 m. W. Jaen. It has several squares, in one of which stand the parish church and the public granary and three at well on the streets, which are of moderate breadth, are well paved and clean, a townhouse and prisons, an hospital, several primary schools, various suppressed convents, and a number of hermit ages. Near it is a very ancient and extensive fort with walls, several towers and numerous oil mills. Pop. 5227.

FORDENONE a tu. kindg. of Italy gov. and 40 m. N.E. Venice, on a plain on the Noceola. It is surrounded with an old wall in a well built, stirring place, with two parish and six auxiliary churches, a theatre, hospital, and workhouse, manufactures of linen, copper and steel, paper, and glass, and a considerable trade in corn and wine. P. 4900.

FORETSCHIE, a tu. Russia, gov. and 38 m. N.W. Smolensk, on the Rappia, which here receives the Gosh, and becomes navigable. It has three churches, building-yards, and a considerable trade. Pop. 2500.

FORETA, or BASIL DELLA FORETA a tu. Papal States, leg. and 30 m. S.W. Bologna, with thermal baths, which are much frequented. Pop. about 2400.

FORINGLAND two par. Eng. Norfolk.—1 (Great or East)—2 (Little or West), 1740 ac. Pop. 605.

FORKHOF, a tu. Russia, gov. and 42 m. E. Pskov, on the Chelon with an old castle, a church, a district school, and some trade in corn and flax. Pop. 1800.

FORLEZZA a tu. and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. and 16 m. N. Como, on Lake Caruso. It has a handsome church and excellent manufactures of glass and mirrors. Pop. 978.

FORLOCK a market in and par England co. Somerset near the Bristol Channel in a romantic district, 35 m. W. N.W. Taunton. It is a struggling place, with a handsome church, the remains of an old castle, and some imports of coal and lime from Wales; area of par. 6019 ac. Pop. 863.

FORNASSIO a vil and com. France, dep. Alpes Maritimes prov. and about 12 m. N.W. N. N.W. Oseigne, on the top of a well-cultivated hill with a church. Pop. 1153.

FORNIC, a seaport in France, dep. Loire-Inférieure, near Palmarin on the Bay of Biscay, at the entrance of the Bay of Bourgneuf. It has a good harbour, at which a considerable trade is carried on, and is much frequented for sea-bathing. Pop. 1324.

FORUMSHIR, one of the largest of the Kurile Is., S. of Cape Lopatka, about lat. 50° 50' N. lon. 155° E. length N.E. to S.W. about 60 m. It is separated on the N.E. from the island of Semur, by a channel which does not exceed 1 m. in breadth, and on the S.W. has the small island of Shirinsky. It is tolerably level in the S.W., but very mountainous in the N. Amongst its animals are many stags, martens, and bears. The inhabitants, consisting of about 76 families, live chiefly by hunting and catching seals and fish.

FOROS (anc. Aphrodisia), an isl. Greece, S.W. entrance, Gulf of Egina, and only separated from the coast of Argolis in the Morca by a very narrow channel so shallow as to be fordable in calm weather. It is about 3 m. in circuit, is mountainous, and remarkable for its rocks of granite, and has many orange and lemon groves.—The towns, of same name, on the S. side of the island, is indifferently built. A sandbank connects Poros with the side of Ochara, where are a large monastery and the ruins of the temple of Neptune in which Demosthenes died.

POROSZLO, a market in Hungary, Hither Thale, co. and 17 m. N.E. Herva, a bank Thale; with a Protestant church, and a fertile district, liable to inundation, but producing great quantities of cane, and rearing many cattle. Pop. 3869.

PORQUEROLLER, an Isl. France Mediterranean, one of the Hyeres 16 m. S.E. K. Toulon. It is about 4 m. long by rather more than 1 m. broad.

PORRENTHILL or PORENTHILL a tn. and par. Switeland, can. Bern 26 m. W.W. Basel. It is well built and has a church, a Jesuits college, now converted into a large literary establishment with 10 professors, a townhouse, and hospital. On a height hard by is a castle with an old tower supposed to be of Roman origin. There are some manufactures of cloth and serge, also tanneries and breweries. Pop. 3522.

PORRERA, a tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 24 m. N.W. Tarragona; with a church, two primary schools, a courthouse and prison, manufactures of linen, oil and flour mills, and several distilleries. Pop. 1821.

PORREKAS, a tn. Spain, Isl. Majorca, 21 m. S.E. Palma with a townhouse, prison, two elementary schools a church; 30 flour-mills, and 18 brandy distilleries, fat swine, agricultural produce, and brandy are exported, and oil and other commodities imported. Pop. 4018.

PORRUODOS, or PO-RO-DO-LOVZANCO a river Brazil, rises in W. slope, Serra Chapada, in E. of prov. Mato-Grosso, lat. about 13° S., flows S.W. and joins a bank Paraguay in lat. 17° 30' S., largest tributary of the Guaba. Previous to this junction the mouth is much obstructed by cataracts, but below to its mouth including a length of 100 m., it is free from cataracts, and is navigated by country boats, which employ eight days in the ascent.

PORSEGRUND a seaport to Norway, 95 m. N.W. Christiansand, at the mouth of the Skoen, in a bay of the Skager Rack. It is regularly built, and has a considerable trade in furs. Pop. 1600.

PORT, par. Soc. Perth. Pop. 1419.

PORT, par. Incl. Louth. 1804 ac. 1 pop. 694.

PORT several places, France, particularly—1, (Lorient) [Lorient, Rhode] A tn. and seaport, dep. Morbihan 3 m. S.E. E. Lorient, on a tongue of land surrounded on all sides by the sea, except a narrow isthmus towards the E. which connects it with the mainland, near the entrance of the Lorient roads. It is strongly fortified, and defended by a citadel built upon a rock. It is poorly built, with narrow and winding streets. It has a handsome parish church, and a barrack. The harbour is large and has good depth of water but is difficult of access. The trade is in codfish and fresh fish. Pop. 3571.

—2 (Rio-Morcia) in dep. Lot-et-Garonne, 12 m. N.W. Agen, a bank Garonne, here crossed by a fine suspension-bridge. Pop. 1818.—3, (Port-Sainte) [Portus Abenae], A tn., dep. Haute-Saône, 7 m. N.W. Vesoul, 1 bank Saône, here crossed by a handsome bridge. It forms a small island, on which are the remains of an ancient strong castle, has manufactures of marble and earthenware; builds a good many barges, and carries on a considerable trade in cattle. P. 1581.

PORT APO-THANNA, or PORT KANTHANNAR, the cap. of Hays, head of a channel bay of the same name, W. coast, Isl. Hays, lat. 18° 58' 43" N., lon. 73° 31' W. (n). It has an attractive appearance from the sea, rising on a gradual elevation from the shore, but on entering its streets it is found composed of wooden buildings, in streets 65 ft. wide, with the pavement dilapidated or broken up, the drains neglected, and filth and stable-dung dispersed in every direction. The houses are in general of two stories, constructed slightly to avoid the wind and tear occasioned by earthquakes, which at different times have nearly demolished the city particularly in 1751 and 1770. Some few of the better habitations are of better stone and are tolerably handsome. The senate-house is a plain substantial building, and the palace of the emperor, the largest edifice in the city, is an ungaily structure. The only other public buildings are the St. Catharine church, the lyceum or public college, custom-house, mint, public offices, hospital, &c. The town has often suffered severely from fire, more especially in 1784, 1820, 1823, and 1850. The vicinity is marshy and the climate unhealthy in the centre of the bay and near its head, is the island of Gonave, about 30 m. long and 7 m. broad. Port-au-Prince has a considerable shipping trade. Pop. estimated at 30,000.

PORT BOWEN,—1, A small bay, British N. America, Prince Regent's Inlet, lat. 73° 14' N. lon. 85° 53' W., in which the Hecla and Perry commanded by Captains Perry and Hoppner remained from Nov. 27 1824, to July 20, 1825.—2 A natural harbour, N.E. coast, Australia lat. 32° 30' S., lon. 151° E. with rise of tide of about 18 ft.

PORT BRION a vil. U. States New York, on the Erie canal, 156 m. W. by N Albany, with three churches, an extensive flour-mill four saw mills and two tanneries. P. 1000.

PORT CANNON a vil. U. States, Pennsylvania at the junction of Millbrook, with the Schuylkill, at the head of canal navigation, 65 m. N.E. Harrisburg. It is rapidly increasing and carries on an extensive coal trade.

PORT-CHARTRES, a tn. W. India. See LAURENCE.

PORT-CHALMERS on the S.E. coast of New Munster or the Middle Island of New Zealand, settlement of Otago. It is situated midway between Dunedin and the Heads, or about 7 m. from either extremity of Otago Harbour, and being the shallowest of the shallowing of the water all ships are obliged to discharge their cargoes, promiscuously to be some a place of importance. A small but thriving community has been established at it. It is named in honour of the Rev. Dr. Chalmers the celebrated Scotch preacher philosopher and philanthropist.

PORT CUIENRA, Central America. See CUIENRA.

PORT CURTIS, Australia, N.E. coast lat. 23° 53' S. lon. 151° 40' E. nearly as large as Port Jackson, and produced from the sea by River and Curtis Islands.

PORT D'UCHE a seaport vil. S. Africa. See NATAL.

PORT DUNN a river Patagonia rises near lat. 49° S. lon. 75° W. flows N.E. and falls into a bay of the same name in the S. Atlantic, considerably S. of Cape Blanco total course, above 200 m.

PORT DOWER a vil. Lower Canada, at the mouth of the Lynn, 75 m. S.W. Toronto. It has a Presbyterian and a Methodist church, a grammar and other schools an extensive tannery, a foundry and a saw and flour mill. The harbour is the principal shipping port of the district. Pop. 600.

PORT ELIZABETH a seaport in, N. Africa, Cape colony W. shore, Algas Bay dist. and 18 m. S.E. Uitenhage of which it is the port. It has an arsenal, a fine Episcopalian church and places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents and Catholics a small courthouse, with public offices attached and a jail. The pier projects into the sea, and the port being free, is a place of great and increasing commercial activity, and more frequented than any other on the S. coast of the colony. In 1851 its exports amounted to £241,645. Pop. above 4000.

PORT ELLER a vil. and port, Scotland on Arryle Inl. May 9½ m. S.E. Bowness with a quay, a Free church, and an extensive distillery. Pop. 904.

PORT ESCREATOR, Australia See KANTHANNAR.

PORT ECHON, Russian America, Prusse William a Island lat. 60° 21' 12" N. lon. 146° 53' W., on the E. of Hinchlagbrook Island, at the entrance into the Sound. It has an establishment of the Imperial Russian Fur Company. The port, though somewhat difficult of approach, affords excellent anchorage.

PORT HERON par. Wales, Glamorgan 11½ m. P. 251.

PORT-GALLATY a cove, S. America, Strait of Magellan lat. 53° 41' 45" S., lon. 72° 01' W. It is the best natural harbour in the strait, having an even bottom, with water of moderate depth as still as it were a wet-dock.

PORT-GLASGOW, a tn. Scotland, on Renfrew, 1 bank Clyde, 16 m. W.N.W. Glasgow. It is built with considerable regularity consisting of well-formed streets, crossing each other nearly at right angles, and well-sheltered houses. It has a handsome parish church, a chapel of ease, Free and U. Presbyterian churches, a townhouse, including a court-hall, bridge-well, and prison, forming a fine range of buildings, with a Doric portico, and an elegant spiral 150 ft. high; a commodious engine-house, several schools, extensive manufactures of ropes and sail-cloth, chain cable works, a sugar-refinery, iron and anchor foundries, and building-yards at which many large sailing vessels and steamers are constructed. The harbour provided with commodious wharves, numerous warehouses and wet-docks, in which vessels drawing 35 ft. water are kept always afloat, affords great facilities for trade, which though at one time greatly diminished by the formation of the docks at Greenock and the despoiling of the Clyde, enabling large vessels to ascend to Glasgow, is still considerable, and has for some time been steadily increasing. It is carried on chiefly with the E. and W. Indies, N. America, and the Mediterranean. Port-Glenone unites with the Kilmacreeb burghs, in returning a member to Parliament. Pop. 6868.

PORT-GLASGOW, a market in Ireland, on and 15 m. N.N.W. Antrim on the Bann, here crossed by an elegant modern bridge. It has several well-built houses, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Wesleyan, and R. Catholic chapels, three public schools, manufactures of linen, and a trade in grain, slate, and timber. Pop. 990.

PORT-GLOUCESTER a fishing vil. Scotland, Banffshire, 24 m W.S.W. Buckie with a tolerable harbour and a considerable trade in importing coal and salt, and exporting grain.

PORT HURON, a town Upper Canada, on a creek N. shore, Lake Ontario 55 m. E. by N. Toronto. It is built chiefly on the sides of a hill, commanding fine views of the lake and the surrounding country has several handsome buildings, including Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist, and R. Catholic churches a school two female seminaries, and several breweries and distilleries. Pop. (1852), 2474.

PORT HOWE, a harbour Bahamas, E. coast, Salvador or Cat Island. It was the first land seen by Columbus, who landed here, 15th October 1492.

PORT HUVERA, a haven New S. Wales, between Cox. Glenister and Northumberland, where it is formed by the confluence of the river Hunter, at the town of Newcastle, of which it is the harbour. It is well sheltered and safe, and admits vessels of 800 tons.

PORT HURON a vil. U. States, Michigan, 59 m N.E. Detroit, at the confluence of the Black and St. Clair rivers with two mills, a tannery and a printing-office. A considerable business is done in lumber. Pop. 2502.

PORT-JACKSON New South Wales. See SYDNEY.

PORT LOUIS, the cap. of St. Martin's, N.W. coast lat. 30° 9' 45" N. lon. 57° 35" E., beautifully situated in a cove, formed by a series of basaltic hills, portions of which are woody, they vary in height from 1036 to 2639 ft. The streets garden, and an hospital. The town and harbour are protected by batteries. Pop. 35,000.

PORT MACQUARIE, New S. Wales. See MACQUARIE.

PORT MABON, a town Minorca. See MABON.

PORT MATAI, S. Africa. See MATAI.

PORT-OF-MORVENNA, a vil. and par. Scotland, co. and 37 m W.S.W. Perth, with several lakes, among which that of Monteth with its beautiful island of Inchmahome, and the remains of an ancient priory deserves particular notice. The village, a small but ancient place, was made a burgh of barony by James III. in 1446. It has a plain but neat church and a school. Extent of par. 9 m. by 6 m. Pop. 1419.

PORT-OF-SPAIN, a town W. Indies, cap. n. Trinity, in the Gulf of Paria, near the mouth of the Orinoco. It has a large and spacious harbour, at which a considerable trade is carried on. Pop. about 7000.

PORT PATRICK, a seaport to and par. Scotland co. Wigton lat. 54° 50' 15" N. lon. 55° 0' 45" W. (a.), in a bay so closely surrounded with high cliffs, that the town, which lies in its shores, has from some points of view the appearance of standing in a large quarry. It has a parish and a Free church, several schools, and a considerable cod-factory. It was formerly a packet station for conveying the government mails to Ireland, by Donaghadee, about 80 m. distant. The new harbour of Port-Patrick, a work of immense labour and difficulty cost about £200,000, and is after all neither easy of access nor secure. On May 23 1853, a line of electric telegraph was laid across the channel, from Port-Patrick to Donaghadee. Area of par. £200 as par. 1853.

PORT PHILIP Australia. See MELBOURNE.

PORT PLATA, in Cape Verde Isles. See PLATA (PORT).

PORT RAPTET, in Australia. See RAPTET BAY.

PORT REPTINGAQUE, cap. HAITI. See PORT-OF-PRINCE ROYAL, Nova Scotia.

PORT ROYAL, Nova Scotia. See ANAPOLIS.

PORT-ROYAL, a fortified town, Jamaica, B.R. coast lat. 17° 56' N. lon. 76° 51' W. on the extremity of a tongue of land, forming the S. side of the harbour of Kingston (which see). Its harbour is the station for the British ships of war and it contains the naval arsenal, hospital, &c. The bulk of its inhabitants are people of colour. It has been repeatedly damaged by earthquakes.

PORT SANTA-BARBARA, a natural harbour, W. coast, Patagonia, N. end Campaña Island lat. 48° 0' S. lon. 76° 30' W. Its shores are rocky with some patches of sandy beach, but everywhere covered with trees, or an impenetrable jungle, composed of dwarfish trees and shrubs. The land in most places rises abruptly from the shore to mountains of basaltic sum. of which are above 2000 ft. high, and are bare to their summit.

PORT-SEAVOY a vil. Scotland on Firth of Forth, co. and 7 m. W.N.W. Haddington; with salt works, oil sals factories, and a fishery.

PORT SEVING a vil. Canada West. co. Middlesex, at the mouth of Kettle Creek, N. shore, Lake Erie, 130 m. W.S.W. Toronto. It has two churches; a tannery two distilleries, two flour-mills, and a harbour at which farm produce is shipped. Pop. about 600.

PORT SEVEN, a harbour, New S. Wales lat. 35° 45' S. about 13 m. in length, and 2 m. to 4 m. broad.

PORT SEWANEY a small seaport to, and an landing place, Ireland, on Londonderry 4 m. N.N.W. Coleraine. It has an Established church a Presbyterian meeting-house, and a Wesleyan chapel, an infant and a national school, and a dispensary. Pop. 684.

PORT VENEZIA [Latin, Portus Venetie] a fortified seaport in France, dep. Pyrénées-Orientales, on the Mediterranean, 17 m. S.E. Perpignan. It has a fine square, with an obelisk about 100 ft. high, in honour of Louis XVI., and an excellent harbour, with splendid quays and wharves. The trade is chiefly in corn, wine, and brandy. Pop. 1803.

PORT LOUIS, MAURITIUS.—From a French Ensl.

are rather narrow; they are laid out at right angles, have footpaths with basaltic curbstones, are macadamised, and some of them adorned with magnificent avenues. A mountain stream crosses the town, the borders of which also are ornamented with walking places. An open square, like a race-course, lies behind Port Louis, and is called the Champ de Mars; it is bordered by several large villas, neatly and elegantly built. There is a barracks, barracks, public library, botanical terian meeting-house, and a Wesleyan chapel, an infant and a national school, and a dispensary. Pop. 684.

PORT VENEZIA [Latin, Portus Venetie] a fortified seaport in France, dep. Pyrénées-Orientales, on the Mediterranean, 17 m. S.E. Perpignan. It has a fine square, with an obelisk about 100 ft. high, in honour of Louis XVI., and an excellent harbour, with splendid quays and wharves. The trade is chiefly in corn, wine, and brandy. Pop. 1803.

PORT WILLIAM, a thriving vil. and seaport, Scotland, on and 9 m. S.W. Wagon, E. shore, Loch Bay with a safe and commodious harbour, at which much agricultural produce is shipped.

PORT-OMERINO, a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy prov. Lodi, and so near to Crema as to be almost its suburb with a church. Pop. 1124.

PORTACOMARO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. N.E. Asti; partly surrounded by walls, and entered by a lofty arched gate. It has a court of justice, a church, and a school. Pop. 1464.

PORTADOWN a market in Ireland, on and 9 m. N.E. Armagh a station on the Ulster railway on the Ham, here crossed by a handsome bridge. Its principal buildings are the railway station an Episcopal church, a E. Catholic chapel, and places of worship for Presbyterian Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. It has also a national and other schools, and a benevolent society large corn and flour mills, extensive manufactures of linen and cambric, a manufactory of steam-engines, and other heavy machinery a soap and candle works and a brick trade in corn. Pop. 8091.

PORTADOWN, a seaport and market in Ireland, on Down, near the entrance of Lough Strangford, 7 m. N.E. Downpatrick. It has a neat church, a large E. Catholic chapel and places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist, and Presbyterian; a market-house, a dispensary, and two public schools and a considerable trade in agricultural produce, and in coal and lumber. The female population is extensively employed in the embroidering of muslin for Glasgow houses. Pop. 2074.

PORTALBERA, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont div. Alessandria, prov. Voghera, near the Po. It has a large square of regular form, a handsome church, and an extensive palace. Pop. 1516.

PORTALEGRE s. in Portugal, prov. Alentejo, on a lofty hill 110 m. N.E. Évora with steep, narrow, and winding streets, a cathedral, manufactures of woollens and druggs, and a considerable trade in timber chiefly out from extensive woods of chestnut in the neighbourhood. Pop. 5660.

PORTARLINGTON, a par. bor. and market in Ireland, King's and Queen's cos. 40 m. S.W. W. Dublin a station on the Dublin and Drogheda railway on the Barrow here crossed by a stone bridge. It has a market-house, two handsome Established churches (the English and French) an elegant R. Catholic chapel and a Methodist meeting-house, several schools; a medical dispensary, and limited manufactures of soap, candles, and shoes. Portarlington returns a member to Parliament. It was to a great extent formed by the settlement of two colonies of French and English Protestants. The French language was continued in the celebration of Divine service in one of the churches until 1817. Pop. 2728.—(Local Correspondent.)

PORTBURY par. Eng. Somerset 8849 ac. Pop. 648.

PORTO CERO, Isl., one of the Hydrunt (Joni) cos. Pop. 146.

PORTO, a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Alentejo, 26 m. S.E. Évora, near bank Odeje, an affluent of the Guadiana. It has an old castle, once occupied by the dukes of Braganza two convents, an hospital, and a Latin school. Pop. 1770.

PORTENDIC, a French trading port, W. coast Africa, lat. 18° 19' N. lon. 16° 2' W. (n.), 140 m. N. Fort Louis. The entrance of the harbour is obstructed by two great sandbanks. It was strictly blockaded in 1834 by the French, when the trade was ruined.

PORTKERRY, par. Wales, Glam. 1121 ac. P. 142.

PORTICI s. in Naples, prov. and 5 m. S.E. Naples, on the Gulf of Naples. It is beautifully situated, has a delightful climate, and from its proximity to the capital, is both occupied by splendid mansions, and surrounded by fine country seats. It has a royal palace, a rectangular edifice, three stories high, containing fine frescoes, carefully removed from Pompeii; numerous pictures by the best masters, and a museum richly stocked with an almost unique collection of antiquities from Pompeii and Herculaneum; also a parish church, a handsome Franciscan monastery, royal stables, barracks of the royal guards, and a large and showy building in which a manufactory of all kinds of ribbons has been established. On the gulf is a fine square, below which is the harbour, formed by a mole, and defended by a castle. Here an active fishery is carried on. Pop. 5450.

Viz. II.

PORTICO, a vil. and com. Tuscany, comp. and 26 m. N.E. Florence, 1 bank Montemonte, here crossed by a bridge; with a church, music, and school. Pop. 2054.

PORTILLO, two cos. Spain.—1. Leon, prov. and 18 m. Valladolid with a church, a handsome courthouse and prison, an hospital a primary school, manufactures of lampen cloth and earthenware, brick and tile works, sugar-refineries, and several maddar and other mills. Pop. 1600.—2. New Castle, prov. and 19 m. N.W. Toledo It is indifferently built, has a church, courthouse, prison two primary schools, manufactures of coarse woollen stuff, and two oil-mills. Pop. 767.

PORTISHEAD, a vil. and par. Eng. Dorset 4540 ac. Pop. 1500.

PORTLAND, a vil. and township, U. States, on the river of that name, nearly opposite to Middleton, about 13 m. S. Hartford. It has building quarries at which numerous vessels for river navigation are constructed, and extensive worked quarries of beautiful reddish sandstone. Pop. 2008.

PORTLAND a seaport in U. States, America, Maine, 100 m. N.N.E. Boston on a peninsula, W. extremity of Casco Bay between the river of that name on the S., and Back Cove on the N., on the Cumberland and Oxford canal, and on the railway to Boston, and the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railway. The ground rising into two heights at its E. and W. extremities, forms a natural amphitheatre, and gives to the town, which is built upon it, more especially when it is approached from the sea, an appearance at once beautiful and imposing. It is laid out with considerable regularity at least in the more modern portions, and the main street, extending along the ridge of the peninsula E. to W. is not surpassed by many in the Union. The public edifices and other institutions include about 18 churches, among which are several rendered conspicuous by their fine situations though few of them can boast of possessing much architectural merit; the courthouse, the city hall, the old custom-house of hammered granite the exchange, an elegant structure, entered through a colonnade of beautiful carved pillars with Ionic capitals, and by a dome, and recently purchased by the U. States government for a custom-house, post-office, and courtrooms, the Athenaeum, with a valuable library of 6000 vols., the Society for promoting a Knowledge of Natural History with an extensive museum an academy, a classical, and numerous public and private schools, a theatre, jail, &c. The largest manufacturing establishment is a factory, in which locomotives, cars, and all the appurtenances of railroads, as well as other articles in wood and iron, are made and there are also several tinctories, potteries, and rope-walks. The trade is already extensive, and is in course of still further development, having received a great impetus from the introduction of railroads. The harbour also is one of the best in the U. States, being of easy access, spacious, safe, deep enough for the largest vessels and rarely obstructed with ice. In 1821 the number of vessels which cleared for foreign ports was 511, carrying 77,725 tons. The coasting trade, carried on chiefly with Boston is also very extensive, and many vessels are engaged in the fisheries. The principal exports are lumber, fish, beef, butter, &c. Portland was settled in 1623 but was nearly destroyed by the Indians in 1675. It suffered severely during the revolutionary war from a bombardment by the British fleet in 1775. Pop. [1860] 20,819.

PORTLAND—1, a in Victoria, 200 m. W.S.W. Melbourne, on Portland Bay. The bay is spacious, receives several rivers, and includes a number of islands anchorage in lat. 38° 21' 11" S. lon. 141° 57' 45" E.—2, (Cape), Van Diemen's Land, one of the most northerly isles in the island lat. 40° 45' S. lon. 147° 58' E.—3, (Channel), An Inlet, W. coast, N. America lat. 56° 30' N. lon. 130° W. stretching inland, and separating British from Russian America.—4, (Islands) a small group, Pacific, W. New Haven; lat. 3° 28' S. lon. 149° 39' E. (n.)—5, (Point), the E. extremity of Isl. Jamaica lat. 17° 43' N. lon. 77° 10' W. (n.)

PORTLAND, par. Eng. Dorset; 8555 ac. Pop. 5196.

PORTLAND (Isle of), England, on Dorset, 50 m. W.S.W. Southampton, in the British Channel, lat. 50° 51' 24'

N. lon. $7^{\circ} 25' 45''$ W. (n), forming the W. boundary of Weymouth Bay. It is not strictly an island being attached to the mainland by a ridge of shingle, called the Chesil Bank, about 10 m. long. It consists of nearly one mass of freestone, called Portland stone, which is exported in great quantities, and is about 4 m. long by $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. broad, and terminates at its N. extremity in the point called Portland Bill. On the N. side, opposite to Weymouth, is the only landing place on the island, the rest being surrounded by high, inaccessible cliffs. The land is under excellent cultivation, or is kept as pasture for sheep. Fish abound along the coast, particularly mackerel.

PORTH A.W. a manufacturing vil. Ireland, co. and 9 m. W. N. W. Waterford, on the Clodagh. It has a church, R. Catholic chapel and Presbyterian meeting-house; a dispensary, reading-room, national school, and extensive and flourishing cotton-factories. Pop. 4831.

PORTLEMOUTH (East), par. Eng. Dorset 2143 ac. 1 op. 461.

PORTLOMAN par. Ireld. Westmeath 1910 ac. P 334. PORTMAHOMACK, a small seaport, co. Ross and Cromarty N. shore of peninsula formed by the Dornoch and Moray Firths, 11 m. N. E. N. Tain. It has a commodious and well-sheltered harbour with 12 ft. of water at spring and 9 ft. at neap tides; a considerable export of grain and other agricultural produce, and fish; an extensive fishery particularly of herring; and some manufactures of linen and herring cloth. Pop. 479.

PORTMAPNOCK par. Ireld. Dublin 3084 ac. P 602. PORTMAHON par. Scot. Argyll 7 m. by 5 m. P 1550.

PORTNAHAY a fishing vil. Scotland on Argyll, S. W. point, lat. 51 m. S. W. Bannock. It has a church, a school, and a harbour. Immediately opposite the vil. is a small inlet with a lighthouse, 100 ft. above high-water. P 1269.

PORTNAGULLY par. Ireld. Kilkenny; 2458 ac. Pop. 1069.

PORTNASHANGAN par. Ireld. Westmeath 2724 ac. Pop. 460.

PORTO a city. Portus Securo. PORTO (anc. Portus Trajani) a fishing vil. Papal States, on bank W. branch of the Tiber near its mouth, on the spot where Claudius and Trajan established the great naval arsenal of Rome. The ruins are very extensive.

PORTO, a vil. and com. Spain. Leon prov. and about 65 m. from Zamora with a church, courthouse, prison, primary school, and a trade in corn, fax, and cattle. P 1069.

PORTO-ALFONSO three m. Brazil — 1 prov. Rio-Grande do Rio-Grande, near N. W. extremity of Lake Paton, and the confluence of the Ochi, Sines, and Gravatahi with the Jamhi 150 m. N. N. W. Rio-Grande. It is well and regularly built, but only the principal streets are paved. It has several elegant churches a custom-house, hospital lyceum in which Latin, mathematical philosophy and rhetoric are taught and various primary schools a harbour much visited by merchant vessels, and an important trade. Pop. 12 000 — 2, A small town and seaport, prov. Bahia, 180 m. S. S. W. Porto-Begure at the mouth of the Mucuri with a church, a primary school a harbour admitting all ordinary trading vessels, and a considerable export of timber. Pop. 1000. — 3, A town in Rio-Grande do Norte, 180 m. W. Natal; a straggling place with a townhouse partly used as a prison. Pop. dist. 4000.

PORTO-BELLO, or PUEBLO-BELLO, a seaport in New Granada, on the Caribbean Sea 40 m. N. N. W. Panama lat. (Fort St. Jeronymo) $9^{\circ} 53' 30''$ N., lon. $79^{\circ} 55' 30''$ W. (n). It has a fine harbour discovered by Columbus in 1502. The town, founded in 1584, was for some time the rival of Panama, but its destructive climate caused it to be greatly deserted and it is now a poor and miserable place, although its fine harbour still attracts some trade.

PORTO-BELLO, or GAMOFFA, a m. Brazil prov. Santa-Catharina, on a bay of the same name, 25 m. S. Desterro. It has a church a primary school, and a good harbour. W. of the town is Lake Garopana, which abounds with fish. A colony of Italians, founded in the district, under the name of Nova-Italia, in 1538, was almost destroyed by a tornado and hardly, but it has since recovered from this disaster. P 3000.

PORTO-CASSELLO, or PUEBLO-CASSELLO, a fortified settlement in Venezuela, prov. Carabobo, on m. lat. Gulf of Triste, 22 m. N. by W. Valencia; lat. $10^{\circ} 23' 24''$ N., lon. $69^{\circ} 4'$ W. (n). It is well built, has a commodious harbour, and though very unhealthy carries on a considerable trade. In 1847, there entered 151 vessels, of 28,039 tons, and cleared 205 vessels, of 29,482 tons. Pop. 7500.

PORTO-CALVO, or BOM RECOTTO, a m. Brazil, prov. Alagoas, on the Mangueira, 120 m. S. S. W. Pernambuco; with a church, and a considerable export of cotton, sugar, and rum to Pernambuco. Pop. dist. 8000.

PORTO-DAS-FLORES, a m. Brazil prov. and 40 m. N. W. Alagoas, near the mouth of the Mangueira; with a parish church. Its district yields large quantities of cotton and sugar, which are exported to Bahia and Pernambuco. Pop. dist. 8000.

PORTO-FALSA, a m. Brazil, prov. and 50 m. W. Rio-Paulo, 1 back Tiete. It has a church and a healthy, beautiful, and fertile district, in which much sugar and rum are produced, and great numbers of cattle reared for exportation, chiefly to Rio-Paulo and Rio-de-Janeiro. Pop. dist. 10,000. PORTO-FERRAZO, a m. Tucumán, cap. lat. Elba, on a fine bay > coast. It stands on a promontory and is strongly fortified. It is entered by two gates, is well built; has a court of first resort, and several public offices a handsome church several schools a civil and military hospital, barracks, and a theatre and an excellent harbour, at which the principal export is iron. Pop. 4245.

PORTO-FINO — 1 A seaport in Italy Piedmont, 18 m. S. S. E. Genoa, at the foot of a promontory of same name, forming the W. side of the Gulf of Rapallo. It has a church, the remains of an ancient castle and a harbour defended by a battery. Pop. 1858. — 2 A promontory. See Finsco.

PORTO-GRANDE, a seaport in Cape Verd Isl. N. W. side lat. St. Vincent consisting of about 80 dirty and uncomfortable mud huts with an excellent harbour, formed by a spacious bay well protected from the N. E. trades. Lime-burning and gathering arch are the chief employments.

PORTO-IMPERIALE, or PORTO-REALE, a m. Brazil, prov. and 40 m. N. N. E. Guyana, on bank Essequibo, with a church, and a primary school.

PORTO-LUPOCO a vil. and com. Tucumán on a large and deep bay E. side, lat. Elba with a church a school and a castle finely situated on a height; and a trade in fruit and excellent wine. Pop. 2306.

PORTO-MARTINHO a seaport in France dep. Alpes Maritimes, 40 m. E. N. E. Nice, S. W. shore Gulf of Genoa. It has several churches a Capuchin convent, public schools, an hospital and theatre. The harbour is defended by a mole, but is very inconvenient and shallow. It has, however, considerable trade, especially in olive-oil, of excellent quality. Pop. 6481.

PORTO-RE, or KALIVIERA a seaport in Austria, Hungarian Littoral, Gulf of Quarnero, 12 m. S. E. Fiume. It is well built has a church, a custom-house, building-yards, and a spacious harbour, defended by two forts, but not much frequented; inhabitants live chiefly by fishing. Pop. 1100.

PORTO-RICO (Spanish Puerto Rico) one of the Spanish West India Islands, the fourth in size of the Antilles, E. of Hayti and W. of the Virgin Islands lat. (S. W. point) $17^{\circ} 56'$ N., lon. $67^{\circ} 16'$ W. (n) 90 m. long E. to W., and 26 m. broad. A range of lofty mountains covered with wood runs through the island, E. to W., averaging about 1500 ft. in height its highest peak is 8678 ft. high. In the interior are extensive savannahs, on which numerous herds pasture; and along the coasts tracts of level, fertile land, varying in some places from 5 m. to 10 m. wide, but in others the mountains approach much closer to the sea. Nearly the whole of the N. coast is lined with navigable lagoons, some of them 10 m. long and many of the rivers can be navigated to the foot of the mountains a distance of 15 m. or 6 m. There are numerous bays and creeks, deep enough for vessels of considerable burden; but the N. coast is subject to tremendous ground seas, which beat against the cliffs with great violence. Only three harbours, however, are safe all the year round, namely, Guanico and Horcas on the S. coast, and San Juan on the N. There are no serpents or other reptiles on the island, but numerous large rats often do great injury to the sugar-cane. The climate is generally more salubrious than the other islands of the Antilles. Gold is found in small lumps and in dust, in the stream flowing from the heights. Copper, iron, lead, and coal, have also been found; and there are some salines or salt ponds, worked by the government, which yield about 157 tons of salt. Porto Rico is widely an agricultural island its products being sugar, rum, molasses, coffee, cotton, crystallized tobacco, hides, live stock, dye-woods, lignum-vita, and timber, ground provisions, rice, salt, &c. Among the leading articles imported are cotton and woollen manufactures, drapery goods and some silk manufactures. The value of the imports in 1895 was \$2,231,119, of the exports \$1,098,415. The quantities of the principal articles exported from Porto Rico in the years 1861, 1865, and 1869, were as follows:—

Articles.	1861.	1865.	1869.
Sugar	145,925,610	146,48 263	147,38 185
Molasses	4,615,108	4,919,645	5,554,987
Coffee	14,445,810	30,980,475	52,738,134
Tobacco	9,384,846	6,924,593	5,520,529
Hides	275,977	327,681	723,968
Cotton	161,308	235,810	5,329,766
Rum	809,006	255,205	181,847

The capital of the island is San Juan de Porto Rico, besides which there are numerous other towns and villages, but all of them are small. The laws of Spain as administered in Cuba, are those of Porto-Rico. The island was discovered by Columbus in 1493. It was invaded in 1509 by the Spaniards from Hayti, who exterminated the natives about 600,000 or 800,000 in number, in a few years. Pop. (1884) 357,085, of whom 188,889 whites, 101,575 free mulattoes, 26,124 free negroes and 41,818 slaves. In 1860 563,181.

PORTO-RICO (SAN JUAN DE), the principal city and seat of above Isl. coast, lat. 17° 26' N, lon. 67° 10' W (A). It stands upon a small island connected with the mainland by a bridge, and is surrounded by strong fortifications. It has six churches and chapels, the bishop's palace, a military hospital, theatre, townhouse, jail, house of correction, custom-house, arsenal, &c. and is the seat of the government and superior courts of the island of a society of arts, and numerous schools. The harbour is very spacious, and capable of accommodating ships of the largest size. P. 10,000 to 11,000.

PORTO-SAN BRUNO (San Domingo Fortes) a seaport in Tucumán N.W. coast of the peninsula formed by Mount Argentino about 6 m WSW Orbetello with a court of justice, and a church, a fort, and two monasteries. The chief employment is fishing. Pop. 2578.

PORTO-SAN JUAN, an Isl. N Atlantic Ocean a dependency and 40 m N.E. Madeira, lat. 33° 5' N, lon. 16° 15' W (A), 6 m long, and 2½ m broad. It produces wine and most varieties of grain and vegetables in general use, also oranges and other fruits common to its latitude, but it is remarkably destitute of trees. Live stock and poultry are plentiful, but water scarce. There is a small town on the island at the head of a bay containing a church, and courthouses, and protected by a battery. Porto-Santo was for some time the place of residence of Columbus, after his marriage, his wife having some property in the island, and here his first child, Diego, was born. Pop. between 1600 and 1700.

PORTO SANTO, an island and seaport, Brazil, prov. and 245 m S.W. Bahia, 1 bank and at the mouth of the Banus bay. It has irregular and unpaved streets and three churches, a townhouse, an hospital with a Latin and a primary school, and a prison. The harbour is well sheltered on the S.W., but has only from 10 ft to 11 ft. of water, though the depth at the mouth of the river which is defended by a fort, is 16 f. The trade is chiefly in dye-wood of the first quality fine building-wood, timber, and fish taken in the Archipelago.

PORTO-VALE, a seaport in France, E. shore, Isl. Corsica, on a gulf of its own name, 31 m S.E. Ajaccio, in a very unhealthy site. It is walled, well built, and has a harbour considered the best in the island, being completely sheltered, and capable of containing a whole navy. Pop. 2015.

PORTOBELLO, a port, Port Scotland, on S. to E. Edinburgh, on Firth of Forth and the North British railway. It has Established, Episcopal, Free U Presbyterian, Independent, and R. Catholic churches several schools, and charitable institutions, extensive potteries, brick and tile works, glass-works, chemical works, and a paper-mill, and is much frequented by the inhabitants of Edinburgh for summer quarters and bathing, for which both its baths and fine firm sands make it well adapted. It unites with the Leith district of burghs in electing a member to Parliament. Pop. 8487.

PORTOGRUARO, a town, Kingdom of Italy, gov. and 25 m. N.E. Venice in a district rendered unhealthy by the marshes which surround it. It is the see of a bishop and has several churches and offices, a cathedral, and four parish churches, a seminary townhouse, manufactures of leather and hats, and two silk mills. Pop. 4000.

PORTOPIA, a market in Austria, Illyria, circle Trieste, on one of the loftiest heights in Italy, 21 m S.E. Trieste. It has a castle, a church, and a school. Pop. 3300.

PORTONE, a vil. Tucumán 1 m. from Pina, of which it may almost be considered a suburb. It has extensive manufactures of articles in brass. Pop. 3250.

PORTOPIA, a seaport in Hindustan, Carnatic, prov. and 83 m S. Pondicherry lat. 11° 30' N, lon. 79° 50' E formerly a large and wealthy town, but now comparatively poor and depopulated, though still occupying a great extent of space. Large vessels anchor at some distance from the town.

PORTOVENESE (Latin Portus Venetus) a seaport in Italy, Piedmont, div. Genoa, 4 m S. Spina. It is walled and has two churches, an hospital and a communal school. Most of the inhabitants are fishermen. There are marble quarries in the vicinity. Pop. 2194.

PORTQUEROLLES, lat. Mediterranean Sea Hyères.

PORTREATH, a small seaport in England on Corn wall, on the Atlantic, 4 m N. Redruth. It has a Wesleyan chapel and a pier and basin, which can accommodate 20 vessels of 100 tons, and at which about 55,000 tons of copper ore are annually exported to Swansea. The inlet to the harbour is defended by two batteries.

PORTREATH, a vil. and port Scotland on Inverness on a small bay, E. shore, lat. Skye, opening at Easay Sound. It has a parish church, a parochial school and a good harbour which is regularly visited by Glasgow steamers, and at which there is a considerable export of cattle salmon the area of port 9 m by 5 m. Pop. including that of the islands Fladda, Hays and Beas, 3577.

PORTREATH, a small seaport Ireland on Antrim, 5 m. N. Coleraine. It is much resorted to for sea-bathing. It has an extensive soap and candle manufactory a well protected harbour and an active intercourse with Londonderry, Liverpool and Glasgow. Pop. above 900.

PORTSCOTT, par. Eng. Monmouth; 1779 so. P. 137. PORTSEA, an Isl. England, in an inlet of the English Channel S. coast, Hampshire, with which it is connected at its N. extremity by a stone bridge, length N to S about 4 m, breadth, 1 m to 2 m. On the S. it lies open to the sea, but has the harbour of Langstone on the E. and the far more celebrated harbour of Portsmouth on the W. It belongs entirely to the tertiary formation possesses considerable fertility and is well cultivated. Besides arable fields which produce excellent corn crops large portions of it are laid out in gardens celebrated for their vegetables. It contains a number of distinct villages, but depends chiefly on its important town of Portsmouth and Portsea. See PORTSMOUTH.

PORTSLADE, par. Eng. Sussex, 2006 so. Pop. 755.

PORTSMOUTH, a seaport and market town, municipal and par. Port England, Hampshire on the S.W. extremity of the island of Portsea and at the terminus of the London and South-Western and the London Brighton and South Coast railways 68 m SSW London lat. (Royal Naval College) 50° 48' N lon. 1° 8' 15' W (A). It consists properly of the two towns of Portsmouth proper, and Portsea, separated from each other by what is called the Mill Dam Creek, and communicating by bridges, and of several suburbs. Both towns, united together so as to form a complete fortress, are surrounded by deep moats, and strong walls flanked by regular bastions, and are moreover defended by a series of formidable outworks. The ramparts, planned with trees, and commanding beautiful views, afford an excellent promenade. Portsmouth, which is nearly in the form of a semicircle, is entered by four handsome gates, one of them designed by Inigo Jones, forming an elegant structure of the Corinthian order, and though composed for the most part of narrow and irregular streets of mean appearance, and very dirty, possesses three or four of a less considerable character. The best of these is the High Street, which divides the town into two nearly equal parts, and contains the principal schools, hotels, and places of business Portsea, situated N. of Portsmouth, extending along the harbour, and containing the dock-yard and principal establishments connected with it, is entered by two gates, both of which, called respectively the Lion and Unicorn gates, from those parts of the British arms sculptured upon them, are imposing structures. In its older parts it presents even a less attractive appearance than similar por-has an area beneath in which the market is held, the Philo-sophical Society, occupying a handsome building and pos-sessed of a valuable museum, the grammar, national, British and infant schools, the Athenaeum, the custom house, the different barracks, the theatre, the Royal Portsmouth, For-esse, and Gosport hospital, new military hospital, Saller's Home, new convict prison,burgh jail female penitentiary, union work-house, &c. These, however, pos- seem little interest compared with the royal dock-yard, which covers an area of 130 ac., and is believed to be the largest and most mag-nificent establishment of the kind in the world. It is inclosed by a wall 14 ft. high, and entered by a lofty gateway; and contains, in addition to the vast storehouses in which all the materials re- quisite for naval architecture are kept, the machine shops in which they are converted to their proper use by all the aids which modern ingenuity has devised and the ex- tensive slips and docks in which the largest ships of the navy are built or repaired, ranges of hand- some residences for the port-ad-miral and other officials, and a Royal Naval College with ac-commodation for 70 students to whom a complete naval education is given. Outside the dock yard an area of 14 acres contains the gun-wharf where vast numbers of guns and other ordnance stores are kept, and there is an armory with 25 000 stand of small arms and on the mainland, opposite to Portsmouth and communicating with it by a floating bridge is the town of Gosport, to which the Royal Victualling Yard formerly one of the large establishments of Portsmouth has recently been removed. The distance between Gosport and Portsmouth, where the floating bridge piles, is nearly 3 m. wide, and forms the entrance to the harbour which is here de-fended by Southsea Castle on the E. and Moncton Fort on the W. and extends for several miles N. between the W. side of Portsea Island and the mainland, gradually widening out, till near the N. shore it attains a width of about 3 m. It is almost of unrivalled excellence admitting first-rate seas-of-war to enter and lie at anchor in perfect safety within its capacious basin, and has the additional advantage of being in the immediate vicinity of the admirable roadstead of Spithead formed by the N. shore of the Isle of Wight and the S. shore of Hampshire.

Portsmouth derives almost all its importance from its naval establishments, and has no manufactures of any consequence except those immediately connected with them, and a few large breweries. Its trade, both coasting and foreign, is of considerable extent, the former consisting chiefly of coals from the Welsh and Newcastle coal-fields, cattle and sheep from the Isle of Wight and the west of England, and large quantities of corn and provisions from Ireland, and the latter of wine from different parts of the Continent, eggs from France and timber from the Baltic. In 1865 the registered shipping of the port amounted to 14,965 tons, the vessels entered in the coasting trade were 1113 (124,471 tons), and cleared 742 (23,355 tons); and in the colonial and foreign trades entered 277 (25 990 tons) and cleared 115 (13,608 tons). The market-days are Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday; and there is an annual fair, which lasts three days.

those of Portsmouth, but having increased very rapidly in recent times, is more distinguished by modern improvements, and has several terraces, and one walk-built open space called St. George's Square. Both towns are lighted with gas, well paved, and abundantly supplied with excellent water. The suburbs, consisting of Landport and Kingston adjacent to Portsea, and Southsea on the E. of Portsmouth, are mostly occupied by residences connected with the dock-yard. Some of them, however, contain handsome villas and rows of well built houses, and Southsea in particular is not only much frequented as a fashionable watering-place, but has a fine esplanade fronting the beach, and adorned with statues of Nelson and Wellington.

The public buildings include numerous churches and chapels, in connection with the Establishment and with Dissenters. Among the former the most conspicuous is the parish church of Portsmouth, a venerable and spacious cruciform structure in the early English style, with a lofty tower and spire, much used as a landmark. Among the latter the Independent chapel in King's Street deserves particular notice, both for its dimensions and the elegance of its structure. Other principal buildings and objects of interest are the Guildhall, a new and spacious building, which accommodates the county court, and Portsmouth is mentioned in the Saxon Chronicle as existing in 501.

It appears to have been situated for Fortchester which had been selected by the Romans for a naval station, but became unfit for that purpose in consequence of the receding of the sea. During the reign of Alfred a fleet of nine ships fitted at the port actually defeated the Danes, who had long infested the coast, and immediately before the Conquest a large fleet was fitted out here to intercept the Norman armament. About 1266,

Henry III. assembled a large army here, with a view to embark it for the invasion of France, and in 1377 a counter-attempt was made by the French, who, though ultimately defeated with great loss, succeeded in burning a large part of the town. This disaster appears to have shown the necessity of fortifying the place, and the works, originally commenced by Edward IV., have continued to be improved and extended during a series of successive reigns, till they have become all but impregnable.

To man them sufficiently, about 16,000 men would be required, but the usual garrison consists of only three regiments of foot. The municipality and par. bor., including the whole of the island of Portsea, except a small portion belonging to the parish of Wymering and the Salters, is governed by a mayor 14 aldermen, and 49 councillors, and sends two members to the House of Commons. The population of the various sections of the borough is as follows:

	Pop. (1851)
Kingsdown	17,690
Portsea town	17,793
Portsmouth	1,847
Langford	50,796
Total	78,126

PORTSMOUTH, several places, U States—1. A seaport in New Hampshire, on bank Piscataqua 8 m above its mouth in the Atlantic, and on the Portsmouth and Concord, and the Boston and Portland railways, 50 m N by R. Boston. Among the public edifices are five or six churches, all of respectable, and some of elegant appearance; an academy on a showman, occupying a handsome brick structure with a library of 7300 vols and good collections in natural history, an almshouse two market-houses, and a state lunatic asylum. The chief industrial establishments are a machine-shop and car-factory manufactures of hosiery and fine twist, and a large steam-factory for weaving the finer kinds of cotton fabrics. The harbour, the only one immediately connected with the sea which the state possesses, is one of the safest and most commodious in the U States. It is formed in the mouth of the Piscataqua, which, opposite to the town, has a width of $\frac{1}{2}$ m. to $\frac{3}{4}$ m., a depth sufficient for the largest vessels, and as strong a current, that it is seldom obstructed by ice, and is protected by four forts placed on sundry islands which break the force of storms from the Atlantic.

On an island called Continental or Budge Island, on the E. side of the river is the U States navy-yard. The town has long been noted for its skill in naval architecture and maritime enterprises and a large number of vessels owned by Portsmouth are engaged both in foreign trade and in the fisheries, though the actual trade of the port itself is limited. Pop. (1850) 9789.—2. A co. and part of estate, Virginia, at the mouth of the Elizabeth, 88 m. E.S.E. Richmond; with a courthouse, jail, five churches, a bank, a theatre, a military academy and a harbor allowing ships of the heaviest tonnage to come to the wharves. At Gosport, a suburb of Portsmouth, are a U States navy-yard, dry-dock, and naval hospital. Pop 6370.—3. A vil. Ohio, 81 m. S. Columbus, on the Ohio with a courthouse, jail, several churches, an academy, a bank, and extensive iron manufactures. Pop. 4911.

PORTROY, a burgh of barony, and seaport, Scotland, co. Banff, 5 m. E. Ollien. It has Established and Free churches, Episcopalian and R. Catholic chapels, a school, two libraries, and a trade in grain and herrings. Pop. 2062.

PORTUGAL [and Lusitania], a kingdom in the S.W. of Europe, forming the W. part of the Iberian peninsula lat. 26° 55' to 43° 7' N. lon. 8° 15' to 9° 30' W. bounded E. and N. by Spain, and W. and S. by the Atlantic, greatest length N. to S. 845 m., greatest breadth, 140 m. It is divided into seven provinces, of which the names, area, population &c., are exhibited in the following table, along with the Portuguese colonial possessions in Africa and Asia.

AREA AND POPULATION OF PORTUGAL, INCLUDING ITS FOREIGN POSSESSIONS.

EUROPEAN PROVINCES	Area, in sq. m.	Pop. 1861	ASIA—HINDOOSTAN	Area, in sq. m.	Pop. 1861
Minho	1,389	688,780	Ind. Gen. and dependants	436	49,111
Trovis	2,310	858,935	Soleto	938	84,858
Tras-os-Montes	5,183	861,940	Berlin	828	80,010
Beira-Alta	678	889,033	New Acquisitions	80	110,448
Beira-Baixa	8,460	882,200	Town of Damão	7	9,146
Estremadura	5,403	788,875	Town of Diu
Alentejo	7,748	576,690
Algarve	1,080	170,329
	25,010	3,418,400
Azores, Madeira, and Porto-Santo	1,110	850,800	CHINA, &c.
			Macao	9	4,800
			Ind. Solor Timor M. &c.	678,400	816,610
				678,400	816,610
AFRICA
Cape Verde Islands	4,138	80,000	SUMATRA
Brazo	37,003	10,000	European Continent	35,536	8,418,400
Angola and Benguela	394,000	400,000	Africa	1,115	300,000
Mozambique and dependants	206,000	220,000	Asia	435,536	790,010
Ind. S. S. Timor and Timor	398	30,000		479,495	808,000
	455,636	736,910	Total	1068,700	5,181,610

In 1863 the pop. of the continent was 3,997,861 foreign 841,968 foreign possessions, 3,687,228: total 8,017,075

Coasts and Mountains—Portugal is not separated from Spain, except on a small part of its frontier, by natural boundaries. Its shape is nearly that of a parallelogram. The coast-line, of great length in proportion to the extent of the whole surface, cut as from the N. in a S.W. direction, till it reaches Cabo da Roca, the most westerly point of the peninsula. Here it becomes somewhat irregular, forms two bays by the intersection of the remarkable promontory which terminates in Cape Espichel again curves round in a S.W. direction till it reaches Cape St. Vincent, where it suddenly turns E. This direction it retains to its termination at the mouth of the Guadiana. It is occasionally bold and rises to a great height particularly at Cabo da Roca, where it presents a range of giddy cliffs but for the far greater part is low and marshy and not unfrequently lined by sands and reefs which make the navigation dangerous. It is not unprovided however with harbours. The number, large and small, is counted at 21, but the only ones of importance, either from their excellence or the trade carried on at them are those of Lisbon, Oporto, Setúbal, Faro, Figueira, Aveiro, and Viana. The interior is generally mountainous, a number of ranges stretching across the country, either in W. or S.W. directions, forming a succession of independent river basins, while their ramifications, penetrating in all directions, form the water-sheds of numerous subsidiary streams, and involve many wild and beautiful valleys. The loftiest range of all is the Serra d'Estrela, which may be considered as a continuation of the central chain which stretches across Spain between Old and New Castile, and between Leon and Extremadura. Near the town of Guarda it forms a fork, one limb of which proceeds N., and another S.E. while the main chain attains its culminating point of 7624 ft., about 5 m. W. of the town of Covilhã, and is there continued in a S.W. direction to its termination in the lofty cliffs of Cabo da Roca. Nearly parallel to this chain, and at no great distance from it, are on the N. the Serra de Aboia, and on the S. the Serra Morada. In the N.W. a branch of the Spanish Sierra Mamed, taking the name of Peneda, enters Portugal and attains one of the loftiest heights of the kingdom in Mount Geraz. At the opposite extremity, the Serra Monchique, stretching across the country at a short distance behind the S. shore, attains, at its W. extremity in Mount Pico, the height of 4050 ft. The rugged nature of the surface makes the plains both few in number and of limited extent, but many valleys equally remarkable for beauty and fertility occur. The chief plains are those of Almeida, and the Terra de Bragança, the former in the prov. of Beira-Alta, and the latter in that of Trás-os-Montes; the chief valleys, those of Chaves, Vila Rica, and Boticão.

Geology.—The nucleus of the mountains is usually granite, overlain in the N. by micaceous schist and other primitive rocks. In the S., particularly in the Serra Moschique prima tiva limestone is very abundant. More recent limestones, and schistose sandstones, occupy large tracts in different parts of the country. Volcanic formations are very apparent in the Serra de Caldeira, forming a continuation of that of Mouquique. The mineralogical treasures seem more remarkable for their variety than for their value, though some are, and many more it is supposed, might be, worked to advantage. They include argenticiferous lead, from copper, cobalt, blennith antimony fine marble, slate, salt, saltpetre, lithographic stones, mill-stones, and porcelain clay. Some gold also is washed from the sands of the Douro, Mondego and other streams and in several cases, particularly those of Estrella and Gerês and many valuable pebbles and rock-crystals are found in a great number of places.

Rivers.—No rivers of importance take their rise in Portugal, and yet few countries in proportion to their extent, are better supplied with large and navigable streams. The Minho is the N. forming the boundary between Spain and Portugal in the lower part of its course, the Douro first skirting the E. frontier and then pursuing its course W. to its mouth at Oporto, and the Tagus all flow E. to the Guadiana, the only large river of Portugal, which deviates from the general W. direction and flows mainly E. In addition to these rivers, for which Portugal is indebted to Spain she claims as peculiarly her own the Vouga, Mondego, and Sado. Numerous small lakes are scattered over the surface and embosomed in the mountains.

Climate.—The climate is greatly modified by the proximity of the sea and the height of the mountains, the former tempering the excessive heat of summer by refreshing breezes, and the latter making the winter snow rigorous than usual in countries under the same latitude. In general, however, winters are both short and mild, and in some places never completely interrupt the course of vegetation. In consequence of this, many parts of Portugal enjoy the benefit of a double spring. Early in February vegetation is so full vigorous the plants shoot forth rapidly attain maturity and either wither away or of economical value, are gathered and harvested. During the month of July the heat is often extreme and, rain seldom falling, the whole country particularly at its lower levels and along the coast, assumes a very parched appearance. The drought generally continues throughout August and far into September but at least the sky which had previously been serene, becomes overcast, and copious showers descend. The second spring now begins, and the fields again become covered with flowers and verdure. Winter begins at the end of November. In the mountainous districts, the latter summits obtain a covering of snow and retain it for a greater or less period according to their altitude, but in all the country S. of the Douro, and at moderate elevations, snow generally melts away within a month. Deluges of rain however continue to fall, and violent hurricanes and thunder-storms are not unfrequent. At the same time, too, shocks of earthquakes are sometimes felt, particularly in the vicinity of the metropolis, where the damage produced by it on one occasion was fearful almost beyond description.

Population.—There are few countries with a more varied flora than Portugal. The number of species has been estimated to exceed 4000 and of these more than 3000 are phanerogams. Many of the mountains are clothed with fine forests, chiefly of hardwood, among which the oak, both the ordinary species, or Quercus robur and the cork tree, or Quercus suber, are conspicuous. In the central provinces, it is a moderate elevation, the climate is very pleasant. In the S., in the province of Algarve, both the date and the American aloes are not uncommon. Fields of excellent quality are common in every quarter, though it is only in the warmer and better-sheltered districts that the orange, lemon, and olive are cultivated with success on an extensive scale. The mulberry is admirably adapted to the climate, and, by means of it, a good deal of excellent silk is obtained; and a large extent of country is devoted to vine culture, raised partly by the demand for Portuguese wines in Britain. Agriculture, properly so called, is at a very low ebb; and Portugal fails in ordinary years to raise cereals in sufficient quantity to meet its own consumption. Among domestic animals, the first place is due to the mule, of which very superior breeds have long been possessed, and are carefully preserved. Sheep, goats, and hogs are very numerous but little attention is paid to their improvement. Horses and mules are few; and of inferior value description. Game is not abundant, and the fisheries on the coast, though naturally productive, and at one time carried on to a great extent, have fallen off so much, that the greater quantity of the fish used is obtained by importation.

Manufactures. Trade, Minerals, &c.—Manufactures are very insignificant, and employ few large establishments; but almost every family is so far manufacturing, that it supplies itself more or less with many of the articles of primary necessity. Among the articles made in some extent for sale, may be mentioned woollen at Lisbon, woollen cloth and other woollen stuffs at Portelago, Covilhã and Tondela, porcelain at Vista Alegre, delft, and ordinary earthenware, at Lisbon, Oporto, Coimbra, Beja, Estremoz, &c.; prints and lace at Lisbon and Oporto, cotton-twist at Thomar, silks at Bragança, Oporto, Oporto, &c.; copper and the ware at Lisbon and other places, cork, ribbons, embroidery hats, confectionery, fine soap, jewellery, and the cutting of precious stones, glass, paper, wicker-work, and tobacco. Ship-building also is well understood, and a large number of vessels are constructed at Lisbon, Figueira, Oporto, and Villa do Conde. Trade has suffered much by the loss of Brazil but still continues to be of considerable importance. The principal exports are wine, brandy, vinegar, salt, oil, pork, fruit, particularly chestnuts, walnuts, almonds, olives, oranges, and lemons, silk, wool, cork, ummah, hermes, leeches, bones, glass, and porcelain, the principal imports are wheat, rye, barley, and maize, foreign timber salt provisions, particularly oil colonial products, woollen cotton, linen, and silk tissues, iron, steel and various other metals coal tar, and dyes, and drugs. In 1851 the total amount of the exports was £1,932,291, and the imports, £2,431,397, being an increase, since 1845, on the total business done of £1,287,727. The length of sea-coast, with the harbours formed upon it, and the number of rivers, furnish great facilities for trade, but all the other means of internal communication are very defective. Accounts are kept in reis, milreis or 1000 reis and conto de reis or 1,000,000 reis. The value of the reis is so minute, that the milreis is worth only 4s. 6d. The chief linear measures are the legoa or league of 18 to the degree, the milha, or common geographical mile, the braça, or fathom, = 7 f. 4 in., the vara, or yard, one-half of the former; and pa, or foot, = about 18 in. The weights are the libra, or lb., a little larger than the lb. avoirdupois = 33 lbs., and the quintal = 4 arrobas. For dry measure, the moyo = 34 bushels and for liquids the almoda = 4½ gallons, are used.

Government, Army, Language, and People.—The government is a hereditary constitutional monarchy, which in recent times has undergone so many changes, and is still so unsettled that it is difficult to describe it with accuracy. As at present existing, it contains a very large infusion of the democratic principle. The legislative power is vested jointly in the sovereign and an upper and a lower chamber; but both chambers are elective, meet and dissolve at regular periods, without the intervention of the crown, and have both agreed as to any particular measure or enactment, are not subject to its veto. Justice is administered (or rather said to be administered, for there are few countries in which its essential principles are more frequently overlooked) by a great number of inferior judges, whose decisions are subject to revision in 17 district courts. An appeal court, with extensive jurisdiction, sits at Oporto, and a supreme court, with jurisdiction over the whole kingdom, at Lisbon. The established religion is the E. Catholic, which is completely in the ascendancy, Protestantism being almost unknown. It is governed by a patriarch at Lisbon; two archbishops at Braga and Evora, and 14 bishops. It performs its duties very imperfectly, providing officially neither for the morals nor the education of the people, the great body of whom are sunk in the most deplorable bigotry and ignorance, while among the more intelligent classes indolence is said to be very prevalent. The revenue, of which the far greater part is obtained by indirect taxation, is about 2190,800. The expenditure, which considerably exceeds it, was estimated in 1850 at 12,524,187 miteis, equal to about $250,480. The debt amounts to $1,586,711. The army is estimated at 38,100 men. The navy consists of two ships of the line of 80 guns each, five 50-gun frigates, one frigate of 44 guns eight corvettes of from 20 to 34 guns, eleven brigs from 10 to 20 guns, seven schooners and two steam-vessels. The language is a dialect of Latin, and bears a very close affinity to the Spanish. Its powers have not been much tested but at least in the Legend of Camões it has proved itself not unequal to epic poetry. The people are by no means prepossessing in external appearance. They are generally small in stature, indifferently shaped, and have irregular tawny features, the very opposite of beautiful. As a nation they are revengeful, sanguine, vain, and mean yet arrogant.

History.—Portugal forms the larger part of the ancient province of Lusitania, and to have been so called from the Lusii an indigenous tribe which dwelt between the Tagus and the Douro. Phœnician and Grecian colonies appear to have been planted on its coasts at a very early period, and the Carthaginians subsequently formed several establishments. About 200 B.C. the Romans became sole masters, and continued in possession for nearly six centuries during which they completely changed the habits of the natives, introduced their own language, and exacted numerous tributes, the remains of many of which still remain. In the 5th century the Sverri Vandals, and Visigoths became possessors. In the beginning of the 6th century Portugal shared the fate of Spain, and was overrun by the Moors. The former inhabitants, descendants of the northern invaders, retired to the more inaccessible districts, and succeeded in maintaining their independence.

After a long struggle, during which many battles were fought, and many illustrious deeds achieved they regained the ascendancy, and the Portuguese monarchy was formally established by the Cortes at Leiria in 1143. The first king was Don Afonso Henrique, son of Henry of Burgundy who had married the daughter of the king of Leon and Castile, and obtained for her dowry as much of the peninsula south of Galicia as had already been wrested or he might still be able to wrest, from the Moors. The latter part of the dowry was not allowed to continue a mere nominal gift. In 1147 the Moors lost Lisbon and in 1249 their complete expulsion from the kingdom was effected by the taking of Faro. Under the successors of Afonso, Portugal advanced rapidly in prosperity though not without some interruptions from intestine dissensions, pestilence and Spanish war. In 1285 a new dynasty was established, on the demise of Ferdinand in the person of his natural son, who was proclaimed king by the Cortes, and ascended the throne under the name of John I. With him commenced the long series of maritime discoveries which ultimately placed Portugal at the head of a great colonial empire. He personally undertook an expedition to the coast of Africa, and made a conquest of Ceuta and part of the adjoining country. The spirit of enterprise thus excited became a kind of national passion, and the expeditions fitted out were crowned with brilliant success. In 1418, Madeira was discovered in 1482 the Azores and in 1486, after a succession of adventures had explored the greater part of the W coast of Africa, the Cape of Good Hope was beheld by Bartholomew Diaz. Vasco da Gama, following in the same tract, was still more successful. In 1497 he doubled the Cape, and continuing his course eastward, reached the shores of Malabar. A still more fortunate discovery was made in 1500 by Pedro Alvarez Cabral, or Cabreira, who while bent on a different course, was driven by a storm to the coast of Brazil and thus led to the formation of a settlement, which has since grown up to be an independent empire. After these successes, and the treasures obtained from them, had raised Portugal to the highest pitch of prosperity, a disputed succession brought it to the verge of ruin, and subjected it to the tiranny of a hated foreign yoke. King Sebastian having lost his life in 1578 in a disastrous expedition to Africa, was succeeded by his uncle Henri, who, being a cardinal had no lawful heirs.

Among the competitors for the crown was Philip II. king of Spain, who, instead of waiting for the decision of the Cortes, took the matter into his own hands, invaded Portugal with a powerful army, and made himself its master. This invasion, after lasting for 80 years, was terminated in 1640, by a general rising, headed by the Duke of Bragança, who, on the expulsion of the Spaniards, ascended the throne under the name of John IV. The most interesting events which have since occurred are the close alliance formed with Great Britain in 1703, and which, uninterrupted almost, has powerfully influenced the fortunes of Portugal—the invasion of the French in 1807, and the renewal of the contest to Brazil—the expulsion of the French by the victories of Wellington—the revolution of 1820, which converted the government into a constitutional monarchy—and the subsequent erection of Brazil into an independent empire, thereby robbing Portugal of the richest jewel of her crown, and leaving her scarcely a shadow of her former colonial greatness.

PORTUGALETTE, a seaport in Spain, prov. Biscay, 11 m N N W Bilbao, near the mouth of the Bilbao; with a church, courthouses, prison, a primary two schools, and some manufactures of coarse linen. The discharging of the vessels here which cannot ascend the river forms the chief employment of the inhabitants. Pop. 1025.

PORTUGUESA a river Yemaesela, rises in a branch of the Andes, 40 m E Truxillo; flows S.E. and joins L bank Apure, at San Fernando, total course, about 200 m. chief settlements the united Guanarito and Guanaparo, and the Cofima.

PORTUMNA a market in Ireland co. and 87 m S. S. W. Galway, near the Shannon, here crossed by a fine bridge. It has a handsome parish church, with a spire, an elegant R. Catholic chapel, an excellent courthouses, a bridewell, a national school, a dispensary, barracks, the ruins of an old castle manufactures of tobacco, and a considerable trade, conducted chiefly by steamers. Pop. 1638.

PUSADAS, a tn. Spain, prov. and 20 m S.W. Cordova, near the Guadalquivir. It has a church three hermitages and a townhouse. Many of the inhabitants are employed in agriculture, and as muleteers and there are eleven oil and eight flour mills, three brick and tile kilns, three lime-kilns, and a potter. Pop. 3735.

PUSCAATZ, a vil. and com. Austrian Italy, prov. Bergamo, 8 m E. Zogno with a church, and three crastores. Pop. 1398.

PUSCHEKHON a tn. Russia, gov. and 70 m N N W Jaroslavl, on the Saganha. It has a church manufactures of leather and a trade in corn and general ware. P. 1842 4551.

PUSCHIAVO or PUSCHIAVO a tn. and par. Switzerland, com. Graciosa in a valley of same name, 15 m N.E. Soudire 2000 ft. above the sea. It has a Protestant, and a R. Catholic church; a nursery, and a considerable transit trade. P. 2246.

PUSZTA, or PUSZTA a tn. Austria, Sclavonia, cap. of same name R. bank Orlyava, 53 m S.E. Kélenfrehon. It is the seat of the bishopric of Agram, has a spacious and well-built square, adorned with an obelisk, three R. Catholic churches four chapels, a townhouse old castle, R. Catholic gymnasium high school and some trade in tobacco, silk and cattle. Pop. 6850.—The county, area, 778 sq. m. is generally elevated and covered with lofty well-wooded hills from which numerous streams descend. Of these the principal are the Orlyava, Pakra, Biela, and Ilava, which all carry their waters to the Sava. The valleys are fertile and produce much corn hay, tobacco wine, and fruit particularly celebrated apples chestnuts also abound. There are several thermal springs. It is subdivided into the two districts of Upper and Lower Posen. Pop. 92 700.

POSEN, or POZNAŃ a prov. and duchy Prussia, not included in the German Confederation, bounded N. by West Prussia, E. Poland S. Silesia, and W. Brandenburg; area, 8564 sq. m. The surface is generally very flat, and is extensively occupied by lakes and marshes. A small portion of it belongs to the basin of the Vistula, which merely touches it on the N.E., all the rest belongs to the basin of the Oder which receives its drainage through the Warta in this S. and centre, and the Netze in the N. The soil is for the most part light and sandy, and considerable tracts are covered with heath, but the far greater part of it either is, or is capable of being brought under the plough, and many parts of it are covered with a rich alluvium or vegetable mould, yielding all the ordinary species of grain, millet, flax, hemp, tobacco, and hops. The pastures are extensive, and feed numerous herds of cattle and swine. Considerable attention is paid to the raising of poultry particularly geese, and also to the rearing of bees. The minerals, set of much consequence, include bog iron-ore, salt-petre, limestone, and building-stones. The manufactures consist chiefly of woollen stuffs, linen, and leather. The trade in these articles is considerable; other exports are corn, cattle, tallow, leather, honey wax, goose-feathers, and hog-lard. The inhabitants include a considerable mixture of Germans and Jews, but the great majority are Poles. Posen being one of the acquisitions which Prussia made by the dismemberment of Poland. It is divided into the two governments of Posen and Bromberg, Posen occupying the N. half, and subdivided into 17 circles pop. 800,480 and Bromberg occupying the S. half subdivided into 9 circles. Pop. 465,900.

POSEN is fortified to. Prussia, cap. above prov. and gov., on the Warta and Lwowa, 149 m. E. by S Berlin. It lies so low as to be exposed to inundations, particularly from the Warta, which flows through it. It is defended by a castle seated on a height, and three forts. It built with considerable regularity, but is more remarkable for the number than for the splendour of its public edifices. Of these the most deserving of notice are the cathedral and the Stanislaus church, both belonging to the R. Catholics, who have 22 other churches, two Protestant churches, Greek chapel, synagogue, old Jewish college, Episcopal palace, R. Catholic seminary, two gymnasia, normal and other schools, five monasteries, several hospitals and charitable institutions, a theatre, and some elegant mansions of the Polish nobility many of whom reside here. The manufactures consist chiefly of woollen and linen tissues, cloths, calicoe, stockings, sewing wax, carriages, leather and leather articles, lacquerware &c. There are also several breweries and distilleries. Posen is the seat of an archbishop, the residence of a provincial governor, and the seat of important courts of primary and appellate jurisdiction and numerous public offices. At an early period it was the capital of Poland, and was included in the Hanseatic League. Pop. (1816) 24,966, (1849), 44,963.

POZNAŃ.—From the Cathedral Square.

POŠUNG or HÁKUS [Lattus, Bismarck] a tn. Hungary co. and 12 m. N.N.E. Pressburg, on a small tributary of the Danube with two churches, a synagogue, Capuchin monastery, castle, a sulphate factory, paper-mill, lime-kilns, granite quarry and a considerable trade in wood, which is floated to the Danube. Pop. 4850.

POSLINGFORD, a par. England, Suffolk 2488 ac 1 op. 81.

POSSANO a vil and par. kingd. of Italy gov. Venetia, prov. and N.W. Treviso, the birthplace of the sculptor Canova, after whose designs and chiefly at whose expense, a magnificent church was erected and nobly decorated. Near the church, on the site of the house where the sculptor was born, a building erected by him has been converted into a museum and contains models of all his works.

POSSESSION, a bold cliff headland, S. America, N. shore Strait of Magellan, about 260 E. above the sea; lat. 52 17 S.; lon. 66° 56' 30" W. —A bay of the same name, with good anchorage, curves in to the N. round the cape, and extends as far as the entrance of the First Narrows POSSESSION ISLAND.—1 An isl. Antarctic Ocean; lat. 71° 56' S. lon. 71° 7' E. and so called from its having been the spot on which the ceremony of taking possession of the newly-discovered continent, called Victoria Land, by Sir James Ross was performed. It is composed entirely of igneous rocks, and is accessible on its W. side only. It presents no appearance whatever of vegetation, but is covered with innumerable myriads of penguins.—2, An isl., S. Pacific, near the N. point of Australia, 20 m. N. Cape York, lat. 10° 48' S. lon. 142° 30' E. Here Captain Cook took possession of all the N.E. coast of Australia, in the name of George III. King of Britain calling it at the same time New South Wales.—3 One of the Crozet Islands (which see).

POTENY, PRZEKAZ, or POCENY a market tn. Hungary Higher Danube, on, and 24 m. N.W. Neutra with a church, a handsome chateau, and a bathing-establishment, supplied by thermal springs in the neighbourhood, which are in considerable repute. Pop. 8660.

POTSTIGIONE, a tn. Naples, prov. Principato Citra 8 E. Campagna; with a castle, and two churches. Pop. 1580.

POTTLING, par. Eng. Kent, 1880 ac. Pop. 182.

POTTOINA a market tn. Austria, Illyria, near Adelsberg, on the Poik. It contains a church and the remains of an old castle. Pop. 1356.

POTUPICE, or PORCUM, a tn. Bohemia, circle and S.W.W. Kaurzin with a church, school and manufactures of cotton, a cotton mill, printfield and bleachfield. 1 op. 1883.

POTWICK par. Eng. Norfolk, 1436 ac. Pop. 725.

POTZDAM, a tn. Saxony-Mecklenburg, dist. Siedfeld with three churches, a townhouse, and hospital, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, porcelain, and leather; and a considerable trade in these articles. Pop. 8668.

POTengi, or PORTU, often improperly called Grande, a river, Brazil, rises in the Serra dos Calvris Novas, traverses prov. Rio Grande do Norte in a N.E. direction, passes the town of Natal and falls into the sea about 22 m. E. Cape St. Roque. Its channel has considerable depth in the rainy season, but in the highlands is obstructed by rocks and in the lowlands encumbered by sandbanks. Coasting vessels get up to near Natal and canoes to the source.

POTENZA, a tn. Naples, cap. prov. Basilicata, on a hill of the Apennines, 82 m. E.S.E. Naples. It is walled, and on the whole very indifferently built, but contains a number of handsome buildings, among others a fine cathedral in the Doric style, two collegiate churches, five monasteries, and a nursery. Potenza is the seat of a bishop, and possesses a civil and a criminal court, a seminary, and royal college. It has suffered much from earthquakes. Pop. (1850), 12,353.

POTI, or PORT, a fort, Russia, Trans-Caucasia, dist. Imzereth, near the mouth of the Rioni, in the Black Sea, 66 m. W.S.W. Kutais. It is in the form of an oblong, flanked by large towers, and though the harbour is both insecure and too shallow to admit large vessels, carries on a considerable trade, exporting wine, honey, wax, silk, skins, &c. Pop. 1000.

POTI or Puri a tn. Brazil, prov. Piauí, 1 bank Pernambuco, 100 m. N. Orléans. It has a church, and a considerable trade in cotton, and other agricultural produce.

POTI or GARATZEM, a river, Brazil, prov. Piauí, flows E.W. and N.W. and joins r. bank Pernambuco; total course, 200 m., navigable in the latter part.

POTOKA, a river, U. States, rises in the S. of Indiana, flows W.S.W. past Columbus and Princeton, and after a course of about 80 m., joins I. bank Wabash, a little below the confluence of the White River.

POTOMAC, a river, U. States Maryland and Virginia, rises by two branches in and near the Alleghany Mountains, and after a tortuous S.E. course of 250 m., through nearly the whole of which it forms the boundary between Maryland and Virginia, falls into Chesapeake Bay between Point Lookout and Smith's Point, by a mouth 10 m. wide. It is navigable for ships of the line to the navy-yard at Washington.

800 m. from the sea. Above this it is obstructed by numerous hills and rapids, which have been obviated by canals formed just them. The Ezequiel is its principal tributary, and the principal places on its banks (besides Washington) are George Town, Fort Tobasco, Leonard Town, Harper's Ferry, and Alexandria.

POTOSI, a dep. Bolivia, containing the provinces of Potosi, Porco, Laya, Chayanta, and Obispo, nearly all lying between the sources of the Pichicayo, the table-land round Lake Titicaca, and the sea. It is for the most part a very rugged country intersected by numerous abrupt ridges which increase in height towards the Cerro de Potosi. This mountain, so celebrated for its unequalled mineral wealth, has the form of a crushed sugar-loaf, and rises to the height of 15,037 ft. It is often covered with snow, but does not retain it long. In the conical summits of the Cerro are more than 5000 Boon-minas or openings, made in search of silver-ore. The top of the mountain is completely honey-combed and exhausted, lower down springs grow numerous and the richest mines are now filled with water. At the present day, therefore, the miner is content to extract the silver from the inferior ores, formerly thrown out as waste, and chiefly strewn over the mountain. At a little distance S.W. rises the Cerro de Porco, resembling that of Potosi in its ridges, but sooner filled with water. This elevated region is generally of volcanic origin, but the Cerro de Potosi is found to be composed of a quartzose rock, the position of which, in the midst of immense fields of trachyte, cannot be easily explained. The population of this department, which has undoubtedly decreased since the stoppage of the mines, may still probably be estimated at 180,000, of whom three-fourths are of the indigenous race.

POTOSI, a city Bolivia, cap. above dep., at the foot of the Cerro; lat. 19° 34' S., lon. 65° 34' W. and is one of the highest inhabited places in the world, the absolute elevation of the ground on which it stands varying from 18,402 to 18,694 feet and what renders this fact truly astonishing is that a city founded on the very borders as it were of the respirable atmosphere, should have contained at one time 150,000 inhabitants. Many of these were doubtless Mitayos, or Indians dragged thither by the system of forced labour called mita. But when it is considered that the mines of Potosi are supposed to have yielded, from 1545, when they were first discovered, to 1789, silver amounting in value to $700,000,000, and that the fortunate proprietors lived in almost inaccessible luxury and splendour, it will be readily admitted that their expenditure alone might collect a multitude of people even in an ungenial situation. At Potosi the sun's rays are intolerably hot, while in the shade the cold is piercing. The country around is bleak and barren. The central square, encircled with the government-house, public offices, church, and convent, still remains, as well as the mint, a large and costly edifice, but the quarters once inhabited by the Indians are now in ruins, and the population, constantly decreasing, was reduced in 1835 to 13,800.

POTOSI (San Luis) a dep. Mexican Confederation, bounded, N. by Nuevo Leon E. Tamaulipas S.E. Vera Cruz, S. Queretaro and Guanajuato, and E. Zacatecas, greatest length, N. to S., 206 m., greatest breadth, measured near the S. frontier, 185 m., but near the centre not more than 87 m. area, 29,468 sq. m. In the W. the mountains, and towards the E. become only broken and hilly, and in the S.E. spreads out into plains. The only important rivers are the San Juan which traverses the state centrally W. to E., and the Pánuco or Tampico, which in the S. traverses it in the same direction and forms part of the boundary between it and the Tamaulipas. The climate among the mountains and on the table land is cold, but becomes warm on the lower flats of the E., and at certain seasons is unhealthy. The mountainous districts abound with excellent pastures, on which great numbers of cattle are reared; and the arable districts are remarkable for their fertility, yielding large crops of maize, wheat, and barley. Manufactures have made some progress, and include woollen and cotton fabrics of excellent quality; glass, leather, pottery, and metallic wares. The trade in home products is limited, but the position of the state makes it the natural entrepot between the coast and the interior for the imports of the U. States and Europe. Many valuable mines have been discovered, and are still worked to some extent. For administrative purposes the state is divided into four departments—San Luis, Rio Verde, Tancumbula, and Venado, subdivided into 10 cantons and 53 municipalities. P. 868, 120.

Vol. II.

POTOSI (San Luis) a city, Mexico, esp. above dep. 92 m. S.E. Zacatecas 6350 ft. above sea-level, regularly laid out and well built, with spacious and well-kept streets. It has six handsome churches, three convents, and an hospital.

SAN LUIS POTOSI.—From Hotel, View of the Mountain.

manufactures of clothing, shoes, hats, and different articles of iron are confined on to a considerable extent, and there is some trade with the neighbouring departments in the above manufactures, and in foreign imports consisting of brandy wine, silks, woollens, cottons, and hardware. Pop. 40,000.

POTSAY or POCMAR a vil. Hungary. Thutser Theiss co. Bihar, 19 m. S.S.E. Debreczin, with a Greek R. Catholic and a Protestant church. Pop. 1972.

POTSCHING, or POTSCHING, a market in Hungary co. Odenburg, about 6 m. from Gross-Höflein. It has a church, a chalybeate spring and a trade in wine. Pop. 1410. POTSCHINKI a tn. Russia, gov. and 110 m. S.S.E. Nijni Novgorod, with three churches, manufactures of linen, a trade in cattle and a large stand, which furnishes horses to the emperor's body-guard. Pop. 5000.

POTSDAM, a gov. Prussia, prov. Brandenburg, bounded N. by duchy Mecklenburg and prov. Stettin E. gov. Stettin and Frankfurt S. gov. Munsterberg S.W. duchy Anhalt-Deschau, and W. gov. Magdeburg and kingdom of Hanover area, 6120 geo. sq. m. It is flat, and the soil is for the most part light and sandy. Considerable tracts are covered with heath and moors. It is densely wooded, and well watered both by streams and lakes. Of the former the principal are the Oder, Laker, Pulow, Sprue, Netze, Piane, Havel, Elbe, Dams, Jagalta, Elbe, and Stupenitz of the latter, the Schwielung, Selchow, Wolgast, Beldin, Müggel, Rangsdorf, Ruhmstedt, Seldin, &c. Cultivation is conducted with considerable care and skill and great numbers of cattle, sheep, and swine are reared. Manufactures are prosecuted with great vigour and success, particularly in Berlin and in those places originally settled by the French emigrants who were driven from their homes by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. For administrative purposes the government is divided into 16 circles. Pop. 1,215,854.

POTSDAM a tn. Prussia, esp. above gov., and the second royal residence of the kingdom, 17 m. S.W. Berlin, with which it is connected by railway on the Havel, which is here crossed by a bridge 600 ft. in length, and expands into a lake, with finely-wooded sloping banks. It consists of the Altstadt or Old Town of an island formed on the E. and S.W. by the Havel, and the N. and W. by a canal, called the Kottbus or New Town, including Klets, Friedrichstadt, Dutch Berlin, and several suburbs. The different parts communicate with each other by bridges, and the whole forms one of the handsomest and most regularly built towns in Germany. It is entered by five land and four water gates, and is laid out in straight, spacious, well-paved streets, or large and elegant public squares. Of the latter, which are six in number the most deserving of notice are the Old Market, with an obelisk of white and red marble 54 ft. high, and busts of the great emperor and the first three kings of Prussia, the Wilhelmplatz (William's Place), and the Lustgarten, laid out in beautiful walks and adorned with pavilions, statues, and fountains. The principal edifices are the German church, containing the tombs of William I and Frederick the Great, the Nikolaikirch the French church, built after the model of the Pantheon at Rome, the townhouse, with a cupola, surrounded by a colonnade of Atlas in copper gilt, supporting the globe the new Casino, the theatre, the great military hospital, the head guard-house, the post-office, and the royal palace. Educational and benevolent institutions are numerous. Among the former are the gymnasium, normal school, high school, architectural horticultural, industrial, and numerous other schools and among the latter are orphan and widow hospitals, an infirmary and different asylums. The manufactures include all the necessary uses of wool, linen, cotton, and silk, leather and lacquerware, porcelain, earthenware, chemical products, wax-cloth, chocolate, vinegar, tobacco, &c. Potsdam is the seat of a bishop, has a provincial high and numerous other courts and offices and several literary and other societies. Immediately to the W outside the Brandenburg gate, commences the gardens of the palace of Sans Souci, laid out in stiff French formal taste, with alleys, cut hedges, statues, basins, &c. The palace itself stands at the extremity of a broad avenue, crowning the summit of a succession of terraces it has a fine colonnade but is a low building by no means handsome, and only deserving of notice from the interesting associations connected with it. Immediately behind the palace is the windmill well known as the subject of a lawsuit, in which Frederick the Great was worsted by the miller. In the same neighbourhood is the New Palace a vast brick building, containing 200 apartments, and exhibiting much gaudy magnificence, erected by Frederick at the end of the Seven Years war in a spirit of bravado to show that his revenues were not exhausted. The most distinguished natives of Potsdam is the celebrated traveller Alexander von Humboldt. Pop (1861) 41,524.

85

POTTSBOYE, a village, Bedford 1880 ac. Pop 262.
POTTENDORF, a market to Lower Austria, on a canal which communicates with the Leitha, 8 v. Vienna. It has a fine old castle, a Gothic chapel, a handsome church an hospital, and an extensive cotton-mill, which employs above 1800 hands. Pop 2840.

POTTER, two par. Eng. —1, (Haworth) Lincoln 4150 ac. P 458 —2, (Haworth) Norfolk 2537 ac. P 477.

POTTER-NEWTON, a vil. England co. York bor and about 2½ in N. Leeds, contiguous to Chapel-Allerton, with an Independent chapel, and chiefly inhabited by Leeds men. Chants. Pop. 1284.

POTTERIES (TAX) a dist. England in N of Staffordshire, chiefly between Newcastle under Lyme on the S. and Norton-on-the-Moors on the N. area, about 16 sq m thickly studded with villages, and containing a population of 30,000. It is the central locality of the manufacture of china and earthenware, and owes its prosperity in this respect not to the possession of the finest clay, which it is obliged to import from the counties of Devon Dorset, and Cornwall, but partly to its inexhaustible supplies of cheap fuel and partly to the ingenuity of the late Josiah Wedgwood, whose improvements in almost all the varieties of ware, introduced originally at his extensive establishment of Etruria, ultimately enabled the whole district to take a lead in the manufacture, which, notwithstanding formidable competition in other quarters, it continues to maintain.

POTTERIEZ, two par. Eng. Wilt. 4956 ac. Pop 1778.

POTTERFURY, two par. Eng. Northampton 2830 ac. Pop 1734.

POTTES, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 10 m. N. Tournay; bank Scheldt; with a church, two townhouses, and a communal school two breweries, a bleaching-green, and several corn and oil mills; some weaving, and a trade in fax cattle and grain. Pop. 3166.

POTTMEZ, a ch. in Upper Bavaria, N N E. Augsburg; with a church, a castle, a potash-factory, several mills, and a trade in corn and fruit. Pop. 1500.

POTTON, two par. Eng. Bedford, 1900 ac. Pop. 1972.
POTTSTOWN, a tn U States, Pennsylvania, 8 bank Schuylkill, at the junction of Manawary Creek, and on the Schuylkill canal, and the Philadelphia and Reading railway, 25 m. N W Philadelphia. It has several handsome churches, an academy two large boarding-schools, a machine-shop, and a car-factory, a tannery, and several extensive flour and saw mills. Pop. about 3000.

POTTSVILLE, a tn U States, Pennsylvania, 85 m. N W Philadelphia, in the centre of the great anthracite coal-field, at the termination of the Schuylkill canal, and of the Philadelphia, Reading, and Pottsville railway. It occupies a very picturesque site immediately above the gorge where the Schuylkill breaks through Sharp Mountain, and though of very modern origin, having suddenly sprung into existence in consequence of the discovery of its valuable minerals, is now a compact, well-built, stirring place, with five or six churches an academy, a bank, a townhall, and other public buildings. The manufacturing establishments include blast-furnaces, forges, foundries rolling mills, various steam-engines and machinery factories, and building yards, in which a great number of boats and barges for river-navigation are constructed. Pop (1850) 7946.

POU-CROO, a tn China, prov. Shensi, on an affluent of the Hoang Ho. lat. 34 54 N. lon. 110° 18' E.

POULANCE, a tn France, dep. Maine-et-Loire, 16 m. W V. V. Segré with a blast-furnace, and some other iron-works. Pop. 1815.

POUCHING, a tn China, prov. Fokien, in a beautiful valley, on a tributary of the Min, here crossed by a bridge. It is surrounded by walls and ramparts, apparently of a very ancient date, and by extensive suburbs, has much the appearance of a large market town; and carries on a considerable trade in tea. Pop. above 100,000.

POUCQUES, a vil. and com. Belgium, N. Flanders, on a stream of same name, 12 m. W Ghent. It has manufactures of linen, a brewery an oil and two flour mills, dye-works, and several brick-works. Pop. 1522.

POUGHERS, two par. Eng. —1, Cornwall; 1947 ac. Pop. 404 —2, Devon; 1663 ac. Pop. 380.

POUGHKEEPSIE, a tn U States, New York, beautifully situated on a bank, Hudson, on a height which stands 300 ft. above the river and just on the N and S. into two bold promontories, 65 m. N New York city. It was settled by the Dutch in 1735, and laid out with as much regularity as the nature of the ground would admit, and presents altogether a very attractive appearance. Among the public edifices are Dutch Reformed, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Congregational Baptist, Methodist, Universalist, Quaker and E. Catholic churches a courthouse, and other county-buildings, a college school, comprising a handsome building, surrounded by a colonnade, and furnishing a superior education; a county academy also of superior description several female seminaries, and other schools, a lyceum, poorhouse, savings and other banks, &c. The large water-power furnished by the Fallkill has led to the establishment of several extensive works, including a silk and several flour mills, a factory for locomotive engines and railroad machinery, one of the largest breweries in the state, brass and iron foundries, &c. &c. The other manufactures are carpets, guns, pins, candles ploughs, carriages &c. A company, owning a number of vessels engaged in the whale-fishery, manufactures considerable quantities of sperm-oil. Its central position, nearly equidistant from New York and Albany, marked it out as a convenient spot for popular deliberations in the earlier history of the state. The most memorable of these is the Convention of 1788 at which the federal constitution was formally adopted. Pop. (1850) 13,944.

POUILLY-SUR-LOIRE, a tn France, dep. Nièvre, 8 m. S E. E. Cosne, r. bank Loire. It has a considerable trade in an excellent white wine grown in the district, and there are fine limestone quarries in the environs. Pop. 3018.

POUNIPET ISLAND, an isl. N. Pacific, one of the Carolines; lat. 6° 53' N. lon. 156° 24' E. (n.), about 50 m. in circumference, and rising 2558 ft. above sea-level. It is of basaltic formation, and is surrounded by a coral-reef, and fringed with mangroves. The whole island is thickly wooded, and produces many varieties of good timber fit for house, ship building, and other purposes, tree-ferns, bayonet, padecid. and semidecid. The soil is composed of a rich red and black loam, and with indifferent cultivation produces bread wheat, corn, rice, bananas, tobacco, sugar cane, yams, sweet potatoes, pumpkins, tobacco in small quantities, and lava. The manufactured productions include wild ginger and wild oranges. There are no traces of any native quadruped, except rats. The flying fox, or vampire bat, is very plentiful; wild pigeons are numerous, and fish abound on the reefs. The inhabitants, who confine themselves wholly to the coast, are a small, but fierce and resolute race.

POULHET, par Eng. Wiltz; 1669 ac. Pop. 336.

POULTHET, a township, U. States Vermont, on a stream of same name 50 m. S. W. Montpelier. It consists chiefly of the flourishing vils. of E. and W. Poultney which have Congregational Methodist, and Baptist churches, a female academy and other schools; a woolen factory three tanneries, and several saw-mills. Pop. (1860) 3329.

POULTON two pars. Eng. —1 Kent; 590 ac. P. 28. —2, Gloucester; 1160 ac. Pop. 406.

POULTON LE FYLDE a market tn. and par England, co. and 30 m. S. W. Lancaster on the Preston and Fleetwood railway. It is an unincorporated place, has a modern parish church, with an ancient tower, a Wesleyan, and a R. Catholic chapel, a savings bank, and an endowed school. Area of par 20 636 ac. Pop. 7090.

POUMARON a river British Guiana rises in the mountains of Ymatana, flows N. N. E. then N. W. and after a course of about 100 m. falls into the Atlantic, near Cape Nassau uniting with the Marowibo in forming a broad estuary.

POUNDSTOCK, par Eng. Cornwall 4814 ac. P. 651.

POUR, or Pua, two rivers, Siberia. —The one rises in the N. of Gov. Yakutsk, flows E. N. E. and after a course of about 180 m. joins I. bank Olmuk at the town of Makmurava. The other rises in Gov. Tobolsk, about lat. 64° N. flows N. by E. and after a course of above 100 m. falls into the S. W. extremity of the Bay of Turaevsk.

POURGAÏN (St.), a tn. France, dep. Allier, 16 m. N. N. W. Gannat with an ancient church, an hospital, theatre, and a considerable trade in wine, corn, poultry, fish, and cattle. Pop. 8890.

POUSO-ALEMA, a tn. Brazil prov. Minas-Geraes, on a height 230 m. S. E. of Ouro Preto with a church, and several primary schools. Within the district are thermal springs with a bathing-establishment, and several mines in active operation. Much excellent tobacco also is grown, and many cattle are reared for exportation. Pop. dist. 4000.

POUZAUGES, a tn. France, dep. Vendée, 28 m. N. N. W. Fontenay-le-Comte, on the slope of a hill overlooking a rich and magnificent district. It has two churches, a Protestant and a R. Catholic, of the 15th century. Pop. 1181.

POVIGLIO (Latin, Papigium), a tn. Italy and 18 m. E. N. E. Parma. It has an ancient castle, a courthouse, a primary school and a trade in cattle, swine, and wine. P. 6334.

POVOA, several places, Portugal, particularly —1, (de Varma), Prov. Douro, near the sea-coast, about 18 m. from Braga. It is defended by a strong castle, and has a grammar school. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in fishing. Pop. 3300. —2, (de St. Christoval), Prov. Douro, 8 m. N. W. Coimbra, near S. bank Rio. Pop. 510. —3, (de Mendez), A tn. and par, prov. Beira-Baixa, N. Portugal. Pop. 770. 4, (de St. Jo. de Alentejo) A tn. and par, prov. Beira-Baixa, near Castello Branco. Pop. 600.

POVOVIDE, a tn. and par Portugal, prov. Beira-Alta, com. and about 8 m. S. W. Viana. Pop. 1805.

POWDERHAM, par Eng. Devon, 1947 ac. P. 294.

POWELL'S GROUP, or BOOTH OULMER a group of islands, Antarctic Ocean, lat. 60° 37' S. lon. 44° 33' W. and E. of New Zealand. They present a very dreary and almost terrific appearance, being surrounded by immovable icebergs and ice islands, apparently destitute of vegetation, and often covered with many towering peaks. The loftiest of these becomes visible at the distance of 15 leagues.

POWERSCOURT, or STABRINN, a vil. and par Ireland, co. Wicklow, 3 m. W. S. W. Bray, with a handsome modern church, and several schools. Near it is the splendid seat of Viscount Powerscourt. Area, 18,338 ac. Pop. 2458.

POWERSTOCK, or POWERTOCK, par Eng. Dorset, 4676 ac. Pop. 1064.

POWERSTOWN, par Ire. Kildare; 5493 ac. P. 1327.

POWICK, par Eng. Worcester; 5104 ac. Pop. 1834.

POXIM a tn. Brazil, prov. and 46 m. E. Alagoas, S. bank Poizin, here crossed by a bridge about 4 m. from the sea. It has a parish church, and a fertile district. The inhabitants, chiefly Indians in addition to raising the ordinary produce, make large quantities of the oil of nutmegs, of inferior quality. Pop. about 6000.

POXWELL, par Eng. Dorset; 887 ac. Pop. 69.

POYALS, a river and dist. Central America, Mosquito territory with a settlement on the river lat. 15° 10' N. lon. 85° 10' W. The river falls into the Caribbean Sea, between the Platanal river and Cape Camaron. A colony was established in the district in 1819 by a Scotch military officer of the name of Macgregor, which proved unsuccessful, and was finally abandoned in 1826.

POYALES DEL HORO, a tn. Spain, New Castle, prov. and W. N. W. Toledo poorly built, with a church, a townhouse in a dilapidated state, a prison, primary school, and a trade in pimento, oil, and wine. Pop. 1032.

POYNINGS, par Eng. Sussex; 1643 ac. Pop. 261.

POYNDORF or POMBOUR a market tn. Lower Austria, 37 m. N. E. Korneuburg, with a church and saltpetre-works. Pop. 1500.

POZA, a vil. Spain, Old Castile, prov. and 36 m. N. E. Burgos. It has two primary schools, a townhouse an ancient and dilapidated castle on a rock commanding the town, and a church. Near it are also beds of coal, quarries of granite, and salt-mines, agriculture, mule-driving, salt-pans, tanneries, and flour-mills occupy the inhabitants. Pop. 2005.

POZALDEZ, a tn. Spain, Leon, prov. and 8 Valladolid with two churches, a large and substantial courthouse, prison, two primary schools, manufactures of linen, numerous distilleries and a trade in wine and brandy. Pop. 1736.

POZO-ALON, a vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 34 m. E. Jaen. It has a townhouse, three fountains, three schools, a church, and a hermitage. Near it are forests of pine and oak, which supply a considerable quantity of timber for the arsenal at Cadix. There are four flour and three oil mills. Chocolate rice, dried cod, &c. are imported. Pop. 2189.

POZO-ERRANCO a vil. Spain, Murcia, prov. and about 8 m. from Cartagena with a church, primary school, and some trade in agricultural produce. Pop. about 1400.

POZO-HORNO, a vil. Spain, Murcia, prov. and 18 m. S. Albacete, with a townhouse, two elementary schools, a beautiful public well, and a church a flour-mill, and some manufactures of plain linens. Pop. 3820.

POZO-RUBIO a tn. Spain, New Castle, prov. and S. W. Guzman. It is regularly built, has a church, courthouse with prison primary school, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1068.

POZOBLANCO, a tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 34 m. N. Cordova. It has regular and paved streets, an hospital for the sick, a founding hospital a chair of Latin, several primary schools, a townhouse, a flesh market a church, and several hermitages. Bazaes were formerly made here in great quantity there being at one time 400 looms employed, now the number of places annually wrought does not exceed 6000. There are eight dye-works, a manufactory of earthenware and chocolate, several soap works, flour-mills, and oil mills but the greatest portion of the inhabitants are employed in agriculture, and as mechanics. Pop. 3748.

POZZELLO, several places, Spain, particularly —1, A vil. Spain, Murcia, prov. and 15 m. S. W. Albacete, with a primary school a church and a hermitage, three brick and tile works, a pottery, a dye-work, and five flour-mills. Pop. 2746. —2 A vil. and com. Spain, Estremadura, prov. and 45 m. from Ceacres. It is very poorly built, has a church, courthouse, prison, and school manufactures of linen, several oil mills and a trade in oil. Pop. 1434. —3, (de Colares) A vil. New Castle Spain, prov. and 6 m. S. E. Ciudad Real, with a townhouse and prison, a flesh-market, granary, hospital, three schools, a church and manufactory of lace, and oil-mills, and brandy-tillie. Pop. 2740. —4, (del Rey), A tn. New Castle, prov. and E. Madrid, poorly built, with a church, courthouse, prison, school; and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1323.

POZZALLO, a small but thriving seaport, Sicily, prov. Syracuse, dist. and 9 m. S. E. Modica defended by a fort, with a church, a hospital palace, and a small pier, at which much of the produce of the surrounding country is exported.

POZZO DI GOTO a to. Shilly, prov and 17 m. W S W Moulins, on the Grangeville. A little R. are the ruins of Tyn drie. Pop. 2000

POZZOLENGO a vil and com. Italy Lombardy prov
Brescia, 6 m. S. E. Lonato, with a parish church. Pop. 2041

POZZUOLI-POZZOMANO, a tn and com. Sardinian States, div and 80 m. N. W. Genoa, once surrounded by walls, and defended by a strong castle. The latter, an ancient structure of a quadrangular form, surmounted by towers, still exists in tolerable preservation. There are also two parish churches and several schools. Pop. 3721

POZZUOLI [anc. Puteoli] a tn, Naples, prov and 6 m.
W S W Naples, slightly fortified. The only note-worthy modern buildings are the cathedral, two parish churches, and five convents but it is rich in ancient remains, the most remarkable of which are those of the temple of Soraia, interesting not only to the antiquary, but to the geologist, from the unquestioned proofs which they afford of changes in the level of the coast the Colosseum, or amphitheatre, which had the same dimensions as that of Rome, the labyrinth of Ephelus, the bridge of Callisto, &c. The coast forms a natural harbour, which is completely sheltered and an active fishery is carried on. Pozzuoli is the see of a bishop, has a civil court, and a seminary. Near it is the Grotto or cave of the Sybil of Cumae and Mount Solifera, from which great quantities of sulphur are obtained. A fine cement, formed of a reddish volcanic gravel found in the neighborhood, is well known in commerce under the name of Pozzuolana. P. 8000.

POZZUOLI a vil and com. Italy Lombardy prov Milan and 4 m. S. E. Gorgonzola with two churches, and a charitable endowment. Pop. 1257

PHA a vil and com. Italy Piedmont div Genoa near Voltri. It is a large, scattered place, and has several churches.
Pop. 3696.

PRACHATITZ, a tn Bohemia circle Pilsen, on the Zwettbach 22 m. W. W. Budweis. It is walled is an ancient place, with narrow gloomy streets a fine church a townhouse of a venerable and majestic appearance, a court house, superior German school, barracks, and hospital. The staple manufacture is brandy. Pop. 2501

PRACHIN a circle, Bohemia, bounded N. by circle Pilsen and Bernau, E. by circle S. E. Badweis, S. W. Bavaria, and W. Klattau, area. 1244 geo. sq. m. cap. Pisek. In the S. and
S. W. it is covered with lofty hills, in which the Moldau, Wot-awa and a great number of minor streams, take their rise in other directions the surface is flatter and tolerably fertile producing good crops of corn and flax. Wood is abundant, iron is worked, and iron and glass are extensively manufactured.
Pop. 359 324.

PRADAI UNGA a vil and com. Italy Lombardy prov and G. m. S. E. Bergamo, 1 hour S. E. Serio, with a handsome church, tile works, lunekilas, and numerous quarries for making excellent whetstones. Pop. 1201

PRADANOS DE OREDA, a vil and com. Spain, Leon, prov and about 45 m. from Palencia with a church, court house, and primary school manufactures of cloth, and a trade in it and in agriculture produce. Pop. 1068.

PRADES a tn, France, dep. Pyrénées-Orientales, r. bank
Tet, in a rich and verdant valley, 24 m. W. S. W. Perpignan.
It has a large and handsome church a court of first resort, a communal college, a secondary ecclesiastical school and an hospital, manufactures of woollen cloth, molasses, leather and gray paper and a trade in corn, fruit wine, flax, hemp, horses, mules, cattle, fine wool, &c. Pop. 2690

PRADO a small tn and seaport, Brazil, prov Bahia, 120 m. S. Porto-Seguro. It has a church, a primary school and a harbor defended at its entrance. The chief article of trade is manioc root. Pop. dec. 2000

PRADO -1. A to and par. Portugal, prov Minho, 8 m.
N. W. Braga, on the Cávado, in which there is here a considerable salmon and trout fishery. The chief manufacture is earthenware. -2. A tn, Brazil, prov Para, 55 m. W. Montealegre.

PRADO (El) a vil, Spain, New Castile, prov and 85 m.
S. W. Madrid, with a townhouse, a primary school, and a church in the vicinity are papermills and oil-mills. Pop. 5074.

PRADO DE MIER a vil, Spain, Andalusia, prov and 54 m. from Cadix, with a church and an elementary school.
The neighbourhood is very sterile. Pop. 1143.

PRADOLUENGO, a tn Spain, Old Castile, prov and 30 m. S. E. Burgos, with a church, court house, and primary school, several mills, and a trade in wool and in cattle. P. 1390.

PRADOS, or SAN JUAN SANTULIANO, a vil, and par.
Spain, Asturias, prov and scarcely 1 m. N. Oviedo, with a very ancient church, a primary school, manufactures of leather, and flour-mills. Pop. 1400.

PRAGA, a tn, Poland, r. bank Vistula, opposite to Warsaw of which it may be considered a suburb, and with which it commences by a bridge of boats. The Russians took it by assault in 1794, and made it almost a heap of ruins, but it has since been rebuilt in an improved form, and now contains many handsome streets and buildings.

PRAGUE [Bohemian, Praha German, Prag, Latin, Praga, or Moravia], the cap. of Bohemia, near the centre of the kingdom, on both sides of the Moldau, here crossed by a remarkable stone bridge of 16 arches, and also by a chain bridge, 158 m. N. W. Vienna, with which and with Dresden it is connected by railway. Its site is a regular basin, cut in two by the river, from the banks of which on either side the houses run in succession the upper tier, all they are terminated and inclosed by hills of considerable height. When viewed from the bridge, no city in Germany surpasses Prague in the grandeur of its appearance. The town is inclosed

PRAGUE.—From Albrecht's Monuments in Perspective.

by a wall and a fosse, and defended by extensive outworks, but its natural position suits it for being a strong fortress, and the hills which command it on all sides seem to render it incapable of offering a successful resistance. It consists of four quarters, two on each side of the river: the Altstadt and Neustadt on the right, and the Kleinseite and Essel-schin on the left bank, and is entered by eight gates, of which only two called the Kalescher and Brunnthor, bear any architectural merit. The Wysehrad, immediately to the S. of the town, and properly its citadel, is sometimes regarded as a fifth quarter. The only suburb is that of Karolinenthal.
The Altstadt, which, as its name implies, is the oldest part of the town, lies along the r. bank towards the S. Its streets are narrow but being the principal seat of trade and business, and the special locality of the Jews, contains some of the best and most showy shops. The Neustadt includes the Alschin on the N. E., S. E., and S. W. It was originally separated from it by walls and a ditch, which has been filled up.

Though never than the other. It is still very ancient, having been built by the emperor Charles IV in 1348. It is not the scene of so much activity as the Altstadt, but its streets are wider. On the opposite side the Kleinseite, occupying the bank and the N. portion, is the aristocratic quarter the chosen abode of the Bohemian nobles, and the site of several remarkable palaces. The only other quarter, the Hradčín in the W and S. of the Kleinseite, occupies the side of a steep hill is of less extent, and contains far fewer houses than any of the others, but perhaps surpasses them all in interest in consequence of the public edifices which it contains. When the whole quarters are taken together they form a town which, in respect of extent, magnificence, and historical interest, is not unworthy of being the capital of a great, though now to all intents a dependent kingdom. The principal public edifices are the old castle, or palace of the Bohemian kings, situated in the Hradčín, containing 400 apartments, one of them a Gothic hall, in which the Bohemian nobles swear allegiance to their sovereign after his coronation, and finely situated on a commanding height the cathedral also in the Hradčín a structure somewhat shapeless from having never been completed and much dilapidated by the injuries which it sustained from the halls of Frederick the Great during the Seven Years war but rich in Gothic ornament, and containing in its monuments, sculptures, and paintings, a perfect museum of church-art; the Clementine, close to the bridge on the Altstadt, a huge pile which extends into several streets, containing a series of magnificent halls, in the richest style of Italian architecture, partly used as lecture-rooms in connection with the seminary under the superintendence of the archbishop, and partly occupied by a library of 180,000 vols. and 3700 MSS.; the Carolinum, or University of not much interest as a building, but remarkable as the first great public school established in Germany and through Huss, who was for some time its rector, the earliest cradle of the Reformation; the Theatinerkirche a Gothic church, historically interesting as the place where the Bohemian sect made George Prebisher their king and to some still more interesting as containing the grave of the celebrated astronomer Tycho Brahe, who spent his last years and died at Prague; the palace of Wallenstein, built by that generalissimo of the Thirty Years war when he was first dismissed from the imperial service originally a structure of great magnificence but now much dilapidated. The Alte Rathhaus (old townhall), an irregular Gothic edifice of the 15th century, with a dungeon beneath in which the emperor Wenzel IV was confined for 15 weeks; the old synagogue of the Jews, probably an ancient in date as the end of the 12th century; the military hospital which is a large and magnificent edifice, originally erected by the Jesuits as a college, the theatre the opera, considered one of the best in Germany, the national museum, museum of natural history picture gallery &c. The manufactures consist of gold and silver embroidery, silk, woollen cotton, and linen goods, buttons, hats, paper, soap, refined sugar vinegar, liqueurs, refined milk, quills, sugar of lead, stearine and tallow candles, machines, musical and mathematical instruments, firearms, porcelain, fine and imitation jewellery. The trade is of great importance. Prague owing to its central position its situation on the Moldau, which secures it a free communication with the Elbe, and to its facilities of transport by roads and railway, being the great entrepot for all the traffic of the kingdom. It has also several important fairs, particularly one for wool which lasts seven days, and during which a great amount of business is done; that of St. Wenceslaus, the old patron saint of Bohemia; and that of St. John Nepomuk, who was thrown from the bridge of Prague by king Wenceslaus, for refusing to reveal what his queen had told him in confession though these two are rather religious festivals than fairs, and are more crowded with devotees than dealers.

Prague is one of the oldest towns in the kingdom, and is supposed to have been founded in the 8th century, but its history does not become important till the middle of the 14th century. At that time the university, the first which Germany possessed, was founded, and soon acquired such celebrity, that it was resorted to from all quarters of Europe, and is said to have had at one time the almost incredible number of 40,000 students. The spirit of free inquiry thus encouraged soon produced its fruits, and under the zealous teaching of Huss and Jerome, some of the grossest occupations of the church of Rome were boldly attacked, and the germs of the Reformation rapidly developed. Fierce struggles ensued, and were carried on for centuries with varying success, but ultimately persecution did no work, and Protestantism, after having been repeatedly in the ascendant, and on the eve of victory has been all but extinguished. In more modern times Prague has been the theatre of important transactions, and great battles have been fought in its neighbourhood. It has also been repeatedly besieged, and in several of the public edifices still bear marks of its unsuccessful bombardment by the Prussians under Frederick the Great in 1758. Pop (1846) 115,488.

PRAHUTIA a tn. Turkey in Europe, Roumelia, 70 m. N.E. E. Salonica; with about 500 houses inclosed by a wall 16 ft. high. It has manufactures of leather and foundries, &c. which cannon are cast for the Ottoman fleet.

PRATIL-PU-CHEN a tn. U. States, Wisconsin, 8 m. N. Milwaukee, 8 m. above the confluence of the Wisconsin, in a beautiful prairie, about 10 m. long by 2 m. wide, about 180 m. W. Milwaukee. It has six churches, an academy, courthouse, and jail and rich copper-mines in which large masses of pure copper are found. Pop. 2498.

PRALBOIN, or PRATO ALBOINO a tn. and com. Italy, Lombardy prov. Brescia dist. and 7 m. S. Lenno, 1 bank Mella with two churches and an extensive factory, in which all kinds of linen and cotton prints table-cloths, table-napkins, carpets &c. of excellent quality are made. P. 2487.

PRALOGNAN PALAY a vil. and com. France, dep. Savoie div. Tarantaise, 12 m. S.E. Moutiers. It is poorly built, but has some valuable minerals, and a trade in good cheese. Pop. 1043.

PRALORMO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. and 16 m. S.E. Turin with a church a fine castle, and a free school. Pop. 1116.

PRAMOLLO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Turin prov. Cuneo, near San Secondo with two churches two charitable associations and seven schools. Pop. 1414.

PRAPHOSINO a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Turin prov. Cuneo 1 m. from San Secondo with a Protestant and a R. Catholic church, and seven Protestant schools. Inhabitants mostly Waldenses. Pop. 1575.

PRASCOSSANO a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont div. Turin prov. and about 16 m. W. S.W. Ivrea with a church, a confraternity, and four oratories. Pop. 1494.

PRASLIN an archipelago in the Gulf of the Seychelles lat. 4° 17' 18" S., lon. 50° 44' 19" E. with an excellent harbour well sheltered by small islands from every wind. The interior is lofty, mountainous and covered with trees. The French took formal possession of the island in 1768, but did not form any settlement on it.

PRASTOE (Lat. Præstigelesse) a tn. and seaport, Denmark in Zealand cap. bail and on a bay of same name, 43 m. S.E.W. Copenhagen. It has a spacious church and a good winter haven of the fourth class, which enables it to carry on some trade. Pop. 850. The railway area, 488 sq. m., includes the Mian area, 64 sq. m. Pop. 78,900.

PRAT DE L'LOMBARD (Elva), a tn. Spain Catalonia, prov. and about 4 m. from Barcelona, near the Llobregat with a church courthouse, prison, and primary school. Pop. 1615.

PRATA two places, Naples—1. A vil., prov. Principato Ultra, 4 m. S. Montesano. Pop. 1790—2. A tn., prov. Lavoro, W.N.W. Piedmont, with two parish churches, and a convent. Pop. 1350.

PRATAS, a cluster of islands and rocks of considerable extent, China Sea. lat. 38° 56' N., lon. 116° 45' E. stretching about 18 m. N. to E. and 9 m. to 12 m. E. to W.

PRATDIP a vil. Spain Catalonia, prov. and 14 m. Terragona with a church courthouses, prison school, manufactures of articles in paper and glass, oil and flour mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1600.

PRATO a tn. Tuscany, 11 m. N.W. Florence, in a fertile plain, 8 m. S. Sesto. It is surrounded by ancient walls, has suburbs, and is a well built, cheerful-looking place. It has a court of justice, and several public offices, a beautiful cathedral begun by Nicolo Pisano, and completed after his design in 1480, with a facade, furnishing a beautiful specimen of Italian Gothic, three other churches, seven monasteries, of which two only are occupied; numerous nunneries, an old castle, an ancient pretorium [Palazzo Pre-torio) now converted into a prison, a college or ecclesiastical seminary called after its founder Giordano, and adorned with a fine Italian front, a public library, a theatre, and several hospitals, and extensive manufactures of woollen, cotton, silk, and mixed goods, straw hats, paper, and articles in brass. Pop. (1855) 11 548.

PRATO-VECCHIO (anc. Pratum Vetus), a vil and com. Tuscany, 1 bank Arno, 35 m. E. Florence with a court of justice, a church a school manufactures of various articles in wood and a trade in corn wine, silk, and cattle. P 8920 PRATOLA, a vil. Naples, prov. Abruzzo Ultra II N W Salerno. Pop. 5800.

PRATS-DE-LAUNAS a tn. Spain Catalonia, prov. and 40 m N N W Barcelona, with two churches, a primary school, manufactures of cotton and woollen goods, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1827

PRATS-DE-MOLLO a fortified tn. France, dep. Pyrénées-Orientales 15 m W S W Carc. r bank Tech. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre, the top of which is occupied by the parish church and has manufactures of woollen cloth, stockings, woollen hosiery and whip-heads, called pergamans. Near it are the thermal springs of Prats, with a good bathing establishment. Pop. 1067

PRATTELN a vil and par. Switzerland, can Basel-Landschaft, 6 m. E. E. Basel. It is well built, and has a church and an old castle, now used as a poorhouse. P 1124

PRATTYVILLE a vil U. States, New York 43 m S W Albany with three churches, an academy nine schools a cotton and two woollen factories a machine-shop, two ferries, and extensive tanneries. Pop. 1800

PRÄUSNITZ, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 18 m. N W W Breslau, with a castle, a Protestant, and two R. Catholic churches, a synagogue, and two hospitals manufactures of cotton and woollen cloth, and several mills. Pop. 2000

PRÄUSNITZ, two places, Bohemia — 1 (Schmuck), A. vil. circle Bistchof 8 m. from Arns in a straggling place, with a church. P 2050 — 2 (Deutsch) A vil circle Königgrätz, near extensive forests. It has a church and a mill. P 1320

PREAST a vil E. Prussia gov. and 6 m S Danzig, on the Radama with a Protestant church and a mill. P 1131

PREAYLA a tn and par. Spain Asturias prov. and 14 m N W Oviedo, with a church and a beautiful hermitage, a large townhouse and prison, a primary school, manufactures of linen and several flour mills. Pop. 1612

PREAZA (Port) a tn., vil. Santiago one of the Cape Verde lat. 14 54 N lon 23° 30' 45" W (n.) prettily situated on an elevated place of table-land. The streets, though wide, are extremely filthy as are also the houses, most of which are built of stone and white-washed. It has a chapel, jail, and barracks, and in the centre of the town is a large public square. The fort, which flanks the town, is almost entirely in decay. A market is held daily when any vessels are in port, in which a great variety of tropical fruits and vegetables are exposed for sale, but not in great quantity. Pop. 2300

PREAZZO a vil and com. Italy Piedmont div. and 24 m W Cune on the Macra, with a court of justice, a church a handsome cranny and a trade in cattle and dairy produce.

PRE-SAN-DIPIER, a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div. and 18 m N W Aosta, at the foot of Mont Blanc, with a handsome square, one side of which is occupied by the parish church, and the other by well built houses, chiefly for the use of the visitors to the baths, which are in the vicinity, and are much frequented. Pop. 1009

PREANGEN-RESENKUN, a prov. Java S coast, bounded N by provs. Buitenzorg, Arawang, and Cheribon, E. Banjoeang, and W. Bantam 165 m. long, E to W by 25 m to 70 m. broad. It is one of the largest and most populous provinces of Java. It is composed of what were formerly five separate governments, and is now divided into four districts, corresponding with their older divisions, namely, Pangeran, Banteng, Boedjoeang, and Boekapoen and Lembang. Part of its S frontier is composed of a range of lofty mountains, in which are the volcanic peaks of Gedeh and Pangrango, 9668 ft. (see Gunung) and it is traversed centrally, N W to S. E., by another mountain range, in which the volcanoes of Popo-dayang and Oemboet (which see), and the lofty peak of Tjikoro, 9168 ft. high numerous offices convert the large valleys thus formed into subsidiary ones, watered by numerous streams and small lakes. There are extensive forests; the chief cultivated product is coffee, besides which large quantities of indigo, tobacco, and cigars, are exported; and also a considerable quantity of plank, rattan, and wene rice, &c. The imports are cottons, linens, silks, sugar, tea, salt, dried fish gambier iron, steel copper, earthenware, &c. Pop. (1845) 700 000

PREBAN par. Ital. Wicklow 4363 ac. Pop. 738.

PRECHIEUR (Lx) a seaport tn. West Indies, S. W. shore, Isl. Martinique, 5 m. N W St. Pierre, with a church a considerable fishery and export of sugar. Pop. 8108.

PRECOIGNE a tn. France, dep. Sarthe, 18 m N W La Flèche with a secondary ecclesiastical school manufactures of coarse woollens and near it a mineral spring. Pop. 1566.

PRADPRIATIE-KAIBERA, or AKAHARA, a lagoon Isl. S. Pacific Ocean, lat 15° 58' 18" S. lon 140° 11' 30" W, about 4 m long, E. N. E. to W. S. W.

PREEN CHURCH, par. Eng. Salop, 1050 ac. Pop. 77

PREES, par. Eng. Salop, 1466 ac. Pop. 8196.

PREEZ or POBERT, a vil. Denmark, duchy Holsten, on the Schwansee, over which are two bridges, and between two small lakes, 5 m. E. S. E. Kiel. It has a fine cloister, now converted into a foundation for orphaned ladies of noble birth a church, justly regarded as one of the first in the duchy an orphan asylum, and a poorhouse and manufactures of shoes and linen. 1 op 4750

PREGEL, a river Prussia, which is formed in prov. E. Prussia, by the junction of the Pisse and Angerap, about 4 m. above the town of Gumbinnen, flows almost due W past Osterburg, Wahlen, and Königsberg and about 8 m. below the last town, falls into the N. E. extremity of the Frische-Haff total course, about 90 m. A bar at its mouth greatly impedes its navigation, but it carries small vessels up to Königsberg, and the canal of Dalmie in connection with the small river of that name, gives a communication with the Curische-Bay PREIGNAC, a tn. France, dep. Gironde, 31 m S. E. Bordeaux in district famous for its white wine, 1 bank Garonne. It has a handsome public square. Pop. 1814.

PREJANO a tn. Spain Old Castile, prov. and 80 m. S. E. Logroño, with two churches, townhouses, school, small hospital manufactures of linen, a distillery, an oil and a flour mill. Pop. 1008

PRELAUTSCH or PRELAUTZ a tn. Bohemia, circle and 14 m. W. W. Chrudin 1 bank Elbe with a church school, townhouse, hospital and barracks. Pop. 1590

PREMEIRA ISLANDS — 1 The most S. of the long chain of isls., extending along Angola, E. Africa, Mosambique Channel. They are small, and surrounded with reefs with passages between them about lat. 17° S. lon. 39° 30' E. — 2, A group of rocks on the Malabar coast, lat. 12° 11' N lon 74° 35' E. (n.)

PREMERET, a tn. France, dep. Nièvre, and 28 m. S. E. Cosne. It has a blast furnace and a foundry several large forges, manufactures of tiles, bricks, and lime, and some trade in iron wood and leather. Pop. 1113.

PREMIA DE MAR or PREMIA DE ABAYO, a vil. and com. Spain Catalonia, prov. and about 8 m. from Barcelona with a parish church, a primary school, courthouse, prison, manufactures of coarse linen goods and lace. Pop. 1115

PREMITI, a small tn. European Turkey Albania, 1 bank Vojutina, 50 m. S. E. E. Valona with a Turkish mader.

PRENNAY, par. Scot. Aberdeen 4 m. by 1 m. P 798.

PRENDERGAST par. Wales, Pembrokeshire 1104 ac. Pop. 1478

PRENEFFALU, PRENEFFO, or PRENECO, a vil. Hungary, Bithersburg, com. Honch, 5 m. from Szekesvar, with a church, a transit trade, and trade in corn. Pop. 1104.

PRENN a tn. Russian Poland, 1 bank Niemen, 26 m. E. N. E. Marnast with a dilapidated castle, glass-works, and a paper-mill. Pop. 1124.

PRENELAU, or PRENELOW, a tn. Prussia, gov. Posen, 57 m N by E. Berlin on the clech, at the N. extremity of Lake Ucker, where the river Oder issues from the lake. It is divided by the river into the old and the new town, and is defended by two forts, and entered by four gates. It is generally well built, and contains seven churches, one of them a handsome Gothic structure; a synagogue, gymnasium, poorhouse, and five hospitals. The manufactures consist of fine and coarse woollen cloth, linen and cotton goods, straw hats, leather, and tobacco. There are also dye-works and distilleries. The trade is chiefly in tobacco, begun here, in 1806, after the battle of Jena, a corps of the Prussian army, commanded by Prince Hohenzollern, was compelled to surrender. Pop. 12,751. —The climate, area, 1837 geo. sq. m., is of a light sandy flat, poorly wooded, and by no means fertile. Pop. 62,404.

PREPARIS ISLES, a cluster of small isles, between the Andamans and Cape Negrais, the S W extremity of Burmah lat. 14° 50' N. long. 98° 25' E.

PREPAU, or PREPAU, a th. Bohemia, cap. circle on the Betschka, 15 m. S.E. Olmitz with an old castle, two churches, a synagogue, hospital, and townhouse. It was the last town which remained in the hands of the Hapsburgs. Pop. 3,400. —The climate area, 1837 geo. sq. m., is rather hilly, but generally fertile, producing good crops of corn and containing excellent pastures. The principal manufactures are woollens. Pop. 399,000.

PRESEA, a lake, Turkey in Europe, Albania, about 9 m. W. dist of Ochrida. It is 7 m. long by 3 m. broad, has several small isles, one of which is a monastery, and receives the Bema-su on the N., but has no visible outlet. A small town of same name stands on its W. shore.

PRESCOT, a market tn. and par. England, co. Lancaster, 8 m. E. Liverpool. It is long and straggling, and stands principally upon a substratum of coal, several mines of which are connected to its very edge. It has an ancient church, places of worship for Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, Independents, and Unitarians, a free school, and several other charities, a townhall, session-house, prison, gas-works, and a mechanics institute. Prescott has long been noted for the manufacture of watch-houls, as also pieces of the watch called movement-work, together with the hands, and other more minute and delicate parts of the mechanism. The drawing of pin-wire originated here and small files of superior excellence are made, and exported in large quantities. The other manufactures are coarse earthenware, which has been long extensively carried on, glass-bottles, nail and rope making. There are also a tannery, and several breweries. The Liverpool and Manchester railway passes about 1 m. S. from the town. Area of par. 36,554 ac. Pop. of tn., 46,527.

PRESCOTT, a tn. Upper Canada, esp. co. Granville, on a rising ground above the St. Lawrence, across which, here about 1½ m. broad, there is a steam ferry to the U. States town Ogdensburg. It has Episcopal, Free, Methodist, and R. Catholic churches, a custom-house, and a considerable export of pot and pearl ash, but its trade has not increased much since the opening of the Rideau canal led the traffic into a new channel. Pop. (1852), 3186.

PRESEGLIE, a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy prov. and 18 m. N. E. Besen, with a cloth manufacture of linen and bast, and a trade in wool and shagreen. Pop. 1254.

PRESHUTE par. Eng. Wilts., 1830 ac. Pop. 1227.

PRESEIDIO DE RIO-JOJO BAPTISTA, a tn. Brazil prov. Minas-Geraes, 110 m. N.E. Ozo-Proto. It contains a court of justice, and a church and within its district cultivate sugar-cane, millet, and horseradish distilla rum, and rear great numbers of swine. Pop. dist. 4000.

PRESEIDIO, a tn. U. States, Texas, about 8 m. from L. bank Rio-Grande, opposite to the point where the Mexican bank is occupied by a town of same name, and about 30 m. from Fort Danvers. It is the only place of any extent between that fort and Fort McKenna, and has a garrison of 200 men, and 3000 inhabitants.

PRESELEN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 36 m. E. Mons; with a paper and a flour mill and a trade in cattle and agricultural produce. It is supposed to be the locality where Julius Caesar, A.D. 57 defeated the Nervii, of whom 60,000 perished. Pop. 949.

PRESEBATH, a market in Bavaria, circle Oberpfalz, on a height, L. bank Maindonau, here crossed by a bridge S.E.

Salzeth with three churches and a castle, manufacture of stone-ware, and several mills. Near it is the extensive forest of same name. Pop. 1566.

PRESEBURG, PRESEBURG or POCORT a tn. Hungary, esp. on 85 m. E. Varna, L. bank Danube, which here divides into several branches, and is crossed by a flying bridge. The site of the town is remarkably fine, being in the form of a semicircle, bounded on the S. by the Danube from the banks of which it gradually ascends to the W. and N. towards ramifications of the Carpathians while an extensive plain, covered with gardens, meadows and cornfields, forms its boundary on the E. In the town itself there is not much to attract attention. The fortifications have been dismantled and the streets are for the most part narrow and steep and only partially paved. The houses, however, are solidly built of brick or stone, and of two or three stories, and some of them particularly in the suburbs, are very handsome. The edifices most deserving of notice, are the Royal Palace, on a height which overlooks the town a building once of great magnificence, and still rich in historical recollections, but accidentally destroyed by fire in 1811 and not since repaired the Landhaus or hall of the Diet in which the chambers of the kingdom meet, a plain structure the cathedral a huge Gothic pile, with a lofty steeple, and less remarkable as a church than as the place where the kings of Hungary are crowned the Capuchin, Franciscan, and Ursula monasteries, each with a handsome church attached the Jesuit church, townhouse, theatre, bishop's palace, orphan hospital and barracks. The manufactures consist of wool, silk, alks, leather and tobacco. The trade, particularly transit, is extensive. Presburg is a place of very great antiquity and had acquired some importance even before the country was subjugated by the Romans. In after times it became the capital of Hungary, and retained the honour till the emperor Joseph II. transferred it to Buda. The peace by which Austria ceded Vindobona to France, and the Tyrol to Bavaria, was concluded here in 1805. Pop. (1846), 40,300. —The country area, 1818 geo. sq. m. is traversed by part of the Carpathian chain in the N., but in other directions is flat and tolerably fertile, though in several quarters covered with marshes. It is watered by the Danube March, Waag, and Danubius and yields corn and hay; excellent wine is obtained, and abundance of wood. The inhabitants consist of Magyars, Germans, and Slovaks, and are almost all R. Catholics. Pop. 804,600.

PRESEBURG — From Page's Sketch in Hungary and Transylvania.

PRESENYE, PRESENYE, or PRESENYE, a mining tn. Bohemia, circle and 10 m. W. N. W. Saz, with two churches, a castle, townhouse, and school manufactures of lace, fireworks, and knitting wires, and numerous mills. Pop. 5127.

PRESTBURY two pars. Eng. —1 Chester 68,122 ac. Pop. 59,365 —2, Gloucester, 2073 ac. Pop. 1514.

PRESTEIGNE a par. bar. market tn. and par. S. Wales, co. and 6 m. E. by N. Radnor & bank Leg. It contains a very handsome sheep-hall, a church of great antiquity, and several dissenting chapels. It has a manufacture, but a considerable quantity of milk is made, and there is some trade in timber. Area of par., 7459 ac. Pop. 473.

PRESTON, or PRINCESTON, a town. Schuylkill, strale Khat-ten, 12 m. S. Pottsville; 12 m. S. Pottsville, town school, and several mills. Pop. 1850.

PRESTON, par. Scot. See PRESTON, or PRINCESTON.
PRESTON, par. Scot. England—1, Gloucester
1790 ac. Pop. 216.—2, Gloucester; 684 ac. Pop. 60.—
3, Dorset 8577 ac. Pop. 711.—4, Rutland; 980 ac. Pop.
526.—5, Suffolk; 1981 ac. Pop. 385.—6, Sussex; 1236 ac.
Pop. 635.—7, York (E. Riding); 6170 ac. Pop. 1688.—8,
(West Riding); 3413 ac. Pop. 284.—9, (Bucks) Warwick;
1808 ac. Pop. 319.—10, (Hants) Dorset; 1840 ac. Pop.
554.—11, (Gloucester) Northampton; 2280 ac. Pop. 843.—
12, (Sussex) Northampton; 1470 ac. Pop. 65.—13, (Dorset)
Sussex; 609 ac. Pop. 310.—14, (Sussex) Dorset; 1840 ac.
Pop. 554.—15, (Gloucester) Rutland; 2281 ac. Pop.
888.—16, (York) York (W. Riding); 13,312 ac. Pop. 1841
—17, (Gloucester) Somerset; 790 ac. Pop. 329.—18, (Sussex)
Gloucester; 1890 ac. Pop. 421.—19, (Sussex) West
Sussex; 1057 ac. Pop. 235.—20, (Sussex) West; Kent, 1478 ac. Pop. 642.—21, (Sussex) West; Hereford; 1879 ac.
Pop. 349.

PRESTON, a town and market in England on Lancashire, 25 m. N. E. Liverpool, agreeably situated on a height above r bank Ribbles, near the head of its estuary and on the North Union, and several other branch railways. It consists of four principal and a great number of minor streets. The former though irregularly formed are spacious, and provided with side passages, flagged and one of them, called Fairgreen, nearly 1 m. long contains many handsome buildings and well-furnished shops. The houses are almost all substantially built of brick and the whole town is well lighted with gas. The environs of the town exhibit much pleasing scenery are adorned with numerous handsome villas, and furnish several fine public walks. Of these the most frequented is Avenue walk, which has been well laid out, at the expense of the corporation.

The ecclesiastical edifices include 10 churches and 30 Dissenting chapels. Among the former, Christ Church is admired for the purity of its Norman and the parish church is now (1853) being rebuilt in the Decorated style of the 14th century, with a spire 195 ft. high. Among the Dissenting chapels are five R. Catholic, one of which, not yet completed, prominent to be the most splendid place of worship in Preston, three Baptist two Independent, two Wesleyan Methodist and one each, Huntington Methodist, Primitive Methodist, Associate Methodist, Primitive Episcopalian, Swedenborgian, and Unitarian. The Moravian or Latter-Day Saints have also a place of meeting. The other more important buildings are the town hall a handsome brick edifice in the centre of the town, with a tower and dome, courthouse, well situated, and built in the Doric style the house of correction the custom-house, corn exchange, extensive barracks, workhouse, theatre, assembly rooms, two bridges, one of them a handsome structure of five arches and a magnificent railway viaduct, spanning the river.

The scholastic and literary establishments include a free grammar-school occupying a spacious stone structure, in the collegiate style the blue-coat, commercial or sundry, and various national and infant schools; the literary and philosophical institution, occupying an elegant building in the Tudor style, and provided with a library and museum the mechanics institute, or institution for the diffusion of knowledge, accommodated in a handsome Grecian edifice, and justly regarded as one of the greatest ornaments of the place, and various public libraries. The benevolent institutions include several benefit and provident institutions, a dispensary ladies charity, reading and Samaritan societies, &c.

The original staple manufacture of the town was linen, which is still woven to some extent, but has been completely eclipsed by that of cotton, which first introduced in 1775 now employs fifty-four mills for spinning and weaving, and mutually consumes about 150,000 bales of cotton. The other principal mills are six for worsted, two for flax, and a large steam saw-mill. There are also several machine-shops on an extensive scale, iron and brass foundries, breweries and malting establishments, roperies, tanneries, &c. The hatterer employed in the various mills and workshops has been estimated, on a calculation including only engines above eight horse-power, at 3515. The trade is greatly stimulated by the river, which, by means of dredging and many extensive improvements, has been rendered navigable, at ordinary springs, for vessels of 800 tons, at Preston quays, where extensive loading warehouses have been erected; and also by extensive railway communication, by which the town has been brought into immediate connection with the most important inland localities. The principal imports are corn from Ireland, from Scotland, and timber from the Baltic and America. In 1851 the vessels registered at the port were, 116 sailing vessels, carrying 6812 tons, and 6 steamers, carrying 541 tons, in 1856 the numbers were, 115 sailing vessels, of 6390 tons and 6 steamers of 437 tons. In the coasting trade 450 vessels (24,801 tons) entered, and 540 (30,260 tons) cleared in the foreign trade the number of vessels entered was 11 (1178 tons) and cleared 9 (1001 tons).

Preston dates its foundation from a very early period, and is said to have risen on the decay of Ribchester, the Roman Rigodunum, situated about 11 m. further up the river. Its name, originally Priesteston it owed to the number of religious houses which it contained in history genuine fragments of interest. About 800 it was a Saxon settlement; in 1023 it was taken and burnt down by Robert Bruce; in 1080 in first parish church was built; in the great civil war it was espoused the Royalist cause, and suffered severely during the contest, having been twice captured by the Parliamentarians, who, on the latter occasion were headed by Cromwell in person in the rebellion of 1715 it was occupied by the Jacobite forces who erected batteries and made a brave resistance, but were ultimately obliged to surrender at discretion; in that of 1745 the Highlanders, headed by the Pretender, passed through Preston, both on their march to London and on their retreat. It became a burgh by prescription, but obtained the confirmation or extension of its privileges by no fewer than thirteen royal charters the first from Henry II. and the last from Charles II. It returns two members to Parliament, and is governed by a mayor 11 other aldermen and 36 councillors. The only native of the town deserving of special mention is Sir Richard Blackwall, the inventor of the "swimming-jump." Pop. 1851, 59,450.

PRESTON, a town. Upper Canada, co. Waterloo with a Lutheran and a R. Catholic church, a flour-mill, distillery, pottery, manory and three breweries inhabitants chiefly Germans. Pop. (1852) 1180.

PRESTON, a town. U. States, America, Connecticut, on the Thames and Quinebaug 40 m. S. E. Hartford. It has a Congregational and a Baptist church, several saw and flour mills a cotton factory and a tannery. Pop. 1865.

PRESTONKIRK, par. Scot. Haddington 7 m. by 4 m. Pop. 1894.

PRESTONPANS, a town and par. Scotland, co. Haddington on the North British railway and near S. shore Forth of Forth, where it possesses a small harbor with about 10 ft. water at spring-tides. It has a plain, substantial parish and a Free church a parochial school, an hospital occupying a handsome building, and endowed by James Schaw for the maintenance and education of 24 poor boys manufacturers of pottery and earthenware, extensive stone-works and salt-works, a distillery a brewery which has long been celebrated for its ale, and valuable oyster fisheries. In the immediate vicinity was fought the famous battle, in which the Highlanders, headed by the Pretender, aggrandy the royal troops commanded by Sir John Cope; when Colonel Gardiner lost his life. Area of par. 2½ m. by 1 m. Pop. 2125.

PRESTONKIRK-CUM-OLDHAM, par. Scot. See OLDHAM.

PRESTONKIRK or PRINCESTON, a town of barony, Scotland, co. and N. E. Ayr. It is a very ancient but decayed place, with its tower, council-house, and prison and an ancient church, now dilapidated, which serves as a landmark for vessels navigating the Forth of Clyde. Pop. 1860.

PRESTONKIRK, par. Eng. Lancashire; 4730 ac. P. 945.

PRETO, three rivers, Brazil—1, River in N. slope of a branch of the Cordillera of Mantiqueira, prov. Minas-Geraes, flows E., and unites with the Barro in forming the Parahyba, total course, 150 m.—2, River in the S. E. of prov. Goyaz, flows W. N. W., and joins r. bank Maranhão; total course, 180 m.—3, River in the Serra-de-Figueras, prov. Bahia, flows S. E. 45 m., and joins l. bank Grande, 150 m. above its junction with the Rio-Prado; total course, 100 m.

PRETTIN, a tn Prussia Saxony gov and E. N. E. Meuseburg, r bank Elbe, with a trade in cattle, flax, and wool. Pop. 1420

PRETZSCH, a tn Prussia Saxony, gov and 44 m N. E. Meuseburg, l bank Elbe, with a church a castle, and a famous asylum. Pop. 1100

PREUILLY (L'et. Préville) a tn. France, dep. Indre-et-Loire, 19 m. S. E. W. Loches, on the Cluse. It has several forges. Pop. 2068

PREUSSISCH HOLLAND, a tn E. Prussia, gov and 56 m S. W. Königsberg cap. circle on a height above the little river Weeske with a Protestant church, castle, and hospital, manufactures of cloth, and several mills. P. 8465

—The climate, area, 254 sq. m., is flat, and generally fertile. Pop. 35,400

PREYBIA, a fortified maritime tn. European Turkey, about 1 m within the Gulf of Aris, lat. 38° 55' 10" N. lon. 39° 44' E. It lies along the shore, having a fine plain to the N. studded with houses, and interspersed with plantations of olives. The streets are narrow uneven, and often unpaved, and the houses are chiefly constructed of wood, or built out of the adjoining ruins of Sinopolis. It has no manufactures, and little trade. The bay is divided by a neck or isthmus of land which reaches half the way across. Pop. 4000

PREZEM PAUL, a tn France, dep. and 31 m E. N. E. Mayenne, with manufactures of woollen covers, and a considerable trade in cattle. Pop. 1153

PRIBILLA a tn Prussia, gov and 7 m Hungary Hither Danube, on Laptas and 41 m N. E. Neuau. Near it are extensive forests, in which bears abound and several saw mills. Pop. 1622

PRIBYLOFF, a group of small isls. N. Pacific Ocean N. from the Aleutian Islands lat. 56° 30' N. lon. 170° W. The principal are called St. George and St. Paul the former is composed of granite and gneiss the latter appears to be volcanic. They are both covered with moss but destitute of wood. The inhabitants hunt seals. Pop. 300 to 3000

PRICHOWITZ a tn Prussia, circle Posen, at the foot of the Haidzken with two glass-polishing establishments, a saw and three other mills. Pop. 1842

PRIDDY, par Eng Somerset 1361 ac. Pop. 254

PRIEBUS, or Preibusa, a tn. Prussia, gov and W. N. W. Lignitz, r bank Neuse with two churches manufactures of tobacco and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1040

PRILEGO a tn. and com. Spain, new Castile prov and 24 m N. Caceres r bank Escalax with a large and handsome parish church, courthouse and prison two primary schools a copper two oil, and two flour mills. Pop. 1145

PRIEGO a tn Spain Andalusia prov and 84 m. S. E. Cordova, in a beautiful plain watered by the Salado. It is well built, has level, well paved, and tolerably broad streets, a castle erected by the Romans, and enlarged by the Arabs an old Gothic parish church, a monastery, a normal school a college for girls, various primary schools, a founding hospital an asylum for poor orphan girls and widows, three suppressed convents, in one of which there is an hospital for the sick, and another is converted into a potters numerous barns, a theatre, a flesh market, a shambles, and a town-house. There are also two granaries, and 5 public fountains, one of which the Escuela del Rey is celebrated for its beautiful construction and abundant supply of water issuing through 48 pipes. Hempdrury forms the chief occupation of the inhabitants, and there are 80 flour and 27 oil mills besides two tanneries, two potteries, and a few looms for ordinary linens and rapery. Priego was formerly a place of great opulence, on account of its extensive silk manufactures, more than 60,000 lbs of silk having been annually used in fabrics, ribbons, and handkerchiefs, but this branch of industry is now reduced to languence. This is the birth place of Miguel Lopez de Vega. Pop. 18,464

PRIEPOLO, or Prepolo, a tn. Turkey in Europe, Bosnia, sandjak and 37 m N. W. Novi Bazar, r bank Lim, at the confluence of the Milichova. Pop. 2000

PRIESTHOLME, or Purris a small isl. Wales, about 1 m off S. E. coast. Anglesay at the N. W. entrance of the Menai Strait. It is about 1 m long, very rugged and lofty, presenting precipitous cliffs on all sides. It affords pasture for a few sheep, and is frequented by immense flocks of sea-fowl, particularly puffins.

PRIESTWICK, a tn. Scotland. See Priestwick.

PRILUKI, a tn Russia, gov and 130 m N. W. Poltawa on the Udaia. It is very poorly built, and dirty in the extreme, but has three important annual fairs; and a considerable trade in cattle, corn saltpeper, and brandy. Pop. 3690

PRIMALL'VA a vil and par Italy, Lombardy prov Como 3 m N. W. Introbulo, r bank Povera. It has a handsome church, garrison of a stone remarkable for its power of resisting fire, and mines of iron and ilmenite. Pop. 1463

PRIMERO, a river, S. America, Buenos Ayres, rises in prov and N. W. Cordova, near Plohuas, flows S. and then E. N. E. past Cordova, and after a course of about 130 m. is lost in a marshy lake.

PRIMISAL, or Przemslaw, a tn Bohemia, circle and 28 m S. E. Ceskaia with a church and school, castle and townships. Pop. (aggricultural) 2000

PRIMKENAU a tn Prussia, Rhine, gov and N. W. Lignitz, with a castle, two churches manufactures of nails and articles in wood, several tile-works and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1519

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, a large isl. British America, in E. of Gulf of St. Lawrence, E. Cape Breton lat. 45° 50' to 47° 20' N. lon. 62° to 64° 20' W. washed by the Gulf on the N., and separated by Northumberland Strait from New Brunswick on the E. and Nova Scotia on the S. greatest length, E. to W. measured on a line curving through its centre, about 130 m. breadth, varying from 5 m. to 40 m. area, about 2184 sq. m. The coastline presents a remarkable succession of large bays and projecting headlands. Of the latter the most prominent are North Cape on the N. W. West Cape on the S. W., and East Cape on the N. E. the largest bays are those of Richmond on the N. W., Egmont on the S. W. Hallsborough on the S. and Carleton on the E. These bays by penetrating into the land from opposite directions form narrow isthmuses which make a natural division of the island into three distinct peninsulas. This natural division has been adopted as the basis of a nearly corresponding civil division into Prince's County in the W. Queen's County in the centre and King's County in the E. The surface undulates gently nowhere rising so high as to become mountainous or sinking so low as to form a monotonous flat, but on the contrary presenting almost throughout a diversified and pleasing appearance. At one time the whole island was covered with a dense forest of beech, birch, maple, poplar, spruce, fir, hemlock, larch, and cedar and though destructive fires, lumbering and cultivation have made large gaps in it, great parts of the original forest still remains. The whole island is eminently agricultural and pastoral. The soil consists generally of a light richish loam, sometimes approaching to a strong clay but more frequently of a light and sandy texture. The prevailing rock is a reddish sandstone, but a large part of the surface is evidently alluvial. No minerals of the least consequence have yet been discovered, and even limestone and gypsum appear to be wanting. The climate is much milder than that of the adjoining continent, and the air generally free from the fogs which spread along the shores of Cape Breton and Nova Scotia, is remarkably salubrious. Winter though longer and colder than that of England, is free from the deep unwholesome chills and summer, without being oppressively hot, is eminently fitted to promote the growth and maturity of all the ordinary cereals. During the greater part of July August, and September, the thermometer during the hottest hours of the day seldom varies more than from 75 to 80° F. while the night air is soft, wholesome, and agreeable. The principal crops are wheat, barley and oats, all of these abundant and of excellent quality, pease and beans are equally good, and potatoes and turnips are nowhere surpassed. The favourite live stock is sheep, which are not subject to rot or any of the diseases common to this country, and though small in size give evidence of rich flavor. The labours along the coast are very productive, but have as yet attracted less attention than they deserve. The manufactures are chiefly confined to linen and flannels for domestic use there are also several tanneries, and ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent. In 1868 the exports, consisting chiefly of oats, timber, and deals, amounted in value to £309,473, and the imports consisting of dry-goods, hardware, cordage, iron, and sundries, to £289,461. Prince Edward Island is considered as a dependency of Canada, but in the civil adminis-tion of its affairs are as an independent government. It is administered by an executive, usually composed of nine members, wholly nominated by the Crown. The legislature, composed of six members, is also nominated by the Crown but the Assembly, consisting of 24 members, is chosen by the people. Justice is administered according to the law of England. The number of places of worship is about 67, and the different religious denominations, classified according to their numbers, are: Roman Catholics, Scotch Presbyterians, Protestant Episcopalians, Methodists, and Baptists. The number of district schools is 293, and in the support of these the colonial government annually expends about £10,000 for superior education there is an academy at Charlotte Town the capital. Who discovered Prince Edward Island is not accurately known, but Cabot is supposed to have seen it immediately after he had discovered Newfoundland. Champlain gives it the name of St John, by which it continued long to be designated and accurately describes both its situation and extent. It was afterwards included by the French in their vast and undefined territory of New France, and in 1664 was granted as a feudal fief to a French Duke, a French naval officer. Little progress was made in settling the island till after the peace of Utrecht in 1715 when its fertility allured great numbers of Acadians from Cape Breton. It was taken by the British in 1745 restored by the peace of Aix la Chapelle, retaken and finally annexed to Britain in 1758. Pop. (1848) 62,678.

PRINCE LEOPOLD ISLAND, an isl. Arctic Ocean. W. extremity of Barrow's Strait lat. 74° N. lon. 90° W. PRINCE OF WALES, a remarkable promontory forming the most W. point of N. America, in Behring's Sea lat. 53° 20' N. lon. 167° 50' W. It terminates in a peaked mountain which presents a very bold face to the sea. A very dangerous shoal stretches N. E. from the cape.

PRINCE OF WALES ISLANDS, a cluster of islands Torres Strait lat. 10° 30' S.; much intersected by straits and openings.

PRINCE REGENT BAY—1. Aniak, W. coast, Greenland lat. 76° N. lon. 66° W.—2. (Inlet) British N. America lat. 75° to 74° lon. 100° to 90° W. leading from Barrow's Strait into Bering's Gulf—3. A river, Australia, which enters the Indian Ocean in lat. 15° 13' S. lon. 124° 50' E.

PRINCE WILLIAM HENRI or LOWLANDS ISLAND, an isl. N. Pacific, Low Archipelago lat. (N. E. point) 18° 43' N. lon. 141° 43' W. (S.)

PRINCE WILLIAM'S SOUND, an extensive inlet N. Pacific Ocean, Russian America formed by Point Hey and Cape Witbed, which are 43 m. apart. It is fronted by a very extensive sand-flat, and diverges into many long arms, generally obstructed by rocks and shoals. The outward coast is formed by Hitzelsberg and Moritzburg Island.

PRINCE'S ISLAND—1. An isl. E. pt of India, off W. coast, Africa, 140 m. S. & W. Fernando Po; lat. (Fort Santa Anna, Antonio Bay) 1° 39' 30" N. lon. 7° 28' 30" E. (N. E.) greatest length N. to S. 9 m. breadth, nearly 5 m. It is of volcanic origin, and though all more or less mountainous, consists of two distinct portions—one covered chiefly with rugged and often elevated summits, one of which appears to exceed 4000 ft., and allowed to remain almost in a state of nature and the other presenting lower heights and acclivities, intersected by deep valleys and ravines, and under good cultivation, having numerous excellent plantations of coffee, coconuts, &c. It has several good harbours, is much visited by vessels for refreshments, and carries on a considerable trade. It belongs to the Portuguese.—2. An isl. Indian Archipelago, at the S. entrance to the Straits of Bunde. It is small and low at its E. end are two eminences, and at its S. W. end it is covered with trees, and contains the town of Beandang.

PRINCE'S ISLANDS, a group of nine isls. Sea of Marmora, between the Gulf of Nicomedia, and the entrance to the Channel of Constantinople, and 10 m. to 12 m. S. E. the city of Constantinople. The largest island, Prinkipos, or Prinsipo, is long and narrow. These islands are said to possess beautiful and rich scenery. Lord Byron has described them as an earthly paradise. Many of the Franks who reside in Constantinople have their country residences here.

PRINCE'S ISLANDS, par. Eng. Banks, 4710 sq. m. Pop. 2517.

PRINCESS CHARLOTTE'S BAY, on the N. E. coast of Australia, lat. 14° 23' S. lon. 144° E. It is 21 m. broad, by about 22 m. deep, and contains a great number of small islands, rocks, and shoals.

PRINCESS ROYAL ISLANDS, a group, W. coast, British N. America, forming part of the immense archipelago which fronts the American continent, and has Charlotte's Island on the W. lat. 62° to 64° N.

PRINCENHAGE (S) or HAARLEM, a vil. Holland, prov. N. Brabant, 3 m. S. W. broda, with a large market-place, a townhouse, church, and school. Pop. (agricultural), 1350.

PRINCETON, a tn. U. States, New Jersey, agreeably situated 11 m. N. E. Trenton. It also contains the college of New Jersey, (in 1850 attended by 248 students) with 12 professors, and a library of 16,000 vols. the theological seminary of the Presbyterian church, founded in 1812 with five professors, and a library of 11,000 vols. two Presbyterian, an Episcopalian and an African church, a bank, academies, and schools, and several mechanic shops. Pop. 5021.

PRINCIPATO-CITRA, a prov. Naples, bounded N. by Trivento-Citra, N. W. by Aviano and Naples, W. by S. by the Mediterranean and E. by Basilicata, greatest length, N. W. to S. E. 84 m. greatest breadth, 42 m. area, 1710 sq. m. The coast-line is irregular and juts out into several bold promontories. Nearly a half of it consists of the large curve which forms the Bay of Salerno. The interior is much broken by ramifications of the Apennines, but a considerable part of the shore along the Gulf of Salerno is flat, and an extensive valley called the Val di Diano, stretches S. E. to N. W., almost parallel with the E. frontier. The principal rivers are the Sele, with its tributaries Negro and Calore. The climate is temperate, the valley of Cilento, enjoying almost a perpetual spring, and the soil generally of great fertility, so that the whole province may be regarded as one of the most highly favoured of the kingdom. The mountains are covered with wood particularly chestnuts, the produce of which is not the least important source of income. Great numbers of swine are fed and on the coast, the fishing of anchovies and tunny is very productive. The chief minerals worked are marble and gypsum but the province maintains two manufactures, and has three copper-foundries. The manufactures include paper, woolen and linen goods, and the trade is chiefly in timber, rice, chestnuts, dried fruits especially figs, and swine. The province is divided into four dioceses—Salerno, the capital, Mile, Campagna, and Il Vello. Pop. 558,809.

PRINCIPATO-ULTRA, a prov. Naples, bounded N. by prov. Salerno, W. by Salerno, S. W. and S. by Principato-Citra, S. E. by Basilicata, and E. by Capitanata. Part of the space thus bounded is occupied by the delegation of Benevento, belonging to the Papal States, greatest length, E. to W. 47 m. greatest breadth, 46 m., area, 1004 sq. m. It is mountainous, being covered by the Apennines and is watered by the Carapelle, Calore, Ufite, and Tammaro. The climate is mild and salubrious and the soil, particularly in the deep valleys, fertile and well cultivated. The principal products are maize, olives, chestnuts, and wine, and in these a considerable trade is carried on. The province is divided into three dioceses—Avellino, the capital, Arzano, and San Angelo de Lombardi. Pop. (1850) 383,414.

PRINCIPATO-INTERNA, a tn. Brazil, prov. Piahi, about 15 m. above the source of the Poti, 106 m. N. E. Ouros. It has a parish church inhabited by agriculturists or by raising cattle. Pop. of dist., 2000.

PRINCIPATO, PAPA ADAMI, or PAPA DOMENIA, a tn. Turkey, on an isl. of same name, Sea of Marmora, 12 m. S. E. Constantinople, inhabitants chiefly Greeks, either sea-faring or agricultural. Pop. 3000.

PRIOCCA a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, tir. Cont. prov. Alba, 24 m. S. E. Turin with a church an ancient castle, several oratories and a school. Pop. 1833.

PRIOLO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, tir. Cont. prov. and 16 m. S. E. Mondovì, on Tanaro, once defended by a strong castle, of which the ruins still appear. It has two churches. Pop. 1515.

PRIOR, par. Irish Kerry; 11,785 ac. Pop. 3923.

PRIORS DEAN, par. Eng. Hants; 1618 ac. P. 181.

PRIORS, two par. Eng. Warwick—1. (Eardunck), 1000 ac. Pop. 303.—2. (Marston) 2630 ac. Pop. 719.

PRIPET on PRIPYAT a silver Russia, close in dist. Vlad- dist. in N. W. Gov. Vologda, Saves N E. dist. E. across the B. sea Gov. Kholm, turns S E., stays N. W. E. and shortly before Polotsk turns N. W. dist. W. dist. W. dist. W. dist. W.
 It becomes navigable. Flow. In chief alluvions are the Ukraina Tourist, Stockholm, Pyk, Gerin, Onabot, Stovtosh.
 and Ouy; the Plam, Jassid, Lam, Morvich and Filish.
PRIPRI a in Slam, W. coast, Gulf of Slam, r. bank of a river which enters the Gulf by three mouths, 53 m. S. W.
Bankok, lat. 12° 12' N. lon. 104° 48' E.

PRISREND, or PRISRENIN, a tn. European Turkey Albania, r bank Rieksa, 4 m. or 5 m from its confluence with the Drin. It has considerable manufactures of firearms, which are much celebrated and a considerable traffic with the adjacent country and with many of the large towns in Albania. Esmatulla, and Gervia. Pop 15 000 to 20 000

PRISTINA, or PRISTINA a tn. Turkey in Europe, Servia, 100 m. N. E. Soutari It is surrounded by palisades, is the residence of a pasha, and the see of a Greek bishop and contains a number of handsome mosques, large barracks, baths and other noble buildings. Pop. about 12 000

PRISTON, par Eng Somers
1st 1840 et. P 808.

PRITTEWELL, per Eng
Exxon, 11 283 ac. I 2462

PRITZERBF & Co. Prussia,
gov and 26 m W N W Pots

diam, with a Protestant church, and school, manufactures of linen, and tanneries. Pop. 1005.

PRITZWALK a in Prussia,
gov and 66 m NW Berlin, 1 bank Tunnitz. It is walled has three gates a Protestant church, hospital manufactures of wool lan and linen cloth a tobacco-factory brewery and two mills.
Pop. 4500

PROTESTANTS (Latin Protestantes) came to France, esp. during the reign of Louis XIII, at the junction of three small streams, and enclosed by an amphitheatre of rugged and arid hills, 21 m. N.W. Valence. It has a presbytery, with a fine park adjoining, a courthouse, hospital, a reformatory, an agricultural society, a manufacture of covers and other woollen stuffs, silk thread and yarn, leather and brandy and a trade in silk, cattle, leather, soaks, &c. Though now the smallest, capital of the French Republic, it is still a place of great strategic importance. The kind of rallying point for Protestantism. Its inhabitants were butchered, its houses burned, and its fortifications razed by the Papists; the leader in this atrocity was Louis XIII. Pop. (1897) 5342.

PRIVETT par Eng Hants, 1270 ac. P 281
PRIVIDIA, or Palwitz, a tn Hungary, Hither Danube, co. Neutra, 23 m. W N W Neumuhl, with a church Parist college, and high school, has manufactures of woollen cloth.
and a flour-mill! Pop. 4730

PRIZZI, a to Sicily prov and 28 m S S I Palermo, with several much-frequented fairs. Pop 7500

PROBOLINGO, or POEBROLINGO :—1. A. in and dist. Java, prov. Batoeki, 48 m. S.E. Soerabaya. The town is large, lies on a small stream, is close upon the coast, and has a harbor, a number of European houses of good size, a hotel, mosque, government storehouse, and an extensive pier at which considerable quantities of sugar and coffee are shipped.—2. A. dist. Java, prov. Banjoemas.—3. A. dist. Java, prov. Kadja.

PROBSTHEIM, a vil Prussia, prov Silesia, gov and 19 m S.W. Liegnitz, in a mountainous district with a church, a castle, luncheon, and several mills. Pop. 1185

PROBUS, per Eng Cornwall; 8118 ac P 1647
PROCEIDA, an al. Naples, lying nearly midway between Isl Ischia and the coast, prov Naples. It is about 8 m long, N.E. to S.W., and little more than 1 m broad. The principal place of the island is Procida, or Cattedo di Procida, which stands on the S.E. coast 12 m. W S.W. Naples. It is fortified.

has a good harbour and a considerable trade, a palace, in which the king occasionally resides, eight churches, a convent, and an orphan asylum. John of Procida, the lord of the isle, is the reputed originator of the massacre, known by the name of the Sicilian Vespers. Pop. [el. about 12,000

PRODANO, or PROVE a small isl. Ionian Sea, close to S W coast, Morea, 9 ml. N N W Navarino.

PROENÇA (NOVA e VELHA), two places, Portugal prov Beira Baixa, the former 25 m. W Castelo-Branco, pop 2500 and the latter 21 m. NE, pop. 700.

PROLOG, a mountain range, on the frontiers of Dalmatia and Herzegovina, belonging to the Dinaric Alps, and composed mostly of limestone, of which the preslopes are so bare and abrupt as to leave little room for vegetation. The loftiest peaks—Orjen 6335 ft., Dinara, 6040 ft. and Pastovo, 5929 ft., are covered with snow during great part of the year.

PROME, or Phu, a Burmese dominion, a bank of the Irrawaddy, 163 m. N.W. Rangoon lat 18° 45' N lon 95° E. It is 1 1/2 m. in circumference, and surrounded by a brick wall beyond which are some extensive suburbs. It has manufactures of paper and is encircled with rice-grounds and cereals.

FRONT, from the Heights.—From a sketch by Lieut. WILSON, by David A. HIGGINS.

dams, and on the S are several steep hills covered with pagodes. In 1835 and in 1852 it was taken by the British.

PROMONTORIUM a vil Hungary, Hither Danube co. and 9 m. from Pesth, finely situated among vineyards with a church, stone quarries, and a trade in wine. P 2702

PRONA, two places Hungary —1, (Nemetz, or Deutsch Prona), A market to Hither Danube, co. Neutra, on the Neutra, 24 m N W Neusohl with a church, and manufactory of leather and cutlery. Pop. 2722 —2 (Tat, or Slowensko Prasono) A market to Hither Danube, co. Thurocz, 24 m N W Neusohl with two churches, a chateau, and school. Pop. 811

PRONIA a river, Russia, rises in gov Riazan flows N then E and S E., passing Pronak, turns N N E. and joins l bank Oka, about 8 m S. Spusk total course, about 150 m, principal affluent, the Ralova.

PROASK a tn. Russia, gov and 35 m. B. Ekaterin, 1 bank Poma. It is poorly built, but has eight churches, a considerable needle-manufactory and some trade in corn Pop. (1849) 1605.

PROPIHA, or UNTER DE BAIKO a tn Brazil, prov
Sergipe, between two lakes & bank São-Francisco, 60 m. W
Itabaianna with a paltry church and two primary schools.
Near it are salt springs. Pop. 1200

PROPOUNIS (SEA OF) See MARMORA
PROBSTSCH, or PROBSC, a market tn. Bohemia, circle and 18 m S. E. Chrudin with a Protestant and a R. Catholic church, glass works, and a mill Pop. 1029

PROSKAL a tn. Prussia, 80km. gov and 6m. S.S.W
Oppen with a church school, hospital, cattle; manufactures of potash, tile works, bark, polishing and other mills. P 1052

PROBNA, or PROBNA a river, Prussia, which rises in Silesia, gov Oppeln, 6 m N.E. Ragnenberg and joins L. bank Warta after a course of about 120 m.

PROSENYTZ, or PROSENYEW, a tn. Austria, Moravia, circle and 11 m. S.W. Olmütz, on the Ruma. It has three churches, an hospital and monastery of the brothers of charity extensive manufactures of woollens and linen cloth, cambrics and cotton goods, in all of which it carries on an important trade, numerous distilleries of brandy and cognac, and one of the largest cork-markets in Moravia. Pop. 5000. PROTECTOR, a tn. Oregon, U. States, Oregon, lat. 46° 7' 10" N. long. 122° 16' W. It received its name from Vancouver in consequence of standing in the mouth of Port Discovery, an excellent harbour about 7½ m. long by 1½ m. broad which it covers completely from the N. The shores of its E. side, which is about 2 m. long, form with the mainland a channel of about 2 m. wide, leading into the port, and at the same time furnish a most excellent roadstead.

PROTWANOW, a vil. Austria, Moravia, 22 m. N. Bräun, with a church, glass-houses, and two mills. P. 1180. PRUTVA, a river Russia, rises in N. gov. Smolensk, enters gov. Kaluga, flows S.E. past Korovnik, and joins bank (lat. 52 m. above Berskoye) after a course of about 100 m.

PROVAGLIO, a vil. and com. Italy, Lombardy, prov. Novara, about 2 m. S. Inco; with two churches, and a trade in corn, wine, and silk. Pop. 1217.

PROVEN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. W. Flanders, 23 m. S.W. Bruges, with manufactures of tobacco, several mills, two breweries, and a crane in corn and cattle. P. 1684.

PROVENCE (U. J.) [Latin, Provincia Gallia, Provincia], a former Roman province which was divided into Upper Provence capital Aix and Lower Provence capital Nîmes. It now forms dep. Bouches-du-Rhône, Var, Hautes-Alpes, and part of dep. Vaucluse.

PROVENCIO, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 50 m. S.W. Curres, with a church, courthouse, prison, school several flour-mills, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1332.

PROVENÇALS (SAS MARTIN), a vil. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 4 m. from Barcelona, with a school, church, cotton-works, several cottons, manufactures of chaises, a cannery for fine-coloured more, chemicals, potato starch, soap, and three works for dyeing cotton thread red. Pop. 2444.

PROVENCENDE, a tn. and par. Portugal, prov. Trás-os-Montes 10 m. from Vila Real. Pop. 900.

PROVIDENCE, a city and port U. States, Rhode Island, of which it is the largest place and with Newport and South Kingston the joint capital, on both sides the Providence, or Seekonk, here crossed by two bridges, at the head of Narragansett Bay 40 m. S.W. Boston, with which and with New York city it is connected by railway. It contains a great number of the buildings, particularly in the E. division but it is on the whole irregularly and indifferently built, consisting for the most part of wooden houses. One of the busiest, and at the same time most attractive parts of the town, is at the common terminus of the railway stations the buildings of which, not excelled by any in the U. States are ranged along three sides of a beautiful sheet of water of an elliptic form, about 1 m. in circuit, communicating with the bay, and having its banks laid out so as to form an excellent promenade.

The public edifices include 80 churches of different denominations, many of them of very humble pretensions, and altogether devoid of architectural merit, but several also of a superior description, among which the First Baptist, which though only of wood, displays much taste the First Congregational, built of granite; Grace Church, St. John's, Westminster Congregational, Baptist Congregational St. Peter and St. Patrick's, are all more or less costly and splendid; other buildings and objects deserving notice, are the State House, built of brick; Dexter Asylum for poorhouses, a plain and substantial brick building, situated within an enclosure of 40 acres Brown University, possessed of a library of 23,000 vols. a valuable chemical and philosophical apparatus, and other collections, superintended by a president and six professors and attended by an average of 120 students. Rhode Hospital for the insane, a splendid and richly-endowed establishment the Athenæum, occupying an elegant and spacious stone structure, and possessed of a library of 12,000 vols., New England Yearly Meeting Boarding-school a richly endowed and well-managed institution, under the superintendence of the Friends; the Old Market-house, a large and well-proportioned brick building, partly occupied as municipal offices the Reform School, recently established for the care and reformation of juvenile offenders; What Cheer, the quaint name given to a series of buildings, said to have as handsome a frontage front as any in New England; the Arcade, which, though intended only for mercantile purposes, is one of the most beautiful buildings in the country, and has its front ornamented with massive granite columns, each of a single block 22 ft. high the state prison, and a new and elegant theatre. In addition to the educational establishments already mentioned, are 46 public and 80 Sunday schools, the former attended by about 6000 scholars, and maintained at an annual expense of about £8000.

Manufactures have made great progress and employ not only the large amount of water-power furnished by the Pawtucket falls, but about 50 steam-engines. The principal public works are flour and saw mills mills for sawing and polishing marble cotton and woollen factories, foundries machine-shops printing bookbinding calendering and dye-works, &c. Other articles manufactured are leather furniture, carriages, screws, nails, India rubber shoes, jewellery, &c. It has foreign trade and a safe and commodious harbour though it is somewhat difficult of access. The coasting trade is much more important, and a considerable number of vessels are employed in the cod and other fisheries. Providence was first settled in 1638 and incorporated in 1649. During its early existence it suffered much from the ravages of the Indians, in what is called King Philip's War. In 1801 a conflagration laid a large part of it in ashes, and in 1815 a severe earthquake raised the tide 12 ft. above its usual level, by which 300 buildings were thrown down and property nearly to the amount of £300,000 was destroyed. Pop. (1833) about 46,000.

PROVIDENCE, a river, U. States, Rhode Island, formed by the union of two streams N.W. the town of Providence, flows through it, receiving the Pawtucket on the left, and the Pawtuxet on the right and falls into the Bay of Narragansett.

PROVIDENCE, an Indian Ocean, 240 m. N.N.E. Malagassar lat. 9° 10' S. long. 51° 6' E. about 2 m. long N. to S., with a low surface, covered on its N. part with coconuts and trees. Turf and land-crabs of large size abound.

PROVIDENCE (VINE) a tn. and par. Providence.

PROVIDENCE (Ch. Old) an Old Providence.

PROVINCE WELLESLEY, a strip of coast-land, on W. side, Malay peninsula, belonging to the Straits settlements of Great Britain and immediately dependent on the neighbouring island of Penang from which it is separated by a strait 3 m. in breadth, bounded N. and E. by Kedah or Quada, and S. the Karan river, which separates it from the Malay kingdom of Perak about 35 m. long by 4 m. broad, area, about 140 sq. m. The surface is generally undulating, sloping seaward east, partly covered with jungle and forest trees. Lake Penang is generally of granite formation the detritus of which is decomposed on the slopes into a rich white clay containing iron. A few sandy strips also occur especially well calculated for cocoa-nut cultivation. On and near the coast are many tracts of the richest alluvial soil in some places covered with mangroves, in others laid out in rice-plantations. Good roads made by the British traverse the country, which is intersected also by three pretty large rivers—the Muda, Pre and Jempang, besides numerous creeks. The climate is hot (mean 60° F.), but on the whole not unhealthy, and more mild falls than in Penang, though there are occasional and pretty long droughts. The elephants, rhinoceros, tiger, and numerous varieties of snakes, porcupines and otherwise, are common. Its vegetable and agricultural products are very similar to those of Penang. Its principal town is Bekkah or Bahah on the coast, near the N. frontier pop. with the adjacent Malay village of Pinang, about 1700. This province is governed by a resident councillor subordinate to the British governor at Penang, the jurisdiction over offences committed being in the hands of the recorder at this settlement. It was first settled by the English in 1809. Its population in 1834 amounted to 14,500, of whom five-sixths were Chinese and Hindoos, constituting the labouring class. According to the last official census, June 1 1851, the inhabitants consisted of Malays, 77,603 males, 35,408 females Chinese, 7698 males, 1153 females; Chinitas (Malabar) 1588 males, 300 females, and miscellaneous, including British settlers, 558 males, 559 females. Total pop. 145,801.—[Singapore Free Press, July 1, 1851; Jour. Ind. Archipel.]

Howe's Description of Penang and Prov. Wellesley &c.

PROVINCETOWN, a seaport in U States, Mass. character near N W extremity of Cape Cod, on the bay of that name, 85 m. E. R. R. Boston. It has Congregational Methodist, and Universalist churches, two academies, and several other schools, extensive saw-mills, and an excellent harbor. It is a beautiful city, and an excellent harbor. It is a beautiful city, and an excellent harbor. It is a beautiful city, and an excellent harbor.

PROVINS (Latin, Amastorum), a town France, dep Seine-et-Marne, 30 m. E. Meaux. It is surrounded by walls, flanked with towers and generally well built. The principal edifices are a large tower, commonly called Caesar's tower, the church of St. Quirice, a large and handsome structure, with a dome surmounted by a belfry; the church of St. Ayon, the church of the Holy Cross, the church of Refuge, with curious carvings the general hospital, formerly a convent of Cordeliers the cellars of the Hotel Dieu and Grange aux Dimes, and the ruins of the college church. The manufactures consist of linsey-woolsey earthenware and conserves of roses and there is a considerable trade in corn and flour for the Paris market. wool leather and roses called provins, which have been cultivated from time immemorial within the district. Province possesses a small port and commerce, a commercial college, and agricultural society. Near it are strong chalybeate springs. Pop. 5798.

PRUDENCE an island U States, Rhode Island, forming the largest of a group of islands belonging to the town of Little Narragansett. It is about 6 m long by 2 m in average breadth, and is beautiful, fertile, and well cultivated.

PRUM, a town in Rhineland Prussia, gov and 88 m. N. W. Trier, on a small stream of same name it has two churches manufactures of woollen cloth cambrics, and linestones quarries Pop 3322

PRUNA, a town Spain Andalusia, prov and 40 m. S. E. Seville. It is built with rather broad and paved streets, two squares a granary prison, two schools, a church, and three oil-mills. Pop. 8276.

PRUNARIEDON, or Beutenau, a village Bohemia, circle and 12 m. W. N. W. Prague with a church school and castle, a tile-work and numerous mills. Pop. 1076.

PRUSSIA a city, Turkey in Asia. See BERSA.
PRUSSIA (German, Preussen, Dutch, Prusen, French, Prusse) a kingdom of central Europe, consisting of two large territories completely isolated from each other and of several small territories. The eastern and more extensive of the two large divisions is situated between lat. 49° 50' and 55° 50' N. and lon. 8° 50' and 22° 50' E. and bounded, N by the Baltic Sea N. E. and S. E. Russia N. Austria S. Saxony and the Saxon duchies and W. Hesse-Cassel Anhalt, Brunswick, Hanover and Mecklenburg. This territory is divided into the six provinces of Prussia proper, including E. and W. Prussia, Posen, Brandenburg 1 comarques Silesia, and Saxony and has an area of 97,748 sq. m. The western large division is situated between lat. 49° 10' and 52° 50' N. and lon. 5° 00' and 9° 25' E. and bounded N by Hanover and Holland, W. Holland, Belgium, and Luxembourg, S. France, isolated portions of Oldenburg and Hesse-Cassel, and Rhineland Prussia, and E. Hesse-Cassel, Nassau, Hesse-Cassel, Waldeck, Brunswick, and Lippe-Deimold. It is divided into the two provinces of Westphalia and the Rhineland Prussia and has an area of 13,681 sq. m. Of the smaller isolated territories, three are involved by the Saxon duchies a fourth by Hesse-Cassel and a fifth by Hesse-Cassel Hesse Darmstadt and Nassau. To Prussia also belongs the principality of Neuchâtel now forming one of the Swiss cantons. The names areas, population &c. of the principal divisions of the Prussian monarchy, are tabulated in the following table—

THE PROVINCES AND GOVERNMENTS OF PRUSSIA their AREA POPULATION &c. in 1849

Provinces.	Governments.	A. in sq. m.	Pop. 1849.	E. comarques.	N. comarques.	S. comarques.	Others.	Contd.	Pop. 1849.	Rel.
Prussia	Königsberg	6,540	842,228	679,798	170,715	6,538	1,82,118	842,228	577,798	500,816
	Grand-duché	4,771	643,047	591,015	9,409	1,809	2,1,083	591,015	590,000	507,414
	Westphalia	3,208	494,467	396,656	381,406	6,568	63,053	396,656	396,798	27,246
	Mecklenburg	6,111	831,645	782,117	599,497	17,408	18,116	782,117	782,117	50,000
Posen	Posen	6,547	807,289	784,117	6,547	1,809	98,146	807,289	784,117	1,307
	Brandenburg	6,437	466,476	1,5,408	3,414	54,408	6,411	1,014,000	990,001	79,938
Brandenburg	Potsdam, with	6,130	1,569,935	1,285,538	33,235	18,617	111,054	2,064,74	1,285,538	172,760
	Frankfurt	6,630	600,087	618,790	10,131	6,144	81,164	618,790	618,790	169,138
	Stettin	6,630	643,127	635,554	3,71	4,556	67,239	643,127	635,554	116,474
	Coblenz	6,136	448,816	437,019	6,300	6,644	64,497	437,019	437,019	63,464
Pomerania	Stralsund	7,772	18,054	166,590	883	518	25,907	89,947	691,940	39,179
	Breslau	6,570	1,174,673	886,623	481,178	3,809	67,798	347,938	1,280,718	64,300
	Ostpr.	6,669	863,913	88,775	683,065	10,623	17,046	863,913	88,775	67,110
	Magdeburg	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
Silesia	Magdeburg	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Mecklenburg	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Mecklenburg	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Mecklenburg	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
Saxony	Erfurt	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Mecklenburg	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Mecklenburg	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Mecklenburg	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
Westphalia	Münster	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Münster	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Münster	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Münster	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
Rhineland	Düsseldorf	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Düsseldorf	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Düsseldorf	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
	Düsseldorf	6,070	831,028	774,440	1,62,161	13,618	43,254	831,028	774,440	49,488
Total		81,494	16,381,147	9,967,877	6,603,160	218,778	1,579,407	4,361,664	16,381,147	3,168,818

* Includes and Mahomedans Japhtas

1,908
14,468

As the two great divisions above referred to are not mainly really but only politically connected, it will be necessary to treat of them separately in describing their physical features.
EASTERN DIVISION—The eastern division may be described generally as a vast plain, considerably elevated in the S. and S. W., and thence descending at first rapidly and afterwards very gradually, towards the Baltic and the German Ocean. The loftiest summits are on the S. frontiers of Silesia where the Riesengebirge and the Sudetes form the boundary between it and Bohemia and Moravia, and near northwards several embankments which, without attaining a very lofty height, form wild and romantic scenery averaging about 2220 ft. in height, but lowering northward to an average of 900 ft. after which the surface loses its hilly character and begins to form extensive plains. In the N. W. the only other quarter which can be considered mountainous ramifications of the Thuringian forest and of the Harz appear and cover a considerable portion of the S. part of the provinces of Saxony, but here the average height does not exceed 1000 ft., and soon diminishes to less than 500 ft. The large space extending between the N. part of these mountain districts and the shores of the Baltic, does not present the appearance of a monotonous flat, but though generally low and tame, healthy and fertile. It is often finely diversified and even rich in scenes of rural beauty. Ultimately however in approaching the shores of the Baltic, the general level becomes so low, that large tracts are saved from inundation only by low sand-hills, or banks of gravel which the waves have thrown up. Behind these hills and banks extensive lagoons or Haffs have been formed, communicating with the sea by narrow outlets, and giving to the shore one of its characteristic features. The whole coast, extending for about 500 m. is flat and uninteresting. Very few undulations occur to break the monotony; no bold cliffs appear and the water follows so much that great harbours are extremely rare. The only large gulf is that of Danzig within which the town of the same name possesses by far the most frequented port. Towards the N W the monotony of the coast is broken by the Isle of Rugen, which becomes elevated towards the N and then terminates in the Hill of Arkona, about 300 ft. high and overhanging the sea.

Rivers and Lakes.—The whole of the eastern part of the Prussian monarchy belongs to the basins of the Baltic Sea and the German Ocean. The share received by the latter is comparatively small and is confined to the W part of the territory. The principal river which drains it is the Elbe, which entering from the N of Saxony, traverses it by a series of remarkable bends, mainly in a N W direction and finally quits it on the frontiers of Hanover. The chief affluents which join the Elbe in this part of its course are the Elster, Harz, Milde, and Saale. Minors portions of the W of the province of Saxony belong to the river systems of the Weser and the Werra. The share of drainage received by the Baltic coast is about six sixths of the whole, and is conveyed to it by a number of large and independent rivers. Of these, commencing with the E. boundary of the basin of the Elbe, the most important is the Oder the only large river which can be considered wholly Prussian, runs its course, with exception of its commencement as a mere mountain torrent, wholly within its territory which it traverses easterly S. E. to N N W receiving the Malpansa, Bartich and above all the Warta, augmented by the Nette, and the Nisse of Silesia, the Bober and the Nesse of Lothia. Next in importance to the Oder and communicating with it by a canal between the Boss and the Kanal in the Vistula or Weichsel of whose course only the lower part belongs to Prussia, which it enters from Russian Poland, flows in a N direction without receiving any large affluents, and throws off two large branches which enter the Frische-Haff, while the main stream continues its course past Danzig. Between the Oder and Vistula a number of small streams, among which the Roga, Persante, Wippr, Stolpe, Lupow and Loba may be mentioned carry their waters directly to the sea, and thus form small independent basins. To the E of the Vistula the first river of importance is the Pemage, and after it, still further E, the Frage, with its tributary Aila. The last river on the E. is the Nemmen, or Memel which has only a small part of its lower course in Prussia, but penetrating far into Russia, forms one of its important navigable outlets. Lakes abound in almost every province, but more especially in those of Prussia proper, including E. and W Prussia, and of Pomerania and Brandenburg. The large lagoons of Pomerania are Frische-Haff, and Carliche Haff, with many others of a similar description along the coast, have been already referred to. The inland lakes are far too numerous to admit of specification. In E Prussia alone 116 have been counted though their extent individually is so small, that the whole area occupied by them is not more than 238 sq. m. or an average of 2 sq. m. to each. W Prussia contains 58 in land lakes each only averaging about 1 sq. m. in Pomerania 66, Posen 27 Brandenburg 131 Saxony 6, and Silesia none deserving of the name. Many of these lakes are well supplied with fish, but generally possess few attractions, either in themselves, or in the scenery around them.

Geology.—In the mountainous districts of the E. part of the Prussian monarchy the loftier summits are composed of granite, gneiss, mica schist, porphyry, diorite, &c. These are most largely developed in the mountains of Silesia, and even in some of its flatter parts, and are also seen in the circle of Schlesinger, in the Saxon government of Krfitz, in the Brocken, forming part of the Harz, and in isolated spots in the vicinity of the town of Halle. Transition rocks, graywacke, clay-stone, and limestone extend along the frontiers of Austrian Silesia, into the Upper Silesia of Prussia, as far as the Oder, and also N. of the Kiesgebirge, in the districts of Stettin, Waldenburg, and W to the Queen. Rocks of the same formation occupy a considerable part of the flatter districts of Prussian Saxony, more especially in the vicinity of Magdeburg, and along the banks of the Oder. Secondary formations, composed of mountain limestones and the various strata of the carboniferous system, occur in Silesia, chiefly in two localities in Upper Silesia along the frontiers of Russia and Russia Poland and among the mountains in the county of Glinz, and towards the Riesengebirge. Rocks still higher in the series, and including the new red sandstone, and others, enter Prussian Silesia from Poland on the E. and extend W to the Oder, near Krappitz, and to a considerable distance inland. They also occupy an extensive tract in the province of Saxony covering part of the terraces of the Thuringian forest, and stretching along the N and E foot of the Harz, to the banks of the Saale, Elster and Elbe. Chalk and its accompanying beds occur in many different localities, more especially on the N side of the Harz, and in Silesia, both in its higher districts, and on the frontiers of Pohod. Chalk also appears near Inowrazlaw in the province of Posen near Tempin and Przemlow in gov Potsdam, near Gutkow in gov Stralsund, and lastly in the island of Rügen, where it forms the romantic cliffs of Scrubbenkammer and Arkona. Tertiary formations overlying the chalk, and including masses of lignite, appear at the foot of the Harz, in the district of Merseburg, on the banks of the Elster, Milde, and Elbe, in the N W corner of gov Leipzig at seven different localities in the province Brandenburg in the district Bohnenberg and in the islands of Wollin, Usedom, and Rügen. Yerona beds, belonging to the tertiary period, are of rare occurrence, and are almost confined to gov Lignita.

Climate.—The E. part of the Prussian monarchy, extending over 6° of lat. and nearly 13° of lon and consisting in one direction of lofty mountains, and in another of low flats stretching along an inland sea, and insulating between them large tracts of unobscured land must necessarily present considerable diversities of climate. At Erbrun, in lat. 50° 53' N and about 900 ft. above the sea, the temperature of the year is 52° of winter 54° and of summer 71° 50° F. At Berlin, in lat. 52° 30' N but at a much lower level only 180 ft., the annual temperature is the very same, though both the extremes of winter, cold, and summer heat are somewhat greater. At Stralsund, in lat. 54° 19' N, but at a level rather under 50 ft. the temperature of the year is 51° 48° of winter 32° 30°, and of summer 68° 30° F. The average of a number of places situated between the highest and lowest latitudes gives a mean annual temperature of 52° F. At Berlin from 159 to 160 days of the year are rainy from 33 to 34 obscured with mist, and 17 stormy. On the coast of the Baltic the stormy days amount to 80 the greater part of them in summer, and the quantity of rain is also much increased. Least rain falls in Silesia and the eastern provinces. The prevailing winds are W and S W.

Western Divisions.—The western division, consisting of Westphalia and the Rhenish provinces, differs so much from the eastern division as, in many respects, to present a striking contrast to it. All the mountainous parts of the former are situated on its S. and W frontiers, and, on receding from it, long tracts are wandered over in which nothing that can be called a mountain is to be seen. The W division of the monarchy is much more fully diversified. In Mecklenburg, though far less elevated than those on the frontiers of Silesia, are not confined to a particular locality, but stretch across the country in all directions, and form numerous valleys, one of which, that of the Rhine, here occupies no inconsiderable portion of the whole surface, and, in point of fertility and beauty, is not surpassed by any other valley in Europe. In the N a mountain range of moderate elevation, forming a continuation of the Weesengebirge, stretches across govs Minden and Münster. To the S. of it, that of the Tombberger-Wald extends in a N W direction and near Reitelsd attains its loftiest height, not exceeding 1080 ft. This is succeeded, to the S., by a low range, known by the name of the Elbe or Harz, the highest point of which is scarcely 700 ft. This range, commencing between Brilon and Siedberg, stretches W across the N of gov Arnsberg, in the direction, and along both banks of the Möse and Ruhr presenting to both rivers, and on both sides but particularly on the E., a number of bold and romantic precipices. Still further S. the Sauerhaud or Siedland mountains appear. In the N E., where they take the name of the Rothlager or Rothbaur, they attain their highest elevation, which, in the Astenberg, is 5925 ft., and in several other summits exceeds 9000 ft. The last range, on the E or E bank of the Rhine, is the Westerwald, which reaches the height of 9000 ft. A part of this range, forming its W termination, stretches along the banks of the Rhine, and presents the remarkable summit known by the name of the Siebengebirge. On the S bank of the Rhine, and on the E part of the Rhenish province, the principal mountains are the Eifelgebirge, which have their greatest breadth between Andernach and Bonn, stretch from the Rhine westward for about 45 m., and though generally low attain the height of 1500 ft., and the Hunsrück occupying a large space between the Moselle and the Nahe, and attaining in the loftiest summits of the Iderswald and Hochwald, the respective heights of 2300 ft. and 1660 ft.

Rivers.—More than four-fifths of this portion of the Prussian monarchy belong to the basin of the Rhine which, entering it on the S.E. first forms the boundary between it and Nassau, and then traverses it in a N N W direction finally quitting it on the frontiers of Holland, to the N of Cleve. It thus receives a large part of the drainage directly, and is, moreover, augmented within it by numerous streams, of which the most important are on the E bank the Lahn, which, however, has only its mouth on the frontiers, and scarcely belongs to Prussia the Sieg, the Rur, and the Moselle, with its tributary Lenn, the Emsche, and Lippe, and on the left, the Nahe, Moselle, with its tributary Saar and the Elbe. In the N W a considerable space belonging to the basin of the Rhine, though the water is not received by it within the country, is drained by the Moselle, and its tributaries Roer and Klarn. The rest of the drainage, forming a minute portion from the N and E, is shared by the Ems and the Weser. There is not a single lake deserving of notice for its magnitude. The most remarkable is Laubacher about 6 m. from Andernach, occupying apparently, the crater of an extinct volcano, and, though of small extent, above 214 ft. deep.

Geology.—In this part of Prussia there are no primitive rocks of granite, gneiss, and mica-schist. The prevailing rocks, particularly in the E, are volcanic, and consist chiefly of basalt, agate, porphyry, and similar volcanic products of the tertiary period. Graywacke, transition limestone, and clay-slate are also of considerable occurrence. The secondary formation, and more especially mountain limestone, and the overlying strata of the carboniferous system, are largely developed in the N in the cliffs of Eifelburg, in gov Münster at the N W foot of the Sauerlandgebirge, along the Rur between Arnsberg and Dillendorf in the W at the N foot of the Eifel, near Aix-la-Chapelle and in the S in gov Treves, particularly in the neighborhood of Saarbrück. The new red sandstone, with its accompanying rocks and fossils, occupies a considerable part of the higher districts in gov Minden and also occurs on parts of the Eifel, and along the Moselle and Saar in gov Treves. Lias and oolite are found in the N among the hills which lie between the Weser and the frontiers of Hanover. The chalk formation has its largest development in Westphalia, more especially on the W side of the Teutoburger-Wald, in the Sauerlandgebirge, between the Rur and the Lippe, and more particularly in gov Münster.

Climate.—Within the same ranges of latitude, and at nearly equal heights above the sea-level, the climate of the W is superior to that of the E. division of the monarchy. The mean annual temperature is about 1° higher, the winter is milder, and the summer cooler, and the range of the thermometer is accordingly confined within narrower limits. The fall of rain, however, is greater, averaging 20 inches in the W and only 16 inches in Silesia and the E. provinces. This, however cannot be considered a disadvantage, as the larger quantity of the W is by no means in excess, and only tends to make vegetation more luxuriant.

The principal physical features of the two great divisions of the monarchy have now been considered separately, but it will not be advisable to follow the same course in considering its industrial resources, both because the most important statistics relating to them are often so slung together, that it is scarcely possible to separate them and the same branches of industry are common to both divisions.

Agriculture.—The whole monarchy is situated between the parallels of latitude under which all the ordinary cereals are easily matured, and there is nothing in the elevation of the surface, except in a few particular localities, to militate for general cultivation. In the more E. portions, even though only to a limited extent, the vine thrives well, and yields some wines of good repute. The portion of surface absolutely waste does not exceed 1-50th of the whole. The woodland, chiefly occupying the loftier districts where cultivation on a regular system would be impracticable, but occasionally also, particularly in the E division covering extensive tracts which might be made arable, has been estimated at rather more than 1-4th the arable land at 6-13th, artificial meadows 1-11th, natural pastures 3-15th and gardens and vineyards 1-48th. The soil includes all varieties, from light sands, almost carried by the wind to the most obdurate clays, but has been subdivided into the three classes of wheat land, light loams of middling quality, and sandy or stony land. The wheat land, which is in most cases remarkably productive, is found chiefly in the Prussian provinces near the frontiers of Poland, and along the banks of the Memel and Pregel, till the coast is approached, when the sandy soil begins to prevail, in the province of Posen, in the government of Breslau on the E. bank of the Oder and generally throughout Silesia, between the Oder and the mountains. In Brandenburg the wheat land occurs only in isolated spots, with the exception of a rich continuous tract which extends along the Oder, from Frank fort into the N of gov Posen. The same tract, spreading out into a broad one occupies a large portion of Pomerania, both extending N to the extremity of the isle of Rügen, and W to the Prussian frontier. In prov. Saxony the wheat land occurs chiefly in the S part of gov Magdeburg, where a plain known by the name of the Magdeburgerörde, is considered the richest and best cultivated in the monarchy, and also occupies a considerable part of gov Erfurt. In Westphalia it forms the S. part of gov Minden, where the Warburger Berge is celebrated, extends through part of gov Arnsberg, particularly in the vicinities of Bielefeld and Hallwang. Still more productive tracts are found in the N of the Rhenish province, between Aix-la-Chapelle and Bonn, as far as the frontiers of the Netherlands, and in the S districts of gov Treves, along the banks of the Saar. The loams of middling quality prevail in gov Hanburg, the N part of Silesia, generally throughout prov. Brandenburg, in the E. part of the Oder, the N of Magdeburg, the S. part of Minden, the whole of gov Münster and lastly in gov Coblenz. The sandy and stony land of barren quality is found in large continuous flats in gov. Gumbinnen and Königsberg, where, for the most part, it forms the N boundary of the heavy wheat land. It prevails in gov Danzig and Marienwerder, generally along the shores of the Baltic, along the frontiers of Silesia, particularly in the S. and S. districts. In the interior of prov. Brandenburg too though the very heart of the monarchy and in the environs of the capital the soil belongs decidedly to this class, consisting of immense tracts of sand which spread out like a sea, while occasional patches of mudling or even fertile wheat land, rise up and appear like islands in the midst of it. Nor are similar tracts unknown in the W division of the monarchy. Besides small stretches in gov Minden, and a large tract in the W of Münster the sandy and stony ground forms the larger part of gov Arnsberg which lies along the Sauerlandgebirge, whence the very name of Sauerland has been derived from the sturde and sornal nature of the soil. Similar ground occurs in gov. Cologne and Coblenz, and on the plateau which reaches to the W. part of the monarchy. The different soils above described, and the extent of the districts over which they extend, furnish us with an easy means of ascertaining the nature of its different products. On the first soil as its name indicates, wheat is the prevailing crop and alternates chiefly with hay and beans. The yearly produce of wheat is estimated at 2,000,000 of quarters, and, after satisfying the home consumption, leaves, on an average, a surplus of about 500,000 quarters for export. The produce of rye, barley and oats is estimated at above 8,000,000 quarters, but the consumption of these kinds of grain being far greater than that of wheat, leaves only the same quantity of about 500,000 quarters for export. Another very important crop, the culture of which is more or less extensive in every district, is that of potatoes. Of these above 18,000,000 of bushels are consumed by the distilleries alone. Hemp and flax are also very important crops, more especially the former, which furnishes large supplies for the home manufacturer, though a large quantity still requires to be imported. To beets also, to the extent of above 30 000 000 lbs. is annually raised. Apples and currants are cultivated on a large scale, particularly in Saxony and Brandenburg. Oil plants are also important objects of culture, both for their oil and for their seed. The latter, particularly linseed, forms an important article of export from E. Prussia, while almost equally large exports of clover and other hay seeds, take place from Brandenburg and the Rhinisch provinces. To the latter provinces, also, the culture of the vine is chiefly confined. The largest space occupied by vineyards is in gov. Coblenz and Treves. The culture, on a smaller scale, is carried on in gov. Cologne and Aix-la-Chapelle, and also in the E. division of the monarchy in Saxony, Brandenburg, Posen, and Silesia. Beet-root is cultivated to a great extent, and has risen from 1280 tons in 1832 to 1 012,578 tons in 1852 a large proportion of which is used in the manufacture of sugar. In raising these various crops the system of agriculture pursued though much improved in recent times, is still very defective, and not only far below that of common in the best-cultivated districts of our own country but is surpassed by many of those on the Continent. The same remark applies to the breeds of domestic animals, in which great improvement still requires to be made, though much has been done by the Government more especially in the case of horses, by the establishment of breeding studs in different localities, and on a general system. The numbers of the chief kinds are shown in the table at the beginning of this article. Concerning the large extent of sea-coast the vast number of lakes and the number as well as magnitude of the rivers which Prussia possesses, its fisheries cannot fail to prove an important source of revenue. The whole produce has been estimated at about £1 000 000 sterling of which little more than a fourth is obtained from the sea.

Minerals.—These include among metals silver iron lead, copper zinc cobalt, arsenic, antimony and manganese and among other minerals, salt, alum, copperas, coal lignite, roofing slate, granite, millstone, limestone, and several varieties of excellent building stone. The silver found only in connection with copper, is worked chiefly in the district of Mansfeld, prov. Saxony and more partially in some localities in Westphalia, and at Tarnowitz in Upper Silesia. The produce has for a long time been gradually diminishing, but still amounts to about one-sixteenth of the whole produce of Europe. Iron is very generally diffused copper is found in the three localities above mentioned for silver and yields about 30 000 tons of ore, lead is found in Silesia the Rhinisch province, Westphalia, and Saxony zinc, in the same localities, except Saxony cobalt, in Westphalia and Saxony arsenic, in Silesia, antimony about 90 and stannum about 120 tons. Salt is found in all the provinces except Prussia proper, Posen, Brandenburg and Silesia, but the quantity obtained falls far short of the consumption and requires to be supplemented by imports from England Spain and Portugal. Coal is worked in Silesia Westphalia, and the Rhinisch provinces, by nearly 400 pits. Amber which is both found in considerable quantities along the shores of the Baltic, and also obtained by digging at some distance inland.

COMPARATIVE STATE OF THE PRODUCE OF THE PRUSSIAN MINES IN 1851, 1852, and 1853.

	1851	1852	1853	Tons.
Iron	178 0	20 549	182 625
Steel	6 818	12 320	17 414	16 400
Lead	705	2 368	4 640
Lignite	1 467	964	992
Zinc	1 627	15 361	28 007
Cobalt	1 942 1/2	21 885 679	11 701 116	Quarters.
Antimony	127 448	8 564	6 628 287
Stannum	91 877	9 799	103 581
Salt	1 351	5 601	6 554
Alum	1 398	1 560	1 731

Manufactures.—These have made great progress, and are not confined to any particular districts, but generally diffused over all the provinces. At the head of the ordinary domestic stands linen, which occupies above 810,000 looms. Of these, however only a very small proportion are kept in factories and similar manufacturing establishments, where weaving is followed as a regular trade, and chiefly the finer sorts of goods are made. The number of looms in such establishments is only about 84,000. Of these Silesia alone has more than one-third, and Brandenburg and Westphalia, which rank next to it, each about one-seventh. All the rest of the looms; to the number of about 275,000 are domestic, and are only used as subsidiary to other employments. In almost all these domestic looms only goods of a coarser description are made. The finest next in importance is cotton, which has its chief seat on the Rhine, particularly in the neighbourly loom of Düsseldorf, but is also carried on to a considerable extent in Silesia, particularly in gov. Breslau and also in prov. Brandenburg. It employs about 70 000 looms. The woollen manufacture employs 26,000 looms, of which scarcely one-third are domestic. The latter are chiefly in gov. Gumbinnen, where the peasantry weave enough of coarse woollens to supply their own wants, but the manufacture, properly so called has its chief seats in Brandenburg and the Rhinisch provinces. Next to them are Silesia and Saxony. Silk and mixed silk goods employ about 24 000 looms, of which four fifths belong to gov. Düsseldorf. The greater part of the remainder are at Berlin. Heavy wools employ 2300 looms, and ribbons about 5000. In connection with the above classes, and properly forming branches of the same manufactures, vast quantities of yarn worsted and cotton-twist are spun. The first continues to be spun chiefly by hand, the six-mills throughout the monarchy numbering only 17 with about 29 000 spindles, almost all in Silesia. The worsted is chiefly, and the cotton entirely spun by machinery. The former carried on in 2061 establishments, with 457 108 spindles, has its principal seat in prov. Brandenburg especially in gov. Frankfurt, and after it in the Rhine province. The cotton-mills, numbering 148 with 194 990 spindles, are situated chiefly in the basin of the Rhine, and to a more limited extent in Silesia. The above manufactures and mills have been estimated to furnish the means of subsistence to about 530 000 individuals, but to these a considerable addition should be made for the great number of persons employed in bleaching fields printfields, and dye-works. The manufactures in metal rank next in importance and are supposed to furnish the subsistence of 530 000 persons, of whom, however, only about one-third are actually employed as masters or operatives, the other two-thirds being composed of their families. These manufactures are very various. In iron and steel were the first place belongs to the Rhine province, and the Westphalian gov. Arnsberg. Among particular localities may be specified Suhlberg for its fine saws and tools Aix-la-Chapelle and Burscheid, Altmann and Iserlohn for needles and pins, Hamm and Hagen for locks and various similar kinds of hand tools. In the same localities, also, brassware, moulding wire and thinblades, are made on a very extensive scale. Berlin has long been famed for its fine cutlery, many of which whether as articles of ornament or utility are unsurpassed. In connection with these may be mentioned typefoundry which, as well as printing forms an important branch of industry in Berlin. The leather manufacture is also important, and includes, in addition to ordinary leather the finer varieties of red and white cordovan, and parchment. Pottery, in all its varieties, forms an important branch of industry. For porcelain and the finer kinds of ware, Berlin and St. Martin, near Treves, are the most celebrated localities excellent stoneware of a more common description is made extensively in the S. of prov. Saxony, in Langensalza, and in the Rhinisch province. Common pottery is made all the provinces, more especially in those of the E. and centre. One of its most celebrated localities is Barmen. Glass does not rank high as a Prussian manufacture. The principal localities are gov. Treves Minden, and Oppeln. The most important paper mills are in Silesia, Saxony, and Westphalia, but the quality of the paper is still far inferior to that made in Great Britain, France, and Switzerland. Other manufactures carried on to such an extent as to be of national importance, are refined sugar alcohol, chemistry chemical products, and tobacco. Of these, the last is the most important, and is carried on in very extensive factories in the Rhinisch provinces, in Brandenburg and Saxony. The last manufactures deserving of notice are beer and spirits, the consumption of which is immense, and might with great advantage be very much diminished. The number of breweries exceeds 8000, that of distilleries 7000. The greatest number of distilleries is in the Rhine province, which has about one-third of the whole, and Silesia, which has rather more than one-fourth. Taking the whole raw materials used in producing the spirit at 100 pounds from 75, barley 12 and 10, and wheat about 1 per cent. The whole producer is about 45,000 000 gallons and the value about 29,500,000 sterling. Of the brew the Rhine province has about one-fourth, Westphalia and Silesia each one-sixth, and Saxony one-eighth. The producer is about 244,000,000 quarts, nearly 60,000,000 imperial gallons and is valued at about 21,800 000.

Trade.—The principal exports of Prussia are grain, flax, linseed, rape, turnip, and clover-seed, timber, lime, gypsum, linen and linen yarn, hemp, wool, earthenware, wool, woollen cloth, hosiery and silk, the principal imports cotton and cotton-waste, colonial produce, particularly raw sugar for refining, potash, iron, raw hides, wine, herrings, salt, &c. The establishment of the Zollverein by giving a free interchange of communication between the different states belonging to it, makes it difficult to specify the exact amount of trade which each separate state possesses, but there cannot be a doubt that that of Prussia is very extensive. Both from the nature of the country and the number of navigable streams which intersect it, it enjoys great natural facilities and these have been very greatly extended both by common roads, canals, and railways. The last mode of communication is the most important, and the greatest length of 1850 m having been completed in 1850. In the E. part of the monarchy, and from Berlin as a centre, lines branch off N.W. to Hamburg, N.E. to Stettin, E. to Posen, S.E. to Breslau and thence to Vienna, S. to Leipzig and Dresden and W. through Magdeburg and Hanover and thence to Cologne, the last place forming a centre for the lines of the W. part of the monarchy, though here the railway system is less developed, partly because the natural conformation of the country makes it more difficult, while the admirable means of communication afforded by the Rhine makes it less necessary. The chief line of railways is W. from Cologne, through Aix-la-Chapelle to Brussels. In 1851 the length of electric telegraph lines exceeded that of the railways in operation. The external communications of Prussia are more defective than its internal, the Baltic, notwithstanding its long line of coast, being only an inland sea, with a low shallow coast deficient in good harbours. The shipping, however, in 1851, reached the number of 1497 sailing and 90 steam vessels, the former of 168,284 tons burden. Among the foreign vessels which trade to Prussian ports the tonnage of Great Britain is about one-third more than that of any other nation; the second place is occupied by the Dutch, and the third by the Danes. In some of the ports of Prussia ship-building is carried on with activity. Sixteen build about one-third of the whole and also possesses a much larger tonnage than any other Prussian port.

Coin, Weights, and Measures.—Accounts are kept in six dollars (reichs-thaler), containing 237 68 gr. fine silver, and equal in value to 2s. 11½d. sterling. This dollar is subdivided into 80 silver groshen, each = 13 pence. Besides the metallic there is a paper currency, in notes of 1, 5, 50, 100 and 500 dollars. The standard of length is the Prussian foot = 1.09722 imperial ft. The foot is subdivided into 12 inches, of which 2½ make an ell. The Juden (fathom) is 6 ft., and the rudd 12 ft. The culo contains 2000 ruten = 4.68 miles imperial. For superficial measures the standard is the square of the rudd or the quadrat-rudd, containing of course 144 sq. Prussian ft. The most common land measure is the morgen, containing 180 quadrat-rudd, and = 1.02 ac. imperial. The principal official measures are the schefel, = 1.6 imperial bushel, and the quert of which 8.9 are = an imperial gallon. The ester is = 80, and the ester = 160 querts. The standard of weight is a Prussian cubic foot of distilled water, at the temperature of 15° Reaumur, or very nearly 60° Fah. It is divided into 66 parts, each of which makes a Prussian pfund, or lb = 1.08118 lb. imperial, and the centner, or 110 lb. Prussian, is = 118.881 lb. avoirdupois. The last, or schickel-last, used in measuring the tonnage of vessels, contains 4000 Prussian lb. = 4121 lb. avoirdupois, or 1 ton 17 cwt.

Government and Religion.—Prussia is a monarchy, hereditary in the male line, and from the absence of recognized constitutional checks, was in theory absolute. A more constitutional form of government had long been earnestly desired and had also been distinctly promised, but various causes of delay or protests for it occurred and though the general belief was that it must sooner or later be granted, the wild revolutionary spirit which lately overspread the Continent, and threatened destruction to all constituted authority, threatened to make the period of its promulgation more uncertain than ever. In 1848 however, a National Assembly was summoned, in opening the first session of which, on May 22, the king announced that the ministry would submit a draft of the constitution. This was forthwith produced and voted the legislative power jointly in the king and two houses—an upper house, consisting of the princes of the royal family, and 80 hereditary peers together with 180 members subject to a property qualification, but elected by the people for eight years, and a lower house, the members of which were to be elected, without any property qualification, for four years. This constitution had a very short and stormy existence, and was virtually annihilated by two votes of the assembly one abolishing the order of nobility and the other stopping the supplies. Accordingly, on 8th Nov., the king prorogued the assembly and summoned it to meet on the 37th ult. at Berlin, but at Brandenbourg. The absence of those members who had formerly supported violent measures, made it impossible to constitute a house, and the assembly was finally dissolved on 5th Dec. A new election having taken place the chambers were opened by the king on 30th Feb., 1849, but the proceedings of the lower, or second chamber, were nearly as stormy as before, and it was again formally dissolved on 5th April. The constitution, however nearly in its original form, has been maintained, and the new electoral law officially published on 31st May, 1849, makes the second chamber to consist of 250 deputies, chosen by a suffrage which gives one elector for every 250 souls of the population. As a member of the Germanic Confederation, Prussia holds the second place and has four votes in the Diet. The only part of its territories not included in the Confederation, are Prussia proper, or the united provinces of East and West Prussia, and the province of Posen. The contingent of troops which Prussia furnishes is 79,484 men.

The revenue of Prussia in 1852 was £14,937,449 sterling of which considerably more than one-third is obtained by indirect taxation, and the expenditure, £14,430,496, but in 1849 and 1850 the disbursements considerably exceeded the income. The far heaviest expenditure is in the military department, which absorbs nearly one third of the whole revenue.

The national debt amounts to 553,041,478 franks.—Thus is administered in most of the provinces according to a general code or landrecht established in 1794 but in the greater part of the Rhine province according to the French code—subject, however to certain modifications. For each code, a supreme court sits at Berlin the one called the Gebietliche Ober Tribunal which judges in the last resort wherever the landrecht is in force, and the other called the Rheinische Revision und Cassations Hof, which has similar jurisdiction in all cases decided according to the French code. Over each province a superior appeal court called Ober-Landgericht, presides with a power of reviewing all cases decided within it and in each government is a Land-Oberpret, possessing a right of reviewing the cases decided within the government in the courts of primary resort. These last courts consist of a vast number of local jurisdictions, within which justice is said to be for the most part administered cheaply expeditiously and purely, by judges chiefly appointed by the crown but partly also by private parties in possession of certain patrimonial rights.

Religion.—Though the reigning family is Protestant, there is no extensive religious establishment. The principles of religious toleration are professed, and persons of all denominations are alike eligible for public employment, and possess the same civil rights. The state, however, distinctly recognizes the two great bodies of Protestants and R. Catholics, not only protecting them in their respective rights and properties, but directly interfering in their affairs, more especially in regard to the appointment and payment of their ministers, and to their general management. The Protestants form a very considerable majority, amounting nearly to 10,000,000, while the R. Catholics barely exceed 6,000,000. The Protestants are governed by consistory, the head of which are 866 superintendents. The R. Catholics are governed by two archbishops and six bishops.

Education.—Prussia has taken the lead of Europe in the establishment of a complete system of national education, and has certainly succeeded, not only in placing an excellent course of elementary instruction within the reach of the great body of the people, but in inducing and when that fails, in compelling, them to receive it. The consequence is that the masses of ignorance to be found in almost all the other countries of Europe have no existence here, and that, with rare exceptions, every individual in Prussia can both read and write. This happy result has been obtained first by establishing an adequate number of schools in all parts of the monarchy, and then enforcing attendance by a law, which provides that every child from the age of five years complete, unless certified to be receiving a suitable education at home, or in a private seminary must be in attendance at a national school until such time as the course of instruction therein provided has been received. This course comprises about eight years so that it may be regarded as a general rule that all Prussian children between the ages of six and fourteen are at school. The following table shows the number of schools of various kinds, of teachers and pupils, in 1840 —

	Schools.	Teachers.	Pupils.
Elementary Schools.	5,191	20,463	2,487,003
High and Higher School	60	3,889	89,303
Upper female school.	36	1,918	15,370
Gymnasiums	177	1,044	26,574
			2,808,406
Female Seminaries	46	1,471	4,471
Laboratories	7		4,906

In 1849 the number of children between six and fourteen years of age was 3,223,503 of whom, as seen in the above table, 2,908,406 were at school, leaving a balance of 315,097 to be accounted for partly by private teaching partly by the fact that many do not enter school till they are above six years old, and may leave before they are fourteen, and may doubtless, receive no education during the year in question. The seven universities are those of Berlin, Bonn, Breslau, Greifswalde Halle, Königsberg, and Münster.

Army and Navy.—From the manner in which the great divisions of the Prussian monarchy are isolated from each other and exposed to the assaults of formidable neighbours, its very existence seems to depend on the maintenance of a strong military force and accordingly not only is the army kept up on a larger scale than the population might otherwise justify but care is taken to keep the military spirit alive among all classes, and make every citizen, for part of his life at least, a soldier. The regular army during peace, consists of 127,742 men, or with the reserve, 225,550, and 30,540 horses and is kept up partly by voluntary enlistment, and partly by a conscription which obliges every citizen after attaining his 20th year to serve in the regular army for three years, and for two years thereafter in the war reserve when, in the event of war breaking out, or other emergencies, he may again be compelled to join the regular army. After the lapse of these five years, he enters the landwehr or provincial army which is composed of two years a first and a second. In the former of which he continues till he has completed his 32d year, and in the latter till he has completed his 39th year thus making the whole period during which he is liable to be called upon for the defence of the country amount to 20 years. The total force of the landwehr is 249,612. The landwehr includes all the males in the monarchy, from the ages of 17 to 50, not belonging either to the regular army or landwehr it is called out only in cases of the most urgent necessity when the national existence may be threatened by invasion. The army consists of one brigade, one corps, and twenty smaller units, and two regiments mounting in all 180 guns.

People.—The greater part of the people are Germans, but in several quarters the Lithuanian and Silesian stock preponderates. Thus, in the N.E. corner of the monarchy between the Dejne, Angerp, Goldapp, Prengel, and the Inster and Memel, Lithuanian is spoken, read, written, and taught. The Silesians occupy the E. parts of Gumbinnen, Königsberg, and Marienwerder, the greater part of Posen, and no inconsiderable part of Sillesia. Their number within the monarchy has been estimated at, at least, 2,500,000. The number of French found chiefly in the W part of the monarchy, but partly also in prov. Brandenburg where they are descendants of the French Protestants, who found an asylum here from the tyranny of Louis XIV amounts to about 74,000. The Jews are 218,773.

History.—In the end of the 10th century the shores of the Baltic were inhabited by a number of tribes chiefly of Alan extraction, from one of which called Borislav who occupied the more E. parts, the name of Prussia is supposed to be derived. These tribes were living in barbarism when Adalbert, bishop of Prague, made strenuous efforts for conversion. The work however proceeded slowly and Christianity did not gain a decided ascendancy till 1164. This ascendancy was again lost, and the original pagan possessors were proceeding to make themselves masters of the country, when Christian and Conrad of Masovia, who had previously held it in subjection called in the aid of the Teutonic knights, tempting them with the offer of a grant of all the land which they should succeed in conquering. Herman von Salza, the grand-master of the order, accordingly sent Herman Balk with a force into the country in 1237, and the work of conquest began. Quarrels however, soon arose between the knights and the Poles, and in the wars which ensued, the latter had so much the advantage that at the peace of Thorn in 1466 they obtained a cession in their favour of the W half of the country, and became huge lords of the remainder. With the view of recovering part of what they had lost, or at least securing themselves against further losses, the knights, in 1511, made a bold attempt to break the graves of Brandenburg, nephew of Sigismund of Poland, for their grand-master. After various unsuccessful negotiations, he declared war against the Poles. Neither side having gained a decided advantage, a truce was agreed upon in 1521 and the grand-master having made a journey into Germany, became acquainted, first with the reformer, Osiander at Nuremberg and afterwards with Luther himself, who urged him to lay aside the dress of the order make himself temporal prince of Prussia, and hold it under Poland as his fief lord. On his return, Luther's found encouragement so favourable that he followed Luther's advice and after negotiating with Sigismund, entered peacefully into temporal possession. He afterwards married Anna Dorothea of Denmark, gave powerful support to the Reformation, caused the Bible to be translated into Polish and Lithuanian and founded the university of Königsberg. He died in 1565, and was succeeded by his son, on whose death in 1618, the succession opened to George William, elector of Brandenburg with which electorate Prussia has ever since been united. George William died of the plague in 1640, and was succeeded by Frederick William, usually, surnamed the Great Elector who found his dominions devastated by pestilence and war but soon so distinguished himself both in the cabinet and the field, that affairs began to wear a much more prosperous appearance. During a long and successful reign of 48 years he obtained a recognition of his sovereignty over Prussia, and increased it by the addition of the greater part of Hinder Pomerania, the bishoprics of Halberstadt, Minden and Cambrin, the archbishopric of Magdeburg, and the territories of Ulster Mark, and Ravensburg. On his death in 1688 he left his dominions in good order, free from debt, and defended by an army of 85,000 men. His son, Frederick III., had none of his father's talents, but became the first king of Prussia by his coronation at Königsberg in 1701. He was succeeded in 1713 by his son, Frederick William I. who proved a patron of science and art, encouraged foreigners, who introduced many valuable manufactures, carefully husbanded the resources of the country and greatly improved its agriculture, but is better known for his capricious and tyrannical conduct which he pursued towards his family, and more especially towards his son and successor Frederick, surnamed the Great, who came to the throne in the year 1740. Under him Prussia became one of the leading powers of Europe. His chief greatness is to be ascribed to the conquest of Sillesia, and a promising of a far less justifiable nature, the partition of Poland. During his reign, the territory of the monarchy was nearly doubled, but the population, which at his accession did not exceed 2,500,000, rose to more than 6,000,000. He died in 1786, and was succeeded by Frederick William II., who gave good hopes at the commencement of his reign, but ultimately betrayed a despotic tendency, and deprived Prussia of much of the European influence which she had acquired under his predecessor. A great accession of territory, however, was obtained, particularly by the dismemberment of Poland, which, only partially carried into effect under Frederick the Great, was now completed. But while thus employed in perpetually dismembering an independent kingdom, his own territory became suddenly exposed to a similar fate by the breaking out of the French Revolution and its subsequent progress. In the midst of preparations for opposing it he died, in 1797, and was succeeded by Frederick William III, whose reign, which at one time threatened to be the most disastrous which Prussia had witnessed since she became a kingdom, was ultimately prosperous and glorious. Not only was the independence of the kingdom secured by the overthrow of Bonaparte, but its limits were greatly extended and a series of enlightened measures introduced which have contributed in a remarkable degree to its internal improvement. Under the reigning monarch Frederick William IV who ascended the throne at the decease of his father in 1840, Prussia passed more fortunately through the remarkable political crisis of 1848 than many of the central European states, and has received a constitution. See SUPPLEMENT.

PRUSSIA (East) a prov. Prussian State, forming their N. E. extremity, and bounded N W by the Baltic, N E Russia, E and S Poland, and W West Prussia. Length N to S. nearly 200 m. breadth, 150 m. It is divided into two governments, Gumbinnen and Königsberg, and subdivided into 36 circles. Königsberg is the capital. Area, 12,801 sq. m. Pop. 1,441,499.

PRUSSIA (West), a prov. Prussian State, bounded N by the Baltic, E East Prussia and Poland, S Poland and prov. Posen, S W Brandenburg and W and N W Pomerania. It is very irregular in form but has a mean length N to S W of about 180 m. with a mean breadth of 70 m. It is divided into govs. Danzig and Marienwerder and subdivided into 31 circles. Danzig is the capital. Area 7547 sq. m. Pop. 994,681.

PRZEKA, or PRZESLAWKO a market in Hungary, Lidzer Danube, co. and 11 m. N E Trentschin, near r. bank Wag with a castle church, and monastery. P 1850.

PRUTH (anc. Harceus), a river, Europe rises in the E end of Carpathian mountains, in the S E of Galatz flows easterly to E. past Cernowitza, then S E E. forming the boundary between Moldavia and the Russian gov. Bessarabia, and after a course of more than 500 m. joins r. bank Danube, about 12 m. below Galatz. Its principal effluents are on the right, the Chernowitza, Elan, and Kagariul and on the left the Tschirg, Regidula, and Lepowitza.

PRZESLAWITZ, a tn. Russian Poland 55 m. N Warsaw, with three churches, two old monasteries, and a general trade. Pop. 1411.

PRZELAUTSCH, or BEREKLICH, a tn. Bohemia, circle and 14 m. N W Chrudin, on the Elbe, with a church. Pop. 1700.

PRZEMYSL, or PRZEMISLA, a tn. Austria, Galiela, r. bank Dan, here crossed by a handsome covered bridge, 56 m. W by S Lemberg. It is walled has tolerably well-built houses, narrow streets and an old ruined castle perched on a height; two Greek cathedrals and numerous other churches, a university, theological and philosophical institute, gymnasium, high school, military school, and three hospital manufactures of linen, and articles in wood. Pop. 4060.

PRZETITZ, or BRZETITZ, a tn. Bohemia, circle and 12 m. N N W Klattau with a handsome church, manufactures of leather and a trade in fat cattle. Pop. 1638.

PRZEWOZEK, a tn. Austria, Galiela, 75 m. W N W Lemberg, in a fertile plain. It is a well-built, handsome town with a cathedral church, a castle, convent of the Sisters of Mercy school, infirmary and manufactures of linen and cloth. Pop. 2650.

PRZIBRAJA, a village in Bohemia, circle Brann, 35 m. S W W Prague, on the Litawka. It contains a deanery church, and an archbishop's palace; and is the seat of a superior mining directory. Near it lead and silver are extensively worked. Pop. 4100.

PRZIBOWITZ, a vil. Bohemia, circle and 35 m. N E. Dauden, at the foot of the Riesengebirge with a parish church and glass-works. Pop. 1810.

PRARA, an isl. Turkey. See TRAKIA.

PRASA, a river, or PRASA, a river Russia, rises a little N. E. Obdow, gov. Kozak; flows S. E. into gov. Poltawa, which it traverses almost due S., and joins L. bank Dniester after a course of about 300 m., chief affluents, the Kharul and the Goltra.

PRKOV, a gov. Russia, bounded N by St. Petersburg, N E. Novgorod, E. Yar, S. E. Smolensk, S. Vinnik, W. Livonia. greatest length, N W to S. E., 202 m., greatest breadth, 110 m., area, 11,408 sq. m. The surface towards the S. E. is rather elevated, being traversed by the Valdai Hills, but sinks gradually down near the centre, having only a gentle slope towards the N and W. Immense numbers of blocks of granite lie scattered in all quarters. The whole government belongs to the basin of the Balto, the S. Dwina, which drains the S. E., carrying its waters into the Gulf of Riga, and the Volkhova, Chelone and Lovat, with other small tributaries carrying the rest of the drainage into the Gulf of Finland. The soil is throughout of poor quality and can only be made to yield tolerable crops by heavy manuring. Wheat is seldom grown and the principal crops are oats and barley, which are raised in considerable quantities so as to leave a surplus for export. A considerable extent of ground is sown with hemp and flax. Forests also are extensive but the wood is not of the best quality, and oak is seldom met with. Pine is very prevalent and furnishes the means of manufacturing large quantities of pitch. The only other manufacture of importance is leather. Prkov is divided into eight districts. Pop. (1850) 701,000.

PRKOV, or PRASKOV a tn. Russia, cap. above gov. r. bank Vinnika, which here receives the Liesova, 105 m. S W St. Petersburg. It is walled, flanked with towers, all in a very dilapidated state as are also many of the houses. It consists of the Kremlin, the Central city the Great city, and a considerable suburb. All the private houses, and the far greater part of the public edifices, are of wood. The finest buildings are in the Kremlin. Among others are the octidral of very little architectural merit, but gorgeously decorated, and the palace of the ancient princes of Prkov now occupied by the archbishop. The number of churches amounts to 80 but more than a third of them are in disuse. The principal manufactures is Russian leather and there is a considerable trade in hemp, flax, tallow hides &c., with Narva, and other assemblages, on the Gulf of Finland. Prkov is the see of an archbishop and possesses a theological seminary a Bible society and a well managed hospital. It is said to have been founded by the Princess Olga towards the end of the 10th century. Pop. 8000.

PRKOV a lake, Russia, in N W corner, gov. Prkov and S W corner gov. Petersburg immediately S E. Lake Peipus, into which it discharges itself by a channel, about 3 m. wide, greatest length, N W to S. E. 27 m. greatest breadth 15 m. Its only tributary is the Volkhova, which enters at its S. E. corner.

PTCHAI SKO or PRCHAI SKO, a river and lake in the N W of gov. Yeniseisk. The lake, situated S. of the Bay of Tavak, is about 35 m. long by 15 m. broad, and contains several islands. The river issues from the lake, flows N., and after a course of about 150 m. falls into the Bay of Pechora, in the Arctic Ocean, between the mouths of the Ob and Yenisei.

PTITCI, a river, Russia, rises in gov. Minsk flows S. E. and S., and joins L. bank Pripyet, 20 m. above Moser, total course, 200 m. principal affluents, the Orla.

PUBLAW, par. Eng. Somerset, 1835 ac. Pop. 810.

PUCH PRIZ, a tn. Buzna, W coast Gulf of Buzna 72 m. S. S. W. Rankok lat. 12° 45' N. lon. 101° E.

PUCHO, or POCHOW a market in Hungary, Higher Danube, co. and N. E. Trentschin r. bank Wag, with two churches, a castle, manufactures of earthenware and woollen cloth and a considerable trade in the latter. Pop. 1845.

PUCKINGTON, par. England on Somerset 610 ac. Pop. 281.

PUCKLECHURCH, par. England, Gloucester, 2428 ac. Pop. 981.

PUDDINGTON, two pars. Eng.—1 Bedford, 3770 ac. Pop. 612.—2 Devon 1261 ac. Pop. 515.

PUDDLEHINTON See PRUDLOVITZ.

PUDDLESTONE—Watts Water par. Eng. Hereford, 1743 ac. Pop. 516.

PUDDLETOWN See PRUDLOVITZ.

PUDEWITZ, or PUMMANA, a tn. Prussia, prov and 15 m. E-N.E. Posen, between two small lakes. It contains a R. Catholic church, and a synagogue. Pop. 1619.

PUDLEIN or PONDONIN, a vil. Hungary, co. Eger, 1 bank Paprad, 18 m. N.W. W. Lusatia. It is walled; has a castle, church, Pietist college, and high school; and a trade in hemp and linseed-oil. Pop. 2300.

PUDERHUSEN, a vil. Hungary. Nijther Danube, co. and 28 m. N.E. Egerburg; with a church, manufactures of earthenware, and saw-mills. Pop. 1075.

PUDOSH, a tn. Russia, gov. Olonets, r. bank Wello, the navigation of which is here interrupted by a cataract 69 m. E. Petrosavodsk. It has a wooden church and near it is a glass-work. Pop. 1094.

PUDEY, a tn. and township, England, co. York, on the brow of a lofty scarp above the valley of the Aire, 6 m. W. Leeds. It has recently increased from a few scattered hamlets to a considerable town and has a spacious and elegant modern church, with an embattled and gilded tower. Baptist, Independent, Moravian, Primitive, and Wesleyan Methodist chapels several schools, including the Moravian institution at Fulneck, a mechanics institution, building stone quarries and extensive manufactures of woollen cloth, in which most of the population is employed. Pop. 10,002.

PUDUGOTTA, a tn. Hindoostan, presid. and 220 m. N.E. W. Madras, prov. Carnatic lat. 10° 16' N; lon. 78° 56' E, remarkable for its wide, regular and clean streets. There is here a palace consisting of an irregular congregation of detached cottages with a fine tank, and handsome Hindoo temple, all within the same inclosure.

PUEBLA, several places. Spain.—1. A tn. in tl. Majorca. It has regularly-built houses, straight and broad streets, two squares, a townhouse, fish and flesh markets, church of Com. pante order and several flour-mills. Domestic weaving as carried on. Pop. 3170.—2. (de Alcora), A vil. Extremadura, prov. and 80 m. E. Badajoz with a townhouse, a prison, a palace belonging to the duke of Ossa two schools an hospital, a monastery a suppressed Franciscan convent, and a church several flour-mills, and linen-weaving. Pop. 2202.—3. (de Almoraz), A vil. New Castile, prov. and 47 m. S.E. Toledo with a townhouse, school, church, and large and handsome hermitage flour and fulking mills and some traffic in grain. Pop. 1855.—4. (de Arco), A vil. Valencia, prov. Castellon-de-la Plana, on an eminence on the Mijares. It has a townhouse and prison a primary school a church, and a hermitage. Pop. including the suburb of Campos, 2158.—5. (de Canille), A vil. Andalusia, prov. and 86 m. S.E. Seville, on the Corbones, the elegant waters of which generate much disease. It has a good townhouse, a public granary two schools, a church and three hermitages five oil and two flour mills. Pop. (agricultural) 3361.—6. (de Dos Pedregos), A tn. Andalusia, prov. and 80 m. N.E. Granada, with an hospital, a granary, two schools, a townhouse, four churches linen and hane weaving, two soap-manufactories a fulling and six flour mills and a trade in cloths, men hosen and other cotton tissues, milk, and hardware. Pop. 6154.—7. (de Don Pedro), A vil. New Castile, prov. Toledo with a townhouse, prison, granary flesh-market, two primary schools a church, public arsenal, and two hermitages; and some traffic in fine woollen, hardware, and Valen de ware. Pop. 2948.—8. (de Gerson), A tn. Andalusia, prov. Huelva, at the Portuguese frontier with a church, a chapel of ease, two elementary schools, and a granary. Most of the men are employed as mulesters and the women are occupied in manufacturing woollen cloth for home consumption. Pop. 3655.—9. (de Eger), A vil. and com. Aragon, prov. Teruel, 50 m. from Huesca tolerably well built with a church, two primary schools, manufactures of linen, an oil and a flour mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 3321.—10. (de la Coladilla), A tn. Extremadura, prov. and 15 m. E. Badajoz, near the Guadiana. It has a large parish church, with three altars, a church, school, several mills, and a trade in corn and wine. P. 1890.—11. (de los Infantes), A tn. Andalusia, prov. and 40 m. N.E. Seville with two churches a courthouse, school, and several oil and flour mills. Pop. 1490.—12. (de Lillo), A tn. prov. and about 30 m. from Leon with a church, primary school, several round tower, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, and numerous mills. Pop. 1128.—13. (de Montalban), A tn. New Castile, prov. and 90 m. W. Toledo. It is very well built; has a parish church, suppressed convent castle, courthouse, primary school, hospital, and beautiful nursery oil and flour mills, and an annual fair. Pop. 4458.—14. (de Valverde), A tn. Aragon, prov. and 18 m. S.E. Teruel. It is a vil. well built; has a church, a primary school, and some trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 1880.—15. (de Sancho Perez), A vil. Extremadura, prov. and 40 m. S.E. E. Badajoz, with a townhouse, granary, two primary schools, a handsome Gothic church, all of marble, and with much fine work on the 8 entrance, an alameda, and a hall-way; an oil and several flour mills, and a soap-work. Pop. 1770.—16. (de Valverde), A vil. prov. and 10 m. N.W. Valencia, 1 bank Turia, with a townhouse, prison, and parish church. Pop. (chiefly agricultural) 2102.—17. (del Maestro), A tn. Extremadura, prov. and 70 m. S. Badajoz with a church courthouse, prison, primary school, hospital, manu factories of soap and an oil and several flour mills. Pop. 1154.—18. (del Duque or Puella de Eger), A tn. and com. Spain, prov. and about 85 m. from Valencia with two churches, a courthouse, primary school, hospital, manufactures of linen and a trade in corn and fruit. Pop. 1603.—19. (Nueva), A vil. New Castile, prov. and 48 m. N.W. Toledo, with a townhouse, prison, elementary school, church, hermitage a flour and 22 oil mills. Pop. 2364.

PUEBLA-JUNTO-A-CORIA a tn. Spain Andalusia, prov. and 10 m. S.W. Seville, on a height above r. bank Guadalquivir. It has a parish church, courthouse, prison two schools, and a beautiful fountain an oil-mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1508.

PUEBLA, (La) a dep. Mexican Confederation lat. 16 15 to 16° 50' N. lon. 97° 5' to 98° 30' W. bounded S. by the Pacific and surrounded on other sides by Vera Cruz and Oaxaca; area, 12 (42 sq. m. Its centre is intersected by the Cordillera de Anahuac, in which is the volcano of Popocatepetl, the highest mountain in Mexico. Its principal river is the Nacsa. The soil is fertile in corn maize, and fruit-trees. Cotton, sugar and other tropical productions also succeed well and there are besides silver-mines and quarries of excellent marble. The principal towns are La Puebla, Tlaxcala, Tepic, and Amozac. Pop. 600,000.

PUEBLA, (La) DE LOS ANGELES or LA PUEBLA, a city, Mexico cap. above dep. finely situated on a declivity 74 m. S.E. Mexico, next to which it is the largest in the Confed. nation. It has wide, regular, and well-paved streets, supplied with foot-paths houses generally three stories high with flat roofs, large and elegant squares in the principal one of which is situated the cathedral a magnificent structure. In all, there are 72 religious edifices including 48 large churches, many of them highly decorated and above 100 towers rising above the houses, impart a characteristic feature to the city. There are also several colleges, academies, and schools, and a number of almshouses and hospitals. The principal manu factories consist of glass, earthenware, and soap. P. 71,621.

PUEBLA-NUOVO-DEI-MAR a vil. Spain, prov. and 2 m. L. Valencia, on the sea-coast, 1 bank Turia. It has a townhouse, several endowed schools, a church, and a hermitage. Fishing is the sole occupation of the inhabitants. As no very distant date the site of this village was covered by the sea, and more recently it was occupied by only a few cabins of fishermen. During the heats of summer it is much resorted to for sea-bathing. Pop. 4537.

PUPNTE, several places, Spain.—1. (del Arzobispo), A tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 64 m. W. S.W. Toledo, r. bank Tago, here crossed by a handsome bridge. It has three tolerable squares, a church, archbishop's palace, two endowed schools, an hospital, manufactures of linen and china ware brick and tile works and a considerable trade. Pop. 1015.—2. (de Gudi), A tn. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 45 m. S. Cordova, on a height above the Guadalquivir. It has two churches, a courthouse, prison, and primary school; manufactures of earthenware, brick-works, and several oil and flour mills. Pop. 1006.—3. (de Zues), A tn. Spain, Navarra, 10 m. S.W. Pamplona, with straight, well-paved, clean streets, well-built houses two churches, a prison, two schools, two churches, and a hermitage; flour and oil mills, and breezy distilleries. Pop. (agricultural), 3683.

PUENTEDEUME, a seaport, Spain, Galicia, prov. and 12 m. N.E. E. Coruña, 1 bank, estuary of the Eume with a townhouse, an old palace belonging to the counts of Berwick and Aliba prison, several elementary schools, a magnificent church with three naves, and barracks. The river Euse is here spanned by a very long and handsome bridge, though out of repair, one of the most remarkable in Spain, built in 1865-1866. Fishing is the chief employment, and a small quantity of linen is manufactured. Pop. 1798.

PUEBLOS-DE-GARCIA RODRIGUEZ, a tn. Spain, Galicia, prov. and 39 m. E.N.E. Coruña, consisting of a number of well built houses clustering round the parish church. It has an endowed school and hospital. Pop. 1890.

PUEBLO, PUERO, or PUERO, a river, U. States, rises in E. of New Mexico, to the S.E. of Santa-Fé, flows S.E. skirting the mountain range of Guadalupe, and traversing part of Texas, and after a course of above 400 m. joins the Rio-Grande del Norte about 50 m. above Aguavilla.

PUEBLS, a tn. and Belgium, prov. and 11 m. S.W. Antwerp, with several breweries and distilleries, a salt-refinery and several corn and oil mills and manufactures of linen, woollen, and cotton fabrics, hats, leather, soap, earthenware, bricks, tiles, &c. Pop. 4096.

PUEBLO-DE-ILLO See PORTO-BEZO

PUEBLO-CABRERO See PORTO-CABRILLO

PUEBLO-DE-CANARIA, a tn. Canary Islands, E. coast, in Fuerteventura, near the port of its name, which was declared a free port in 1855. The residence of various foreign consuls, with a church, a school and exports of produce. Pop. 474.

PUEBLO-DE-LA CAÑA-DE-OROTAVA, a seaport in Canary Islands, S. coast, Isl. Tenerife. It has paved and clean streets, five squares in one of which is a pretty almshouse. A town house, a prison, an hospital, two churches, and two schools. Agriculture, and rearing silk-worms are the chief occupations. It was declared a free port in 1852. The anchorage is bad, wine, brandy, almonds, cochineal silk, lavilla, are exported and sugar, coffee, mulberry, scotch, hides, slaves, oil rice, &c., imported. Pop. 8459.

PUEBLO-DE-LA SELVA, a maritime tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 35 m. Gerona, with a church, a school, and two mosques, one of them only in good preservation, limestone quarries, and a trade in wine oil, and corn. Pop. 1385.

PUEBLO DE SANTA MARIA [anc. Monestio Portus] a city Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 1 m. S.E. Cadix, a bank Guadalete, here crossed by a bridge of boats near its mouth in the bay of Cadix. Lat. 36° 35' N. Lon. 6° 18' W. The houses are generally built like those of that city, but are more spacious, and have much external decoration in glass and painting and the streets are generally broad and well paved. It has a pretty theatre, a bull ring where was given the grand bull fight to the Duke of Wellington described by Lord Byron, five promenades, one of them planted with orange and other trees, an asylum for the poor a foundling hospital, an hospital for the sick a granary, infantry and cavalry barracks, a custom-house, a good edifice near the mole extensive wine-cellars a court-house, in the ex-convent of Dominicans a public primary school for each sex, and nine private ones, a clear of Latin parish church in the Gothic style, chapel of ease, three nunneries, with churches open for public worship besides several other churches and hermitages. Agriculture is the chief occupation, in connection therewith the preparation of wine and liquors for exportation. There are two soap manufactures two of hats, one of starch, one of white-linen of beer, three of brandy seven of liquors, five tanneries, and four potteries. This is one of the three great towns of wine export, and rivals Jerez and San Lúcar and its vicinity to Cadix, the centre of exchange, is favourable to business. The principal articles of import are wood and iron, chiefly for ships. Steam-boats ply regularly between the Puerto and Cadix. Pop. 17,930.

PUEBLO-DE-LA-PAZ, a harbour N.E. coast, Isl. Cuba; lat. 21° 17' N. lon. 76° 45' W. (a). It has a long and narrow entrance, but afterwards widens out, stretching about 9 m. E. to W. and 6 m. N. to S. It affords excellent anchorage, fit for any class or number of vessels, contains several lakes and has low marshy shores.

PUEBLO-DE-PUERTO (MARIA SANTA), an island city, Cuba, cap. central, pop. 835 m. S. by E. Havana. From its island position, and want of water carriage, the trade of this place bears no just proportion to the number of its inhabitants. Its produce, chiefly sugar and tobacco, is shipped, and it receives its foreign supplies through the Bay of Nuevitas, which lies 40 m. N.E. It is the seat of the supreme court of justice for all the Spanish colonies in America. Pop. of its jurisdiction (1845) 23,996.

PUEBLO-DE-LA MAN a seaport, Bolivia. See COCHZA.

PUEBLO-DE-LA MAN, a vil. Spain, New Castle, prov. and 20 m. S. Ciudad Real; with a town-house, prison, granary, two schools, and a church. extensive manufactures of lace, employing 1200 women two potteries, two flour and three oil mills. Near it are mineral baths of some repute. P. 2390.

PUEBLO-DE-LA MAN, a seaport, Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 7 m. E. Cadix. It has straight and rather broad streets, several squares, in one of which stand the town-house prison, and public granary. It also has a church several schools an edifice, a posthouse, a mole and ship and manufactures of coarse linen leather, pottery, vermilion, and starch. P. 3981.

PUEBLO-DE-LA MAN a tn. Spain Andalusia, prov. and 50 m. from Cadix, a bank Guadalete indifferently built with a church school and a trade in oil, corn and cattle. P. 1569.

PUFFIN ISLAND an islet, Ireland co. Kerry St. Finian's Bay 3½ m. S. by E. Brae-head, Valcuis Island.

PUGET an island U. States, Oregon in the estuary of the Columbia river 4½ m. long dividing the channel into two parts, and affording a navigable passage on either side, of which the N. is deepest, having 10 to 12 fathoms.

PUGET SOUND, an extensive inlet, W. coast, N. America, in N.W. of Oregon territory. It is interspersed with numerous islets and forms the S. portion of Admiralty Inlet, which communicates on the N. with the Pacific, through San Juan de Fuca Strait.

PUGHMAN, PUGHMAN or PUGHMAN a mountain range, Afghanistan subordinate to that of Hindoo Koh stretching along its S. base for about 100 m. lat. 34° 40' N. lon. 68° 40' E. the highest summit is supposed to be 10,000 ft. to 15,000 ft. These mountains are of primary formation, and are black barren, and destitute of vegetation.

PUIG a tn. Spain, prov. and 10 m. N.E. Valencia, with a church, courthouse manufactures of white lead, and several oil and flour mills. Pop. 1759.

PUIGCHERDA, a tn. Spain Catalonia, prov. and 70 m. from Cerons, with a church, courthouse, gymnasium, and primary school manufactures of woollen cloth and worsted and a trade, chiefly transit, in tallow, wool, and agricultural produce. Pop. 1558.

PUKANZ, PUKANZ, or ILAKA HANTA, a mining to Hungary Higher Danube, on Heath 9 m. S.W. Scherzeritz, the seat of a mining directory its mines of gold, silver and copper once important, are now only worked to a small extent. A good deal of wine is produced. Pop. 2360.

ULAWY, a tn. Russian Poland 39 m. N.W. Lublin r. bank Vistula, here crossed by a bridge of boats. It is well built, has a beautiful church and a magnificent castle containing a library of 60,000 vols, including many valuable MSS. and other good collections. Pop. 3000.

PULBOROUGH a vil. and par. England, co. Sussex 9 m. N.N.E. Arundel with a church in the early English style, a circular mound and vestige of other ancient buildings sandstone quarries, and a weekly corn market. Area of par. 6896 ac. Pop. 1825.

PULFORD, par. Eng. Cheshire; 2567 ac. Pop. 836.

PULHAM, three pars. Eng. — 1, (Lancs.) Dorset. 2370 ac. Pop. 288 — 2, (St. Mary Magdalen, or Pulhammarke) with 2, (St. Mary the Virgin), Norfolk. 5635 ac. Pop. 2523.

PULICAT, a maritime in Hindostan, pres. and 23 m. N. Madras, lat. 18° 25' N. lon. 80° 24' E., formerly belonging to the Dutch, at the E. entrance of a lake of same name. The lake on which it stands is an inlet of the sea, with a very narrow entrance on the S. It is 40 m. long, by 6 m. broad and communicates by canal with Madras.

PULKAU, or BELKA a market tn. Lower Austria, at the foot of the Marchaberg with a church manufactures of cloth and some trade in wood and wine. Pop. 1856.

PULLOCHILLI, a par. Eng. Bedford 1760 ac. P. 688.

PULO-PINANG, an isl. Malacca Strait. See PRANG.

PULO-WAT Banda Islands. See AY (PULO).

PULRANO or PULRANO, a vil. Naples, prov. Otranto, 10 m. S.E. Taranto with a convent inhabitants chiefly employed in the culture of cotton. Pop. 1100.

PULSENITZ, a tn. Saxony, circle Bautzen, on a stream of the same name, 15 m. N.E. Dresden; with a palace, church, and chapel; and manufactures of linen, ribbons, and earthenware. The Emperor Alexander of Russia, and Frederick William of Prussia, had a conference here in 1813. P 3173

PULTAWA a gov. and in Russia. See POZNAWA

PULTUSK, a town, Poland, partly on a bank and partly on an island of the Narw, 83 m. N.N.E. Warsaw. It has three churches, a synagogue, a convent of the Sisters of Mercy, with a hospital, several old monasteries, a gymnasium, and a castle, a distillery, and some general trade. The Poles were here defeated by Charles XII. in 1708, and the Russians by the French in 1806. Pop. (1841), 4332 PULVERBACH (Caracas) par Eng Salop, 4063 ac. Pop. 574.

PUNA, an old Ecuador dep. and 40 m. S.W. Guayaquil, in the Gulf of Guayaquil, separated from the mainland by a narrow channel. It is 20 m. long, by 10 m. broad, mostly well wooded, and on the N. side has the small town of Puna, with a good harbour where ships bound for Guayaquil, that cannot pass the bar of the river, take in their cargoes.

PUNCH a small tn. Punjab, at the foot of the Punch Pass S. slope of the mountains forming the E. boundary of Cashmere, lat. 33° 51' N. lon. 73° 53' E. The pass is 8500 ft., and the tn. 2380 ft. alt. Pop. 1000.

PUNCHESTON par Wales, 1 embroke 1725 ac. P 243

PUNCHSHIR or PUNEMASH, a valley, Afghanistan stretching S.W. along the S. side of the Hindu Kohok for about 60 m. from the Khawak Pass lat. 35° 42' N. lon. 69° 58' E., with a breadth nowhere exceeding 3 m., and generally not more than 1½ m. height above sea-level, at the upper extremity, 13,200 ft., at the lower, about 7000 ft. A river of some name, flowing through the centre of the valley is fed by numerous streams from its sides. The soil is naturally so sterile that there is scarcely a single tree of spontaneous growth but careful culture has covered the surface with groves and orchards of mulberry and other fruit trees, and every spot capable of yielding grain is turned to account. The chief articles of food is bread made of the flour of dried mulberries. In the upper part of the valley there are said to be lead and silver mines. The inhabitants, considered to be of Persian descent, are expert in the use of fire-arms, and make good soldiers, but except industry cannot be said to possess any virtue being of a rapacious and sanguinary temper. And their mutual dissensions allow them to unite for any common purpose, it has been estimated that they could muster 10,000 fighting men.

PUNCKNOWLE par Eng Durut, 2160 ac. P 467

PUNDERFOOR, a tn Hindoostan presid. Bombay prov. Begoor 1 bank Beera, 110 m. S.E. Poona lat. 17° 42' N.; lon. 75° 28' E. It is regularly and well built has an extensive market-place, amply supplied not only with grain, cloth, and the other productions of the country, but also with a variety of British articles, an entire street being occupied by the native merchants of Bombay and Poona. Pop. estimated at 25,000.

PUNGUDUTIVE, a small sd., S.W. Jaffnapatam, N. end of Ceylon, about 10 m. in circumference. It is rocky and unfit for cultivation, but a number of goats are reared, and from their milk, ghee for exportation is made, but the chief employment of the inhabitants is taking fish and oysters, which abound. Pop. 2415.—(Ceylon Gazetteer)

PLVHETE, a tn. and par Portugal, prov. Beira-Alta, 12 m. S.E. Thamar near the confluence of the Zambezi with the Tagus, with some trade, chiefly export to Lisbon in oil, fruit, wine, and particularly a fine raisin called Malvona. Pop. 1800.

PUNITZ, a tn. Prussia, prov. and 45 m. S. Posen, on the Landgraben, with a R. Catholic church manufactures of linen, and a brewery. Charles XII. defeated the Saxons here in 1705. Pop. 1685

PUNJ DEAN, or PUNJ DEAN, a Tharooman stationary camp, Khosraon, on the route from Harat to Marva, 150 m. N. Harat, lat. 36° 4' N. lon. 69° 41' E. It consists of about 300 tents of black felt, arranged in two squares, among ruined vineyards and fields no longer cultivated, and fitted up with considerable comfort, having fine carpets, and such furniture as is suited to a military life. The inhabitants, though scrupulous in observing the forms of hospitality, are in general lowest stage-dealers. Punj-Dean is a frontier post of the Khan of Khiva.

PUNJAB [Pervan, the 'Five Rivers'], an extensive territory in N.W. of Hindoostan, formerly under the dominion of the Sikhs, but since Feb. 1848, attached to the presidency of Bengal, in British India, and so called from its position amongst five great affluents of the Indus, which bounds it on the N.W., the Indus forming its W. and the Sutlej its E. boundary. It extends from lat. 29° to 34° N. lon. 71° to 78° E., and is of triangular shape, having its apex at the confluence of the Indus and the Peroual (or union of the five rivers); lat. 28° 55' N.; and lon. 70° 25' E. area (including the Jalandhar Doab and Kala territory) 78,650 sq. m. The territory included under its name is bounded N. by the Hindoo range of the Himalaya mountains, and W. by the Khyber and Soliman ranges, thus comprising the main stream of the Indus as that part of its course.

General Description.—Its extreme northern portion is rendered mountainous by spurs, or offshoots of the great Himalaya system, but with these exceptions, the surface is for the most part an extensive plain, gradually sloping N.E. to S.W., in the direction of the five great rivers, by which it is so abundantly irrigated. These rivers (proceeding W. to E.) are the Jullum, [see Hydaspes] (Chenab, [see Jhelum]), the Ravi, [see Roodkee] (Ravi, [see Ravi]), the Beas, [see Baital] (Anno, Hindoo) and these, together furnish an aggregate navigation through the country of nearly 3000 m., dividing it at the same time into five districts, or doabs (countries between two rivers) namely the Rindi Bagar Doab, between the Indus and Jullum, the Cheenut Doab, between the Jullum and Chenab; the Retchna Doab between the Chenab and Ravi; the Bari or Manja Doab, between the Ravi and Beas, and the Jalandhar or Rati Doab between the Beas and Sutlej. Of these, the first is by far the largest, but also the most sterile and least inhabited, abounding with barren mountains and rugged declivities interspersed here and there with rich and fertile valleys. The second doab is mostly level, and furnished by Beas with a sterile waste of unwatered, the abode of shepherds, and scantily irrigated; the Retchna and Bari Doabs are equally bare and neglected, though susceptible of high cultivation, while the Jalandhar Doab, unlike the rest, is highly cultivated and well peopled, and excelled in climate and productions by any province in India. The Sikhs allowed almost the whole country to fall into a state of extreme neglect.

Geology, Soil, and Climate.—The upper regions close to the Himalaya present occasional beds of granite and secondary formation, consisting chiefly of graywacke compact limestone, sandstone, gypsum, and red clay, and containing all but inexhaustible beds of fossil salt, particularly that mountain chain specially termed the 'salt range', W. of Jalandhar. Gold is found in the beds of the Indus and Chenab. Iron plumbago, antimony, alum, and sulphur are found in the hill country, nitre is obtained abundantly in the alluvial plains, and coal-beds exist on the left or E. bank of the Indus. The soil of the level country varies remarkably from stiff clay and loam, to sand, mixed with each other in variable proportions, and with vegetable matter, besides which, carbonates and sulphates of soda are sometimes mixed with it in such quantities as to render the land almost worthless. The climate is hot and dry and little rain falls except in the higher country, and under the influence of the S.W. monsoon. The winters are cool even to an European, the temperature varying from 34° to 75° Fah., seldom higher, whereas in summer, the heat is excessive, and more oppressive even than in the most arid parts of Arabia.

Vegetable Productions.—The indigenous vegetation of the Punjab bears a close resemblance to that in the plains of the Ganges, but, as its natural resources have been but little improved, the cultivated products of the two countries admit of no comparison. According to Burnes, the soil amply repays the labour, for such is its strength, that a crop of wheat, before yielding its grain, is twice mowed down as fodder for cattle, and then once, producing an abundant harvest. The principal grain crops are wheat and barley, of excellent quality, buckwheat and millet, peas, vetches, and mustard, sesamum, and other oil seeds, extensively raised in large quantities. The crops of indigo and sugar are very rich, and both articles are plentifully exported. The tobacco plant also grows luxuriantly, especially about Multan, and opium was lately grown pretty extensively. Among the fruits are the date, orange, fig, vine, apple, mulberry, baum, and mango, but these occur only in a cultivated state, and near the towns. Large trees are scarce and extensive tracts may be passed without meeting anything larger than mimosa, acacia, camel thorn, and other bushes for which rose-wood-fuel is very scarce, being commonly replaced by cow dung.

Animals.—The zoology of the Punjab is richer and more varied than its botany. Tigers of enormous size abound in the jungles, nor are lions by any means uncommon besides which there are great numbers of panthers and leopards, wild cats, hyenas, lynxes, jackals, and wolves, with foxes, martins, stoats, &c. The plains also are covered with herds of wild horses, nylghais, and buffaloes, deer antelope, and goats, both black and white, abundant in the wilder regions. Species of various kinds are common, as well as bats, including the large and hideous vampire. Elephants are sometimes used as beasts of burden; but mules and asses are in far more common use. Among the birds are found eagles and vultures, hawks, magpies, many varieties of parrots, peafowl and jungle-fowls, petridges and quails, water-fowl of many kinds, herons, cranes, and pelicans, with doves, pigeons, and many of the smaller birds, including the bulbul or Eastern nightingale. The rivers abound with alligators, crocodones, serpents are common, especially the cobra-de-capello. The silk worm thrives remarkably well, and bees are plentiful producing great quantities of fine honey.

People, Dress, &c.—The population, which according to a recent official return, is estimated at 4,101,000 persons, is composed of various races, partly of Afghans and Patans, holding the Mahometan faith, and amounting in the whole to about a quarter of a million, but principally of Jat Rajpoots and Gauds of Hindoo descent, who compose the bulk of the population. The Hindus or Sikhs proper, though the dominant race, comprise less than a fourth of the entire inhabitants, and reside chiefly in the Channai and Behlana Doabs. The Jats form the bulk of the agricultural peasantry; the Gauds are a pastoral people, addicted to a roaming life, and are described as tall and athletic, with handsome, open countenances, blue eyes, and light hair. The people indeed, generally, are in physical respects superior to those of Hindoostan, and to the full as active as the Mahometans, having stout, well rounded limbs, and an active, graceful carriage, particularly the better classes. The women too are elegantly shaped and very attractive, their countenances unadorned, and extraordinarily high cheek bones. The male attire consists of a paper or sort of turban, a close-fitting jacket, and large bulky trousers usually terminating at the knee; with a scarf thrown over the shoulder, either with a coloured fringed border, or consisting of a gaily-coloured shawl; the rest of the dress is invariably white, and kept for the most part very clean. The hair is worn long, and gathered up into a knot at the crown. The Sikhs are almost exclusively a military and agricultural people,—barbarous indeed from want of knowledge, but neither savage nor cruel, being, on the other hand, frank, generous, and lively. The Sikh soldier is, generally speaking, brave, sometimes even to desperation, active, cheerful, and merry,—without polish, but destitute neither of anxiety nor attachment. The Sikh merchant or farmer if he be a Sikh, differs little in character from the soldier except that he is less presuming and holier. He also wears arms, and can use them promptly and with effect, when required, and as respects character, he is as furtive, voracious, misnating and artful as any of the lower classes of Hindoos.

The Beligues of the Sikhs is an heretodox form of the Hindoo faith. The notion of a supreme deity, who is both creator and protector, pervades the poetry of Kama and his fellow herds, who are looked upon as the exponents of the national creed, and hymns are chanted at daily services to that deity who is designated by various popular names of the Hindoo god Vishnu. The existence of other Hindoo deities is not disputed, but no divine honours are publicly paid to any of them. An important distinction between the Sikhs and the other Hindoos, is the absence of caste, and consequently of most of the vices inherent in that institution. The Sikhs do not refuse to eat or intermarry with other Hindoos who have become converts to their form of religion, but they do not extend the same liberality to Mahometans, against whom they have always exhibited great national hostility. The death of the now is the only article of animal food prohibited by their faith, and on this head their prejudices are stronger even than those of Hindoos of the orthodox Brahminical persuasion. Smoking is prohibited, but lung opium, and spirituous liquors, are freely used, and it has been said that no man of people in India is more flagrantly demoralized than that of the Punjab.

Language and Education.—The language of the Punjab is a jargon of various tongues for while a dialect of Hindoostani is spoken in the larger towns, the rural population use the Jalski sprung from a cognate root and the original language of the country and on the S. frontier there is a considerable admixture of Sindhi. Since the country came under British rule, elementary education has been pretty generally diffused. According to an estimate made in the Colony Review (Jan. 1850), fully six per cent. of the population are receiving instruction, exclusive of the private education more generally prevailing among the higher classes. Schools also are established for females.

Manufactures and Trade.—The manufacturing industry of the Punjab is far more extensive and important than its agriculture though it is chiefly confined to the larger towns. Amritsar, Lahore, Multan, and Shoolah are distinguished for their silk and cotton fabrics, and the silks of Multan called hals, and chiefly used for torcas, possess a strength of texture and brilliancy of colour for which they are much prized in the Indian markets. The shawls of Lahore too rank only second to those of Cashmere. Broadens, tissues, and carpets resembling the Persian, are also manufactured in the capital. In the E. of the Punjab, about Rohan and Moohyapoor, white cotton goods are prepared of a stronger and more durable texture, as well as cheaper, than those of British manufacture. Swords and fire-arms of all sorts, and of an excellent quality, were under the Sikh dynasty made in great quantities at Lahore.

The Punjab enjoys from its position an extensive trade with Lahore, Multan, Kandahar, &c. as well as a more direct one for the disposal of its produce and the supply of its internal wants. The imports comprise sugar, spices, and other groceries, dye-stuffs and cotton woolen and silk fabrics, metals and metallic utensils, cutlery, precious stones, ivory, glass and suchlike necessaries, safflower, frank and dried fruits, wool, horses, &c. The exports—partly of home produce partly in transit—comprise grain, glass, hides, wool, silk and cotton fabrics, carpets and shawls, raw silk and cotton, indigo, tobacco, gold, hardware, horses, and vast quantities of hawks.

Government and Revenue.—The government under the Sikhs originally consisted of a sort of republic, or federation of Sardars or chiefs, all holding independent sway and administering the laws in their own districts. But those at length through the rising power of Ranjot Singh became subordinate to the Maharajah, under whom they became feudal chiefs, paying him an allotted portion of the tax or tribute collected within the respective districts. As a usual rule, the produce of the land was equally divided between the chief and the farmer, the impost for grain being paid in kind—that for sugar-canes melons, &c., in cash. The chief, however, never levied to that extent and in no country perhaps, was the Zyat, or cultivator, treated with more indulgence. Commerce, on the other hand, was not a little impeded by the heavy duties levied on goods by the Sardars of the districts through which they passed, and owing to this circumstance, as well as to the long disturbed state of the Punjab, much of the trade from Hindoostan to Cabool and Turkestan was carried by other and longer routes.

The government under the British resembles that already so long existing in the other districts of the Bengal presidency and the revenues are gathered on a similar system in their districts collected—those of Lahore, Multan, and Lala, in the S. Jaulm, Lashavur and Hazara, in the N. The taxes, which were before heavily imposed on both imports and exports, have now been removed from every article of consumption except salt, which pays a duty of two rupees per maund. Notwithstanding, however, the abolition of the territorial burdens, the revenue, which in the latter years of the Sikh dynasty had fallen as low as six lakhs of rupees (£260,000) amounted in 1849 to 21,560,000.

Army and Police.—The army of Ranjot Singh consisted of 37,000 infantry, of whom 15,000 were clad in armour 37,000 cavalry about 700 pieces of artillery and 100 eleplants. The military force, established by the Anglo-Indian government, comprises a force of six regiments, consisting of 7500 men, about one-third of whom are cavalry, besides 6000 men organized into a town and rural police. This force is suited to be in a most effective condition, and though it cannot be pretended that arms have ceased in this long-disputed territory, yet it may be safely asserted that peace and security, such as is not accorded in any part of India, and such as the Punjab has not known for centuries, now prevail in that country.

History.—The Sikhs appear to occupy the geographical locality of the ancient Shona. The Punjab was in remote antiquity the scene of some of Alexander the Great's most arduous exploits, during his expedition against Porus. About A.D. 320, it was overrun by the troops of Mahmood of Ghazna, whose successors held the country for nearly 300 years making Lahore the seat of their government. It afterwards passed by conquest into the hands of Mahmood Sultan of Ghore, after whose death the country was ruled by a succession of turbulent and headstrong chiefs, principally Afghans, till at length in 1519 Babur the founder of the Mogul empire, having obtained possession of the country, ascended the throne, and established the Timurid dynasty, whose sway prevailed for about two centuries. In 1748 Ahmed Shah Durani overran the Punjab with an Afghan army and in 1756 the territory was formally ceded to him by the Mogul emperor. At length in 1783, the Sikhs overran the country E. of the Jullian, establishing military posts in that district. The Durand dynasty however maintained its ascendancy in the S.E. portion till 1809 when on the expulsion of Shah Shujaah, the last of the Afghan kings Runjeet Singh a Sikh of the name of Jais, established his power over the greater part of the Punjab including the hill-states. In 1818, the recovered chieftains stormed Multan and took Faisalwar—in the following year conquering Lahore and the Derajat W. of the Indus and thus in 10 years he succeeded in establishing his power over the whole country of the five rivers, to which were afterwards added, by the conquests of his vassal Gholab Singh, Ladakh or Middle Tibet, and Dardistan or Little Tibet. His right to all the territories he thus possessed on both sides of the Indus, was formally acknowledged by the British Government in 1838, and in 1839 Runjeet Singh died, having amassed by war and plunder no less than £10,000,000 sterling of treasure and movable property and leaving the country in a state of exhaustion and disorder from which it has never since entirely recovered. His son, Kharrak Singh, quietly succeeded but died of a decline a few months after his father on which Shere Singh, a natural son of the great Runjeet, assumed the sovereignty but was assassinated, 15th September 1843. Dhuleep Singh, a minor son of the former Maharajah, Kharrak Singh, succeeded without opposition, having Herra Singh, the nephew of Gholab, for his rival or prime minister, but intrigues and civil disturbances now from time to time distressed the country, and from the close of 1843 to the period of its annexation to British India, the government was in shambles, or what is worse, in the hands of an ignorant blood-thirsty ruffian, and barbarous army. At length it became manifest that the Sikhs of the Punjab were preparing for an uprising into the territories protected by the British on the E. of the Sutlej. In the end of December 1845 the Sikh forces passed the Sutlej into the territories protected by the British, with a most formidable train of artillery but they found themselves completely routed after the hard-fought actions of Ferozshah, Ahirwal, and Sohran. Lahore and other stations were afterwards occupied by British troops the Jalandhar Doab, between the Sutlej and Beas, was permanently ceded to the British; and the remainder of Cutch and other provinces of the Himalayas, was vested in the rajah Gholab Singh. In 1849, a conspiracy between several disaffected chiefs and the Afghans resulted in further hostilities against the British, Multan being the centre of their operations. The indecisive battle of Chillianwalla was followed by the capture of Multan in January and the victory of Goojerat in February 1849, since which period the former territories of the Maharajah Duleep Singh have formed an integral part of the British empire in the East.—(Thomson's Hist. Punjab, Hugel Vigor, Barnes; Jacquemont, Jour. Asiat. Soc. Bengal, Jameson, Report on the Geology of the Punjab, Todd's W. India Jour. Roy. Asiat. Soc. Calcutta Review.)

PUNJGOOR, a town Beloochistan, prov. Mekran, lat. 27° 20' N, lon. 63° 55' E, in a fertile valley, and cap. of a petty district of same name.

PUNJNUD (Five rivers), a large river, Punjab, formed by the junction of the Gharra and the Chenab, and discharging the waters of those streams, and consequently, also those of the Jhelum Ravee and Beas, into the Indus, near Mitthan kote. It is sometimes described as the lower course of the Chenab.

PUNJSHIR, Afghanistan. See PARSCHIR.

PUNNAIR a river, N. Hindostan, rises in Mysore, flows S.E. through the Carnatic, and falls into the Bay of Bengal at Cuddalore, 100 m. S.E.W. Madras, total course, about 200 m.

PUNO a town Peru, cap. dep. of same name, 90 m. E. by 8 Arequipa, W. shore of Lake Titicaca, 12,870 ft. above sea level lat. 16° 50' 20" S., lon. 70° 21' 47" W. (a) It is a nice-looking town, formed of the union of two neighbouring villages its principal streets are straight and well paved, and it has a college, an hospital and two churches. Its market is well supplied with mutton the flesh of the llama, and more sparsely with beef. It owes its foundation to numerous mines, which at one time were wrought in its vicinity but the most of which are now abandoned. Pop. 6000.—The DEPARTAMENT, which includes the N.W. part of Lake Titicaca, is rich in pastures, and grows potatoes and barley. It exports annually a considerable quantity of the wool of the sheep, llama, alpaca, and vicuña and some caecilla bark, procured from the valley of Cuzco, which produces all kinds of tropical plants. Pop. 250,000.

FIGURE.—From an Original Drawing by Lieut. Aker R.N.

PUNTA ENARA, a promontory E. end, Isl. Hayti lat. 12° 4' N, lon. 71° 10' W. (a)

PUNTA LEANA, a town Canary Islands, on a rugged site, E. side, Isl. Palma, with a well-built church a prison, and a trade in grain wine, and excellent fruit. Pop. 1028.

PUNTA-ARCANIA, a seaport, Central America, state Costa-Rica, on the Gulf of Nicoya lat. 9° 55' 45" N, lon. 84° 55' W. (a) The harbour is good, well-sheltered, and admits vessels of moderate burden, and as there is excellent communication with the interior, coffee is largely exported.

PUNTA-ME-PANZA, a maritime town, Venezuela, dep. and 70 m. E. Caracas, at the head of the Gulf of Paria, with a considerable trade in cacao, sugar, and coffee. Pop. 2500.

PUNUKKA, a town, N. Hindostan, prov. Bhotan, 37 m. N.E. Teeslaich; lat. 27° 56' N, lon. 89° 54' E.

PURACÉ, or PURACENO, a vil New Granada dep Caneas, prov and 18 m. E. Popayán. It was a beautifully-situated and well-built place, remarkable for the number and beauty of its gardens and fountains, but was entirely destroyed in 1537 by an eruption of the volcano of Puracé which overhung it.

PURBACH PORRICH, or FREYER VARIO, a market to Hungary Hither Danube, and 18 m N E Ödenburg near N W shore Lake Neusiedl. It is walled and produces an excellent wine. Pop 1483.

PURBICK (late of) a dist. England, forming the S. E. angle of the Dorset, and consisting of a peninsula, surrounded by the sea on the S. and E. and so separated from the mainland on the N. by Poole harbour and the Frome and on the N. W. by a rivulet called Uckford Lake, as to be connected with it by only a very narrow isthmus. It is about 12 m. long by 7 m broad, it traversed W. to E. by a chalky ridge, dividing it into two parts—a N. covered chiefly with heath and a S., which is generally fertile. The prevailing rock is limestone, one kind of which being susceptible of a good polish, though deficient in durability under exposure to the air takes the name of Purbick marble. The only other minerals of any value are a kind of slate, and hard paving-stone, and a very pure potter's clay.

PURCELL anal of W. coast, Patagonia from which it is separated by a deep channel about 2 m. wide, lat. 46° 55' 30" S. lon 74° 55' 55" W. It is about 6 m in circuit moderately high and densely wooded.

PURCHENA a tn. Spain Andalusia, prov and 32 m. N Almería, on the Almanzora. It is irregular but mostly paved streets many dilapidated houses, a townhouse prison, grammar two primary schools, a church, manufactures of salt-petre and drugs. Pop 803.

PURCHERECZ, or PURCHEREWITZ a vil Transylvania 16 m. from Kronstadt with a Protestant and a Greek non united parish church. Pop 1497.

PURDY ISLANDS, a group of islands Pacific S. of the Admiralty Islands, about lat 2° 51' S., and lon 146° 15' E. The largest and most W. of them called Flat Island, is scarcely 2 m long. It is covered with large trees.

PURTON, par Eng Somerset 16.32 ac. Pop 401.

PURUKAASA a tn. Hindoostan, presid. Bombay, prov. Candab on the bank of the river Puruk 84 m E. V. N. Muzas, lat. 31° 29' N. lon 74° 23' E. It was formerly a large town and a place of importance as the residence of many nobles at present but it is now almost in ruins, while few of the houses still standing are occupied.

PURLEIGH, par Eng Essex, 2578 ac. Pop. 1184.

PURLEY par Eng Berks., 877 ac. Pop 220.

PURM RENDE, a tn. Holland, prov N Holland 10 m N by E. Amsterdam, on the N Holland canal. It is walled has a large square several markets, a handsome townhouse, weigh houses, several churches and schools, a poorhouse, two orphan hospitals, and various other benevolent institutions. The great business of the place is cheese, chiefly Edam. In 1851 the quantity sold was 3,143,354 lbs. Pop 3065.

PURNAM, a tn. Hindoostan, prov Bengal, dist. of same name, lat. 25° 45' N. lon 88° 23' E. It extends over a large space of ground, but the houses are so thinly distributed, as to give it the appearance of an assemblage of villages rather than a town. There are numerous places of worship here for Mahometans and Hindoos.—The district area, 7400 sq m., is bounded N. by Nepal and Bikhim, and S.W. by the Ganges. In the N. part, the surface is hilly but in general it is mostly level, and tolerably well cultivated. The principal productions are rice, oil-seeds, indigo, cattle, and timber. Pop 1,862,165.

PURRIJAH, two tns. the Hindoostan prov Bengal.—1. A ruined tn.; lat. 25° 28' N. lon 88° 14' E. Extensive ruins of mosques, and other religious buildings exist here. Purniah having long been the focus of the Mahometan faith in this quarter of India.—2. A tn., dist. Bardwan, 89 m N by E. Calcutta, also with interesting Mahometan antiquities, amongst which are a mosque and a lofty round tower.

PURTON par Eng Wilt. 6400 ac. Pop. 3835.

PURU, or PORU, a river, S. America, rises in the E. of Peru, near lat. 11° S. enters Brazil, flows N.E., and after a course of above 400 m. joins the bank Amazon, by several mouths, about 100 m. above the mouth of the Madeira.

Vol. II

PURUVESI a lake, Russia, Finland, in the S. of circle Kuopio. It is about 24 m. long, by 15 m. broad; contains several islands and is remarkable for the impidity of its water which is said to be efficacious in scrofulous affections.

PURWABH, a vil Afghanistan, valley of same name, S. side, Hindoo Kooch. lat. 35° 0' N. lon. 68° 15' E. It acquired some celebrity during the military operations in Afghanistan in 1840, as the scene of a severe check sustained by the British in consequence of the dastardly conduct of a native regiment of Bengal cavalry.

PUSIFY par Eng Berks., 1070 ac. Pop 152.

PURIANO a vil and par Italy, Lombardy prov and 10 m E Como \ bank lake of same name, near Mount Como Bisiole, with a parish church. Pop. 350.—The lake about 3 m long, rather more than 1 m broad, and in some parts nearly 30 fathoms deep, is supposed to be only part of a much larger lake mentioned by Pliny in his Natural History under the name of Eupidi.

PUSPOKY several places, Hungary, particularly—1. A market in Hungary Thutier Themas, co. Bihar, 3 m. N. W. Grosswarden with a Protestant and a Catholic church and a trade in corn and cattle. Pop. 2303.—2. (or Blaskofy) A market in Hither Danube, co. and E.B.L. Pressburg at the N. W. extremity of the vale of Solt on the Danube with a church and a chateau belonging to the archbishop of Gran. Pop. 1218.

PUSHERIAL with EMALIK or BUWUKKER KAZIA, a circle Tyrol, forming its E. extremity and bounded N. by Unter Inntal and Salzburg E. by Leitz, S. Lowerland, and W. Helzer area, 1090 sq m. It is covered almost throughout with lofty mountains, from which numerous streams descend and between which lie a succession of romantic valleys, generally clothed with verdant pastures. The principal valley from which the circle takes its name though not the finest, is one of the largest in the Tyrol. In some of the lower valleys a good deal of corn and flax is grown, wood is abundant and the minerals issued from some of which is magnetic, cobalt, arsenic copperas and fine rock crystals. There are several cold and thermal mineral springs. The chief manufactures are linen and lace. The inhabitants are almost all Germans. The circle is subdivided into 14 districts. Brunnick is the capital. Pop 104,000.

PUTHIL a maritime in Ceylon, prov and 16 m E. by N. St. Paul's Head. It contains a palace the residence of the prince consort, &c. of Putnam with a fine park theatre and excellent and much-frequented sea baths. P 550.

PUTILALX [Latin Putalix] a tn. France, dep Seine l bank Seine 6 m W Paris. It has manufactures of printed calicoes, dye-works, worsted and silk mills, and plaster-works. Almost all the ground in the neighbourhood is laid out in kitchen gardens, or employed in raising roses, the leaves of which are sold to the Parisian perfume-makers. Pop. 3673.

PUTOJ 1 a tn. Naples, &c. 100000.

PUTFORD two par Eng Dorset—1. East 2980 ac.

Pop. 194.—2. West 2620 ac. 1 pop. 424.

PUTIGANO a tn. Naples, prov and 36 m S.E. Bari. It contains five churches, four monasteries, two cemeteries and an hospital and has manufactures of cotton muslin and coarse woollen stuffs. Pop. 8400.

PUTIWL a tn. Russia, gov and 100 m W.S.W. Krasnodar on the Sea at the confluence of the Putiwl. It is an ancient place, tolerably well built, has three stone and sixteen wooden churches, a monastery, and three poorhouses, a school, salt-petre, and tile works, and an extensive trade in agricultural produce, wool and silk. Pop. (1849), 4810.

PULLAM, or POOTALAMA, a small seaport on the vil Ceylon W coast, 75 m N Colombo, with which it is connected by canal. It has one large and several small mosques; and was formerly a place of considerable trade and manufacture, and was much resorted to by coasting vessels with cargoes of piece goods, which were exchanged for rice-mats and pepper. At present its trade is chiefly confined to Colombo and Kurrungalla. Some coarse cotton cloth for the Kandian market, and large quantities of salt, are manufactured.

PUTLEY par Eng Hereford 589 ac. Pop. 152.

PUTNEY a vil and par England, co Surrey, a bank Thames, opposite Fulham, with which it is connected by a wooden bridge. It has two churches, one of them with a restored ancient tower, an Independent chapel, a college of civil engineers, an endowed school, an almshouse, and other churches. Gibbons the historian was born, and the great earl of Chatham died here. Area of par. 2176 ac. Pop. 2180.

88

PUTNEY a vi and township, U States, Vermont, a bank Connecticut, near the confluence of Rockwell brook, and on the railway which proceeds N along the Connecticut to Lake Champlain, 9 m. N. Brattleboro. It is a well-built cheerful and thriving place, with Congregational and Baptist churches, several schools, woolen factories, tanneries, paper, saw, and flour mills. Pop. 1425.

PUTNOK, a market on Hungary Hither Thain, co. Glouster and 27 m. N by E Eriau, 1 bank Bazo, with two churches. Pop. 2480.

PUTO or POO-SOO an isl. China Sea, prov Chekiang lat. 30°25' N lon. 122°40' E it is about 8½ m long, and lies about 1½ m from the E. point of Chusan. It is almost literally covered with monasteries, pavilions, temples, and other buildings appropriated to religious uses, besides grotesque and other monuments of superstition, in which at least 2000 idle priests chase the prizes of their idols, and live in ignorance, idleness, vice, and dirt. No females are allowed to reside on Puto, nor any besides priests unless in their employ.

PUTT a vi and com. Belgium, prov and 16 m. S.E. by E Antwerp; with three breweries, three flour-mills, and several brick and tile works. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in weaving.

PUTTIE, a vi Punjab, 86 m. S.E. Lahore. It is well built of brick, and the streets are paved with the same material. Pop. about 5000.

PUTTLANGE or PUTTLINGER a tn. France, dep. Moselle 8 m. W.S.W. Sarreguemines on the Moderbach. It has manufactures of cotton cloth, silk velvet, and slugs and glass. Pop. 2042.

PUTTEN a vi Holland, prov Gelderland 23 m. N.W. Arnhem with a church and school. Pop. 104.

PUTTLE, HABER pure England—1. Here 690 ac. Pop. 142-2, 2. Weymouth 1894 ac. Pop. 659.

PUTTRESBACH or PUTTRESBACH, a vi Holland prov S. Holland, 4 m. W. by S. Dordrecht with a townhouse, church, school and a trade in fish. Pop. 1053.

PUTTOLA HILLA See PUTTOLAN-HILLA.

PUTTUL-SOMALITH, Hindostan. See MOHALLA.

PUTUMAYO or ICA, a river Ecuador rises in E. slope Andes at a town of same name, about lat. 2° N. flows S.E., receiving numerous effluents, enters Brazil, and joins I. bank Amazon at the town of Ica, after a course of about 600 m. A good deal of gold is washed from its sands.

PUTZIG a tn. Prussia, gov. Marburg on the N.W. extremity, Gulf of Putzig, where the river of same name falls into the Baltic, 27 m. N.W. Danzig. It contains a Protestant and a Catholic church, and a synagogue has manufactures of cheese a fishery some shipping, and a trade in wood and cattle. Pop. 2159.

PUXTON par. Eng. Somerset 618 ac. Pop. 151.

PUY DE DOME, a dep. France bounded, N by dep. Allier W. Creuse and Corrèze, S. Cantal and Haute-Loire, N.W. by Loire and 50° to 66° 18' N. lon. 2° 21' to 4° 15' E. of a compact and somewhat rectangular shape, greatest length, E. to W., 73 m. greatest breadth, 59 m. area, 3629 sq. m. It has a general inclination towards the N. and consists of an immense undulating basin, called the valley of Limagne, extending longitudinally N. to N., and flanked on the E. and W. by lofty ramifications of the Cevennes. The highest mountains are in the W., and are divided into two principal groups—that to the N. consisting of a great number of volcanic rounded cones, comprehended under the general name Monts-Dômes, of which the culminating point is the sublimated mountain Puy-de-Dôme, 6346 ft. (highest mt. and that to the S., consisting of a fine number of lofty peaks, known by the name of Monts-Dômes, of which the culminating point Puy de la Vierge, 6225 ft., is the highest mountain in the interior of France. All these mountains have a nucleus of granite, overlain by sedimentary rocks, many of these comparatively recent formation, but the great agency which heaved them up, and gave them their present form, is evidently volcanic. Many of the extinct craters are as distinctly marked as those of existing active volcanoes, and the course of the streams of lava which flowed down their sides may be traced for miles, filling up deep valleys, and forming elevated plateaus. The far greater part of the waters of the department are carried by numerous small streams into the valley of Limagne, already mentioned, and being received by the Allier which traverses it longitudinally, being of course to the head of the Loire. In the S.W. however, a small portion of the surface is drained by affluents of the Garonne, and thus belongs to the basin of the Garonne. In the lower localities, the vine is partially cultivated, and immense crops of grain particularly wheat are grown which far more than supply the home consumption; also flax and hemp. In more elevated localities rye and oats are the prevailing crops, and the largest forest-trees come to perfection, in particular chestnuts, from which the inhabitants derive a considerable part of their food. Still higher are fine tracts of verdant pasture; many of the loftiest mountains containing clothed with grass almost to their summits. On these pastures vast herds of cattle, and almost innumerable sheep, are fed. According to a general estimate the whole surface of the department may be thus divided—arable land nearly one-half, waste one-fourth, wood rather more than one-tenth. The domestic animals are in general of very inferior breeds. Game of almost all kinds abounds. The wild boar and deer are not uncommon and hares, rabbits, and wild fowl are very numerous. In the highest mountains straggles eagles, vultures, and other large birds of prey are frequently seen. The wolf, though much rarer than formerly still haunts the mountains, and foxes are found in every quarter. The mineral soil the department are not of much importance. Traces of almost all the metals are found but none of them exist in such quantities as to make the working of them an object of economical importance. Coal however is worked to advantage in three or four places. Mineral springs both cold and thermal, are very numerous. The principal manufactures are hempen cloth, ribbons, camlets, bombazines, satins, broads, lace, paper and playing cards with and tallow candles, cordage, and other kinds of hardware, glass, pottery, salt-petre, and chemical products. The trade in addition to these articles, includes corn, wine, brandy, liqueurs, dried fruits, and confectionery; oil, hemp, wool, cattle, Auvergne cheese, wood, especially fir-planks, coal &c. For administrative purposes, Puy-de-Dôme is divided into six arrondissements—Charmant, the capital, Amont, Issoire, Riom, Thiers; subdivided into 20 cantons, and 443 communes. Pop. (1827) 596,897.

PUY DE DÔME, a mountain, France, nearly in the centre of the dep. to which it gives its name rising 4446 ft. above sea-level. It is in the form of a truncated cone, the upper part of which rises majestically from the table-land around to the height of 1600 ft. It is composed of a kind of trachyte, to which is peculiar to this locality the name of Dôm has been given. It is of a crumbling nature, and so porous that all the moisture which descends from the clouds is absorbed and disappears. Hence not one spring of water is found on its sides. The surface, with exception of a few spots, is covered with verdure. It was on the top of this mountain that the weight of the atmosphere was first practically determined, and a foundation laid for the construction of the barometer. The experiments were made under the direction of the celebrated French naturalist the author of the Principes de Mécanique by M. Perrier his brother-in-law.

PUY LA-ROQUE, a vi France, dep. Tarn-et-Garonne, 21 m. N.E. Montauban with numerous terraces of well leather. Pop. 1517.

PUY L'ÉVÊQUE, a tn. France, dep. Lot, 15 m. N.W. Cahors, on a peninsula, formed by r. bank Lot. Pop. 1185.

PUY (Ls), [Latin Puyum Pileorum] a tn. France, dep. Haute-Loire, 270 m. S.E. Paris. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre, on the S. slope of Mount Anis, and at a distance, is one of the most striking and picturesque towns in France. Creuzot, near the town, and overlooking the houses, is seen a vertical rock with a tabular summit, consisting of volcanic breccia, resting on a calcareous base, and called Roche de Corbelle. Of still more remarkable appearance, though much less lofty is the Roche de St. Michel, an isolated rock of basaltic tuff, of a conical shape, rising up abruptly from the stream of the Borne to the height of 235 ft., with a thickness at the base of 500 ft., and at the top of only 45 ft. or 50 ft. These rocks appear not to have been projected from their present site, but to be merely the remains of a plateau of tuff, which has probably crumbled down, or been worn away by the action of water which the superior hardness of the still subsiding rocks has enabled them to resist. The Rocher de Corneille is surrounded by the ruins of a castle, and the Rocher de St. Michel by a small chapel in the Romanesque style, approached by a winding stair, partly cut in the rock. The chief part of the town consisting of white are exports chiefly of provisions, and imports of coal and groceries. It unites with the Comarvon district of burghs in sending a member to Parliament. Pop. 2709.

PYCHMA a river Basile, rises in gov Fern, E. slope of Ural mountains, not far from Ekaterinburg, flows E. past Kamyshlowa, and joins r. bank Tara, 20 m below Tiumen, total course, 280 m.

PYECOMHE, par Eng. Sussex; 2349

ac. Pop. 800.

PYLY par Wales, Glamorgans P 991

PYLLLE par Eng. Somerset 1055 ac.

Pop. 184.

PYLSTAAPT'S ISLAND the most E. of the Friendly Islands, lat 22 14 45" S., lon 176° & W (n). Its outline is irregular and rugged for some distance below the summit, which is 700 ft high the ground is bare, below which the level ground appears to be well cultivated and regularly inclosed, trees of considerable size fill the valleys. It produces in abundance bananas, coconuts, yams, sweet potatoes papaw apples, sugar-cane, and cava root. Pop about 150.

PYRAMID a lake, U States, territory Utah, lat. 40° N lon 119 50' W; greatest length, about 25 m; breadth, about 30 m. It lies surrounded among lofty mountains at the height of 4800 ft above sea-level communicating at its W extremity with a line of basins, and on the opposite side sweeps along a ridge of snowy mountains at the foot of the Sierra Nevada. The scenery is of a very magnificent description, and near the centre of the lake is a singular pyramidal rock, about 600 ft in height, so striking in its resemblance to the Egyptian pyramid of Cheops as to seem the work of art rather than of nature. The water is slightly saline, and both fish and water-fowl appear to be very abundant. The lake has no visible outlet, but receives the discharge of Mud Lake from the N and Salmon trout river from the S.

1 PYRAMUS, a river, Asia. See JYNOON houses, rising in a succession of terraces, clusters round the larger rock and, in like manner, the suburb called Aguillo clusters round the other. But while the site is thus remarkably picturesque, the interior of the town is by no means prepossessing. The streets are ill formed, narrow dirty, and in their upper part inaccessible to carriages. They are moreover paved with debris of volcanic breccia, which equally after rain, frost, and drought, becomes unpleasant, slippery and even dangerous to walk upon. The principal edifices are the cathedral a heavy ungainly building in the Romanesque style, occupying the highest part of the town, and rising high over the other houses the church of St. Laurent, a large edifice, deriving its chief interest from containing the ashes of the celebrated Constable Du Guesclin; the theatre occupying an octagonal building, fitted to have once been a temple of Diana; the pretecture, a new edifice in a good style the college church, with a fine facade the seminary a large and handsome edifice, admirably placed, and the museum, containing a considerable number of Roman remains, and other local curiosities. The manufactures consist of lace tulle and blonde, forming the staples of the town woollen covers, common stuffs, and leather bottles for wine. There are also tanneries, naileries, tanning-mills, dye-works and a bell foundry. The trade is in addition to the above articles, in corn, iron, earthenware, manes, horses, and cattle. Le Puy is the see of a bishop possesses a court of first resort and commerce, a counting chamber of manufactures, a diocesan seminary, and agricultural society. Pop (1832) 18,728.

PUYLAURENS (Latin, Podium Laurens) a town in France, dep. Tarn 13 m. S.E. Lavaur, with oil works. Having early embraced the Reformation, it was often the scene of sanguinary contests between the Protestants and R. Catholics, and in the interval between the issuing and the revocation of the edict of Nantes, a Protestant university was established in it, in which the celebrated Bayle is said to have been a professor. Pop. 1959.

PUZOS, a vil. Spain, prov. and 18 m N.W. Valencia, with two schools a church, and an episcopal palace. P. 2495.

PUZZU MAJOR, a vil and com. cd. Sardinia, prov. and 22 m. E.S.E. Alghero, on a hill, with a convent. Pop. 1925.

PWILCROCHAN, par Wales, Pembrokeshire, 2016 ac. Pop. 2114.

PWILLHELI, a seaport, Wales, co. and 31 m S.W. Carmarvon, on N. side, Carlligan Bay. It is well built, paved, and lighted; has a modern parish church, Presbyterian, Independent, Calvinistic, and Wesleyan Methodist chapels; a new inn, a bank, a national and other schools, building-yard, a harbour, which admits a number of 100 tons, and at which there along a ridge of snowy mountains at the foot of the Sierra Nevada. The scenery is of a very magnificent description, and near the centre of the lake is a singular pyramidal rock, about 600 ft in height, so striking in its resemblance to the Egyptian pyramid of Cheops as to seem the work of art rather than of nature. The water is slightly saline, and both fish and water-fowl appear to be very abundant. The lake has no visible outlet, but receives the discharge of Mud Lake from the N and Salmon trout river from the S.

1 PYRAMUS, a river, Asia. See JYNOON

PYRENEES (Spanish, Pirineos, Latin, Pyrenaei Montes, German Pyrenäen) a lofty mountain chain forming the boundary between France and Spain and stretching across the whole of the isthmus which connects the Spanish peninsula with the rest of the European continent, and abuts with one extremity on the Mediterranean Sea, and with the other on the Atlantic Ocean. Its length from Cape Cruz, N. of the Gulf of Biscay to the Point of Fagnier near Fontarabie, is nearly 270 m and its breadth near the centre, where it is greatest, scarcely exceeds a third of the length or 80 m. Though the chain thus defined terminates at two opposite seas, it cannot be said to be isolated, since to the W. it is obviously continuous across the N. of Spain by the Cantabrian mountains. The direction of the chain is E.S.E. to W.N.W. It does not, however, lie in the same straight line but rather consists of two lines which form parallel ridges about 30 m distant from each other, except near the centre, where they become united by means of a remarkable rectangular slope in which some of the loftiest summits are found. Both on the N. and S. sides numerous branches are thrown off generally at right angles to the principal axis, and subside rapidly as they recede from it, forming various transverse, but very few longitudinal valleys. The chain rises both from the E. and W. towards the centre and, in accordance with a general rule which holds in regard to the European chains which lie in the direction of the equator, the descent on the S. side is much more abrupt than on the N. Owing to this the S. has much fewer lakes than the N. slope, but far surpasses it in the boldness and grandeur of its scenery. As already observed, the loftiest summits of the chain are near its centre. Its culminating point, Maladeta, situated there, has the height of 11,424 ft. and a great number of peaks in the same locality exceed 8500 ft. To the E. of the centre, the chain lowers so rapidly that its average height soon becomes little more than 2000 ft. To the W. the height diminishes much more gradually, and many peaks have heights varying from 5000 ft. to 7000 ft. and even 8000 ft. The principal passes in the Pyrenees formed by the meeting of valleys from op-points sides of the axis, take in the E. part of the chain the name of Cole, and towards the centre that of Porta. No fewer than 75 are counted, of which 38 may be crossed on horseback and some in wheeled carriages. The most frequented are those of Portes and La Ferche in the E. and St. Jean Pied de Port in the W. The nucleus of the chain is evidently granite, which, with the primitive schists which overlie it, constitutes the loftiest summits, with the exception of Mont Ikerre (1483 ft.). Massif (10,150 ft.), and some huge alpine masses which are formed of crystalline limestone. The granite, however seldom forms continuous ridges along the principal axis, but rather appears in a number of remarkable protuberances situated to the N. of it. Above the micaceous schist and primitive limestone, which occur in connection with it, lie largely-developed strata of argillaceous schist and transition limestone, forming two great belts parallel to the primitive chain, one on the N. and the other on the S. side. Above these secondary rocks appear, of which by far the most common is the mountain limestone, which occupies the greater part of the S. slope but on the N. side attains little elevation being there almost entirely confined to the lower heights at the bottom of the principal chain. Above the mountain limestone the principal rocks are Jura limestone and trap. The number of thermal springs existing in the Pyrenees seems to indicate the presence of volcanic agents but basalt and other rocks of igneous origin are very rare. The minerals of the chain include iron copper lead, zinc, manganese, antimony and cobalt. There is no mine either of silver or gold in the Pyrenees, and the latter are found in department of Arager and in the strata of several other districts. The only mineral which has hitherto been worked to any advantage is iron. Mineral springs both cold and thermal are numerous and much frequented by visitors. The limit of vegetation on the Pyrenees is about 800 ft. higher than on the Alps. The rhododendron which in the latter are not found higher than 3000 ft. are here found at 5500 ft. and alpine plants are found on the loftiest summits wherever, on the region of perpetual snow. In the E. Pyrenees this is found only on the S. slope, where it does not, as in the Alps, form a snowy cone, the lower limit of which looks as if traced out by a line, almost horizontal, straight line, but on the contrary forms large isolated masses the base of which is often concealed by the mountains in front of them. This makes it difficult to fix the snow line with precision but according to the most accurate estimate it is 9190 ft., or nearly that of Mount Cenis. Glaciers are not numerous in the Pyrenees and hence the torrents and rivers which rise in the chain are fed chiefly by springs. Those on the S. side flow towards the Ebro and are carried by it to the Mediterranean; those on the N. side flow partly to the Mediterranean and partly to the Atlantic; the water shed between the two seas being not formed throughout by a central ridge but only westward as far as Lourdes, where the water shed changes its direction and is carried northward by a branch which ultimately joins with the Garonne. The largest river of the chain, and the only one of importance which preserves its name throughout its whole course, from its source to its mouth, is the Garonne. In respect of average height and mass, the Pyrenees is unquestionably the second mountain chain of Europe, but its extent is less. Maladetta, has only the third place, the first belonging to Mount Blanc and the second to the Corno de Matheran in the Sierra Nevada in the E. of Spain which is nearly 200 ft. higher than Maladetta. Contrary to the general rule that the loftiest summits of mountain chains are found in the line of the principal axis, Maladetta, Ponce (11,277 ft.) and Mont Perdut, the three culminating points of the Pyrenees are situated on the S. slope.

LE PUY - From Fagnier. View from the N. towards Fontarabie.

LYRÉNÉES-BASSES, or LOWERS PYRÉNÉES, a dep. France, bounded N. by dep. Gers and Landes, W. the Bay of Biscay and Spain, S. the Pyrenees, also separating it from Spain, and E. dep. Hautes-Pyrénées, greatest length E. to W. 84 m., greatest breadth, 74 m., area, 7830 sq. m. This department is formed in the S. by the lower slopes of the Pyrenees, and has a general inclination towards the N. W. Numerous ramifications extend over great part of the interior and give the surface a very diversified and often very picturesque appearance. The highest mountain is the Pic du Midi de l'An on the E. E., composed of a deep-grained granite. The whole department, with exception of a small portion in the W., the waters of which are carried directly to the sea by the Rive and the Nivelle, belongs to the basin of the Adour which receives in succession, proceeding from the E., the Léon, Gabas, Lay de France, Lay de Béarn, Gironne with its tributaries Osson and Aups, and the Basseaux. Of all these rivers only the Adour, Nive, and Nivelle, which reach the sea, are navigable for a few miles above their mouths. The Pyrenees, forming the S. boundary give this department N. exposure, and from the many mountains during which their highest summits are covered with snow continue to produce sudden changes, and send down currents of cold air after the season has far advanced. The worst thing in the climate is its variability, and hence it has been said that all the four seasons of the year are sometimes experienced here within the range of a single day. Hicce catarrhi are frequent in spring and severe in autumn. In the more mountainous districts frosts are not uncommon. The soil generally is of very indifferent fertility and owing as much to its so far rugged mountainous surface, is not well adapted for cultivation. Not much less than one-half of the whole surface is waste, and little more than one-fifth arable. On the soil the principal crops grown are wheat, rye, barley, millet, hemp, flax, and maize, particularly the last two, of which the former furnishes raw material for the fine tissues known by the name of Béarn linen, while the latter forms the principal food of the inhabitants. The cereals produced fall far short of the home consumption the minerals too, notwithstanding indications of argentiferous lead, copper, iron, cobalt, and sulphur, are of little economical importance, but these deficiencies are in some measure compensated by numerous supplies of excellent timber, extensive forests clothing the mountain steep, and occupying more than one-sixth of the whole area of the department. Textile manufactures particularly that of linen, for which Béarn has long been famous have made considerable progress. Woollens also in the shape of flannel, common household table-covers, carpets and bonnets, are deserving of notice. The other principal articles are leather, paper, earthenware, quilts, brandy and crests of tartan. The trade is in wine, brandy, liquors, raw materials, chocolate, prepared skins, fine wood, light leather, cotton thread, and printed cottons, timber, horses, mules and cattle, hams and colonial produce. Much of this trade is contraband carried on with Spain. For administrative purposes Basse-Pyrénées is divided into five arrondissements—Pau the capital, Bayonne, Mauleon, Oloron, Orthez—subdivided into 40 cantons and 561 communes. Pop. (1852) 446,937.

PYRÉNÉES-HAUTES, or UPPE PYRÉNÉES, a dep. France, bounded N. by dep. Gers W. Basse-Pyrénées, S. the Pyrenees, separating it from Spain and E. Hautes-Garonne, length exclusive of a narrow tongue which projects N. W. between dep. Gers and Basse-Pyrénées, 45 m., breadth, 45 m., area, 1790 sq. m. The surface, as the name of the department implies, is extremely mountainous. On the N. frontier are some of the loftiest summits of the Pyrenees, and even near its centre rises the Pic du Midi de Bigorre, 9567 ft. Much of the scenery is of the most magnificent description. The surface gradually lowers towards the N., but numerous lofty ramifications spread out in all directions including between their ridges deep dells, and sometimes even spacious valleys of considerable fertility. A series of ridges stretching from N. to S. forms the principal watershed and divides the department into two unequal basins the larger on the W. and N. W. belonging to the Adour which, as well as its important tributary Pau, here takes its rise, and the less on the E. and S. E. belonging to the Garonne which receives its waters chiefly through the Neste. The climate is very variable, but on the whole temperate. The rugged and mountainous nature of the surface is very unfavourable for agricultural operations; and hence little more than one-fifth of the whole is arable, and of this by far the larger part lies in the extensive and beautiful plains of Bigorre. All sorts of cereals are produced but the quantity falls far short of the consumption. The forests are extensive, and perhaps constitute the principal source of revenue in the department. The vine also is much cultivated on the lower slopes, and much wine of tolerably good quality is produced. About one-third of it is consumed at home, and the far greater part of the remainder is converted into brandy, leaving only a comparatively small portion for export. The meadows and pastures are in general excellent, and great numbers of horses, well adapted for light cavalry, mules and asses, horned cattle, sheep, and vines are raised. The last furnish the famous latus of Bayonne, and are largely exported. Considerable attention is paid to the rearing both of poultry and bees. The minerals are of little importance. No metal with the exception of a little iron, appears to be wrought but excellent quarries both of slate, granite, and marble, exist in several districts. Mineral springs, both cold and thermal are numerous and the splendid bathing establishments erected over some of them attract crowds of visitors. The principal manufactures are bombasars, soap, linen crapes, alavins, leather cutlery, agricultural implements and linen. The trade is chiefly in butter and cheese, honey, cheese, horses, mules, and live hams, poultry, clogs and wood, including ship-timber. For administrative purposes, Hautes-Pyrénées is divided into three arrondissements—Tarbes, the capital, Argelos and Dagnères-de-Nogorrie—subdivided into 26 cantons, and 438 communes. Pop. (1859), 250,924.

PYRÉNÉES-ORIENTALES, or EASTERN PYRÉNÉES, a dep France, bounded N by dep Aude, N W Arlège, S W and S. Spain, and E the Gulf of Lion, greatest length E. to W. 68 m, greatest breadth 35 m, area, 1671 sq m. This department is hemmed in on the S and W by the principal chain of the Pyrenees, and traversed by ramifications, which taking the general direction of W to E divide it into several longitudinal and nearly parallel basins which discharge their waters into the Mediterranean chiefly by the Agly the Tet, and the Tech. None of these is navigable. The climate is represented as remarkably fine, but this representation must be taken with considerable allowance. It is true that the excessive heats of summer are often tempered by refreshing breezes, and that the keenest winter cold seldom descends far below the freezing point, but the winds are remarkably in constant, often suddenly succeeding each other and blowing with equal fury from opposite directions, the S. E. or sea winds, loaded with moisture maintaining a warfare with the N. W. or mountain winds which is so dry as sometimes to shrivel up the skin and both only ceasing from their strife to make way for the kind of simoom which Spain sends from the S. Not much less than one-half of the whole surface is waste, and the portion which remains for the plough being considerably under one-fourth, is by no means of great natural fertility. But notwithstanding on the lower grounds where irrigation can be successfully pursued the culture is so abundant that the cereals produced both satisfy the consumption and leave a surplus for export. On land of this description three crops in two years—one of corn and two of maize—are not uncommon. The effect of irrigation is still more striking in the case of artificial meadows from which four excellent cuttings of lucerne are annually taken. The large quantity of fodder thus obtained as well as the natural pastures which are of great extent and excellent quality are employed in rearing vast numbers of stock particularly horses, well adapted both for the farm and the road, mules, for which there is a great demand from Spain, horned cattle, sheep, and goats. A considerable extent of surface is allotted to the culture of the vine, and several of the wines produced bear a high name. Among them may be mentioned Ronillon. The most important mineral of the department is iron, which is extensively worked, smelted, and manufactured. The other principal manufactures are leather, broad-cloth, molasses, knitted hosey socks, earthenware, whip-handles, &c. Of all the departments bordering on the Pyrenees, this is the most commercial. The exports in value far exceed the imports and consist chiefly of wine, brandy, woollen stuffs, Basco linen, Bayonne hams and other salt provisions, swine, sheep, horses, mules, iron, and marble. For administrative purposes, Pyrénées-Orientales is divided into three arrondissements—Perpignan, the capital, Carcassonne and Prades—subdivided into 17 cantons, and 227 communes. Pop. (1852) 181,955.

PYRFORD par Eng. Surrey 1868 ac. Pop. 865
PYLGO a tn Greece, Morea, near the mouth of the Alpheus on the Ionian Sea, and about 50 m. W. N. W. Troplona, on an elevated plain at the foot of Mount Olonon. It is a bishop's see, and for a Grecian town presents an unusual appearance of industry and activity and as the neighbouring port of Kalamata a considerable trade in country produce and European manufactures is carried on.

PYRILZ, a tn Prussia, gov. and 24 m S. E. Rietzen on an affluent of the Elbe. It is walled, flanked with towers entered by three gates; has several courts and public offices, two churches, a townhouse, and three hospitals; a fishery, and a trade in cattle. Near it is a fountain in which, in 1125 Otho of Bamberg is said to have baptised 7000 Pomeranians. Pop. 5230.

PYRMONT a celebrated watering place, Germany, principally Waldeck, cap. dist. in a beautiful valley at the foot of a range of finely-wooded hills 1 bank Emmer 34 m. S. S. W. Unner. It is a small but well built place, with several fine promenades, and consists of an open square and a long street lined with lindes trees. It contains a palace, in which the Prince of Waldeck resides during the watering season and a very complete bathing establishment, which is much frequented particularly by the aristocracy of Germany. The water is a chalybeate, possessing valuable medicinal properties, it is strongly impregnated with carbonic acid and gas, and produces an exhilarating and even intoxicating effect. About 160,000 bottles of water are annually exported. One of the curiosities of the place is the Mount Hahle, or gas grotto, which emits vapours similar in nature and effect to those of the Grotto del Cano in Italy. A rabbit exposed to the vapour dies in 10, and a cat in 15 minutes. The bathing establishment has the usual accompaniments of theatre, bull-baiting, gaming-tables, &c. The district is covered with hills, area, 27 sq. m. Pop. 11,691.

PYRTON See LITTON.

PYTHIUM See PITHIUM.

PYTHIUM par Eng. Devon 5021 ac. Pop. 668
YAZDY a tn Russian Poland. See LITVIA.

Q.

QUA a mountain, Ghibra, 64 m. N. W. the Peak of Cameroun lat. 5° 12' N.; lon. 8° 50' E. It is visible at a distance of nearly 80 m.

QUACO a maritime vil and headland British N. America, S. coast, Nov. Brunswick, 27 m. E. N. E. St. John's.

QUADE a seaport, Arabia. See GAZA.

QUADEING par Eng. Lincoln 4210 ac. Pop. 992.

QUADEMECHER a vil and com. Belgium, prov. Limburg, 16 m. N. W. Hasselt with a tannery two flour-mills, and a trade in corn, cattle, and swine. Pop. 1125.

QUAINTON, par Eng. Bucks, 5368 ac. Pop. 946.

QUAKENBRUCK, a tn Hanover, 23 m. N. by W. Osnabrück, on the Hase. It is walled, has a townhouse, church, and school, manufactures of linen, hosiery and leather; and a trade in yarn, linen, and cattle. Pop. 2191.

QUALOE, an isl. Norway. See LITVIA.

QUALINSCHT or KWALINSCHT a vil Bohemia, circle and 16 m. N. N. E. Königgrätz with a church, school, a mill and a distillery. Pop. 1063.

QUALQUO a tn Chili dep. and 90 m. E. by S. Concepcion, 1 bank Biobio.

QUAMPANIESA a large market in Delaney, in a fertile district, 207 m. N. by L. Abomey lat. 10° 40' N., lon. 2° 30' E. Pop. 12,000.

QUAN Sir Foo, a tn China prov. Kiangse, 1 bank Kin Kiang lat. 28° 30' N. lon. 118° 10' E. It is walled and communicates by a fine bridge of boats with the opposite bank of the river. Though a large place it does not appear to have much trade, but has extensive manufactures of grass cloth which is said to be sold very cheap.

QI ANG-PING a city China, prov. Chihli, 1 bank Hsiao-Ho, 138 m. S. S. W. Peking with numerous temples.

QUANGSEE, or KWANGSI (Broad West), a prov. China, bounded N. by Kweichow and Hooan, E. Quansung; S. Quansung and Tonquin, and W. Yunnan, lat 21° to 25° 20' N. lon. 104 55' to 113 35' E. area, 78,500 sq m. It is mostly mountainous, and incapable of cultivation; but along the banks of the Tchoa-kiang and its tributaries, by which it is watered great quantities of rice are cultivated. Among other products are, opium, castor-oil, salt-stones, and cabinet-woods. The province has no manufactures of importance, but is rich in mines of gold, silver, quicksilver, and other metals, most of which are worked under the superintendence of government. It is one of the least-populated of the Chinese provinces, and is inhabited by many partially-civilized tribes. Kweili-fou is the capital, but Wuchan-fou is the largest and most important trading town. Pop. 7,111,895.

QUANGTONG or KWANGTUNG a maritime and the more S. prov. China lat. 20° 12' to 2° 30' N lon 107° 55' to 117° 15' E. bounded N. by Kiangsoo and Hooan, N.E. by Fokien S. by the China Sea and the Gulf of Tonquin, and W. and N.W. by Quansung area, 79,456 sq m. The surface is extremely various, being mountainous in the N. but for the most part fertile. The principal products are, fruits, rice, silk, sugar, tobacco and vegetables. Lead, iron, and coal are also abundant. The manufactures are extensive embracing lacquered wares, and grass, cotton and silk cloths. The extensive sea coast is deeply indented with bays, which with the famous Canton, and other rivers, afford great facilities for commerce. Along the coast are scattered an immense number of islands, and among which is the large island of Hainan. The capital is Canton, other important towns are Amoy, Shantou-fou, and Shasien-fou. Pop. 19,147,000.

QUARU, a maritime in Japan, Isl. Nippon, on Owari Bay 60 m. E. Mioko.

QUANTOQ HILLS, a mountain range, England, co. Somerset, extending from Watchet, on the Bristol Channel to near Taunton, greatest elevation 1428 ft.

QUANTOXHEAD two pars. Eng. Somerset:—1 (East), 2582 ac. Pop. 281 —2 (West) 1491 ac. Pop. 250

QUAREGNON a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut 4 m. W. by R. Mons with a church chapter-house, two public schools, a philanthropic society an iron-foundry three breweries, two distilleries, and several flour-mills, manufactures of leather, clay pipes, and brass vessels and a trade in coal obtained in the vicinity. Pop. 4712

QUAREMONT a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 20 m. S.S.W. Ghent. Loom weaving and agriculture are carried on. Pop. 2050

QUARFF BAZELAY and BYRRA a par. Scotland, co. of Orkney and Shetland, on the Mainland of Shetland, ½ in. S.W. Lerwick. Pop. 1612

QUAREGLATO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Alessandria, near Fossano with a church two oratories and the remains of an old castle. Pop. 2410

QUARITZ, a to. Yunnan, gov. and N.W. Luegita with a castle, two churches, old works, and several mills. Pop. 1484

QUARLEY par. Eng. Hants 1068 ac. Pop. 179

QUARENDON, par. Eng. Derby 960 ac. Pop. 529

QUARVERO, a gulf of the Adriatic, between Illyria and the shores of Military Croatia greatest length, from N. to E. about 27 m. breadth, 21 m. It is formed by the islands of Veglia and Cherso, between which and the opposite coasts three navigable channels communicate with the open sea. The coasts of the gulf are generally steep, and the navigation is often rendered dangerous by violent storms, but there is good anchorage at various points. The chief sea port is the city of Fiume.

QUARVILL, a to. in France, dep. Nord, 5 m. N.E.E. Valenciennes, on the Belgium frontier, with manufactures of sherry, beet-root sugar and animal black. Pop. 2226.

QUARENDON, par. Eng. Bucks 2080 ac. Pop. 64

QUARRI, or KEMARRI, a to. Central Africa, Hooan, 70 m. E. Sokoto, on the road from it to Kano. It is enclosed by an earthen wall. Pop. about 6000 Fellahs.

QUARRINGTON par. Eng. Lincoln 1620 ac. P. 346.

QUARTO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. and 8 m. E. Aosta, l. bank Dora, with a court of justice, and six churches. Pop. 2078

QUARTEN, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 25 m. S.S.W. St. Gall on a mountain spur above the Lake of Walenstadt; and contains an old church. In 1455 the Swiss here defeated the Austrians. Pop. 1535

QUARTO, a river, La Plata, rises in a mountain range, lat. 31° 50' S. in the W. of dep. Cordova, flows S.E. and disappears among marshes, after a course of about 300 m.

QUARTU a to. Isl. Sardinia, 2 m. E.N.E. Cagliari, on an unhealthy plain near the bay of same name. It has extensive salt-works on the lagoons which line the shore. P. 5128

QUARTUCCI a vil. and com. Isl. Sardinia, div. Cagliari, in the vicinity of Quartu. Pop. 1719

QUATFORD par. Eng. Salop; 1812 ac. Pop. 692

QUATILAMIA, KATILAMIA, or IKAKSAMMA, a mountain range, S. Africa, which stretches S. to E. along the W. frontier of Natal, presenting very rugged precipitous towards the E. but descending very gradually on the W., so as to form the abutments of an elevated table-land. In the S. where loftiest, they attain the height of at least 8000 ft., and are covered with snow for more than four months, in proceeding N. they descend near their centre to 5000 ft., and finally merge into hilly ridges and plateaux. To the numerous perennial streams issuing from them, Natal is indebted for much of its fertility.

QUATRE-BAS, a vil. Belgium, prov. S. Brabant, 30 m. S.E. Brussels, becomes celebrated for the battle fought here two days before that of Waterloo, and in which the Duke of Brunswick fell.

QUATRIE FAKARA, or FOUR BROTHERS, a group of islets, Kariki Islands, between Rinnair and Urup they are more barren lofty rocks and though originally supposed to be four they are only three in number. The most E., called Teetepoo or Teetepoo is an extinct volcano.

QUATT MALKYER par. Eng. Salop 2074 ac. P. 856

QUATRO-VILLE, four separate vils. Angol of Italy, gov. Venice, near Marina. They form a simple commune. Pop. 2500

QUAZZULO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. and 21 m. N.W. Turin in a small valley of the Tasso, with a church and a beltry which rises conspicuously from an isolated rock. Pop. 8632

QUEBEC, the capital city of Lower Canada, l. bank St. Lawrence, which is here about 1 in. broad, at the confluence of the St. Charles, 140 m. N.E. Montreal; lat. (N.E. location) 46° 45' 0" N., lon. 71° 15' 45" W. (n.) The city is situated on a promontory, near the confluence of the two rivers, terminating abruptly in Cape Diamond, which has a height of 550 ft., and on the low banks below the rocks along the margin of both streams. It is divided into the upper and lower towns. The former placed on the summit of the promontory is strongly fortified, the citadel occupying the highest elevation of the town, and built upon the St. Lawrence has an area of 40 ac. and the whole position is so strong by nature, and wherever in the least degree exposed has been so strengthened by formidable works erected on the most approved principles, that it is justly deemed all but impregnable. On the same plain with the upper town, to the west, lies the suburb of St. John, and to the S W are cathedral, fronting the market-place, an irregular structure, with a tower and uncovered spire, and several others accommodating 4000 persons the Protestants maintained a plain Roman building, with a lofty spire; the Scotch Free church, a small but tasteful Gothic building, with an obelisk above—these four buildings occupying some of the most elevated portions of the town, form very conspicuous objects, and are visible from a great distance. Other important structures and institutions are the Hotel Dieu monastery and hospital, founded in 1536, the Ursuline convent, an extensive establishment for the education of females, founded in 1641, the French college, or R. Catholic seminary with chairs of theology, rhetoric, and mathematics, moral and natural philosophy &c., the general and the marine hospitals, the exchange public library, museum of the literary and historical society and the Jesuit barracks, formerly the Jesuit college. On the plains of Abraham a column 40 ft high has been erected to the memory of General Wolfe and in the upper town a handsome obelisk on a granite pedestal of a total height of 68 ft., has been erected to the joint memory of both the commanders, Wolfe and Montcalm, who fell at the taking of Quebec.

QUEBEC.—View of the Citadel, looking across the St. Charles River, from Cape August's Bastion in Canada.

Though comparatively few of the inhabitants are employed in manufactures Quebec has soap and candle works, tanneries, extensive breweries and distilleries at the buildings yards also, many large vessels are annually built and fitted out. Quebec is the chief seat of the Canadian winter trade. As the rifts come down the river they are collected into what are called coves, and numerous boats moored along the banks the timber being partly floated, partly aground, according to the rise or fall of the tides. These coves extend almost continually along the left bank of the St. Lawrence, for a distance of six miles above the town, and there, at certain seasons, may be seen a mass of logs of timber nearly 6 m in length and of a breadth varying from 150 to 300 yards. There are also extensive timber and deal-sawing establishments near the town on the right bank of the St. Lawrence. The sums expended in timber and saw-mills in the vicinity have been estimated at $1,200,000 and in 1846 the arrivals from the interior were of white pine 24,705,287 ft., red pine, 5,270,600 ft., pine deals, 1,216,401 pieces spruce deals, 916,933 pieces oak 2,756,754 ft. elm 2,472,808 ft., ash 250,483 ft. birch 241,683 ft. and tamarack 193,584 ft. The other important exports are fish and fish-oil, salmon, grain &c. The total value of the exports in 1845 was $2,115,619, that of the imports $2514,893. In 1863 the value of the exports amounted to $2,809,947 of the imports to $1,088,379.

The latter consisted chiefly of cotton woollen silk, and linen manufactures iron steel and hardware lace, and other articles of wearing apparel stationary glass earthenware, fishing-tackle, painters colours, &c. The following table shows the number of emigrants who arrived at Quebec from 1820 to 1868 inclusive, the total number being 994,368—

	1792-1800	1801-1810	1811-1820	1821-1830	1831-1840	1841-1850	1851-1860	1861-1868
England	318,683	45,718	50,010	55,964	4,817
Scotland	6,143	23,10	13,995	6,028	5,940
Ireland	387,445	68,846	5,998	8,81	4,949
Europe	11,613	57,119	2,110	28,863	4,18
Other parts	1,800	4,648	2,110	47	12
Total	635,006	170,151	66,250	61,027	13,410

Quebec was founded in 1608 by Champlain, geographer to the king of France on the site of an Indian village called Stadacona. It was fortified in 1600, and remained in the possession of the French till 1763 when it fell into the hands of the British in consequence of Wolfe's famous victory on the plains of Abraham. At that time the population was estimated at 8000 to 9000. The only serious attempt made upon it since the British possession was formally ratified in 1763 was by the American revolutionists in 1776. In 1845 in the month of May and June, it was visited with two calamitous fires, which destroyed about 1600 houses, including the entire suburb of St. Roch, and rendered nearly

1. Citadel. 2. St. Charles. 3. St. Lawrence. 4. Upper Town. 5. Lower Town. 6. Plains of Abraham. 7. St. Roch. 8. St. John. 9. St. Louis. 10. St. Peter.

the plains of Abraham. The lower town lies under the cliffs along the St. Lawrence and the St. Charles and adjoining to it on the W. on a flat on the latter stream lies the suburb of St. Roch. The towns are connected by three gates and two gates, in addition lead out from the upper town towards the plains of Abraham. The streets of Quebec are, as a whole, narrow, irregular, and frequently steep excepting in the suburbs, which are modern and built upon a more regular plan. The houses are principally of stone or brick two or three stories high, though some wooden structures still exist, and their roofs, generally of a high pitch imparting a quaint and antique appearance to the city are mostly covered with tinned iron or with slugs. The streets are lighted with gas, and though the city has hitherto been badly off for water the new works in progress of construction (1855) for bringing in that necessary of life from Lake St. Charles will soon afford a plentiful supply. The lower town is the great seat of business. The banks of both rivers are lined with warehouses and with wharves, jutting about 200 ft. out into the stream, along which the largest vessels sail. The head of the river immediately below the town affords excellent anchorage for ships of large tonnage.

The principal buildings, in respect of architecture, are the Parliament buildings, an elegant and extensive stone structure, forming three sides of a square, with an Ionic facade, and surmounted by a lofty dome, which commands one of the most magnificent prospects in America; the R. Catholic a third of the inhabitants of the city hospital. The winter in Quebec is as severe as in the centre of Russia, and the summer is as warm as in the S. of Italy. The inhabitants are mostly of French descent: the French language is that chiefly used, and the large majority profess the R. Catholic religion. Pop. (1852) 41,052. (MacKay's Canada Guide. Private information.)

QUEBRODO, or CANAROD, a vill and par Brissal, prov. Pernambuco, 1 bank Rio-Santos, 275 m. W N W Fort-alegre with a church. It raises a good deal of cotton and exports great numbers of cattle. Pop. 3000.

QUEDA Malay peninsula. See KUEVAT.

QUEDEBURY par Eng. Gloucester 1458 ac. P. 401
QUEDEBURY, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 85 m. S. W. Magdeburg on the Elbe. It consists of the old and new towns. It is walled, flanked with towers, and entered by 10 gates has three suburbs, and is a well manufacturing place. It contains seven Protestant churches, of which the Markt Kirche, built in the old German style, and the St. Servatus and in a few places marble is obtained. The soil is fertile, excepting where bogs occur; but there are pretty numerous towards the centre of the county. Principal rivers, the Barrow and Merse, both of which have their sources in the Elbe-Bloom Mountains. There is only one lake in the co. Length enough about 1 m. Agriculture is not generally in an improving state drainage, in particular being much wanted. The principal crops are wheat, oats, barley, rye, and rye, potatoes, turnips &c. A good deal of inferior cheese is made for the Dublin market. The co. is divided into 11 baronies, and 58 par. Principal towns—Mountmellick, Mountbush, and Maryborough. It returns three members to Parliament, two for the co., and one for the bar of Portlinton. Pop. (1841) 158,880 (1851) 111,623.

QUEENBOROUGH, a tn. and par England, co. Kent, on the left of Ebberly 2 m. S. Sheerness, with a church, and an Independent chapel, inhabitants employed in fishing and oyster-dredging. Area of par 500 ac. Pop. 773

QUEENBOROUGH par Eng. Leicester; 1890 ac. Pop. 586

QUEENSFERRY two tns. Scotland—
1 (South) A royal burgh, seaport tn. and par co. Linlithgow, S. side, Firth of Forth, at a point where the latter suddenly narrows, again to expand to a width of 2 m. to 3 m. 8½ m. W by N Edinburgh. The inhabitants are principally engaged in fisheries, but a considerable traffic also arises from the conveyance of passengers across the ferry. Until the erection of the Granton and Barnhill piers, and the completion of the Edinburgh and Granton, and Edinburgh and Northern railways, this ferry was the most important from the metropolis to the N. of Scotland Pop. 730.
—2 (North) A vil. co. Fife, 6 m. S. S. H. Dunfermline, N. shore, Firth of Forth opposite R. Queensferry. It is frequented for summer and sea-bathing quarters. Pop. 461

QUEENSTOWN formerly Cove, a maritime to Ireland prov. Munster co. and 9 m. S. W. Cork, N. side of Cork harbour, lat. 54° 51' N, lon. 8° 15' 45" W, and on S. side of Great Island, which rises abruptly from the water up to a considerable elevation. The streets are above mentioned, and present a very picturesque appearance: they are wide clean and well paved and the houses in the principal streets are mostly large, of stone, and well built. It has a handsome church R. Catholic chapel, Methodist meeting-house several schools, fever hospital, and a dispensary a club-room, two reading rooms, and a large handsome market house. About 50 years ago, Cove was a mere village, consisting of a few scattered houses. Its rapid increase has proceeded principally from its convenient situation for the shipping in Cork harbour. Cove has little trade now, no manufactures, being almost solely dependent on the military and naval establishments in its vicinity and on the numerous visitors attracted by the singular beauty of the place, and by its delightful climate. In honour of Her Majesty's visit to Cove in 1849 the name of the place was changed to Queenstown. Pop. (1841) 5142 (1851) 11,428.

QUEGUAY, a river Uruguay which falls into the Uruguay, 13 m. above Paysandu, after a W N W course of about 120 m. Principal affluent, the Quebrocho.

QUEICH a river Rhineland, Bavaria, rises in a branch of the Yagge, flows E. S. E. past Landau, and after a course of about 55 m., the greater part of which is navigable, joins I. bank Rhine at Germersheim.

QUEIMADA ISLES, two isls. Brazil, prov. São-Paulo; lat. 24° 35' S, lon. 46° 40' W (s.)

QUEISS, a river, Prussia, prov. Silesia, rises N. side, Klesgenaburg, on the frontier of Bohemia, 70 m. W S W Breslau, flows N. past Landau, and joins I. bank Bobr, 6 m. W Silesia total course, 70 m.

QUEL (ant. Yae and Sae), a tn. Spain, Old Castile, prov. and 50 m. S. E. Logroño, I. bank Gile, at the foot of a lofty precipice crossed by the remains of a castle. It has a school, some manufactures of linen, an oil and a flour mill, numerous distilleries, and a trade in brandy, oil, and wine. Pop. 507.

QUEDEBURY From Bishop's Palace, Prussia, and Danish Embassy.

church, are the most curious and handsome: a townhouse, gymnasium, a poorhouse, orphan asylum, and several hospitals. On an eminence above the town is an old castle, once the residence of the Abbots of Quedlinburg who as princes of the Empire, had a vote in the Diet, and a seat on the bench of Rhenish bishops. One of them was the mother of the celebrated Marshal Saxe and mistress of the king of Saxony. It manufactures woollen and linen goods, metals, leather matches soap tin articles paper oil vinegar and cider and has best root sugar works, and numerous mills and distilleries. The post Klopstock was born here. P. 14,222.

QUEEN two par. England, Somerset—1 (Central); 2498 ac. Pop. 773—2, (Charlton) 955 ac. Pop. 177

QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLANDS, See CHARLOTTE.
QUEEN CHARLOTTE SOUND N. Pacific Ocean, separating Vancouver's Island from the mainland of British America on the N. and forming the commencement of a long series of inlets continued along the N. and E. of that island. Cape Carlton, N. E. limit, is at lat. 51° 12' N, lon. 137° 57' 30" W. The navigation is dangerous from the Virgin and Pearl Rocks, the prevalence of fog, and the violence and irregularity of the tides.

QUEEN ELIZABETH FORSLAND an isl. British N. America; lat. 63° 30' N, lon. 63° W

QUEEN'S COUNTY an inland co., Ireland, prov. Leinster, bounded N. W. and N. by King's co., E. by Kildare and a detached portion of King's co., S. E. by Carlow S. Kilkenny, and S. W. Tipperary, length, N. to S., 38 m. breadth, 37 m. area, 664 sq. m., or 424,864 ac., of which 242,452 are arable. The surface is generally flat, rising in the N. W. into the Silver-Bloom Mountains, whose highest summit, Ardara, is 1734 ft. above sea level. In the S. E., are the Dyrry Hills, consisting chiefly of a series of isolated summits. The soil is composed principally of sandstone, and a part of the second of the sandstone coal-measures, which are largely developed in the S. E., and extensively worked. Iron, copper, and manganese are found, but not worked. Limestone strata; QUELIN, a city, China, cap. prov. Quingoo, on a branch of the West river, in the N. E. part of the prov.; lat. 25° 12' 12" N., lon. 110° 40' E. It is poorly built, has no note-worthy edifices and little trade.

QUELPAERT an isl., N. Pacific, about 80 m. S. E. Cape Providence, the most S. point of the peninsula of Corea lat. 35° 39' 40" N., lon. 125° 53' 4 E. It is decidedly volcanic, the entire S. side being either blackened, gray or greenish basalt, or a scorificous tuff. In the center, or nearly so, rises Mount Aunkland, the loftiest peak, about 8544 ft. high, when free from clouds, its summit has the appearance of the lip of a small crater, but evidently long since dormant from the abundance of trees growing near to its edge. When viewed from the sea the island presents a pleasing variety of hill and dale the N. and E. sides being cultivated to the height of about 3000 ft. All the higher parts of the island are covered with thick forests of pine and other northern trees. The soil is very poor. The principal products are wheat, barley, rice, maize, the sweet potato and the large Russian wild. Quelpaert is supposed to be one of the penal settlements of Corea, which may account for the variety of races observable among the inhabitants, as well as for the gross and filthy manners of the people. The construction of the houses is similar to that of the people of Lee-Choo, those in the cities are roofed with red tiles, which, they say, are brought from the continent. Those of the lower orders are thatched. They are surrounded by stone walls about 6 ft. in height, so as to form a perfect inclosure. The people have but few belongings, and these are miserably contrived; they frequently make use of rags. The capital city of Quelpaert stands in a broad, barren valley about the centre of the coast-line having a conspicuous flat eminence on its E. side and a small river on the W. The city walls are apparently of European design being unlike the works of China and Lee-Choo and exhibit satisfactory evidence of a knowledge in the projector of the art of defence. They are 35 ft. high, built in the form of a parallelogram whose longest side is next the sea, measures 800 yards, and contains seven bastions with embrasures throughout, but only a few sufficient guns. At right angles with the sea, the wall front measures 200 yards. The main gates, which are inland and seaward, are in recesses formed by two of the bastions, with apparently an additional gate on the E. angle. Along the coast are various small islets, some of them well wooded but there is only one good anchorage that on the N. side opposite the city. (Sir F. B. Belcher Foy Semarang)

QUELWA, a town, prov. Minas Gerais 25 m. S. E. Ouro-Preto, 3000 ft. above sea-level. It has several streets, but with exception of the townhouse, the houses are built of earth. Inhabitants chiefly miners, but some are employed in rearing cattle, or cultivating millet.

QUENDON par Eng. Fanez, 645 sq. m. Pop. 199

QUENTINGTON par Eng. Gloucester, 1830 sq. m. P. 361

QUENTIN (Str.) [anc. Augusta Veromandorum] a town in France, dep. Aisne, on the top and partly on the slope of a hill whose base is washed by the Somme, 87 m. N. E. Paris with which it is connected by railway. It consists of the town proper and three suburbs. The former was once fortified, but the ramparts have been thrown down and converted into a promenade. The principal streets are spacious and the houses well built. The buildings most deserving of notice are the cathedral church, one of the finest, purest, and most majestic Gothic structures in this part of France the townhouse, also Gothic, supported by eight pillared arches, which form an arcade and surmounted by a tower, the Church of St. Jacques, public library of 14,000 volumes, infirmary several hospitals, a courthouse, and theatre. The manufactures, particularly of cotton and linen tissues, are very important; and the environs are covered with extensive plantations. The fields, in addition to the staple manufacture, is chiefly in corn and fruit, flax, liquorice, and colonial produce. St. Quentin has a court of first resort and commerce, a commercial school, communal college, academical society of sciences, and a consulting chamber of manufactures. It is a place of great antiquity and being on the frontiers between France and the Low Countries, makes an important figure in the wars between the French and Spanish monarchies. A battle was fought under its walls in 1657, between the French and the Spaniards; the latter, who were greatly aided by a body of English troops which Mary had sent to the assistance of her husband, Philip II., gained a complete victory, and afterwards made themselves masters of the town. Pop. 22,918.

QUENTIN (Str.) a town in France, dep. Gard 2 m. N. E. Uzès with manufactures of crucibles, earthenware; brick works and an oil work. Pop. 1594.

QUENU, an isl., S. coast, Chili and N. E. of Isl. Chiloé lat. 43° 46' S., lon. 78° 10' W., separated from the island of Chiloé, on which the town of that name stands, by a channel which is 2 m. wide, and in its centre has a depth of 31 fathoms.

QUERASCO See CHENAMCO.

QUERBACH, a vil. Prussia, prov. Silesia, gov. and 85 m. S. W. Lagnitz. It has manufactures of Prussian blue and of articles of turnery a bark and two saw mills cobalt is worked in the vicinity. Pop. 1011.

QUERQUETA a vil. and par. Tucuman comp. Pise about 2 m. from the sea-coast. It has a handsome church, in the form of a Greek cross, with a dome, and an house which attracts numerous pilgrims and a trade in oil, corn, and maize. Pop. 2455.

QUERCY [anc. Quercetum] an anc. prov. France, now included in dep. Lot and Tarn-et-Garonne. It was divided into Upper and Lower Quercy Cahors was its capital.

QUERETARO a dep. Mexico bounded, N. by dep. San Luis Potosi, N. Guanajuato S. W. Michoacan, S. and E. Mexico, and N. Y. Vera Cruz area, 2444 sq. m. It forms part of the central plateau of the Cordillera, presenting a very rugged surface, traversed by mountain spurs and lofty heights, sometimes bare and sometimes covered with forests, and though no angle summit is of remarkable character the scenery is often romantic in the highest degree. Its rivers are few and almost all of insignificant dimensions, the only two deserving of notice being the Tula or Rio-de-Montesuma, which separates the state on the E. from those of Mexico and Vera Cruz and the Rio-Pis which has cut a deep bed in the porphyry near San Juan del Rio. The most important vegetable product is grain which is raised in large quantities, and together with cattle forms the chief wealth of the state. The minerals once famous, are now comparatively unimportant, though 216 mines are still counted including 5 of gold, 195 silver 7 copper 1 lead, 1 tin 6 quicksilver, 2 antimony and 1 jaldre. Manufactures have made considerable progress and many woolen and cotton fabrics are woven from materials produced within the state—the former from the Lana de Chinchorro, and the latter from a species of cotton much used in the manufacture of a favourite kind of mantas shawls, and rebacas. To spin the cotton, and also in part to weave it, two factories have been erected producing weekly 10,000 the cotton twist, and 400 pieces cloth. Queretaro is divided into six districts—Querubon, San Juan del Rio, Cadeyeta Santa Maria Amelco, San Pedro Iohann and Jalpan. Pop. (1850) 184,161.

QUERFURT a city Mexico cap. above dep. on a plateau 6365 ft. above sea level 110 m. N. W. Mexico, on the sides and summit of several scarping hills. It consists of the city proper and suburbs, situated by a small stream, and presents an appearance as if once impregnable and picturesque, being perhaps, after Mexico, the finest city of the Confederation. It is built with great regularity all the streets stretching at right angles from three large squares. Many of the private buildings are not only substantial but elegant, and among the public edifices, particular notice is due to the principal church a magnificent and richly-decorated structure and a noble aqueduct, about 2 m. long, spanning a plain, with arches 90 ft. high and by communicating with a tunnel in the opposite hills, bringing a copious supply of excellent water from a distance of 6 m. Its manufactures, though greatly declined, make considerable quantities of woolen and cotton goods, horse covering articles in leather goods, &c. Its trade after suffering much from the unsettled state of the government, has begun to revive. The peace between Mexico and the U. States was ratified here, by the Mexican Congress, in 1848. Pop. 29,702.

QUERFURT a town, Prussia, prov. Saxony, 18 m. S. W. Halle, on the Querbach. It is surrounded with walls, and has an old castle, three churches, a superior leigher school and two hospitals, provincial and city courts, manufactures of saltpetre, a trade in horses and cattle, and several mills. Pop. 3087.

QUERIMBA ISLANDS, a chain of isls., E. Africa, Mozambique Channel belonging to the Portuguese territory of Mozambique between Cape Delgado and Pemba Bay; the fort, near N. part of Querimba Island, the most S. of the range, is in lat. 13° 24' 45" S. lon. 40° 32' E. (a). The principal islands are Anaua, Yumbia, Zanga, Matemo, Ibo, and Querimba; all of them low, fertile, of coral, with long flat reefs extending E. and having excellent harbours, but only a few of them inhabited. The town of Ibo, the Portuguese frontier post to the N., is well fortified.

QUERO, a river Central America, which rises in the state of Guatemala flows N., and after a course of above 50 m., falls into the Bay of Honduras.

QUEROZOLA, a vil. duchy and 18 m. S.W. Modena, celebrated for the petroleum springs in its vicinity.

QUESADA, a co. in Spain, Andalucia, prov. and 88 m. E. Jaen. It is poorly built, has a church, a large courthouse, a tower, forming part of an ancient fort, and now used as a prison, a school, an hospital and manufactures of white soap, several oil and flour mills and a trade in corn, oil, wax, and fruit. Pop. 4503.

QUESALTENANGO a co. Central America, state and 88 m. N.W. Guatemala, cap. dep. of its name. It ranks next to the capital consists of regular and paved streets, and houses which are well though somewhat fancifully built and has a large and imposing church with a richly-decorated front, a handsome balcony, and several other architectural details and an extensive trade in wheat, cotton, sugar, and woolen and cotton fabrics. Pop. about 20,000.

QUESALTEPECQUE, a co. Central America, state and 83 m. E.N.E. Guatemala, dep. Vera Paz. Pop. about 4000.

QUESNOY (La) (see Quercy) a co. France, dep. Nord, 57 m. S.E. Lille. It is walled and otherwise fortified in general well built has an interesting parish church, handsome town-hall and several manufactures of nails, and calico, breweries, tanneries, and cotton-mills and a trade in corn, flax, hemp, iron, horses, and cattle. Pop. 8108.

QUESNOY (see Quercy) a co. France, dep. Nord, 7 m. N. Lille, on the Beuse-Deule canal with manufactures of starch from chamo, sails, iron pots, and ards; oil works, beet-root sugar-refineries, breweries distilleries, flour and falling mills and a trade in coal and flax. Pop. 1837.

QUERFEMBERT a co. France, dep. Morbihan 14 m. E. Vannes. It is an old place, for the most part poorly built has manufactures of leather and a trade in butter. Pop. 1020.

QUETTRICK, par. Eng. Cornwall 4531 ac. 1 777 QUETTA a co. Beloochistan. See BELUCH.

QUEVAUCAMP, a vil. and co. Belgium, par. Hainaut, 12 m. W. by N. Mons with a church, chapel-house, school, and some woollen weaving but the export of black marble, quarried in the vicinity, forms the chief trade. Pop. 2237.

QUEVILI (Y) (Perry) a vil. France, dep. Seine-Inférieure, 8 m. S.W. Rouen, near r. bank Seine with manufactures of chemical products and machines rope-walks, a dye-work, wax-refinery, bleachfield, and several cotton-mills. Pop. 2544.

QUESALTENANGO. See QUESALTENANGO.

QUI a co. in Assam. See QUI.

QUIA a district, W. Africa, between the Sokoto and Cameroons rivers, immediately E. of Nerra-Lerra and consisting of a rich alluvial flat of about 1800 sq. m., on which large crops of maize, rice, and yams are raised.

QUIAHO commonly called Chamoa, a vil. Dominica Republic, E. end, 40 mi. Hayti about 90 m. E. by N. the city of Santa Domingo. It is a small place at the mouth of a stream of some name which is partially navigable. Off it is an open roadstead, with good anchoring ground in 8 to 15 fathoms.

QUILAKS a co. and par. Portugal about 25 m. from Coimbra. Pop. 1000.

QUILIBEX a co. New Granada. See CRISTINA.

QUIBERON a peninsula, France, which projects S. from dep. Morbihan into the Bay of Biscay for about 7 m., with an average breadth of 3 m., and includes a large and well-sheltered bay defended by batteries on the shore and the fort of Penmarch, which, with the village of Quiberon, forms a fortress of the fourth class.

QUIBU an isl. New Granada, S. coast, dep. Veraguas; lat. 7° 20' N. lon. 81° 40' W.; in the form of an irregular cruciform, 19 m. long, N. to S. with an average breadth of about 7 m. It is low flat, and covered with dense forests. Wild animals including deer, monkeys, tigers, and venomous snakes, abound; and the surrounding sea is full of alligators, sharks, and gigantic rays. The pearl-fishery was at one time valuable, but has long been abandoned. Quibo was in early times an important station of the Buccaneers and English ships of war from its proximity to the principal field of action against the Spanish galleons.

QUICARA, or Hicaron, a group of small isls. New Granada, in the N. Pacific, E. of Quibo, and near the W. entrance of Montijo Bay lat. 7° 10' 50" N. lon. 81° 45' 18" W. The whole group is only about 5 m. long, N. to S. The largest is irregular in its surface, and has on its E. side a hill 830 ft. high, and is well wooded with forest trees.

QUICHE, a market co. Central America, state, and 25 m. N.W. Guatemala. Pop. 2500.

QUIDDEHAM, par. Eng. Norfolk 1126 ac. P. 109.

QUIEVRAIN a vil. and co. Belgium par. Hainaut, 12 m. W.W. Mons with a spacious church a school manufactures of linen and woollen fabrics, tobacco, cheese, leather oil, &c. breweries, corn-mills, and a malt-reducing. Pop. 2241.

QUIEVY a vil. France, dep. Nord, 11 m. P. Cambrai, with several breweries, and extensive manufactures of linen and cotton goods. Pop. 2917.

QUILLAGO or Quimase a vil. and co. Italy Piedmont, dist. Genoa, prov. and near Savona. It consists of mean houses, and narrow uncommenced streets, and has a church and a Capuchin convent. Two sanguinary battles were fought here in the beginning of the present century between the Austrians and French. Pop. 3025.

QUILLEDEGE (F) (Latin Guillobetum) a co. France, dep. Eure, 7 m. N. Pont-Audemer, l. bank Seine 10 m. above its mouth lat. (right) 49° 28' 24" N. lon. 0° 31' 42" W. (a). It is in general poorly built but has an excellent harbour in which the larger vessels that cannot move to Rouen usually anchor or discharge part of their cargoes. manufactures of cotton-hosiery and has a valuable fishery and a trade in corn, cattle, and timber. Pop. 1447.

QUILLIMANK, a maritime co. E. Africa, Portuguese territory of Mozambique l. bank Quillimank river the most N. arm of the Zambezi and 15 m. from its mouth lat. 17° 51' 45" S. lon. 37° 1' E. (a). It is built on an unhealthy marsh and without any regard to regularity and consists of several substantially built brick houses and numerous huts built of reeds, and thatched with coarse grass. The only public buildings are a small church and a number of sheds in a long quadrangle including the custom-house, barracks, and prison. Quillimank is visited by numerous vessels, and carries on a brisk trade in gold and ivory. Pop. (including country for a few miles around) about 15,000.

QUILLOTA, a co. Chili prov. Aconcagua, in a beautiful and fertile valley 28 m. N.E. Valparaiso. It was founded in 1728, and has since suffered severely on different occasions from earthquakes. The copper-mines in the vicinity are regarded as the richest in Chili. Pop. 8000.

QUILLOA a co. E. Africa. See KILWA.

QUILON a seaport, Hindostan. See COCHIN.

QUIMPER, or Quimper (see Quimper).

QUIMPER, or Quimper (see Quimper).

QUIMPER, a co. France, cap. dep. Finistère, at the confluence of the Odor and Eyr. 124 m. N.W. Nantes. It consists of an old and a new town, the former is surrounded with walls flanked with towers, but the houses are very poorly built; the latter contains a number of good mansions, particularly along the quay which front r. bank Odor, and forms a harbour accessible by vessels of 300 tons. The principal public edifices are the cathedral a fine Gothic structure of the 15th century, with a richly-sculptured portal between two massive towers the church of the Cordeliers, and adjoining edifice, both in ruins the prefecture the college, an extensive building which formerly belonged to the Jesuits the military hospital, theatre, &c. Near the prefecture a rocky mass rises to the height of 650 ft. covered with trees and shrubs. The top, which is flat, has been formed into an excellent promenade. The manufactures consist of felt and cardenware, leather, and beer. There are also building yards. The trade is important, chiefly in corn, wine, brandy, wax, honey, butter, meat, dried and salt fish, iron, wool, hemp, flax, linen, horses, and castles. The fishing of mackerel is extensively carried on. Quimper is the see of a bishop, has a court of first resort and commerce, a consulting chamber of manufactures a diocesan summary secondary ecclesiastical school and communal college. Pop. (1829) 9664.

QUIMPER CATHEDRAL.—From Fort La Troienne.

QUIMPERLE (see Kemperlewe) a tn France, dep. Finistère, at the junction of the R16 and route, 67 m. S.E. Brest. It is surrounded by lofty hills. has a court of first resort agricultural society a Gothic church an Lrueline and a Capucin convent, and a communal college manufactures of cloys, several tanneries, and paper-mills and a trade in corn, cattle, leather, paper, &c. Vessels of 150 tons ascend into the heart of the town and discharge their cargoes at a broad quay lined with warehouses and handsome dwelling houses. Pop. 3981.

QUIN see Irish 3202 so. Pop. 2547.

QUINCINETTO a vil and com Italy Piedmont div Turin prov and 9 m. N.W. Ivrea with a handsome church, and two public schools. Pop. 1460.

QUINCY two tns. U States.—1 Illinois 1 bank Mississippi 170 m. N.W. St. Louis. It is laid out with great regularity, well built, has a spacious public square, four neat churches a courthouse, various manufacturing establishments, including saw and flour mills, and an extensive and rapidly increasing trade. The haven is one of the best steam boat landings in the Mississippi. Pop. (1850) 691.—2 Massachusetts, on Braintree or Quincy Bay a branch of Boston harbour and on the Old Colony railway about 7 m. S. by E Boston. It is well built and well kept, has a handsome stone church a townhouse forming a noble granite structure several academies and schools manufactures of shoes and other articles in leather, carriages, harness, coach lace, hats &c., but the most important and lucrative employment is the working of the quarries which furnish the well known Quincy granite, of which some of the finest edifices in the U States are constructed. The fisheries also are important, and a considerable number of vessels are fitted out in the building-yards. Quincy numbers among its natives the two presidents, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, father and son. Pop. (1850) 5017.

QUINDICI a tn. Naples, prov Lavoro, 7 m. E. Nola, in a valley. Pop. 8410.

QUINDIU a Cordillera of the Andes, in the S.W. of New Granada, stretching in a N.W. direction from that of Quacaces to that of Erro and forming part of the main chain which divides the waters of the Magdalena from those of its principal tributary the Cauca. Its culminating point, Tollima, has a height of 18 176 ft.

QUINGEVOLE a vil and com. Kingdom of Italy prov Mantua, 6 m. W. Revere, between r bank Po and r bank Bochetta. Pop. 2066.

QUINHON an excellent harbour E. coast, Anam, 145 m. S.S.E. Touray. It is narrow at the entrance, but wide and commodious, being almost completely landlocked. About 10 m. from the harbour is a town of some name.

QUINSIGAMOND or Loze Pond, a lake, U States Massachusetts, about 30 m. W.S.W. Boston. It is a beautiful sheet of water in the form of a crescent, about 4 m. long by 1 m. broad, and in some parts 2 ft. deep. It contains 12 islands. This lake is the chief feeder of the Blackstone canal.

QUINTANA, a tn Spain, Estremadura, prov and 64 m. S.E. Badajoz with a townhouse, prison, a handsome granary three schools, a church and a hermitage some weaving in common linen, and several flour-mills. Pop. 3446.

QUINTANAR DE LA OROSA, a tn Spain, New Castile, prov Toledo, 62 m. S.E. Madrid. It has two large squares a large and well-built townhouse a house for the public weigh and measures, a granary small prison four schools and an advanced summary a church and several hermitages five soap-works oil flour, and chocolate mills brick and tile kilns and manufactures of blankets, counterpanes ropes, &c. and a much frequented market. Pop. 5666.

QUINTANA ROJA, a tn Spain, New Castile, prov Caceres 118 m. S.E. Madrid on the Valdecanal. It has a townhouse prison substantial and elegant granary two schools a church and five hermitages manufactures of augers of excellent quality, a flour and several oil mills. Pop. 2919.

QUINTANILLA, numerous small places, Spain. The only one deserving of notice is Quintanilla de la Encina, prov and 18 m. W. Leon with a church and a school. 1 1208.

QUINTIN a tn France, prov Cotes-du-Nord, 10 m. S.W. St. Briens, on the Gonne with a cathedral a townhouse, and a handsome chateau, built on the ruins of an old castle and manufactures of fine linen a paper-mill blast-furnaces and a considerable trade in linen wax, honey, calf skins, coarse hats, catia, &c. Pop. 3814.

QUINTIN SAX OF MEDOWS a vil Spain Catalonia, prov and 35 m. from Barcelona with a church courthouse, school manufactures of cotton twist and paper several flour mills, and a distillery. Pop. 1318.

QUINTV a vil and par Switzerland can Tessen, Val Laventine, 22 m. N.W. Bellinzona. It contains a large and handsome church and has a considerable trade in shoes. Many of the inhabitants go into Italy in winter to act as herds and sellers of milk. Pop. 1868.

QUINTO a vil Spain, Aragon prov and 20 m. S.L. Saragossa, r bank Ebro, with a townhouse, two schools a church built on the top of an eminence commanding the town, a chapel and several hermitages. Near it are mineral baths, which have long enjoyed great celebrity for the cure of rheumatism, syphilis, herpetic leprosy, and, above all, catarrhs complaint. The season lasts from June 1 till the close of September. From 64 to 71 Feh is the range of the temperature of the water. Pop. 1378.

QUINTO a river La Platte, runs near lat. 22 S. in the N. of prov San Luis, flows S.E. and after a course of nearly 400 m. is lost in a marshy lake.

QUINTO AL MAR, a vil and com Italy Piedmont div and about 6 m. E. E. Genoa, on a height above the Gulf of Genoa. It consists chiefly of villas and other manor houses, of substantial appearance, belonging to the dukes of Genoa. Pop. 1764.

QUINTON, two pars. Eng.—1 Gloucester 4800 ac. Pop. 687.—2 Northampton 1170 ac. Pop. 183.

QUIZANO a vil and com Italy Lombardy prov and 20 m. S.W. Brescia, is a finely diversified district on the Savarone. It is a handsome, well built place, with an elegant church. Pop. 3932.

QUIOTEPEC, or Cerro de las Juntas, a vil Mexico dep. and about 90 m. N. Oaxaca, near the junction of the Quilapote and Salado. On the hill or cone from which it takes its name, are numerous remains of military works, ap-generally situated to defend an extensive palace and temple, whose massive ruins still crown its summit. The temple, which, like most of the Aztec religious structures, is pyramidal, bears no resemblance to the remains discovered in Yucatan and seems to indicate a lower state of art and less refined civilization.

QUIRICO (San) a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. and a little W. of the I. bank of the Po, on the high road to Lombardy. It has a court of justice, a handsome church, and a small theatre. Pop. 5668.

QUIRICO (San) in Val d'Ossola a vil. and com. Tarento comp. Sura, 6 m. from Poesio. It has two churches and a school. Pop. 1664.

QUIRIGUA a ruined city Central America, state Guatemala, on the Motagua, rich in monumental remains.

QUIRIQUA an isl., R. America, off Chili, about lat. 38° 40' S.; lon. 78° 10' W. It is about 3 m. long by 1 m. broad in the W. entrance of the Bay of Concepcion, which it shelters from N. winds.

QUIRPO an isl. British N. America, at the entrance of the Strait of Bellefleur, lat. (N point) 51° 38' N. lon. 55° 24' W. (E.).

QUISTELA a vil. and com. kingd. of Italy prov. and 16 m. S. E. W. Mantua, r. bank boschia. A sanguinary battle was fought here in 1734 between the Imperialists and the French, in which the latter were defeated. Pop. 6878.

QUITA a v. in E. Africa, on the Sobata, a few miles above the town of that name. lat. 10° S.; lon. 33° 30' E. The district of which it is the capital possesses much gold though not of the best quality, and the natives, who do not understand the art of working it, barter it in its natural state to the Portuguese. Topazes and rubies are also found. The other products are various kinds of grain and pulses, gum, pitch, timber and salt.

QUITO, the cap. city of Ecuador in a ravine on the E. side of the volcano of Pichincha, 9540 ft. above the sea, 160 m. N. N. E. Guayaquil. Its streets, with exception of four which meet in the large central square, are narrow, unevenly paved, and extremely dirty and the houses, built for the most part with sun-dried bricks, and distained with the leaves of the mangrove or chaguarero (Agave Americana), possess an architectural merit. The more important public buildings and establishments are the cathedral more remarkable for its planeness than the richness of its decorations, several other churches and convents the townhouse, court-house, president's palace, two colleges, one of them occupying part of the extensive and handsome buildings of the old Jesuit college, but both under very indifferent management the episcopal palace, orphan asylum, and hospital. The manufactures consist chiefly of woollen and cotton goods whose, though coarse, are substantial and in considerable demand, lace, hosiery and confectionary the last in high repute; and the trade in corn, and other agricultural produce, sent to Guayaquil in exchange for molasses, iron, and steel and to Peru, in exchange for wine, brandy, oil, and different metals, is very extensive. The imports from abroad include all kinds of European clothes and hardware. The weekly markets are abundantly supplied with provisions, among which cheese, eaten in excess at all meals and by all classes, is the most conspicuous item. Quito was taken by the Spaniards in 1534 and incorporated as a city by Charles V. in 1541. It has repeatedly suffered much from earthquakes. Pop. variously estimated, from 50,000 to 70,000.

QUITTA, or PAINE'S TOWNS formerly a Danish, now a British fort and town, N. Guinea Slave coast, 87 m. E. N. E. Acoch lat. 5° 55' 0" N. lon. 0° 59' 45" E. (s.) Pop. 6000.

QUIVOX (Str.) par. Bout. Afr. 5000 a. Pop. 7147.

QUORRA, river, Africa. See Kiorra.

R.

RAAB (Latin Arabo) a river Austria, rises near Passau close the Grila in Styria, flows first N. E. enters Hungary turns N. E. passing the towns of Komorn, Maraslovo, and at Raab joins the bank Danube total course about 170 m., chief affluents, r. the Mareslo, and L. the Felsitz, Finka, Fomart Glina, Little Raab, and Leytha.

RAAB, or NAIR GYON (Latin Arabos) a N. Hungary cap. eo. of its name, at the confluence of the Raab and Raba into the Danube 87 m. W. 4° 4' S. It stands in a beautiful plain almost surrounded by three rivers, and is thus advantageously situated both for defence and commerce. It consists of an inner and an outer town. The former is well fortified and defended by a castle, and is separated by a glass from the latter which is properly only a suburb. It is upon the whole, well built. The houses are generally of stone, and many of them are handsome. The greatest disadvantages of the place are a scarcity of good water, and a paucity of fuel. It contains three churches, a Lutheran, Calvinistic, and Catholic an episcopal palace, doctors' assembly, two monasteries, a royal academy, archiepiscopal see, a principal and several other schools and has manufactures of calicoes, reeling awnings and tobacco-baskets, and a considerable trade.

Raab was a place of some importance under the Romans, and makes a figure both in the early wars of Hungary, and those of still more modern times. A great many Roman coins have been found here. Pop. 18,000. — THE COUNTRY area, 461 geo. sq. m., is almost level throughout, and consists, for the most part, of fertile soil though not without the occasional occurrence of bogs and morasses, and some tracts of barren sand. The principal river is the Danube, two arms of which traverse the N. portion of this county and form the island of Schott or Belpolitz, the summer part of which belongs to it. All kinds of corn are grown in abundance also garden-crops, fruit, and flax. Good wine and a little silk are produced. The trade on the Danube is very active. The inhabitants are chiefly Magyars, and belong to the R. Catholic church. Pop. 113,800.

RAALTF, a vil. Holland one of the prettiest in prov. Overijssel, 8 m. S. E. Zwolle, with two churches, a school, and a weekly cattle market. Pop. 463.

RAAMSDONK, a vil. Holland, prov. N. Brabant, 10 m. N. E. Breda with two churches, a convenient communal house, and a school. It was one of twenty-seven villages which were totally swept away by a flood Nov. 18, 1421. Pop. 1069.

RAAHAY an isl. Scotland. See Rahr.

RAAEZL a vil. Austria, Moravia, circle and 11 m. S. W. Tropan, on the Mera. Initial station chiefly employed in cultivating flax spinning flax, and dealing in yarn. Pop. 1820.

RABASTANS, a N. France, dep. Haute Pyrenees, 25 m. E. N. E. Alby. It is an ancient but poorly built place, was once walled and defended by a strong castle, and suffered much during the civil wars particularly from the atrocity of Mollat, who, in revenge for a wound in the face which obliged him ever afterwards to wear a mask, massacred the inhabitants, without distinction of age or sex, threw 60 Protestants headlong from a tower and laid the town in ashes. Pop. 8470.

RABAT a maritime N. Morocco, prov. and 100 m. W. Fez, on the Atlantic, at the mouth of the Daragrab, and opposite Salé. It is surrounded with a wall flanked by numerous towers, and has a citadel and batteries. The streets are steep and inconvenient, but the houses generally have a respectable appearance, and some of them are well built. It has some manufactures and considerable trade. In November 1851, it was bombarded by a French squadron, under Rear Admiral Duboussin. P. 21,000, including 5000 Jews.

RABBA a large, populous, and commercial N. Central Africa, 1 bank Niger, lat. 9° 15' N. lon. 6° 39' E. The market is very celebrated, and is considered one of the largest and best in the country. It is generally well supplied with slaves of both sexes, ivory, and a variety of articles, both of native and foreign manufacture.

RABBAH, or RABATH AMMAN See AMMAN
RABCA, or RABOCCA, two vills. Hungary, Rither Danube, on Arva, near the frontiers of Galicia, 22 m N N E Als-Kubla, with two churches, some manufactures of linen, and articles in wood, and a trade in cattle. Pop. (Rabca), 1583; (Rabosani) 1145.

RABE (Rab), a vil Hungary. Thither Thine so. Rhar N Greenwarden, with a Protestant church, and a crab-factory in the Berstye. Pop. 1583

RABIVAL, a in Central America, state Guatemala, prov and 50 m S W Vera Paz, in a mountainous district near the sources of the Chusmal, a tributary of the Usumacinta. Pop. about 6500

RABISHAU, a in Prussia, gov and S W Legnitz with a R. Catholic church and a saw, oil and other mills. P. 1853.

RABINAHAD, a low sandy isl. Hindoostan, Bay of Bengal, off the Sunderbuds, at the W entrance of the E. mouth of the Ganges, and separated from the mainland by a narrow channel or river of same name. It is about 18 m long by 6 m broad.

RACALE, a in Naples, prov Otranto, 9 m S E Gallipoli, with four churches a convent, and hospital. Tobacco and cotton are grown in the neighborhood. Pop. 1300

RACAVAN, par Isl. Antilia 17 563 ac. P. 4924

RACCAO or VERO and PERMANO, a vil, and par Italy Venetia, prov Udine, 7 m S S W Voglia, with a church. Pop. 1610

RACONIG, a in Italy Piedmont, div Coni prov and 11 m N E Saluzzo, in a very fertile plain 1 bank Maera. It is well built, has spacious and generally regular streets, lined by substantial and often elegant mansions. Its principal edifice is a magnificent royal castle with extensive well laid-out gardens and parks. The other public buildings are two parish and several other churches, some of them adorned with fine frescoes; two monasteries, a college a military and other schools, an hospital, a mont-de-piété, and several charitable institutions. The chief industrial employ ment is the preparation and spinning of silk. Pop. 10 102

RACHE-TOURNAI a large city Belgium, 560 m W Yvelde at the foot of a sandy mountain. It consists of several large edifices, surrounded by a great number of small houses. Three elegant and majestic Buddhist temples rise in the centre of the establishment. On the avenue of the principal temple is a square tower of colossal proportions, and on the four angles are four monstrous dragons sculptured in granite. This place is a favorite resort of devout pilgrims.—(Hue)

RACHECOURT, a vil, and com. Belgium prov Liège, burg, on a stream of same name, 5 m S S W Arlon. The inhabitants are almost all employed in agriculture. P. 1185

RACINE, a in U. States, Wisconsin, on the Root near its mouth in Lake Michigan, and on Green Bay, Milwaukee, and Chicago railway 73 m S E E Madison. It has an Episcopal college, a courthouse, jail, and other public buildings and a considerable trade. Pop. 5193

RACKENFORD par Eng Devon 2893 ac. P. 473
RACKET RIVER, U. States, New York rises in numerous lakes and ponds, and enters the St. Lawrence at the N boundary of the state, opposite Cornwall Island, Canada, after a N course of 145 m

RACEHEATH par Eng Norfolk, 1990 ac. P. 281
RACEKEE, a market in Hungary, co. and 24 m S Pesth, on an island of the same name formed by the Danube it has a handsome summer palace, built by the celebrated Prince Eugene, and some trade in fruit and fish. Pop. 4200.

RACON, a river, U. States, rises in Iowa, about lat. 45° N flows S E and joins a bank Mississippi on the frontiers of Missouri and Illinois, after a course of about 250 m. Its chief affluents is the De Merve, which joins it on the left.

RACON par Eng Essex, 1180 ac. Pop. 96
RACZ, or O-BACZ a market in Hungary, co. Bacs, 26 m N N E Peterwarden, on the Theise with two churches, a synagogue and some trade in salt and fish. Pop. 11 182

RADA or CHARTY or CASTLE or RADA a vil and com. Tuscany, 16 m N Siena, with a church, convent, and old castle. Pop. 2376.

RADACK and RALICK two chains of islands, N. Pacific, stretching S. E. to N. W. between lat. 4° 59' and 11° 45' N; and lon 165° and 173° E., and dividing Marshall's Archipelago into two parallel ranges, of which Radack is on the E and Ralick on the W. They have, almost without exception, the usual coral character, and consist of a narrow belt or reef, unfathomable on the outside and forming a more or less shallow lagoon within. Many of the groups contain cocoa-nut and bread-fruit trees in clumps of beautiful verdure, and support numerous inhabitants, who, though more savage, are distinguished by the excellence of their canoes, and their skill in managing them. Both chains are very imperfectly known but their productions and capabilities seem not to be of much importance.

RADAFALVA or MAKORHOF a vil Hungary on Eisenburg, on the Lejence, 2 m from Fürstenfeld; with a church and a trade in corn cattle, and wool. Pop. 1013.

RADAUN, a river W Prussia, flows very circuitously E N E, and joins the Mothe a little above Danzig after a course of 80 m RADAUTZ, a vil Austria, duchy Bukovina, 7 bank Suceava, 27 m S. Chernowits with two churches, glass-works, and a valuable military breeding-stad 1 1900.

RADBOURNE, par Eng Dorset 2084 ac. P. 289

RADCLIFFE, a par England, co. Lancashire on the Irwell here crossed by a bridge of two arches, 2 m. N W Manchester. It consists chiefly of the two villages of Radcliffe and Radcliffe Bridge and has a church with a low tower a Wesleyan chapel, a national and a Sunday school extensive manufactures of cotton goods including calicoes, muslin, tawny, satins, and checks and several collieries. Area of par. 2405 ac. Pop. 9028.

RADCLIVE, par Eng Bucks, 1190 ac. Pop. 587

RADDINGTON par Eng Somerset; 1005 ac. P. 120.

RADEBERG a in Saxony circle and 10 m. N E Dresden, on the Elbe with a castle, manufactures of linen and ribbons, a calico printfield a dye-work mill, and several mills. The post Langbein and the boatmen Marien were burnt here. Pop. 2511

RADEBURG a in Saxony circle and 12 m N Dresden on the Elbe, with a castle, a walk, saw and other mills. Pop. 9071

RADEVIN a vil Bohemia, circle and 9 m. S S E Tabor with a castle synagogue, and yotash refinery. P. 1013

RADFORD a vil par England, co. Nottingham It consists chiefly of two villages, one, on the Leen and the other new and so near Nottingham as to be properly one of its suburbs consisting of several modern and spacious streets, and has a handsome parish church with a tower Independent ant, Baptist, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodist chapel, extensive manufactures of hosiery and bobbin net, bleach-works cottons and corn mills. Area of par. 1000 ac. P. 12 437

RADFORD (SMKLE) par Eng. Warwick, 2093 ac. Pop. 494

RADI, a vil Bohemia, circle Buzau, in a mountainous district 4 m from Liebenau with a chapel a paper, and two flour mills. Pop. 1630

RADICFNA a in Naples, prov Calabria-Ultra II 10 m N E Palmi in an unhealthy plain, surrounded by olive plantations. Pop. 1580

RADICUPANI a picturesque in. Iovany 55 m S E. Siena at the foot of a hill, crowned with the remains of an old castle. It is the seat of a court of justice and has a church and a convent. Pop. 2209

RADICONDALI a vil and com Tuscany, 30 m W Siena, with a handsome collegiate church, and a trade in chestnut timber and dairy produce. Pop. 2125.

RADIPOLE par Eng Dorset 1838 ac. Pop. 809

RADKERSBURG a in Austria Styria, circle and 38 m. S E Graz, on an island in the Mur. It is well built; has a suburb on the bank of the river, contains a church and a Capuchin monastery and has a considerable trade in iron and brass. Pop. 2400

RADLAY par Eng Berks 2994 ac. Pop. 55.

RADMANSDORF, or RADOLLA a in Austria, Illyria, 80 m N W Laybach on a mountain near 1 bank Save. It has a parish church a castle and manufactures of coarse woollens, muslin, linen and leather. Pop. 1000

RADMAN, a vil Austria, Styria, 80 m W N W Bruck, with a church an old castle, a charitable endowment, smelting-furnaces, and copper-mines. Pop. 1663.

RADVA, two places Austria.—1. (or Radwa) a vil Transylvania, 30 m N N E Bistritz, on the Semoosh. It has a Greek united church, and was in early times a place of considerable importance, but was destroyed on an invasion of the Tartars in 1343. Near it lead and silver are worked. Pop. 1000.—A market on. Hungary, on. and 17 m. E. by N. road, near the mouth of the Maros. It has two churches, a Franciscan monastery and some trade in cattle. Pop. 1384.

RADNAGE, a village, Eng. Bucks, 1833 ac. Pop. 438.
RADNITZ, a m. Bohemia, circle east 14 m. N.E. Pilsen with a church, synagogue, townhouse, old castle, and school; and manufactures of linen, several mills, and a trade in horses and cattle. Pop. 2918.

RADNOR, or RADNORSHIRE, an inland co. S. Wales, bounded N. by Montgomeryshire and Shropshire, E. and S.E. Herefordshire, S. and S.W. Brecknockshire, and W. Cardigan shire. Area, 249,000 ac., of which about one-third is supposed to be inclosed, and of this inclosed portion a fourth only is under the plough. The surface throughout is hilly in some parts approaching to mountainous, the highest summit of the forest of Radnor reaching an elevation of 2163 ft. above sea level. The principal portion of Radnorshire is composed of the strata forming the Silurian system, but on the W. and N.W. side of the county the upper beds of the older rocks, composing the Cambrian system make their appearance. Slates and porphyry occur in many parts and a coarse amygdaloidal trap is met with. A great portion of the country consists of common-land, heath, and moor-land. Barley oats, and potatoes are the principal crops, chiefly however for home consumption. But on road only in the vicinity of market towns, considerable quantities of grain are raised for sale. But the chief dependence of the farmer is on the stock raised on the pasture-land and common-land, which not only support large numbers of sheep, but in the more sheltered parts, cattle of all sizes. The cows are principally of the Herefordshire breed. The draught-horses in general use is rather small, but capable of enduring great fatigue. The original Welsh ponies are still bred in the mountains. Large quantities of butter are made. The ancient forests of Radnorshire, which were of great extent, have long since disappeared. Manufactures of iron, chiefly steel. None of the rivers are navigable. It returns one member to Parliament, and one is returned for New Radnor in conjunction with other places. Pop. 24,716.

RADNOR (New), a part. for small market in S. Wales co. Radnor. The town, on a plain in the vale of Radnor 60 m. N.W. Bristol has a townhall and jail a handsome new church and Welsh Calvinistic Methodist chapel, and several useful charities. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in agriculture. The borough sent with 1 representative, Knight, &c. in sending a member to Parliament. Pop. 1000.

RADNOI two parts. N. Wales—1 (Old), Radnor; 10 000 ac. Pop. 1063—2 (New) 2342 ac. Pop. 481.

RADNOTH RADNOTH of JERRET a vil Austria, Tyrol, Tyrolia, co. Koblberg, on the Mirova 44 m. N. Harzmannstadt, with a handsome chateau, and two churches. P. 1705.
RADNOTH a vil Austria, Tyrolia, co. and about 80 m. from Vienna with a church. There is a sulphur-spring in the vicinity. Pop. 1169.

RADOKALA or KRAKOW KONAROFF a group of isls. N. Pacific, Marshall or Micronesia, situated about 11 m. E. by E. to W. by W. lat. 11° 30' and 11° 38' 45" N. lon. 166° 26' 30' and 167° 14' 30" E. The islands are principally two—a larger about 56 m. long, trending N.E. and S.W. with an entrance to the lagoon on the S. and a low situated to the N. of it, and 14 m. long by 3 m. wide. They are both of coral formation, abundantly supplied with vegetable productions, and apparently uninhabited.

RADOLFSZELL, a m. Baden, Lake circle on the Rhine—11 m. N. W. Konstanz. It is walled; has a church, hospital, manufacture of white and red leather, and articles of copper wire. P. 1220.

RADOM, a m. Russian Poland, on the Radomka, 66 m. N. Warsaw. It is walled, defended by a castle, and has a court of law several public offices, two S. Catholic churches, a Jewish college, and gymnasium. Pop. (1841), 5845.

RADOMSK a m. Russian Poland, 73 m. S.E. Kalisz, in a valley on the Radomka with three churches, and a trade in cattle. Pop. (1841), 2797.

RADNITZ, or BRUNNEN—1, A river Turkey in Europe rises near a town of the same name, near Ghimara, Macedonia, flows E. by E. and joins the bank Karas, after a course of about 75 m.—2, A m. on the above river, esp. dist. of same name, 75 m. N.W. Samsat. It consists of about 400 houses, and has some trade in corn and wine.

RADSTADT a m. Upper Austria, 3 m. S. E. Salzburg, 1 bank Enns. It is walled; has three churches, a chapel, monastery school and some trade in cattle, sheep, and wood. Pop. 2608.

RADSTOCK par Eng Somerset 1008 ac. P. 1792.
RADSTONE, par Eng. Northampton; 810 ac. P. 168.

RADWAN, or RADVANY a market in Hungary Hither Danube, on Rohl, r bank Gran 2 m. S. Vasohl, with two handsome chateaux, two churches, manufactures of woollen cloth, a powder a walk, and a grinding mill. Pop. 3000.

RADWELL par Eng. Warwick 1580 ac. Pop. 344.

RADWELL, par Eng. Here, 748 ac. Pop. 88.

RADWINTER, par Eng. Essex; 3802 ac. P. 916.

RADYI, or BRATADEN, par Wales, Glamorgan, 1580 ac. P. 417.

RADZIVOLOV a m. Russia, gov. Volhynia circle and 18 m. N.W. Kremenets, near the frontier of Galicia, having one of the frontier custom-houses. It carries on a considerable transit trade. Pop. (1850) 7519.

RADZYŃ, a m. Russian Poland, 74 m. E. N.E. Warsaw on an affluent of the Vistula; with several churches, and much frequented annual fairs. Pop. 1200.

RADZYŃ, or BOY RADZYŃ a m. Hindostan, Oude 43 m. S. S. Lucknow 1 bank Gya. It has an extensive fair a state of despoilment and the towers, altogether in a decayed condition though at one time the seat of extensive cloth manufactures. Pop. 1000.

RAFFESBOY a group of isls. Low Archipelago, lat. 16° 43' S.; lon. 144° 11' W. They are three in number and are very small only one of them contains a few inhabitants. They appear to be the same as the Sengali Group of Wilkes U States exploring expedition.

RAFFI RAFFI a m. N. coast, Australia, a few miles S. of Port Jackson 1 bank Gya. It has an extensive fair a state of despoilment and the towers, altogether in a decayed condition though at one time the seat of extensive cloth manufactures. Pop. 1000.

RAFFA a vil Hungary, co. Krassowa, on the Derava, 6 m. from Bogachan. The inhabitants are Walachians. Pop. 2214.

RAFFORD par Scot. Elgin 6 m. by 5 m. P. 1020.

RAFFORD a lake, Sweden, 14 m. and 78 m. S.E. Östersund. It is of very irregular shape greatest length, from N.W. to S.E. 34 m. breadth, about 9 m. It has a large fall a vil and par of same name on its N. shore and discharges itself at the S. into the Nierunda.

RAGATZ, a m. and par Switzerland can and 80 m. S. by E. St. Gall, at the mouth of the gorge through which the Tamara rushes in its course to join the Rhine and owes its prosperity partly to its central position at the junction of several important public roads and partly and still more, to the recent establishment of baths supplied from this celebrated hot spring of Pfäfers. Pop. 1837.

RAGDALE, or WEEKDALE, par Eng. Leicester 1890 ac. Pop. 114.

RAGENDORF or BASKA a market to Hungary, co. Wessoburg 18 m. S.E.E. Presburg; with two churches and a synagogue several mills, and numerous orchards. Pop. 5360.

RAGLAND par Eng. Monmouth 4063 ac. Pop. 380.

RAGNIT, a m. Prussia, prov. E. Prussia, gov. and 53 m. N. Gumbinnen, 1 bank Memel. It has several courts and public offices, two churches, a house of correction; and a trade in wood, cattle, corn and linseed. Pop. 2791.

RAGOI, a m. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 18 m. from Almeria, with a church, courthouse, prison school, flour-mill, and a trade in corn, wine, oil, and mace. Pop. 1317.

RAGOUHUB, a m. Hindostan, prov. Malwa, 15 m. from Tithore. It is defended by a fort. Pop. about 4000.

RAGUNIN a m. Germany, Anhalt-Desau, on the Mulde, 8 m. S. Dessau, with a church, manufactures of woollen and linen cloth and several mills. Pop. 1569.

RAGUSA (anc. ARADUS) a seaport in Austria, Dalmatia, on a peninsula in the Adriatic, at the mouth of the valley of Umbria, lat. (fort) 42° 38' 54" N., lon. 18° 7' E. (m) It is surrounded by old walls flanked with towers and bastions, but possesses little strength, being completely surrounded by the adjacent hills. The houses are strongly built of exten-

lent stone, many of them with handsome balconies. The more remarkable edifices are the Cathedral, the church and convent of the Franciscans, the church and convent of the Jesuits, the former considered the finest building in Ragusa, and the latter now used as a military hospital; the governor's palace, an ancient structure in the Florentine style with fine arcades and arched windows, the custom-house, the Opera Pia, a kind of house of refuge for young women and various other charitable institutions. Outside the town are two extensive suburban lots one of which is a large and well-supplied beech, and near it is the Lazzaretto. The manufacture of little importance, consist chiefly of silk and woollen goods, and ordinary and morocco leather but the trade with Italy and the Levant is extensive, and has the advantage of two good harbours. Ragusa is the see of a bishop, the residence of a governor, and the seat of several important courts and public offices. It is of very early origin, and is supposed to have been founded by Greeks. It fell under the power of the Romans, then under that of the Greek emperors, and finally asserted its independence, which it successfully maintained both against the Turks and the Venetians. It has repeatedly suffered much from earthquakes, more especially that of 1667 by which great part of it was laid in ruins. Roscovich the mathematician was born here and has buried in the cathedral. Pop 5000

RAGUSA a tn. Sicily, prov. and 29 m W S W Syra, some 8 bank river of the same. It contains several churches and convents, considerable manufactures of silk stuffs, and a trade in corn, wine, oil, horses, and mules. It is supposed to stand near the site of the ancient Hybla Marina. P 21 468

RAHAD a rapid river, Abyssinia, which enters the Bah-el-Azrek or Blue Nile, 63 m N by W Sennar after 2 N W course of 140 m direct distance

RAHAN, two pars Irel —1 Kings co 14,988 ac 1 op. 8097 —2 Cork 10,083 ac. Pop 1940

RAHARA, par Irel Roscommon 3363 ac. Pop. 763

RAHDEV, a vil. Russian Prussia, gov. and 68 m S R W Minden. It consists of several convents, a diocese, and has a Protestant church and a trade in cattle. Pop. 8843

RAHIDVPOOR, a petty state and to Hindoostan tributary to the Governor in N W part of prov. Gujarat, and, with the adjacent territory of Pahlaspur, occupying the country between the Ruon of Cutch on the W and the mountains of Rajpootana eastward. Area, 850 sq m. It is intersected by the lower course of the Bhinnas, and some other rivers, and is mostly level and, uncultivated, and covered with jungle, yet, on the whole, more fertile than the tracts in its vicinity. Pop. 62,800, who are with difficulty kept in subjection to the British government. —The prov. lat. 22° 40' N. lon. 71° 31' E. 30 m from the Ruon is inclosed by an old brick wall, flanked with towers, and some years ago contained 4000 houses. It shares in the transit trade between Marwar (Joudpore) and Cutch, and exports glass, hides, and wheat.

RAHELTY par Irel Tipperary 4876 ac. 1 op. 976

RAHENY, or REHNEY, a vil. and par Ireland co and 44 m N E Dublin a station on the railway thence to Drogheda. Area, par 920 ac. Pop. 646

RAHILL, a vil. Irel. Carlow 2684 ac. Pop. 246

RAHMANEE, a tn. Lower Egypt, on the Nile, 25½ m S E. Rosetta

RAHON, par Irel Galway 11,015 ac. Pop. 6641

RAHOVA or ORAVA, a tn. European Turkey Bul garia, 7 bank Danube, 47 m W Nikopol. Pop. 2000

RAHUGH par Irel Westmeath 4974 ac. Pop. 837

RAHWAY, a vil. and township, U States, New Jersey 39 m N E Trenton, with seven churches an academy a female institute a tannery, a distillery a paper-factory and numerous flour, grist, and saw mills. Pop. 4000

RAI Koud, or RAKOUN one of the Kurile Islands, near the centre of the group. Lat. 46° 18' 28" N., lon. 153° 15' E. It is small, but hilly and has a lofty peak.

RAIATEA (the Uluia of Cook) one of the Friendly Islands about 180 m N W Tahiti, lat. 16° 50' S., lon. 151° 24' W. (n.); about 49 m. in circumference, mountains, covered with vegetation, and overflowing with water in nearly all its forms—cascades, rivers, and swamps. It rises in the centre to an elevation of 7000 ft. and is encircled by a coral reef at the distance of 1½ m or 2 m from the shore. The soil is exceedingly fertile. The outside of the native houses here has a cheerful and agreeable appearance, being white-limed and plastered, but the lands are extremely stony. The natives, though naturally an indolent people have adopted some ship-building, and export a considerable quantity of arrow-wood.

RAJCHROON, or RACHROON, a tn. Hindoostan, prov. Beja poor, 110 m S W Hyderabad lat. 16° 10' N. lon. 77° 30' E. It is a large but irregularly-built place, defended by an old fort and some new works.

RAIDAH, a small tn. Arabia, S. coast; lat. 15° 2' N., lon. 50° 30' E. It is the residence of a chief, whose territory extends 35 m along the coast. It exports frankincense, cloves, ambergris, and shark's-fins.

RAIDROOG or RYDROOG a tn. and hill fortress Hin doostan presid. Madras, dist. and 24 m S by W Bellary on the Mysore frontier lat. 14° 49' N. lon. 76° 58' E. The fortress stands on a vast mass of granite connected with other rocky heights. It is reached by a broad causeway, which has by great labour been cut in the precipitous face of the hill, and passes through several gateways of solid masonry forming parts of a triple line of fortifications. About midway up the ascent are the remains of a palace and some temples to Rama and Krishna. A remarkable temple to the latter divinity is amongst those in the town which covers a large space of ground, chiefly at the foot of the hill and formerly contained 3000 houses. 1 op 700 —(Madras Almanac, 1840 etc.)

RAIGHILL, par Irel Tipperary 294 ac. Pop. 149

RAINE ISLE, an islet in the Strait of Baffin lat. 11° 28' S. lon. 144° 3' 15" E. (n.) 1000 yards long by 500 yards wide, and on no part more than 30 ft. above high-water mark. A beacon, the summit of which is 75 ft. above sea-level has been erected upon it, marking the best entrance through the outer reef towards Torres Strait.

RAINFORD a chapelry England, co. Lancaster 5½ m N N F. Prescott, with a church, an Independent chapel, and a school. Pop. 2263

RAINFORD, two pars England —1 Essex 2812 ac. P 858 —2 (East) Norfolk, 1836 ac. Pop. 124 —3 (South) Norfolk 1040 ac. Pop. 153 —4 (West) Norfolk, 1870 ac. Pop. 391 —5, Kent, 3588 ac. Pop. 1155

RAINHILL, a township, England co. Lancaster 2½ m S S E. Prescott with a cruciform church a R Catholic chapel and a station on the Liverpool and Manchester railway. Pop. 1522

RAINY LAKE, a lake, British N America, between Lakes Superior and Winnipeg and forming part of the boundary between the possessions of Great Britain and the United States.

It has 1160 ft. above sea-level is about 40 m long by 15 m broad receives the waters of numerous small lakes from the P and N E, and empties itself by Rainy River, about 80 m long into the Lake of the Woods

RAINY a river U States, Michigan rises on the S. side of the state and after a tortuous E. course of 130 m, falls into Lake Erie, 2½ m below Monroe. It has a rapid current and affords extensive water power

RAISMPS, a tn. France dep. Nord 3 m N Valenciennes the centre of an important coal-field, which bears its name. It has manufactures of cast and malleable iron, nails, chains &c. and has also breweries. Pop. 3433

RAIHBY two pars Eng. Lincoln 1,080 ac. P 204 —2, (near Malby), 1930 ac. P 163

RAJAGRIHA, a tn. Hindoostan, presid. Bengal, prov. and 16 m S Bahar, on the lofty site of an old fortress. Near it are also numerous hot and cold springs, which are the objects of religious pilgrimage with the orthodox Hindoos, 50,000 persons sometimes assembling at once.

RAJAHMUNDRY, a dist. and tn. Hindoostan, the dist. being one of the Northern Circars of the Madras presid. and lying between lat. 16° 20' and 17° 35' N. and lon. 81° 10' and 82° 40' E. bounded, N by dist. Visagapatnam and the territories of the Nizam, W and S W dist. Masulipatam, E and S. the Bay of Bengal. Length, E to W 100 m, breadth 80 m. Area, 8050 sq m. In its S. half, it is intersected by the river Godavary which here forms a delta. The surface is generally low and flat, but hilly near the N. extremity, though very hot, is healthy except near the hills where it is unwholesome even to natives. About 30 kinds of paddy or rice, with grass and many dry grains sugarcane in the rich delta of the Godavary betel cotton, tobacco, &c. are raised. Cattle are small but plentiful, as are sheep and goats. This is the only locality on the E. side of India where such is the case. Fine agates are found in the bed of the Godavary. It was formerly celebrated for its woven fabrics these have declined in quality. At Samulcottah, drill, &c. in imitation of European cloths are successfully made, and carpenters, modellers, &c. are skilful. Principal ports—Coringa and Narappoor and other towns, Samulcottah the chief military post and Poddappoor. Pop. 887,200. —RAJAHMUNDRY the cap. in and seat of principal court, is on the E. bank of the Godavary just above its subdivision into two arms, 40 m. from the sea, and 65 m. N. E. Samulcottah lat. 16° 59' N; lon. 81° 54' E. It stands on elevated ground and consists of a principal street half a mile in length and many narrow lanes running from it on either side, the whole lined by mean houses of mud and tiles interspersed with some large dwellings of Zemindars, who are chiefly Brahmans. At its N. end is the fort containing the barracks hospital jail and magazine, and surrounded by two companies of a native regiment. Mahomedans are few and poor in both the town and district but here are numerous mosques attesting their former wealth and numbers. Pop. somewhat under 20,000.

RAJAMAHAL, a tn. in Hindoostan prov. Bengal on the Ganges, 68 m. W. N. W. Moorshedabad. Its advantageous position early raised it to importance, and it was long the acknowledged capital of the Bengal and Bihar provinces. The removal of the British court of justice to Bangalore has seriously affected its prosperity and caused it to assume a dull and deserted appearance, but it is still a large town, with no fewer than 13 market-places, the remains of a splendid palace, and an important transit trade. Pop. about 80,000.

ENTRANCE OF THE RAJMAHAL PALACE, RAJAMAHAL.
From an original drawing by Captain Smith, 4th Regiment.

RAJANAGALLA, a small tn. in Hindoostan prov. Bengal on the Ganges, dist. and 23 m. S. by W. Dacca.—2, A vil. Hindoostan, in the N. Circars, 11 m. N. E. Rajahmundry. It is well built and contains two temples.

RAJANAG, a tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Ultra II., 6 m. N. W. Salerno, with two convents, and an ancient aqueduct, partly carried through the solid rock. Pop. 1550.

RAJAPUR, a tn. in Hindoostan, prov. and 60 m. S. Hyderabad lat. 16° 27' N. lon. 78° 27' E.

RAJAWUR RAJAWUR, a tn. in the N. of the Punjab cap. of a petty rajpoot of some name, on an affluence of the Chenab, 50 m. N. & W. Bannu, 7800 ft. above sea-level. It consists partly of brick houses, occupied by the wealthier classes, but more generally of mud huts, strengthened with frames of timber. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the culture of wheat and rice. The latter crop, by keeping the ground always flooded, makes the district very unhealthy and both polio and leprosy are common.

RAJDEFR, a tn. in Hindoostan, prov. Candahar, strongly situated in a precipitous mountain, only accessible by a narrow foot-path cut through the rock, and secured by gates. Though plentifully supplied with water and provisions sufficient for a year, when besieged by the British in 1818, it was evacuated by the garrison as soon as the mortar-batteries opened, and surrendered without the loss of a single man.

RAJECZ, a market tn. Hungary. Litter Danube, on Trantsehn near the Zilinka, 54 m. N. W. Neusohl with a church, a synagogue, and manufacture of horse cloths, a tannery and paper-mill. Pop. 2019.

RAJGHUL, a tn. in Hindoostan, prov. Agra, in a hilly district. It is both large and strongly fortified.—2, A tn. prov. Malwah 85 m. N. E. Oajala.—3, A small tn. N. Hindoostan, more than 7000 ft. above sea-level, lat. 30° 49' N, lon. 77° 28' E.

RAJODE, a tn. in Hindoostan, prov. Malwah, 46 m. W. by S. Oajala lat. 23° 5' N, lon. 75° 9' E.

RAJOO, a tn. in Hindoostan, prov. Goudwana, r. bank Malumuddy where it receives the Pyri 27 m. S. Byspoor with a celebrated temple of Rayoo Loehua contains images of Gauru, Kuntmann, and Jagah Pal the rajah who is said to have constructed the temple, shrines, and mythological sculptures. On a rocky island at the junction of the stream, is another temple dedicated to Mahadeva.

RAJOMIA, a tn. in Hindoostan, prov. Bombay Gujarat peninsula, 68 m. N. E. the promontory of Din Had, lat. 21° 2' N, lon. 71° 40' E.

RAJPIPIA, a tn. in Hindoostan, prov. Gujrat, cap. dist. of same name, 34 m. E. Baroch on the top of a lofty mountain and in an almost inaccessible country. It is inhabited by Muslims.

—The district 100 m. long by 45 m. to 60 m. broad though generally rugged and mountainous, has some fertile tracts along the banks of the Nerbada, and is said to have at one time supported 500 towns and villages. It has valuable camellia mines in the vicinity of Rattimpore. The climate is unhealthy and particularly destructive to strangers and the water is stated to be detestable.

RAJPOOR, two places, Hindoostan.—1, A tn., prov. Belajoor dist. Lunen, 96 m. N. W. Gou.—2, A tn. prov. Malwah, 18 m. from Kook.

RAJPOOTANA, a large prov. India, in the W. part of Hindoostan proper, extending from the Juma and Chumbul rivers W. to Scinde and Bahawalpoor and comprising the greater part of the Indian desert. Its main characteristics have been described under the article ARABIA, which name it also bears. It is subdivided into the following states, which are tributary to the British, and comprised under six political agencies.—

State.	Area in sq. m.	Pop.	Remarks.	Area in sq. m.	Pop.
Odysse...	21,616	1,211,499	Tank &...	1,864	182,673
Jodhpur...	24,673	1,798,000
Jeypoor...	12,361	1,891,194	Kash...	4,488	474,900
Bikaner...	17,476	624,386	Jhalwar...	8,200	330,000
Jaisalmer...	12,461	74,800	Ban...	8,201	388,100
Alwar...	2,678	889,000	Faridkot...	1,467	146,700
Bharatpur...	1,276	600,000	Dunagpur...	1,010	100,000
Alibab...	754	70,000	Ban...	1,440	144,000
Ker...	1,278	187,000	Ser...	8,964	181,500
Total	105,418	6,695,135		17,418	1,804,374
Grand Total	Area, 124,834 sq. m. Pop. 8,499,509.

—(Trigonometrical Survey of India.)

RAJSHAHYE, a dist. in Hindoostan, presid. and prov. Bengal chiefly between lat. 24° and 25° N. lon. 88° 50' and 90° E., bounded S. by the main stream of the Ganges, which separates it from the dists. Moorshedabad, Jessore, and Faridpoor. E. Myrnatung; N. Rangpoor and Dinagpoor; and W. Malda. Area, 2064 sq. m. In the W. and N., the country is hilly, and overgrown with green-jungle elsewhere the surface is flat, contains several extensive lakes, and is intersected by many arms and affluents of the Ganges. Half of it is under rice-cultivation; the rest is principally divided between indigo and malberry plantations in the proportion of two to one. The rice and tobacco raised are often insufficient for home consumption. Here are no compact villages or towns, forts, or very substantial edifices, the dwellings being mostly scattered sparsely over the country. Benaulah, the capital and Nataro, are the principal places. Pop. 671,000 mostly Hindoos.—(Trigon. Survey of India, Bengal Committee)

RAKAS-TAL, lake, Tibet. See SAFANA-HEAD.

RAKAY, a vil. U States, New Jersey, on a river of same name, and on the New Jersey railway, 35 m N E Trenton, in a well-cultivated district, with seven churches, an academy and some manufactures. Pop. (township) 8806.

RAKNEH, a vil. Afghanistan, 40 m. W Dera Ghisnee Khan on the road to Kandahar, where the Bengul pass intersects the Sakhee Sarwar pass. It is a small place, of about 400 huts, lying on a stream. A road practicable for wheel carriages leads from Rakne to Kandahar.

RAKOCZ (NAGY), a vil. Hungary, Thither Thoms, co. Ugov, in a well-wooded district, about 9 m. from Nagy Sallós. It has two Greek churches, a trade in timber, and several mills. Pop. 1038.

RAKOMAZ, a vil. Hungary, co. Szabolcs, on the Theiss, in a fertile district about 2 m. from Tokay. It has a trade in corn, wine, and tobacco. Pop. 3796.

RAKONIZ, or RAKONIZK, a vil. Bohemia, circle of same name, in a valley enclosed on all sides except the W on the Gúldo or Golden, 23 m. W Prague. It is surrounded by old walls flanked with bastions, in tolerable preservation is entered by four gates, each of which is surmounted by a tower has a handsome market-place, three churches a synagogue, high school, hospital, and manufactures of soda, glass, and earthenware, and extensive iron-works. Pop. 2644. — The church area 748 gcs. sq. m., is watered by the Elbe, Mollau, Reger, and Mies. It is well-wooded, produces good crops of corn and hops, and has valuable mines of iron and coal. Pop. 186,569.

RAKOS, or RAKOSKO, a vil. Hungary Thither Thoms, co. Beragh, about 9 m. from Munkacs with two churches. Pop. 1416.

RAKOVA, a vil. Hungary Thither Danube, co. Trentsch, 2 m. from Gassa, with a church and a trade in timber. Pop. 2078.

RAKOVICZA, a vil. Hungary Thither Thoms, co. Temesvár, on the Theiss, 6 m. from Kiszécs with a church. Pop. 1115.

RAKOW, a tn. Russia, gov. Podolsk, on the Dniester 137 m. S.E. Kamenev. It is one of the head quarters of the Souvlais, who have here a gymnasium, and had once a printing-press, at which a number of their heretical works, particularly the celebrated Rakow catechism, was published. Pop. about 1000.

RAKSA, a vil. Hungary, Thither Thoms co. Szathmar 19 m. from Aranyos-Mogyos with a Greek non-united church. Pop. 1206.

RAKWIETZ, vil. Austria, Moravia circle Hradisch, 12 m. from Czeskô. It has a parish church and a mill. Pop. 1048.

RAKWIETZ, or RAKOWITZ, a tn. Prussia, prov. and 52 m. S.W. Posen with a church and important corn-market. Pop. 1718.

RALDING, a mountain peak, N Hindostan in the Himalayas, 1. bank Buttil above Musang; lat. 31° 29' N lon. 78° 32' E; height, 17,411 ft.

RALINGGI, a city, U States, gov. N Carolina, 135 m S.W. Richmond lat. 36° 47' N lon. 78° 48' W, on the N Carolina central railway. It is regularly and neatly laid out, containing a large and four smaller squares, and has a state-house, a massive granite structure after the model of the Parthenon, 100 ft. long, 80 ft. wide, and surrounded by massive columns of granite, 5½ ft. diameter, and 80 ft. high, and surmounted by a beautiful dome, a court-house, jail, governor's-house, a theatre, a market, five churches, two academies, several schools, and a deaf and dumb institution, two banks, and a considerable trade. Pop. 4918.

RALOW, ISLANDS, N Pacific. See RAKAW.

RALOW, Tral. Andria, 6106 sq. Pop. 1673

RAM HEAD, a promontory, New S. Wales, 30 m. S.W. from Cape Howe; lat. 37° 40' S.; lon. 149° 30' E. Vol. II.

RAMA, or RAMALA, a tn. Palestine, 36 m. N.W. Jerusalem. It is pleasantly situated, and contains a spacious and strongly built convent, which is kept in excellent repair. In its vicinity are some ancient groves of olive-trees. It is supposed to be the ancient Arimathæa. Pop. 8000.

RAMALES, a vil. Spain, prov. and 36 m. S.E. Santander. Along with the neighbouring fens of Guadalupe it was obstinately held by Moroto, the Carlist general, in 1837, but he was at length forced to surrender to Espartero who was created Duke of Victoria for his services on this occasion. On evacuating, the Carlists set fire to the town, which remains still a heap of ruins. It has however a church and a school. Pop. 805.

RAMBAE, a tn. Ecuador. See CUNASA.

RAMBAE, or GILLEY, one of the Fijian Islands lat. 16° 24' S. lon. 179° 55' 40' W. It is lofty and well wooded, with many deep bights, one of which, on the S.E. side, affords good anchorage. There is a large settlement on its N.W. side.

RAMBERT (St.) two places, France.—1, A tn. dep. Ain, in a narrow valley r bank, Albanie, 23 m S.E. Bourg. It is the central locality of an important manufacture of common linen, and has extensive silk mills and iron-works. Near it, in a branch of the Jura mountains, is the narrow gorge of St. Rambert, about 12 m. long. It is a narrow, enormous dale, with perpendicular rocks on either side. The slates and iron found here in abundance are cut into parallel telegrams, which are used in building walls and chimneys. Pop. 1789.—2, A tn. dep. Loire, 40 m. S.E. Montbrison with a very old and interesting parish church; building yards, at which nearly 80000 harges are annually constructed and a trade in wine. Near it are blast furnaces and other iron-works. Pop. 1465.

RAMBERVILLIERS [anc. Remberti Villere] a tn. France, dep. Vosges, 16 m. N.E. Epinal. It is well built, and the streets are kept clean by a current of pure water; but though many of its houses are good, some of the public offices are particularly deserving of notice. It has a library of 10 000 vols. manufactures of linen linen leather duff, and sericin ware and a trade in corn, hemp, hops, paper and cutlery. It is an ancient place, in which the kings of France had a house in the 9th century. It was the capital of a castellany of the temporal bishops of Metz, one of whom surrounded it with palisades in 1120, and another in 1260 added twenty-four towers and walls, of which some traces still exist. Pop. 4445.

RAMBELA, a tn. Spain Andalusia, prov. and 17 m S. Cordova. It is substantially built, and has regular paved and clean streets, and a large and several small squares, a townhouse, a granary, house of refuge, an asylum for poor widows, a founding hospital a superior and two elementary schools, a parish church, several convents, two of them converted into schools and several hermitages. Although agriculture is the chief occupation, many of the inhabitants are employed in preparing chocolate and wax, and as carpenters and shoemakers. But above all, in the manufacture of water-pitchers, there being 12 potteries for that description of earthenware. The women are employed in weaving ordinary linens and knitting stockings, of which many are exported. Pop. 9000.

RAMBELA (San-JUAN DE LA), a vil and com. Canary Islands, on a plain in the N.E. of the island Tenerife. It contains a parish church, courthouses, prison, and primary school and has some trade in corn, wine, silk, and wax. Pop. 1418.

RAMBOUILLET [anc. Rembouillet] a tn. France, dep. Seine-et-Oise, in a beautiful valley near the extensive forest of same name, 27 m. S.W. Paris. It has good houses, and regular spacious, well-cleaned streets, but is, on the whole, a dull place remarkable only for its chateau, kept the residence of the kings of France, and a fine park, in which the first model farm in France was established and for its sheep-fold, which was the first depot of Marine sheep brought to France from Spain by Napoleon. From this flock have sprung the pure race, and the mixed race of sheep, which constitute one of the greatest sources of wealth in the country. Pop. 2667.

RAMDROOG, a tn. Hindostan, presid. Madras, in the Malabar district, 48 m. S.E. Bellary, lat. 14° 34' N.; lon. 77° 31' E.

RAMB, par. Eng. Cornwall; 1231 sq. Pop. 741

RAME HEAD, a promontory, England, co. Devon, projecting into the channel, W of Plymouth Sound lat. 50° 19' N. lon. 4° 12' W (A).

RAMELTON a tn. Ireland. See RAMENHURST.
RAMET, a vil. and town, Belgium, prov. and 7 m. S.W. Liège, on the Meuse with a brewery three mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1475.

RAMGAON a vil. Hindoostan presid Bengal, dist. Khamraon 17 m. S. Almora, on the declivity of a steep mountain.

RAMGERTY, n. tn. Hindoostan prov Mysore, 48 m. N.E. Seringapatam. Inhabitants chiefly employed in rearing cattle. Some salt is obtained in the neighbouring hills from a tree called Jala.

RAMGHAT, a tn. Hindoostan prov. and N by E. Agra, r. bank Ganges, which is here fordable in the dry season.

RAMGHAT a pass Hindoostan leading from prov. Bhopoor over the W Ghats, to the Portuguese territories on the Malabar coast, of which Goa is the capital. The ascent from the E. to the summit of the pass, which has a height of about 2700 ft. and is marked out by a small temple of Shiva is very gradual but the descent, on the W side was at one time so sharp and steep, as to be almost impracticable for loaded cattle. It is now, however, much improved, and now descends in regular gradations by a carriage road which passes through a continuous forest but does not present the moral precipices and yawning chasms for which the scenery of the Shora Ghats pass is celebrated.

RAMGHT R. a dist. and tn. Hindoostan, the district being the largest under the Bengal presidency and occupying most of the S. part of prov. Bahar lat. 22° to 23° N. lon. 85° to 87° E. It is bounded N. by dists. Shahdol Bahar and Bhagulpore E. Beerbhoon and the Jungle Mahale S. Singbhoon and other territories ceded to the British by the rajah of Benar and W. Chota Nagpore a vast seminary formerly included within its limits Area, 8534 sq. m. It is a wild country among the least civilized in India, consisting mostly of mountains, or rocky hills, covered with forests and jungles, and intersected by the Dummoodah river which flows E. to join the Ganges (Hooghly). The declivities are covered with a thin layer of very fertile loam, on the uplands pulse and cotton are raised from is everywhere plentiful, and coal, lead antimony &c. are met with, but few mines are opened. Many of the ramifications are of great extent. The commercial transactions are insignificant, though the great road from Calcutta to Benares passes through this district. Except numerous old brick forts (now partially demolished), there are few durable buildings and Ramghat has been distinguished mainly for crime and unhealthiness. The inhabitants are principally Hindoos Mahomedans make but a small fraction of the whole. Principal towns—Chittra, the capital Ramghat Bazar, and Sheregotty. Pop. 572,216. (—Tyngon, Survey of India)—1 A. tn. in this district, on the Dummoodah lat. 23° 28' N. lon. 85° 43' E.—2, A. vil. in the British Himalayan prov. Kumaon, R. Almora, in a narrow valley, the sides of which are cultivated in terraces with great care and industry. It consists of at least 7000 detached huts. (—Quinquetti, Voyage dans l'Inde).

RAMGANGA, or RAMA GANGA, a river in N. Hindoostan. It rises in the mountains of Kumaon, 25 m. N.W. Almora, flows directly S.E. through prov. Kailash, and after a course of about 200 m., joins a bank Ganges, on the frontiers of Delhi and Oude, not far from Kanpur. Its principal affluents are the Kooli and Deoah Gangs, which both join it on the left.
RAMGUN a tn. Hindoostan prov Orissa, on the Malabar, 100 m. W. Cuttack; lat. 20° 28' N. lon. 84° 28' E.
RAMILLIES Orissa, a vil. and town, Belgium, prov. Brabant, near an old Roman road on the highway from Namur to Louvain, 25 m. S.E. Brussels. It is famous for the victory gained here (May 23 1706) by the allies under the Duke of Marlborough over the French, under Marshal Vblerry. Pop. 736.

RAMIREZ (Disco) ISLANDS. See Disco.

RAMIREZ, or RAMIREZ, a tn. and a near 8 extremity of Hindoostan, between it and Ceylon, lat. 9° 17' N. lon. 78° 21' E. It forms a part of the chain of islands and rocks stretching from Rammed on the mainland, to Masear in Ceylon, and separating the Gulf of Masear on the S. from Palk's Strait on the N. It is of irregular shape, 11 m. in length, by 6 m. in width, with an additional narrow neck of land on its S.W. side 12 m. in length joining the sands called Adam's Bridge. Its surface is generally low, sandy, and interspersed with jungle and palm-groves, in its centre is a tract of fertile soil, where betel, oil-nuts, cotton, and some grains are produced. It is well watered, and contains several salt swamps, which render its inhabitants liable to fevers but it enjoys the benefit of a comparatively cool atmosphere being subject to the influence of both monsoons and its temperature during most of the year ranging between 78° and 85° Fah. At its W. and its chief port, Pambun, opposite the Pambun Channel, through which efforts have been in progress to obtain a passage for large ships.—The town on the E. shore of the is. contains some good streets, nearly 1000 houses, most of which are well built, and a magnificent palace constructed in part of vast granite blocks, possessing a tower 100 ft. high and a fine colonnade. A flagged road lined at intervals by resting houses and pagodas, connects the town with Pambun. The island being held of great sanctity by Hindoos, is visited annually by thousands of pilgrims and is the residence of many Brahmins and wealthy natives and the centre of an active trade. The inhabitants of Pambun possess a considerable share in a fleet of vessels carrying grain, timber, &c. between all the adjacent coasts, and importing rice, cotton cloths, &c. for home consumption. Pop. 4500 including some Mahomedans and native Christians. (—Statist. Rep. on the Madras Presid., Madras Almanac, 1841.)

PAGODA AT RAMIREZ.—From Raily's View in India, &c.

RAMNAD, a tn. and large secondary or sub-district Hindoostan, presid Madras, dist Madras, of which the secondary forms the S.E. portion, comprising a long tongue of land projecting toward Rameswaram and Ceylon.—The town, lat. 9° 18' N. lon. 78° 56' E., 45 m. S.E. Madras, is on the S. bank of the river Varaha, and consists of a fort 2½ m. in extent, in which are the residence of a palace, and treasury, Protestant and E. Catholic churches, the commandant's residence, &c.; and considerable suburbs outside the walls. The houses are mostly of mud, and thatched. Many grain merchants and manufacturers of coarse cloths inhabit Rammed. Pop. 10,000.—The secondary lat. 9° 3' to 10° 3' N. lon. 78° to 79° 24' E.; area, 1900 sq. m.; is wholly level, and about half of it is under culture, the rest consisting of sandy and waste land, scrubland, and low jungle. Some manufacturers of cotton cloths and iron goods are carried on the side exports are clay-pots, which yields a fine red dye, salt, &c., tobacco and its fabric, skins, paddy, and about a million shell-shells annually, mostly sent to Bengal, where they are in great regions for the manufacture of native ornaments. The inhabitants of the interior are principally Hindus; those of the coast Mohammedans, with about 10,000 E. Catholics, mainly occupied in fishing. Pop. 307,417. (Statist. Rep. of B. Ind. of Madras Presidency.)

RAMNAGHUR, a to. Hindoostan, presid Bengal, prov Alibabad, 7 bank Ganges, a little above the W extremity of Benares, chiefly noted for the large fort or palace, the usual residence of the rajah. It is a huge edifice of stone, projecting into the river, and is furnished with a garden, laid out in Bolnagar, lat. 31° 27' N lon. 77° 39' E. It occupies a narrow space on the cliff bordering the river, here crossed by a bridge of ropes, on which passengers, &c., are seated, and drawn over. In its architecture the town has something of a Chinese or Tibetan character; it possesses several temples greatly resorted to by Hindu pilgrims, and a large annual fair at which traders of Hindoostan meet those of Cashmere, Ladak, and Chinese Turkestan, who bring shawls, wool, and woollen fabrics, silks, and other produce, to be exchanged for grain, iron, spices, cotton cloths, sugar, &c. (Statist. Rep. of Madras Presidency.)

8 and 4 Two ins., presidency Bengal, upper provs. the one 14 to S. by W Raharnmpoor the other 41 to N Bareilly—5, A to Oude, 68 m. 8.3 Lacknow P 4600

RAMPOORA numerous ins. Hin doostan—the prin cipal in the Indus dominion, and the former residence of the Holkar family, on the Jaisay, an affluent of the Ghambul 80 m. E. Narmath, lat. 24 27' N lon 75° 12' E. It is walled, and contains a Hindu temple of celebrity but it has

THE RAJAH'S PALACE, RAMNAGHUR.—From an Original Drawing by Capt. Smith, 18th Regt.

Hindoos fashion. Near it is a pagoda left unfinished by Rajah (Thou Singh the mythical sculptors of which have been greatly admired for their elaborate execution. Chose Singh intended to build a large town at Ramnaghur with regular and wide streets but he was deposed before any more was completed than the two symmetrical streets, crossing at right angles, which form the present town.

RAMNAGUR, several places, Hindoostan—1 A considerable to., prov Bahar 150 m. N E Benares, on the Ghumbul, on the frontiers of Nepal.—2, An ancient fortress, Delhi, which now covers an area of several miles in circuit with its ruins.

RAMNEE, a snowy mountain of the Himalayas, in the N of prov Kutch, estimated height, 22 768 ft. above sea-level, 50 m. N Almora, lat. 30° 20' N lon. 79° 38' E.

RAMNUGGUR, a large to. Punjab, in a spacious plain 1 bank Chumbul, 70 m. N N W Lahore lat. 32 30' N, lon 78° 38' E. It is surrounded by a wall flanked with round towers, and has eight well supplied basars. Here is a ferry across the Chumbul, which at its lowest season has been found 900 yards wide, and 9 ft. deep. In the adjacent plain the troops of Runjeet Singh were accustomed to rendezvous for campaigns to the westward. Pop. 11 000. (Bombay Geog. Journal.)

RAMOAN par Ind Antim 12,066 ac. Pop. 4102 RAMOO, a to. Hindoostan, prov Bengal, dist Chitragong, in a fertile plain, on a large river of same name, 250 m. E. E. Calcutta. Owing to the lowness of the site, the whole country around is regularly inundated, and very unhealthy.

RAMPIERAM, par Eng Dorset 2030 ac. Pop. 413 RAMPOOR, numerous tos. India —1, Prov Delhi, cap. a small state protected by the British in Rohilkund, E. bank Koila, a tributary of the Ganges, 15 m. E. Meerabad lat. 28° 30' N lon. 79 54' E. It is a strong place, surrounded by a thick bamboo hedge and mud walls, and consists chiefly of mud huts, with two forts, and some good edifices occupied by the reigning family. The state, of which it is the cap., has an area of 730 sq. m. with a pop. estimated at 220,400; and it has been noted as one of the best governed and most flourishing of Indian territories. Its foreign relations are now conducted by the British agent in Rohilkund. (Tripos. Survey of India.)—2, A to., cap. Bussahar, one of the protected Sikh states, 1 bank Suibi 50 m. E by N greatly docked in importance since the transference of Holkar's court to Indora.

RAMPTON, two par. Eng —1 Cambridge 1812 ac. Pop. 331 —2 North 2155 ac. Pop. 455

RAMBLE —1 An Isl British India, prov Aracan, N Chindia, about 50 m. long by 10 m. broad, with a chain of low hills and several mud volcanoes in the S—2 A to., cap. above Isl lat. 19° N lon 98° 15' E, on both banks of a creek crossed by noble bridges. It is compactly built has a large bazaar and a considerable commerce. Pop. 7000

RAM'S ISLAND a small Isl Ireland, co. Antrim, the largest to Lough Neagh about 1½ m. from the shore, and ½ m. E by W Antrim.

RAMSAY a vil and township Canada West, co. Lanark on the Canadian Mississippi an affluent of the Ottawa 68 m. N N W Kingston. It has Presbyterian, Methodist, and R Catholic churches, and is the most thickly settled township in the district having a woollen factory, manufactures of articles in wood, a saw and a flour mill and a large trade in agricultural produce. Pop. (1857), 3236.

RAMSEBURY a vil and ecclesiastical par England co. Lancashire 5 m. N Barry, on the Iwerell and E Lancaster railway. It is a large and rapidly increasing place indebted for the foundation of its prosperity to the first R. Peel, who here commenced his manufacturing career. It has a handsome church. Presbyterian, Swedenborgian, Wesleyan, and Primitive Methodist chapels and extensive cotton-mills and print-works. Pop. 2686

RAMSDEN, two par. Eng Essex —1 (Bellhouse), 2685 ac. Pop. 465 —2 (Orange), 1468 ac. Pop. 293

RAMSDORF, a vil Prussia Westphalia, gov and 83 m. W 6 W Münster on the Aa, with a church an off mill, and some general trade. Pop. 1080

RAMSEY a market in and seaport England, N E coast Isle of Man on a spacious bay of its name, 17 m. N E Douglas. It is irregularly built, but has wide streets, a chapel a courthouse a valuable herring-factory, and an extensive trade in exporting provisions. Pop. 3701

RAMSEY, a market to and par England, co. and 9 m. N N E Huntingdon, on a tongue of highland stretching out into the fens. It consists of two principal streets tolerably well kept, with an open brook flowing through the center of the town. The houses are mostly old, of brick, clay, and timber, but a considerable number have recently been rebuilt in a superior style. It has a handsome church, places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Unitarians; some interesting remains of a magnificent abbey founded in 969; a literary institute, a well-endowed grammar-school, and a number of other useful districts; inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture. Pop. 70, 7641. Area of par. 76,119. Pop. 4845.

RAMSEY par Eng. Essex 6693 sq. Pop. 657.
RAMSGATE, a seaport and market in England, co Kent, 67 m. E. by E. London, with which it is connected by railway, 4 m. S.E. of the North Foreland, at the S.E. corner of the Isle of Thanet, lat. 51° 19' N. lon. 1° 25' 30" E. (n.) The older parts of the town occupy a natural hollow or valley in the chalk cliffs that form the part of the coast, while the newer portions occupy the higher ground on either side. The latter, from their elevated position on the cliffs, command an extensive sea-view. Many of the houses are very handsome, some being arranged in streets, terraces, or crescents, while others are detached villas. The places of recreation and resort comprise a theatre, assembly-rooms, several libraries, and baths. It has a parish church, in the early English style, with a lofty tower and spire; places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, R. Catholics, and Jews; several schools, including a national R. school, two infants, and a free school; a dispensary, an hospital for seamen and literary and scientific institutions. The harbour is artificial, formed by piers, and nearly circular, comprising an area of 46 ac., and including a dry dock and a ponton slip for the repair of vessels. The E. pier is nearly 5000 ft. long, and the W. pier 1500 ft. both built of Portland and Purbeck stone and granite; the entrance to the harbour is 240 ft. wide. Ramsgate has a considerable coasting trade, particularly in coal and imports some timber from the Baltic. An immense quantity of eggs, also, are imported annually from France. Ship-building and rope-making are carried on to a considerable extent, and there is a considerable fishery. Ramsgate is a member of the Cinque Port of Sandwich, and also a popular watering-place, to which latter circumstance it chiefly owes its recent rapid advancement. Pop. 11,838.

RAMSHULT par Eng. Suffolk 2107 sq. Pop. 303.

RAMSTADT (Osnab.) a vil. Hesse Darmstadt, prov. Starkenburg on the Mosel, 7 m. S.E. Darmstadt, with a church and iron works, and numerous mills. Pop. 2147.

RAMSTEIN a vil. Bavaria, Palatinate, near Landstuhl with a church and two mills. Pop. 1089.

RANAI one of the Sandwich Islands, N.W. Hawaii, lat. 20° 44' N. lon. 156° 58' W. (n.) about 15 m. long and 6 m. broad. It is volcanic, dome-shaped and generally barren, being subject to long droughts, besides having a naturally infertile soil. The ravines and gorges are, notwithstanding, filled with thickets of small trees. The shores abound with shell-fish, medusae, and cuttle-fish. The inhabitants are not numerous.

RANBY par Eng. Lincoln 1234 sq. Pop. 115.

RANCE—1 A vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, on the Espe 30 m. S.E. of Liege. It has quantities of building stone and marble, two forges, a tannery, marble saw works, a flour-mill, and a trade in wood. Pop. 1148.—2 A river France, rises in Mount Masset, dep. Cotes-du-Nord, flows first E. to the foot of the E. of Valence, then N.E. and falls into the English Channel at St. Malo. Total course, 60 m. of which 18 m. com. estuary at Dinan, are navigable.

RAND, par Eng. Lincoln 2380 sq. Pop. 146.

RANDALSTOWN, a market to. and formerly a pari. bor. Ireland, co. and 44 m. N.W. Antrim; with a handsome market-house, church, R. Catholic chapel, and two Presbyterian meeting-houses, a dispensary, and schools. Cotton-spinning and calico-printing are carried on to some extent. Pop. 749.

RANDANS, a tn. France, dep. Puy-de-Dôme, 20 m. N.E. Clermont, chiefly remarkable for its castle, which latterly belonged to Madame Adelaide, sister of the late Louis-Philippe. Pop. 1497.

RANDAZZO, a tn. Sicily, prov. and 26 m. N. Catania, at the N. foot of Etna, r. bank Alcantara. Pop. 4487.

RANDERS, a tn. Denmark, prov. Jutland, emp. bell of its name, 1 bank Gudenau, about 6 m. above Skamhus in the Randers Fjord, 111 m. W. N.W. Copenhagen. It consists of a small and a classical school with six professors; and has several industrial establishments, including manufactures of gloves, for which it has long been famous. The harbour near the town has only 7½ ft. water, but there is a good building-dock, and at some distance below, at the mouth of the fjord, there is another harbour with 9 ft. to 10 ft. water, and roads with good anchorage in 4 to 5 fathoms. Randers is important in a military point of view, and could command from 10,000 to 15,000 men in the town and its neighbourhood, in a position which could not easily be forced. Pop. (1851), 7783.

—The RAILWORK, area 710 sq. ac. contains 58 churches, and 145 parishes. Pop. 69,900.

RANDOLPH, numerous places. U. States, particularly—1 A vil. and township, Vermont, 28 m. S. Montpelier; with a Congregational church, a flouring academy, several schools, tanning, grist, saw, and oil mills; four tanneries, and a woolen factory. Pop. 2666.—2 A vil. and township, Massachusetts, 15 m. S. Boston, with six churches, an academy, several schools and mills, and extensive manufactures of shoes. Pop. 4741.

RANDOW, a river Prussia, issues from a lake in circle Angermünde, prov. Brandenburg, flows easterly N. and joins 1 bank Ucker in prov. Pomerania, total course about 70 m., a considerable part of which has been converted into a canal and made available for navigation.

RANDWICK, par Eng. Gloucestershire 1360 sq. P. 989.
RANEA a river, Sweden, rises in Luleå Lappmark in N. Bohuslän, flows S.E. and after a course of about 180 m., falls into the Gulf of Bothnia, 18 m. N. N. Wick.

RANEAH a tn. Hindostan, prov. Ajaier 14 m. W. Srinah. Near it is an immense shell or shallow lake.

RANLEPOOR, a manufacturing tn. Bunde, 45 m. S.W. Hyderabad. It is irregularly built, but has a cleanly and pleasant appearance. It formerly had extensive manufactures of cotton. Pop. 5000.

RANLEIGH a vil. Ireland, co. and 1 m. E. Dublin, of which it forms a suburb, consisting of numerous well-built houses. Pop. 2290.

RANGAKATTY, a tn. Hindostan, prov. Bengal capital, 22 m. N.E. Rangpur. At one time contained 1500 houses, several of these inhabited by Mogul chieftains, but now has only about one-sixth of that number of scattered huts, and the vestiges of a fort and mosque.—The district stretches on both sides of the Rangoon river, E. to the confines of Assam, and has an area estimated at 9629 sq. m.

RANGATIRA or SOUTH EAST ISLAND, one of the three which form the group of Chatham Islands in the Pacific lat. 44° 30' S. lon. 176° 39' E. It is little better than a bare rock, rendered conspicuous by its remarkable shape.

RANGENDINGEN, a market tn. Germany, Hohenzollern-Hochingen, on the Sarrel about 3 m. N. W. Ischligen. It contains a manory. Pop. 1297.

RANGI HAUTE, or PITR, a vil. 5 Pacific, Chatham group lat. 44° 15' S. lon. 176° 50' E. greatest length, N. to S., 7 m., breadth about 3 m. altogether inaccessible, except on the E. by a narrow channel. It is thickly wooded, and inhabited by a party of aborigines from Chatham Island.

RANGI TORO, the most W. of the group of islands forming the N.W. entrance to the road of Auckland, North Island, New Zealand, lat. 36° 45' S. lon. 174° 50' E. It is of volcanic origin, highest peak 920 ft. above the sea. In its centre is a very perfect crater, about 150 ft. deep.

RANGOON a tn. Burmah, on a branch of the Irrawaddy which joins the Pegu about 20 m. from its mouth in the Gulf of Martaban lat. (pagoda) 16° 47' N., lon. 96° 10' E. (n.) In 1824, when taken by the British, it extended along the river's bank in the form of a parallelogram, and consisted of narrow streets crossing each other at right angles, and paved with bricks set on edge, and of houses which were almost all composed of wood and bamboo raised on piles and thatched, with the exception of the public buildings, generally built of brick. Its defences consisted of a strong bastion, 16 ft. high, and strengthened with towers of brick or wood at the gates. Its most conspicuous buildings were pagodas, the largest of which, called Shoo-de-gon, occupied a terraced hill, surrounded by smaller pagodas and many magnificent trees. In 1860 upwards of 3000 houses, including the custom-house and residences of the principal merchants, were destroyed by fire, but in 1862, when again situated by the British, though the old town consisted merely of hards of ruins, a new town had been formed about 1½ m. from the river, apparently in the style of building already described. This new town burned nearly a perfect square, and was induced by a mud wall about 16 ft. high and 8 ft. broad, and a ditch. The great pagoda situated on the N side of the square, had been cleverly worked into the defenses, so as to form a kind of citadel, which on this occasion was the scene of almost all the fighting that took place. It was defended by the Burmese with considerable obstinacy and valor; but the moment it was stormed they fled in confusion from the gates and all the country around immediately submitted. The town had suffered severely, and even in many places converted into ruins, but shortly after the capture, while the British troops were still present, the inhabitants, to the number of 50,000 to 60,000 flocked in and rebuilt it, while the river side, from 3 m. to 4 m., was lined with boats containing men, women, and children.

RANI GAT, or RANI GAUS, an isolated height rising about 1000 ft. above the surrounding plain crowned by a ruined fortress in the European country, N. E. Afghanistan 16 m. N by W Obaid, and W the Indus, above Attock and supposed to be the celebrated Aornos captured by Alexander the Great.

RANKWELL, a market in Austria, Venzberg, dist. and 4 m. N. E. Feldkirch, on a height. It is a very common place, and was once an imperial free town. It has two churches, a posthouse, manufactures of turnery and cherry brandy and tile-works. Pop. 3029.

RAN, N, a town in Austria, Styria, on a height above 1 bank. 17 m. W by W Agrim. It has an old castle with numerous towers, a church and Franciscan monastery and some trade in wine. It is supposed to occupy the site of the Roman Novidesium. Coal and marble are worked in the neighborhood. Pop. 1080.

RANVOCH (Loon) a lake, Scotland, no. and 85 m. N N W Perth, about 11 m. long and about 1 m. average breadth, surrounded by lofty mountains covered by forests. The margin is picturesquely studded with farm houses and manse.

RANBAET a vil and com Belgium, prov Hainaut 28 m. E More with a church townhall and school in habitants mostly engaged in handicraft in the coal mines, and in the manufacture of nails, brooks, tiles &c. P 2449.

RANBACH a vil Nassau, 9 m. N E Coblenz with a church, tile-works, and lime-works. Pop. 1102.

RANBEEK, a vil Belgium, prov Brabant, 6 m. N Brussels. It is famous for a great battle fought here in 1144 for the titulary of Godfrey III, Duke of Brabant, when the lords of Diest, Blackbuck, Wessel, and Wammal defeated those of Gumberghen and Malines.

RANST a vil and com. Belgium, prov and 6 m. E E E Antwerp, with manufactures of linen, a brewery a flour-mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1657.

RANTON par (see also of RANTON ANTON) Eng Staf ford, 2870 m. Pop. 380.

RANTZAU, a vil and lordship, Denmark, duchy Holstein, on three little islands formed by the Barnstedter or Langensand, about 23 m. N N E. Glückstadt, with the remains of an old castle, partly occupied as an extensive flour-mill. Pop. vil, 100 Area of lordship 86 geo sq m, and pop. 14,400.

RANWORTH, par (see also of RANWORTH) Eng. Norfolk, 1902 m. Pop. 470.

RANZO, a vil and com, France dep Alpes Maritimes, prov Cagnes, near Fiere with three parish churches, and the remains of an old castle. Pop. 1235.

RAON AIX BOIS, a town, France dep Vosges 5 m. N W Remiremont with manufactures of cotton. Pop. 1828.

RAON L'ETAPPE, a town, France, dep Vosges, 25 m. N E. Epinal, on bank Meurthe, near the junction of the Plaine. It has manufactures of calico and potash and a considerable trade in wood. Pop. 3217.

RAPALLO a vil in Italy, Piedmont div and 16 m. E S E. Genoa as the N W extremity of the gulf. It has two squares of limited extent, a court of justice, an ancient collegiate church, two convents, a superior Latin school, an hospital, an old castle now used as a prison manufactures of lace, and two annual fairs, each of which lasts two days. Pop. 9933.

RAPALLO (St. Margherita) m., a vil and com Italy Piedmont div Genoa, prov Chiavari, near Rapallo, beautifully situated near the gulf of Genoa. It has a number of well built houses, a large square paved with stones of various colours, so as to form a kind of mosaic, a handsome collegiate church with an imposing facade, Doric below, and Composite above, an old castle of a square form situated near the sea, and still available for defence; an hospital, and a communal school. Pop. 6278.

RAPHOE, a market in formerly seat of a diocese, and prov Ireland on Donegal Area of par. 18 225 m. Pop. 5108.—The town 8 m. N W Lifford in well built has a central square, a plain cathedral, with the palace of the former bishops in an adjoining park. A R. Catholic chapel and two Presbyterian meeting-houses, a free school and several charities. St. Columb is said to have founded a monastery here. The sea was united with that of Derry in 1830. Pop. 1423.

RAPINO or RAPINI, a town, Naples, prov Abruzzo-Citra, 6 Chieta with two parish churches a convent, and hospital. Pop. 1800.

RAPITA (San Carlos de la), a seaport in Spain, Catalonia, prov Tarragona, on an elevated flat on the shore of the Mediterranean, about 26 m. from Tortosa. It owes its foundation to Don Carlos III who, with a view to take advantage of its position between the provinces of Aragon, Valencia, and Catalonia, intended to make a great commercialemporium, but the extensive works commenced during his reign were abandoned at his death and Rapita is now almost entirely insignificant. It has a parish church, primary school courthouse, and prison, and a considerable coasting trade. Pop. 819.

RAPOLANO a vil and com Tuscany, 18 m. from Siena, on a height, with a very ancient church, a theatre the remains of an old castle, and thermal springs. P 8335.

RAPOLLA a town in Naples prov Basilicata, 8 m. S E Melfi with a handsome cathedral, a church, and a convent. Pop. 8000.

RAPONE a town in Naples, prov Basilicata, dist. and S. S. W Melfi. Pop. 2800.

RAPOZOS, a vil and par Brazil prov Minas-Geraes, 80 m. N N W Ouro-Preto with a church. Millet, haricots, rice, and sugar-cane are cultivated and a considerable quantity of rum is distilled. Pop. 4500.

RAPHAELANOCK a river in U States, 15 miles, runs in the Rhine River, and after a S. E. course of 1 m. enters Chesapeake Bay by a broad estuary, 26 m. S. E. the mouth of the Potomac. It is navigable for small craft 110 m. to Fredericksburg.

RAPPELAL a town Baden circle Unterbreiten bail Neckar-Buchhofen. It contains a parish church and a castle, and has saline springs, from which nearly a half of the duchy derives its supplies of salt. Pop. 1038.

RAPPELSWILF, two places, Switzerland—1, A town and par cant. St. Gall N E shore of lake, and 18 m. S E. of town of Zurich partly surrounded by walls and encircled by an old castle and a church with two towers. The most remarkable object in Rappelswil is its bridge, above 3 m. in length which stretches to a tongue of land quite across the lake. It is only 12 ft. broad, and formed of loose planks work out on any ledge. Pop. 1604—2 A vil and par, cant. and 9 m. N by W Bern. It has some of the finest and best cultivated fields in the canton, and rears great numbers of swine on the oak mast of the forests. Two castles at one time stood on two neighbouring hills. Pop. 1719.

RAPHA a town, Bhut, bank Maklung, 88 m. W Bangkok.

RAPTEE, or RAPTY a river Hindostan, runs in the Himalayas, in the W of Nepal flows S. E. across the N. E. corner of Oude, into prov Allahabad, passing the town of Goruckpoor, and after a course of about 180 m., joins 1 bank Gogra by two branches. Its chief affluents are the Irrah and Tivary on the left.

RARAKA an old Low Archipelago lat. 16 7 S., lon 145 1 W (n). It is nearly of the shape of an equilateral triangle, 16 m. on each side, and its N and E sides are formed by a submerged reef. It is low and well covered with trees, a few of which are coco-nut trees. It incloses a lagoon, which communicates with the sea by a narrow channel. It is of an elliptical form, and appears to be about 10 m. or 12 m. long, N to S. The natives are of an hospitable and modest disposition.

RARATONGA or RAROTONGA, an Isl. S. Pacific Ocean, belonging to the group of Cook's Islands; lat. $21^{\circ} 15' S.$, lon. $169^{\circ} 5' 35' W.$ It is about 80 m. in circuit, and consists of a mass of mountains, becoming visible at a great distance, and has a very romantic appearance. It presents bold cliffs to the sea, and is surrounded by a reef with several small openings, which admit small vessels, but afford no anchorage or shelter. It appears to be of volcanic formation. The inhabitants, about 4000, have been converted to Christianity and made great progress in civilization. They live chiefly in the three villages of Avarua in the N., Atenua in the S.E. and Arorua in the S.W. These villages are well built, plastered with lime, and whitened, and have a very clean and comfortable appearance. The chief productions are yams, sweet potatoes, figs, pine-apples, turkeys, fowls, and ducks. Rarotonga was devastated by the great hurricane of March, 1846.

RARBAK, a vil. Hungary. See NOVAKAC.

RARITAN a river and bay U. States, New Jersey. The river enters the bay at Amboy, after a S.E. course, and is navigable for small craft 17 m. to Brunswick whence it is joined by a canal to the Delaware at Trenton. — The bay an inlet of the Atlantic, between Sandy-Hook and Staten Island, 10 m. N. New York, is 15 m. long from the ocean to Amboy and 12 m. at its greatest breadth.

RAS-AL-HAD the E. point of Arabia lat. $22^{\circ} 53' N.$ lon. $59^{\circ} 55' E.$

RAS-ARUNAH or ARIMARRAH a remarkable headland, coast of Beloochistan, in the Arabian Sea lat. $25^{\circ} 8' N.$ lon. $64^{\circ} 35' E.$ It stretches N. to S. and being connected with the mainland by a low and narrow isthmus looks at a distance like an island. The bay on the W. is shallow and exposed to the S. and W. that on the E. is both deeper and better sheltered, the water sloping gradually towards the shore from six or seven to three or four fathoms.

RAS-EL-KHIMA, a seaport in Arabia, cap. of the Pirata Coast lat. $25^{\circ} 48' N.$ lon. $56^{\circ} 4' E.$ on a sandy peninsula, defended by several batteries.

RAS-MOHAMMED the most S. point of the peninsula of Sinai in the Red Sea, between the gulfs of Suez and Akabah lat. $27^{\circ} 50' N.$ lon. $34^{\circ} 15' E.$

RASALGETT a cape Arabia. See HAD.

RASAY, or RAYAS an Isl. Southern coast of the lower Hebrides, or Linnæus between Rye and the mainland, about 13 m. long, N. S. and 2 m. broad at the widest part. It may be considered as forming a single ridge of unequal height, but in its S. or highest end, averaging 1000 ft., terminating on the flat-topped summit of Dun Oua, 1800 ft., on the S.E. coast. The W. side of the island is sufficiently uninteresting; on the E. it is otherwise; here are numerous scattered farms, each surrounded with its cultivated tract; and the whole diversified by sowing crops, flourishing cliffs, and patches of brushwood. On a lofty cliff overlooking the sea, in the N. part of the E. coast, stands the picturesque-looking castle of Brochoil. Freshness of the finest quality abounds in this island, as does also limestone, and a valuable kind of granite. There are several plantations of wood in a very thriving condition on the island chiefly Scotch fir, larch, birch, ash, oak, alder, &c. The herring-fishing was at one time carried on here to a great extent, particularly in the Sound of Heay, the narrow channel which separates the island longitudinally from Rye.

MEGHAN CASTLE, RASAY. — From N. O'Connell's Western Isles.

RASCHAU, a tn. Saxony, circle and 15 m. S.E. Eriken; with a church, chalybeate springs a sulphur and arsenic work, two mills, and some trade. Pop. 2378.

RASEN three par. England, co. Lincoln:—1 (Market) A market tn and par., 12 m. N.E. Lincoln on the Rase in a very beautiful district, and on a branch of the Manchester Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. It is well built, has a commodious church, places of worship for the Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and E. Catholics, a national school and a mechanics institute. Area of par., 1220 ac. Pop. 2110. 2 (Market) A par. about 1 m. W. of Rase-Market. Area, 8470 ac. Pop. 948.—3 (Ward) A par. 8 m. W. Rase-Market. Area, 2720 ac. Pop. 375.

RASORAL a tn. Turkey in Europe, Bulgaria, on the Ak-Lour and the road from Stumla to Rustahak 215 m. N.W. Constantinople. It lies in an elevated position above a ravine which forms its chief defence, and is surrounded by a palisaded dry ditch. Excellent grapes are cultivated in the vicinity. Pop. 30,000.

RASHAKIN par. Iral Austria 19,258 ac. P. 6829.

RASHEE, par. Iral Austria 6481 ac. Pop. 1505.

RASINES, a vil. Spain, prov. Santander, is a plain on the road from Castile to Laredo. It has a church and school manufactures of coarse linen, a flour-mill and a trade in corn. Pop. 1558.

RASPEIG (SAV VORSTEN-BERG) a tn. Spain, prov. and 4 m. from Alicante with two endowed schools, and a church. In the vicinity are several hermitages. Agriculture is the chief occupation and the trades carried on are mostly those connected therewith. Pop. 4657.

RASPENAU a vil. Bohemia, circle and 89 m. S. Bunsles with a church of the 14th century a school an excellent limestone quarry, and limekilns. Many of the inhabitants are weavers. Pop. 1415.

RASREGU, or RASHAU one of the Kurile Islands, N. Pacific Ocean, N.E. Shumai, lat. $47^{\circ} 50' N.$, lon. $153^{\circ} 30' E.$ It is about 20 m. long, and nearly the same in breadth. Like the other islands of the group it is mountainous and rocky but produces good timber, and abounds with beavers, and other fur-bearing animals.

RASREIN lks. European Turkey Bulgaria, N.E. ex tremity on the coast of the Black Sea, with which it communicates by several mouths. It is of a triangular shape, the base being about 30 m. long, and the other two sides from 20 m. to 25 m. each.

RASSELWITZ (DEUTSCH) a vil. Prussia, prov. Sillesia, gov. Oppeln circle Neustadt, on the Hottensplein, with a R. Catholic church, and two mills. Pop. 1777.

RASNOVA a tn. European Turkey, Bulgaria, r. bank Danube 88 m. E. by N. Silistria. The remains of a fortified barrier, constructed by the emperor Trajan, extend between this town and Kustendy on the coast of the Black Sea, a distance of about 37 m.

RASTADT a tn. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, on the Rhine, here crossed by three bridges, and on the railway from Carlsruhe to Freiburg, 30 m. N.E. Strassburg. It is one of the fortresses of the Germanic Confederation, and a place of considerable strength, has well-built houses and spacious streets, contains a palace, a large office of red sandstone, in imitation of that of Versailles, the residence of the last margraves of Baden, but now uninhabited, and in a dilapidated state, an alle council, a Protestant and three Catholic churches, a museum, townhouse, orphan asylum, lyceum, university, and several schools and has miscellaneous articles in steel and hardware, wooden and mathematical instruments, and a considerable trade in wood and cattle. Two important congresses were held here, one in 1714, and another in 1799. The latter terminated abruptly with the assassination of the French despot. The authors of the atrocity have never been discovered. A monument outside the town marks the spot. Pop. 6800.

RASTEDE, a vil. and par. Germany, Oldenburg, 8 m. N Oldenburg. It consists of two separate villages, and contains a parish church. Pop. 906.

RATENBURG, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 55 m. S E Kleinberg, on the Graber. It contains a castle three churches, a gymnasium, infirmary, and two hospitals, has several courts and public offices, and manufactures of woollen cloth, leather, and articles in copperware. Pop. 4566.

RATRICK, a vil. England, co. York, W. Riding, 4 m. S E. Halifax. With a handsome chapel, places of worship for Independents and the Society of Friends, an endowed school and other charities and extensive manufactures of fancy goods. Pop. 3917.

RAT, or KATTI ISLANDS, Aleutian Archipelago, comprising five islands of considerable size, namely Semisopochnoff, Amchitka, Kysa or Rat Island, Kiska, and Benukyr. Kysa Island is in lat. 51° 45' N. lon. 159° 40' W.

RATJAIN, par. Irel. Meath, 1633 ac. Pop. 816.

RAFASH, par. Irel. Cork, 6963 ac. Pop. 5290.

RATHY, par. Eng. Leicester 5410 ac. Pop. 1241.

RATCLIFFE, two pars. Eng. — 1 (upon-loor) Notts 970 ac. Pop. 145. — 2 (on-the-Wend) Leicester 880 ac. Pop. 128.

RATCLIFFE-ON-THE-TRANT a vil. and par. England co. and 5 m. S E Nottingham, on the Trent, from which it sometimes suffers by inundation. It has a parish church, a Wesleyan chapel, an endowed school, manufactures of hosiery and a wharf, at which some trade is carried on. Area of par. 1880 ac. Pop. 1278.

RATH, par. Irel. Clare, 6489 ac. Pop. 1658.

RATH, a vil. Rhemish Prussia, gov. near Dittelsdorf. It is a straggling place, with a R. Catholic church. P. 1430.

RATHBAGHAN, a market tn. and par. Ireland, co. Kildare. The town, 31 m. S W Dublin, on the Grand canal, is tolerably well built, has a handsome church and chapels for Methodists, Friends, and R. Catholics two schools, and a dispensary. Irish trade, and no manufactures. Pop. 1004. Area of par. 11,630 ac. Pop. 3554.

RATHBAGH, three pars. Ireland — 1 Westmeath 7880 ac. Pop. 1446. — 2 Wexford 2804 ac. Pop. 762. — 3 Kilkenny and Queen's County, 2318 ac. Pop. 2404.

RATHBARRY, par. Irel. Cork 4736 ac. Pop. 2283.

RATHBEGAGH, par. Irel. Kilkenny 2383 ac. Pop. 681.

RATHBEGGAN, par. Irel. Meath, 2300 ac. Pop. 238.

RATHBORNEY, par. Irel. Clare 9688 ac. Pop. 699.

RATHBRAN, par. Irel. Wicklow 5683 ac. Pop. 1216.

RATHCLARIN, par. Irel. Cork, 5901 ac. Pop. 1832.

RATHCLINE, par. Irel. Longford 10,969 ac. Pop. 2249.

RATHCONNELL, par. Irel. Westmeath 15,660 ac. Pop. 2732.

RATHCONRATH, par. Irel. Westmeath 8746 ac. Pop. 2302.

RATHCOOLE, two pars. Irel. — 1, Kilkenny, 3678 ac. Pop. 818. — 2, Tipperary 5904 ac. Pop. 1200.

RATHCOOLE, a vil. and par. Ireland co. and 9 m. S W Dublin, with a church, two schools and a dispensary. Area of par. 4706 ac. Pop. 1366.

RATHCOONEY, par. Irel. Cork 5152 ac. Pop. 876.

RATHCOORE, two pars. Irel. Meath — 1 1079 ac. Pop. 255. — 2 8346 ac. Pop. 900.

RATHCOORMAC, a tn. (formerly a pari. bor.) and par. Ireland, co. Cork. Area of par. 18,996 ac. Pop. 3381. — The town, on the Bide, 15 m. N E Cork, has an ancient church, a R. Catholic chapel, and Methodist meeting-house; a national school, fever hospital and dispensary, a tannery and a surgery. Pop. 971.

RATHDOWNY, a tn. and par. Ireland, Queen's co. Area of par. 17,117 ac. Pop. 4751. — The town, 7½ m. N W Wexford, has a church, R. Catholic chapel, and Methodist meeting-house. Pop. 1192.

RATHDRUM, a small market tn. and par. Ireland, co. Wicklow, area of par. 5799 ac. Pop. 3381. — The town, pleasantly situated 5½ m. S W Wicklow, has a neat parish church, R. Catholic chapel, and two schools, and formerly had manufactures of hannel. Pop. 947.

RATHDRUMIN, par. Irel. Louth; 1211 ac. P. 543.

RATHEN, par. Scot. Aberdeen 7 m. by 2 m. P. 2366.

RATHEN (Dum and Nazari) two nearly contiguous vills. Prussia, gov. Silesia, gov. Breslau, circle Glatz, with a castle, an oil saw and other mills. Pop. 1199.

RATHENOW or RATHENAG a tn. Prussia, gov. and 32 m. N W Potsdam r. bank Havel, here crossed by a stone bridge. It is walled, has a church, gymnasium and hospital; manufactures of woollen linen and cotton goods, musical and optical instruments; a fishery brewery distillery and some shipping trade. In 1670 the Swedes were here defeated by the Brandenburg general Derfflinger. Pop. 5968.

RATHEENAN, par. Irel. Kildare, 5140 ac. P. 969.

RATHEARNHAM, a vil. and par. Ireland, co. Dublin; area of par. 2782 ac. Pop. 6535. — The village, 2½ m. S. Dublin, is a straggling place, near which are the nursery of Loretto and Rathfarnham castle. Pop. 657.

RATHEIGH, par. Irel. Meath 2888 ac. P. 358.

RATHFRILAND, a market to Ireland co. Down, 8½ m. N E Newry on elevated ground. It has a market-house, a church, a R. Catholic chapel, three Presbyterian places of worship, and meeting-house for Covenanters and the Society of Friends, two public schools, and a dispensary. The linen manufacture is carried on here to some extent. Pop. 2053.

RATHGARVE, par. Irel. Westmeath; 6024 ac. P. 3064.

RATHGOGGAN, par. Irel. Cork 3718 ac. Pop. 5787.

RATHGORMUCK, par. Ireland, Waterford, 17,966 ac. Pop. 2066.

RATHJORDAN, par. Irel. Limerick 1056 ac. P. 331.

RATHKALE, a market tn. and par. Ireland, co. Limerick. Area of par. 12,020 ac. Pop. 2729. — The town, on the Doel, 16 m. S W Limerick contains many good houses and has a courthouse, church, a R. Catholic chapel several places of worship for Dissenters, and a comfortable retail trade. Inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture. Pop. 2998.

RATHKENNAN, par. Irel. Tipperary 787 ac. P. 140.

RATHKENNY, par. Irel. Meath 5496 ac. P. 1617.

RATHKILKENNY, par. Irel. Kilkenny, 3479 ac. P. 775.

RATHILIN, RATHILIN, or RATHILIN, an isl. and par. Ireland, co. and off N coast of Antrim lat. (about) 54° 17' 36" N. lon 6° 11' 42" W. (n.) On it are the remains of a castle in which Robert Bruce took refuge when driven from Scotland by the success of Balid. Area, 3399 ac. Pop. 753.

RATHLOGAN, par. Irel. Kilkenny 480 ac. Pop. 162.

RATHLYNIN, par. Irel. Tipperary 3769 ac. Pop. 658.

RATHMACKNELL, par. Irel. Wexford 1861 ac. P. 473.

RATHMELTON or RATHMELTON a thriving little tn. Ireland, co. and 15 m. N F Donegal at the head of a small navigable bay in Lough Swilly. It has a handsome parish church, three J. catholic meeting-houses and a Methodist chapel, two schools, a dispensary, and hospital, corn-mill, a brewery, and bleachgreen; and a considerable export trade. Pop. 1428.

RAIMMICHAEL, par. Irel. Dublin 2308 ac. P. 1867.

RATHMINES, a suburb of Dublin, Ireland 2 m. S. the general Post-office chiefly remarkable for the victory obtained by the republican forces over the royal army commanded by the Marquis of Ormonde, in 1749. Pop. 1048.

RATHMOLYON, par. and tn. Irel. Meath 2738 ac. Pop. 2456.

RATHMORE, three pars. Ireland — 1 Carlow 815 ac. Pop. 228. — 2, Kildare 7758 ac. Pop. 1193. — 3, Meath, 5846 ac. Pop. 050.

RATHMOYLAN, par. Irel. Waterford 2456 ac. P. 809.

RATHMULLAN, par. Irel. Down, 2870 ac. P. 1993.

RATHMULLAN, a small seaport, Ireland, co. Donegal, 11 m. N W Londonderry W shore, Lough Swilly, with a church, and battery. Pop. 638.

RATHNAVOGE, par. Irel. Tipperary, 5158 ac. Pop. 1069.

RATHNEW, par. Irel. Wicklow 8438 ac. Pop. 6188.

RATHO, a vil. and par. Scotland co. and 7 m. W by S. Edinburgh on the railway to Glasgow, which has here a station, and on the Union Canal. It has a number of hand some villas, and other well-built houses, an ancient church, a school, and several friendly societies; inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture. Extent of par., 4 ac. by 2½ m.

RATHPATRICK, par. Irel. Kilbenny, 4479 ac. Pop. 1718.

RATHRAGH two par. Irel. 1-1 Longford 4024 ac. Pop. 788-2 Mayo, 4164 ac. Pop. 790.

RATHRIGAN, par. Irel. Meath, 1866 ac. Pop. 233.

RATHROE, par. Irel. Wexford, 2367 ac. Pop. 659.

RATHRONAN, two par. Irel. 1-1, Limerick 13,117 ac. Pop. 2993-2, Tipperary 5641 ac. Pop. 907.

RATHSALLAGH par. Irel. Wicklow 1776 ac. P. 184.

RATHSARAN, par. Irel. Queen's co. 2291 ac. P. 876.

RATHTULLIS, par. Irel. Wicklow, 624 ac. Pop. 104.

RATHVEN, par. Scot. Banff, 10 m. by 5 m. P. 7618.

RATHVILLY a par. and small vill. Ireland co. Carlow

94 m. N by E Carlow with a church, and a R. Catholic chapel. Area of par., 9212 ac. Pop. 2601.

RATIBOR, or RATRIBOR, a tn. Prussia gov. and 40 m. S.E. Oppeln, l. bank Oder and on the Breslau, Gracov and Austrian railway. It is walled has several suburbs, a superior appeal court, and several other courts and offices, a castle, a Protestant and three R. Catholic churches, a town-house, synagogue, gymnasium, deaf and dumb institution orphan asylum several schools, infirmary and three hospitals. Manufactures of woollen and cotton goods, hosiery and tobacco tile-works and several oil, waxed, and other mills. Pop. 6385.

RATISBORITZ, a market to Bohemia, circle and 6 m. N.E. Tabor; with a church and a chapel. Pop. 1024.

RATINGS, a tn. Prussia gov. and 6 m. N.N.E. Düsseldorf with a R. Catholic and two Protestant churches, a Minorite cloister and an hospital. Justice of peace court, and manufactures of hats and earthenware a tile-work paper-mill and a marble quarry. Pop. 4063.

RATISKUN (German Ratiborsky Latin Ratiborsus French Ratibors) a tn. Bavaria Upper Palatinate r bank Danube, here crossed by a stone bridge of 15 arches, about 1100 ft. long and opposite the junction of the Regen 65 m. N.N.E. Munich. It is surrounded by old ramparts, in a somewhat dilapidated state, and is entered by six gates. It is very lofty isolated towers by which they are surrounded. There are, however, several spacious and handsome streets and squares, and numerous fine buildings. The most remarkable public buildings are, the cathedral founded in 1273, and one of the finest Gothic edifices in Germany with a lofty and imposing front, flanked by two unfinished towers, a richly-sculptured portal and an interior arranged with much simplicity and in excellent taste and lighted by beautifully-painted windows the church of St. Kunemann, patron of Ratibors, almost in a ruinous state the abbey of St. Kunemann, originally built for Scotch Benedictines, a large pile of buildings, now converted into an extensive but not handsome palace, the townhouse, a gloomy, irregular structure adorned with a beautiful Gothic portal and historically interesting as the place in which, for nearly a century and a half, the imperial diets were held the fiscal and episcopal palaces, the mint, theatre, synagogue, public library antiquarian museum lyceum, seminary gymnasium, picture-gallery, blind asylum, and several monasteries and convents. The manufactures consist of woollen and cotton goods, leather, and articles in leather steel and hardware, porcelain, and earthenware, wax candles, and tobacco. There are also numerous breweries and distilleries, building yards, dye-works, tann, copper, and various other mills. The trade for which the Danube, with its steam-boats which ply upon it, affords admirable facilities is of great importance, and includes a good deal of transit. The principal articles, in addition to the above articles of manufacture, are salt, wood, and corn. Ratibors is the see of a bishop, the seat of a superior court of appeal courts of first resort, a mercantile court, custom-house, and other public offices and possesses a botanical garden, and several literary and benevolent societies. It is an ancient place, and acquired considerable importance under the Romans, from whom it received the name, that of Castra Ratibora, and then of Aquae Ratibore. All the buildings erected by them have disappeared, with exception of a square, massive tower, of rough masonry which is understood to have formed part of a Roman castle. In more modern times it became the residence of the old dukes of Bavaria, then rose to the rank of a free imperial city and continued long to be the chosen seat of the imperial diets. Before the discoveries of modern navigators opened a new way to the East, it was the chief emporium for the province; but soon after these discoveries trade opened for itself other channels, and Ratibors, like the other imperial cities of Augsburg and Nuremberg, fell rapidly into decay. It has repeatedly suffered much from the ravages of war. The siege which it has stood number no less than 17 and was often accompanied with bombardments. Of these the last, and perhaps most disastrous was in 1809 when, after an obstinate defence by the Austrians, it was stormed by Bonaparte. Pop. 28,000.

RATLEY, par. Eng. Warwick 1500 ac. Pop. 471.

RATLINGHOPE, par. Eng. Salop 5569 ac. P. 273.

RATNAPURA [Tangalee, 'City of Jewels'] a tn. and fort, Ceylon, beautifully situated on r bank Kulu, 61 m. S.E. Colombo. It has but one street of contiguous houses the others being dispersed over the face of an acclivity. The larger houses are painted white and yellow, and have a foreground of beautiful green turf, with thick flowering shrubs. It has a bazaar, well supplied with provisions, and numerous shops for the sale of spices. The fort, though inadequate to withstand any other than a native force, is sufficient to protect the large village which lies under its walls. Ratnapura is the seat of the gem fishery carried on chiefly in a small tributary of the Kulu or Kulu-ganga, in the silt and mud of which the precious stones are found, these are principally topaz, kirkcubria, and yellow and yellowish-green sapphires. Rubies of large size, and fine sapphires, are also found, but are extremely rare. —(Prideaux's Ceylon.)

RATTERY par. Eng. Devon, 2633 ac. Pop. 411.

RATTLEDEEN par. Eng. Suffolk 2654 ac. P. 1901.

RATOATH, a vill. (formerly a pari. bor.) and par. Ireland, co. Meath, 16 m. S by W Drogheda; with a neat church, a handsome R. Catholic chapel, a national school, and a dispensary. Area of par., 9388 ac. Pop. 1223.

RATONKAU a small tn. Prussia, in the Mecklenburg, dep. Rostock-in-Rügen, rather more than 2 m. W.S.W. Mandelitz, the harbour of which it defends by a fort, and several batteries which have been erected upon it.

RATHBOR.—From Prussia's Statutes in Saxony.

irregularly built, and the streets are generally narrow and winding. The houses are more remarkable for their antiquity than remarkable for architectural merit, though many of them have an imposing appearance, rendered more striking by their RATOT, or RAVOLA, a vil. Hungary, Thidder Danube, co. and 4 m. from Veszprém. Though now comparatively insignificant, it was once a place of some importance. It has a church and two mills. Pop. 1306.

RATSCHEKOW, a tn. Russia, gov. Podolsk, between lefty Mts., 116 m. S.E. of Kaniatka. It is tolerably well built, has several Greek churches, and an active trade. Pop. 1600.

RATTENBERG, a tn. Tyrol, circle Unter Inzthal on the Inn, 27 m. S.E. of Innsbruck. It is walled, and was once a place of considerable strength, but the fortifications have been dismantled. It now contains the ruins of an old castle, and a handsome old church, lead, silver and copper are worked in the neighborhood. Pop. 1050.

RATTOP par. Irish Kerry 7084 ac. Pop. 8063.

RATRAY, a par. Scotland, co. Perth, containing the villages of Old and New Ratray. Old Ratray lies on an elevated platform at the foot of the Grampians, and in the Shoo, 15 m. N.E. Perth. It is old, and irregularly built. Contiguous to it is the neatly-built village of New Ratray which is a favorite resort for invalids. The spinning and weaving of flax is carried on to a considerable extent in both places the mills being propelled by water power. Area of par., 5 m. by 3 m. Pop. 2586.

RATZ, a vil. Hungary co. and 22 m. E. Sinhl walesburg, on a lefty height, above the Danube. Much fruit, and an excellent red wine, are produced in the neighborhood. Pop. 2190.

RATZ-ARADATS, a vil. Hungary co. Temocul on the March of Fegyver, about 3 m. from Nagy-Betkerek. P. 1332.

RATZEBURGH, a tn. Prussia, prov. Pomerania, gov. and 54 m. S.E. of Kolau, on the Oarns or Zehn. It has a court of justice, a church and manufactures of woolen and linen cloth. Pop. 1810.

RATZELB. 33, of RACHINGS a tn. Denmark, duchy Lauenburg, on the S.E. extremity of the lake of the same name, 13 m. S.E. of Lubeck. It occupies a small island, and has a very picturesque position, but has no facilities for trade. It is properly the capital of the duchy being the seat of the government, and the general place of meeting both for the civil and ecclesiastical authorities. It contains a handsome cathedral, situated in the N. part of the town and an important grammar-school. Pop. 8000.

RATZERSDORF, a vil. Hungary co. and 4 m. from Frensburg, with an extensive trade in wine, in the growth of which almost all the inhabitants are employed. Pop. 2197.

RALCERY, two par. Eng. Lincoln—1, (North) 2460 ac. Pop. 577—2, (South) 2430 ac. Pop. 867.

RALDY, a vil. Prussia, gov. and S.E. Oppeln, in a well-wooded district, on the Radka. It has a E. Catholic church; tile-works, a blast furnace and other iron-works. Pop. 1060.

RAUDNITZ, a tn. Bohemia, circle Leitmeritz, 1 bank Elbe, 24 m. N. by W. Prague. It is well built, and has a handsome church, a castle, with a good collection of paintings, and a library of 40,000 volumes, a Cypselin monastery, and a synagogue. On the crest of a hill near it is a chapel, to which numerous pilgrimages are made. Pop. 5200.

RAUTKEN a tn. Prussia, gov. and N.W. Breslau on the Schwarzwasser; with a Protestant parish church, and an hospital and a worsted and several other mills. Pop. 1211.

RAUMO, a seaport tn. Russia, Finland, gov. and 51 m. N.W. Abo, on the Gulf of Bothnia. It consists of wooden houses has a church, building-yards a good harbor, and a considerable trade, chiefly in wood. Pop. (1841), 1771.

RAUNDE, par. Eng. Northampton, 2800 ac. P. 1870.

RAURIS, a market tn. Upper Austria, circle and 41 m. S. Salzburg, in a valley of same name, on a height above the Embsch. It has a church, chapel, and school; a thermal spring, and four mills. Now it is a gold mine which has been partially worked from time immemorial. Pop. 1625.

RAUSCHENBERG, a tn. Hesse Cassel, Oberhessen, cap. hail, 10-m. S.W. Marburg with two schools, and an hospital; a brewery, and two mills. Pop. 1628.

RAIBN, 1725-Nico, a market tn. Austria, Moravia, circle and 12 m. E. Brünau, in a valley, with a church and a town-house. Pop. 1070.

RAUTSCHKA, of HEINKEA, a vil. Austria, Moravia, circle Hradisch, about 80 m. from Walschkraben, with two churches, and a school. Pop. 1481.

Vol. II.

RAVANA-HEADS, or RAKAS-TAL, one of the 'sacred lakes' of Tibet, in the tract of Kailas, at the source of the Sutlej river, lat. 30° 40' N. lon. 81° 10' E.; 15,000 ft. above the sea, at the S. foot of Gassglair, a peak 21,000 ft. in height, and a few miles W. of the other sacred lake Manasarovar, the stupendous waters of which it receives. It is about 20 m. in length, N. to S. by an average breadth of 5 m., and at its N. extremity gives efflux to one of the head streams of the Sutlej. It is thus described by Mr. Strachey who visited it in 1848—'The varied outline of the lake, with its islands and innumerable headlands—the intense blue of its waters, glittering in the sun under a cloudless sky with snow white branches that covered its surface and dashed against its rocky coasts—while Kailas reared its glorious dome of snow in the background—formed a picture of uncommon beauty, but the effect of the scene was greatly marred by the utter desolation of everything, and any real enjoyment was entirely destroyed by the bitter blast of the S. wind, which did not fail to chill us to the very bones'—(Strachey in Journal of the Royal Geog. Soc. xx, 63.)

RAVAAD, a vil. Hungary Thidder Danube, co. and 10 m. from Raab, in a well wooded and fertile district with a E. Catholic chapel, a brewery, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1250.

RAVEL the central river of the Panjab, rises in Kulu, lat. 33° 30' N. lon. 76 E., and flows very tortuously, but mostly S.W. to its confluence with the Chenab, 35 m. N. Mooltan and lat. 30° 33' N. lon. 71 45' E. total length, estimated at 450 m., in which course it passes the towns Chamba, Bialul, Tulamba, and the city of Lahore, which last is about midway between its source and termination. Near its head it is 7000 ft. above the sea, and has been found 116 ft. across at Chamba, where it is crossed by a bridge it is 45 yards or 50 yards broad. At the Meenae ferry about 320 m. from its source it is when fullest upwards of 500 yards in breadth, and 13 ft. deep. But from Lahore to the Chenab its banks are precipitous, it is rarely more than 150 yards across and it is fordable in most places for eight months in the year. At Lahore it divides into three principal arms, and again before its confluence with the Chenab which it joins by three mouths. It is the Hidraotes of Alexander's historians—(Thorton Gazetteer of Countries near the Indus).

RAVELLEY two par. England, Hants—1, (Great), 2040 ac. Pop. 223—2, (Little) 710 ac. Pop. 4.

RAVELLO a tn. Naples, prov. Principato Citra, dist. and 6 m. W. Salerno. It is the see of a bishop and has a handsome cathedral, seven other churches, a monastery, nunnery and three almshouses. Pop. 1700.

RAVENDALE (East and West), par. Eng. Lincoln 1480 ac. Pop. 135.

RAVENFIELD par. Eng. York (W. Riding) 1170 ac. Pop. 180.

RAVENINGHAM, par. Eng. Norfolk 2415 ac. P. 284.

RAVENSNA a deleg. Italy, bounded N. by deleg. Ferrara, S.W. by Bologna, S.W. and S. by deleg. Toscana, S.E. by deleg. Forlì, and E. by the Adriatic. greatest length N.E. to S.W. about 50 m. greatest breadth, 24 m. area, 509 sq. m. In the S. it is traversed by ramifications of the Apennines, but slopes rapidly down towards the N. and N.E. terminating in the former direction in an extensive plain, and in the latter both in plains and lagoons. It belongs wholly to the basin of the Adriatic, being drained by the Po di Primaro, with its affluents Fiumicino and Sente, the Lamone and the Melone. The climate in the interior is agreeable, but on the coast humid, misty and insalubrious. The soil is very fertile, especially in corn, maize, leguminous crops, hemp, flax, arum, and coriander seed, saffron, wine, oil, silk, and fruit. A great deal of salt is obtained from the marshes on the coast. Pop. 168,415.

RAVENNA a tn. Italy cap. above deleg. 1 bank Montone, near the confluence of the Reno, about 4 m. W. of the Adriatic, and 43 m. E. by S. Bologna. It stands in a marshy and unhealthy district, is surrounded by earthen ramparts, has a circuit of about 8 m., and being far too large for its actual population, has a dull melancholy appearance, though many of its houses are handsome, and its streets are in general regular and spacious. The principal edifices are the cathedral, founded in the fourth, but rebuilt during the last century, and adorned with some of Guido's finest paintings; the ancient baptistry, separated from the cathedral by a street, the Basilica of San Vito, in the pure Byzantine style, with all the accessories of Eastern splendour built in the reign of Justinian in imitation of St. Sophia at Constantinople, and adopted by Charlemagne as the model of his church at Aix-la-Chapelle; the Basilica of San Giovanni Evangelista, founded in 436, by the Emperor Galla Placidia, consisting of three naves, supported by 84 columns, and surrounded by a quadrangular colonnade, in which are two remarkable bells; the church of San Giovanni Battista, founded also by Galla Placidia, the mausoleum of Galla Placidia, containing a massive sarcophagus of Greek marble, in which the ashes of the empress lie; the palace of Theodorico, the last of the Goths, once a most magnificent structure, but reduced to a mere ruin by Charlemagne, who, with the consent of the Pope, carried away its ornaments and treasures; the tomb of Dante consisting of a sarcophagus of Greek marble; the archbishop's palace and chapel, the townhouse, the library containing 40,000 vols., and 700 MSS. the museum, containing a rich cabinet of minerals, and the academy of the fine arts. The manufactures are almost confined to silk and are of very little importance. The trade, which was at one time extensive, has greatly fallen off, but the port is still much frequented by the trading barges of the Adriatic. This port was in early times one of the best on the coast, and large enough to contain the fleets of Augustus, but it gradually silted up so as to be rendered almost useless. The evil has been so far remedied by the Fiume Naviglio, which is about 5 m. in length, and gives a direct communication with the sea at Porto Ceresio.

Ravenna, under the emperors, became one of their greatest naval stations. During the decline of Rome, A. D. 404 Honorius made it the seat of the Western empire and by availing himself of its strong natural position due to the morasses with which it was surrounded, and adding to its fortifications, made it almost secure against any hostile attack. During his reign and the reign of his sister Placidia, it was adorned with many of its noblest edifices. Not long after it fell into the hands of Odoacer who in his turn was expelled by Theodoric under whom it became the capital of the Goths. After two of his descendants had succeeded it was recovered by Belisarius, the celebrated general of Justinian who used it as a storehouse and conferred it on Narso, his favorite lieutenant. The exarchate, after being for nearly two centuries, was terminated by Astolphus king of the Lombards, who, having captured the city, made it the metropolis of the Lombardic kingdom in 754. Pepin and Charlemagne having succeeded in expelling the Lombards, made a present of Ravenna and its exarchate to the pope with whom, though not without occasional interruptions, it remained till 1859. Pop. 10,652.

RAVENSBURG a town in the circle Danube, capital, in a valley on the Schuman, 52 m. E. N. E. Constantinople. It is walled, has three gates, and three suburbs, is irregularly built, and has three churches, one of them, the Franziskanerkirche, a handsome edifice, several old monasteries, an hospital, posthouse, Latin school, and manufactures of chocolate, oil, and paper; all-works, dye-works, breweries, silk, flax and worsted mills. Pop. 4450.

RAVENSDEN par Eng Bedford 2160 ac. P. 271. RAVENSTHORPE, par Eng Northampton 1830 ac. Pop. 467.

RAVENSTONE, three parcs. Eng. 1-1 Bucks 2350 ac. Pop. 446-2, Derby 1130 ac. Pop. 596-3 (Dale) West-merland, 18,450 ac. Pop. 390.

RAVESTEIN, or RAVENSTEIN a tn. Holland prov N. Brabant, 17 m. E. N. E. Hertogenbosch on the Maas with two churches a Latin and a common school inhabitants engaged in agriculture and in trade. Pop. 876.

RAVNAĞURA, a market tn. Orissa, co. and S. W. Agum in a mountainous district. It has a parish church. Pop. 1067.

RAWA, a tn. Russia, Poland, on the small river Rawka, 43 m. S. W. Warsaw, once strongly fortified. It has four churches, an Augustine monastery, and an old castle, a brewery and distillery. Pop. (1841), 4281.

RAWLIFFE, a vil. and chapelry, England, co. York (W. Riding) 54 m. N. E. by S. Selby with a handsome church, places of worship for Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, and a free school. The manufacture of socking is carried on here to a considerable extent. Pop. 1552.

RAWDEN, a chapelry, England, co. York (W. Riding), 64 m. N. W. Leeds; with a chapel, places of worship for Baptists, Friends, Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans; and a school at Woodhouse Grove, for the education of the sons of Wesleyan ministers. Pop. 3557.

RAWDON, a vil. and township, Canada West, co. Hastings, on a small stream a tributary of the Trent, about 58 m. W. W. Kingston. It has recently made rapid progress, and has a distillery, two sawmills, a mill and a flour mill, and produces large quantities of maple-sugar and agricultural produce. Pop. vil., 400 township (1853) 8097.

RAWICZ, or RAWICZ, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 55 m. S. Posen. It is surrounded with walls and ditches, is tolerably well built and well paved, contains a Protestant and a R. Catholic parish church, synagogue, Franciscan monastery, burgher school, and school for deserted children, orphan hospital workhouse, and house of correction, and has manufactures of woollen and flannel cloth, tobacco, hats, and accessories, and spinning-mills, and a trade in corn and wool. P. 10,049.

RAWIL-PUR, a tn. Punjab, in the doab formed by the Indus and Jullana, and midway between those rivers, 67 m. E. S. E. Attack lat. 28° 25' N., lon 73° 15' E. It is surrounded by a bastioned wall and has an old fort (the houses are low pitched and flat-roofed, streets clean). It has a good bazaar a thriving transit trade between Hindoostan and Afghanistan, and a cheerful and pleasant appearance. On its S. side is a large choultry. W. of the town is a large mosque, with the shrines of a Mahomedan saint. Rawil Pinda is highly celebrated for the beauty of its women. Pop. 8000. — (Mason, in Bombay Geog. Jour., vol. vi.)

RAWMARSH par Eng. York (W. Riding), 2448 ac. Pop. 2533.

RAWRETH par Eng. Essex 2377 ac. Pop. 518. RAWTENSTALL (St. Mary), a vil. and station on the E. Lancashire railway England, co. Lancashire, near Haslingden; with a handsome church, a national school, places of worship for Wesleyans and Unitarians, extensive cotton and woollen manufactures. Pop. 5643.

RAYDON par Eng. Suffolk, 2335 ac. Pop. 555. RAYGUNG or RAYAGUNG a tn. Hindostan, prov Bengal, dist. Dinagpur about 540 m. N. Calcutta. It is of modern origin, but consists of narrow, dirty streets, lined with about 300 houses and 700 huts. It carries on a very extensive trade, particularly in cattle, of which 5000 bearing burdens are said to arrive daily.

RAYLEIGH, a tn. and par. England, co. Essex, on Hail leigh Hay 14 m. S. E. Chelmsford. It has an ancient church in the early English style, a Baptist chapel the remains of an old castle, and a brewery and malting establishment. Area of par. 2875. Pop. 1463.

RAYMOUGH par Ireld. Donegal 15,100 ac. P. 4218. RAYMUNTERDONEY, par Ireld. Donegal 12,614 ac. Pop. 2988.

RAYNE, par Eng. Essex 1675 ac. Pop. 868.

RAYNE, par Scot. Aberdeen 11 sq. m. Pop. 1550. RAZ, or RAZ DU RAZ, a headland, France, S. W. coast, Dep. Finistere, lat. 48° 24' N., lon. 4° 48' W. (n.) It forms the S. entrance of the Bay of Douarnenez, and is crowned with a lighthouse 259 ft. high.

RAZA, one of the Cape Verde Islands, lat. 16° 38' N.; lon. 24° 57' W. (n.) It is low and barren, and the coast steep and rocky. It is inhabited by blacks only.

RAZA, or RAZA, an isl. Brazil, in front of the entrance of the Bay of Niteroi or Rio-de-Janeiro. It is of an oval shape, and on it is a lighthouse. Vessels pass on either side, the depth of water being on the N. side from 13 to 20 fathoms, and that on the S. side not much less. The width of channel on the former side is 6 m., and on the latter 4 m.

RAZES, a dist. France, which was a dependency of the former prov. Languedoc, and had Limoux for its capital. It consisted of Massis proper and Ruz, now included in dep. Aude, and of Fenouillades, now forming several of the Puy de France, in dep. Pyrénées-Orientales.

RAZ, or RAZ (Latin, Caracis), an isl. France, Bay of Biscay, about 5 m. off the coast of dep. Charente-Maritime, 6 m. N. Rochelle, but hid from the town by the headland of Chât de Riez; greatest length, W. N. W. to E. S. E., 10 m.; breadth very irregular, being 1½ m. more than 1 m. near the central part, where it forms a kind of isthmus, and nearly 4 m. on either side of it. The coasts on the S. and W. are lofty and precipitous, but much indented on the N., where there are several good harbours, particularly those of the villages of Ars La Fiotte, and the small town of St. Martin. The last is defended by a citadel of considerable strength, and there are three other forts on different parts of the island. The soil is not fertile, scarcely producing either corn or pasture, but the vine thrives well, and is cultivated to some extent. A considerable extent of surface is occupied by salt marshes, from which much salt is made. This manufacture and fishing form the chief employments. There are also several fisheries of herring, and a trade in it and in wine. In 1629, the British, to relieve the Protestants who were besieged in Rochelle, made an unsuccessful attempt on this island. Pop. 15,885.

READING, a parli. and mun. bor. and market in England, cap. co. Berks, 1. bank Kennet, near its confluence with the Thames, 88 m. W by S. London on the Great Western railway. Though the town in general is very irregularly laid out, the principal streets are spacious, and the town generally is well paved, lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water. The houses are mostly of brick but a great many also are of Bath stone; they are for the most part well built, and the shops handsome. The town is rapidly extending both E. and W. It has an imposing castellated county jail and house of correction on a similar plan to that of the model prison at Pentonville, a new assay hall a spacious hospital, and a public hall, a fine edifice with a suite of apartments for the literary, scientific, and mechanical institution, a small theatre, news room, and baths, three parish churches, and places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, the Society of Friends, and E. Catholics, several charitable institutions, including a blue-coat school for boys, a green-coat school for girls, a public dispensary six sets of almshouses, and other minor charities. The textile manufactures of Reading, formerly various and extensive particularly the woollen manufactures, are now limited to the weaving of some coarse linen silk ribbons, and galloons, and some floor and sail cloth. There are also two or three iron-foundries, and several yards for boat building. But Reading cannot now be considered as a manufacturing place. Its present importance is derived from its being the centre of a very extensive traffic in stone, in timber, horse, and wool, cheese, salt, beer, and all the agricultural products of a very fertile district, which are forwarded by large and railway to the metropolis. The Kennet is navigable for barges of 110 tons, and on its banks are suitable wharves. There are here the remains of a magnificent abbey founded by Henry I. who was buried within its precincts in 1185 as was also his queen, and his eldest son. Pop. 31,458.

READING, a to L. State, Pennsylvania beautifully situated in a wide basin at the foot of lofty hills and slopes, 1. bank Schuylkill, which is here crossed by two fine covered bridges, at the junction of the Union canal and Schuylkill Navigation, and on the Philadelphia and Reading railway, 60 m. N. W. Philadelphia. It is built with great regularity in straight and spacious streets, crossing each other at right angles, and dressed with a covering of white gravel, or disintegrated sandstone, which consolidates so as to be equal or superior to a macadamized road, and is amply supplied with excellent water, conducted by an aqueduct from a spring in a neighbouring hill called Penn's Mount. Many of the houses, and more especially those of the central square, are substantial and even elegant. The more important public edifices are 15 churches, among which the Lutheran and German Reformed, both handsome structures with lofty spires, are conspicuous; the courthouses, finely situated on a commanding height, presenting a very imposing appearance and adorned with a pillared portico, the prison, adjoining the courthouses; an academy, a female seminary, and several other educational establishments. The principal public works are several large flour-mills a cotton-factory for fine muslins, of which about 6000 yards are daily produced, extensive workshops for iron and steel and railroad machinery, a machinery, and other iron-works, a pottery, two breweries, and several tanneries. Other important manufactures are woollen hats, which have long been extensively made for the southern and western markets; boots and shoes, castings in iron and brass, rifle-barrels, tools, and agricultural implements. The ale and porter of the breweries are celebrated and wine of fair quality and in considerable abundance is made from extensive vineyards in the neighbouring districts. In the vicinity iron ore is found in abundance, and a kind of conglomerate, which being susceptible of a high polish, is known by the name of Potomac marble. Reading was originally settled by emigrants, chiefly from Württemberg and the Palatinates, and still retains strong indications of its origin. German is in common use, and several of the newspapers, and service in two of the churches, are in German. Pop. (1850), 15,743.

REAL, a river, Brazil, which almost during the whole of its course, of about 160 m. forms the boundary between provs. Bahia and Sergipe. It flows generally W. E., and mostly through a mountainous country where its channel is constantly obstructed by cataracts but for the last 55 m. it is free from cataracts, and has a wide and deep tidal channel. Its principal affluents are the Negulin, Guararara, and Planhi, all of which it receives on the right. Its mouth, about 35 m. N. E. of the Ilha de Itaparica is in lat 12° 28' S. d.

REAL-DE-MORTE a to. Mexico, dep. and 56 m. N. N. E. Mexico, 9000 ft. above sea-level. It was long famous for its mines, which are still partially worked. A few miles N. E. is the celebrated cascade of Bagla.

REALLEJO a maritime to Central America, state Nicaragua, on a bay of the Pacific, 28 m. W. W. Leon; lat 13° 27' 54" N. lon 87° 9' 30" W. (s.). It has an excellent harbour, composed of a salt-water creek, into which several streams empty themselves. The entrance is protected by an island about 2 m. long which leaves a channel at either end by which ships may enter the larger of the two being a quarter of a mile wide, inside a noble basin, nowhere less than 4 fathoms deep, with a mud bottom, and capable of containing 300 ships of the line in security. It exports some indigo, cotton, sugar, mahogany and other timber, and is one of the ports used for passenger traffic by Lake Nicaragua to California. Pop. 3000.

REALLEJO-DE-ARAJÓ a vil. Canaries, Isl. Tenerife, in the delicious valley of Orotava, about 2 m. from the sea. It has a townhouse, prison an elementary school a granary church several suppressed convents whose churches are used for public worship, and near it numerous hamlets. It has also two flour-mills, and a bread-distillery. Pop. 2337.

REALLEJO DE ADEMA, a vil. Canaries, Isl. Tenerife at the foot of a high chain of hills. It has a church, several primary schools, and two flour-mills, and supplies the neighbouring villages with firewood charcoal and fruit. P. 8865.

REALMONT (anc. Regale Mons), a to France, dep. Tarn 12 m. S by E. Alby. It is built with great regularity, has an extensive public square, surrounded by a fine walk, manufactures of crapes, serge, and linen, and excellent bleach fields. Pop. 2235.

REARSBY, par. Eng. Leicester, 1800 ac. Pop. 600.

REARYMOORE, par. Irel. Queen's co. 18,946 ac. P. 1595.

REAY, par. Scot. Caithness, 18 m. by 9 m. Pop. 2506.

REBAIA, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, on the Dendre, 18 m. S. E. Tournay with manufactures of linen, earthenware and tiles for roofing and pavement; two breweries and a trade in corn. Pop. 1092.

REBEQ-HOARON a vil. and com. Belgium prov. Brabant, on the Senne, 16 m. S. S. W. Brussels. It has manufactures of tobacco lace, thread and wicker-work, two mills tile-works and pavement quarries. Pop. 8840.

REBBISORA or Kin-Bizara, a vil. Austria Transylvania, 16 m. from Blutits, headquarters of a Walachian frontier regiment. Pop. 1500.

REBSTLIN, a vil. and par. Switzerland, cant. and S. E. St. Gall with a Protestant church, a K. Catholic chapel, and three schools. Many of the females are employed in tanning. On a neighbouring hill stands the statue of the same name. Pop. 1611.

RECALI, a vil. Naples, prov. Lavoura. S. W. Caserta; with two churches. Pop. 1500.

RACANATI (Latin Racianum), a to. Italy, deleg. and 9 m. N. E. Macerata, on a lofty and commanding eminence. It contains many fine palaces, a cathedral with a Gothic doorway, and richly-carved roof several other churches, and a townhouse. Near it is a splendid aqueduct communicating with the subterranean channels, which convey water to Loretto. Pop. 8000.

portant trade has recently risen up in consequence of the opening up of the old route from Europe to India across the Isthmus of Suez, and along the Red Sea. It was that part of the Red Sea, called the Gulf of Suez, that the Israelites crossed in their flight from Egypt.

REDBERTH, par Wake, Farnborough 300 ac. P 187

REDBOURN, a vil and par England co. Hertford, 4 m. N W St. Albans. It has a church situated about 1 m. from the village, and places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans. Area of par 4615 ac. Pop. 2085

REDBOURNE, par Eng. Lincoln; 891.8 ac. Pop. 854

REDBRIDGE, a hamlet, England, co. Hants, 3 m. W N W Southampton, near the termination of the Andover canal, at the head of Southampton water and on the Southampton and Dorchester railway. It is a large and populous place, of ancient origin, and has building yards, a large brewery, and a considerable trade, exporting grain, and importing coal, timber and dates, &c.

REDCAR, a township and watering place, England, co. York (N Riding) 6 m. N Guseborough, on the Stockton and Darlington railway; with a chapel, places of worship for Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists; a school and a productive fishery off the coast. Pop. 1033

REDCRY par Isl. Tipperary 723 ac. Pop. 140

REDCLIFF (St. Mary), par Eng. Gloucester 1166 ac. Pop. 6812

REDCROSSL, par Isl. Wicklow, 6248 ac. Pop. 1330

REDDIAG, a vil Scotland, co. Stirling on the Union canal and the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, with extensive collieries, in which the greater number of the inhabitants are employed. Pop. 694

REDDITCH a large vil England, co. Worcester, 12½ m. S S W Birmingham on an activity. It is irregularly but generally well built, supplied with water and lighted by gas. It has a parish church, a fine R. Catholic chapel in the Perpendicular style and places of worship for Independents and Methodists. national day schools for boys, girls and infants. literary and scientific institute and manufactures of needles, books and eyes, and fishing-tackle. Pop. 4302 (Local Correspondent)

REDE, a vil Hungary Thither Danube, co. Veszprim, about 22 m. from Pupa with a church, a fine chateau, several mills, and a trade in wine and timber. Pop. 1110

REDENHAM, par Eng. Norfolk 8714 ac. P 1795

REDGORTON, par Scot. Perth, 7630 ac. Pop. 2047

REDGRAVE, par Eng. Suffolk, 830.5 ac. Pop. 1380

REDINHA, a tn and par Portugal com. Leiria, on a small affluent of the Douro, 17 m. S Coimbra. Pop. 1636

REDISHAM, par Eng. Suffolk 733 ac. Pop. 162

REDITZ, a vil Bohemia, circle Chrudim, on the R. ditz, 6 m. from Pardubitz, with a church and school. P 1869

REDLINGFIELD, par Eng. Suffolk 1075 ac. P 251

REDMARLEY, par Aust. par Eng. Worcester 3778 ac. Pop. 1169

REDMARSHALL, par Eng. Durham; 2518 ac. P 332

REDMILE, par Eng. Leicester 1170 ac. Pop. 627

REDNITZ, a river, Bavaria rises near Dettenheim, 4 m. N N W Pappenheim, flows N and at Furt joins with the Pegnitz to form the Regnitz, after a course of about 85 m. chief affluents, on the right, the Roth and the Schwarzbach, on the left, the Rast and Schwarzbach

REDON (anc. Redo), a tn in France, dep. Ille-et-Vilaine, at the foot of a hill on the Vilaine, in which the tide here runs 9 ft. 10 in. S S W Rennes. It is generally well built, has an elegant fountain, a fine-planned promenade, a Gothic church with a semicircular E. end, much adorned with manufactures of serge, building-yards, in which vessels of 400 tons are sometimes constructed, and extensive slate quarries. The harbour is good, and enables the town to carry on a considerable foreign and coasting trade, chiefly in corn, wine, honey, colonial produce, salt, butter, honey wax, chestnuts, wood, hemp, flax, sailcloth and canvas, leather, hair, feathers, resin, elms, iron, and lead. Pop. 3454

REDONDA, an isl Brazil, in front of the entrance of the Bay of Rio de Janeiro, W of it. Some vessels entering the bay from the S. pass through the channel between this island and Ilha, which has a depth of 24 fathoms at all times.

REDONDELA, a vil. Spain Galicia, prov and 11 m. S Ferrol, near the estuary of Vigo, and communicating with the sea by means of a canal capable of admitting small vessels. A bridge over a small river connects its suburb of Villavieja, and it has a townhouse, two schools, a church, and a spacious and handsome convent, attached to which is a church. Weaving, tanning, fishing, and agriculture, are the chief occupations. Pop. 2410.

REDONDIKES, or Ronzonaco, a vil and com. Italy Lombardy, prov and 14 m. W Mantua with the ruins of an ancient castle, and manufactures of linen. Pop. 1903.

REDONDO a vil and par Portugal prov. Alentejo, 14 m. S Estremoz. It has a monastery an hospital a Latin school, and manufactures of cloth and other woollen stuffs. Pop. 3430

REDONDO, two isles W Indies. The one, about 9 m. N W Monrovia lat. 16° 05' 80" N lon. 82° 13' 45" W (n.) is a high barren rock, becomes visible at the distance of 30 m. and has the appearance of a haystack. Near it are some sandbanks abounding with fish. The other, situated about 7 m. N Granada, belongs to a chain of small islands and rocks called the Grenadillas or Grenadines. Between it and Carriacou, N E. of it and the principal island of the group, there is a channel, with deep water, which may be navigated, though not without danger.

REDOUT KAZZ, a seaport to Russia, Minneapolis, on the Black Sea at the mouth of the Khopi 12 m. S S E Anahle. It is a place of considerable strength, with a garrison of 600 or 700 men

REDRUTH, a market tn and par England, co. Cornwall. The town in the midst of a rich mining district 9½ m. W Falmouth, has two churches, several chapels for Dissenters a market-place and an elegant clock tower; inhabitants principally employed in the rich copper-mines in the neighbourhood. Redruth is a place of great antiquity and contains many Druidical remains. Area of par 3907 ac. Pop. 10 571 of in 1696

REDWITZ, a tn. Bavaria, Upper Franconia, on the Kessel E. Bayreuth. It is walled has two churches, manufactures of woollen and linen goods and chemical products, glass-works, a copper and other mills. Pop. 1560

REEL (Lough), a lake, Ireland, formed by an expansion of the Shannon, between the co. Longford Westmeath and Roscommon 17 m. long and 2 m. to 6 m. broad, studded with islands, of which Inis Ewla, Inishbolin, Inchmorra, and several others, are of considerable size. Its outline is remarkably irregular and formed by innumerable beautiful bays and bays, and its shores are strikingly picturesque. The Inny enters it from the E

RELD, two par. Eng. — 1 Haru, 1460 ac. Pop. 377 — 2 Suffolk 1224 ac. Pop. 247

RELDHAM, par Eng. Norfolk; 5338 ac. Pop. 771

REEK a vil. Holland prov. N. Brabant 17 m. E. Herengoboth with a convenient townhouse, a church, and a school. Pop. agricultural 798

REPPHAM, par Eng. Norfolk 570 ac. Pop. 409

RELES, a tn Prussia gov. and 41 m. N N W Düsseldorf, r. bank Rhine. It is walled, has a R. Catholic and two Protestant churches a gymnasium, savings bank and orphan hospital manufactures of woollen cloth, hosiery, hats, tobacco and leather and some shipping trade. Pop. 3342

REETH, a market in England, co. York (N Riding), 47 m. N W York at the junction of the Aike and the Swale. It has two endowed schools and extensive lead mines. Pop. 1844

REETH a vil and com. Belgium prov. and 10 m. S Antwerp, on the road to Boom. It has three breweries a tannery several mills, and a trade in corn and cattle. P 1262

REETZ, numerous small places Prussia. The only one deserving of notice is a tn, prov. Brandenburg gov. and 3 m. N E Frankfurt, on a height above 1 bank Elbe, with a church, manufactures of woollen cloth and hats, and a trade in horses and cattle. Pop. 1899

REFOYOS two places, Portugal — 1, (de Baio) A tn and par, prov. Minho, com. Guimarães, near r. bank Douro, about 20 m. from Braga. — 2, (de São J. do) A tn and par, prov. Douro, 15 m. from Oporto. Pop. 680

REGA a river Prussia, prov. Pomerania, formed by the Old and the New Rega, about 6 m. S W Stettin. The united stream flows N W but very circuitously, and falls into the Baltic after a course of about 70 m.

REGALATO, a tn. Sicily, prov. and 26 m. W N W Catania, near r. bank Salso, with a college. Pop. about 6000.
REGELLA, a vil. and com. Tuscany, comp. and 18 m. E.S.E. Florence, in the Upper Val d'Arno, E. side of Mount Vallombrosa near the torrent Botta. It has a court of justice, and a parish church. Pop. 900.

REGEN, a market tn. Lower Bavaria, cap. dist. and on a river of its name, 30 m. N.N.W. Passau; with four churches, numerous breweries, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1220.

REGEN, a river, Bavaria, rises on the W. side of the Bohemianwald, near the frontiers of Bohemia, flows N.W. to Cham, then W., and lastly S., to its junction with l. bank Danube, opposite to Mauthausen. Total course, nearly 90 m., affluents, the W. side and the Cham.

REGENSBURG, a tn. Bavaria. See MANNHEIM.

REGENSTADT, a tn. Bavaria, Upper Palatinate, on the Regan, here crossed by a bridge, 7 m. N.E. Reichenau, with three churches, an infirmary, the ruins of a fine old castle, and manufactures of potash and saltpetre, a brewery, and saw, bark, and flour mills. Pop. 1565.

REGEN'S SW ORD, a remarkable peninsula, China, between the Yellow Sea and the Gulf of Leaoctong.

REGENWALDE, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 42 m. N.E. Stettin, r. bank Rega. It is walled has three gates, a church, a castle and sea oil, walk, and saw mill. Pop. 2402.

REGGIO, or RAVIA AGRICOLA-LALLA, (anc. Egrem Jaldi) a tn. and seaport, Italy, cap. Calabria-Ultra I. in a fertile plain, E. coast the Strait, and 9 m. S.E. town of Mesima lat. 38° 54' N. lon. 15° 40' E. (N.) It is walled, flanked with towers, and has several extensive suburbs. The old town was almost entirely destroyed by the great earthquake of 1783, and a new town has gradually risen up built on a regular and uniform plan, with good houses and spacious streets.

The principal edifices are the cathedral a collegiate and ten parochial churches, seven convents, a royal college, an ordinary and a founding hospital. It has manufactures of silk goods, linen, common pottery, earthenware, and other sorts of perfume, stockings and gloves, made of the filaments of the plant, a marine bivalve a considerable trade in oil and silk, and an active fishery. Reggio is the seat of an archbishop and of a high criminal and civil court. It was founded under the name of Phlebia, by a Greek colony 700 years B.C. After it had risen to great importance, it was besieged, and starved into an unconditional surrender by Dionysius, tyrant of Syracuse, who carried off most of its inhabitants as slaves. It recovered its liberty under his son Agathocles, but ultimately fell under the Roman yoke, and became a municipal town. Julius Caesar did much for its improvement, and changed its name to Rhegium Julii. From the Romans it passed first to the Goths, next to the Normans, and then to Ferdinand of Aragon, king of Naples. During the 16th century it was twice reduced to ashes, in 1544, by Barbarossa, and in 1583 by Mustafa Pasha. Its last great calamity was the earthquake of 1783, which made it almost a complete ruin. Pop. (1850), 16,483.

REGGIO (anc. Egrem Jaldi) a tn. Italy, duchy and 15 m. W. N. W. of Reggio Emilia, beautiful country, near l. bank Crostolo, and on the canal of Tanaro. It is surrounded by ramparts, and defended by a citadel, it is well built, has regular streets, several of them lined with porticoes and many handsome houses, in the case of a bishop, the seat of several courts and public offices, and has an ancient cathedral adorned with marble columns, and several fine statues of Clement, several other churches, among which that of Madonna della Ghisa, in the form of a Greek cross, and adorned with numerous frescoes, is considered the chief ornament of the town, a handsome townhouse, lyceum, museum, library, theatre, manufactures of linen and silk goods, and of articles in horn, bone, and ivory, a trade in cattle and wine, and a large annual fair. Reggio is the birthplace of Ariosto. P. 16,000.

REGGIO (Lat. Regium), a tn. and com. Parma, duchy and 7 m. E. Unione, with a court of justice, a church, a picturesque-ruined castle, an elegant theatre, primary and musical schools, an hospital, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 5363.

REGIO, a vil. and com. Spain, Biscay prov. Guipuzcoa, at the foot of Mount Harro, about 10 m. from Tolosa with a church, a good townhouse, a school, and a trade in corn and wool. Pop. 1845.

REGNITZ, a river Bavaria, which, formed at Furth by the junction of the Rednitz and Pegnitz, becomes immediately navigable, passes the towns of Erlangen, Forchheim, and Bamberg, and about 3 m. below the last joins l. bank Main, after a course of 40 m.

REGOIA, or PRADO REGOIA, a vil. and par. Portugal, r. bank Douro, 4 m. N.N.W. Lamego with a Latin school, extensive vine culture, and a handsome quay. Pop. 1802.

REGOLY, or REGOLY, a market tn. Hungary, Thither Danube, co. Tolna and 34 m. N. by E. Eisenbach, on the edge of an extensive marsh, where the Koppány joins the Kapos, has a church, the ruins of an ancient castle, two mills, and some trade in wine and cattle. Pop. 1556.

REGUAIN, or FLAT ISLAND, Bay of Bengal, off coast of Aracan, 8 E. Chudab lat. 18° 30' N. lon. 92° 45' E. It is remarkable as being a fourth to the three localities of the Old World previously known, in which the straits are undergoing a process of upheaval. These localities were Scandinavia, and the countries of the Baltic generally the W. coast of Italy and the coasts of Ostia. In Reguain, which, like the other islands in the vicinity, presents visible marks of subterranean fire, the ascertained rise, which is said to have commenced with a great earthquake in 1760, or 1760 is from 9 to 12 ft., but in other islands to the N. and more especially in Chudab, the rise is 22 ft. The upheaval in a greater or less degree extends S.E. by S., to 3 W. by N. over a tract 100 qm. in long, and varying from a very narrow strip to 30 m. broad and is in the line of prolongation of the great volcanic belt of the Santa Islands.

REGUINHEIM, or REZEN a vil. France dep. Haut-Rhin, 14 m. S. Colmar, r. bank Ill, near the canal of Neufbrunshausen. Pop. 2201.

REHAU, or ROMA, a tn. Austria Turkey. See OSPAU.
REHAU, or RECHAU, a market tn. Bavaria, Upper Franconia, on the Gröbenbach 29 m. N.E. Bamberg with an extensive brewery and a flax, cotton, and several other mills. Pop. 1600.

REHNBURG, a tn. Hanover, principality Calenberg in the vicinity of the Steinhuder lake, 23 m. W. N. W. Haverburg. It has a bathing establishment supplied by chalybeate and sulphurous springs, which are in considerable repute. Coal is worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. of it. 1825.

REHETOBEL, a tn. and par. Switzerland, can. and N.E. Appenzel, with a church, inhabitants chiefly employed in weaving and the rearing of cattle. Pop. 1858.

REHM, a vil. Prussia, Westphalia, gov. and 7 m. S. W. Münster, l. bank Weser at the confluence of the Werre. It has a church, extensive salt-works, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1912.

REHMUTPOOR, a tn. Hindoostan, pres. Bombay, prov. Belapur on an affluent of the Krishna, about 14 m. from Satara. It contains several Hindoo temples.

REHNA, a tn. Meklenburg Schwerin, l. bank Rodegast, 19 m. W. N. W. Schwerin, entered by four gates. It has two public squares, a church, townhouse, and savings' bank, manufactures of woollens, and several breweries and distilleries. Pop. 2578.

REHESDORF, a tn. Saxony, circle Bautzen, on the right 4 m. E. Zittau with a church, and a cattle manufactures of linen, a brewery, and distillery. Pop. 1013.

REICHELHEIM (twoplaces, Germany)—1. a tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Starkenburg 8 m. N. W. Erbach, at the foot of a hill crowned by the ruins of an old castle. It has a church. Pop. 1240.—2. a vil. Hesse, on the Morfeld, 19 m. N.E. Frankfurt, with a church, manufactures of linen, and several distilleries. Pop. 761.

REICHENAU, a vil. Bohemia. See RECHENAU.

REICHENAU, several places, Bohemia, particularly—1, (or RECHENAU, or RECHENAU), (Lat. Reichenau), A. tn., circle and 9 m. S.E. Kladsko, on the Elbitzsch; with a demerary church, two castles, an old and a new, the latter one of the handsome buildings of the kind in Bohemia, a Pietist college, not now used; a townhouse, gymnasium, two hospitals, and manufactures of cloth. Pop. 3500.—2, (or RECHENAU), a vil., circle Leitmeritz, 56 m. N. N. E. Prague; with a church; inhabitants chiefly employed in rearing and spinning silk, and weaving and bleaching linen. Pop. 1636.

—3, a vil., circle and 55 m. N. E. Bautzen, at both sides of the Moldau. It has a church, a school, a saw and three other mills. Pop. 2222.—4, (NEW, or NOWY RICHKOW) A vil., circle Tabor, with a church and a castle. Pop. 1047

REICHENAU a vil. Saxony, circle Bautzen, on the Ostsie, 7 m. S. Biele, with two churches and manufactures of linen and ribbons, dye-works, bleachfields, and several mills. Pop. 6663.

REICHENAU, or MURKOWSKA, an isl. Baden, on that part of Lake Constance named Untersee, 4 m. W. W. Constance. It is of a triangular shape, and about 3 m. long and 1 m. broad. It is covered with vineyards, and divided into three parishes. It once possessed a famous Benedictine abbey the abbots of which acquired large domains, and became princes of the empire. Pop. 1263.

REICHENAU, or RICHKOW, vii. Austria, Moravia, circle Olmütz, 9 m. from Güttau with a church. Pop. 1659.

REICHENAU (ALT) a vii. Prussia, Rhine gov. and 22 m. S. Liegnitz with a Protestant and two R. Catholic churches, and several mills. Pop. 1813

REICHENBACH, two places, Prussia:—1 A to gov. and 30 m. S. W. Breslau, r. bank Peile. It is walled, flanked with towers and bastions, and has four suburbs. Several courts and offices a Protestant and three R. Catholic churches a town-hall, castle, and several schools, extensive woollen and cotton manufactures, bleachfields, dye-works, and off and vinegar works. Pop. 5478.—2 A to gov. and W. Legnica with a Protestant church and hospital, manufactures of men linen, and several mills. Pop. 1153

REICHENBACH a vil. Saxony, circle and 7 m. S. E. Zwickau. It has two churches, schools; manufactures of woollen linen, and cotton goods hosiery, and stone-ware, worsted, flax, and cotton mills; dye-works and bleachfields and a considerable trade. Böttger, the antiquary, was born here. Pop. 8616

REICHENBERG, or LAUSEN, a tn. Bohemia circle Buns-lau, in a finely wooded district on the Neisse, 54 m. N. W. E. Prague. It consists of the town proper and a suburb called Christstadt, and is after Prague, the largest town in Bohemia. It is well built, but has many irregular, narrow, and narrow streets. It contains two churches a school-house, one of the largest and finest buildings of the kind in the kingdom, an elegant theatre, municipal and several other schools, an infirmary and poorhouse. Linen and woollen cloths are extensively manufactured, and form important branches of trade. Pop. 18 600.

REICHENBACH, a tn. in Upper Bavaria, in a wide and beautiful valley, 66 m. S. E. Munich, r. bank Isar here crossed by two bridges. It has four churches, a town-house, and hospital, and one of the most important salt-works in the kingdom. The salt is obtained from 30 springs, and the annual produce averages 12 000 tons. In 1817 after great expense, and by the genius of the celebrated engineer Eusebius Bach, these springs were brought into connection with those of Trausnitz and Rosenberg and the salt-works of Berchtesgaden, by a conduit carried above 80 m. over hills and valleys. Pop. 2650.

REICHENBACHSEN a vil. Hesse-Cassel Niederhessen circle and 4 m. S. W. Eschwege with a church. Pop. 1689

REICHENSTEIN a tn. Prussia, gov. and 45 m. S. S. W. Breslau; with a Protestant and a R. Catholic church an hospital, and manufactures of woollen and cotton goods, potash, glue, starch, snuff and gunpowder. In the 16th century there were mines here which produced about 25 000 ducats of gold. At present, arsenic is the only mineral actually worked. Pop. 1972

REICHENSTEIN (LATZ), EISENBERG or RECHENBERG, a mining to Bohemia circle Pilsen, r. bank Waidau, 20 m. S. E. Klatzau, with a church and glass works. Pop. 1684.

REICHENHOFFEN, a tn. France, dep. Bas-Rhin, 22 m. N. W. Strasbourg; with a paper mill, an iron work, and a considerable trade in madder, which is extensively grown in the neighbourhood, and in gypsum, which is extensively used for agricultural purposes. Pop. 2623.

REICHENTADT or ZAKOFF a tn. Bohemia, circle Buns-lau, at the foot of the Kamenitzberg, 43 m. N. N. E. Prague with a church, castle, Cistercian monastery, and school, considerable manufactures of cloths, cotton, and wax cloth. The son of Napoleon Bonaparte had his title of duke from this town. Pop. 1900.

REICHTADT (OBER and NIEDER), two contiguous vil. Saxony, circle Dresden, both near Dippoldiswalde, with a church a castle, and six mills. Pop. 1068.

REICHTHAL, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 35 m. S. Breslau, on the Spandau, with a R. Catholic church, town-house, school, hospital, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1123.

REIDIA a river Russia, near m. S. W. extremity of gov. Novgorod, flows N. and after a course of about 90 m. joins the bank Lobat, near its mouth in lake Ilmen.

REIF a tn. Tyrol. See RIVA

REIFENBERG a vil. Austria, Thyrle, circle and near Gitz, on the Brenzau, with a church and two castles. Pop. 1290.

REID (LA) a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. and 16 m. S. E. Leige, on the Weyr and the Ambieve. It has limestone quarries, brickworks, and a flour-mill. Pop. 1899

REIGATE a part bor. market, and par. England of Surrey the town 19 m. S. S. W. London on the railway to Brighton on a branch of the Mole; stands on a bed of fine white sand much used in the manufacture of glass, and has a small town-hall in the market-place an ancient church, built of squared limestone, with an embattled tower and some interesting monuments, places of worship for the Society of Friends and Independents, a free grammar and a national school, a literary institute, and several churches. Reigate returns a member to Parliament. Pop. bor., 1640 Area of par. 6009 ac. Pop. 4227

REIGHTON, or REIGHTON par. Eng. York (E. Riding); 1818 ac. Pop. 247

REIGNIER a vil. and com. France dep. Haute Savoie prov. Faucigny near r. bank Arve. It is a straggling place with a court of justice, and a trade partly in wine, but chiefly in cattle and dairy produce. Pop. 1709

REIGOLDSWELL, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can Basel Landschaft, 12 m. S. E. Basel in a valley 1650 ft. above the sea. It has a good church, parsonage, school-house, and a savings bank many of the inhabitants are employed in weaving silk ribbons. Pop. 1108.

REIKIAVIK REIKIAVIK or REYKIAVIK [Danish Reykjavik] a seaport and cap. of Iceland on the S. W. coast, and a tongue of land which projects into the Faxaflod. lat. 64° 8' 24" N. and lon. 21° 55' 15" W. (N) It is the seat of a bishop, the seat of government, and residence of the principal authorities of the island. It has a cathedral church a superior grammar-school an observatory a public library some manufactures of coarse woollens a good harbour at which a considerable trade is carried on and an important annual fair. Pop. 900

REIL a vil. Prussia gov. Treves, on the Moselle, with a chapel and an iron-mill. Pop. 1438

REILINGEN a vil. Baden circle Lower Rhine, ball Schwetzingen with a church. Pop. 1571

REIMA, a tn. France. See REIMS.

REINACH or REYACH a tn. and par. Switzerland, can Aargau, 18 m. S. E. Aarau. It is a stirring manufacturing place, with an extensive cotton printfield and a saw and two flour mills. Pop. 2670

REINEPZ, or REINERT, a tn. Prussia, gov. and 65 m. S. S. W. Breslau r. bank Gleiser Westritz, and the Kossbach. It is surrounded by mountains has two churches and an hospital; manufactures of woollen and linen cloth leather, and paper a worsted two saw and several other mills. Near it, in a secluded valley are mineral springs, with a bathing establishment, much frequented in summer and a few miles N. of the town is the Heuschnee, or Heuschnee (Hay barn) so called from its shape, and presenting a vast assemblage of detached rocks of fantastic forms. The highest, called Grotte-vaters Stuhl (Grandfather's Chair) is 2800 ft. above the sea. Near it is a much-frequented pilgrimage church P. 2646.

REINET, Cape Colony. See GRAAF-REINET

REINFELD a vil. Denmark. Amby Holsten cap. hall of same name, in a beautiful district, on the Helmsse, 11 m. W. S. W. Lübeck. It is well built, and contains the remains of an old castle. Pop. 900.—The name. H. of the Treves has an area of 85 sq. m. Pop. 8200

REINHEIM a tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Starkenburg near Dieburg. It is an ancient place, surrounded by walls and ramparts, and has two parish churches, a synagogue, and three mills. Pop. 1194.

REINOSA, or REYRUA, a mountain chain, Spain, between provs Burgos and Santander. It detaches itself from the S. slope of the Cantabrian mountains, and stretches N W to S.E., terminating near the environs of Burgos. It gives rise to the Elbro to the E., and the Pisuerga to the S.W. The latter summit are covered with snow during the far greater part of the year but the slopes are covered with forests, containing excellent xarant timber.

REINOSA, a tn. Spain, prov and 33 m. S.S.W. Santander on the Elbro, here crossed by a fine bridge. It has an elegant townhouse, public schools for both sexes, a church an hospital, hermitage, two convents, and two public promenades, manufactures of woollen and linen, several flour mills, and a considerable traffic in grain and flour. P. 1724

REINSDORF, a vil. Saxony circle Zwitkau, bad waters, with two churches, manufacture of linen three mills, mineral springs, coal mines, and a trade in fruit and furs. Pop. 1003.

REINSTEUT a vil Saxen-Altenburg, near Kahla, on the Selba, with a church and a fine manor-house. P. 1154.

REINSWALDE, a vil. Prussia, prov Brandenburg gov Frankfurt, circle Borsu, with a church. Pop. 1162

REISCH or RECHENK, a market in Austria, Moravia, circle Iglau. It has a church a Premonstratensian abbey with an extensive library and a chapel. Pop. 1040.

REISCHDURF or REINSDORF, a vil Bohemia circle and 18 m. from Raxa, with a church, a school, and limestone quarries. Pop. 1018.

REISEN or REINSTEIN, a tn Prussia gov and 45 m. S.W. Posen with a palace belonging to Prussia Sulkowsky and out of the finest in Poland a Piarist college and two Catholic churches, and manufacture of woollen and linen cloth. Pop. 1170.

REISEN, par Irel. Waterford 9227 ac. Pop. 854

REITENDORF, a vil. Austria, Moravia, circle Olmutz, with a church, a castle, an hospital and a mill. Pop. 1640

REITH a vil. Tyrol, circle Saltsburg, with a church and a chapel. Pop. 1125

REKAS, or REKAS, two places, Hungary:—1. A market tn. Thuder Thien. co. and 12 m. N.E. Temeswar with a church. Pop. 2008.—2. A vil H. Her Danube, co. Pesth. Pop. 7813

RELLICKMURRI and ATHAMAL, par Irel. Tipperary 12,508 ac. 1 tp. 864

RELLFN a tn. Spain, Valencia, prov and 22 m. N.E. Almona, with crooked and steep streets, a bad townhouse, a grammar, and an hospital in ruins two elementary schools, a church and chapel and a hermitage. Agriculture, three oil mills, five flour-mills, and a few looms for domestic linen employ the inhabitants. Pop. 2433.

REMAGEN or REINMAGEN a tn Prussia gov and 23 m. N.W. Coblenz. 1 bank Rhine. It is surrounded with walls and ditches, entered by five gates, and contains a Protestant and a Catholic church. It was founded by a Roman colony. Pop. 1786.

REMBANG a prov Java, bounded N by the Java Sea, E prov Boerhaaya S.E. Kediri, S. Madelon, and W. Saurang. It is a fertile, but not mountainous, highland with a lower under 2000 ft., and with several smaller possessions, only a navigable stream, the Solo. The country along the coast is little better than a dry barren sand waste, and inland it is stony and rocky and for the most part covered with thick dense forests. In short, only about an eighth part of the area is capable of cultivation. Rice, tobacco, and vegetables are the chief products, some timber is floated down the Solo, some trade is done in rice and turmeric, and in importing gambier, and some sugar is manufactured in two districts. Ship-building to a limited extent is carried on at the ports of Rembang, Dancong, Galangan, and Bander. Rembang is rich in old gold gravels, held in great respect by the Javanese. Pop. 460,000

REMBANG a tn. Java, above prov on a deep bay on the N. coast, W. of the river Rembang, and 60 m. W. N.W. Saurang lat. 6° 40' 30" S.; lon. 111° 17' E. (a). It is a lively thriving town, with a rosy bazaar, a good hospital, a mosque, a school, and some other respectable buildings. Its harbor one of the best in the island, is protected by a point named Oeljong-Bender, which stretches far into the sea, and by some islands, among which are the two Brothers. It has a good trade in ship-timber, and in ship-building, and trafic it is a valuable salt-pans.

REMEDIOA, a tn. New Granada, dep. Cundinamarca, prov and 87 m. N.E. Antioquia. Its gold-mines, formerly so rich, are abandoned, but it has some trade in timber. Pop. 4000.

REMENTHAM, par Eng. Berks 1560 ac. P. 486.

REMETE, MANEAT, or REMETE, a market tn. Hungary, Hither Thien. co. Zepa, on the Grinles, 58 m. N.W. Kempten, with a Protestant and a Catholic church, brewery, and brandy distillery. Pop. 2143.

REMETE, or REMETE, a vil. Austria, Transylvania, co. Nieder-Walsenburg, on the Klygo-Putaka, near the junction with 1 bank Maros, 16 m. N. Karlsburg. It contains a Greek united church and has mineral springs. Pop. 2590

REMITCH, a tn. Zealand, district and 11 m. N.E. Luxembourg, 1 bank Moselle. It is very beautifully situated in a most fertile district and has an old castle, a townhouse, prison, church and school; and a considerable trade in wine agricultural produce, and fruits, especially apples, pears, cherries, strawberries, plums, and nuts. There are also tannery and pottery works and several lincolns, and gypsum-mills. In April, 1822 there was fought here a severe engagement between the forces of the bishop of Treves and Metz, and the Normans, in which the bishop was killed. Pop. 2200.

REMYELMONT [anc. Armenia Centrum] a tn France, dep. Vosges, picturesquely situated at the foot of the Vosges, 1 bank Moselle. The houses, though for the most part rather low are neat and regular and usually adorned with arcades. The streets are well laid out and spacious. The principal edifices are the church and hospital. Its chief manufactures are cotton, muslin Paris point, stained paper, and leather. There are also cotton and wool mills, and iron and steel works. The trade is of considerable importance (Remylmont being the entrepot for the produce of the mountainous districts in the neighbourhood). The leading articles are cheese, called Gouda and Gruyere. Pop. 4133.

REMLINGEN a tn. Bavaria, Lower Franconia, 10 m. W. Würzburg, with a Protestant church, two mills, several mills, and a trade in corn, fruit, and cattle. P. 1068.

REM() (HIS) a seaport tn. France, dep. Alpes Maritimes, 80 m. E.N.E. Nice cap prov on the Mediterranean. When viewed from the sea it presents the figure of a triangle the base of which is formed by the shore, and the apex by the dome of the sanctuary Della Costa. It consists of an upper and a lower town. The former is very ancient, and consists of a number of poor houses, placed in narrow and almost inaccessible streets the latter is much better built, and is one handsome modern square, but the streets are generally steep and ill paved. A great scarcity of good water used to be felt, but a copious supply has recently been introduced from a distance of about 3 m. San Remo is the residence of a military commandant, and the seat of a superior court of law and of several public offices and has 14 churches, several of them belonging to convents, and one, the sanctuary Della Costa, already mentioned, adorned with four columns of alabaster. A seminary and college, a large townhouse in which the public schools are kept, and a small harbor, chiefly frequented by fishing vessels and small coasters, which, loaded with oil, fruit, and salt provisions. Pop. 9854.—The rov, area, 217 sq. m., is covered by the Maritime Alps, which descend in beautiful hills and torrents towards the shore, and send down numerous torrents. The soil is fertile, and great quantities of oil and fruit, particularly oranges and citrons, are produced. The prov is divided into 8 mandements, subdivided into 36 communal. Pop. 61,000

REMOUCHAMPS, a vil. Belgium, prov and 12 m. S.E. Leips. It has a very remarkable double grove, nearly 1 m. long and consisting of a great variety of beautiful specimens. In its mouth, at what is called the Lake d'Enfer, numerous fossil bones of lions, tigers, bears, and other animals, were found in 1825.

REMPTENDORF a vil. Germany, Rhenus-Greits, hall. Burg, with a church and several mills. Pop. 1256.

REMPSTONE, par Eng. North, 1680 ac. P. 389

REME, a river, Wurtemberg, rising in a hilly district not far from its E. frontier flows W. N.W. past the towns of Remlingen, Gmünd, and Schorndorf, and joins a bank Neckar at Ludwigsburg, after a course of 50 m.

RENESCHIED, a tn. Frisia, gov and 18 m. E S.W. Middelburg, on a rugged height. It contains a Protestant church, and has extensive manufactures of various articles of brasswork, which are largely exported to Holland, Russia, America, and other countries. Pop. 11,909

RENY (St.) (anc. Glaucus Iuvit), a tn. France, dep. Doubs-de-Ménil, 42 m. N N W Mirecourt, near the canal of St. Neel, in a beautiful basin, covered with olive-groves. It has a handsome boulevard, formed on the site of the ancient ramparts, somewhat narrow and irregular streets, but many of the houses, though old, are well built. The only edifice deserving of notice is the Hotel de Ville, a handsome modern structure, situated in the public square, which is adorned with a pyramidal fountain. The trade is in wine and corn, and there are silk-mills. Pop. 6123

RENALX (Flemish, Rense, Latin, Rosenacensis) a tn. Belgium, prov. E. Flanders, 20 m. S Ghent. It is picturesque situated in three public squares, each adorned with a fountain; three churches and two chapels; a townhouse, hospital, orphan asylum, conseil de prud'hommes, a superior primary government, and several commercial and private schools; a mutual society, and different benevolent institutions particularly one which bears the name of Frères des Bonnes Œuvres. The manufactures consist of cotton stuffs linen cloth, flannels, hats, earthenware, soap, oil, chocolate, confectionery, and tobacco. There are also breweries, distilleries, tanneries, saw-mills, iron-works, bleachfields, thread-mills, brick and tile works, &c. The linen trade is very extensive, and the weekly and monthly markets are much frequented, and at the two annual fairs, each lasting two days a great deal of business is done. Renalx dates from the 8th century. In 1478, and again in 1519, it was almost destroyed by fire. Pop. 12,545.

RENCHEN a tn. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, r. bank Rheine, 10 m. N N E Offenbach; with a church manufactures of iron, and a trade in hemp. Moreau defeated the Austrians here in 1795.

RENCUM Holland. See REKKUM

RENDALL and Knox, par Scot. Ork and Shet. P. 1443.

RENDOMBE, par Eng Gloucester, 2523 ac. P. 264

RENDHAM, par Eng Suffolk, 1731 ac. P. 453.

RENDE, a tn. Naples, prov Calabria-Citra, dist and 8 m. N.W. Cosenza. It is situated at the foot of the Apennines, and contains seven churches and two monasteries. Potter's clay and millstones are found in the vicinity. P. 4100

RENDEK, or OWAN, a vil. Hungary, Thutser District co. Buda, 1 m. from Bunnagh with a church. It stands in a district covered with forests. Pop. 2638

RENDEUX, a vil and com. Belgium prov Luxembourg on the Ourthe, 36 m. N Arlon, with a saw mill and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1011

RENDEVOUS, an vil of 8 W point Borneo. Lat. 2° 44' 30" S. lon. 110° 9' E.

RENDLESHAM, par Eng Suffolk, 2020 ac. P. 859

RENDSEBURG, a tn. Denmark, duchy Holstein, ex. hall, on both sides the Eider, and on a little island in its channel, 54 m. N N W Renssberg. It stands in a level district on the frontier of Schleswig, and is a place of great strength. It is divided into three parts—the Altstadt, Newwerk, and Krowerk. The Altstadt, the oldest part, occupies the Eider-tale, and is defended by several irregular bastions and six outworks. Newwerk stands on the l. or Holstein bank of the Eider, and is defended by six regular bastions and ravelins and seven outworks. The efficiency of its defences can be greatly increased by flooding. Krowerk is on the r. bank, or Schleswig side of the river, and not only guards the entrance to the fortress on that side, but also protects the large wharf on the canal and the harbour. There are in all five parts, of which the Altstadt has three, and the Newwerk and Krowerk one each. Renssberg ranks as a fortress of the second class, and is also the second artillery depot in the kingdom. Its several forts and barracks are extensive and complete, and nothing is omitted that can contribute to its impregnability as a military station. Its principal buildings and establishments are two churches, one of them large and richly ornamented, with a curious altar-piece, a provincial court-house, the main warehouse, the Schleswig-Holstein head-bank; the second-class head-bank, a large bell-foundry, a superior gun-foundry, and three hospitals. The town is situated generously situated for trade. Both the Eider and the Schleswig-Holstein canal, which joins it here, give ample water communication, while a branch railway joins it in connection with the trunk line between Kiel and Altona. The harbour, a winter haven of the fourth class, has 11 ft. water, and there are five stations at which vessels according to their class can load or deliver their cargoes. The most important of these stations is at the sluice in Krowerk. The origin of Renssberg is unknown, but it owes its Altstadt to Frederick III. in 1689, and its other divisions, its privileges, and principal fortifications to Christian V., who continued improving it from 1684 to 1692. It has stood repeated sieges and bombardments. Pop. 10,400.—The RAIL, the largest in Holstein is not all united, but includes a number of scattered patches. Its area is 93 ges sq. m. Pop. 21,900
Yo. II.

RENFREW, or RENFREW, a co. Scotland, bounded, S and S.W. by co. Ayr. E. by Lanark, N by the Clyde, and W by the Firth of Clyde. Length 31½ m., breadth 18½ m. area, 241 sq. m., or 154,240 ac., of which about 100,000 ac. are cultivated. The most elevated ground occurs in the S.W. and S.E. but they attain no great height, the loftiest summit in the co. being about 1200 ft. or 1800 ft. above sea level. There are, however, numerous beautiful and extensive valleys, watered by the White and the Black Cart, the Gryffe, &c. Towards the centre of the co. the general features are striking and picturesque, being in many places well wooded and varied by fine meadows, knolls, and rising-grounds. Along the Clyde the country is comparatively flat, and the soil is various, but a great part of it is deep, loamy clay, extremely fertile. The S.E. part of the county is included in the great coal-field of the W. of Scotland. Limestone sandstone, freestone, granite, and secondary trap rocks, are found in considerable abundance. Good freestone for building is quarried; limestone is also wrought for burning, and the mines of coal and ironstone give employment to a great number of persons. Grazing and dairying are extensively practised in the county, particularly in the high districts, where the pasture is excellent. In the middle district, where the latter is not so good, all sorts of crops are raised with the best advantage. But Renfrewshire derives its principal importance from its manufactures and shipping, including as it does, Paisley, Greenock, and Port-Glasgow as well as the county town Renfrew. It returns three members to Parliament, one for the county and one each for the burghs of Paisley and Greenock. Pop. 181,091

RENFREW, an anc. royal and peer burgh, and par. Scotland, exp. above on 6 m. W N W Glasgow about half-mile from the Clyde. It consists of a main and several lesser streets, well lighted with gas, and has a jail and townhouse, an old parish and a Free church, a grammar-school endowed by a charter of Robert III. and the Blythwood Testimonial, a superior school established in 1843, a subscription library and an atheneum, were opened December 1. 1853. Silk and muslin handloom weaving are carried on, and many of the inhabitants are engaged in a bleachfield at one end of the town, and in the extensive foundry and shipbuilding yards on the banks of the Clyde and in a distillery in the vicinity. A short canal connects the town with the Clyde, which is here crossed by a ferry and furnished with a commodious quay or wharf at which the river steamers touch in their passage to and from Glasgow. Renfrew gives the title of Baron to the eldest son of the reigning sovereign, and unites with Kilmarlock, Rutherglen, Port-Glasgow and Dumbarton in sending a member to Parliament. Pop. of par. 3898 of tn. 3722

RENFREW a vil Canada West, on the Beane River, which here forms a magnificent fall about 70 m. N Kingston. It has a Presbyterian and a R. Catholic church, a grammar-school, a foundry, tannery, carding, saw, and flour mills, and exports large quantities of potash.

RENGERDORF, a vil Prussia, prov. Rhine, gov. Prussia, circle Gluck, with a church, a castle, and several mills. Pop. 1086

RENEOLD, par Eng Bedford, 2166 ac. P. 464

RENI, a commercial port, Russia, gov. Bessarabia, at the mouth of the Pruth in the Danube. It exports wheat, barley, and maize, chiefly to Constantinople. Pop. (1849) 7814.

RENINGHEE a vil and com. Belgium, prov. Flanders, 25 m. S.W. by W Brugge, near l. bank Krommebeke. It has six breweries, a bleachfield, several flour-mills, and manufactures of leather, ropes, candles, tobacco, and oil; and a trade in cattle, grain, and timber. Pop. 3069.

RENINGHELST, a vil. and com. Belgian, prov. W. Flanders. 23 m. S.W. Bruges, with two breweries, and three flour-mills. A great variety of medicinal plants are cultivated in this commune. Pop. 2145.

RENKUM or RENCUM, a vil. Holland prov. Gelderland, 8 m. W. Arnhem, near the Rhine. It has many good houses, a Protestant, and a St. Catharine church, a school, a paper-mill and a brewery. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the wood trade. Pop. 919.

RENNESBOD, a vil. Hesse, about 40 m. N. Wiesbaden. It has a Protestant parish church. Pop. 1419.

RENNES (anc. Condate Rhenovora) a tn. France, dep. Ille-et-Vilaine, agreeably situated on the activity and at the foot of a hill on the canal of Ille and Rance, at the confluence of the Ille and Vilaine, 60 m. N. Nantes. It is traversed from E. to W. by the Vilaine, which divides it into the high and the low town, and is crossed by three bridges. The latter the smaller of the two, on the l. bank, is on a flat so low as often to suffer from inundation. It is very poorly built. The houses in it, as well as those in the adjoining suburbs, are mostly of wood, and the streets are narrow and winding. The houses lie between r. front Vilaine and l. bank Ille, and strikingly contrast with the low town by the elegance of its buildings and its spacious regular streets which are almost mathematically straight, and intersect each other at right angles. This decided superiority it owes to a dreadful conflagration which took place in 1720, and in the course of the seven days during which it raged laid the greater part of the high town in ashes. This same event, however which has thus given it the appearance of a handsome modern town, has deprived it of much of its historical interest, by destroying almost all its ancient edifices. Of these the only one of any consequence which now remains, is the Palais de Justice, a stately structure in which the states of Brittany used to meet. Of modern edifices, the principal are the cathedral of Breton architecture, the Hotel de Ville part of which is occupied by the public library, a handsome theatre, the new church of Toussaint, the artillery barracks, and arsenal. But the chief attraction of Rennes is in its promenade. The best are the Mail, Champ-de-Mars, and Thabor. The last, in particular forming part of the old garden of a Benedictine monastery in 17th century and finely planted, and occupying a height which overlooks the town, affords fine views both of it and of the surrounding country. The manufactures, not of great importance, consist chiefly of silk-throwing, spinning, cloth, starch, cotton pipes, paper and playing-cards. There are also spinning mills, wax refineries, breweries, and tanneries. The trade is of considerable extent, being greatly facilitated by canal communication, both with St. Malo on the one hand, and Brest and Nantes on the other. The principal articles are dressed, linen, better corn, wine, color, honey was, wax, timber, and cattle. Rennes is the seat of a bishop, and the seat both of a court of first resort and consistory, and of a high court of appeal for dep. Côtes-du-Nord, Finistère, Ille-et-Vilaine, Loire-Inférieure, and Morbihan, and possesses a college, a faculty of law, secondary school of medicine, a university secondary dissection seminary and a society and school of painting. In the time of the Romans, Rennes was the capital of the Redones. On the decline of the empire it was seized by the Saxons, and afterwards by the Franks. From then it was taken in the 9th century by Rouennois, prince of the Bretons, whose successors made it their capital. By the marriage of Anne of Breton with Charles VIII., it became finally united to France. During the middle ages it was strongly fortified, and stood several sieges; the most memorable of which is that of the English, under the Duke of Lancaster who was obliged to raise it after it had continued six months. Pop. (1857) 29,582.

RENNINGEN a vil. Württemberg, Kreis Sueder. 18 m. W. Stuttgart with a church. Pop. 1745.

RENO (anc. Rhenus), a river, Italy rises in the N. slope of the central Apennines, on the N. borders of Tuscany, near the Romanes, flows N. E., and joins the bank of the Adriatic, a little above Ferrara, total course, 90 m. It is not properly navigable, but carries barges in winter when the water is high.

RENTERIA, a tn. Spain, Biscay, prov. Guipuzcoa, l. bank Gurea, near its mouth in the Bay of Pasages. It is walled, has five gates, an ancient and spacious church; an Augustinian monastery, a handsome town-hall, and several, two primary schools, an iron-mill, and other iron-works and a considerable export of iron and steel. Pop. 1057.

RENTON, a vil. Scotland co. and 2 m. N. Dumfriesshire, on the railway to Ballach, 7 bank Leven with a nat. Free and a Reformed Presbyterian church, several schools, a library, and a monument to the memory of Smollett, the novelist and historian, who was born in the vicinity. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the extensive calico-printing, dyeing and bleaching establishments, which here have since the Leven. Pop. 2598.

RENTSCH, or ROCHENSTADT, a vil. Bohemia, circle Rakonitz, near Pargitz, in a valley enclosed by lofty hills, with a church and a school. Pop. 1058.

RENEWICK, par. Eng. Cumberland; 4220 m. Pop. 216.

RENY a tn. Russia. See RENY.

REOLE (La) (anc. Regula) a tn. France, dep. Gironde, 30 m. S.E. Bordeaux built in the form of an amphitheatre, on the side of a steep hill whose base is washed by the Garonne. It has very indifferent houses, steep, narrow and irregular streets, and an ugly, noisy-looking building, except the remains of an ancient abbey and of an old castle said to have been built by the Saracens. It has manufactures of combs, hats, vinegar and leather, and a trade in corn, flour, barley, and cattle. Pop. 8054.

RHOLID (anc. Burgula) a vil. and com. Spain, Valencia, prov. and 40 m. from Albufera in a plain with a church, a primary school and manufactures of articles in iron. P. 1025.

REPHAM, or REPHAM par. Eng. Lincoln. 1490 m. Pop. 585.

REPPEN, a tn. Prussia prov. Brandenburg gov. and 11 m. E. Frankfurt, on the Elbe, with a church and manufactures of woollens and hats and a trade in horns and cattle. Pop. 2592.

REPTES, three par. England, Norfolk;—1, 1729 m. Pop. 880.—2 (North) 2731 m. Pop. 623.—3, (South), 2081 m. Pop. 699.

REPS or KHALON a market in Assiria, Transylvania chief place of the same name at the foot of a height crowned with a castle, on the Rostsch and Trebenesch, 18 m. S.E. Udrvari. It contains a Protestant, St. Catharine, and Greek church, and a school and has fair chiefly for linen and horses. There are mineral springs and a sulphur mine in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1200.—The extent of Reps or KHALON-Sank has an area of 170 geo. sq. m. Pop. 7500.

REPTON or REPTON a vil. and par. England, and 64 m. S.W. Derby, with a handsome church, places of worship the Wesleyans and Independents, a free grammar school and other charities. Area of par. 6440 ac. P. 2223.

REPUBLICAN FORK, a river, U. States, rises in Nebraska territory about 30° 30' N., lon. 102° 30' W., flows N.E. flowing on the right Salomon's Fork, and the Grand Saline Fork, and finally after a course of nearly 300 m., unites with the Neosho HILL Fork in forming the Kansas.

REPULAE BAY—1, British N. America, at the S. extremity of Melville peninsula lat. 66° N., lon. 56° 30' W.—2 A bay, Australia, N.E. coast; lat. 30° 30' S. Its shores are low, but the hills adjoining rise to a great height. Repulse islands are in this bay, they are of small size.

REQUENA, a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. Casena, and 44 m. W. Valencia. It was formerly a place of great strength, and there are still some traces of the walls round the old town with a portion of the citadel. It has a variety of educational establishments, an hospital, three parish churches, a nursery two suppressed convents, one of them converted into a townhouse, and the other, which stands on an eminence overlooking the town, into a barracks. The chief branches of industry are agriculture and silk manufactures, there are 650 looms for cottons, gros, and serges, &c., several dyeworks, &c., and altogether about 1500 persons are employed in the different processes connected with these manufactures. Besides, there are 10 saw-mills, one for oil, two brandy stills, a soap and varnish-mill, and a distillery. Agricultural produce, as well as the products of manufacturing industry, are exported to Valencia and Cadiz. Pop. 13,364.

REBIZ, a tn. and par Portugal, prov Beira-Alta, about 6 m. N Viseu. Pop. 750.

REBIZ, par Scot. Kirkcubright 16 m. by 6 m. Pop. 1785.

REBOBIE, par Scot. Foch, 9 m. by 2 1/2 m. Pop. 711.

REBOLD, a tn. in Persia, cap prov Gilan, 150 m. N W Teheran, near the Bay of Resaleh, Caspian Sea. The houses here are of a very superior construction, and the streets generally well paved; but the whole town is so enveloped by trees, that no idea of its full extent can be formed from its appearance, taken in any one point of view. The bazaars are extensive, regular clean, paved, and well kept, but not entirely covered from the weather, a part of them, however, is shut in by gates. Beggars are more numerous and importunate here than in any other town in Persia, the streets and bazaars swarm with the most miserable and loathsome objects, forcing themselves not only into view of, but into contact with, the persons they meet. The present town is comparatively modern, having been built near the site of a more ancient city about 280 years ago. Pop. estimated at 50,000.

REBOLCA, two nearly contiguous places, Hungary.—1 (Female) A vil. Thither Thais, co. Krasova, on the Berava, 9 m. from Dognas, with a Catholic church and valuable iron-mines. Pop. 1008.—2 (Old or Walodok) also on the Berava. It has a Waldsien church. Pop. 905.

REBINA, a tn. Naples, prov and 6 m. S E Naples, on the gulf of that name. It stands about 70 ft. above the site of the ancient Herculaneum, and contains two churches and a convent. There are numerous fine villas in its environs. Pop. 8900.

RESINAR, ROMAN, or STATERDOEF a vil Austria, Tranyvanya, r bank Sebet, 9 m. S W Hermannstadt; with two Greek churches, and a trade in wood. Pop. 605.

RESITA, an important tn. Russia, gov and 145 m. N W Vitebsk, cap viceroy. The current contains several large lakes, is well wooded and has a light sandy soil, not well adapted for wheat, but productive of rye and buck-wheat. Pop. about 57,000.

REBOLIS, par Scot. See KIRKCUHRIGHT and CUTHBERTON. Pop. 1651.

RESOLUTION BAY, Marquesa Islands W side of Isl. Rapa Orotia.

RESOLUTION ISLAND—1 An Isl. N America, entrance to Hudson Bay—lat 51° 30' N lon 64° 50' W. Length, 40 m.; breadth, 35 m.; with a cape of same name on its N.E. side.—2 A lagoon lat Archipelago lat. 17° 25' S, lon 143° 24' W small and low and thinly inhabited.

RESTON, two par. Eng. Lincoln.—1, (North) 703 ac. Pop. 47.—2 (South) 710 ac. Pop. 180.

RESTORATION ISLAND, a small Isl. E. coast, Australia; lat 12° 37' 30" S lon 143° 37' E. about 9 m. in diameter. It is a more granite rock with a very scanty covering of soil, but produces a few small trees, and some fruits. Water is abundant, and on the shores oysters are plentiful.

RESULTANA, a tn. Sicily, prov and 14 m. N Calatamara, r bank Salvo. Pop. 2000.

RETHNOI a cape, Siberia. E. coast, at the mouth of the Anadyr; lat 68° 45' 44" N lon 176° 45' 69" E.

RETFORD (East) a par. bor., market tn., and par England, co. and 23 m. E N E Nottingham, pleasantly situated on the railway from London to York, the Chesterfield Canal, and on the Linc. here crossed by a bridge connecting it with West Retford. It consists of several streets, well built and paved, and a market-place lined by good houses, and has a large and handsome parish church, partly ancient and partly modern, with a lofty tower, Rector Baptist, Independent, and Wesleyan chapels, a free grammar-school, a workhouse, hospital, and several almshouses, and a considerable trade in horses, cattle, cheese, and hops. East Retford from a very early period, enjoyed the privilege of sending a member to the House of Commons, but owing to the corrupt practices which prevailed, the franchise was, in 1826, thrown open to the hundred of Basewick. Pop. in 1843, parish and bor. 44,054.

RETHFOR (West), par Eng. North, 1080 ac. P. 653.

RETHLO (anc. Rhegium), a tn. France, dep. Ardennes, beautifully situated on a height above r bank Aisne, which is here navigable. It has wide and regular streets, but the houses, generally of wood, are very indifferent. It has two long public squares, in one of which, forming the market place, is an extensive building in which the markets are held; three churches, one of which has four towers, and is surmounted by a handsome belfry; manufactures of woollen cloth, such as mere shawls, cambrics, and hosiery; famous tanneries, and a worsted mill, and a trade in woollen cloth, iron nails, corn, wine, brandy, groceries, &c. Pop. 7507.

RETHLOIS, an ancient dist. France, which belonged to prov Champagne, and now forms the S W part of dep. Ardennes. Rethal was its capital.

RETHM a vil Hanover, gov Luneburg 33 m. N W Hanover. L bank Aller. It has a church and a customs-house. Pop. 1540.

RETHY WARRENCK, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov and 20 m. E. by N Antwerp with several cloth factories a tannery a brewery an oil, three corn mills, and a dyework. Pop. 2504.

RETHMO or RETHMO a seaport in Isl. Candia, E coast, 40 m. W tn. of Candia lat. 25° 22' 17" N lon 24° 38' 19" E. It extends a considerable way along the shore is well built, and defended by a citadel. The port is now of little utility being nearly choked up with sand, so that a vessel drawing more than 6 ft. water cannot enter. It has no export trade, the inhabitants being for the most part, employed in agriculture, gardening and making soap from olive-oil or in the culture of the vine, the produce of which is commonly sent to Candia.

RETSER, or RECSA a market in Hungary Hither Danube, co. and 2 m. from Presburg. It has a parish church and produces some excellent wine. Pop. 2197.

RETSKP a vil Hungary Hither Thais, co. Heves, on the bank of Mures Major, above the Paradisek, with a church and sundried spring. Pop. 1185.

RETTEDDON par Eng. Essex. 8833 ac. Pop. 817.

RETTIROVA a vil Hungary Thither Thais, co. Te me war, about 4 m. from Verres, with a handsome Greek non-mixed parish church. Pop. 1184.

RETTZ, an ancient dist. France, which belonged to prov Bretagne and now forms the S.W. part of dep. Loire-Inférieure.

RI TZ, or RITZ a tn. Lower Austria, 80 m. N W Vienna. It is walled has several suburbs, an old church chapel townhouse hospital and Dominick monastery, with a library and small cabinet of minerals and coins, and considerable trade in wine, some of which, produced in the district ranks among the best in Austria. Pop. 2777.

RETTZ ALH a market in Bavaria, circle Lower Fran conia, on a height above the Main over which there is here a ferry 9 m. N W Würzburg. It has a church, to which numerous pilgrimages are made several mills and a trade in wine. Pop. 1080.

RETTZSTALF a vil Bavaria, Lower Franconia, dist. and near Carlsbad, with a church several mills and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1983.

REUDNITZ, a vil Saxony, circle and near Leipzig. Pop. 2248.

REULI a tn. France dep. Indre, 9 m. N Issoudun, on the Loire. It contains a curious old edifice, which bears the name of Grande Maison and has some trade in corn and wine. Near it is an ancient Gothic church and at no great distance stands the fine chateau of Ferri-Renilly. Pop. 2201.

REULMARE, or NAST ARATON, a vil. Austria, Triun sylva, co. Niederwiesenberg dist. Zalsbach, near the river of same name 18 m. N W Althudbach. It consists of four distinct portions, with several churches, and a parish frying spring.

REUNION (ILE-DE-LE) a name given to the Island of Bourbon in 1793 and resumed since the Revolution in France in 1848.

REU, a city, Spain, Catalonia, prov and 10 m. W Taragona, in a plain at the base of a chain of hills, about 4 m. from the Mediterranean. It was once well protected by fortifications, so may be seen from their remains. It is divided into two parts, the ancient and the modern, the latter being distinguished by the superior architecture of the houses, and by the greater regularity of the streets. In the former is the principal square, surrounded by spacious colonnades, serving as a promenade to ranges of shops, and in all well-stocked farming the great centre of attraction to men of business as well as others. Most of the squares are used as market-places, and among them are distributed 18 public fountains of various forms. Among the public institutions and edifices the most worthy of notice are the townhouse, a spacious structure of the Tuscan order, with magnificent halls, adorned with statues and pictures; the new and extensive public prison an asylum for orphans of both sexes as hospital in the old convent of Carmelites, supported by revenues of its own, among others, the profits of the public theatre, which belongs to it; the parish church, of simple Gothic architecture, with a lofty hexagonal tower; a Franciscan convent, one of the finest in the province, now occupied with primary schools and a college; the theatre, capable of containing 1500 persons, and the barracks, a grandiose edifice of regular and solid architecture, with accommodation for two full battalions of infantry and two squadrons of cavalry. There are besides numerous other schools and colleges, both public and private, and several chapels. Agriculture employs a considerable number of hands, but the principal branches of industry are the manufacture of cotton and silk stuffs, tanning and dressing leather making coats of all sizes, soft soap, fine earthenware, bleaching yarn and flax, and making machines for carding cotton. There are upwards of 5000 handlooms, for all kinds of cloths, plain and striped cottons and mixtures of silk and cotton, factories for silk ribbons, and headkerchiefs, silk cord damasks, and velvets, dye-works, brandy distilleries, oil-mills innumerable, &c. There are 60 works for cotton fabrics alone. Reus imports fine sheep, cattle, swine, cotton, hemp, silk, dye-stuffs, wool, iron, flaxseed, hides, &c. and exports, besides the produce of industry, brandies, and other spirituous wine, silks, almonds, oil, shoe-leather soap &c. weekly market on Monday which regulates the prices of various articles, such as breadstuffs, silks, almonds, and other fruits, throughout the peninsula. Reus, during the Peninsular war was impoverished by the exactions of the French under Mandarville, and its trade seriously damaged by the English blockade. Pop. 35,048.

REUS.—Town House, View in Spain.

REUSCH (AAR and REZ) two nearly contiguous villa. Austria, Moravia, circles and 15 in S. Igien. They have two parish churches, and fine rock-crystals are found in the vicinity. Pop. about 1700.

REUSCH (TWE), (Latin, Rues and Uria) a river Switzerland, rises in Lake Lucerne, in Mount St. Gothard where within a distance of 10 m., the Rhine, Rhone, and Ticino, with innumerable small tributaries, have their source. It first consists of three small torrents, which unite in the valley of Uria, on Uri, through which it dashes along with great rapidity in a N.W. direction, and falls into the E. extremity of the Lake of Lucerne, from the N.W. extremity of which, at the town of Lucerne, it emerges a navigable river; proceeds for a short way N.W. till it reaches its most important tributary, the Emme, then turns N.E., and lastly, in N.W. traverses one. Aargau, and joins R. bank Aar, near Windisch, total course, about 100 m. In the upper part of its course it falls rather than flows, descending 2000 ft. before it reaches Uria, and 2600 ft. more before it reaches the lake, and forming numerous magnificent cascades.

REUSCH, three principalities of Central Germany, somewhat intermingled with other territories, but lying between Saxony, Bavaria, and the Rhenish duchies, and belonging to an older and a younger line, the former of which holds the 80th, and the latter the 81st place in the Germanic Confederation; area of the whole principality, 480 geo. sq. m. The territory of the older line, usually called the principality of Reuss-Greitz, consists of the lordships of Greitz and Burgk, and has an area of 113 geo. sq. m. These lordships are separated from each other the one being traversed by the Elster while the other lies along both banks of the Saale. The surface is better adapted for pasture than agriculture, rearing great numbers of horned cattle and sheep, but scarcely raising grain sufficient to meet the consumption. The most important crops are potatoes and flax. Hops also are partially grown. The territories of the younger line form the two principalities of Reuss-Schleiz, and Reuss-Lobenstein-Ebersdorf the former having an area of 96 geo. sq. m. and the latter an area of 162 geo. sq. m., and in addition to these principalities include the lordship of Gera and the domain of Reuland, which, together have an area of 120 geo. sq. m. These territories are, on the whole, fertile, and well wooded, raise sufficient grain to supply the consumption, and possess among their minerals iron, which is generally worked, and roofing slate, which are extensively quarried. The two principalities of the younger line, though belonging to two different branches, rank only as one state, having only a single vote in the plenipotentiary of the Confederation. In the representative assembly the whole principalities only share one vote along with those of Hohensollern, Lichtenstein, Waldeck, and Lippe. The representatives of the older line were raised to the rank of princes in 1775—those of the younger line ranked only as counts in 1790 and 1806. Both lines, as well as the great majority of their subjects, are Protestants. Pop. 100,000.

REUSSENDORF a vil Prussia, gov. and S.W. Prussian with a castle, tile-works, and several mills. Pop. 1321.

REUTIGEN a vil and par Switzerland, on and 27 m. E.S.E. Bern, at the junction of the Summe with the Kander, at the entrance of the Stanzenthal and the foot of the Stockhorn. It has one of the most important horse and cattle fairs in the Oberland. Pop. 1212.

REUTLINGEN a m. Württemberg circle Schwarzwald, on the Ebnach, a small affluent of the Neckar 20 m. S. Stuttgart. It is surrounded by walls and ditches; has very narrow streets, contains four churches, one of them handsome; a townhouse, Latin school, and the ruins of an old castle; and has manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, fire-arms, glass, paper, and gunpowder; a ball-factory, a spinning, and several other mills. Reutlingen is the capital of the circle, and the seat of several courts and public offices. It is of considerable antiquity, and rose to be a free imperial city—a position which it long maintained. It was incorporated with Württemberg in 1803. Pop. 11,118.

REUTTER, a market in Austria, Tyrol, circle and 17 m. N. Inntal, R. bank Lech; with a church, a Franciscan monastery, an hospital, manufacture of cotton stuffs, and several breweries. Pop. 1218.

REV or VAU, a vil. Hungary, on Riber, on the Neplid Körös, 6 m. from Eled. It has a church, and some trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1176.

REVEL, a gov. Russia. See ERZARONA.

REVEL, or REVAL, a seaport in Russia, cap. gov. Revel or Rezhovsk, on a small bay in the Gulf of Finland, 300 m. W.R.W. Petersburg; lat. (St. Catharine church) 59° 24' N., lon. 24° 56' 10" E. It was once a city of some extent, surrounded by strong walls, fortified with bastions, of which part still remains. It consists of the town proper, and a large suburb built along the beach, and has tolerably well-built houses of brick, many of them of a very antique appearance; but the streets are narrow and long. It is the residence breweries, and tanneries. The articles of trade include, besides champagne wine, which is the most important of all, barley, corn, flour, colonial produce, combed wool, cotton twist, hemp, fax, leather and numerous articles of manufacture. Rheims is the seat of an archbishop, and possesses a court of assize, exchange, council of professors, diocesan university, secondary ecclesiastical school, and college. It is a place of great antiquity. Even before the Roman invasion it had acquired some importance, when it was known by the name of Durocoronum. At a later period it became the principal town of Belgica Galia, and was adorned by numerous handsome edifices. Christianity is said to have been introduced into it in 380, and its cathedral to have been founded about 400 by St. Nicaus, who perished shortly after in a massacre by the Vandals, who had made themselves masters of the town. St. Remi, one of his successors, converted and baptised Clovis, and almost all the Frankish chiefs in 496, after the battle of Tolbiac. Philip Augustus turned himself to be consecrated at Rheims in 1179, and the example has since been followed by his successors, with the exception of Henry IV. Rheims often suffered much from war and was repeatedly in possession of the English, who were finally expelled by the Maid of Orleans, in 1431. In 1814 the Russians gained possession of the town, but were shortly after surprised and driven out by Napoleon, whose success on this occasion is the last which he was destined to enjoy. Pop. 42,461.

RHEIN a river, Europe. See RHINE.
RHEINBACH a tn. Prussia, gov and 20 m. S. Cologne. It is walled entered by three gates has a justice-of-peace court, and several public offices, two R. Catholic churches, manufacture of woollen and linen cloth, iron, and leather and a trade in cattle. There is here a Roman aqueduct. P. 1826.
RHEINBEK, a vil. Denmark, duchy Holstein, cap. bail of its name. In a finely wooded valley watered by the Bille, over which there is here a bridge, 9 m. S.E. Hamburg. It is a well-built place, and contains an old castle, now partly used as a courthouse. The half-way is the most R. in the duchy area, 40 sq. m. Pop. bail, 5300.
RHEINBERG a tn. Prussia gov and 24 m. N.W. Düsseldorf on the Old Rhine with a Protestant and a R. Catholic church manufacture of woollen and linen cloth, and a cotton-mill. It existed in the time of the Romans was afterwards fortified, and was repeatedly besieged. P. 2575.
RHEINBOLLERN a vil. Rhineland Prussia, gov and 25 m. S. Coblenz with two churches, two mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1061.

RHEINREITBACH, a vil. Rhineland Prussia gov and 25 m. N.W. Coblenz, near 1 bank Rhine with a R. Catholic church, viaduct and iron works, saw-mill-furnace and copper-mines. Pop. 1035.

RHEINROLL, a vil. Rhineland Prussia, gov Coblenz, church and near Newwied, on the Rhine with a R. Catholic church. Pop. 1341.

RHEINE, a tn. Prussia, prov Westphalia, gov and 23 m. N.W. Münster 1 bank Rhine. It contains a castle, the residence of the Duke of Loos-Corwarren, five churches, an old Franciscan monastery an orphan and an ordinary hospital and has manufactures of woollen and linen cloth, a printworks, tanneries, chisery-factory and several mills. In the neighbourhood are limestone-quarries and salt-springs. Pop. 2554.

RHEINECK, a tn. Switzerland, cant. and 10 m. E.N.E. St. Gall, beautifully situated among vineyards and orchards 1 bank Rhine, a little above its entrance into the Lake of Constance. It has a handsome church, a townhouse, hospital, and orphan asylum, manufactures of linen and cotton goods, and a considerable trade. Considerably above the church stand the ruins of an old castle. Pop. 1211.

RHEINFELDEN, a tn. Switzerland, cant. Aargau, 1 bank Rhine, here crossed by a wooden bridge, 9 m. E. Basel. It is walled has a large and handsome church, a tobacco-factory an oil and a paper mill, and a considerable general trade. The river both above and below the bridge, is embanked by rocks, which form rapids and falls, and on an island in its course stand the ruins of the feudal castle of Hohen. In a battle fought here in 1688, during the Thirty Years war, by Duke Bernard of Saxe-Weimar, the Duke of Rohan was slain. During the Austrian dominion, Rheinfelden was one of the four Waldstätten. Pop. 1821.

RHEINGAU (Rhein valley), a territory in the S. part of duchy Nassau, extending along the R. bank of the Rhine for about 15 m. between Biebrich and Rüdelsheim, in the bailwicks of Wiesbaden, Eltville, and Riedelsheim. It is equally distinguished by its beauty and fertility; produces excellent wine and fruit, and maintains a very dense population.

RHEINHEIM, a tn. Nassau-Darmstadt, prov. Hesse-Darmstadt, 10 m. S.E. Darmstadt. It is walled, and has two churches, a synagogue, and several mills. Pop. 1196.

RHEINMAGEN, a tn. Prussia. See REINMAGEN.

RHEINSBERG, a tn. Prussia, prov Brandenburg, gov and 40 m. N. Potsdam on a lake of same name, where the Rhine issues from it. It has a church, and a castle with a park, in which are statues of Prince Henry of Prussia, and Augustus William, and monuments to several of the distinguished soldiers who fell in the Seven Years war. Frederick the Great spent his youth here. Pop. 2169.

RHEINZABERN, a tn. Bavaria, Palatinate, on the Elzelsbach, here crossed by a bridge, 9 m. S.E. London. It has a mill. Pop. 1965.

RHEINECK, a tn. Prussia, prov Westphalia, gov and 8 m. S.W. Minden, 1 bank Weser a little above the confluence of the Weser. It has extensive mill-works, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1912.

RHEINEN, or RHEINEN a tn. Holland, prov and 21 m. E. E. Utrecht, 1 bank Rhine. It is an old place, was formerly walled and had three gates, which were destroyed in 1640. It has a spacious market-place, surrounded with houses, a townhall, weigh-house, a church and a school. Agriculture tobacco-growing, and some trade are carried on. Pop. 1468.

RHEINISH BAVARIA. See RHEINISCH.

RHEINISH HESSE, a prov. Hesse-Darmstadt (which see) RHEINISH PRUSSIA Germany. See PRUSSIA.

RHEINE, a tn. Rhineland Prussia, gov and 5 m. S. Coblenz, on the Rhine, over which there is here a ferry. It is an old place, built almost entirely of wood, and has a R. Catholic church. Near it stood formerly the Klingenberg (King's Seat), where the electors used to meet and deliberate on the affairs of the empire. It was an octagonal, open-roofed building, supported by eight pillars in the circumference, and one in the centre with seven stone-steps round the sides for the electors. Many treaties of peace were concluded and emperors elected and dethroned here. It was pulled down in 1807 but was rebuilt, partly from the old materials, in 1843. Pop. 1480.

RHEYDT, a tn. Rhineland Prussia, gov and N.W. Cologne, church Gladbach, on the Rhine. It has a castle, two churches, manufacture of cotton, silk and mixed silk goods, soap, glass, and vinegar a tannery numerous dye-works, and a trade in linen. Pop. 3576.

RHIN, RHINE, or RYN, a river Prussia, issues from a chain of lakes, on the frontiers of Mecklenburg, flows S., passing Rainsberg and Alt-Ruppin, expands into several lakes, flows W., and after a course of about 70 m. pour bank Havel on the frontiers of Prussian Saxony. It is called by a canal at Ruppin with the upper course of the Havel.

RHIN (RAB) or LOWER RHINE, a dep. France, bounded, N. by Rhineland Prussia and dep. Moselle, E. by the Rhine, separating it from the grand duchy of Baden, S. dep. Hesse-Nassau; and W. dep. Vosges, Meurthe, and Moselle, greatest length, S. to N. 60 m., average breadth, about 23 m.; area, 1777 sq. m. In the W. it is mountainous, being crossed by the chain of the Vosges, which traverses it S. to N. in a direction nearly parallel to that of the Rhine, towards which the departments has a general slope, the mountains, which are generally clothed with forests, gradually descending into lower hills, on which the vine is extensively cultivated, and finally merging into plains, which, on approaching the river, occasionally become more swampy. The greater part of the department is drained directly by the Rhine, but it also receives within its numerous tributaries, of which the most important is the Ill. More than one-third of the whole surface is arable, and one-fourth is in wood. The mountainous districts are necessarily devoted to pasture, but the soil in the plains, which tend to lie above the river is not to be swampy is very fertile, and yields good crops of all kinds of grain, though not in sufficient quantity to meet the home consumption. Madder and tobacco also are extensively cultivated, and in particular districts excellent hops are grown. In some cantons cabbages are grown on a large scale, and employed in making the well-known cheese (German, saure Sauerkraut), which forms an important article of traffic, particularly at Strasbourg. The principal mineral is iron, which is extensively worked, and there are also traces of silver, lead, antimony, and manganese. Excellent quarries of building-stone and gypsum, and good beds of potter's-clay are found in several districts. A little coal also is raised. The manufactures consist chiefly of iron, fine broad-cloths, linen, calicoes, straw hats, leather, gloves, starch, all kinds of hardware implements and utensils, fire-arms, and cutlery. The trade, which is greatly favoured by several canals, but more particularly by that which connects the Rhine with the Rhine, is important. The principal articles are corn, brandy, wine, beer, cherry-brandy, vinegar, oil, cheese, tobacco, madder hemp, iron and ironware, wood, hams and poultry. The great majority of the inhabitants is Protestant. The department is divided into four arrondissements—Strasbourg, the capital, Reims, Metz, and Wissembourg—subdivided into 88 cantons and 542 communes. 1 pop. (1852) 587,433.

RHIN (HAUT) or UTRUS RHENI a dep. France, bounded N. by Bas-Rhin. The Rhine separating it from the grand duchy of Baden, S. Switzerland and dep. Doubs, and W. Haut-Rhin and Vosges, greatest length N to S, 65 m., average breadth, 30 m., area, 1658 sq. m. The surface in the S. and W. is almost entirely covered by mountains which take a N direction, and belong to the chain of the Vosges though on the S. they join with the chain of the Jura. These mountains form the W. limit of the basin of the Rhine, so which the whole department belongs with exception of a small portion in the S. which belongs to the basin of the Rhodan. Between the Rhine, the only river of any consequence in the tributary the Ill, but the most important water communication is furnished by the Rhine and Rhone canal by which an uninterrupted communication between these magnificent rivers has been established. Considerably more than one-third of the surface is arable and rather more than one-fourth is in wood. About one-eighth consists of meadow and pasture. A great part of the wood is in the long and somewhat narrow tract which lies between the Ill and the Rhine, and contains several extensive forests, of which the largest, that of the Hark, has an area of more than 35,000 acres. The arable land is generally fertile, and produces corn in sufficient quantity to leave a surplus for exportation. Besides grain, the principal products are potatoes, of excellent quality hemp and madder, and a considerable quantity of tobacco is grown. About 25,000 acres are in vineyards. The wine none of which bears a high name, is chiefly consumed within the department, but part is exported to Switzerland and Germany. The minerals include silver, lead, copper, iron, antimony, asphalt, gypsum, marble and potter's-clay. By far the most important of all is iron. The manufactures consist chiefly of the broad-cloth, linen, hangings, cloth, printed goods, both linen, cotton, and silk, carried on extensively in Colmar, Millersheim, Thann, &c.; stained paper, straw hats, hosiery leather, mineral acids, soap, household utensils, ironmongery clock-work, and porcelain stoves. In several districts there are extensive cotton-mills, dye-works, sugar-refineries, breweries, distilleries, potteries, blast-furnaces, and other iron-works. The trade is in corn, wine, brandy, kirschwasser, steel, ironmongery, cotton, and other prints, fruit-trees, cattle, &c. The majority of the inhabitants is R. Catholic, but the number of Protestants is very considerable. The language generally spoken is German, though for the most part in a very impure form. For administrative purposes, the department is divided into three arrondissements—Colmar, the capital, Altkirch, and Belfort, subdivided into 29 cantons and 490 communes. Pop. (1852), 494,147.

REIN see Scot. Parth.; 4 m. by 1 m. Pop 388.

REIN (Latin, Rein, German, Rein, Dutch Rijn, Italian, Reno) the most splendid river of Germany is also one of the most important rivers of Europe, as its direct course is 418 m., and its indirect course 635 m. — the number of its tributaries, great or small, 12,300, and the area of its basin, 54,350 sq. m. It is formed in the Swiss cant.

Grison by three main streams, called the Vorder, Mittel, and Hinter Rhine, or the Lower Middle, and Upper Rhine. The Vorder Rhine rises in Mount Crispal, N. E. of St. Gothard, and derives its water from three sources. The first issues from Lake Toma and Paldalen at the foot of the Malinthalcrab, and is afterwards augmented from the Badol glacier; the second rises at Monte-de-la-Rhin-de-Revocon, and the third at the foot of the Gröden Alps. These three sources, of which the second traverses the Val Gröden, and the third the Kitzbühel, become united at Canot (Chumant). The Mittel Rhine leaves from Lake Skur in the Dietsch, W. of the Lukmaderberg, traverses the Muddelthal and joins the Vorder Rhine at Disentis, from which the united stream is called only Vorder Rhine. It takes an E. direction, and at Reichenau unites with the Hinter Rhine, which leaves from the Rheinwald glacier in Mount Adels on the Vogelsberg, and has a course of about 70 m. through the Bodensee, before reaching Reichenau. Here the three united streams take the common name of Rhine, have a width of 130 to 140 ft. and admit of floating. The Rhine first becomes properly navigable at Colre after receiving the Pleiser. It now turns N., and shortly after being augmented by the Leinacher, quits the Gröden, forms the boundary between Sax. S. Hall on the left, and Liechtenstein and Vorarlberg on the right, receiving the Ill from the latter, and along with several minor streams, forms the Bodensee or Lake of Constance, contained by the Zeller or Untersee. On leaving from the Lutersee it flows W. separating Switzerland from the grand duchy of Baden, and continues its course to Schaffhausen and Basel, receiving as it proceeds, on the left, the Goldach, Thur, Thode, Glis and Aar, and on the right, the Waichen and Alb, mountain streams of the Black Forest. At Basel it again begins to flow N., separates the French dep. Upper and Lower Rhine from Baden forms the boundary between the latter and Elsass, flows thereabout through the grand duchy of Hesse, forms the boundary first between Hesse and Baden, and then between Hesse and the Prussian Rhineish province, till it wholly enters the latter at Coblenz. During the course from Basel now described it receives from France the Ill and several little streams from Baden the Wiese, Elz, Kinzig, Murg, Pfalz, and Neckar from Rhineish Bavaria, the Lauter and Quench from Rheinhessen, the Main from Nassau, the Lahn, and passes Germersheim, where it divides into a number of arms which afterwards unite, Strasbourg, Spire, Mannheim, Worms, Mainz, Biberach and Bingen. In Rhineish Prussia it receives on the W. the Weier, Sieg, Wupper, Eder and Lippe, and on the E. the Nahe, Moselle, Ahr, and Riff, and flows past the towns of Neuwied, Bonn, Cologne, Düsseldorf, and Weel. Thereafter below Emmerich, it enters the Dutch prov. Gelderland and shortly after divides into two branches, S. and N. The S., called the Waal carries off two-thirds of its water, empties twice with the Maas and as the Old Maas, falls under the name of Merwe into the North Sea. The N. branch after making several windings in its course to Arnhem, but still retaining the name of Rhine, divides in front of Weert, before reaching Arnhem, into two branches, O. and N. The one on the E. proceeds as the New IJssel, in the bed of the canal which reaches dug to connect the Rhine with the Old IJssel till it reaches Dordrecht where the New and Old IJssel unite to pour their accumulated waters into the Zuider sea. The L. arm proceeds under the name of Rhine in a course nearly parallel to the Waal, passing near Wageningen and Rheneen to Wyk by Dordrecht, where it again bifurcates sending a very feeble branch, under the name of the Crooked Rhine, to Utrecht, where by the canal of Vaart it communicates with the much larger branch which had taken the name of Lech, and flowing past Naumen and Schoonhoven, unites with the Maas above Grimsen op-de-Lek. The Crooked Rhine becomes little better than a ditch, on leaving Utrecht it proceeds towards Leyden, and at the beginning of this country, was lost in a sand d. little beyond Katwijk—see the Rhijn. At an earlier period it had here found an outlet into the Ocean, and in more recent times, after surmounting many difficulties, the lost water of the Rhine has been collected in a canal, and, by the aid of three stupendous the outlet has again been established. The breadth of the Rhine and the character of its channel, differ much at different parts of its long course. Its breadth at Basel is 750 ft.; between Strasbourg and Spire, from 1080 to 1200 ft., at Mainz, 1600 to 1700 ft.; and at Basselandmark, where it enters the Netherlands, 3150 ft. Its depth varies from 2 to 23 ft. and at Düsseldorf amounts even to 50 ft. From the Lake of Constance to Basel it has a very rocky bed but, lower down, contains numerous islands, partly composed of sand and clay. From Barmen several of the islands are clothed with herbage, and even admit of cultivation, between Strassburg and Germersheim they form chains of low-lying hills. The Rhine abounds with fish, including salmon and salmon trout, but more especially sturgeon, lamprey, pike, and carp. Wild fowl also abound on its banks and countless islands. Some gold is contained among the sands brought down into it from the mountains of Switzerland and of the Black Forest.

The navigation of the Rhine is very important, particularly for W Germany. As already mentioned it first becomes navigable at Cologne, in the Graess; but the continuous and unobstructed navigation does not begin till below Biehlhausen, and the traffic is loaded vessels is not important above Spire. From Strassburg to Mentz, the bottom of the vessels in which it is carried is from 100 to 125 tons; from Mentz to Cologne, 185 to 200, and from Cologne to Holland, from 200 to 450 tons. The navigation is rendered dangerous by waterfalls, more especially those of Biehlhausen, of Lutzerath, near the mouth of the Wutach, of Lamsberg and of Rheinfelden. It is also rendered dangerous by the Bingerloch, near Bingen, where the stream becomes suddenly narrowed and confined between lofty precipices, and, by Rheinfelden, though as a less degree, at Biehlhausen, St. Clair and at Lohr.

The Rhine is distinguished alike by the beauty of its scenery and the rich fields and vineyards which clothe its banks. Hence, no river in Germany more especially since the introduction of steam-vessels, attracts so many tourists. From Basel to Mentz it flows through a wide valley bounded on the l. by the Vosges, and on the r. by the Black Forest, and the mountains along the Bergstrasse. From Mentz the mountain ridges approach the stream at first only on the r. bank, where they form the Bingerloch, but at Bingen they begin to hem in the l. bank also, and continue from thence to Koblentz to present a succession of lofty mountain summits, high precipices, and wild, romantic views. Pleasant towns and villages lie nestled at the foot of lofty hills above them, on all sides, rise rocky steep slopes, clothed with vines, and every now and then the castles and fortresses of feudal times are seen springing from precipices apparently inaccessible. At times the chain of ridges on either side opens out, and allows the eye to wander into romantic valleys, along which tributaries of less or greater magnitude keep dashing down, or gradually winding to the parent stream. On the river itself much additional variety and beauty are given to the scenery, by the constant recurrence of picturesque and verdant islands. The elevation of the Rhine above sea-level is at the Col d'Obere Alp, 9967 ft. at Ruchman, 2021 ft. at Constance, 1335 ft. at Basel, 771 ft. at Kobl, 468 ft., and at Cologne 121 ft.

RHINE (PROVINCE OF THE), or RUHRIG PRINCE (German, Rhein Province), a prov. Prussia, between France, Belgium, Holland, Hanse Dominions, Nassau, Hanse-Lomburg, Oldenburg, Bavaria, and prov. Westphalia. Area, 6798 sq. m. In the S. it is hilly, being pervaded by the ranges of Hohen-Venn, Kiffel, Hoch-wald, Eder-wald, and Hunsrück. It is watered by the Rhine, the Moselle, and some affluents of the Moselle. The proportion of unproductive land is very small. Grain, potatoes, flax, hemp, tobacco, hops, oil-seeds, grapes and other fruits are cultivated, and horned cattle, horses, sheep, goats, and swine, are extensively reared. It is the most important mineral district in the kingdom, iron, copper, lead, coal, zinc, gypsum, clay, marble, alabaster, and porphyry, being wrought, and it is likewise a most active manufacturing district, there being numerous iron-works and machine-shops, chemical works, sugar refineries, glass works, porcelain-works, cotton, woollen, linen, and silk spinning and weaving factories and paper mills, falling, saw, and grain mills; with above 2000 breweries, and above 3000 distilleries. It is divided into the five governments (Regierungsbezirk), of Cologne; Düsseldorf, Aachen, or Aix-la-Chapelle; Trier or Treves and Coblenz. Pop. (1849), 2,811,173, of whom 808,908 are Protestants, 2,114,286 Roman Catholics; and 29,451 Jews.

RHINEBERG, a vil U. States, New York, 85 ft. S. Albany, 1 bank Hudson; with three churches, a academy an iron-foundry and a paper-manufactory. Pop. 1500.

RHIO Rio, or Rho, a prov. Dutch possessions, in the Indian Archipelago, comprising the Rhio Archipelago, the Lings Islands; area, 2877 sq. m. It is bounded, N. by the Straits of Singapore and Malacca, E. by the China Sea, S. and W. by the sea which washes the shores of Sumatra.

RHIO, Rio, or Rho, an isl. group, Indian Archipelago, in the Dutch possessions, lying chiefly S. and E. from Singapore. The chief island is Rintang, sometimes also called Rhio, besides which the group includes Galang, Gampang, Battam, and numerous smaller islands, both at a distance from and close to their shores. The navigation among them is very intricate. The group is separated into two sections by the Strait of Rhio, which passes between Rintang on the E. and Galang and Battam on the W.

RHIO Rio, or Rho, a seaport in Indian Archipelago, 50 m. S.E. Singapore, on the small island of Pulo-Pinang, which has in an indentation on the S. side of Battam, from which it is separated only by a narrow channel. It is a nest-looking town arranged, with great regularity, in two divisions, the European clean and handsome, and the Chinese, or native, rather dirty. It is defended by a fort, built of large stones brought from Malacca when that place was occupied by the Dutch in 1824. It has many good buildings, among which are the governor's house, a stone Protestant church and a school. Its haven is rocky and in S. during October and November, may be seen 80 to 100 large and small vessels. Through Chumbe, Bangloose, and Arabian merchants, a considerable trade is carried on with China, Annam, Siam, Borneo, Celebes, Java, Sumatra, Singapore, Penang, and even the W. Indies. It was declared a free port in 1894.

RHIO par Walo, Garmatov; 1658 ad. Pop. 578. RHIO or Rio a vil and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. and 9 m. W. N. Milan, 7 bank Lura, with a large church, founded by Cardinal Carlo Borromeo, a masonry college, and a large educational establishment. Pop. 8715.

RHODDA or Rhodda, an isl. Egypt, in the Nile, opposite Cairo, 2 m. long. It contains the palace's garden.

RHODE (RHO GERMANY) a vil and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, 7 m. S. Brussels. It has manufactures of paper, breweries, corn-mills, and a trade in wool, &c. Pop. 2800.

RHODE ISLAND, the smallest of the U. States of N. America lat. 41° 23' to 41° 3' N. lon. 71° 6' to 71° 38' W. and bounded, N. and E. by Massachusetts, N. the Atlantic, and W. Connecticut length, N. to S. 49 m. greatest breadth 32 m., area, 1340 sq. m. The surface, which in the N. is hilly and rugged, but elsewhere generally level, is divided into two parts by Narragansett Bay, a fine body of water about 30 m. long by 15 m. broad and containing several islands, and among others the one which gives the state its name. The principal rivers are the Pawtucket and the Pawtuxet, both affluents of the Providence, which falls into Narragansett Bay and the Pawtucket, which, after forming the boundary between this state and Connecticut, falls into Stonington Harbour. The climate, particularly that of Rhode Island (which has an area of 50 sq. m.), is mild and equable, and well adapted for its pleasant summer and temperate winters, for travellers from the S. The soil is only of moderate fertility but from careful and skilful cultivation raises good crops, particularly of Indian corn and oats. Maps factories, however, form the staple interest of the state; and cotton and woollen goods gave employment to numerous mills and factories, and a few vessels are built. The foreign trade, once considerable, has greatly decayed in consequence of the rivalry of neighbouring ports, possessed of greater advantages. The chief religious denominations are the Baptist, Congregationalists, Episcopalian, and Methodist. For the higher branches of education, the only collegiate institution is Brown University at Providence; the number of public school districts is 332, and the number of scholars under 15 years of age attending is 88,053. The government is vested in a governor, senate, and assembly, elected annually by universal suffrage. The most important town is Providence; but there is no proper capital, as the legislature holds its sittings not only at it, but also at Newport, and occasionally at South Kingston, Bristol, and East Greenwich. Rhode Island was first settled, in 1639, by a small colony headed by Roger Williams, who had been banished from Massachusetts for his religious opinions. William Giddings, with others banished for the same cause, joined him in 1638. A charter was afterwards obtained from Charles II. securing universal toleration, and vesting the government in a governor, deputy-governor, 10 assistants, and representatives chosen by the freemen of the several towns. The form of government conducted us force till 1841. P (1850), 147,544.

RHODEN, a principality Waldeck on a height, 25 m. W N W Cassel, with a church and a castle. Pop. 1689.

RHODES, a large and celebrated isl. and city in the Mediterranean, Asian Turkey, S coast, Anatolia from which it is separated by a channel 10 m. broad lat 35 52 to 36 28 N lon 27 40' to 28 15' E. 50 m. long S W to N E, and about 16 m. broad. Nearly in the centre of the island is Mount Artimus or Allayabo, 4008 ft. high. The land descends gradually towards the sea and forms a series of plains, constituting by much the larger proportion of the island. These plains being watered by numerous rivulets, are extremely fertile, but are almost entirely neglected. Corn, olives, cotton, wine, figs, oranges and other fruits, are amongst the principal productions of the first three, however, there is barely enough raised to supply the demands of the inhabitants, but of the remainder there are considerable quantities exported, which with the conveyance of goods from Smyrna, forms the chief occupation of the inhabitants. Pop 30,000.

The city of Rhodes stands at the most N part of the island, lat 36 28 05" N lon 28 16' E, and although it still has an imposing appearance, is greatly reduced from what it was by an ancient times not covering more than a fourth of its former area. The walls however, remain as they were they are encompassed by a fosse or ditch 70 ft. wide now dry. There are several churches erected in mosaic a convent, and the palace of the Grand Masters, a public library of about 1000 volumes placed in a neat building erected for that purpose; a college or medresa, attended by about 150 students and five other schools for boys, and six for girls. Its harbour formerly so famed is now half filled up with sand, and only accessible in small vessels. It is divided into two by a raised mole, on the end of which is a lighthouse and which protects the inner basin from all winds. It is supposed that the famous Colossus stood across the passage from the outer to the inner basin. The Colossus was made of brass, and was erected in honour of Apollo the tutelary deity of Rhodes and is said to have been 10 1/2 ft. high. It was set up about the year 278 a.d. and was thrown down by an earthquake 66 years thereafter, and lay where it fell for nearly 800 years, or till a.d. 567 when the island having been taken by the Saracens they broke the statue to pieces, and sold the brass. Rhodes was in ancient times one of the most celebrated states of Greece and particularly distinguished for its wealth, commerce, and naval power, being one of the last which surrendered to the Roman arms. It was no less distinguished for its superiority in art, science and literature all vestiges of which however disappeared under the barbarous sway of the Turks by whom it was taken in 1522. Pop. city 10,000.

RHODE Z, a n. France. See Rhodes.

RHODT, a vil. Bavaria, Palatinat, can and near Edenkoben, with a church and salt-stone quarries. Pop. 1482.

RHOD, or Rutenburg, a small mountain chain, Germany, in the E of Bavaria. It is connected at the N W. corner with the Spesshardt, whence it extends N E past Bruck on to Fladungen, and then turns N N W to Yach. Its S portion being the more elevated of the two, takes the name of Hohe Rhod and in its culminant point, Kreuzburg attains the height of 3100 ft. The forests are of limited extent and the whole country covered by the alums, is of a bleak and very forbidding aspect. The rocks consist chiefly of lava and basalt, the sources of which are still so visible that a great number of extinct volcanoes have been traced. There are no mountains of any consequence.

RHONA, (PLA) a vil. Hungary Thither Thais, co. Marmaros, 9 m. from Balghy with a church. Pop. 1141.

RHONAZZEK, a vil. Hungary Thither Thais, co. Marmaros, 12 m. from Balghy, with a Greek church, and extensive salt-mines. Pop. 1298.

RHONE, an E dep. France, bounded N by dep. Saône-et-Loire, E Ain and Isère, S. and W Loire. Its greatest W. 11

length, N to S, 51 m.; average breadth 20 m., area, 1066 sq. m. Its W boundary is formed by the Cevennes, which stretch along from N to S, and end on several minor branches. The surface gradually lowers towards the E, where its principal boundary is formed by the Rhona, and its tributary the Saône. About one-half of the surface is arable, one-ninth in vineyards, and one-eighth in wood. The principal crops are wheat, buckwheat and maize but the produce falls far short of the consumption. Potatoes are extensively cultivated, and all the fruits of France, with the exception of the orange and olive, are raised with success. Much of the wine produced is of excellent quality. A considerable portion of surface is devoted to the culture of the mulberry for the purpose of rearing silk worms. The minerals include coal but not to great extent, or of good quality; argentiferous lead and copper the mines of which, in the department, are the only ones in France which are worked to profit. There are also good quarries, both of building-stone and marble and beds of potter's clay. Manufactures have hitherto received great development. Those of silk are the most renowned in Europe, particularly for the finer class of goods. The other leading manufactures are muslin plain and embroidered, hats, woollen covers, tinsel, liqueurs, starch, paper glass, ironware, &c. The admirable advantages of this department in regard to water communication make it an important entrepot for the traffic both of the N and S of France. The principal articles in addition to those furnished by its own manufactures are corn flour, cheese, wine, branny colonial produce, &c. Dup. Rhone is divided into two arrondissements—Yonne, the capital and Villefranche, subdivided into 25 cantons, and 257 communes. Pop. (1852), 574,745.

RHONÉ (BOULEVARD) See Boulevard Rhoné.

RHONÉ (R) (anc. Rhodonis) a river, Europe, rises in Switzerland near the E frontier of the cant. Valais, in a glacier of its name between Mount Furca on the E. Gallenstock on the N. and Grimsal on the W. about 18 m. S W. the source of the Vorder-Rhone 5904 ft. above sea-level, dashes down with great rapidity into the valley leaving from cascade to cascade traverses the centre of Valais in a westerly direction and near Villeneuve enters the Lake of Geneva at its E extremity. The entering the lake its waters are charged with mud, but on issuing from it, at its S W extremity at the town of Geneva, it is of a pure deep blue colour, soon after changed into a muddy brown by the accession of the glacier-born Arve, which joins it 1 1/2 m. below Geneva. Proceeding S W to the frontiers of dep. Ain in France, it turns almost due S, forming the boundary between that department and Savoy then turning suddenly N W traces the boundary between the same department and dep. Isère and reaches Lyon. Here having at least doubled its volume by the accession of the Saône, it proceeds almost due S, separating depts. Rhone, Loire, Ariege, and Gard on the W. from depts. Loire, Drôme, and Vaucluse on the E. On approaching Avignon it takes a more circuitous but still N. course, separating dep. Gard from dep. Bouches du-Rhône, traverses part of latter department and finally falls into the Gulf of Lion in the Mediterranean. At Arles it divides into two branches, the loss of which under the name of Old Rhone, flows S W, forming the W side of the large delta, known by the name of the Ile de Camargue. The main branch under the name of Grand Rhone, continues the S. course, but again divides into two branches and enters the sea by two mouths. The most important towns watered by the Rhone are Lion and Geneva in Switzerland, and Lyon, Vienna, Tournon, Valence, Vienne, Pont St. Esprit, Avignon, Arles, Orange, Beaune, and Arles in France. The principal affluents are, on the right, the Valserine, Ain, Saône, Doux, Ecluz, Ardèche, Cèze, and Gard or Gardon; on the left, the Drôme, Valsaine, Arve, Fior, Guiers, Bormio, Gère, Gualme, Isère, Drôme, Rhône, Les Alpes, Isère, Saône, Doux, Ecluz, Ardèche, Cèze, and Gard or Gardon.

The most important towns watered by the Rhone are Lion and Geneva in Switzerland, and Lyon, Vienna, Tournon, Valence, Vienne, Pont St. Esprit, Avignon, Arles, Orange, Beaune, and Arles in France. The principal affluents are, on the right, the Valserine, Ain, Saône, Doux, Ecluz, Ardèche, Cèze, and Gard or Gardon; on the left, the Drôme, Valsaine, Arve, Fior, Guiers, Bormio, Gère, Gualme, Isère, Drôme, Rhône, Les Alpes, Isère, Saône, Doux, Ecluz, Ardèche, Cèze, and Gard or Gardon. The whole course is about 580 m. of which 900 m. are in Switzerland, and 280 m. in France. From its frontiers while 900 m. are navigable. The basin of the Rhone is bounded on the E. by the Lepontine, Pennine, Graian, Cottian, and Maritime Alps S.E. by the most southern ramifications of the Maritime Alps N by the Bernese Alps, Jura, Vosges, and Flandres and W by the Cevennes and Cévennes. The whole length of the basin from N to S, from the source of the Rhône to the Gulf of Lion, is 575 m. and the breadth, 55.

from the source of the Rhona W to that of the Grève, a tributary of the Rueda, 195 m. By means of a series of magnificent canals, the navigation of the Rhone has been continued, without interruption, to the Rhine, Seine, Loire, and Garonne.

RHONI a tn. Transcaucasian Russia, Imsetia, on the Kacha. It is the seat of an archbishop, and has a church; and a considerable trade in wine, silk, fruit, tobacco, and hemp.

RHONICEZ, or HANON, a vil. Hungary. Hither Danube, co. Szék, on the Hronos, 37 m. from Veszeli; with a church, and extensive coal and iron works. Pop. 1193

RHOON or RHOES a vil. Holland prov. S. Holland, 15 m. W N W Dordrecht with two churches, a school, a townhouse, and an old castle. Pop. (agricultural) 1255.

RHOCULLY par Wales, Glamorgan 3470 ac. P 567

RHOCOLYN par Wales, Anglesey 2580 ac. P 483

RHOSGOMWYTH, par Wales, Pembrokeshire; 2536 ac.

Pop. 301

RHODEMARKET par Wales, Pembrokeshire; 1759 ac.

Pop. 463.

RHODETTE, par Wales, Cardigan 1307 ac. P 123

RHOTAS, KARATAS, or ROTAKUR, a tn. Hindoostan, prov. Bahar, on an angle formed by the Sone and the junction of another stream, 73 m. S.E. Honours. The fortress occupies the flat summit of a mountain, accessible only by a steep ascent of 3 m. and entered by three gates, which rising one above another are defended by cannon and large stones ready to be rolled down. The battlements, though much disordered, are in many places entire, and the ruins of the palace, with its gardens and banks, as well as several Hindoo temples still existing, are very magnificent.

RHODDLAN a bor. port, and par N. Wales co. Flint. The town S on N N W St. Asaph and about the same distance from the sea, r. bank Clwyd is for the most part neatly built, has a church, and places of worship for Calvinistic Methodist Wesleyan, Baptists and Independents two national schools, the ruins of a magnificent castle, erected in 1015 the remains of an old Cistercian abbey and the first house of the building where King Edward I. held his parliament in 1285, when he passed the Statute of Rhoddlan, inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture Rhoddlan union with Flint &c., in returning a member to parliament. Pop. bor. 1472. Area of par., 5670 ac. Pop. 8049.

RHUN, or POLLU RHUN, one of the Molucca isles. Banda group. It lies 11 m. W Great Banda is about 3 m. long, and suffers from want of good fresh water. Its principal village is Lockem, whence there is a Dutch fort, and a small garrison. The population is small. Fish are plentiful on the coast, and large quantities in the jungle.

RHYD-BODRHA a hamlet, Wales co. Glamorgan on the R. has crossed by a bridge and on the Glamorgan canal. It contains a number of pleasing villas the ruins of an old castle, and a tidal spring. Pop. 1313

RHYL, a hamlet, N. Wales, co. Flint, 4½ m. N W St. Asaph, with a station on the Chester and Holyhead railway, much frequented during summer for sea-bathing

RHYNIF and DUNE, par Scot. Aberdeen Pop. 1017

RHYNNAS, or RHYNNAS of GALLOWAY a dist. Scotland, consisting of the remarkable peninsula in the N. W. of Wigtownshire, connected with the mainland by the isthmus between Looe Bay and Loch Ryan. It forms a long and comparatively narrow belt stretching about 37 m. from Corran point in the N. to the Mull of Galloway in the S., with a breadth in the N. part of about 5 m. and in the S. part of not more than 3 m. The coast is generally bold and rocky and the interior besides being finely diversified, consists for the most part of a dry loam well adapted for the turnip husbandry.

RIAJAK, a tn. Russia, gov. and 64 m. S.E.E. Riazan It is an ancient place, once surrounded by ramparts, of which part still exists. has four churches, an almshouse, and houses of convalescence and a general trade. Pop. (1849) 2254

RIAJA (RIAJA) (Cataluña) a tn. Spain, Gálizia, prov. and about 50 m. from Coruña; with a church, courthouse, primary school, and manufactures of coarse linen. P 1811

RIANCÓ LA-PUERTA, a tn. Spain, prov. and 59 m. N. E. Leon, in an angle formed by two arms of the Esla, near its confluence with the Tago. It occupies a healthy and unusually site, and has a church, courthouse, primary school, manufactures of agricultural implements; and some trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1215

RIANB (ann. Rhonoe) a tn. France, dep. Var, 23 m. N W Brignoles, with manufactures of hats and silk, and a considerable trade in corn. Pop. 2559

RIARDO, a tn. Naples, prov. Lavello, 11 m. N W Caserta, on a hill; with two churches, and a strong castle. Near it is a mineral spring, which both inasmuch and a very remarkable product. Pop. 580.

RIAZA, a tn. Spain, Old Castile, prov. Segovia, 57 m. N Madrid. It has a good modern townhouse, with prison attached, a granary an hospital an elementary school for each sex and several private schools a church with three naves, and in the vicinity two hermitages. The manufacture of coarse cloths and the cultivation of fine wools, are carried on. Pop. 2026

RIAZA a river Spain, formed by several small streams R. of Madrid prov. Segovia, Old Castile, N side Sierra Guadarrama. Flows circuitously N N W past the town of Riazan, and after a course of about 45 m. joins r. Henk Duero.

RIAZAN a gov. Russia, bounded N by Vladimir, N W Moscow W Tula, S. and E. Tambov, lat. 53° 20' to 54° 50' N, lon. 38° 15' to 41° E. greatest length N to S, 180 m. greatest breadth, 125 m. area, 11,568 geo. sq. m. The surface, nowhere mountainous, is finely diversified by numerous low hills and undulating plains, and has soil of remarkable fertility particularly on the N. In the N there are several extensive marshes. The only river of any importance is the Oka, which directly or by its affluents, drains the whole government, except a small part of the S. belonging to the basin of the Volga which there traverses a small part of the government and is connected with the Ufa by the Transvolga canal. Cereals of all kinds are produced in quantities greatly exceeding the home consumption. Hops and tobacco are also extensively grown, and exported to Petersburg and Moscow. About one-eighth of the whole surface is occupied by wood chiefly pine, with an intermixture of oak, lime, and birch. The pastures are particularly good, and great numbers of fine cattle are annually fattened. The rearing of bees forms an important occupation and furnishes a considerable export of honey and wax. The minerals of any value are almost confined to millstones, limestones and gypsum. The most important manufactures are linen and woollen. There are also extensive glass works, numerous tanneries, and several foundries. For administrative purposes, the government is divided into 13 districts, of which Riazan is the capital. Pop. (1850) 1,293,000

RIAZAN, a tn. Russia, dep. above gov. on the Trubezh, at the confluence of the Izhda, 105 m. S.W. Moscow. It is surrounded by palaces and an earthen rampart. It is on the whole poorly built, most of the houses being of wood, and the streets very imperfectly paved. It is the residence of a governor, the see of an archbishop, and the seat of several important courts and public offices. has two wooden and eighteen stone churches, among which are three cathedrals a large and handsome structure occupied by the public offices and law courts, several monasteries, a diocesan seminary gymnasium and other superior schools; three poorhouses and a workhouse, and house of correction manufactures of woollen and linen cloth needles, and leather and a considerable general trade. Pop. (1849) 16,711

RIBAFI ECHA or RIBAFERRERA a tn. Spain, Old Castile, prov. and 7 m. S.E. Logroño, 1 bank Ebro with a church, school and hospital a distillery as oil and several flour mills, and a trade in wine, oil, and fruit. Pop. 1485

RIBARROJA, two places, Spain;—1, A tn. Catalonia, prov. and 50 m. W Tarragona, r. bank Ebro with a church, courthouse, primary school, numerous flour-mills, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1888.—2, A tn. prov. and 13 m. N Valencia, r. bank Turia; with a church, courthouse, primary school, castle, and a gymnasium, and several oil and flour mills and a trade in wine, oil, silk, and agricultural produce. Pop. 1803.

RIBAS several places, Spain;—1, A tn. Catalonia, prov. and about 50 m. from Gerona, surrounded by sterile mountainous; with a church, courthouse, and school manufactures of cotton twist, and some trade in wool. Pop. 798.—2, (San Pedro de) A tn. Catalonia, prov. and about 24 m. from Barcelona, with a church, courthouse, school, hermitage situated on a height, and some trade in wine. Pop. 9114.—8 (San Mateo, San Mateo), a vil. Galicia, prov. and 9 m. N.E. Orense, on a lofty and rugged height above the hill with a large Benedictine monastery church and a trade in maize, wine and chestnuts. Pop. 873.

RIBESFORD, par Eng Worcester 4430 ac. P 5425
RIBBLE, a river England which rises among the mountains on the borders of Yorkshire and Westmoreland, about 9 m. N.E. Kirby Lonsdale; flows first S.E. past Settle, then S.W. into Lancashire past Chorlton, and continues the same direction to Preston, a little below which it turns a broad estuary, and falls into the Irish Sea, after a course of about 60 m. It is navigable to the bridge at Preston, beyond which the tide ascends about 8 m. and in consequence of the deepening and narrowing of its channel below that town, the navigation has been greatly improved, and at the same time thousands of acres of rich alluvial land have been recovered.

RIBESHEFER a vil and par Eng. Lancashire, 6 m. N.W. Blackburn, near the Calder. Though now an obscure village, it was anciently a Roman station, the importance of which is indicated by the great number of Roman antiquities including ruins of temples, altars, statues, coins, &c., which have been found here. Beside the parish church, a rude irregular pile, with a tower too broad for its height, there are Independent and R. Catholic chapels, a free school, almshouse, and good slate quarry; area of par 8150 ac. Pop. 1888.

RIBE, or RIKKE, a to, Denmark, duchy Schleswig cap. bal of same name, situated by the Ribe Bysse-ene, about 3 m. above its mouth, 45 m. N.W. 1 Jersburg. It is the see of a bishop. Two churches one of them a large cathedral built in the 12th century the interior of which is about 300 ft long, 160 ft broad and 130 ft high and containing the tombs of several Danish kings. The harbour which was once good, has now only from 3 ft to 4 ft. water, and larger vessels must lie at Nordby on the island of Fanø. A great many woollen stuffs were at one time made here, and known as commodities by the name of Ribervit, or Ribe cloth but this, and any other branch of trade which the town possessed, has ceased to be of importance. From the beginning of the 13th to the middle of the 15th century, Ribe had eleven churches and seven convents and carried on a trade so extensive as entitled it to rank as one of the most important places in the kingdom. Near it is the strongly fortified castle of Ribershus, built in 1115. Pop (1851), 3984. Ribe, though locally in Schleswig, gives its name to a bailiwick, the greater part of which belongs to Jutland. Of its whole area of 900 geo. sq. m. 520 geo. sq. m. belong to the latter. Pop. (1851), 59,240.

RIBBAUVILLE, or RABENWICKE, or RIPPONWILLER, a to France, dep. Haut-Rhin at the entrance of a picturesque valley, and surrounded by vineyards, 10 m. N.W. Colmar. On the highest part of the town a handsome church has been erected and near its centre stands a handsome office which is used as the Hotel de Ville. The manufactures consist of calicoes, napkins, and cotton goods. There are also breweries, and a cotton-mill. At a short distance W. of the town, is the old castle of Ribesheim on the summit of a hill, and lower down on adjoining heights, are the castles of St. Geronz and St. Ulrich. On the ridges of the Vosges above the town is an old rampart or wall of unknown date, called the Helden mauer, or Pagan wall. Pop. 6525.

RIBEIRA GRANDE, a to Azores, E. coast, Isl. St. Michael 15 m. N.E. Ponta-Dulgada. The streets are narrow and irregular, and the houses constructed of lava. Pop. 8000.

RIBEIRAO, or LAPA DO RIBEIRAO a to Brazil prov. Santa-Catarina, at the bottom of a creek in the island of that name, 8 m. S. Desterro. It is a church, and a considerable trade in sugar rum, and salt fish. Pop. 2000.

RIBEIRAO, or SAO JOSE DO RIBEIRAO, a vil and par Brazil, prov. Mato-Grosso, 24 m. below the junction of the Guaporé and Matto Grosso, where there is a fort, with a garrison to resist the incursions of the wild Indians. It contains a parish church, and is inhabited chiefly by Indians and Mestizos, who live mostly by hunting and fishing, and also assist in carrying goods by land or water to Para and Mato Grosso. Palm trees, bananas, and sugar-cane, abound on the banks of the Madeira, in the neighbourhood.

RIBEIRAO DO CAIXO, an numerous stream, Brazil, prov. Minas-Geraes. It rises near the town of Maratão, flows W. making many windings and joins a bank Guallano after a course of 110 m.

RIBEMONT [and Ribou Mont] a to France, dep. Aube, 26 m. N.W. W. Lann with manufactures of linen and calico. Condorcet was born here. Pop. 2430.

RIBERA, several places, Spain, particularly—1. (del Alago) A vil. and com. Old Castile, prov. and about 4 m. from Oviedo, on the Nalon. In the vicinity are the much-frequented thermal baths of Priorio. Pop. 1831—2 (4146). A vil. and com. Old Castile, prov. Alava, on the Bayas and Zadorra, a little S.E. Vittoria. It has several flour-mills, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1150—8 (del Fresno) A vil. Spain, Extremadura prov. Badajoz, on the Fresno. It has two schools a nursery in ruins a church and in the vicinity a hermitage. There are five flour and three oil mills. P. 2420.

RIBERÁ, a to. Sicily, prov. and 27 m. N.W. Garganti. Pop. 4000.

RIBERAC a to France, dep. Dordogne, in a fertile basin on the Dronne 18 m. W. N.W. Périgueux. It is irregularly built, contains the remains of an old castle and an ancient church has manufactures of leather, and a trade in corn linen and swine. Pop. 1415.

RIBNITZ, a to Mcklenberg-Schwern carole Wendisch on a lake which communicates with the Baltic 15 m. N. R. Rostock. It is entered by three gates contains two public squares, two churches, two houses, and convent, and has some shipping. Pop. of bail. 4691.

RIBORNI, a to France, dep. Puy-de-Dôme, in a fertile basin on the Dronne 18 m. W. N.W. Périgueux. It is irregularly built, contains the remains of an old castle and an ancient church has manufactures of leather, and a trade in corn linen and swine. Pop. 1415.

RIBSFON (SHILAT and LIETITE) two townships England on York (W. Riding) the former 84 m. N.W. Wetherby. The celebrated apple, the Ribston pippin was first grown in this township. P. 170—2 34 m. N.W. Wetherby 1 340.

RIBY, par Eng Lincoln 3740 ac. Pop. 747.

RICAN or RICATY a to. Bolivia, cercle Kaurai with a church, school, townhouse, manufactures of linen for livery and shoes tile-works, and a trade in corn, cattle, and timber. Pop. 1009.

RICCAL par Eng York (E. Riding), 3060 ac. P. 630
RICCARFON a vil. and par Scotland on Ayr. The vil. 1 bank Irvine, which separates it from Kilmarnock. stands on an eminence, and has a neat modern church. Coals are extensively wrought, and tiles largely manufactured in the parish. Pop. 4638.

RICCIA, a to and com. Naples, prov. Salerno, 14 m. S.F. Campobasso with five churches, eight chapels, and a Capuchin monastery. Near it are a subject iron spring, and a small lake abounding with fish. Pop. 6158.

RICLO a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, dep. Genova prov. Lavagna 5 m. N.W. Spina, a slope of a ridge of hills with a handsome church and some transit trade. Pop. 2373.

RICE LAKE, Upper Canada, Newcastle dist., 17 m. long, by 3 m. average breadth. It communicates with several lakes to the N., and discharges its surplus waters by the Trent into Lake Ontario.

RICEY, a to France, dep. Aube, in a mountain valley watered by the Laignon, 95 m. S.S.E. Troyes. It consists of three adjacent villages, distinguished by the names of Ricey Haut, Ricey Hauteville, and Ricey Bas. They are irregularly and for the most part, poorly built, but contain some good houses, and three churches with lofty spires and have manufactures of brandy tanneries, and dye-works. A great quantity of wine, of good repute, is produced in the neighbourhood. Pop. 3019.

RICHARD'S CASTLE, par Eng. Salop and Hereford 4871 ac. Pop. 657.

RICHARDSON'S RIVER, British N. America. It falls into Mack's Inlet, Arctic Ocean in lat. 67° 54' N. long. 113° 56' W.

RICHARDSTOWN, par Irel. Louth 1090 ac. P. 499
RICHBOROUGH a decayed vil. England, co. Kent, on the Stour 3 m. N.W. Sandwich supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Roman city Rutupun.

RICHE, an Isl. S. Pacific Ocean, E. coast, Papua, lat. 8° 2' S. lon. 147° 57' E.

RICHHELIEU (anc. Ricciolieu), a tn. France, dep. Indre-et-Loire, in a fertile wine district on the Mable, 22 m. S.W. Tours. It was originally only a paltry village, but, in 1637 was converted by Cardinal Richelieu into a regularly-built town, with spacious, regular streets converging so as to meet in a handsome public square. Its celebrated abbey is now a mere heap of ruins. The manufacture of beetroot sugar and brandy are the trade in wine, brandy, fruit and other products of the district, are considerable. Pop. 2467.

RICHHELIEU, (Suez), or JOHN or CHANDEL, a river Lower Canada, dist. Montreal, issuing from N. extremity of Lake Champlain, near the U. States frontier. It flows N. and enters the St. Lawrence at Lake St. Pierre, after a course of about 80 m.

RICHHILL a small tn. Ireland, co. and Df. m. E. by N. Armagh with places of worship for Presbyterians, Wesleyans, and the Society of Friends. It had formerly a flourishing linen market. Pop. 527.

RICHMOND, a par. and municipal bor. market tn. and par., England, co. and 42 m. N.W. York (N. Riding), 1, bank Rhine, which is here crossed by a handsome stone bridge.—The town on a branch of the York and Newcastle railway, is pictorially situated on neat and well built cliffs of stone, has a handsome town hall two churches one of which, supposed to have been erected about the time of Henry III. presents some specimens of the Norman style and places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans and a R. Catholic chapel a free grammar-school of high reputation, numerous other public and private schools, three hospitals and other charitable institutions. The trade of Richmond at one time considerable and various is now mainly connected with agricultural produce and supplying the wants of the numerous wealthy families residing in the vicinity. There are iron and brass foundries, roperies, hatteries, paper and corn mills. In and around it are numerous interesting remains of antiquity the most remarkable of which is the castle, comprising an area of nearly 6 ac. and one of the most majestic ruins in England its great tower about 100 feet high is a fine and very perfect specimen of the Norman work. Richmond returns two members to Parliament Pop. bor., 1960 area of par. 2341 ac. Pop. 4108.

RICHMOND a vil. and par. England co. Surrey, 12 m. W. S.W. London, with which it is connected by railway partly on an acclivity of Richmond Hill and partly on a plain along the Thames, which is here crossed by a handsome stone bridge of five arches. It has a theatre, a mechanic's institution, new lecture hall and session house, the last three all new and tasteful structures, two churches two Wesleyan chapels, an Independent, a Lady Hampton's Connexion a Baptist, and a R. Catholic, numerous schools of various descriptions a dispensary, and seven sets of almshouses. Being wholly a place of recreation, Richmond has no manufactures, if the celebrated cake, called Made of Honour be excepted, of which large quantities are made. The inhabitants living solely by providing for the numerous visitors who throng thither during the summer season. The scenery in the vicinity is very beautiful, and the view from Richmond is one of the finest to be obtained anywhere its interest is not a little heightened by the great number of noblemen and gentlemen's seats which present themselves in all directions. Richmond was a favourite residence, for many centuries, of the monarchs of England, several of whom died there. Pop. vil. 8068 area of par. 1230 ac. Pop. 9255.

RICHMOND—1. A tn., New South Wales co. Cumberland on the Nepean R. on N.W. Sydney with a neat church—2. A tn. Victoria, on the Yarra Yarra, near Melbourne—3. A tn. Van Diemen's Land, 14 m. from Hobart Town with a stone bridge, jail, and courthouses.

RICHMOND a city, U. States, cap. Virginia, finely situated in a healthy and picturesque district, on both sides of Shockoe Creek, at its junction with the James, immediately below the lower falls, and on the railway from Fredericksburg to Petersburg, 105 m. S. by W. Washington. It stands opposite to Manchester which communicates with it by two bridges, and may properly be regarded as its suburb. It was originally laid out on a regular plan, to occupy an area of about 8 sq. m. A large portion of the space has not been built over but the part actually filled up consists, for the most part, of handsome streets, which cross at right angles, and are usually 65 ft. wide. Of the houses, about 2000 in number, one-half are of brick, and one-half of wood. Near the brow of an elevated plain called Shockoe Hill, and one of the finest quarters of the town is Union Square, which contains about 9 ac., tastefully laid out and shaded with fine trees, forming a beautiful promenade. The most important public edifices are the Statehouse, finely situated in the centre of Capitol Square, constructed on a model brought by Mr. Jefferson from James, in France, adorned with a series of lofty Ionic columns much admired for its chaste and beautiful proportions and containing in an open hall in its centre, a marble statue of Washington by a French artist; the City-hall contiguous to the Statehouse, an elegant and costly edifice of Grecian architecture, with a Doric portico at each end, about 20 churches, several of them large and elegant, the Penitentiary an immense building forming the sides of a hollow square, 300 ft. by 110 ft.; the State armory another large edifice 840 ft. long by 290 ft. wide; the Governor's house, the county courthouse, the medical department of Hampden Sydnay College, occupying a handsome building in the Egyptian style and the college of Richmond and St. Vincent the last R. Catholic the Lancasterian school for the education of the poor the female orphan asylum supported partly by the corporation and partly by private munificence the museum, theatre almshouse, county and city jails, and the water-works, which by two forcing-pumps worked by water-power, raise a supply for the city at the rate of 800 000 gals. daily. Among literary institutions, the Virginia historical and philosophical society is distinguished for its efforts.

The manufactures of Richmond, furnished with an almost unlimited supply of water-power by the falls of the James, are extensive and include a large cotton-factory paper saw and numerous flour mills, blast-furnaces, foundries, and other iron works. Tobacco also is manufactured on a very large scale. The trade is important, and consists chiefly in the export of wheat, flour and tobacco. The winding nature of the James and its distance of 150 m. from the ocean somewhat restricts the means of water communication, more especially as the tide at the wharfs of the town rises only 4 ft. and vessels drawing more than 10 ft. cannot approach them. This depth, however, is sufficient for steamers of which several lines ply regularly to Petersburg, New York, Norfolk, and Baltimore. Richmond was founded in 1742 and supplanted Williamsburg as the seat of government in 1780. Pop. (1850) 27,743.

RICHMOND a vil., U. States, America, Indiana, on the E. fork of the Whitewater and at the junction of the Indiana Central and the Richmond and Newcastles railways, which here connect with several lines from Ohio, 69 m. E. Indianapolis.

It is a flourishing place, with a large number of mills and factories, two weekly newspapers and an extensive trade in agricultural produce. Pop. about 3000.

RICHMOND a vil. Canada West, beautifully situated on the Goodwood 73 m. N.E. Kingston. It is a thriving place with Episcopal Presbyterian, Methodist, and R. Catholic churches a grammar-school a distillery two tanneries, and saw filling and flour mills. Pop. (1853) 1125.

RICHMOND HILL, a vil. Canada West, pleasantly situated, 16 m. N. Toronto. It is a long and straggling but tolerably well-built place, with a Presbyterian and a Methodist church a tannery and saw and flour mills driven by steam.

RICHTELDORF a tn. in Prussia, gov. and 12 m. S.W. Stralsund on the N.E. extremity of a small lake of same name. It has a law court, and a trade in horses and cattle. Pop. 1879.

RICHTELDORF, a vil. and par. Switzerland, can. and 13 m. S.E. Zurich, on the frontiers of Schvitz, seat on a lay S. shore, Lake Zurich. It has a very large cotton-factory, and near it is the old castle of Widenessell one of the finest and best-preserved castle ruins of Switzerland. Zimmerman, the author of the well-known work on Alpine needed here for some time, and highly praises its beauty. Pop. 2342.

RICKINGHALL, two par. Eng. Suffolk —1. (St. James), 1610 m. Pop. 460—2. (Superior), 1857 m. P. 754.

RICKLING, par. Eng. Essex; 1831 m. P. 509.

RICKMANSWORTH, or RICKMANSWORTH, a market tn. and par. England, co. Hertford.—The town, 9 m. S. of St. Albans is agreeably situated in a valley, near the con-

Sanctuary of the Colina and Gada, with the Chas, and on the Grand Junction canal. It is irregularly built, has a spacious and handsome church, recently built, chapels for Baptists and Wesleyans, national and British schools, some manufactures of screw-plugs and horse-hair; and near it an extensive brewery, and flour, cotton, silk and paper mills. Area of par, 4937 ac. Pop. 4861.

RICLA [ana. Nerabirio] a tn. Spain, Aragon, prov. and 11 m. W. S. W. Barcelona, near the Jalon, with a church, courthouses, prison, and school flour-mills, distilleries and a trade in fruit. The celebrated Arabist writer Abdalla, commonly called Arrabi, was born here. Pop. 1393.

RICOLANO, or Ricovanzovian, a river Turkey in Europe, which rises in the mountain range between Montenegro and Dalmatia, flows E. past Cattigue, and after a course of nearly 60 m. falls into the Lake of Sentur, near Toluahak.

RICOLA, a tn. Spain, prov. and 27 m. N. W. Murcia, with a church, courthouses, prison, school, and manufactures of linen but more especially of articles in tapestry. Pop. 1000.

RIDDERKERK, a vil. Holland, prov. S. Holland, 7 m. S. E. Rotterdam. It is a scattered place, with a church. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in flux culture. Pop. 725.

RIDDINGS, a tn. and township, England, co. Derby, 3 m. S. Alfreton, on the Cromford canal. It has a handsome church, with a tower and spire; Baptist, Independent, and Wesleyan chapels, handsome school buildings for boys, girls, and infant school, extensive collieries, blast-furnaces, and other important iron-works, in some of which large quantities of ordnance stores are manufactured. Pop. 4,000.

RIDDLESWORTH, par. Eng. Norfolk, 1157 ac. P. 141. RIDEAU a river and canal, Canada West, connecting Kingston on Lake Ontario with the Ottawa, immediately below Chaudiere Falls. It is 131 m. long, and in some places very crooked. The traffic on it is great.

RIDGE par. Eng. Herts. 3607 ac. P. 326.

RIDGMONT par. Eng. Bedford 2248 ac. P. 1,099.

RIDGEWELL par. Eng. Essex 1717 ac. P. 508.

RIDLEY par. Eng. Kent; 814 ac. P. 91.

RIDLINGTON, two par. Eng. —1, Norfolk; 635 ac.

1. 256 —3, Rutland 2077 ac. P. 316.

RIDVALE three par. Eng. Stafford —1 (Hemsted) 2224 ac. P. 471 (Masep); 2475 ac. P. 522 —3, (West) 816 ac. P. 99.

RIED —1 A market tn., Upper Austria, circle Inn on the Oberach and Brennbach 37 in W. S. W. Linz. It is the seat of a rural and criminal court, contains a castle and a church, and has manufactures of linen and woollen cloth. The French defeated the Austrians here in 1805. Pop. 2600 —2, a vil. Tyrol, circle Inn, with a church and a Capuchin monastery. Its inhabitants distinguished themselves during the Tyrolean war in 1799. Pop. 720.

RIEDLINGEN, a tn. in Württemberg, circle Danube, on a height above the Danube 29 m. S. W. Ulm, with two churches, several chapels, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1770.

RIEGEL a market tn. Baden, circle Upper Rhine, bail Kandel, on the Elbe with a church. Pop. 1841.

RIEGERSBURG a small market tn. Austria, Styria, circle and 24 m. S. E. Grätz, containing a remarkable feudal fortress of same name, which crowns a mass of volcanic rocks, 400 ft. above the level of the sea and is a most conspicuous object far and near, and to hear a wonderful resemblance to Edinburgh castle, but is far rather more elevated. It is partly cut out of the living rock, and partly built of huge blocks linked with iron, but notwithstanding its apparent durability is rapidly yielding to decay.

RIEGERSHLAG a vil. Bohemia, circle and about 24 m. S. E. Taber with a church and school, oil, and other mills, and a linen bleachfield. Pop. 2066.

RIEGOLDEN, a vil. and com. Spain, prov. and 36 m. S. W. Leon, on the side of a hill. It contains a church, and primary school, and has a trade in corn, flax, and cattle. Pop. 1690.

RIESEN a tn. and par. Switzerland, cant. Basel-stadt and 3 m. N. E. the town of Basel, the entrance of the Wissemthal, in a fine fertile district. It has a handsome church, and a commodious school-house. A great many of the inhabitants live by gardening. Riesen suffered much both during the Thirty Years' war and during the European struggle in 1812-13. Pop. 1669.

RIEKA, a tn. European Turkey, Montenegro, cap. dep. of same name, on a small stream which falls into the N. W. extremity of Lake Scutari, 11 m. S. E. Cattaro. It is surrounded by hills, occupying a very picturesque but unhealthy position, is better built than most of the villages of Montenegro, having houses of stone, roofed with tiles, and appears to be in a very flourishing state. Many of its inhabitants are refugees from Tudgorina in Albania.

RIELLO a vil. Spain, prov. and 30 m. S. W. Leon, between two small streams, with a church, courthouses, prison, and primary school and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1314.

RIEIRA a vil. Spain, Catalonia prov. and 9 m. N. E. Terragona, in a plain between the Lays and La Mos, with a parish church, a primary school, and a trade in wine, oil, and hemp. Pop. 1240.

RIESA, a tn. Saxony circle and 25 m. N. N. W. Dresden, on the Leipzig and Dresden railway and at the confluence of the Jekna with the Elbe. It contains a castle, and has a dock yard, and some shipping. Pop. 2467.

RIESENBURG or Praduvitz, a tn. Russia, gov. and 10 m. E. Marienwerder, on the Liebe. It is walled, has a 16 resolute church and manufactures of cloth. Pop. 8492.

RIESENBERG [Post Mountains], a mountain chain, Germany, sometimes included along with others under the general name of Sudetes, but more properly confined to that chain which commencing at the Neuse of Glaz, where the Sudetes properly terminate, stretches in a somewhat circuitous but N. W. direction to the Neuse of Lusatia and thence W. to the right bank of the Elbe, which separates it from the Erzgebirge. Its whole length, as thus defined, is about 120 m. its breadth nearly 35 m. Different names are applied to different parts of the chain, as those of Habichtswald and Haubergsberg to its S. E. end, and that of Hahnenkamm to its W. portion. The culminating point of the chain is the Riesenkuppe or Schuttkuppe, on the borders of Bohemia and Prussian Silesia, where the Elbe has its source, but though the loftiest summit which Germany possesses N. of the Danub, its height does not exceed 6000 ft. Other remarkable heights are the Bran or Borenberg 5156 ft. the Grand Kahl, exactly the same height as the Borenberg, and the Grand and Little Stummbach (Storm cap) respectively 4950 ft. and 4920 ft. The greater part of this chain has a very wild and desolate appearance, but its W. portion forms part of the beautiful and romantic land to which the name of Saxony Switzerland has been given. The mountains are for the most part composed of granite and schist. The lower parts of the chain are well wooded with oak and beech but at higher elevations numerous trees only are found. Still higher, the trees degenerate into stunted shrubs and the Iceland moss is found growing. In the same localities are extensive tracts of heathy peat swamps and shallow lakes, generally swartwog in aspect. Here numerous rivers take their rise. The Elbe, the most important, receives all the drainage of the S. slope of the chain and also of a small part of the N. after it has forced a passage for itself across the mountains, but with this exception and that of another small portion received by the Spree, the whole drainage of the N. slope is carried to the Oder chiefly by the Neuse of Glaz, the Elbe, with its tributaries Queuse and Oise, and the Neuse of Lusatia. The mine rich of the Riesengebirge, though much less rich than those of the Erzgebirge are still of considerable importance.

RIESEN a tn. Saxony, prov. and 15 m. S. W. Lusatia, at the foot of a mountain of same name, from which sulphur is obtained.

RIETBERG or Rietrasen a tn. Prussia, prov. Westphalia, gov. and 40 m. S. S. W. Minden, 1 bank Rhine. It is walled, has two gates, a church, gymnasium, Franciscan monastery, posthouse and manufactures of linen and tobacco, a bleachfield, and distillery. Pop. 2032.

RIETI a tn. Italy, cap. del. of same name, in a beautiful district on the Velino 42 m. N. E. Rome. It is the see of a bishop, has a court of law, and several public offices, manufactures of woollen stuffs, and mineral springs. Wood is much cultivated in the vicinity. Pop. 8903.

RIELUX [ana. Ryn Zietogegen] a tn. France (dep. Haute-Garonne), 27 m. S. Toulouse, on the Adour. It is well built, and has a handsome church with a bold lofty spire. P. 1881.

RIEZ [ana. Apollonien], a tn. France, dep. Basses-Alpes, 20 m. S. S. W. Digne. It was formerly the see of a bishop, and has numerous ancient remains, but otherwise no object deserving of particular notice. It has manufactures of cordage, oil and vinegar, some trade in those articles, in wine, and dried fruit. Pop. 3517.

RIGA is a Roman, cap. gov., which sometimes bears the same name, but more frequently that of Ludlow or Lavonia, on both sides of the S. Dvina, about 2 m. above its mouth, in the Gulf of Riga. S. W. St. Petersburg, lat. 56° 53' N., lon. 24° 02' E. (N.). It is situated on a sandy flat, surrounded by hills, on which numerous fine villas make a cheerful and showy appearance, and consists of the town proper and suburbs, still more extensive than the town itself. The communication across the river is kept up by a bridge of boats about 500 yards long. Riga is a place of considerable strength, being both surrounded by walls and bastions, and defended by a citadel. The older part of the town, still confined within earthen walls, consists of narrow winding streets, huddled together without any regularity. The more modern parts of the town are much better built, and contain at least three good squares. Along the river on both sides are spacious quays, which afford excellent promenade and the esplanade and gardens, both within and near the town, are well laid out. The public buildings are very numerous, and include no fewer than 45 churches but not many of them are deserving of particular notice. Among others are the cathedral, not of much architectural merit, but containing some interesting monuments. St. Peter's church, a beautiful building with an altar and chancel of marble, an Oriental dome and a spire which is said to be the tallest in the empire; the castle, the oldest edifice in the town originally the residence of the masters of the Teutonic order and now occupied by the governor-general, the townhouse, with the exchange adjoining it, the merchant house, the arsenal, the library not of great extent, but rich in natural history, the museum, the gymnasium, and several other superior schools; the theatre, and the military and other hospitals. The manufactures are not of great importance, and consist chiefly of starch, soap, playing-cards, artificial flowers, bric-a-brac and reduced sugar. The trade is very extensive, and gives Riga the first place after the capitals of St. Petersburg and Moscow. The principal exports are flax, hemp, tumbler tallow, grain, sailcloth, &c., the imports, wine, woollens, colonial produce, silk, &c. The following table of the vessels that entered the port of Riga in 1847-1849 and 1864 shows at the same time the countries chiefly interested in its trade.

NUMBER AND TONNAGE OF VESSELS OF SEVERAL NATIONS, ENTERED AT THE PORT OF RIGA FROM 1847 TO 1864 AND 1864

	1847		1849		1850		1864
	Vessels	Tons	Vessels	Tons	Vessels	Tons	Vessels	Tons
Belgium	4	101	2	760	4	19	21	4,200
British	0	101	40	94	645	161,526	67	115,796
Danish	567	79,893	31	3,460	68	5,778	87	10,300
Dutch	201	81,616	174	21,000	264	29,725	316	66,360
French	7	4,312	10	1,100	8	8,843	10	15,260
Germanic	17	1,467	1	1,700	28	3,016	6,000	10,000
Hanseatic	42	5,762	2	2,400	16	2,820	2	4,200
Hungarian	2	4,312	14	1,900	45	8,843	70	14,200
Swedish	246	19,416	with Swedish	with Swedish	with Swedish	with Swedish	with Swedish	with Swedish
Prussian	10	4,300	1	600	9	1,404	45	2,700
Portuguese	2	08					2	426
Russian	186	21,144	30	1,320	8	1,946	38	8,000
Spanish	1	760	4	645	1	119
Swedish	10	18	101	13,540	121	17,5	238	40,000
United States			1	30	2	4,500
Summits	119	71,30	544	19,357	796	4,795	316	60,000
Total	155	285,352	1,251	169,185	1,54	228,063	1990	341,466

Riga is the residence of a governor and the seat of a superior court of appeal and of several other courts and public offices. Pop. (1849), 87,954; (1863), 177,628.

RILA or Lavonia, a small town, which was the seat of Lavonia, Lavonia, and Lavonia, and consists, in the W., to a comparatively narrow entrance, communicating with the Baltic, the island of Osel almost closing it on the W. Its greatest length, N to S., is about 120 m.; and its average breadth, 70 m. The chief river which it receives is the S. Dvina, near the mouth of which is the port of Riga. The navigation, owing to several small islands and sandbanks, is considered dangerous.

RIGHI, or Rax, an isolated mountain of brecciated rock, Switzerland, cant. Schwyz, between Lakes Zug and Lucerne, 5905 ft. high. Its summit affords one of the finest views in Switzerland, and is annually visited by numerous travellers, for whose accommodation a wooden hotel has been erected at a height of 5875 ft. Lower down is a little church, much frequented by pilgrims.

RIGLIANO, a vil and par. Tuscany, 8 m. E. Pisa, near 1 bank Arno, with a parish church and extensive manufactures of serre cotte.

RIGNANO, a vil and com. Tuscany, 15 m. E.S.E. Florence, 1 bank Arno, here crossed by a bridge. It has a church, a school, and several mills. Pop. 4584.

RIGNANO, a to Naples, prov. Capitanata, 11 m. E. San Severo, on an eminence, near 1 bank Candore. P. 3000.

RIGOLATO, a to Naples, prov. Capitanata, 11 m. E. San Severo, on an eminence, near 1 bank Candore. P. 3000.

RIGOLATO, a to Naples, prov. Capitanata, 11 m. E. San Severo, on an eminence, near 1 bank Candore. P. 3000.

RIGBY, par. Eng. Lancashire, 1040 m. Pop. 120.

RIGTICA or ILAKI LYKKA a vil Hungary, Hither Danube, co. Bacs 48 m. N.W. Kaza with a church. It stands in a well-cultivated district, in which excellent wheat is raised. Pop. 3131.

RIHURSI a to Hindustan, Punjab, on the east S. of the Himalaya ranges, near 1 bank Ghazal, 90 m. N.N.E. Lahore. The town is insignificant; but the fort, situated on a conical rocky height to the S. of it, is one of the best constructed and strongest in the country. It consists of a square, with very lofty walls, rising immediately from the precipitous steep sides of the hill and towers at each angle, which, with most of the interior buildings, are bomb proof. Pop. in, about 1000.

RILN, river. See RILN.

RILP (Dn), a vil. Holland, prov. N. Holland, 18 m. N. by W. Amsterdam, with four churches and two schools, a townhall and an orphan hospital. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in trade, which is facilitated by the two harbours on the canal which passes Rila. There are also manufactures of lace, leather, ropes, yarn, cloth, candles, boat-building yards, and several mills. Pop. 1987.

RILSE, a to Holland, prov. Overijssel 16 m. N.N.E. Deventer. It has a Protestant and R. Catholic church and a school, and a townhall, situated in a large open market-place. Agriculture is the chief occupation, but there are also manufactures of cotton and linen fabrics, yarn, tobacco, pottery, ware, tiles, and bricks. Pop. 1239.

RILSWIJK, or KYKOW, a vil. Holland, prov. S. Holland, 2 m. S.E. the Hague. It consists chiefly of a closely built street, in a finely planted road, and is much resorted to by pleasure-seekers from the Hague. It has two churches and a school. In its castle, destroyed in 1789, a treaty of peace was concluded September 10 1687 between Spain, France, Britain, Germany and the Netherlands. Pop. (agricultural), 2155.

RILLAER, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on the Meuse, 35 m. N.E. Brussels. It has a church. Pop. (agricultural), 1605.

RILKE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on the Meuse, 35 m. N.E. Brussels. It has a church. Pop. (agricultural), 1605.

RILKE, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on the Meuse, 35 m. N.E. Brussels. It has a church. Pop. (agricultural), 1605.

RILLINGTON, par. Eng. York (E. Riding); 4648 ac. Pop. 1228.

RILSK, a to Russia. See RILSK.

RIMA-SZOMBATH, or GRON-SZOMBATH, a market in Hungary, on Gron 72 m. N.E. Pesth, on a plain, 1 bank Rima, here crossed by a handsome bridge. It is well built; contains a Protestant gymnasium; has manufactures of lumber, tobacco, and tannery, and carries on a considerable trade in corn, wine, tobacco, honey, wax, and cattle. Beryls are found in the neighborhood. Pop. 8057

RIMAC, a river Peru rises in the Andes, flows W for about 90 m., passes Lima, and falls into the Pacific at Callao.

RIMBACH, a market tn. Hesse-Darmstadt, prov. Rhenish, circle Hesse-Nassau, near Lindenfels, with a parish church. Pop. 1226

RIMGAR, a vil. Bavaria, Lower Franconia, near Würzburg, with a church, a castle and a mill. Pop. 1620

RTMINI, or RUMINO [anc. Arpinum] a tn. Italy, dioc. and 24 m. E.S.E. Forl. in a fertile plain between the Marecchia and the Ossa. It is surrounded with walls, but has a decayed, melancholy look. Many of its houses are handsome, and it has several palaces built of marble. The principal objects of attraction are the cathedral, or church of San Francesco, originally built in the 14th, but remodelled in the 15th century after the designs of Leon Battista Alberti, the great restorer of Roman architecture, and regarded as his master-piece; the church of San Giuliano with a superb altar-piece, by Paul Veronese; the church of San Giuliano, with a fine painting by Guercino; the triumphal arch of Augustus, of simple and massive architecture, with two Corinthian columns on each side, and, above all, the bridge of Augustus over the Marecchia, built entirely of white marble, consisting of five arches each with a span of 27 ft. and though built 18 centuries ago, still in perfect preservation. The manufactures consist of silk, glass, and earthenware. The trade was at one time of considerable importance having been greatly facilitated by an excellent harbour which has now become so completely sanded up as only to admit the smallest vessels. The present trade is confined to corn, silk, salt, and fish. Pop. 17,000

RIMTERA, an isl. E. Pacific Ocean N. the Society Islands lat. 22° 40' S. lon. 152° 20' W. It lies near its centre to the height of 800 ft., has no proper harbour, but is inhabited by a mild and inoffensive race, from whom provisions can be procured at a cheap rate.

RIMMON or RIMMON several places Palestine, particularly, a vil. occupying a high conical rock of chalk 15 m. W Jerusalem. It is repeatedly mentioned in Scripture, and appears to have been an important stronghold of the Benjamites. See Judges xx 40, 47 xxi 15

RIMOGG, a vil. Hungary illthor Dambo, on Neogrand near Somoany in a well wooded district with a R. (atholic church, and a trade school. Pop. 1288

RIMPTON, par Eng. Somerset. Pop. 998

RIMON-DE-SORO a tn. Spain Old Castile, prov. and 17 m. S Logroño, in a beautiful plain; bank Ebro. It is regularly built has a church, courthouses, school, and hospital, and a trade in oil and hemp. Pop. 1087

RINDI, a river Hindoostan, rises in prov. Agra 45 m. N.E. of the town of that name flows S.E. past Kanah and after a course of about 106 m. joins bank Jumna, 12 m. W Fathelpore

RINECK, or RINECK, a tn. Bavaria, Lower Franconia, in a valley; bank Rhine, here crossed by a bridge, on the frontiers of Hesse-Cassel, to which it partly belongs. It was anciently the capital of an extensive territory of same name, and has a church, a castle, and several mills. Pop. 1543

RINGAGNAGH, par Eng. Waterford, 8246 ac. Pop. 1921

RINGARGLA, or DUNGOGLA, a small isl. Ireland co. Cork, 4 m. S Skibbereen, in Belinmore Harbour, 2 m. long by 1 m. broad, and connected to the mainland by an excellent causeway and bridge.

RINGGURAN par Eng. Ire. Cork 5478 ac. Pop. 3626

RINGHARDORF, a vil. Lower Austria, near Rabensberg, at the confluence of the Zaya and March, not far from the frontiers of Hungary with a church. Pop. 1400

RINGSHALN a vil. Bohemia circle Bunzlau on a small stream, 5 m. from Gabel with an ancient church. Pop. 1987

RINGGENBERG, a vil. and par Switzerland, can. and 37 m. S.E. Bern on the S.W. shore of Lake Rigi. The church is picturesquely situated and at one extremity of the village are the remains of the old castle of the Lords of Rigi, which was destroyed in 1825, in a feud with the inhabitants of the village. Pop. 1184

RINGLAND, par Eng. Norfolk 1810 ac. Pop. 381

RINGMER, a vil. and par England co. Sussex, 3 m. E N.E. Lewes. It has an ancient church with several curious monuments, and a modern wooden steeple an Independent chapel and artillery barracks, which is now partly occupied as a lunatic asylum. Area of par, 5636 ac. Pop. 1374

RINGMORE, par Eng. Devon 1128 ac. Pop. 837

RINGROSE, par Ire. Cork 9240 ac. Pop. 5281

RINGRAH, See ASHKELOZER

RINGSFIELD, par Eng. Suffolk, 1666 ac. Pop. 287

RINGSHALI, par Eng. Suffolk 2116 ac. Pop. 371

RINGSHHEIM a vil. Baden circle Middle Rhine, bail. Eitenheim with a church. Pop. 1243

RINGSTEAD two par. England —1, Northampton; 1961 ac. Pop. 727 —2, (Great St. Andrew and St. Peter) Norfolk, 2814 ac. Pop. 612

RINGTED [Laz. Rengteda] a tn. Denmark, bail. Sorø, almost in the centre of all Zealand, 34 m. S.W. Copenhagen. It is a very old place, and was of some importance in the 12th and 13th centuries. It contains an old church in the form of a cross, in which many members of the royal family are buried. It has often suffered much from fire. On the last occasion, 1806 the half of the town and part of the old church, were consumed. Pop. 1200

RINGSWOLD, par Eng. Kent, 1710 ac. Pop. 789

RINGWOOD a market tn. and par England, co. Hants, on the Avon, which here divides into three branches, each crossed by a stone bridge, and afterwards uniting them, forms a large expanse, with an island in its centre, 30 m. W.S.W. Southampton. It is an ancient, but well-built place, and has a spacious ancient church an Independent and a Unitarian chapel, a free grammar-school; manufactures of woollen cloth and hosiery, both rather on the decline, a large brewery and some trade, facilitated by the Avon, which is here navigable. Area of par, 8050 ac. Pop. 3928

RINKJÖRING a tn. Denmark, prov. N. Jutland esp. bail. N.E. shore of fiord of same name, 51 m. S.W. Wiborg. It has some manufactures of tobacco, woollens and soap. There is no proper harbour, but the trade in agricultural produce is considerable. There is here a ferry over the W. end to the island of Hvalmand, but the channel is so shallow that the journey is often made on foot or on horseback. Pop. 1200

RIO the name of a river, which is the largest in N. Jutland area, 1300 ges. sq. m., occupies almost the whole of the central part of the W. coast of the province but generally consisting of blank unfertile tracts in by no means populated according to its extent. It contains only three small towns, and 113 parishes. Pop. 57,600

RINTZLN a tn. Hesse-Cassel, Niederhessen, 11 m. S.E. Minden 1 bank Weser here crossed by a bridge of boats. It is partly surrounded by walls and entered by three gates contains two churches, a palace gymnasium, and hospital, is the seat of a superior court, and several other courts and offices, and has a trade in linen and corn. Pop. 8161

RIO with affixes several places, 1. original particularly —1, (de-Minor) A tn. and par prov. Baixa-Alta, about 10 m. from Viana Pop. 850 —2, (Tudo) A tn. and par prov. Douro 4 m. from Oporto Pop. 3800

RIO (Aizte-e-Hasso) a com. Tucumán al. Elba, about 6 m. N. Porto-Luzana. It consists chiefly of two vilas. Rio-Alto, situated on a height and Rio-Basso, or Marina Rio, situated on the shore below, with a handsome church and has extensive mines of oligistic iron. Pop. 3505

RIO-BERRA, a vil. and par Brazil prov. and 84 m. S.V.E. Rio-de-Janeiro. It is a place of respectable appearance especially when viewed from a distance contains a parish church, with the other houses clustering round it as a centre, and has a trade especially in manilla, sugar, and coffee. Pop. dist., 8000

RIO-BRANCO, a river Brazilian Guiana. See BRANCO.

RIO-BRANCO-DEI-NORTE, a large river, N. America. See GRANDIS (Rio)

RIO-DE-CONTAS, a tn. Brazil, prov. and 200 m. W.S.W. Bahia, on the Brancão or Contas River. The houses, generally of earth, with a framework of wood, are irregularly built but, being plastered over, and white-washed, have a showy appearance. It is the seat of a court of law, contains two churches, a townhouse, and prison, and has a considerable trade in cotton, of excellent quality, cattle, and marmosade.

RIO-DE-JANEIRO a maritime prov. Brazil lat. $21^{\circ}16'$ to $22^{\circ}23'$ S. lon. 41° to $44^{\circ}50'$ W.; bounded N by the Chaparral, separating it from prov. Espirito-Santo, and by the Paraíba and its offshoots the Paraíba and Preto, and by the Serra-da-Mantiqueira, separating it from Minas-Geraes; W. and S.W. by prov. São-Paulo; and E. and S. by the Atlantic ocean. 69,405 sq. m. The central part of this province is double mountainous, being traversed generally from E. to W. by a series of ranges, of which the loftiest and most conspicuous are the Serra-dos-Órgãos, so called from the supposed resemblance which they bear when seen from certain points, to the pines of an organ. The summits do not appear to have been accurately measured but are not supposed to exceed, at the utmost, 6000 ft. or 7000 ft. above the sea. Many of these mountains are of a rounded form, but the highest of them assume a conical shape, and terminate in peaks. They are almost entirely composed of granite, much of a coarse in the grain and easily decomposed by the weather but much of which is also of a finer texture, and comes to pass gradually into gneiss. The covering of the rocks is usually a red clay which on the steeper acclivities is thin but attains great depth in the lower valleys. All the beds of this clay are said to be more or less auriferous. The mountains slope down on the N and E in the former direction towards the basin of the Paraíba to which all the surface of the province on that side belongs, and in the latter to the coast, which requires the drainage from a great number of comparatively small streams, each carrying its waters directly to the ocean. The shores toward the N.E. is lined by numerous lakes and lagoons, along the banks of which extensive tracts of marsh occur and give the coast in that direction an uninteresting character but towards the S. particularly in the direction of the capital the monotony of the surface disappears, and is succeeded by scenery of the most enchanting description—solids lava stretching like their arms to inclose innumerable islets of the richest verdure, while on other spots steepens rocks, of the most fantastic shapes, suddenly start up to the height of many hundred feet. The soil does not seem to possess much natural fertility. Great part of it consists of a retentive clay ill adapted for agricultural operations but the warmth and moisture of the climate are so favorable to vegetation, that magnificent forests and valuable crops are found growing on spots which in less genial regions might seem destined to perpetual barrenness. At the same time, many tracts of the richest land occur and are turned to the best account this being in positionally the best cultivated province in Brazil. All the ordinary productions of the climate are successfully cultivated but the crop which attracts the largest share of attention is coffee, of which the plantations are already extensive, and continue rapidly to increase. The other leading crops are sugar cane, millet, manioc, and cotton. Considerable attention is paid to horticulture, and the varieties of fruit are extremely numerous, including not only the indigenous species but numerous importations from other countries. The forests are rich in timber both for ordinary and ornamental purposes in dye-woods, in gums and balsams, and valuable medicines. The increase of population, and extension of cultivation have had the effect of driving back the fierce kinds of wild animals into the recesses of the forests, so that onoceros and jaguars have become somewhat rare. On the other hand, the domestic animals, originally imported from Europe, particularly horses and mules have prodigiously increased. Immense herds of cattle, also, are reared. This province is by no means rich in minerals, at least in the precious metals. No silver is known to exist, and the quantity of gold is understood to be small. Iron, however, abounds though it is not actually worked and the decomposition of granite has formed extensive beds of the finest limonite. For administrative purposes, Rio-de-Janeiro is divided into eight counties—Angra-dos-Reis, Cabo-Frio, Campos-dos-Ribeirões, Cantagalo, Ilhabela, Niterói, Resende, and Vassouras. It sends 10 deputies to the general legislative assembly and appoints five senators. The provincial assembly, of 80 members meets in Niterói. Pop. 680,000

RIO-DE-JANEIRO, the cap. of Brazil, and largest city of S. America, most beautifully and advantageously situated on the W. side of a bay of same name lat. ($Port V. Ilaguenas$) $22^{\circ}54'$ $43'$ S. lon. $43^{\circ}9'$ W. (n.) All writers who have approached it from the sea, describe the scenery in rapturous terms, though it is probable that their feelings of admiration may have been unconsciously heightened by the prospect of immediate release from the dangers and miseries of a long voyage. On surveying the coast, the first object which meets the view is the Pão-de-Açúcar, a peak so called from its sugar-loaf like appearance, and rising abruptly from the sea to the height of nearly 1000 ft. On proceeding N into the bay among a number of beautiful little islands, clothed with richest verdure, or crowned with magnificent palm-trees, the land, both on the right and left, projects into the sea, leaving a passage between rocky barriers not more than 1 m. wide. Immediately beyond the magnificent portal on the left or W., lies the city of Rio-de-Janeiro, guarded from hostile approach by sea by a number of forts, placed partly on islands, and partly on salient points of the mainland, and so advantageously that in good hands they would form most effectual defenses. The site consists of flat ground along the shore, and of five hills of considerable height with intervening valleys. The ground beyond, partly cultivated and adorned with numerous villas, and partly covered with forest, ascends with considerable rapidity towards the N. where the distance is terminated by a remarkable white mountain range, called from its slope the Serra-dos-Órgãos or Organ Mountains. Owing to the broken nature of the surface, the houses placed on the hills present a conspicuous and striking appearance but the houses which occupy the hollows are scarcely visible from the sea, and hence the town, viewed from that direction, seems much less extensive than it actually is. The oldest, and still most important part of the city is situated on the hills, and the houses which occupy the hollows are scarcely visible from the sea, and hence the town, viewed from that direction, seems much less extensive than it actually is. The oldest, and still most important part of the town, occupies a flat tongue of land of an irregularly quadrangular shape, having its greatest length N.W. to S.E. The hills already mentioned are on the N. side, and approach so close to the sea as to leave room for only a single street, towards the S. and S.E. the lofty and finely-wooded promontories of Mount Corcovado press close upon the houses, the space between is generally level, and covered with houses of substantial and often elegant appearance, regularly built, for the most part of granite, with an upper story of wood covered with tiles, and having long and generally narrow streets, which intersect each other at right angles, and are well paved with granite in the centre, and a raised side-path for foot-passengers but have the serious disadvantage of being very imperfectly drained. On the W. side of this part of the town, is a large square called Campo da Acazambone, and immediately beyond it, and approached by a bridge built over an arm of the sea, is the new town, almost the whole of which has risen into existence since the arrival of the court. It has thus all de Misericórdia, founded in 1597, and richly endowed, the Hospital of Invalids, and the Hospital of Leprosy and Skin Diseases.

The educational and literary institutions include the imperial college, in which Latin, English, French, mathematics, philosophy, and theology are taught; the college of São-José, in which similar instruction is given; a school of medicine and surgery, a naval and military academy, an academy of belles-lettres, and a library of 80,000 volumes, and a botanical garden. The principal criminal establishment is the house of correction, but there are also two large prisons within the city, and numerous smaller prisons, both in the town and in the different parts. The prisons of Rio-de-Janeiro are one of the finest in the world. It is perfectly sheltered is deep enough for vessels of the largest size, and so spacious, that it may be said to have no limits. All the vessels in the world might ride in it without jostling each other. The accommodation on shore is, however defective. The want of good quays makes the landing-places very indifferent, and there is nothing which deserves the name of docks. Repeated attempts have been made to establish manufactures on a large scale, and imperial patronage has been lavishly bestowed on them, but as yet they barely maintain a sickly existence. The only articles deserving of notice are leather and glass, which owe any prosperity which they possess to foreign skill and industry. But the want of manufactures is compensated by a most extensive trade in all the produce of the country, and particularly in hides, sugar and coffee. The exports of the first two, though of considerable extent, have rather declined in recent years, but that of the latter has long continued to advance with rapid strides, and the amount annually shipped rose from 478,950 bags in 1832

VUE CRUISE DE LA GLOIRE, RIO-DE-JANEIRO. — From Yacht, Voyage autour du Brésil.

the advantages of modern construction, and is distinguished by its general elegance, and a number of fine squares. The principal public buildings are the senate-house (Palácio do Senado Imperial), a large modern structure, on the N. side of Campo da Acazambone (not possessed of much architectural merit); the town-house (Palácio Municipal) a simple and unadorned edifice, yet not without an air of majesty; the magnificent church of Nossa Senhora da Gloria, one of the most recent and sumptuous churches of the city, finely situated on a rounded hill of the same name which projects into the sea; the church of São-Francisco, with a helixes obtained, and surmounted by two round towers, the church of the Cross, richly decorated both within and without the church of Candelária, one of the largest in the city adorned with a majestic façade and surmounted by two towers the loftiest in Brazil; the convent of São-Bento, a massive structure, with windows, heavily barred with iron gratings, which give it the appearance of a prison, but is richly decorated within; the nearly its whole interior is gilt; the convent of St. Anthony a gorgeous edifice, with two immense chapels and a vast cloister, on a hill opposite to it, the monastery of St. Theresa the aqueduct, the finest architectural monument of which Rio-de-Janeiro can boast, consisting of a double series of 42 lofty and beautiful arches, stretching from Mount Corcovado, and conveying the water of its springs into the heart of the city, to supply its numerous and elegant fountains, the theatre, a vast structure, deficient in regularity and symmetry, the imperial palace, a large stone building, long used as a residence by the viceroys, and now, with exception of a suite of rooms in which a court is occasionally held, appropriated to public offices, the palace of the fine arts, a beautiful structure, concealed and almost buried among old ramous houses, the senate-house, the exchange, prominently situated in the Rio de Janeiro, the widest and finest of the streets, the Post-office, courthouses, the mint, opera-house, naval arsenal, and museum. Among benevolent establishments are the Casa to 2 069 637 bags in 1861

UNITED EXPORTS OF DOMESTIC PRODUCTS FROM RIO-DE-JANEIRO.

		1848.	1857.	1861.
Coffee	bags	1 611 000	1 681 400	1 800 100
Sugar	cases	8 115	8 21	9 752
Hides	number	804 566	25 482	23,944
Hides, half-tanned	"	17 391	4 122	38,287
Horns	"	444,100	447 007	283,267
Rice	bags	14,915	30 051	—
Pean	pieces	8 048	3 550	2 734
Brownwood	pieces	1 868	300	867
Tobacco	rolls	18 445	31 707	33 307
Ipocastanina...	lbs.	40 755	23,601	42,048
Tapiocha.	barrels	4 01	1 970	54,115
				12,000 lbs.

The principal imports are silk, linen, woollen cotton tissues, chiefly from England and France iron, worked or in bars, from England and Sweden various cordage, and sail-cloth chiefly from Bremen and large quantities of flour from the United States. In 1848 the total imports from Great Britain amounted to £1 427,691 and in 1861 to £2 887,894.

TOTAL VESSELS ENTERED AND CLEARED IN PORTS OF COMMERCE AND COASTWISE, 1845-1857 and 1861

Year.	ENTRANCE.		CLEARANCE.
	Vessels.	Tons.	Vessels.	Tons.
1845	878	264,900	881	274,653
1846	981	318,819	1 008	311 728
1847	987	308,547	961	308 457
1861	2,001	486,618	2,080	573,760

The first settlement in the neighbourhood of Rio-de-Janeiro was formed by the French in 1555, and consisted chiefly of Protestant refugees. Their leader Villegaignon, having proved a renegade to his faith, had almost ruined the settlement by internal dissension, when a Portuguese force appeared and completed its destruction in 1567. The songwriters laid the foundation of a new city which they called St. Sebastian, and which has continued to advance. It has grown up into the present capital of Rio-de-Janeiro. Bahia was formerly the capital of the country but on the arrival of Don John in 1608 he transferred the seat of government to this city. Pop. 170,000 of whom 80,000 are Brazilians by birth or adoption; 125,000 foreigners, and 85,000 slaves.

RIO-DE-LA HACHA New Granada. See HACHA.

RIO-DUTRA a large bay coast of Galicia, Right of Bahia, R. the Old Calabar River W. the Cameroons River and 50 m. N. Fernando Po. It receives several creeks and on its shores are several populous villages.

RIO-DULCE, a river Central America. See DULCE.

RIO-GRANDE, JERA or GRAN, a large river W. Africa, rises in Fouta Djallon about lat. 11° 20' N. lon. 11° W. flows W. and enters the Atlantic by a wide estuary between the Nines and the Cameroons. See JERA.

RIO-GRANDE-DE-LA PLAZA, a river, Bolivia. See GUAYR.

RIO-GRANDE-DO-TORE a maritime prov. in the N. E. of Brazil lat. 4° 37' to 7° 30' S. lon. 52° to 58° 40' W. bounded N. and E. by the Atlantic, N. prov. Pernambuco, and W. Ceara, area, 28,960 sq. m. The surface is mountainous in the S. and S.W. where it is covered by several mountain ranges, of which those of the Carinas Novas and Tibão are the most conspicuous. These ranges gradually descend towards the N. and E. and finally sink down into extensive sandy fields, particularly on approaching the coast. The principal rivers, which have all either a N. or an E. direction, are the Aguanzã, Apodi, Ceará-Mirim, Comina, Guapah, Piranhas the longest of all, Potengi or Grande, Serro, and Taperia. Having their sources within the province, or on its frontiers, and finishing their courses within it they are of comparatively small extent and though well fitted to facilitate transport from the interior by canoes and barges, are not of much navigable importance. The same remark applies to the coast, the greater part of which is lined by dangerous shoals. It presents numerous small harbours, at which the inferior class of commerce can take in cargoes, but throughout its whole stretch of nearly 300 m. there is not one harbour capable of receiving large vessels. The proximity to the equator makes the climate intensely hot. It is said however not to be unhealthily the air being remarkably pure. The soil is generally good, but not remarkable for its fertility. For a long time the sugar-cane was the principal cultivated crop, but considerable tracts, formerly devoted to it, are now occupied by cotton, which may be regarded as the staple of the province. The other leading crops are manioc, millet, and haricot. Many of the plains are covered with pasture which is grazed by large herds of horses and cattle. The minefields include gold, silver and iron but the quantity is so small that there are scarcely any mines in active operation with exception of those of salt, the produce of which is of some importance. Amethysts and rock-crystals abound, and quarries of limestone, sand and granite might be opened in every district. The forests are not very extensive, but are rich in rosins, gums and balsams, and furnish excellent dye-wood and various kinds of timber. Along the coast, where the soil is sandy the different species of palm predominate. The principal exports are salt, cotton, sugar, hides, dressed and undressed, raw fish, and drugs. For administrative purposes, this province is divided into two comarcas—Natal and Açu. Its provincial assembly, composed of 20 members, holds its sittings at Natal. Besides Natal it includes the towns of Açu, Apodi, Estremoz, Comina, Porto Alegre, Santa Anna-de-Mato, Rio-Gonçalo, Rio-Joaquim, Rio-Joaquim-Angico, Tórcos, &c. Its name is derived from the river Potengi, which the first explorers improperly named Rio-Grande. Pop. 110,000.

RIO-GRANDE-DO-RIO, or DO-RIO-PARDO, a r. Brazil, prov. Rio-Pardo-de-Rio-Grande, agreeably situated on a peninsula between the Bay of Mangueiras and the S. extremity of the Lake of Foz de Iguaçu lat. 52° 7' S. lon. 52° 6' W. (a). Its houses are almost all of earth, and its streets are unpaved. It contains a parish and two other churches, a townhouse with prison, a Latin and two primary schools, and in the east of a court whose jurisdiction extends from the sea W. to Uruguay, and from Lake Petos to Curitiba-Grande. Its port, which is well sheltered, and admits vessels drawing 15 ft., enables it to carry on a considerable trade in dried beef, tallow, wax, horns, &c. and particularly hides, of which the quantities imported into Great Britain, in 1845-46, were as follows:—

Imports into Great Britain of Rio-Grande Salized Hides.

Imported into	1845.	1846.	1847.	1848.
Liverpool.	63,500	61,060	62,200	62,200
London	119,500	108,960	99,200	99,200
Outputs	114 00	65,000	125,000
Total.	222,400	234,960	286,500	416,500

One of the greatest obstacles to the prosperity of the town is the want of good water which is only obtained by digging very deep wells, or bringing it from a distance of 4 m. Pop. dist. 12,000.

RIO-NEGR several rivers, S. America. See NEGR.

RIO-PARDO, a r. Brazil, prov. Rio-Pardo-de-Rio-Grande, a bank river of same name, near its confluence with the Jacuhy, 80 m. W. Porto Alegre. It contains several churches, a Latin and two primary schools, at the seat of a court of justice, and has a harbour fit only to admit coasters, which generally load with meat, or Paraguay tea, dried beef, and other kinds of produce. The district is fertile, and the soil appears to be particularly adapted for the growth of fax. It has suffered much by civil dissensions. (Pop. dist.) 10,445.

RIO-PIRETO, two places Brazil.—(a) A to prov. and 380 m. W. N. W. Bahia, at the confluence of the Preto with the Grande, an affluent of the São-Francisco. It has a church and a school.—(b) A vil. and par. prov. Minas-Geraes, a bank of one of the earliest affluents of the Araguari, 35 m. N. E. Diamantina with a church. In addition to the ordinary produce, it raises a great quantity of cotton. Pop. 3,000.

RIO-SECO (MINHA) a r. to Spain, Leon, prov. and 26 m. N. W. Valladolid, in a magnificent plain, beside the river of same name. It was formerly of much importance, having been a kind of emporium in the 14th century but its industry and commerce have greatly declined. It has several churches, and a suppressed Franciscan convent, converted now into an hospital; manufacturers of leather, serge, and linen, dye-works, and lime and brick kilns. The Spaniards, 50,000 strong, under Blake and Omeia, defeated here in 1808 by Bonaparte with 10,000 French and lost 6,000 killed and wounded, the loss of the French being under 600. Rio-Seco was mercenarily sacked by the conquerors. Pop. 8,777.

RIO-TIERRA (LAS-MINAS-DE) a r. to Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 36 m. N. E. Huelva, picturesque situated in a basin, surrounded by pine-clad hills. It consists of good modern houses, and of paved and well enclosed streets contains a parish and an auxiliary church, a primary school, and a mining directory, and has in its vicinity mines of iron, lead and copper which have been worked with success from a very early period, and extensive smelting establishments, and malleable iron-works. Pop. 937.

RIO-YERREMO two places, Brazil.—(a) A vil. and par., lat. and prov. Santa-Catharina, with a church. The inhabitants grow sugar-cane and fax. Pop. 1290.—(b) A vil. and par., prov. Minas-Geraes, on the Barrero, near its junction with the Vermelho, 110 m. E. N. E. Serro. It consists chiefly of a number of earthen houses containing the church, grows tobacco and coffee and provisions for the supply of Diamantina. Pop. 4000.

RIOJAMBA (Jurema), a r. Ecuador 80 m. N. E. Guayaquil, and 11 m. from the ruins of Old Eshamba, which was destroyed by an earthquake in 1797. Pop. 24,900, chiefly Indians.

RIOGRANDE, a vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and 4 m. N. E. Malaga with a townhouse, prison, school, church, and two hospitals. Pop. (agriculture) 2465.

RIOJA, an anc. dist. Spain, included in the modern provs. of Navarre, Burgos, and Alava. It was divided into High and Low Rioja, the former extending from Belorado to Logroño, and the latter from Logroño to Alfoz and Carceres-de-Belorado; the chain of hills which separates the basins of the Ebro and Duero formed the boundary between the two. This district is about 70 m. to 80 m. in length, and 80 m. to 85 m. in breadth, and its soil is fertile, but most sternly cultivated. Pop. 26,000.

RIOJA, a vil. Spain, Andalusia, prov. and about 8 m. from Almería; with a church, cordeliers, prison, and pot-very school, an oil and a flour mill. Guinea is found near it. Pop. 1049.

ROJSA (La) an island prov., and its cap. La Plata lat. 28° to 31° S. lon. 68° 30' W. to the Chilian Andes, bounded, N. by prov. Catamarca, E. Cordoba, and S. San Juan. It is intersected N. to S. by the parallel ranges of the Famatina Mountains, and the Sierra Yalisco. The Varadero and the Juchal are the principal rivers. The vine is cultivated in the N. part of this province towards the W. the inhabitants are employed in agriculture, and at a particular season, in hunting the vicuñas in the Andes; great quantities of cattle are reared on the rich pastures of the Llanos in the S., but the fairs of the province arise chiefly from the vices of silviculture in the Famatina Mountains, which are said to be superior in richness to those of Potosí. Besides Roja, the capital, the other principal towns are Chicheto, Guandacol, and Colorado. Pop. about 30 000. — The capital, Roja, is situated at the foot of the Sierra de Yalisco lat. 29° 8', lon. 67° 50' W. It was founded in 1691. Pop. about 25000.

RIOLOBOS, a vil. Spain, Extremadura, prov. and about 40 m. S. from Cáceres, near the Alagón with a church, primary school, an oil and a flour mill, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1065.

RIOLS, a tn. France, dep. Hérault, 3 m. N.E. St. Pons in a valley, watered by the Jaur. It is well built and has manufactures of woollen cloth. Pop. 2131.

RIOM [anc. Rhomagnum] a tn. France, dep. Puy-de-Dôme, in a fertile plain near the Ambone 10 m. N. Clermont. It is encircled by well planted boulevards has spacious streets, and houses, which, though of a somewhat gloomy appearance from the dark lava of which they are built, are generally good, and occasionally handsome. The only buildings deserving of particular notice are the courthouse, prefecture, several hospitals, and the remains of the old ducal castle, of which there is still a chapel in good preservation. The principal manufacture is linen, and there are several distilleries and tanneries. The trade is in corn, wine, hemp, fruit, and oil. Riom is the seat of a court of first resort and commerce, and possesses a communal college, and has four annual fairs. Pop. 3058.

RIOMAGGIORE a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, dep. Cuneo, prov. Lanzo, 5 m. W. Spigno, on the Gulf of Genoa, in a ravine, on the sides of an impetuous torrent. It has an ancient Gothic church, a still more ancient sanctuary, the remains of an old castle, and a considerable trade in wine, which is largely grown in the vicinity. Pop. 2704.

RIOMFALVA, a market tn. Austria, Transylvania, about 10 m. from Medias, with a Protestant church and a trade in wine. Pop. 3142.

RIONERO, two tns. Naples — 1. A tn. prov. Salerno 9 m. N. N. W. Laurus, on a hill with a church and chapel. Pop. 1820. — 2. A tn. prov. Basilicata, 6 m. S. Melfi, partly in a valley and partly on two hills with three churches, and a Capuchin convent. Its chief manufacture is woollen stuffs. Pop. 10000.

RIOU, a small tn. France, dep. Bouches-du-Rhône, 7 m. S. by W. Marseilles; lat. 48° 10' N. and lon. 5° 35' E. It is of some importance as standing in the fur way for that harbor in coming from the S. E.

RIQUW, Indian Archipelago. See Rano.

RIPA, several places, Naples — 1. (Sotto) A tn. prov. Salerno, 9 m. S. S. W. Laurus, at the foot of a high hill with three churches. Pop. 2500. — 2. (Cassidà) A tn. prov. Basilicata, 6 m. S. E. Melfi, on a height with four churches, a monastery and a sanctuary. St. Donatus was born here. Pop. 3000. — 3. (di Otranto) A tn. prov. Abruzzo-Ulteriore, on a hill, r. bank Alento. It contains four churches and a monastery. Pop. 3700.

RIPALIMOSANI, a tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, 7 m. N. Campobasso, in a valley, with three churches, 12 chapels, and a convent. Pop. 3525.

RIPABELLA or RIPABELLA, a vil and com. Tuscany, 25 m. from Pisa, on the top of a hill above the Rialdo with a church, a school, the remains of an old castle, and a trade in corn. Pop. 1253.

RIPATEMBIONE, a tn. Italy The Marches, 11 m. S. E. Fermo; the see of a bishop. Pop. 3000.

RIFE, par. Eng. Sussex, 1120 ac. Pop. 233.

RIFEN, a tn. Denmark. See Risa.

RIPENTYE, a vil Hungary, Thibster Thelen, co. Marmaros, on the Nagay, 56 m. from Balgatz. It has a Greek church. Pop. 2725.

RIPLEY, two places, England: — 1. A market tn. and par. co. York (W. Riding), 184 m. N. Leeds, and a station on the Leeds and Thirsk railway. It is neat and well built; has a spacious cruciform church, a Methodist chapel, and a free school. At Ripley Castle Oliver Cromwell passed the night succeeding the memorable battle of Marston Moor area par. 6538 ac. Pop. 1286. — 2. A vil and chapelry co. Derby, 4 m. S. by W. Alfreton. It is an improving place, lighted with gas; and has a neat modern chapel of ease, places of worship for Wesleyans and Unitarians, a national school, many features of sandalwood and stay-lace, and extensive collieries. Many of the inhabitants are employed at the Buttery iron-works. Pop. 3071.

RIPOLL, a tn. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 51 m. W. N. W. Girona, in a valley at the confluence of the Ter and Fraser. It contained a fine Benedictine church and monastery, which, as well as the town itself, were almost destroyed during the last civil war. It is now only recovering gradually from its calamities, but so much of it as has been rebuilt is in a very improved form, and the whole when completed, will make Ripoll one of the handsomest towns in the province. It was once famous for its manufacture of fire-arms. Pop. 529.

RIPOLLCT, a vil. Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 6 m. from Barcelona, 1 bank river of same name. It has a church, a school, manufactures of cotton twist and copperware, several paper and flour mills, and a trade in the above articles of manufacture, and in agricultural produce. Pop. 1281.

RIPON a city, par. and market town, co. York (W. Riding), 1 bank river, here crossed by a handsome stone bridge of 11 arches 22 m. N. N. W. York, on the Leeds and Thirsk Railway. It has four principal streets, but well kept streets, rising from all sides towards the spacious marketplace, which is surrounded by good houses, with a handsome obelisk in the centre. On the S. side of the market-place stands the townhall, an elegant structure, comprising a handsome suite of assembly-rooms, with other accommodations. The cathedral is one of the finest churches in England. It is a large cruciform structure, with two square towers each 140 ft. high, length E. to W. 266 ft., length of transept, 132 ft. It contains many stupendous and interesting monuments. Trinity church is also a very handsome building, cruciform, and in the Gothic style of architecture. There are chapels for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Independents, and R. Catholics a grammar two national and several other schools, a dispensary and literary institution. Inhabitants chiefly engaged in agriculture. Ripon sends two members to Parliament. Area of par. 55 778 ac. Pop. par. 15 103, bor. 6080. RIPINGALF, par. Eng. Lincoln 2740 ac. P. 681. RIPPLE, par. Eng. Kent 1134 ac. Pop. 223. RIPPLB, a vil and par. England, co. Worcester, 4 m. N. by W. Tewkesbury with a handsome church a chapel of ease, several almshouses and limestone quarries. Area of par. 4140 ac. Pop. 1037.

RIPPOLDSEA, a vil. Baden, circle Middle Rhine, in the Schapbachthal, 31 m. E. S. E. Strasburg. It possesses alaly-bate springs, with a complete bathing establishment, which is much frequented. Above 540 000 bottles of water are annually exported. Pop. 818.

RIPPONDFN a vil and chapelry, England co. York, on the road from Manchester to Rochdale, and on the Ryburne, here crossed by two stone bridges, 6 m. S. W. Halifax. It has a chapel of the Tuscan order, with a tower a Wesleyan chapel and several sandstone quarries. Pop. 7417.

RIPTON, two par. Eng. Huntingdon — 1. (Abbot's) 2656 ac. Pop. 371. — 2. (King's), 1210 ac. Pop. 259.

RISANO a tn. Austria, Dalmatia, circle and 10 m. N. Cattaro, on a bay of the Adriatic enclosed by finely wooded hills. It has a church, a monastery, a castle seated on the summit of a rock overlooking the town, and a harbour, at which a considerable trade is carried on. Pop. 1000.

RISBOROUGH (Moor's), par. Eng. Bucks, 2220 ac. Pop. 1064.

RISBOROUGH (Parrish), a market tn. and par. England, co. Bucks. The town, 7 m. S. E. Aylesbury, at the foot of the Chiltern Hills, and on the North Western railway, has an ancient church, places of worship for Baptists and Wes-bygone, a feudal castle, and several small churches. On the W. side of the Chilterns, and a great one, out in the chalk, which is supposed to commemorate a victory of Edward the Elder over the Danes. Area of par. 4710 ac. Pop. 2817

RIBBY, par Eng. Suffol., 2801 ac. Pop. 431

RIBCA, par Eng. Monmouth 1877 ac. Pop. 2044

RIBDOUF or RIBDOUCO, a vil Hungary on Epe, 4 m from Kismark. It is an ancient place, formerly of much more importance than at present, and has a Protestant and a E. Catholic parish churches, manufactures of linen, and an active trade, particularly in timber. Pop. 984

RIBE, par Eng. York (E. Riding), 2013 ac. P. 197

RIBESOLME, par Eng. Lincoln 1870 ac. P. 103

RIBSELEY, par Eng. Bedford 1980 ac. Pop. 949

RIBSHANGLE, par Eng. Suffolk 718 ac. Pop. 279

RIBSWORTH a vil and township England co York, 7 m. S.W. Halifax, with Baptist and Independent chapels, a large and richly-endowed free grammar-school, and some Dissident remains. Pop. 1640

RIBSING (Cassels) a vil and par England co Norfolk on a stream of same name, about 2 m. from the Wash, and 4 m. N. E. Lynn. It was once a borough and market town and a considerable seaport, but lost its trade by the silting up of its harbor; and, having devolved into comparative insignificance, was disfranchised by the Reform Act. It has still an ancient church, with fine specimens of the Norman style, particularly on its W. front an hospital of early date providing accommodation for 12 poor females a national school and interesting remains of a celebrated Norman castle, in which the queen of Edward II. was confined from 1330 to her death in 1358. The remains consist chiefly of the shell of the keep, a square tower with walls 9 ft. thick and some ornamented, though greatly dilapidated, doorways and windows. Area of par. 2196 ac. Pop. 392

RISING-SUN a vil U. States, Indiana, pleasantly situated on an elevated bank above the Ohio 87 m. S.E. Indianapolis, with six churches, country buildings, an academy two newspapers, a tannery and several cotton and woolen factories.

RISINGTON (three par Eng Gloucester—1 (Great) 2430 ac. Pop. 498 —2 (Little) 1300 ac. Pop. 278 —3, (Wych) 1140 ac. Pop. 219

RISION (Lons) par Eng York (E. Riding) 2490 ac Pop. 400

RITTANA a vil and com. Italy Piedmont prov. Cuni near Borgo San-Paluzzo, in a mountainous district, with a church, a public school an oratory and a charitable endowment. Pop. 1029

RITZBERG, or TORMAK, a vil Hungary Thibier Thiem co, Temes, 8 m. from Zeebel with a Protestant church Pop. 1242

RITTE (Garm and Klein) two nearly contiguous vils Hungary about 8 m. from LUTONISCH with a church Pop. 1665

RITZBÜTTLE, a free town, Germany belonging to Hamburg cap. head at the mouth of the Elbe 60 m. N.W. Hamburg. It contains a church of recent erection a prison and a castle surrounded with deep ditches. The MALINWICK area, 16 sq. m. includes the aspect of Cuxhaven, and is surrounded by the territories of Hanoover. Pop. 1745

RUI DECAÑA a vil Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 16 m. from Terragona, with a church, handsome primary school and numerous mills. Pop. 1190

RUIDECOLA, a vil Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 18 m. N.W. Terragona with an ancient castle, church, courthouse, prison, primary school; a distillery and several oil and flour mills. Pop. 1230

RUIDEVITTLES, a vil Spain Catalonia, prov. and about 24 m. from Barcelona, in a valley traversed by a small stream. It has a church courthouse, prison primary school, hospital and manufactures of cotton twist and brown paper Pop. 1311

RUIDOMA, a vil Spain, Catalonia, prov. and 11 m. W. Terragona, in a vine-covered plain. It has good streets and a handsome square, a townhouse, prison, primary school, a remount court, a church, and an hospital, flour and oil mills, brandy-distilleries, and a soapery. Pop. 3147

RIVA, or RIEA a vil Austria, Tyrol, circle and 9 m. W. B.W. Innsbruck, at the N.W. extremity of Lake Garda, among orange-groves and olive-groves, hemmed in by precipices, and surrounded by lofty mountains, very poorly built, with narrow, dirty, and dilapidated streets. It has two castles a handsome church, a monastery and a Minorite hospital, manufactures of paper and articles in iron, particularly Jews harps of which nearly a million are annually made. The harbour is the largest on the lake, and greatly favours its trade, which is considerable, Riva being the entrepot for the traffic between Germany and Italy. The fishing in the lake is actively carried on. Pop. 2000

RIVA or RIVA DI CHIESA, a vil Italy Piedmont, div. and 11 m. S.E. Turin. It presents a pleasing appearance having well-built houses, a public square, and spacious streets. It is the seat of a court of justice and has a parish church, a communal school a charitable endowment and two castles, one of them very ancient and the other a handsome modern structure, with fine gardens. Pop. 2697

RIVADABIA, or RIBADABIA, a vil Spain, Galicia, prov. and 16 m. S.W. Orense, in a defile of Mount Sauto Domingo, near r. bank Abas. here crossed by a bridge of three arches. It contains four churches a townhouse, prison, and primary school manufactures of linen, and a Hito trade. Pop. 1315

RIVADEO a seaport, Spain, Galicia, prov. and 37 m. N.P. Lugo, in a beautiful bay at the mouth of the Eo and E. boundary of Galicia lat. 43 34' N. lon. 7 W. It has two squares, ill-paved, very narrow and dark streets a townhouse several elementary schools, and one for mathematics and navigation a theatre an harmonie society a church two convents, seven hermitages, and a pretty cloister, besides a castle with two towers two flour-mills, and some coasting trade. Rivadeo was taken and sacked in 1585 by the English under Sir Thomas Percy. Pop. 2688

RIV ALTA a vil Italy Piedmont, div. and 16 m. S.W. Alessandria r. bank Bormida. It is a small but handsome place, consisting of well-built houses, and spacious well formed streets and has a court of justice two churches, and a school Pop. 1885

RIV ALTA (Latin Ripalta) a vil and com. Parma, ducal and 10 m. S.W. Piacenza, 1 bank Taro, with an old castle now partly converted into a country seat a primary school, and a trade in corn, wine, and timber. Pop. 2633

RIVANAZZA a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. and near Voghera with a church and an hospital Pop. 3062

RIVARA a vil and com. Italy Piedmont div. and 22 m. N.W. Turin in a mountainous district between the Oro and the Malone. It consists of a few small squares and narrow streets has a court of justice a parish church, and a large old castle or fortress. Pop. 3624

RIVAROLA two places Italy Lombardy gov. Milan —1 (Zueri) A vil and com. prov. and 18 m. W. S.W. Mantua, near the Dugale Delmona. It is an ancient place, surrounded by very thick walls, and entered by four gates has a handsome square surrounded by four porticoes and two churches. Pop. 3474 —2, (del Rio, or Dantio) A vil and par prov. and about 5 m. from Cremona with a church and two castles. Pop. 2600

RIVAROLA two vil Italy Piedmont—1 Div. and 3 m. N.W. Geneva, in a beautiful district near r. bank Folcorte. It has a court of justice, a parish church, a finely situated Franciscan convent, and two handsome palaces. Pop. 5684 —2 Div. and 17 m. N. by E. Turin, on a height above r. bank Oro surrounded by ancient walls, with four gates. It is well built, has several handsome squares, and very clean streets, a court of justice, two churches, two manerxes, and a college Pop. 6082

RIVE-DE-GIER a vil France, dep. Loire, on the railroad from Lyons to St. Etienne, at the commencement of the canal of Orveau, and on the Gier, 25 m. S.E. Moulins. It is almost wholly of modern construction, having nearly doubled its population within the last 30 years and owes its prosperity to the coal-field which surrounds it, the most valuable possessed by France Lyons, and many other important towns, depend upon it for their supplies. It does not possess any additions of particular interest. The old Roman bridge across the river has been taken down, and its place supplied by five new bridges, three of stone and two of wood the old church, also has been rebuilt, and a second church added and the whole town has undergone a complete transformation. The most important manufacture is that of glass, which is carried on to a great extent in numerous glass-works, where, in addition to bottles, of which above 8,000,000 are annually made, and window-glass, much fine crystal and stained fancy glass are produced. There are also manufactures of ribbons, thread, silk, flax, and tools of various descriptions and extensive spinning and other mills; foundries, machine, engine, and other iron-works. Pop. 11,694.

RIVERA a small seaport, Spain, Galicia prov and 67 m S.S.W. Coruña, at the S. skirt of the hill Barbanza, and surrounded by the Bay of Arores and the sea. It has an endowed school for both sexes, a church, and in the vicinity a hermitage. The fishing and curing of sardines was a flourishing branch of industry formerly but it has now become unimportant. It includes several small hamlets, 2292.

RIVERIA (a) to Naples, prov. Basilicata, 4 m. S. Lago negro, on a hill, 1 bank Treccina, with two churches and a monastery. Pop. 5140.

RIVENHALL par Eng Essex, 3569 ac. Pop. 728.

RIVER par Eng Kent, 1181 ac. Pop. 487.

RIVERGAKO, a tn and com. Parma, duchy and 11 m. S.W. Piacenza, in a dall between hills and bank Trebbia. It has a beautiful modern church, a primary school, a trade in corn, wine, cattle, and milk, and one of the most important fairs in the duchy. Petroleum is found in the vicinity. Pop. 8607.

RIVERHEAD a vil U. States New York on Long Island, 77 m E. New York city, at the head of the navigation on Peconic Bay. It contains a county-hall, a Congregational and a New Jerusalem church an academy and grist and saw mills. Wood is extensively exported to New York. Pop. about 2000.

RIVESALTES [anc. Combusta] a tn France, dep. Pyrénées-Orientales, 5 m. N. Perpignan on the Agly in the centre of a plain encircled by sloping vineyards. It is a place of great antiquity and was early surrounded by walls and round towers, of which only vestiges now remain. The sweet wine, which bears its name, is considered the best in France. Its trade is in wine brandy of which there are several distilleries flour and wool. Pop. 3702.

RIVISONDOLI a tn. Naples prov. Abruzzo-Ultra II, N.E. Sulmona, on a hill. It has six churches. Pop. 1900.

RIVOLI a vil kingd. of Italy prov. Venetia prov and 14 m. N.W. Verona, near r. bank Adige in an elliptical basin bounded on the E. by the river and surrounded on all other sides by mountains. It contains a parish church, and gave the title of duke to Bonaparte's general Massena, for his services in the victory which the French gained here over the Austrians in 1797.

RIVOLI a tn Italy Piedmont div and 8 m. W. Turin, beautifully situated on the last slopes of the Alps. It is surrounded by fine villas belonging to the inhabitants of Turin as well built having several handsome streets, and a large square. It has a royal castle a court of justice, two parish churches, several suppressed convents, a superior and other schools, and an hospital and manufactures of woollen goods ribbons, and muslins. At the outskirts of the town commences a magnificent planted avenue, which is continued with out interruption to the capital. Pop. 5195.

RIVOLTÀ a tn and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. Lodi near 1 bank Adige 16 m. E. Milan with two churches, an infirmary hospital and two other charitable institutions. Pop. 8582.

RIVOLTELLA, a vil and com. Italy Lombardy prov and 19 m. E. Brescia, S. shore Lake Garda, with two churches a sanctuary three oratories, and numerous Roman antiquities. Pop. 1467.

RIXENBAET a vil and com. Belgium, prov. Brabant, on the Lamps, 15 m. S.E. Brussels. It has a brewery a tannery, a flour-mill, and a trade in wood and agricultural produce. Pop. 1846.

RIXHEIM, or Reims, a tn. France, dep. Haut-Rhin 14 m. N.E. Altkirch. It has extensive manufactures of stained paper. There are mineral springs in the neighbourhood. Pop. 2984.

ROA [anc. Rodas], a tn Spain, Old Castile, prov and 48 m. S.W. Burgos, on the Duero. It is surrounded with ramparts, and has a large and three small squares, three churches, one of which has an elegant facade a townhouse, a large and handsome prison, a small hospital, a casino, a theatre for Lanes, an elementary school for boys, and three for girls. Outside the town are several hermitages. Agriculture is the chief occupation. Pop. 2380.

ROAD par Eng. Somerset, 938 ac. Pop. 790.

ROADÉ par Eng. Northampton, 1600 ac. Pop. 695.

ROAG (Loos), an arm of the sea, Scotland, which penetrates the W. coast of Isl. Lewis, running S.E. through the centre of the parish of Uig for about 13 m. breadth, about 8 m. It receives the streams Grinnis and Catta Loch, in both of which salmon are caught and has valuable fisheries of codling, oysters, and lobsters, particularly the last, of which about 100,000 are annually sent to London.

ROANNE [anc. Rodomanus] a tn. France, dep. Loire, connected by railroad with St. Etienne and Lyons, on the canal of Digoin, 1 bank Loire, which is here navigable, and crossed by a handsome bridge, 29 m. N. Moulins. It is well built, having houses which are generally handsome and wide, spacious streets, possesses a fine gay communal college, with a physical cabinet, public library, theatre, and hospital a court of first resort, and a consulting chamber of manufactures considerable manufactures of woolen and calico, woollen, linen, and cotton goods glue, oil, delft and common earthenware, dyes-works, tanneries building yards for barges, flax and cotton mills and carries on an important trade, partly general and partly transient as an entrepot for the wool of the Loire valley, and the merchandise of Lyons, the S. departments, and the Levant. Pop. 11,870.

ROANOKE, a river U. States Virginia, and N. Carolina. It is formed by the confluence of the Staunton and Dan flows chiefly S.E. and after a course of about 300 m. falls into Albemarle Sound. It is navigable 75 m. to the great Falls of Halifax for vessels of 45 tons and by a canal round the falls the navigation has been opened for barges to the junction of the Staunton and Dan, both of which are navigable some distance for boats of 3 tons.

ROAPOA, TWENTY-SEVEN ROAPOA or ADAM'S ISLAND an Isl. S. Pacific Ocean, Marquesas Archipelago in the N. group lat. 9° 49' S. lon. 140° 6' W. [a]. It extends nearly N. and S., 8 m. long by 4 m. broad and is rocky elevated bold and surmounted by basaltic needles of a singular aspect particularly at its S.E. extremity is a table mountain topped on each side by a lofty spire. It is covered with a luxuriant vegetation and the hills are lightly timbered with the casuarina and other trees. At the S.W. point of the island there is a bay of pleasant appearance in which good anchorage is obtained. Its shores are covered with houses surrounded with cocoa-nut trees. The natives of Roapoa are said to be more sociable than any in the Archipelago.

ROARING WATER BAY an inlet of the ocean, S. W. coast, Ireland, on Cork between Brow Head and Cape Clear stretching 9 m. in and and studded with islands.

ROASIO a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Novara, prov and 23 m. N.W. Verelli with several churches, and a convent. Pop. 3547.

ROATAN or ROATAN, an Isl. Central America, Bay of Honduras, 95 m. from the coast greatest length, N.W. by W. about 27 m. breadth, about 10 m. in its coast is rendered dangerous by reefs, but it has some good roadsteads on the S. and another on the E. called Fort-Royal, which, though difficult of access from the narrowness of its entrance, is capacious, and has ample depth of water within. The soil is fertile, and owing to the warm nature of the climate the vegetation is very luxuriant. The cocoa tree is abundant, and figs and vines are found growing spontaneously. Pop. 4000.

ROATH par Wales, Glamorgan 3500 ac. Pop. 812.

ROBBEN ISLAND a small Isl. S. Africa, off Cape of Good Hope at the entrance of False Bay, lat. 33° 48' 12" S., lon. 18° 52' 45" E. [a].

ROBINIAFE or ROBINIAFE, a vil and com. Italy Lombardy prov Como, at the foot of Mount Orbie, with a church. Wine and fruit are produced within the district. Pop. 1012.

ROBBIO a tn. Italy Piedmont, div and 12 m. S. Novara, with a court of justice, two churches, three oratories, and a small hospital. Pop. 3850.

ROBE, a river Ireland, co. Mayo. It falls into Lough Mask, after a W. S. W. course of about 25 m., 3 m. N.W. Ballinrobe.

ROBECCO a vil. and com. Italy, Lombardy gov. Milan, prov. and 8 m. N. Cremona, r. bank Olho with a church and chapel. Pop. 1560.

ROBEN par. Irel. Mayo 10,340 ac. Pop. 3222.

ROBIAL, a tn. Melkenburg-Schwerin circle, Wendisch, on a creek in the W. of Lake Miltitz, 34 m. S.W. Götting. It is walled, has three gates, two churches, a brewery, distillery and three mills. Pop. 3210.

ROBELLA, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Alessandria, prov. Asti, with a church, a communal school, and a charitable endowment. Pop. 1262.

ROBERTON par. Scot. Roxburgh 13 m. by 5 m. P. 670.

ROBERTON (WATSON AND) par. Scot. Lanark. P. 830.

ROBERTSTOWN par. Irel. Limerick, 5485 ac. P. 1743.

ROBOSTON (Warr) par. Wales, Pembrokeshire, 1100 ac. Pop. 140.

ROBLAC a vil. France, dep. Gard 12 m. N. Alais. Coal is worked, and there are blastfurnaces in the neighborhood. Pop. 1515.

ROBLANTIA, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. and 9 m. S.W. Cuni in an alpine district, 1 bank Veronagura. It has two parish churches, a public school, and a charitable endowment. Pop. 2373.

ROBIN HOOD'S BAY, an inlet of the North Sea, E. coast England on York (N. Riding) 5 m. S.W. E. Whitby.

ROBLA (La) a vil. Spain, prov. and 13 m. N.W. Leon with a church, courthouse, school, and manufactures of linen. Pop. 1225.

ROBLER a vil. Spain, Leon, prov. Salamanca 18 m. S. Ciudad Rodrigo. It is poorly built, has a church, courthouse, primary school, prison and a trade in cattle and cheese. Pop. 1338.

ROBLER a tn. and com. Spain, Valencia, prov. and 25 m. from Albacete with a church, courthouse, primary school, several mills and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1023.

ROBI FDO-M CHAYELA a tn. Spain, New Castile, prov. and 21 m. W. Madrid, in a little valley near the Tago. It has a church, courthouse, prison, and primary school, several flourmills and a trade in vegetable charcoal, and wool. Pop. 1074.

ROBOROUGH par. Eng. Devon, 5114 ac. Pop. 115.

ROBERTO a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. Cuni, prov. Mondovì at the bottom of an alpine valley traversed by the Rovertentale. It was once defended by a strong castle now in ruins and has a fine palace, and two churches. Pop. 1607.

ROCAR, an Isl. Atlantic Ocean, 125 m. N.E. Cape St. Roque Brazil, lat. 3° 55' S. lon. 33° 44' W. (a).

ROCCA a numerous Italy particularly, —1 (Albergo or Roccalunga) A vil. and com. Tuscany 26 m. E. Grosseto. E. side of Mount Labate, near the confluence of the Armentone with the Albegna. It contains a parish church a raincoat castle and three schools. Pop. 3508 —2 (Castello), A tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Ulteriore II, N.W. Sulmona, at the foot of Mount Morrone. It is defended by a castle, and contains a church and three chapels. Pop. 1660 —3 (Castellone), A tn. The Marches, Goleg, and 5 m. S.W. Ancona with several churches and convents. Pop. 2400 —4 (di Arcore), A tn. Piedmont, div. and 18 m. W. Alessandria, on a hill above the Tanaro. It has a square, a court of justice, a church and a school. Pop. 1708 —5 (di Agropoli), A tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Città, dist. & Campagna, on a hill. It has two churches, and two convents. Pop. 3200 —6 (di Eranio), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, 26 m. S.E. E. Salerno, on a barren mountain, 1 bank Garguano. It is defended by a castle, and contains three churches and an hospital. Pop. 1820 —7 (di Belfi), A vil. and com. Piedmont, div. Cuni, prov. and 4 m. N.W. Mondovì. It consists of two distinct parts, separated by the Fiesse, the one properly called Rocca di Belfi, situated on rising ground, and the other called Cava, on a flat. Each has a separate parish church. There is also a charitable endowment, and two annual fairs. Pop. 2250 —8 (di Ciri), A vil. and com. Piedmont, div. and 25 m. N.W. Turin, in the valley, and near the source of the Molosse, with a church. Pop. 2693 —9 (di Mezzo), A tn. Naples, prov. Abruzzo-Ulteriore II, dist. and 18 m. S.E. Aquila, in a plain with a collegiate church, and a small hospital. Pop. 1100 —10 (di Pape), A tn.

Papal States, S.E. Rome, picturesque, perched on the crest of a steep rock on the edge of the most ancient crater of the Alban Mount, 8455 ft. above sea-level. It is a longwinding place, and is supposed to occupy the site of the Arx Albana, mentioned by Livy to which the Gauls were repulsed in their attack on Rome. It was once defended by a Citadel, the remains of which are still visible, and during the 16th and 17th centuries was the stronghold of the Colonna family, and repeatedly besieged and captured. Pop. 2100 —11 (di Gioiosa), A tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Città, S.E. E. di Vallo, on Mount Bulgaria, with a monastery. —12 (di Grimaldi), A vil. and com. Piedmont, div. Alessandria, 9 m. S.E. E. Aquila on a height above 1 bank Orba. It has four churches, one of them handsome, a courthouse, and a charitable endowment. Pop. 2140 —13 (di Gualandino), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, dist. and 13 m. N.N.E. Gaeta, on a hill. It contains six churches, one of them collegiate, a Carmelite convent, with a magnificent church and an hospital. Pop. 1680 —14 (di Imperia), A tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Città, dist. and 29 m. N.E. Castrovillari, on a height near the Gulf of Taranto. It is defended by an old castle and has a church, seven chapels and a convent. Pop. 2150 —15 (di Joffredo), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, E.N.E. Gaeta. It stands grouped on several small but steep and almost inaccessible hills, and contains seven churches and two convents. Pop. 2320 —16 (di Maseda), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, dist. and 11 m. S.E. Isernia. Pop. 2400 —17 (di Montecore), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, S.W. W. Gaeta, partly on a hill and partly on a bank. It has two churches, a convent and a school. Pop. 1500 —18 (di Anversa), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, S.W. W. Gaeta, on a large mass of rocks, with five churches. Pop. 1000 —19 (di Anversa), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, E.N.E. Gaeta, on a mountain. Pop. 1780 —20 (di Anversa), A tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Città, N.W. Salerno, on the terrace. It consists of three distinct portions, at some distance from each other and forming three separate parishes, each with a parish church and a convent. Pop. 3000 —21 (di Anversa), A tn. Naples, Salerno-Ulteriore II, S.E. Salerno, with five churches, manufactures of woollen cloth, and a dye-works. Pop. 1200 —22 (di Anversa), A tn. Naples, Salerno N.W. Gaeta, on a mountain, with five churches. Pop. 1080 —23 (di San-Cosimo), A vil. and com. Tuscany 57 m. N.E. Florence, in a valley at the confluence of the Arno with the Montone. It has a court of primary resort, a handsome church, a convent, and two schools. Pop. 2822 —24 (di Anversa), A tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Città, N. San Angelo de Lombardi on a mountain near Lake Anzano from the surface of which a disagreeable odor is exhaled. Pop. 2250 —25 (di Anversa), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno-Ulteriore, E. Salerno, on a hill near the Adriatic, with four churches. Pop. 1400 —26 (di Anversa), A tn. Naples, prov. Salerno, 11 m. S. Salerno. It consists of three parts: Valle, on the W., containing two churches, a Franciscan convent, a Dominican monastery in which the bishop of Aquino usually resides, Castello, on the E., containing a fort and four churches, one of them collegiate; Capelle on the S.E. containing two churches, and growing in its vicinity the medicinal herbs from which the powder known by the name of Rocca-Bocca is made.

The celebrated schoolman Thomas Aquinas was born here. Pop. 2300 —27 (di Anversa), A vil. and com. Piedmont, div. Cuni, near the Tanaro, here crossed by a stone bridge of a single arch. It was once surrounded by walls, of which portions still remain, and has a church, and an old castle in ruins. Pop. 1069 —28 (di Anversa), A tn. Tuscany, 17 m. N.N.E. Grosseto, on a lofty ridge of hills above the Grutano, near its confluence with the Ombrone. It is walled, has two gates, a court of justice, two churches, a castle, a school, and a trade in wine and oil. Pop. 1666.

ROCCABIANCA a vil. and com. Parma, Italy, and 18 m. N.W. Parma, near r. bank Po, with a church, and a primary school, and some trade in corn, wine, hemp, and silk. Pop. 5590.

ROCCABUGLIERA a vil. and com. France, dep. Alpes Maritimes, 22 m. N. Nice; with a church, a convent, an endowed school, an hospital, and the remains of an old castle. Pop. 1663.

ROCCABRUNA, a vil. and com. Italy, Piedmont, div. and 10 m. W.W. Cuni, on a mountain slope, with two churches, and the remains of an old castle. Pop. 2512.

ROCCAFORTE, two places, Italy Piedmont.—1 A vil and com. div Cossé prov and 5 m S.S.W. Mondovì, in the hollow of a valley inclosed by steep hills, covered with chestnut-trees, at the confluence of the Lancia with the Ellero. It was once surrounded by walls, of which only vestiges remain but has still its castle, its excellent preservation, two churches and a charitable endowment. Pop. 3981.—2 A vil and com. div Genoa, prov and near Novi. It owes its name to a strong castle, extensive ruins of which still remain and has a handsome parish church. Pop. 1296.

ROCCAVERANO, a vil. Italy Piedmont, div Alessandria, prov and 10 m S.W. Aosta, near the Bormida; with a court of justice, a church, and two oratories. Pop. 1790.

ROGLAVIONE, a vil. Italy Piedmont div and 7 m S.W. Cossé and near the confluence of the Vermagnag with the Gesso. It has a court of justice, several churches an oratory and two public schools. Pop. 2286.

ROCELLA, a vil. Sicily prov and 85 m S.W. Messina, between N foot of Mount Etna and Neptunian Mountains. Pop. 2550.

ROCHETTA, a tn. Naples, prov Principato-Ultra 18 m N.E. San Angelo de Lombardi, on a hill with a handsome church and three chapels. Pop. 4000.

ROCHETTA DEL-TANARO, a vil and com. Italy Piedmont, div Alessandria, prov Asti, near the Tanaro. It has two churches and two streets. Two churches, two castles one of them in ruins and the other converted into a private mansion. Pop. 8029.

ROCHETTI A-LOUVER, a tn. Italy Piedmont div and 22 m N.E. Genoa, in the centre of the valley of Barbera at the confluence of this stream and the Susola. It is entered by two gates, has a court of justice, and an old castle to which it owes its name a church and a palace. Pop. 1215.

ROCELLA (La), a tn. Naples, prov Calabria-Ultra 11 m N.E. Gerace, on a height near the Tyrrhenian Sea with two churches. Pop. 3400.

ROCESTER, a vil and par England co Stafford, at the junction of the Churnet and Dove, and on the Uttoxeter canal 4 m. N by E Uttoxeter; with an ancient church Baptist and Methodist chapels, a national school and a large factory built by the Richard Arkwright for a cotton mill but now used for doubling lace-thread. Area of par 2105 ac. Pop. 1180.

ROCH, par Wales, Pembrokeshire 4603 ac. Pop. 763.

ROCH (Rav), a vil and com France dep Haute Savois, div Tauxemey near Ballanche. It was formerly defended by several towers of which some still remain and has a trade in cattle and dairy produce. Pop. 1670.

ROCHDALE, a market tn and par bor England, Lancashire, 10 m. N.N.E. Manchester on both sides of the Roch, here crossed by five bridges on the Rochdale canal the Calder and Hebble navigation, and the Manchester and Leeds railway. It is irregularly built, and consists for the most part of narrow and inconvenient streets, but great improvements have recently been made. Several of the old streets, more especially the principal thoroughfares, have been widened out, and various modern streets present a handsome appearance. Almost all the streets are well paved and well lighted with gas, and an abundant supply of water is obtained from four reservoirs in the vicinity. Most of the houses are built of brick, but a few of the best are built of stone obtained from quarries in the vicinity the usual covering of the roofs is stone, not slate. The places of worship in connection with the Establishment, within the parish, are about 16, but of these only five are within the borough, and the only one particularly deserving of notice is the original parish church, finely situated on a lofty height, and approached from the lower part of the town by a flight of 123 steps, it is a spacious and venerable structure of the 13th century, partly in the late Norman and partly in the Perpendicular style with a square embattled tower, several windows of rich tracery, and some very ancient monuments. Of the numerous Dissenting chapels, the Wesleyan Methodist Association Methodist, Primitive Methodist, Huntingdon Methodist, Presbyterians, Friends, R. Catholics, and Unitarians, have one each, Baptists, and Independents, two each. The other more important buildings and establishments are the townhall, a large public hall used for concerts, grammar, national, British, infant, and other schools.

The staple manufactures are woollen goods, chiefly hosiery, shawls, blankets, kerseys and cotton goods, chiefly calicoes. There are also various cotton-mills, at which wares and yarn are spun. The only other manufactures of importance, are hats, which employ a large number of persons of both sexes; and iron which employ several foundries, machine-shops, &c.

In the vicinity are extensive quarries, for building and pavement, iron mines, and extensive collieries. The weekly markets, two in number, are well frequented, more especially the one on Monday for woollen goods and grain, and there are three annual fairs, besides a fair every fortnight for cattle. Rochdale is a place of considerable antiquity, and had a Roman station in the vicinity, but its history presents no event of interest. Its woollen manufacture appears to have been introduced by the Flemings in the reign of Edward III., and having continued to flourish, is mentioned as famous in the reign of Elizabeth. It was first constituted a borough by the Reform Act, and sends a member to the House of Commons. Pop. par bor, 29 135.

ROCHE, par Iral. Leuch 3305 ac. Pop. 1018.

ROCHE, par Eng Cornwall 6440 ac. Pop. 1386.

ROCHE (La), a tn France, dep Haute Savois, div Fan cigny dist, and 5 m W 4 W Borneville, 1 bank Arve overlooking a fertile plain. It has several small squares, one of them planted with old lime-trees an ancient church with a lofty spire, two other churches, an hospital, and handsome townhouse manufactures of cotton stuffs, and silk hats, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 3140.

ROCHE-CHALAS, a tn. France dep Dordogne, 22 m W S.W. Périgueux with manufactures of leather and potato-flour. Pop. 1065.

ROCHE-DE-LENTIN, a tn. France, dep Côte-d'Or, 40 m. W Dijon. Pop. 3499.

ROCHELOUHAUT (anc. Rogea Cawarth), a tn. France, dep Yonne, on the site of a rocky acropolis, and 3 m. from the town, 30 m. W Langres. It has a court of first resort, a picturesque-ruined castle, partly in a dilapidated state, and manufactures of vinegar and glass brick and tile works and a trade in linen and thread. Pop. 1695.

ROCHEFORT, a vil and com. Belgium prov and 25 m. S.S.E. Mameux, on the Homme, among rocks, on the road from Namur to St. Hubert. It is an ancient place, and was the capital of the county of Ardenne. It consists of poorly built houses, and irregular and ill-paved streets; and has a church three chapels a courthouse, the ruins of an old castle, quarries of marble, lead-mine, and a trade in wood, bark, cattle, and wool. Pop. 1098.

ROCHEFORT on ROCHEREAU-SUB-MER (anc. Rochefortum), a tn and port France, dep. Charente Inférieure on the bank of the Gironde, about 9 m. above its mouth, 30 m. S. Le Rochelle. It stands partly on a height, and partly on a low swampy flat, and is surrounded by ramparts which are planted and afford a fine shady promenade. The houses are somewhat low but are in general neatly built, and the streets, which are wide and well-paved are regularly formed, intersecting each other at right angles. The three principal streets are planted with a double row of Italian poplars and acacias and in the centre of the town is the place d'Armes in the form of a regular square, adorned with a fine fountain, and lined on each side with a double row of elms. Rochefort owes much of its importance to its admirable position, which has made it the third among the naval arsenals of France. The river, at the quay is deep enough to float the largest vessels, being 30 ft. at low-tide, and 40 ft. at the highest spring-tide; at its mouth five forts protect the entrance, and outside is a spacious roadstead, protected by the Islands of Rhé, Oleron, and Aix. The only edifice particularly deserving of notice is the Hospital-de-la-Marine, outside the town, on an eminence, approached through a fine avenue; it consists of seven isolated buildings, containing 1200 beds, distributed in large and lofty halls, and having attached an excellent anatomical theatre, museum, and botanical garden. The arsenals and dock yards are on a very extensive and magnificent scale, and the residence of the naval commandant is surrounded by a garden, which serves for a public promenade. A good many large vessels are built here, and there are extensive vinegar-works, and sugar-refineries. The trade is corn, colonial produce, salt, wine, brandy, &c. Rochefort possesses courts of first resort and commerce, a communal college, a second class school of hydrography, a society of sciences and art, and a national school. Bonaparte, after his final defeat, retired to Rochefort, with the view of escaping to America, but, despairing of being able to obtain the vessels on the coast, surrounded to the capital of the English ship Bellevue. Pop. 16,941.

ROCHEFORT-sur-Loire, a vil. France, dep. Maine-et-Loire, 11 m. S.W. Angers, on the site of a hill, 1. bank Loire. Pop. 1082.

ROCHEFOUCAULD (La) [anc. Rupes Focauld] a tu. France, dep. Charente, on the Turquoise, here crossed by an ancient bridge, and at the foot of a hill crowned by the old castle of Rochefoucauld, 14 m. N.E. Angoulême. It is only remarkable for the castle already mentioned, which overhangs it, and is a huge pile, flanked by round towers, with conical tops. It possesses a fine park; and in the neighbourhood are a number of annual fairs, in which many Protestants are said to have found a refuge from persecution. The manufactures consist of linen, druggs, ribbons, and leather, and the trade is in thread, timber and cattle. Pop. 2660.

ROCHELLE (La) [anc. Antiqua Fortis de Rupella] a tu. and seaport, France, cap. dep. Charente Inférieure, situate on the Atlantic, at the bottom of a bay which serves it for anchorage and in front of which are the

The finest streets are those of Dauphin, Petit Dôme, Chauderelle, Faleis, and Grande Berrerie, which, following each other in succession, traverses the town from S. to N., and form a splendid avenue. The principal square, called Place du Chateau, is both large and beautiful. The objects most deserving of notice are the Fort de l'Europe, a fine Gothic structure, adorned with trophies, and surmounted by a spire, the hotel de ville of no great architectural merit, but of some historical interest; the cathedral, and many public library, palais de justice, baths, and arsenal. The manufactures consist of stone-ware and glass, and there are sugar-refineries, cotton-mills, and extensive building-yards. The harbour admits vessels of from 400 tons to 500 tons, and is one of the best in France, being protected by a pier lined by a handsome classical quay and encircled on all sides by the buildings of the town. The trade carried on at it is of importance, and is chiefly in brandy, wine, wool, iron, silk, colonial produce, cheese, butter, and oil. La Rochelle is the see of a bishop, and the seat of a court of first resort and commerce, and possesses a mint, a commercial college, third-class school of navigation, agricultural society, and academy of belles-lettres, science, and art. Though a place of considerable antiquity its history does not possess much interest till the period of the Reformation, when it repeatedly signalled itself in the name of Protestantism, and stood two memorable sieges, one in 1573, when its valiant defence was successful in resisting nine grand and more than 30,000 men, and the other in 1627-28, when, after 14 months, famine forced it to surrender its fortifications were then destroyed, but were afterwards rebuilt in an improved form by Vauban. Pop. 14,186.

ROCHESTER [Roman Eboracorum], a city and port of entry,

1. District of La Rochelle.
2. Port of Rochelle.
3. District of Rochelle.

4. Port of V. St.
5. Port of V. St.
6. Port of V. St.

7. Port of V. St.
8. Port of V. St.
9. Port of V. St.

10. Port of V. St.
11. Port of V. St.
12. Port of V. St.

side of Ethe and Otteron, 95 m. N. by W. Burdett, lat. 46° 9' 24" N. lon. 1° 15' W. (N.) It is walled, and otherwise fortified so as to be a place of considerable strength, and is generally well built. Many of the houses have porticoes, England, co. Kent, 29 m. S.E. London, partly on L. bank, but chiefly on r. bank Medway and on the North Kent railway. It consists of Rochester proper, and of Chatham and Brompton which may be considered its suburbs, and Strood and Frindsbury, which may be considered its N. suburbs. With the two last, situated on the opposite side of the river it communicates by a bridge. At Chatham, including Brompton, and Strood, including Frindsbury, form separate divisions, the present article is confined to Rochester proper. It occupies an angle formed by the Medway, which, bending round first to a N.E. and then suddenly to a S.E. direction, incloses it on three sides. When approached from the bridge, the broad expanse of the river, its ancient castle crowning an abrupt eminence, the numerous artificial towers along the shores, and the works connected with the Chatham Lines of fortification, give it a very striking appearance. It occupies principally of one space, which, commencing at the bridge, traverses it to a S.E. direction towards Chatham, and of a number of other streets; and though by no means regularly built, contains a which, though somewhat deficient in height, produces a good effect, and the streets are straight, spacious, and well cleaned. The ramparts are planted, and form an excellent promenade.

BRIDGE TO THE FORT OF ROCHELLE.

views street, which, commencing at the bridge, traverses it to a S.E. direction towards Chatham, and of a number of other streets; and though by no means regularly built, contains a great number of respectable houses of stone, interspersed with several of brick or timber. The objects of most interest are the industrial buildings in 404, has completed at various periods, and presenting a mixture of styles, among which the notable features of its W. front is very beautiful, while the apsidal porch forms an excellent specimen of the early English style; the interior of the castle, including a quadrangular area nearly 100 ft. square, has considerable dignity of the great tower, which is in the form of a square, 70 ft. broad at the base, and 104 ft. high, and is considered one of the most perfect specimens of Norman military architecture now existing; the royal free grammar-school, forming part of the establishment of the cathedral, and several other endowed schools; the townhall, a handsome brick building with a Doric colonnade of decorated pillars; the dookhouse, a neat building erected on the site of the old guildhall; the theatre, assembly-rooms, &c. Besides the cathedral, there are two parish churches, both surmounted by square towers, and possessed of ancient stone fonts, and places of worship for the Wesleyans, Friends, Independents, and Unitarians. There are no manufactures of any consequence, except shipbuilding, which is carried on to some extent; and the trade, carried on mostly by small coasters, consists chiefly of coals and oysters the former imported, and the latter obtained from a productive oyster-fishery belonging to the corporation. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the adjoining naval establishments. Besides two weekly markets, one well supplied with provisions, and the other for the sale of mainly cattle, markets, and two important annual fairs. The borough is governed by a mayor, 5 aldermen, and 19 councillors, and has returned two members to Parliament since the reign of Edward I. Pop. 14,938.

ROCHESTER, a tn, U States, New York, on both sides of the Genesee, 7 m. above its mouth, in Lake Ontario, on the Erie canal, which here crosses the river by a splendid aqueduct, and on a trunk line, forming part of a chain of railways from Boston and New York to Buffalo. The town, on both sides of the river, though not very regular in its well built, chiefly of brick or border stone, and contains many substantial and handsome houses, often rendered more attractive by gardens or shrubberies. The communication between the opposite banks is kept up by three bridges, one of these forms the continuation of Buffalo Street, which is both straight and spacious, and divides the town transversely into two parts by running nearly through its centre. The chief public buildings and institutions are 23 churches, some of them elegant structures, a courthouse and jail, a collegiate institute, a university founded in 1850 by the New York Baptist Union for ministerial education, with a theological seminary attached, a library and valuable cabinet of minerals, two female seminaries, an ethnological, mechanical institute, and young men's association. The rise and progress of Rochester have been extremely rapid, even for an American town, and are owing partly to its central situation giving it the command of a most important transit trade, and still more to the immense water power furnished by the falls of the Genesee, which here makes an entire descent of 265 ft. by a series of rapids and cascades. One of these, called the Great Cataract, has a height of 96 ft. and from it the advantage of steam power has been lost and still kept. The power furnished by the falls is supposed to equal that of 1230 steam-engines of 30 horse-power, and is chiefly employed in driving four-mills, which are here on a scale of almost unparalleled magnitude. It is also used more partially in saw, paper oil filling, and cotton mills, and is more or less available in other manufacturing establishments, as woolen manufactories, tanneries, distilleries, breweries, &c. In 1812, two log huts were the only buildings on the site now occupied by Rochester, and even in 1850 the population did not exceed 1500. Pop. (1840) 99,391. (1850) 88,581.

ROCHESTER, a tn, U States, Ind.—1, L. Meritt; 1165 ac. Pop. 171. 2, T. Sweeney; 1068 ac. Pop. 867.

ROCHESTER (L.), a tn, France, dep. Savoy, about 16 m. E. Chablais, 1 bank of the Rhone, picturesquely situated in a very mountainous district. It has a church, the remains of an ancient castle, manufactures of leather, iron-work, and several extensive mines in the vicinity, and a trade in wine, honey, and wool. Pop. 1255.

ROCKFORD, a tn, Eng. Worcester, 1379 ac. P. 251

ROCKFORD, a market town, par. England, co. North. The town, on the small river Rock, 16 m. S.E. Chelmsford, has chapels for Independents and Wesleyans, a union workhouse, and several schools and almshouses. Rockford Hall is a part of the ancient mansion in which the unfortunate Queen Anne Boleyn formerly resided. Area of par., 1850 ac. Pop. 1704.

ROCKLITZ, a tn, Saxony, circle and 30 m. S.E. Leipzig, 1 bank of the Elbe, crossed by a bridge. It consists of a high and low town, contains two churches and a castle, and has manufactures of woollen and cotton goods, casings, calicoes, carpets, earthenware, needles, and playing-cards, several bleachfields and spinning-mills. Pop. 4104.

ROCKLITZ (L. VITA AND NUNEN) a vil Bohemia, circle and N. Hladschow at the confluence of the Hlitzwasser with the Great Iser. It contains a handsome church and has manufactures of lawn and muslin, linen and cotton goods; two bleachfields, and two mills. A good deal of fax is both grown and spun in the district. Pop. 2087.

ROCIANA, a vil Spain, Aragon, prov. and about 20 m. from Huesca, 1 bank Tinto, with a church, priory, primary school, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 1935.

ROCK par. Eng. Worcester 7754 ac. Pop. 1925.

ROCK, a river, U States, Wisconsin and Illinois, rises in Wisconsin, about lat. 44° in 50 m. W. Lake Michigan flows S. S. W. receives several tributaries, enters Illinois and falls into the Mississippi 3 m. below Rock Island lat. 41° 30' N. lon. 90° 40' W. At the lower part of its course it has several rapids, which laymen the navigation at low-water—Rock Island lies at the foot of Rock River rapids. It is 84 m. long, 34 m. broad, and its sides are of perpendicular rock, 20 ft. above the highest floods. Fort Armstrong is situated on its lower extremity.

ROCKBANK, par. Eng. Devon 2575 ac. Pop. 477.

ROCKBOURNE, par. Eng. Hants 5798 ac. P. 516.

ROCKCLIFFE, par. Eng. Cumberland 6573 ac. P. 941.

ROCKENFLAUFEN, a tn, Bavaria, Palatinate, 1 bank Aisch 50 m. S. S. W. Mentz. It contains a Protestant and a Catholic church, and has a mineral spring; a trade in cattle, and three mills. Pop. 1738.

ROCKFIELD par. Eng. Monmouth 1995 ac. P. 291.

ROCKFORD a vil U States, Illinois, at the rapids of Rock River and on the Galena and Chicago Union railways, 170 m. N. by E. Springfield, with a courthouse jail, &c., and immense water-power derived from the rapids. It is visited by steam boats. Pop. 2093.

ROCKHAMPTON, par. Eng. Gloucester 1208 ac. Pop. 236.

ROCKINGHAM, a par. and small market in England, on and 20 m. N.E. Northampton, in the midst of Rockingham Forest area, 890 ac. Pop. 281.

ROCKINGHAM BAY a spacious and beautiful harbour, N.E. coast, Australia; lat. 18° 10' S.

ROCKLAND three par. Eng. Norfolk;—1, (All Saints and St. Andrew); 1671 ac. Pop. 430.—2, (St. Mary) 1560 ac. Pop. 484.—3, (St. Peter); 1010 ac. Pop. 447.

ROCKLAND a small seaport in U States, Maine, W. shore, Penobscot Bay, about 85 m. S.E. Augusta. It has an excellent harbour from which there is regular steamboat communication with Boston and Bangor, and an extensive trade in furs, obtained from innumerable quarts in the vicinity and well known on the coast of the U States for its superior quality. The quantity annually shipped is estimated at about 100,000,000 seals. Pop. (township), 5692.

ROCKTON, a vil and township, U States, New York, 91 m. W. N. W. Albany beautifully situated among romantic scenery on both sides of the Mohawk, near the Erie canal, and on the Utica and Schenectady railways. It has five churches, an academy, a bank a woolen and other manufactories, flour, plaster and brick mills. Pop. (township), 6555.

ROCKY, or Lower an isl, S. Pacific, off N. coast, Papua; lat. 5° 20' S. lon. 147° 50' E. It presents an immense cone of from 2800 ft. to 4000 ft. in height, with a large hollow on its N. E. side, indicating the situation of an ancient crater. It is covered with verdure, and has a belt of low land along its shore, which appears to be inhabited.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS, an extensive mountain district, N. America, which, forming a continuation of the great chain which stretches southward through Mexico, New Mexico, and Utah, under the successive names of Sierra Madre, Minera, Grulla, and Verde, commencing with the termination of the last about 45° N. and sometimes, it is indicated, without interruption, till it reaches the Arctic Ocean, W. of the mouth of the Mackenzie river. Near its commencement, in lat. 45° 10' N. and lon. 110° 15' W., it presents a summit 15,568 ft. in height, to which the name of Pease's Peak has been given; and though it suffers a very considerable depression in lat. 46° and 46° N. again attains a still higher elevation than before, more especially between lat. 53° and 55° N., where Mount Meeker has a height of 15,700 ft., and Mount Brown, a height of 15,900 ft. Between these, however, there is a depression called the Athabasca Portage, which has a height of only 7800 ft., and has long been used by the traders of the Hudson's Bay Company as the principal pass into the basin of the Columbia. Farther E., between lat. 49° and 50° N., there is a still more practicable pass at about 7000 ft. Both these passes, placed near the limit of perpetual snow and in the vicinity of peaks towering several thousand feet above them, exhibit scenery of the most magnificent description, and are in some respects among the most remarkable spots upon the surface of the globe. To the N. of 50° N., the snow begins to lower rapidly, and at 55° N. does not exceed 4000 ft. Ultimately the average height does not exceed 3000 ft. Beyond 65° N., the Rocky Mountain ceases to have the character of a continuous chain, and consists rather of a series of isolated groups separated from each other by considerable depressions. The E. slope, which is at first very precipitous, terminates suddenly on the edge of a very extensive and elevated plateau the W. slope, instead of terminating in a plain forms a series of narrow longitudinal valleys, separated by ridges of comparatively moderate height, till at a considerable distance to the W. another mountain chain begins to rise, forming part of a range which stretches continuously along the coast from Cape St. Lucas, at the S. extremity of the peninsula of Lower California, to Mount St. Elias, and has received the names of the N. American Sea or Maritime Alps, including the Sierra Nevada and coast ranges of Upper California, and the Cascade Mountains of Oregon, &c. This range contains numerous magnificent displays of volcanic agency, and has even several active volcanoes, but the Rocky Mountains furnish comparatively few specimens of volcanic products, and consist chiefly of metamorphic masses of granite, gneiss, and mica schist. They are also, in general, heavily provided with vegetation, but occasionally magnificent forests occur and in several of the least elevated districts towards the S. extremity of the chain the mica schist and granite are covered with many species of Artemisia, especially Trochodonta, serotina, and arctica. The waters of the Rocky Mountains belong to three basins. The most extensive is that of the N., which receives its supplies chiefly by the Mackenzie, which flows N. to the Arctic Ocean and by the Saskatchewan, and many other streams which flow E. to Hudson's Bay the second great basin is the Atlantic, which receives its supplies partly through the N. American lakes, and partly by the Mississippi; the third basin is the Pacific, to which the only important tributary from the Rocky Mountains is the Columbia. RODOUPE, a vil. and com. Bulgaria, prov. and 9 in N.E.W. Lidga. It is famous for the battle fought in its place, in 1746, when the French, under Marshal Saxe defeated the allies, under Duke Charles of Lorraine. Pop. 570. RODOUPE (see Bulgaria). a. in France, dep. Ardennes, in a beautiful and extensive plain, surrounded on all sides by the forest of Ardennes. It is well, situated, flanked by bastions, and otherwise fortified; has a court of first resort, a commercial college, and agricultural society, and a hospital, at which convalescents and other patients are sent. It is chiefly remarkable for the great victory which the French, under Condé, gained in the neighborhood over the Spaniards. Pop. 1164. RODOUPE (Novi), a market-t. Hungary co. Gödöl, 11 m. from Buda, on the Rába, here crossed by a bridge. It has a church, and trade in linen and wool. Pop. 1808. RODOUPE, a. in S.W. Arabia, prov. Yemen, S. in N.E.W. Red Sea. It is kept close and quiet, being the residence of many of the merchants of Sana, who retire to their country-houses there after the business of the day is over. The gardens are very fine, and the vineyards beautiful. The town is well watered by several small streams.

RODA, a. in Germany, Saxony-Altenburg, in a sheltered wild country, among wooded mountains, 50 m. W.S.W. Jena, with three churches, a castle, and straggles in tall pine-estate. Pop. 3257. RODA (Zai), a. in Spain, Murcia, prov. and 24 m. S.W. Alicante; with 2 towns, a Franciscan convent, and several convents, a public square, a public school, a church, and two hermitages. The hermitage is kept in an old monastery. There are some vineyards; a considerable quantity of silk is raised, and some sheep and wool are exported. In 1583, the king of Castile, Alonso, was here defeated by the Moors. Pop. 5579. RODA, a. in Saxony-Coburg, on a stream of same name, W. N.W. Coburg, with two churches, and schools, and a trade in cattle. Pop. 1572. RODALEN or RODALLEN, a vil. Bavaria, Palatinate, near Pirmasens with a church, glass-works, and a mill. Pop. 1509. RODANSTOWN, prov. and 1031 m. S. Pop. 288. RODORNE-CHATEAU, prov. Eng. Wilt. 2725 m. P. 600. RODOROUGH, a vil. and prov. England, co. Gloucester, 1 m. W.S.W. Stroud, on the river of that name. It has a parish church, an independent chapel, an endowed school, and six mills, at which woollen cloth is manufactured. Area of par. 1210 m. Pop. 2008. RODREY, a. in Denmark, S. shore, isl. Lolland, on a bay of the shallow Rhyth Fjord. The bay is completely shaded up that there is no harbor or quay in the vicinity of the town, but a summer-harbor, of the 5th class, admitting vessels drawing 7 ft., is situated in the Krommings-Gab, at the mouth of the fjord, and about 5 m. from the town, and enables it to carry on some trade. Pop. 1800. RODDEN prov. Eng. Somerset 990 m. Pop. 508. RODDENAI, a vil. Hesse-Cassel, Oberhessen, circle and com. Frankenberg, on the Eder, with a church, and three mills. Pop. 1033. RODDINO a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, riv. Coud, prov. Aosta, on a steep hill with a church, and an elementary school. Pop. 1106. RODELHEIM, a market to. Hesse-Darmstadt, Oberhessen, on the Mide, 11 m. N. Frankfurt. It has two churches, and a castle; with fine gardens, and several breweries, distilleries, and tobacco-factories. In the environs are elegant villas, belonging to citizens of Frankfurt. Pop. 1268. RODELSEN, a vil. Bavaria, Lower Franconia, dist. Marktheim, near Roddinghausen with a church, a mill, many features of potato, and a trade in excellent wine. Pop. 662. RODEN, Ronsz, or Roor a vil. Holland, prov. Drenthe, 12 m. N.W. Assen with a Calvinistic church, a school, and two annual fair-markets. Pop. (agricultural), 543. ROUEN, a vil. Rhinisch Prussia, and 30 m. S. Treves, near a bank near with a R. Catholic church, important manufactures of ordinary and white leather, and four mills. Pop. 1609. RODENBERG, a. in Hesse-Cassel, Niederhessen, 17 m. W. N.W. Hanover; with a church, castle, and school; and manufactures of vinegar, tobacco, and leather. Pop. 1123. RODENDO a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy, prov. Milan, prov. Brescia, dist. and 5 m. N.E. Capriano, with a small but very ancient church, said to have been founded by Charlemagne in 774. Pop. 1129. RODENSLIEBEN (Gross and Klein), a vil. Prussia, prov. Saxony, gov. Magdeburg, circle Wittenberg; with a church. Pop. 1007. RODEWALD, a vil. Hesse, Prussia, Kasselberg, 23 m. N. W. Hanover; with a church. Pop. 1409. RODRE, or Roussier (see Bulgaria), a. in France, dep. Aveyron, 50 m. N.W. Montpellier. It stands in the east and south of a hill, at the foot of which the Aveyron flows; and, from its lofty position, has a striking appearance from wherever it is approached. But the streets are steep, narrow, winding, and dirty; and the houses are mean, being constructed for the most part of wood, with projecting fronts, which enclose both light and air, and give the whole town a gloomy, unwholesome look. The principal edifices are the cathedral, a magnificent structure in the first style of Gothic, with a circumambulated choir, lofty towers, and a fine octagonal above the episcopal palace, the seminary, the centre of the town, the college, originally belonging to the monks; the public library, of 16,000 volumes; the townhouse, hospital, and all necessary of the Cordeliers. It has manufactures of serge, stout, woollen covers, wax and tallow candles, playing-cards, and leather worsted-mills and dyes-works; and a trade, in addition to the above articles of manufacture, in cloths, silks, and cattle. Roden is the see of a bishop, the seat of a court of first resort and consistory, and possesses a chamber of manufactures, college, gymnasium, university, agricultural society, cabinet of natural history and philosophy, and deaf and dumb institute. Pop. (1852), 7968.

RODEHEIM, two places, Hesse-Darmstadt, Oberhessen.—1, (on der Bahr), A vil. circle and near Giessen with a church. Pop. 537.—2, (near der Elbf), A circle, Friedberg with a Protestant church. Pop. 1980.

RODI, a tn. and com. Naples, prov. Capitanata, 21 m. N. E. San Severo, on the Adriatic, at the foot of Mount Garano; with a collegiate church, and a Capuchin monastery. Pop. 2469.

RODIERZMO, a vil. Spain, prov. and N. W. Leon, near the Bierzo; with a church, manufactures of linen, and a trade in corn, fax, and cattle. Pop. 1845.

RODIGA, a vil. Italy, Venetia, prov. and 9 m. N. W. Manica with two churches, several chapels, and a mill. Pop. 1500.

RODING, a market in Bavaria, Upper Palatinate, 1. bank Regu, 23 m. N. E. Regensburg with two churches, and a townhouse on a plain, and several breweries. There is a part-factory in the river, and amber is found in the neighborhood. Pop. 1190.

RODING a river, England, on Essex rises near Dunmow; flows tortuously S. W. between Epping and Haverhill Forests, and falls into the Thames, a little below Barking. It is navigable to Ilford total course, about 40 m.

RODINGTON, par Eng. Salop 1615 ac. Pop. 494.

RODMARTON, par Eng. Gloucester 4010 ac. 1 416.

RODMELL, par Eng. Essex 1934 ac. Pop. 828.

RODMERHAM, par Eng. Kent 1331 ac. P. 528.

RODMA, a vil. Austria, the Banat.

RODNEY (Bourne) par Eng. Somerset, 2345 ac. P. 515.

RODONY or RODONYA, a vil. Hungary, Thidher Dacia, on Eisenberg, on the Ennsbach, 34 m. from Güns, with a Protestant church. Pop. 1178.

RODOFTO or RODOFTO (syn. Rodoftho) a tn. Turkey in Europe, Roumelie, smalik Gallipoli, N. shore, Sea of Marmara, 77 m. W. Constantinople. It is surrounded by cultivated walls, flanked with towers; its wall built, containing many handsome streets, and has large caravanserais, public baths and an important trade in corn, wine, and other commodities. The universe are covered with vineyards, which produce an excellent wine. Pop. estimated at 40,000.

RODRIGUE, or RODRIGUE, an id. Indian Ocean, E. N. E. Mauritius, lat. 19° 50' S., lon. 68° 50' E. It is, exclusive of its coral-reefs, about 13 m. long, E. to W. and 3 m. to 6 m. broad. Its appearance is striking. A central peak of granite rises from the midst of a group of hills, divided from each other by valleys, running N. and S. The island is composed of granite, with beds of overlying sandstone and limestone. The island appears generally to be dry a still, generally calm, with a fine foam on the surface, and is very fertile. Springs of excellent water abound in the interior, but on the coast there are only rivulets, which frequently dry in summer. The banana, plantain, cantaloupe, strawberry and raspberry, sugar-cane, cotton plant, several kinds of pine, moroccan-sage, and coco-nuts are found wild. Yams and castors, which form the bulk of the food of the inhabitants, are native to the soil. Tamarind and amelon trees, the latter growing to a considerable size, and bearing quantities of green, are plentiful; and there are a few mango-trees and breadfruit. Cucumbers and muskmelons, large spines, guavas, and lemons are found, and wild cat, rats, and mice, exist all over the island. Guinea-fowl in large flocks abound everywhere. A great variety of sea-birds inhabit the cliffs. Frogs, lizards, and geckos have been introduced, and succeed. The natives are intensely black and ugly, and are extremely lazy. Pop. estimated at 250.

ROE, a river of Rhineland Prussia and Holland. It rises in the Rhine-Meuse, 30 m. S. E. Aix-la-Chapelle flows N. by St. Gertrude at Jülich, and thence N. W. into Dutch Limburg and joins the Meuse at Roermond; total course, about 90 m.

ROLEMOND (Latis, Roelmonde, French, Roermond), a tn. Dutch Limburg, 23 m. N. by E. Maastricht, on the Meuse, at the confluence of the Roer. It was formerly fortified, and had river gates and many towers of the last some remains still exist, but the walls have been replaced by promenade. The town is nearly surrounded by canals. It has broad, straight streets, and is connected by an elegant bridge across the Roer with the suburb of St. Jacob. It has large and elegant courthouses, in a building erected in 1658, as the bishop's palace, a large, spacious townhall, the Minsterchurch, a Byzantine structure, and one of the most beautiful buildings in the kingdom the Minster abbey, now serving partly as a church, and partly as a prison and a cavalry barracks, the parish church in the market-place, a large, beautiful edifice, a Reformed church, a convent of the Sisters of Mary, an hospital, a royal college, a large assembly, and several schools. The manufactures consist of cloths, silks, cottons, and cotton-yarns, flamed paper, shot, pipes, wax candles, and salt and there are print and bleachworks, dyeworks, tanneries, and oil, bark, tanning, and grain mills. Pop. (1850) 7173.

ROSEKILDE (Latis, Rogentor) a tn. and seaport, Denmark, 1st. Zealand on a shallow branch of the Cattegat, called the Roskilde Fjord, 18 m. W. Copenhagen, with which it is connected by railway. It contains a palace, erected for the stayings of the Provincial States, two churches, one of them, the cathedral, among the oldest and finest of the large churches of Denmark; a cathedral school and a convent for noble ladies. The harbour is a winter-haven of the fourth class and adjoins to its quay, near St. Jurgensberg, vessels drawing 9 ft. water. Its mineral springs have long been famous. Roskilde is said to have been founded by the pagan king Ros, at the end of the 5th century, king Harald established his residence in it in 980, and it soon became one of the largest and most important towns in Denmark. In 1043, Canute the Holy founded the cathedral, whose jurisdiction once extended over 28 churches. It was afterwards five times ravaged by the plague and eight times devastated by fire. This circumstance, added to the removal of the court to Copenhagen, and the introduction of the Reformation, gradually brought the town to its present comparatively humble position. Pop. (1851), 3305.

ROBULX a tn. Belgium, prov. Halmaut, 3 m. N. E. Mome, houses mostly wall built. It has a church, chapel townhall, prison, hospital, almshouse, musical society several public schools, and in the vicinity a superb chateau, surrounded by an extensive park, belonging to the Prince de Croix-Solme, inhabitants chiefly employed in agriculture, and the working of coal-mines. There are three flour-mills, two breweries, two saw-works, and a tannery. Pop. 7654.

ROFRANG a tn. Naples, prov. Principato-Ultra, 11 m. E. Di Valle, on a lofty hill with four churches. Pop. 3050.

ROGART par Scot. Sutherland 63,800 ac. Pop. 1515.

ROGAREN, or ROGAREO a tn. Prussia, gov. and 23 m. N. by E. Posen on a lake which communicates with the Vistula. It consists of the old and new town and of a suburb has several courts and offices a Protestant, and two R. Catholic churches, and a synagogue; manufactures of woollen cloth, and a trade in cattle. A large proportion of the inhabitants are Jews. Pop. 4755.

ROGATE par Eng. Essex, 4878 ac. Pop. 1117.

ROGATSCHEW a tn. Russia, gov. and 66 m. S. E. W. Mohilev at the confluence of the Dnieper with the Dniester. It was once surrounded by walls which have been converted into walks and contains a Greek united and a R. Catholic church and a castle. Pop. (1851) 3095.

ROBERTON, a hamlet, England, co. Monmouth, 23 m. W. S. W. Newport. Pop. 1240.

ROGGIETT par Eng. Monmouth, 2905 ac. Pop. 60.

ROGLIANO, a tn. Naples, prov. Calabria-Citra, 6 m. S. Cosenza. It is divided into the three districts of Rogliano, Rati, and Spini, and has a number of handsome buildings, among others, six churches, and a Capuchin and a Dominican convent. Pop. 2859.

ROGONAUTFOOR, a tn. Mindocena, prov. and gov. Bengat, dist. Jangle Malina, 155 m. N. W. Calcutta; lat. 25° 25' N., lon. 66° 44' E.

BOHAN a. in France, dep. Northen, 18 m. S.W. Fieret, on the Oise, near the Marais and Grand canal. It was of great strength, till taken and pillaged by the English in 1648. It afterwards became the capital of a county created by Henry IV., in favour of Henri de Rohan, one of the heads of the Protestant party. It has manufactures of linen, and numerous fairs. Pop. 550.

ROHATTN, s. in Austria, Gailth, circle and 15 m. W.S.W. Stryany, on the Lappan; with two churches, and a castle. Pop. 2720.

ROHILKUND, a region, Hindostan; lat. 26° to 29° N, lon. 78° to 80° E. bounded W. by the Ganges, N. the Himalayas, which separate it from Kumaon; and E. the Kingdom of Oude, to which it formerly belonged. Area, 12,650 sq. m. Its surface is mostly plain, with a general slope from the N. It is watered by the Kosia, Ranganga, Donah-Gorra, and other tributaries of the Ganges, all of which flow southward. Along its E. border is an extensive forest, intersected with tracts covered by lung grass, elsewhere, the fruits of the temperate zone flourish together with palms, cotton, the sugar-cane, bamboo, and trees common both to Asia and Europe, which have attained a magnificent size. Hot winds are little felt, and this is one of the most favourable in respect of climate. Numerous small and picturesque villages are scattered over the country, which derives its name from the Rohillas, an Afghan tribe that took possession of it early in the 18th century and are amongst the few Mahomedans addicted to agriculture, as well as arms. Sugar of very superior quality cotton, and cotton cloths, are amongst the principal exports from Rohilkund. It forms a division of the upper provinces of the Bengal (Agra) presidency. It is subdivided into the districts of Meerut, Muzaffar, Bareilly, and Chaplain. Pop. 439,565.—(Travels, Survey of India, &c.)

ROHITSCH ROHITSCH, a market to Austria, Styria, near E. bank Sava, 30 m. N.W. Vienna. It has wheats, quarries, and is celebrated for its chalybeate springs from which about 400,000 bottles of water are annually exported. Pop. 500.

ROHOVYZ (District) or ROHOVYZ, a market to Hungary, on Einnburg in a romantic district, at the foot of a mountain of same name, 60 m. S.W. Pressburg. It contains two churches, a castle, a vast square structure of three stories, with a lofty tower and surrounded with fine gardens, a synagogue, and handsome houses, and has manufactures of linen and woollen cloths and carries on a considerable trade in wine. The Roshitsch snuff-boxes are famous. Pop. 3639.

ROHOZNA, or ROHOZ, a vil. Bohemia, circle Chrudim, on a height 10 m. from Bräun with a church, a school, and a distillery. Pop. 1206.

ROHRBACH, two places Hungary.—1 A vil., co. and 18 m. from Pressburg with several handsome buildings, oil-works, and saw and flour mills. Pop. 1140.—2 A vil., co. and 7 m. from Oedenburg on the Leptersbach with a R. Catholic church, and a trade in corn and rye. Pop. 1029.

ROHRBACH a vil. and m. Switzerland, cant. of Glarus, and weaves cloths and carries on a considerable trade in wine. The Roshitsch snuff-boxes are famous. Pop. 3639.

ROHSDORF, two places, Prussia, prov. Silesia, gov. Legnica.—1, (Alt) A vil. circle Wollmsch with a Protestant and a R. Catholic church, and several mills. Pop. 1191.—2, (Klein) A vil. circle Liebenburg with a R. Catholic church, a saw-mill, humkline, and two mills. Pop. 815.

ROHSDORF, a vil. Bohemia, circle Bismarck, near the forest of Teichitz, 6 m. from Hays. It has a chapel, a school, and a saw-mill. Pop. 1035.

ROHNITZ, or ROHNITZ (Alt and New), two nearly contiguous vils. Bohemia, circle Königgrätz, about 2 m. from Treutchen; with a church. Pop. 1100.

ROISIN, a vil. and com. Belgium, prov. Hainaut, on the Hamelle, 16 m. S.W. Mons. It has manufactures of linen, tobacco, cordage, and leather; two breweries, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1691.

ROISIN, an is., S. Pacific, belonging to the Solomon group, of N. coast, Papua, lat. 3° 15' S.; lon. 146° 30' E. It is about 15 m. in circuit, and stately clothed with vegetation; a belt of coral-reefs encircling its shores, while lofty palm-tree are seen overtopping them, and covering the hills to their summits. It is inhabited.

ROITSCHE a vil. Prussia, prov. Silesia, gov. and 18 m. N.E. Münsterberg with a church; manufactures of woollen hosiery, and several mills. Pop. 1877.

ROJALEN, a vil. Spain, Valencia, prov. and 13 m. S.W. Alicante, 1 bank Segura. It has a townhouse and prison, two endowed elementary schools, a church, and at some distance from the town two hamlets, a flour-mill, and five oil-mills; and some trade in agricultural produce. Najales was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake in 1699. Pop. 3334.

ROJO, two vils. Naples.—1, A to Abruzzo-Ultra II, dist. and S.W. Aquila, partly on a hill with six churches. Pop. 1050.—2, A vil., prov. Abruzzo-Ultra, dist. and 28 m. S. Lanciano on a mountain with two churches. Pop. 800.

ROKEBY, a hamlet and par. England, co. York, at the confluence of the Tame and Great Ouse, 8 m. S.E. Barnard Castle. It is celebrated both for the beauty of its scenery, and for old castle, which was demolished by an invasion of the Scots after the battle of Banockburn and forms the subject of one of Sir Walter Scott's poems. Area of par., 1114 ac. P. 189.

ROKELAZ, a river W. Africa, Senegal, which enters the Atlantic by a wide estuary at Sierra Leone, where W. S.W. course of about 800 m. The principal towns on its banks are Freetown, Rokon Rokashili, Suwara, and Kamae.

ROKITZAN, or ROKITZAN a. in Bohemia, circle and 10 m. E. Pilsen, in a valley, on the Kliskenitz, with a demerit church, school, and library. Iron is worked in the neighbourhood. Pop. 2800.

ROLANDSWERTH or ROLANDSWERTH, an is. in the Rhine, Prussia, gov. Coblenz, near Königswinter, containing the old Benedictine monastery of Rolandswerth, surrounded among trees. Opposite to it is the Rhenish, one of the most interesting and romantic volcanoes on the Rhine. Its crater, nearly circular, is $\frac{1}{2}$ m. in diameter, and 100 ft. deep. On a ridge connected with it stand the remains of the castle of Rolandswerth, so called, according to tradition, because long the residence of Roland, the famous nephew of Charlemagne, who could look down from it on the monastery in which his unfortunate bride was immured. Their story is the subject of one of Schiller's most beautiful ballads, The Knight of Rolandswerth.

ROLLAZ, a vil. and par. Switzerland, cant. Valais, 15 m. W. N. Leysin. It is finely situated, on the shore of the Lake of Geneva, contains an old castle, and is much resorted to both for the beauty of its scenery and its mineral spring. The ruins of Oche, the best of the canton, is produced in the neighbourhood. Pop. 1304.

ROLLEGHEM, two places, Belgium, prov. W. Flanders.—1 A vil. and com. 52 m. S. Bruges; with three breweries, a thread-spinning dye-works, and two flour-mills. Pop. 2348.—2, (Capelle) A vil. and com. 5 m. N.W. Courtray. Pop. 1897.

ROLLESHY par. Eng. Norfolk; 1655 m. Pop. 554.

ROLLSTON two par. England, 1. North 3700 m.

Pop. 555.—2, Stafford 1647 m. Pop. 918.

ROLLO, a mountain, Spain, Andalusia, prov. Alentejo, between Nevada and Aspe. It is composed entirely of marble, the colour of which is different in different places. On the S.E. it is blood-colour, with dull white veins; in the N.W. yellow, with generally dark veins, beautifully interwoven; and on other places it has shades of red, brown, and very beautiful black spots. There is scarcely any work of marble in the kingdom of Valencia in which will not be found the blood-colour of that of Rollo, which only differs when it is combined with others. The upper portion of the hill is quite bare, without earth or vegetation of any kind.

ROLLO, or ROLA, a. in com. Italy, Lombardy, gov. Milan, prov. and 18 m. S.E. Mantua, in a fertile district. It is an ancient place, supposed to be of Roman origin; and has a church, primary schools, a post-house, and a trade in corn and wine. Pop. 2005.

ROLLOUO, a vil. and par. Norway, prov. Christiansund, on the Lævra, 22 m. N.W. Longyear. Pop. 4000.

ROLLRIGHT, two par. England, Oxford.—1, (Great) 1900 m. Pop. 448.—2, (Little) 780 m. Pop. 24.

ROLLSTONE, par. Eng. Wilt. 488 m. Pop. 48.

ROLVANDEN, par. Eng. Kent; 682 m. Pop. 1685.

ROMA, an isl. Indian Archipelago, Flores Sea, about 20 m. N. E. Timor; lat. 7° 42' S., lon. 127° 36' E. (a). It is about 17 km. long, by as many broad, and of considerable height; with several small islands westward. The islands, five in number, rather heavy, catch birds, and carry on trade, agriculture, and cattle-raising.

ROMAGNANO, a m. Italy Piedmont, div. and 16 m. N. W. Ivrea, beautifully situated on the side of a hill above l. bank Soia. It is well built, and has two large squares, one of which is an obelisk surmounted by a cross. It is the seat of a court of justice, and has two churches. Pop. 2019.

ROMAGNESE, a vil. and com. Italy Piedmont, div. Geneva, prov. and 12 m. N. W. Bobbio; with a church, and an old strong castle. Pop. 1823.

ROMALD-Knut, a vil. and par. England, co. York, 6 m. N. W. Barnard Castle. The village, built round a verdant green, has a neat and pleasing appearance; and the parish church, built in the form of a cross, and surrounded by a large ramparted tower, contains some curious monuments. Area of par., 83,776 ac. Pop. 3599.

ROMAN, a m. Turkey in Europe, Moldavia, beautifully situated at the entrance of the Moldavia, with the Bosphorus 40 m. W. W. B. Jassy. It still possesses some remains of Roman walls is well built, and is the seat of a Greek bishop. The district is one of the most picturesque and best-peopled in Moldavia.

ROMAN-DE-LE-VEGA (Sax), a vil. Spain, prov. Leon, dist. Astorga, is a plain on the Tago, with a church, a primary school, and a trade in agricultural produce. Pop. 1719.

ROMANCHE, a river, France, rises from the glaciers in the N. of the Hautes-Alpes, around Briançon, enters the lake, flows directly to the W. then W. and joins a bank near, N. W. of Val de Vercors, a course of 80 m., part of which is used for navigation. Its current is very rapid, and much obstructed by rocks and small islands.

ROMANENGO, a vil. and com. Italy Lombardy, gov. Milan, prov. and 21 m. N. W. Cremona, in a fertile district with a church, an old castle, and a trade in corn, flax, and silk. Pop. 1552.

ROMANO, — I a m. Italy, Lombardy, prov. and 12 m. S. E. of Bergamo, in a fertile district. It is an ancient place, still surrounded by a wall and broad ditch, and entered by three gates, but the ramparts have been partly levelled and converted into a public walk, and partly cultivated as gardens. It is well built, having well-formed, handsome streets, some of them lined with arcades, and has a large and elegant modern church, surrounded by two steeples two other churches of the 16th century, a Capuchin convent, an ancient castle, which the Venetian governors used to occupy, a large hospital, and rich charitable endowment, tanneries, tins and lace kilns, a saw, and several silk mills. Pop. 4199 — 2 a vil. and com. Piedmont, div. Turin, prov. and 5 m. S. W. Ivrea, near a bank Chiusella, here crossed by a bridge, where the French and Austrians had some severe fighting in 1800, to the advantage of the former. It was once defended by a strong castle, of which only a tower, now used as a belfry, remains, and has a large and massive church, of recent erection several minor churches, a townhouse public school, and charitable endowment. Pop. 2914 — 3, (San Romano-d'Alghogno), a vil. and com. duchy Modena, on a hill at the foot of Mount Verrucchio, near a bank Bercheto, with a handsome and richly-decorated church of modern construction. Pop. 1467.

ROMANO-KAY, or KAYO-ROMANO, an isl. W. Indies, off N. coast, Cuba, in the Old Belhuma Channel. It stretches N. W. to S. E. for about 48 m., and though generally spoken of as only a single island, truly forms two, separated from each other by a channel 3 m. wide. The E. end has some heights, while, towards the centre, form a kind of saddle; the W. end consists of low, wet, mangrove land. Near Romano are a number of keys—the Paraden, Confusa, and Verde, &c. Between the two last there is tolerable anchorage.

ROMANO (Sax), a vil. and par. Tuscany, comp. Florence, on a plain about 15 m. from San Stefano; with a church, and the remains of an old castle. Pop. 1170.

ROMANOW, a m. Russia, gov. and 23 m. N. W. Jaroslavl, l. bank Volga, opposite to Borissogleisk. It is surrounded by ramparts and ditches, has seven churches, one of them a cathedral, courthouses, and other public buildings, many factories of linen and silk, tanneries, and a considerable trade, particularly in corn. Pop. (1842), 4695.

ROMANUS (San Giovanni Arcobischof), a m. France, dep. Drôme, picturesquely situated, a bank Isère, here crossed by a handsome bridge, which communicates with the town of Puyg on the opposite bank, 10 m. N. E. Valence. It is enclosed by a fosse and walls flanked with towers, and is entered by five gates but has no defence deserving of notice, except the church of St. Bernard, and the theatre, situated in the centre of a good promenade, called the Champ-de-Mars. The manufactures consist of silk, hosiery, woollen cloth, and serge, and there are also tanneries, a silk-mill and lime-kilns. The trade is in wool, hemp, linen, silk, wine, olive-oil, and skins. Romans is the seat of a court of commerce, and possesses a chamber of manufactures, and a diocesan seminary. Pop. 7228.

ROMANSHORN, a vil. and par. Switzerland, on Thur- gan, on a tongue of land on the S. W. side of the lake and 11 m. S. E. the town of Constance. It is well built, and contains a church and two schools. On a height above it stands a fine castle, still in good preservation, and supposed to occupy the site of an old Roman light-house. There is a small harbour on the lake, which has a good deal of trade, and an active fishery is carried on. Pop. 1281.

ROMANSEIGH, par. Eng. Devon, 2491 ac. P. 246. ROMANOFF, several isls. Pacific, particularly — 1, (or Odoe), a group in the Marshall Archipelago, of an irregular oval form, extending about 28 m. from W. S. W. to E. N. E., with a breadth of about 10 m. It is surrounded by a reef, on which are distributed 66 islands, of small dimensions. Odoe, the largest, lat. 9° 28' 3" N., lon. 170° 12' 12" E., is only 2 m. long, but has a good anchoring place. The inhabitants are inoffensive and friendly — 2 (Odoe, or Mowee) an isl. Low Archipelago, lat. 14° 57' 20" S., lon. 144° 26' W. It is about 8 m. long, 3 m. N. E. to S. W., and not more than 10 m. in circuit, and though evidently of coral formation, has no lagoon.

ROMÃO (Sax), a m. and par. Portugal, prov. Beira-Baixa, about 45 m. N. E. Coimbra. Pop. 1605.

ROMBLON, an isl. Indian Archipelago, Philippines, and forming a dependency of prov. Manila, lies between Tablas on the W. and Sibuyan on the S. E. It is about 12 m. long, 6 to 8, by 6 m. wide, and contains a neat village, with a small fort, a church, and a harbour, which admits only small vessels. Pop. 8052.

ROMK, a vil. and township U. States, New York, 91 m. W. N. W. Albany with which it is connected by railway and on the Mohawk River, and Erie canal. It has six churches, a courthouse and jail, bank, female seminary, U. States armory, cotton factory blast-furnace, a brewery, and flour and saw mills. Pop. township (1856) 7918.

ROME (Latin, Rome) the cap. city of the Papal States, the most celebrated of ancient, and in some respects, the most remarkable of modern cities, on both sides of the Tiber, though chiefly on the l. bank about 16 m. from its mouth lat. 41° 54' N.; lon. 12° 28' E. The river, in coming from the l., makes two very remarkable bends of nearly equal dimensions, forming a figure closely resembling that of the letter S. The upper bend, which of course has its convexity towards the E., follows a large alluvial flat little raised above the level of the stream, and well known by the ancient name of the Campus Martius. Within this flat, and on a declivity which stretches irregularly along its E. side, and rises with some abruptness from it, the far greater part of modern Rome is situated. The only other portions of any extent are situated on the opposite side of the river, consisting chiefly of a suburb called Trastevere [beyond the Tiber], extending over the upper part of the lower bend facing the W., and thence N. N. W. in a narrow belt along the right bank; and of the Borgo, commencing a little beyond the N. convexity, and forming a most important part of the city, since it is terminated on the E. close to the river, by the castle of St. Angelo, and on the W. by the vast and magnificent pile of St. Peter's. Of the seven hills of ancient Rome, all of these situated on the left bank of the Tiber, only three of them properly lie within the limits of the modern city. They form part of the declivity or ridge already mentioned, as bounding the Campus Martius. Their names are the Quirinal, the Viminal, and the Capitol. The first occupies the W. edge of the declivity, nearly opposite to the centre of the Campus Martius; the second is immediately to the E. of it, and the third to the E.W. where it projects forward as if to meet the river while winding E. to form its second large bend. The other four hills are the Esquiline, the most E. of rather more than 8 in a maximum breadth of 300 ft. and a succession of not more than 400 ft. and a deep and rapid current rolling along a considerable volume of water deeply tinged with yellow mud. The quays which in several other cities similarly situated, constitute their greatest ornaments and furnish their finest promenades, are here altogether wanting; many parts of the banks are even unprovided with all and $\frac{1}{2}$ of the Viminal the C. than also extends $\frac{1}{2}$ E. but $\frac{1}{2}$ of the Esquiline the Viminal which is the most E. of all and almost at the river and the Esquiline which has an intermediate point it forms a kind of central nucleus between the Capitol on the W., the C. on the E., and the Aventine on the S. These four hills and the spaces will in and around them covering a large extent of ground in the E. and E. of the present city, have no human habitations except a few solitary convents and villas no longer inhabited and are occupied for the most part by gardens and vineyards. In ancient times however they stood in the very heart of the city and hence are still the sites of some of its noblest ruins. A few of the hills have much elevation, and most of them are approached by easy ascents. The Esquiline which is the highest, has a height of 218 ft. and can only be considered as an elevated flat. The Palatine 170 ft., appears originally to have had precipitous sides but they have either been levelled down or are turned up by rubbish. The Capitol though the lowest of all only from 150 ft. to 160 ft. is from its abrupt face and well marked outline the most conspicuous. The right bank of the Tiber has also its alluvial flat bounded by hills especially the Janiculum immediately to the W. and the Vatican considerably to the E.W. All these hills on both banks and a considerable additional space, though only partially built upon, may be said with truth to be included in the city space they are all used up by an exacting wall. These, built of brick with occasional patches of masonry work and crested with numerous towers have an average height of about 9 ft. are pierced by 16 gates, of which four are closed up, and form a very irregular polygon, with a perimeter of nearly 15 m. Of these, 12 m. are on the E. or left and of course only 3 m. on the right bank. The walls on the left bank are ancient, and following the same line as that traced by Aurelian A. to 271 much in many parts be identical with the original structure, though comparatively little of it can now be traced. The walls on the right bank are much more recent and form two separate inclosures, a transverse wall immediately N. of the Borgo separating it from the suburb of Trastevere, and connecting it, with its ends of St. Angelo into a kind of isolated castrum.

The river here at the points where the walls on its E. bank commence and terminate, has a length including windings, of rather more than 8 in a maximum breadth of 300 ft. and a succession of not more than 400 ft. and a deep and rapid current rolling along a considerable volume of water deeply tinged with yellow mud. The quays which in several other cities similarly situated, constitute their greatest ornaments and furnish their finest promenades, are here altogether wanting; many parts of the banks are even unprovided with protecting walls, and hence, as the flats along the banks are low and the level of the water above the sea is only from 85 ft. to 40 ft., whenever, from any cause, as a continuance of strong W. breezes, the current is retarded inundation to a greater or less extent inevitably ensues. In ancient Rome the communication between the opposite banks was maintained by eight bridges. Vestiges of all of them can still be traced but only four are now entire and in use. The most N. and consequently highest up the stream, is the ancient Insulae, now called Ponte San Angelo, because directly opposite to the castle. It is a noble structure, composed of three large central and small side arches, and though extensively repaired in 1685, and then disfigured by statues devoid of merit is still substantially as the ancient Romans left it. At a considerable distance below is the ancient Insulae, now Ponte Sisto because rebuilt by the fourth Pope of that name, in 1474. It has four arches. The other two bridges are about $\frac{1}{2}$ m. lower down where the stream is divided into two channels by the island San Bartolomeo, anciently Insula Tiberina. The bridge from the left bank to the island called the Ponte di Quattro Capi from a four-headed Janus which stood near it as the ancient Pons Fabricius, and retains a good deal of its original structure, it consists of two large arches, with a smaller one between them for a large passage of water in case of floods. The other bridge, properly only a continuation of the one just described is the ancient Pons Cestius or Gruturnus and now bears the name of the island which it connects with the right bank it has a large central arch and two smaller side ones. The open space, twelve in number as already mentioned, are only deserving of a passing notice. The finest, the Porta Maggiore situated near the E.E. corner of the walls and leading by one of the three streets which meet in front of it to Prati consists of a noble arch of travertine; the Porta San Sebastiano, the most E. of all consists of two fine semicircular brick towers, resting on foundations of solid marble the Porta San Giovanni occupying an intermediate position between the two already mentioned, possesses less architectural merit, but forms a much more important thoroughfare than either because the high road to Naples by the Centine Marche passes out of it the Porta San Paolo, on the E.W., is considered the most picturesque of all the modern gates. Retreating again to the E. side, we have to the N. of Porta Maggiore, in turn the Porta San Lorenzo, formed of two ancient towers, on the N.E. the Porta del Popolo rebuilt in 1564 on the site of the ancient Porta Nomentana, from the designs of Michael Angelo, and on the N., at a short distance from the left bank of the river one of the finest of all the gates, and by far the most frequented, the Porta del Popolo, built by Vigliani in 1561 from Michael Angelo's designs, and consisting of four Doric columns, with statues of St. Peter and St. Paul, by Michel, in the intervals between them. This gate leading out to Florence, is that by which most visitors from the N. usually enter the city and is perhaps the best point from which to commence, either in describing it, or forming a practical acquaintance with it. It may be proper however before proceeding to a particular description of the interior to premise that the whole space within the walls is divided into 14 rioni, or districts. Of these only two, Trastevere, and the Borgo, or Città Leonina, as it is sometimes called, are on the right bank of the Tiber. The twelve on the left bank are arranged not according to the spaces which they cover, but the density of the population they contain, and probably also according to certain local peculiarities. Hence, the extensive tracts on the E. and S., because nearly without inhabitants, are wholly included in three districts while none are allotted to the more limited, but more densely-peopled portions of the city situated to the N. and W. of the Capitol.

When Rome is entered from the N. by the Porta del Popolo, it is seen, from the most advantageous circumstanoes, and produces a more favorable impression than a closer inspection is found to justify. Immediately within the gate is the spacious though irregular Piazza del Popolo, with a fine Egyptian obelisk in its centre, and two handsome churches in front, standing as far apart from each other and from the adjoining buildings, as to leave room for the divergence of three principal streets one in the centre, between the churches, proceeding almost due N. while the other two start off on either side, to the E. on the left hand and the S.W. on the right. The central street is called the Corso, from the horse-races which take place in it during the Carnival. This street, the finest of which Rome can boast, is about 50 ft. wide, and stretches for a mile in a direct line, to its termination in the Piazza di Venezia, near the N. foot of the Capitol. It is lined with splendid palaces, and at all times, but more especially on holidays when its centre is thronged with carriages and its side pavement with pedestrians presents at once a very animated and a very imposing appearance. The diverging street on the left, above referred to, is the Via Babuino. It proceeds first directly to the E. and thence, by a considerable length and contains a large number of handsome edifices. The whole of the city to the E. of this street, and in the triangular space included between it and the Corso being situated on the high ground above the Campus Martius, is well aired and healthy and is usually selected for residence by English visitors. The number of private palaces and elegant mansions which it contains also justifies its claim to be regarded as the aristocratic quarter. The other diverging street, on the right of the Piazza del Popolo, is the Via Ripetta. It proceeds nearly parallel and in pairs almost close to the river and though neither so elevated in its site, nor so aristocratic in its appearance as the Corso and Via Babuino is decidedly handsome. Several other streets intersecting those already noticed, more especially the Strada di Porta Iva, stretching W. for nearly a mile from the gate of that name, and another, following nearly the same direction under the successive names of Via Sistina, Via Felice, and Via della Quatre Fontane are both well built, and of importance as great leading thoroughfares; but, after due allowance is made for these, it must still be admitted that Rome taken as a whole, is not well built. The streets are generally narrow and ill paved with small stones of lava not one of them except the Corso has side pavement, and though they are generally well drained by a system of sewers founded chiefly on the ancient places many of them are extremely dirty. This is particularly the case in the roms [district] San Eustachio, in the heart of the Campus Martius and filled with streets of shops and manufactories in the roms Pons, making the angle formed by the bend of the Tiber below San Angelo, and in the roms San Angelo in Pescheria in the vicinity of the Capitol, and opposite to the Island of Tiber Islets. Chiefly in this roms, but partly also in that of Regia adjoining, is a very dirty quarter, called Trabotia, surrounded by walls, and entered by two gates, which are looked at night by the police. It is allotted to the Jews, and contains their synagogues, schools, and public schools.

Rome cannot boast of many squares of much merit, though not a few of them are remarkable for the obelisks and fountains which they contain. The Piazza del Popolo, with the fine obelisk in its centre has been already noticed. The interior of red granite, broken into three pieces and covered with hieroglyphs, was used before the Temple of the Sun at Heliopolis, in Egypt its entire height, including base and ornaments, is about 116 ft. The Piazza Navona, occupying the site of the ancient Circus Agonalis, and still retaining its shape is about 230 yards in diameter and is sometimes used for chariot-races. It is adorned with three fountains, one at each extremity and the third in the centre. The last consists of an immense circular basin 18 ft. in diameter and an ancient obelisk of red granite, based on a central mass of rock to which four figures, representing four river gods but utterly destitute of merit, are chained. The Piazza di Spagna takes its name from a fountain within it, which has the form of a boat but possesses little merit. A more remarkable ornament of this piazza is a magnificent staircase of travertine, leading to the church of Trinita de Monti completely seated on an eminence above it. The Piazza del Pantheon, an obelisk from an ancient monument, fragment which now bears the name of Panquin's statue, has less merit than Roms, being the spot where the Romans excluded of all means of expressing their opinions through the press, have long been accustomed to give utterance in those by means of placards. These, though often coarse are seldom deficient in wit or keen satire, and have hence acquired so much celebrity that the term panquinade has become European. Larger spaces for amusement or exercise have been formed only in a few spots. One of the finest, but least frequented, is the garden of the Val can situated on the right bank, on the hill and adjoining the celebrated palace of the same at the N. W. extremity of the city. A much more frequented spot is a public garden at the opposite extremity occupying the high ground E. of the Piazza del Popolo and commanding extensive villas. In the same locality but at a short distance without the walls the gardens of the Villa Borghese, forming a finely planted and richly-decorated park of 8 m. in circuit though private property having been thrown open by the liberality of the proprietor, forms the true public park of Rome, and is the favorite resort of all classes, often exhibiting a very gay and animated scene.

The most remarkable edifices divide themselves into two classes the ancient and the modern. In several respects the former might claim precedence, but as most of them are only remains not in actual use, it accords more with the nature of a Guide to begin with the latter.

Eclectic Architectural Edifices.—Of these, the churches alone exceed 100. Many are, of course very magnificent but after due regard these, there remain far more than can be noticed within the limits of this article, with the fulmen to which their magnificent or historical associations may seem to require. Selecting only those which it is impossible to omit, we naturally turn at once to St. Peter's, San Basilio, which has justly been pronounced by far the most magnificent which has yet reared its head in Christian times on the r. bank of the Tiber, near the W. extremity of the Borgo, on one of the worst sites which could possibly have been chosen, a hollow space between the Janiculum and the Vatican, and so concealed by them and a ridge behind which conceals them, that the church on three of its sides, up to the height of the nave is virtually concealed and is not seen to advantage from any commanding point either within or without the walls. It is approached through a piazza, the buildings along which are admirably concealed by a superb colonnade, forming two semicircular porticoes, and consisting of 284 columns, with an entablature on which 192 statues of saints each 11 ft. in height, stand sentinel. The main body of the building consists of a Greek cross, with a dome of gigantic dimensions, rising from its centre, and borne up by four colossal piers. On this dome in particular Michael Angelus displayed the wisdom of his genius, and produced a work which impresses the beholder with a feeling of the sublime akin to that with which the grander scenes of nature are beheld. The figure does not the work of the same great mind but of an artist whom Forsyth compares as a wretched plasterer from whom is not in harmony with the other parts of the structure. Though too low, and otherwise defective it is made to come forward so prominently as to conceal the dome which accordingly cannot be seen from any part of the piazza in its full proportions. This defect, however is fully overcome when the interior is entered and a scene of solemn grand, rich and harmonious almost beyond conception bursts upon the view. The extreme length within the walls are 607 ft. in the central body, and 445 ft. in the transept its height from the pavement to the cross is 42 ft. Owing to these immense proportions objects within the area lose somewhat of their effect by contrast, and appear comparatively diminished. Thus the Baldacchino, a splendid bronze canopy over the high altar and immediately under the dome, though 120 ft. high, appears not more than 30 ft. and the chair of St. Peter, behind the altar seems scarcely to rise from the pavement, though 70 ft. above it.

